

About the Author

Mark Keenan from Ireland has worked as an Environmental Affairs Officer at the United Nations (UN) Sustainable Development Team in Geneva, Switzerland; as a Science Advisor on Sustainable Energy at the U.K. Government's Department of Energy and Climate Change; as a Policy Analyst at the Sustainable Development Council, Ireland; and as a Sustainability Consultant. His academic background includes postgraduate studies in Strategic Sustainable Development (with a focus on The Natural Step framework) at Blekinge Institute of Technology, Sweden; MSc studies in Sustainable Development and PhD research in Whole-systems based scientific sustainability frameworks at The Institute of Energy and Sustainable Development, DeMontfort University, U.K. He is a former member of the Foundation for the Economics of Sustainability (FEASTA).

He authored a blog (sustainableireland.blogspot.com) in 2009, 2010 and 2011, which included observations and criticism of the flawed GDP growth and associated debt-money banking system. He also covered and criticised the 2008 bailout of privately owned banks by the Irish government and the unjust actions of the EU and the European Central Bank. This process unjustly transferred vast amounts of private banking debt onto the people of Ireland resulting in increased taxes and austerity.

Peace. I wish you well on your journey.
