- (14) These are two separate offences.
- (15) Which is likewise prohibited on a Festival, save when required for cooking permitted food, v. Bez. 12a.
- (16) I.e., it was the thigh sinew of a nebelah, and he is flagellated for eating nebelah.
- (17) Sc. the proposed emendation.
- (18) v. Glos. this may not be handled on Festivals. — He is thus flagellated not for lighting but for putting it to use.
- (19) Ex. XVI, 5. This teaches that only what is 'prepared', as opposed to mukzeh, may be handled on Sabbaths and Festivals.
- (20) Ex. XX, 10. Flagellation is administered only for the violation of a negative injunction, not an affirmative precept. The first verse quoted belongs to the latter category, hence the second verse must be added. Thus, since the use of mukzeh is forbidden by the first verse, making a fire with it is all ordinary labour forbidden by the second. — Though the second verse refers to the Sabbath, whereas we are here treating of the Festival, these two are alike in respect to work, save that the preparation of food is permitted on Festivals, but not on the Sabbath. Once however it is shown that a particular action is forbidden, it does not matter whether it is the Sabbath or a Festival.
- (21) Outside the town. Animals that graze there are brought home (i.e., into town) only' at intervals, not every evening, and therefore they are mukzeh, and may not be slaughtered on Festivals unless designated for that purpose on the eve of the Festivals.
- (22) V. Num. XXVIII, 3.
- (23) May it be offered?
- (24) Ezek. XLV, 15, whence the whole verse which follows is quoted.
- (25) A 'lamb' implies both male and female, whereas a firstling applies only to males.
- (26) I.e., the tithe of animals cannot be dedicated for a daily burnt-offering. 'One' implies that it stands by itself, whereas the tithe is one out of ten.
- (27) A sheep beyond the age of כבש (lamb) and below that of איל (ram). — Jast.; i.e., a sheep in its thirteenth month. 'Of' is partitive and implies limitation.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 48a out of the two hundred,[i.e.,] out of the residue of the two hundred which was left in the vault, whence we learn that 'orlah is nullified in [an excess of] two hundred;¹ from the well-watered pastures of Israel: from that which is permitted to Israel. Hence it was said, One may not bring drink-offerings from tebel.² You might think, he must not bring [them] from mukzeh [either], then say: Just as tebel is distinguished in that its intrinsic prohibition causes it,³ so everything whose intrinsic prohibition causes it [may not be used], thus mukzeh is excluded, because not its intrinsic prohibition causes it, but a prohibition of something else causes it.⁴ Now if you say that the prohibition of mukzeh is Scriptural, what does it matter⁵ whether it is an intrinsic prohibition or a prohibition through something else? Moreover, it was you who said, There is separation of labours on the Sabbath,⁶ but there is not separation of labours on a Festival!⁷ — Rather, delete lighting and substitute the wood of the asherah,⁸ while its 'warning' [injunction] is [learnt] from here, [viz.,] And there shall cleave nought of the accursed thing to thy hand.⁹ R. Aha son of Raba said to Abaye, Then let him be flagellated on account of, And thou shalt not bring an abomination into thy house¹⁰ too? — Rather, delete lighting and substitute the wood of hekdes, while the 'warning' is [learnt] from here, [viz.,] and ye shall burn their Asherim with fire . . . ye shall not do so unto the Lord your God.¹¹

Rami b. Hama said: This [controversy] of R. Hisda and Rabbah is the controversy of R. Eliezer and R. Joshua.¹² For R. Eliezer holds, We say, 'since',¹³ while R. Joshua holds, We do not say since'. Said R. Papa: Yet perhaps R. Eliezer rules that we say 'since', there only, because when they go into the oven, each one is fit for himself;¹⁴ but here that it is fit for visitors only, but it is not fit for himself,¹⁵ perhaps it is indeed [the fact] that we do not say 'since'? R. Shisha son of R. Idi said: Yet perhaps it is not so:¹⁶ R. Joshua may rule that we do not say, 'since', only there, where there is one [mazzah] that is not fit either for himself or for visitors; but here that it is at least fit for visitors, perhaps it is indeed [the fact] that we say 'since'?

The Rabbis reported this [Rami b. Hama's statement] before R. Jeremiah and R. Zera. R. Jeremiah accepted it: R. Zera did not accept it. Said R. Jeremiah to R. Zera: A matter which has been a continual difficulty to us for many years, [viz.,] wherein do R. Eliezer and R. Joshua differ, now [that] it has been explained in the name of a great man, shall we then not accept it? Said he to him, How can I accept it? For it was taught, R. Joshua said to him: According to your words,¹⁷ he transgresses on account of thou shalt not do any manner of work,¹⁸ and he was silent before him. But if this is correct,¹⁹ let him answer him, My reason is on account of 'since'? — Then on your view, replied he, as to what was taught in a Baraitha, R. Eliezer said to him: According to your words, behold, he violates, 'it shall not be seen' and 'it shall not be found', and he was silent before him; could he indeed not answer him; surely he answers him in the Mishnah, for we learned: NOT THIS IS LEAVEN ABOUT WHICH WE ARE WARNED, IT SHALL NOT BE SEEN', AND 'IT SHALL NOT BE FOUND'. But [what we must say is that] he was silent before him in the Baraitha, yet he answered him in our Mishnah. So here too, say that he was silent before him in a teaching,²⁰ yet he answered him in another collection [of Baraithas].

It was taught, Rabbi said: The halachah is as R. Eliezer; while R. Isaac said: The halachah is as the Son of Bathyra.

And what²¹ is the standard of dough?²² — R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: In the case of wheat, two kabs; in the case of barley, three kabs. R. Nathan said on R. Eleazar's authority: The rulings are [to be] reversed.²³ But it was taught, R. Ishmael son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: In the case of wheat, three labs, and in the case of barley, four kabs? — There is no difficulty: One refers to inferior [corn]; the other to superior corn.²⁴ R. Papa observed: This proves, Poor wheat is more inferior to good wheat than poor barley is inferior to good barley, for whereas there [there is a difference of] a third, here [there is a difference of] a quarter.

Rab said: A kab of Meloga²⁵ [is the standard] for Passover,²⁶ and it is likewise in respect of hallah.²⁷ But we learned:

(1) 'Out of the two hundred' is unintelligible in itself. Hence the Talmud assumes that it refers to the wine of the drink-offering (libation) which accompanied the continual burnt-offering (Num. XXVIII, 7f), and the meaning is this: if one part of forbidden wine, sc. wine of 'orlah, as much as is required for the drink-offering, becomes mixed with two hundred times as much permitted wine, so that when the required quantity is removed from the wine-vault there still remains two hundred times as much, then it may be used, the 'orlah having been nullified by the excess. — This is actually deduced from elsewhere (in Sifre), and this verse is merely quoted as support.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) I.e. tebel is unfit for drink-offerings because it is forbidden in itself.

(4) I.e., it is not forbidden, in itself, save that its owner has voluntarily put it out of use for the time being.

(5) Lit., 'what is it to me?'

(6) If a man performed two labours on the Sabbath in one state of unawareness, or one labour twice, each time having been unaware of the Sabbath (though he was reminded in the interval), he is liable on account of each separately.

(7) Yet here, where we treat of a Festival, you rule that he is separately culpable for mukzeh and for boiling the sinew.

- (8) V. Glos. He used that for fuel, and is flagellated on that account.
- (9) Deut. XIII, 18.
- (10) Ibid. VII, 26.
- (11) Ibid. XII, 3f.
- (12) In the Mishnah Supra 46a.
- (13) Though he will eventually separate one mazzah for all, and that is not fit for eating, yet if he wishes he can take a piece from each mazzah, and so he will have baked every one for eating. Hence we say, since it would be permitted in the latter case, it is also permitted in the former.
- (14) As explained in n. 11.
- (15) As far as he is concerned he is definitely baking it for the week, while he has not invited visitors.
- (16) This too is a criticism of Rami b. Hama's statement.
- (17) I.e., if he does as you say.
- (18) Ex. XX, 10.
- (19) Rami b. Hama's explanation.
- (20) Mathnitha, especially collection of Mishnah not embodied in the Mishnah of R. Judah, as Baraita, Tosaf. etc., contrad. to Mathnithin, our Mishnah (Jast.).
- (21) Lit., 'how much?'
- (22) Which one can knead on Passover and keep it from fermenting.
- (23) Three in the case of wheat, and two in the case of barley, for barley ferments more quickly.
- (24) Two kabs of superior wheat is the equivalent of three kabs of inferior wheat; while three kabs of superior barley is the equivalent of four kabs of inferior barley.
- (25) Supposed to be a place in Babylon.
- (26) One must not knead more dough than that.
- (27) That is the smallest quantity subject to hallah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 48b

Slightly more than five quarters¹ of flour are subject to hallah?² — This is what he says: A kab of Meloga too is the equivalent of this quantity.

R. Joseph said: Our women are accustomed to bake a kapiza³ at a time on Passover. Said Abaye to him, What is your intention? To be stricter!⁴ [But] it is strictness which leads to [unwarranted] leniency, as [the woman] exempts it from hallah?⁵ — Said he: They do as R. Eliezer. For we learned, R. Eliezer said: If he removes [loaves from the oven] and places [them] in a basket, the basket combines them in respect of hallah,⁶ whereon Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: The halachah is as R. Eliezer. Said he to him, But it was stated thereon, R. Joshua b. Levi said: They taught this only of Babylonian loaves, which cleave to each other,⁷ but not [of] cracknels?⁸ — Surely it was stated thereon, R. Hanina said: Even cracknels.

R. Jeremiah asked: What of a board which has no ledges?⁹ Do we require the inside of a vessel, which is absent here; or perhaps we require the air space of a vessel, which is present? The question stands.

It was taught: R. Eliezer said: The basket [only] combines them; R. Joshua said: The oven combines them;¹⁰ R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: Babylonian loaves which cleave to each other combine.¹¹

MISHNAH. R. GAMALIEL SAID: THREE WOMEN MAY KNEAD AT THE SAME TIME¹² AND BAKE IN ONE OVEN, ONE AFTER THE OTHER. BUT THE SAGES RULE: THREE WOMEN MAY BE ENGAGED ON DOUGH AT THE SAME TIME,¹³ ONE KNEADING, ANOTHER SHAPING AND A THIRD BAKING.¹⁴ R. AKIBA SAID: NOT ALL WOMEN AND NOT ALL KINDS OF WOOD AND NOT ALL OVENS ARE ALIKE.¹⁵ THIS IS THE GENERAL

PRINCIPLE: IF IT [THE DOUGH] RISES, LET HER WET¹⁶ IT WITH COLD WATER.¹⁷

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: Having kneaded [the dough] she forms it [in shape], while her companion kneads in her place; having formed [the dough] she bakes it, and her companion shapes [the dough] in her place, while the third [woman] kneads. [The first] having baked, she kneads [again], and her companion bakes in her place, while the third shapes [her dough]. And thus the round revolves.¹⁸ As long as they are engaged [in working] on the dough, it does not come to fermentation.

R. AKIBA SAID: NOT ALL WOMEN etc. It was taught, R. Akiba said: I discussed [the matter] before R. Gamaliel: Let our Master teach us: Does this¹⁹ refer to energetic women or to women who are not energetic; to damp wood or to dry wood; to a hot oven or to a cool oven? Said he to me, You have nought else save what the Sages learned: IF IT RISES, LET HER WET IT WITH COLD WATER.

MISHNAH. SI'UR²⁰ MUST BE BURNT, WHILE HE WHO EATS IT IS NOT CULPABLE; SIDDUK²¹ MUST BE BURNT, WHILE HE WHO EATS IT [ON PASSOVER] IS LIABLE TO KARETH. WHAT IS SI'UR? [WHEN THERE ARE LINES ON THE SURFACE] LIKE LOCUSTS' HORNS;²² SIDDUK IS WHEN THE CRACKS HAVE INTERMINGLED WITH EACH OTHER: THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. JUDAH. BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN: REGARDING THE ONE AND THE OTHER,²³ HE WHO EATS IT IS LIABLE TO KARETH.²⁴ AND WHAT IS SI'UR? WHEN ITS SURFACE IS BLANCHED, LIKE [THE FACE OF] A MAN WHOSE HAIR IS STANDING [ON END].

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: What is si'ur? Whenever its surface is blanched, like [the face of] a man whose hair is standing on end; sidduk is [when there are lines on the surface] like locusts' horns: this is R. Meir's view. But the Sages maintain: What is si'ur? [When the lines on its surface are] like locusts' horns; sidduk is when the cracks have intermingled with each other; and in both cases, he who eats it is liable to kareth. But we learned: SI'UR MUST BE BURNT, WHILE HE WHO EATS IT IS NOT CULPABLE . . . THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. JUDAH? Say according to R. Meir, in both cases,²⁵ he who eats it incurs kareth.²⁶ Raba said: What is R. Meir's reason? There is not a single crack on the surface for which there are not many cracks below [the surface].²⁷

(1) Lit., 'five quarters and more'. I.e., quarters of a kab, = one and one fourth logs.

(2) v. Hal. II, 6.

(3) A measure=three-fourths of a kab; v. Obermeyer, p. 241, n. 1.

(4) For the permitted quantity is larger.

(5) If she baked a kab of Meloga at a time, she would have to separate hallah, whereas now she is exempt.

(6) I.e., they are counted as one, if together they make up the minimum quantity.

(7) Lit., 'bite of each other'. They were wide, and when set in the oven they stuck to each other, owing to lack of space; therefore they all count as one.

(8) A kind of narrow roll.

(9) Does it combine the loaves placed upon it?

(10) If they are baked together in an oven, even if they are not subsequently placed together in a basket, they are all counted as one in respect of hallah.

(11) But not cracknels.

(12) Lit., 'as one'.

(13) Not all kneading at the same time, which would necessitate too long a wait when they come to bake if after each other.

(14) V. Gemara.

(15) Hence the views of R. Gamaliel and the Sages are unacceptable.

(16) Lit., 'polish'.

(17) Which retards fermentation.

(18) This is the explanation of the Sage's ruling: THREE WOMEN MAY BE ENGAGED ON DOUGH AT THE SAME TIME.

(19) Sc. the ruling that three women may knead or may be working on dough at the same time.

(20) V. supra p. 203.

(21) Dough, the surface of which is cracked through fermentation. This is completely leaven.

(22) I.e., small lines are just beginning to appear.

(23) I.e., both stages as defined by R. Judah.

(24) Even at the earlier stage it is no longer si'ur.

(25) Sc. both si'ur and sidduk, as defined by R. Judah.

(26) Because he regards both as sidduk.

(27) Hence even when the cracks on the surface are still separate, they already cross below the surface.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 49a

MISHNAH. IF THE FOURTEENTH [OF NISAN] FALLS ON THE SABBATH, EVERYTHING MUST BE REMOVED¹ BEFORE THE SABBATH;² THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW; WHILE THE SAGES MAINTAIN: [IT MUST BE REMOVED] AT ITS [USUAL] TIME;³ R. ELEAZAR B. ZADOK SAID: TERUMAH [MUST BE REMOVED] BEFORE THE SABBATH,⁴ AND HULLIN AT ITS [USUAL] TIME.⁵

GEMARA. It was taught, R. Eleazar b. Zadok said: My father once spent a week in Yabneh,⁶ when the fourteenth fell on the Sabbath, and there came Zonin, R. Gamaliel's deputy,⁷ and announced: 'The time has come to remove the leaven', and I followed my father and we removed the leaven.

MISHNAH. HE WHO ON HIS WAY⁸ TO SLAUGHTER HIS PASSOVER SACRIFICE OR TO CIRCUMCISE HIS SON⁹ OR TO DINE AT A BETROTHAL¹⁰ FEAST AT THE HOUSE OF HIS FATHER-IN-LAW, AND RECOLLECTS THAT HE HAS LEAVEN AT HOME, IF HE IS ABLE TO GO BACK, REMOVE [IT], AND [THEN] RETURN TO HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY,¹¹ HE MUST GO BACK AND REMOVE [IT]; BUT IF NOT, HE ANNULS IT IN HIS HEART. [IF HE IS ON HIS WAY] TO SAVE [PEOPLE] FROM HEATHENS¹² OR FROM A RIVER OR FROM BRIGANDS¹³ OR FROM A FIRE OR FROM A COLLAPSE [OF A BUILDING], HE ANNULS IT IN HIS HEART.¹⁴ [BUT IF] TO APPOINT A SABBATH STATION FOR A VOLUNTARY [SECULAR] PURPOSE,¹⁵ HE MUST RETURN IMMEDIATELY. SIMILARLY, HE WHO WENT OUT OF JERUSALEM AND RECOLLECTED THAT HE HAD HOLY FLESH WITH HIM,¹⁶ IF HE HAS PASSED SCOPUS,¹⁷ HE BURNS IT WHERE HE IS;¹⁸ BUT IF NOT, HE RETURNS AND BURNS IT IN FRONT OF THE TEMPLE¹⁹ WITH THE WOOD OF THE [ALTAR] PILE.²⁰ AND FOR WHAT [QUANTITY] MUST THEY RETURN? R. MEIR SAID: FOR BOTH,²¹ WHEN THERE IS AS MUCH AS AN EGG; R. JUDAH SAID: FOR BOTH, WHEN THERE IS AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE; BUT THE SAGES RULE: HOLY FLESH, [THE STANDARD IS] AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE; WHILE LEAVEN, [THE STANDARD IS] AS MUCH AS AN EGG.²²

GEMARA. But the following contradicts it: He who is on his way to partake of a betrothal feast in his father-in-law's house or to appoint a Sabbath station for a voluntary purpose must return immediately? Said R. Johanan, There is no difficulty: one is [according to] R. Judah: the other is [according to] R. Jose. For it was taught: The betrothal feast is a voluntary [function]; this is R. Judah's view. R. Jose said: It is a religious [function]. But now that R. Hisda said: The controversy is in respect of the second feast,²³ but in respect to the first feast all agree that it is a religious [function], you may even say [that] both are [according to] R. Judah, yet there is no difficulty; one refers to the first feast, while the other refers to the second feast.

It was taught, R. Judah said: I have heard only of the betrothal feast,²⁴ but not of [the feast in connection with] espousal gifts.²⁵ Said R. Jose to him: I have heard of [both] the feast of betrothal and [that] of espousal gifts.

It was taught, R. Simeon said: Every feast which is not in connection with a religious deed, a scholar must derive no enjoyment thereof.²⁶ What, for instance? — Said R. Johanan: E.g., [the feast at the betrothal of] the daughter of a priest to an Israelite,²⁷ or the daughter of a scholar to an ignoramus. For R. Johanan said: If the daughter of a priest [marries] an Israelite, their union will not be auspicious. What is it?²⁸ Said R. Hisda: [She will be] either a widow or a divorced woman, or she will have no seed [children].²⁹ In a Baraitha it was taught: He will bury her or she will bury him, or she will reduce him to poverty. But that is not so, for R. Johanan said: he who desires to become wealthy, let him cleave to the seed of Aaron, [for it is all the more] that the Torah and the priesthood will enrich them? — There is no difficulty: one refers to a scholar;³⁰ the other refers to an ‘am ha-arez.³¹

R. Joshua married a priest's daughter. Falling sick, he said, Aaron is not pleased that I should cleave to his seed [and] possess a son-in-law like myself. R. Idi b Abin married a priest's daughter, and there came forth from him two ordained sons — R. Shesheth the son of R. Idi and R. Joshua the son of R. Idi. R. Papa said: Had I not married a priest's daughter, I would not have become wealthy.³² R. Kahana said: Had I not married a priest's daughter, I had not gone into exile.³³ Said they to him, But you were exiled to a place of learning! — I was not exiled as people are [generally] exiled.³⁴

R. Isaac said: Whoever partakes of a secular feast eventually goes into exile, for it is said, and [ye that] eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall; and it is written, therefore now shall they go captive at the head of them that go captive.³⁵

Our Rabbis taught: Every scholar who feasts much in every place eventually destroys his home, widows his wife, orphans his young, forgets his learning,³⁶ and becomes involved in many quarrels;³⁷ his words are unheeded, and he desecrates the Name of Heaven and the name of his teacher and the name of his father, and he causes an evil name for himself, his children, and his childrens' children until the end of time.³⁸ What is it?³⁹ Said Abaye: He is called, a heater of ovens. Raba said: A tavern dancer! R. Papa said: A plate licker. R. Sheimaiah said: A folder [of garments] and a man who lies down [to sleep].⁴⁰

Our Rabbis taught: Let a man always sell all he has and marry the daughter of a scholar, for if he dies or goes into exile, he is assured that his children will be scholars. But let him not marry the daughter of an ‘am ha-arez, for if he dies or goes into exile, his children will be ‘amme ha-arez.

Our Rabbis taught: Let a man always sell all he has and marry the daughter of a scholar, and marry his daughter to a scholar. This may be compared to [the grafting of] grapes of a vine with grapes of a vine, [which is] a seemly and acceptable thing. But let him not marry the daughter of an ‘am ha-arez; this may be compared to [the grafting of] grapes of a vine with berries of a thorn bush, [which is] a repulsive

(1) I.e., destroyed.

(2) Save what is required for the Sabbath itself.

(3) On the morning of the fourteenth.

(4) Because if any is left over none can eat it; neither zarim nor cattle.

(5) Because it is easy to find eaters for it.

(6) The famous town to the north-west of Jerusalem, seat of R. Johanan b. Zakkai's academy and Sanhedrin after the destruction of Jerusalem.

- (7) The superintendent of the Academy.
- (8) Lit., 'is going'.
- (9) In ancient days and until comparatively recently this was done in the Synagogue.
- (10) Erusin denotes the first stage of marriage, v. Glos.
- (11) He himself being the bridegroom. A 'betrothal feast' is considered a religious duty, v. Gemara.
- (12) Rashi: Jews who are being pursued.
- (13) Var. lec.: a robber band.
- (14) If 'robber band' is read before, this must be deleted. Even if there is time to return, he must not go back.
- (15) On the Sabbath a man must not go more than two thousand cubits beyond the town boundary; this outside limit is called the tehum. But before the Sabbath commences he can appoint any spot within the tehum as the station where he will spend the Sabbath, and then he may proceed two thousand cubits beyond that spot; he does that by taking some food to the place, which he will eat on the Sabbath.
- (16) Holy flesh, if taken without Jerusalem, becomes unfit and must be burnt.
- (17) An eminence northeast of Jerusalem, whence the Temple can be seen. To-day it is the site of the Hebrew University.
- (18) And need not return to Jerusalem.
- (19) [Birah. This is variously explained in Zeb. 104b as the Temple Mount itself, a place in the Temple Mount, and a tower in the Temple Mount.]
- (20) I.e., wood arranged in a pile for use on the altar. — V. Supra 24a.
- (21) Sc. leaven and sacred flesh.
- (22) These are the minima for which one must return.
- (23) After the betrothal the bridegroom (arus) sent gifts to his bride, in connection with which there was a second feast at the father-in-law's house.
- (24) As being a religious function.
- (25) Siblonoth.
- (26) I.e., must not partake of it.
- (27) I.e., a non-priest. She blemishes her family by marrying beneath her.
- (28) In what respect will it be unfortunate?
- (29) Rashi: because it is written, And if a priest's daughter be married unto a common man, which is followed by, But if a priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child (Lev. XXII, 12f). — Hence such a union was looked upon with disfavour, and R. Johanan maintains that the feast is not a true religious one.
- (30) If a scholar marries into a priestly family he brings honour upon it.
- (31) V. Glos.
- (32) He was a wealthy brewer.
- (33) From my home in Babylonia to Palestine; v. B.K. 117a.
- (34) Voluntarily; but I had to flee.
- (35) Amos VI, 4, 7.
- (36) Lit., 'his learning is forgotten from him'.
- (37) Lit., 'come upon him'.
- (38) Lit., 'until the end of all generations'. — His fondness for feasting elsewhere leads him to do the same in his own home, and to make it possible he must sell his furniture, etc. Seeing himself on the road to ruin, he wanders into exile, leaving his wife and children, widowed and orphaned, he wastes his time, so forgets his learning. This involves him in disputes on learning. Or, his poverty involves him in disputes with tradesmen because he cannot settle his bills. Again, the banqueting table itself is a fruitful source of quarrels (Rashi and Maharsha).
- (39) How does he bring his name etc., into contempt?
- (40) Where he is, being too drunk to go home. — Or, the son of a heater of ovens etc., with reference to his children. The translation follows Maharsha, bar (בַּר) being understood as 'a man who'. The alternative is Rashi's.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 49b

and unacceptable thing.

Our Rabbis taught: Let a man always sell all he has and marry the daughter of a scholar. If he does not find¹ the daughter of a scholar, let him marry the daughter of [one of] the great men of the generation.² If he does not find the daughter of [one of] the great men of the generation, let him marry the daughter of the head of synagogues. If he does not find the daughter of the head of synagogues,³ let him marry the daughter of a charity treasurer. If he does not find the daughter of a charity treasurer, let him marry the daughter of an elementary school-teacher, but let him not marry the daughter of an 'am ha-arez, because they are detestable and their wives are vermin, and of their daughters it is said, Cursed be he that lieth with any manner of beast.⁴

It was taught, Rabbi said: An 'am ha-arez may not eat the flesh of cattle, for it is said, This is the law [Torah] of the beast, and of the fowl;⁵ whoever engages in [the study of] the Torah may eat the flesh of beast and fowl, but he who does not engage in [the study of] the Torah may not eat the flesh of beast and fowl.

R. Eleazar said: An 'am ha-arez, it is permitted to stab him [even] on the Day of Atonement which falls on the Sabbath. Said his disciples to him, Master, say to slaughter him [ritually]? He replied: This [ritual slaughter] requires a benediction, whereas that [stabbing] does not require a benediction. R. Eleazar said: One must not join company with an 'am ha-arez on the road, because it is said, for that [the Torah] is thy life, and the length of thy days:⁶ [seeing that] he has no care [pity] for his own life,⁷ how much the more for the life of his companions! R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in R. Johanan's name: One may tear an 'am ha-arez like a fish! Said R. Samuel b. Isaac: And [this means] along his back.

It was taught, R. Akiba said: When I was an 'am ha-arez⁸ I said: I would that I had a scholar [before me], and I would maul him like an ass. Said his disciples to him, Rabbi, say like a dog! The former bites and breaks the bones, while the latter bites but does not break the bones, he answered them.

It was taught, R. Meir used to say: Whoever marries his daughter to an 'am ha-arez, is as though he bound and laid her before a lion: just as a lion tears [his prey] and devours it and has no shame, so an 'am ha-arez strikes and cohabits and has no shame.

It was taught, R. Eliezer said: But that we are necessary to them for trade, they would kill us. R. Hiyya taught: Whoever studies⁹ the Torah in front of an 'am ha-arez, is as though he cohabited with his betrothed in his presence,¹⁰ for it is said, Moses commanded us a law, an inheritance [morashah] of the congregation of Jacob:¹¹ read not morashah but me'orasah [the betrothed].¹² Greater is the hatred wherewith the 'amme ha-arez, hate the scholar than the hatred wherewith the heathens hate Israel, and their wives [hate even] more than they. It was taught: He who has studied and then abandoned [the Torah] [hates the scholar] more than all of them.¹³ Our Rabbis taught: Six things were said of the 'amme ha-arez': We do not commit testimony to them; we do not accept testimony from them; we do not reveal a secret to them; we do not appoint them as guardians for orphans; we do not appoint them stewards¹⁴ over charity funds; and we must not join their company on the road. Some say, We do not proclaim their losses too.¹⁵ And the first Tanna?¹⁶ — Virtuous seed may sometimes issue from him, and they will enjoy¹⁷ it, as it is said, He will prepare it, and the just shall put it on.¹⁸

SIMILARLY, HE WHO WENT OUT OF etc. Shall we say that R. Meir holds, only as much as an egg is of importance, whereas R. Judah holds, Even as much as an olive too is of importance?¹⁹ But the following contradicts it: For what [minimum] quantity²⁰ must they recite grace in common?²¹ Until as much as an olive.²² R. Judah said: Until as much as an egg! — Said R. Johanan: The discussion²³ must be reversed. Abaye said, After all you need not reverse [it]: there they differ in [the interpretation of Scriptural] verses, [whereas] here they differ in a matter of logic. 'There they differ in [the interpretation of] verses': R. Meir holds: And thou shalt eat,²⁴ this refers to eating; and be satisfied, this means drinking, and eating is [constituted] by as much as an olive.²⁵ While R. Judah holds: 'And thou shalt eat and be satisfied' [implies] eating in which there is satisfaction [of one's hunger], and what is that? As much as an egg. 'Here they differ in a matter of logic', for R. Meir holds: Its return is like its defilement:²⁶ just as its defilement requires as much as an egg, so does its return require as much as an egg. While R. Judah holds, its return

(1) I.e., cannot obtain.

(2) Gedole ha-dor, title probably designating the civil leaders of the community. v. Buchler, Sepphoris, p. 9.

(3) [The archi synagogos, the supreme authority over the synagogues in the town; v. Git., Sonc. ed. p. 202, n. 5.]

(4) Deut. XXVII, 21.

(5) Lev. XI, 46.

(6) Deut. XXX, 20.

(7) In that he forsakes the Torah.

(8) R. Akiba was a poor, illiterate shepherd before he became a scholar; v. Ned. 50a.

(9) Lit., 'engages in'.

(10) So great is the affront which the 'am ha-arez feels when Torah is studied in his presence, v. Rashi.

(11) Ibid. XXXIII, 4.

(12) Thus the Torah is as the bride of the whole of Israel.

(13) More than any 'am ha-arez hates the scholar.

(14) The Heb. is the same as in the previous phrase. Epitropos is a steward who looks after another person's estates, etc.

(15) He who finds lost property is bound to proclaim it; if the owner is an 'am ha-arez, he is not bound to proclaim it.

(16) Why does he omit this?

(17) Lit., 'eat'.

(18) Job XXVII, 17.

(19) I.e., worthy of being taken into account.

(20) Lit., 'how far?'

(21) When three or more people dine together they must recite grace in common, prefacing it with the statement, 'Let us say grace', and they must not separate before this is done, even if each intends reciting grace alone. Here the question is: what is the minimum meal for which this is necessary?

(22) That is the minimum. Until ('ad) is meant in a diminishing sense.

(23) I.e., the opinions,

(24) Deut. VIII, 10.

(25) This is the minimum called eating, e.g., for eating this quantity of forbidden food liability is incurred; the command to eat unleavened bread on the first night of Passover means at least as much as an olive. The verse continues: and thou shalt bless the Lord thy God — i.e., recite grace.

(26) I.e., the same quantity of leaven which is subject to defilement as an eatable necessitates returning in order to remove it.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 50a

is like its prohibition: just as its prohibition is for as much as an olive,¹ so its return is for as much as an olive.

It was taught, R. Nathan said: Both² have the standard of two eggs; but the Sages did not agree with him.

And it shall come to pass in that day that there shall not be light, but heavy clouds [yekaroth] and thick [we-kippa'on];³ what does yekaroth we-kippa'on mean? — Said R. Eleazar: This means, the light which is precious [yakar] in this world, is yet of little account [kapuy]⁴ in the next world.⁵ R. Johanan said: This refers to Nega'im and Ohaloth,⁶ which are difficult [heavy] in this world yet shall be light [easily understood] in the future world. While R. Joshua b. Levi said: This refers to the people who are honoured in this world, but will be lightly esteemed in the next world. As was the case of R. Joseph the son of R. Joshua b. Levi, [who] became ill and fell into a trance. When he recovered, his father asked him, 'What did you see?' 'I saw a topsy-turvy world', he replied, 'the upper [class] underneath and the lower on top' he replied: 'My son', he observed, 'you saw a clear world.'⁷ And how are we [situated] there?' 'Just as we are here, so are we there. And I heard them saying, "Happy is he who comes hither with his learning in his hand". And I also heard them saying, "Those martyred by the State, no man can stand within their barrier"'.⁸ Who are these [martyrs]? Shall we say, R. Akiba and his companions?⁹ is that because they were martyrs of the State and nothing else?¹⁰ Rather [he meant] the martyrs of Lydda.¹¹

In that day there shall be upon the bells of the horses [meziloth ha-sus]: HOLY UNTO THE LORD.¹² What does 'meziloth ha-sus' [intimate]? — Said R. Joshua b. Levi: The Holy One, blessed be He, is destined to add to Jerusalem as far as a horse can run and cast its shadow [mazzil — under itself].¹³ R. Eleazar said: All the bells which are hung on a horse between its eyes shall be holy unto the Lord.¹⁴ While R. Johanan said: All the spoil which Israel shall take spoil [from morning] until a horse can run and cast its shadow [under itself] shall be holy unto the Lord. As for him who explains it [as referring to] all the spoil which Israel shall take spoil, it is well: hence it is written, and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the basins before the altar.¹⁵ But according to those who give the [other] two explanations, what is [the relevance of] 'and the pots in the Lord's house shall be' [etc.]? — [The verse] states another thing, viz., that Israel will become wealthy, make votive offerings, and bring them [to the Temple]. As for him who says [that it means] spoil, it is well: that is what is written, and in that day there shall be no more a trafficker in the house of the Lord of hosts.¹⁶ But according to those who give the [other] two explanations, what does and there shall be no more a trafficker [kena'ani] [etc.] mean? — Said R. Jeremiah: No poor man shall be here.¹⁷ And how do we know interdict. A passage describing the death of great scholars, ten in number, is found in the liturgies for the Day of Atonement and the Fast of Ab. Some of the most famous of them were R. Gamaliel, R. Judah b. Baba and R. Akiba. that [kena 'ani] connotes a merchant? — Because it is written, And Judah saw there the daughter of a certain Canaanite [kena'ani]:¹⁸ what does 'kena'ani' mean? Shall we say, literally a Canaanite: is it possible that Abraham came and admonished Isaac, Isaac came and admonished Jacob,¹⁹ and then Judah went and married [a Canaanite]! Rather, said R. Simeon b. Lakish: [It means] the daughter of a merchant, as it is written, As for the trafficker [kena'an], the balances of deceit are in his hand,²⁰ Alternatively, I can quote this: Whose merchants are princes, whose traffickers [kin'anehah] are the honourable of the earth.²¹

And the Lord shall be King over all the earth; in that day shall the Lord be One, and His name one:²² is He then not One now? — Said R. Aha b. Hanina: Not like this world is the future world. In this world, for good tidings one says, 'He is good, and He doeth good', while for evil tidings he says, 'Blessed be the true Judge';²³ [whereas] in the future world it shall be only 'He is good and He doeth good'.²⁴ 'And His name one': what does 'one' mean? Is then now His name not one? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac; Not like this world is the future world. [In] this world [His name] is written with a yod he²⁵ and read as alef daleth;²⁶ but in the future world it shall all be one: it shall be written with yod he and read as yod he. Now, Raba thought of lecturing it at the session, [whereupon] a certain old man said to him, It is written, le'alem.²⁷ R. Abina pointed out a contradiction: It is written, this is my name, to be hidden; [and it is also written],²⁸ and this is my memorial unto all generations?²⁹ The Holy One, blessed be He, said: Not as I [i.e., My name] and written am I read: I am written with a yod he, while I am read as alef daleth.³⁰

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO DO WORK ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER

UNTIL MIDDAY ONE MAY DO [WORK]; WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM NOT TO DO [WORK], ONE MAY NOT DO [WORK]. HE WHO GOES FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK, OR FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY DO WORK, WE LAY UPON HIM THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHENCE HE DEPARTED AND THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHITHER HE HAS GONE;

(1) V. p. 238, n. 12.

(2) The leaven and the holy flesh.

(3) Zech. XIV, 6.

(4) Lit., 'light', 'floating'.

(5) For the light of this world will pale into insignificance before the greater light of the next. He translates the verse: And it shall come . . . the light will not be precious but (only) of small account.

(6) The laws of leprosy and the defilement of tents through a dead body.

(7) In which people occupy the positions they merit.

(8) They occupy such an exalted position in the next world that they are unapproachable.

(9) Who were executed or martyred by the Roman State at various times for their insistence on teaching the Torah in spite of the Roman

(10) Surely they had other claims to eminence too!

(11) Two brothers, Lulianus and Papus, who took upon themselves the guilt for the death of the Emperor's daughter, so as to save the people as a whole; v. Ta'an. 18b. Lydda was a district in Asia Minor, to which belonged the city Laodicea, which city it denotes here.

(12) Zech. XIV, 20.

(13) Rashi: i.e., as far as a horse can run from the morning until midday, when its shadow (zel) is directly beneath it.

(14) I.e., they shall be votive offerings to the Sanctuary.

(15) Ibid. Even the pots shall be of gold and silver, owing to the abundance of spoil.

(16) Ibid. 21. The Temple Treasurers will not need to buy or sell for the Temple, on account of the great wealth of the spoil.

(17) Reading kena'ani as kan 'ani, here is a poor man.

(18) Gen. XXXVIII, 2.

(19) Not to marry a Canaanite; v. Ibid. XXIV, 3; XXVIII, 1.

(20) Hos. XII, 8.

(21) Isa. XXIII, 8.

(22) Zech. XIV, 9.

(23) V. Ber. 54a.

(24) For there will never be any evil tidings there.

(25) YHWH = yod he waw he, the letters of the Tetragrammaton.

(26) Adonay =alef daleth nun yod.

(27) To hide it. This is explained anon.

(28) The bracketed word is added in var. lec.

(29) Ex. III, 15. The actual reading is: this is my name for ever. (le'olam, לְעוֹלָם); but it is written, to be hidden (le'alem, לְעַלְמֵי). Thus this indicates that God's name must be kept secret; whereas 'this is my memorial' etc. implies that He is to be known by this name. Another version, accepting the reading le'olam (for ever) explains the difficulty thus: since God states this is my name, it is obvious that He is to be known by it: why then add, 'and this is my memorial' etc.?

(30) The importance attributed to the Divine Name was owing to the fact that it was not regarded simply as a designation, but was held to express the essence of the Godhead. The right way of pronouncing the Tetragrammaton was not generally known, being preserved as an esoteric teaching. Cf. Kid., Sonc. ed. p. 361, n. 6. and Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 407, n. 2.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 50b

AND A MAN MUST NOT ACT DIFFERENTLY [FROM LOCAL CUSTOM] ON ACCOUNT OF THE QUARRELS [WHICH WOULD ENSUE]. SIMILARLY, HE WHO TRANSPORTS SABBATICAL YEAR PRODUCE FROM A PLACE WHERE IT HAS CEASED TO A PLACE WHERE IT HAS NOT CEASED OR FROM A PLACE WHERE IT HAS NOT CEASED TO A PLACE WHERE IT HAS CEASED,¹ IS BOUND TO REMOVE IT.² R. JUDAH SAID: ‘DO YOU TOO GO OUT AND BRING [PRODUCE] FOR YOURSELF.’³

GEMARA. Why particularly THE EVE OF PASSOVER? Even on the eve of Sabbaths and Festivals too? For it was taught: He who does work on the eve of Sabbaths or Festivals from minhah⁴ and onwards will never see a sign of blessing?⁵ — There it is forbidden only from minhah and onwards, but not near to⁶ minhah; [whereas] here it is [forbidden] from midday. Alternatively, there he merely does not see a sign of blessing,⁷ yet we do not place him under the ban; [whereas] here we even place him under the ban.

[To turn to] the main text: He who does work on the eve of the Sabbath and on the eve of Festivals from minhah and onwards, and at the termination of the Sabbath or at the termination of a Festival, or at the termination of the Day of Atonement, or wherever there is the [least] suspicion of sin,⁸ which is to include a public fast,⁹ will never see the sign of a blessing.

Our Rabbis taught: Some are industrious and profit [thereby,] while others are industrious and suffer loss; some are indolent¹⁰ and profit [thereby], while others are indolent and suffer loss. An industrious man who profits, — he who works the whole week but does not work on the eve of the Sabbath. An industrious man who suffers loss, — he who works the whole week and works on the eve of the Sabbath. An indolent man who profits, — he who does not work the whole week and does not work on the eve of the Sabbath.¹¹ An indolent man who suffers loss, — he who does not work the whole week but works on the eve of the Sabbath. Raba said: As to these women of Mahuza,¹² though they do not work on the eve of the Sabbath, it is because they are used to indulgence [indolence], seeing that they do not work every day either. Yet even so, we call them, an indolent person who profits’.¹³

Raba opposed [two verses]. It is written, For thy mercy is great unto the heavens,¹⁴ whereas it is also written, For thy mercy is great above the heavens?¹⁵ How is this [to be explained]? Here it refers to those who perform [God's behest] for its own sake;¹⁶ there it refers to those who perform [it] with an ulterior motive.¹⁷ And [this is] in accordance with Rab Judah. For Rab Judah said in Rab's name: A man should always occupy himself with Torah and good deeds, though it is not for their own sake, for out of [doing good] with an ulterior motive there comes [doing good] for its own sake.

Our Rabbis taught: He who looks to the earnings of his wife or of a mill will never see a sign of blessing. ‘The earnings of his wife’ means [when she goes around selling wool] by weight.¹⁸ ‘[The earnings of] a mill’ means its hire.¹⁹ But if she makes [e.g., woollen garments] and sells them, Scripture indeed praises her, for it is written, she maketh linen garments and selleth them.²⁰

Our Rabbis taught: He who trades in cane and jars will never see a sign of blessing. What is the reason? Since their bulk is large, the [evil] eye has power over them.

Our Rabbis taught: Traders in market-stands²¹ and those who breed small cattle,²² and those who cut down beautiful trees,²³ and those who cast their eyes at the better portion,²⁴ will never see a sign of blessing. What is the reason? Because people gaze at them.²⁵

Our Rabbis taught: Four perutoth never contain a sign of blessing:²⁶ the wages of clerks, the wages of interpreters,²⁷ the profits of orphans,²⁸ and money that came from oversea countries. As for the wages of interpreters, that is well, [the reason being] because it looks like wages for Sabbath [work]; orphans money too, because they are not capable of renunciation;²⁹ money which comes from overseas, because a miracle does not occur every day.³⁰ But what is the reason for the wages of writers? — Said R. Joshua b. Levi: The men of the Great Assembly³¹ observed twenty-four fasts so that those who write Scrolls, tefillin and mezuzoth³² should not become wealthy for if they became wealthy they would not write.

Our Rabbis taught: Those who write Scrolls, tefillin, and mezuzoth, they, their traders and their traders' traders,³³ and all who engage [in trade] in sacred commodities,³⁴ which includes the sellers of blue wool,³⁵ never see a sign of blessing. But if they engage [therein] for its own sake,³⁶ they do see [a sign of blessing]. The citizens of Beyshan³⁷ were accustomed not to go from Tyre to Sidon³⁸ on the eve of the Sabbath. Their children went to R. Johanan and said to him, For our fathers this was possible; for us it is impossible. Said he to them, Your fathers have already taken it upon themselves, as it is said, Hear my son, the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the teaching of thy mother.³⁹

The inhabitants of Hozai⁴⁰ were accustomed to separate hallah on rice.⁴¹ [When] they went and told it to R. Joseph he said to them, Let a lay Israelite eat it in their presence:⁴² Abaye raised an objection against him: Things which are permitted, yet others treat them as forbidden,⁴³

(1) The law concerning produce of the Sabbatical year is this: as long as there is produce in the field available for animals, a man may keep produce at home as his private property; but when the produce in the field has ceased, — the animals having consumed it, he must carry out the produce from his home and declare it free for all. Having done this, he may then take back into the house whatever he needs for his private use (Tosaf. 52b, s.v. מתבערין).

(2) I.e., place it at everybody's disposal.

(3) This is explained in the Gemara.

(4) The afternoon service, and the time for same — beginning generally two and a half hours before nightfall.

(5) I.e., the money earned then will not be profitable.

(6) I.e., before.

(7) I.e., it is inadvisable.

(8) As he may continue work after the Sabbath or Festival has actually commenced; or begin before they have quite terminated.

(9) Proclaimed on account of rain, when work was forbidden, Ta'an. 12b. On other fast-days work is permitted.

(10) Lit., 'low'.

(11) Though his abstention then is due to indolence, not to respect for the Sabbath, he is nevertheless rewarded, since in fact he does abstain.

(12) V. p. 20, n. 5.

(13) [Var. lec. (v. Rashi); These women of Mahuza, although the reason they do no work. . . Sabbath is that they are used . . . yet even so are called etc.]

(14) Ps. LVII, 11.

(15) Ibid. CVIII, 5.

(16) Lit., 'name'. To them, His mercy is great above the heavens.

(17) Lit., 'not for its own name'.

(18) Jast.; i.e., trading in wool, but not making it up; this realizes very little profit and is not a dignified occupation for a woman.

(19) But trading in mills, buying and selling them, is profitable.

(20) Prov. XXXI, 24. This occurs in the description of the 'woman of valour'.

(21) [Heb. Simta. Tosef. Bek. II has Shemittah, the Sabbatical year when trading with produce is forbidden.]

(22) Sheep, goats, etc.

(23) To sell for their timber.

(24) When sharing with their neighbour.

(25) Market traders are exposed to the public gaze, and so to the evil eye, which is a potent source of misfortune. The other three incur the ill-will of people, the first because breeding small animals was generally frowned upon.

(26) Perutah was the smallest coin. I.e., the monies earned by the four things enumerated.

(27) Officials who spoke the Sabbath lectures of the Sages to the congregation; the Sage whispered his statements to the interpreter, and he explained them to the people. Also, those who publicly interpreted and translated the weekly readings of the Law on the Sabbath.

(28) Orphans' money was sometimes entrusted to people to trade with, and they kept half the profit for themselves for their labour.

(29) He may take more than his due, and a minor cannot legally renounce it in his favour.

(30) Considerable danger attended the transport of freights at sea, and one might very easily suffer loss.

(31) A body of one hundred and twenty men founded by Ezra, regarded as the bearers of Jewish teaching and tradition after the Prophets; v. Ab. I, 1.

(32) V. Glos.

(33) All who trade in these, whether directly or indirectly.

(34) Lit., 'work'.

(35) Wool dyed blue for insertion in garments as fringes; v. Num. XV, 38.

(36) To benefit the community, profit being a secondary consideration.

(37) Beyshan (Scythopolis) in Galilee (Jast.). [Beyshan was, however, far too distant from Tyre to enable its inhabitants to go there and back in one day. It must therefore be located in the neighbourhood of Tyre and it is identified with the village at Abasiya, N.E. of Tyre (Hurwitz, Palestine, p. 112).]

(38) On the coast of Palestine. Friday was market day at Sidon (Rashi).

(39) Prov. I, 8.

(40) Known to-day as Khuzistan, in S. W. Persia; Obermeyer, pp. 204ff.

(41) Which is necessary by law.

(42) Hallah may be eaten by a priest only. Thus he intimated that this was not hallah.

(43) Lit., 'practise a prohibition in connection with them'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 51a

you may not permit it in their presence? Said he to him, Yet was it not stated thereon, R. Hisda said: This refers to Cutheans.¹ What is the reason in the case of Cutheans? Because they confound one thing [with another]!² Then these people too [being ignorant] confound one thing [with another]? — Rather, said R. Ashi, we consider: if most of them eat rice [bread], a lay Israelite must not eat it [the hallah] in their presence, lest the law of hallah be [altogether] forgotten by them; but if most of them eat corn [bread], let a lay Israelite eat it in their presence, lest they come to separate [hallah] from what is liable upon what is exempt, and from what is exempt upon what is liable.³

[It was stated in] the text: 'Things which are permitted, yet others treat them as forbidden, you may not permit it in their presence. Said R. Hisda: This refers to Cutheans'. Yet not [to] all people? Surely it was taught: Two brothers may bathe together,⁴ yet two brothers do not bathe [together] in Cabul.⁵ And it once happened that Judah and Hillel, the sons of R. Gamaliel, bathed together in Cabul, and the whole region criticized them, saying, 'We have never seen such [a thing] in [all] our days;' whereupon Hillel slipped away and went to the outer chamber,⁶ but he was unwilling to tell them, 'You are permitted [to do this]'. [Again,] one may go out in slippers on the Sabbath,⁷ yet people do not go out in slippers in Beri.⁸ And it once happened that Judah and Hillel, the sons of R. Gamaliel, went out in slippers on the Sabbath in Beri, whereupon the whole district criticized them, saying, 'We have never seen such [a thing] in [all] our days'; so they removed them and gave them to their [non-Jewish] servants, but they were unwilling to tell them, 'You are permitted [to wear these]'. Again, one may sit on the stools of Gentiles on the Sabbath,⁹ yet people do not sit on the stools of Gentiles on the Sabbath in Acco.¹⁰ And it once happened that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel sat down on the stools of Gentiles on the Sabbath in Acco, and the whole district criticized him, saying, 'We have never seen such [a thing] in [all] our days'. [Accordingly] he slipped down on to the ground, but he was unwilling to tell them, 'You are permitted [to do this]'.¹¹ — The people of the coastal region, since Rabbis are not common among them, are like Cutheans.¹²

As for [not sitting on] Gentiles' stools, that is well, [the reason being] because it looks like [engaging] in buying and selling. [That they do not go out] in slippers too [is understandable], lest they fall off and they come to carry them four cubits in the street. But what is the reason that [brothers] do not bathe [together]? — As it was taught: A man may bathe with all, except with his father, his father-in-law, his mother's husband and his sister's husband.¹³ But R. Judah permits [a man to bathe] with his father, on account of his father's honour,¹⁴ and the same applies to his mother's husband. Then they [the people of Cabul] came and forbade [it] in the case of two brothers on account of [bathing with] his sister's husband.¹⁵

It was taught: A disciple must not bathe with his teacher, but if his teacher needs him, it is permitted.

When Rabbah b. Bar Hanah came,¹⁶ he ate of the stomach fat.¹⁷ Now, R. 'Awira¹⁸ the Elder and Rabbah son of R. Huna visited him; as soon as he saw them, he hid¹⁹ it [the fat] from them. When they narrated it to Abaye he said to them, 'He has treated you like Cutheans'. But does not Rabbah b. Bar Hanah agree with what we learned: WE LAY UPON HIM THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHENCE HE DEPARTED AND THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHITHER HE HAS GONE? — Said Abaye: That is only [when he goes] from [one town in] Babylonia to [another in] Babylonia, or from [a town in] Palestine to [another in] Palestine, or from [a town in] Babylonia to [another in] Palestine; but not [when he goes] from [a place in] Palestine to [another in] Babylonia, [for] since we submit to them,²⁰ we do as they.²¹ R. Ashi said: You may even say [that this holds good when a man goes] from Palestine to Babylonia; this is, however, where it is not his intention to return; but Rabbah b. Bar Hanah had the intention of returning.

Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said to his son: My son, do not eat [this fat], whether in my presence or not in my presence. As for me who saw R. Johanan eat [it], R. Johanan is sufficient [an authority] to rely upon in his presence and not in his presence. [But] you have not seen him [eat it]; [therefore] do not eat, whether in my presence or not in my presence. Now, [one statement] of his disagrees with [another statement] of his. For Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said: R. Johanan b. Eleazar related to me: I once followed R. Simeon son of R. Jose b. Lakuna into a kitchen garden,

(1) The people whom Shalmaneser settled in Samaria after the deportation of the Ten Tribes. They formally accepted Judaism, but as they retained many heathen practices, their religious status fluctuated, until they were finally declared heathens. In the present passage they are treated as Jews, but so lax as to require special laws.

(2) If they were treated with leniency in one case, their laxity in general would increase.

(3) Hallah can be separated from one piece of dough upon another piece, providing that both are liable; but if one is liable while the other is not, the separated piece is not hallah, while the other remains forbidden as tebel. Hence if they separate hallah from rice dough, which is really exempt, upon dough of wheat, which is liable, the latter remains tebel, and by eating it they transgress. Again, if they separate hallah from wheat dough upon itself and upon a rice dough, the former is not hallah but likewise tebel, and when it is given to the priest he eats tebel.

(4) Lit., 'as one' — without fear that this may induce a desire for pederasty.

(5) A place southeast of Acco. Though the fear of pederasty may seem far-fetched, this is not so when its prevalence in the Roman Empire is remembered; v. Weiss, Dor, 11, 21f.

(6) Of the baths.

(7) Though they are loose-fitting; we do not fear that they may fall off and the wearer will thus come to carry them in the street, which of course is forbidden.

(8) A town in Galilee.

(9) When they are engaged in business, and we do not fear that the Jew who sits down there will be suspected of doing the same.

(10) A town and harbour on the coast of Phoenicia.

- (11) In all these instances Jews are referred to, yet we see that this law holds good.
- (12) In that leniency may lead to laxity, where there is none to show them the difference between what is mere stringency and what is really prohibited by law.
- (13) In their case this may lead to impure thoughts.
- (14) He can perform some services for him and help him.
- (15) Lest the latter be thought permitted too.
- (16) From Palestine to Babylonia.
- (17) The stomach is partly curved, like a bow, and partly straight, like the string of a bow, which is the meaning of the present word. The fat on the straight part of the stomach is really permitted, but in Babylonia it was treated as forbidden.
- (18) Alfasi and Rosh read: 'Awia.
- (19) Lit., 'covered'.
- (20) We accept their jurisdiction.
- (21) I.e., a Palestinian going to Babylonia may retain his home practice, for this cannot give rise to quarrels.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 51b

and he took the aftergrowth of the cabbage¹ and ate it, and he gave [some] to me and said to me, 'My son, in my presence you may eat,² when not in my presence, you may not eat [it]. I who saw R. Simeon b. Yohai eat [it], — R. Simeon B. Yohai is [great] enough to rely upon in his presence and not in his presence; [but] you may eat in my presence, but do not eat [when] not in my presence'.³ What is [this reference to] R. Simeon? For it was taught, R. Simeon said: All aftergrowths are forbidden,⁴ except the aftergrowth of the cabbage, because there is none like them among the vegetables of the field;⁵ but the Sages maintain, All aftergrowths are forbidden. Now, both [state their views] on the basis of R. Akiba. For it was taught: Behold, we may not sow, nor gather in our increase.⁶ R. Akiba said: Now, since they do not sow, whence can they gather?⁷ Hence it follows that the aftergrowth is forbidden.⁸ Wherein do they differ? The Rabbis hold, We preventively forbid the aftergrowth of cabbage on account of other aftergrowths in general; whereas R. Simeon holds: We do not preventively forbid the aftergrowth of cabbage on account of [other] aftergrowths in general.⁹

HE WHO GOES FROM A PLACE etc. As for [teaching], HE WHO GOES FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY DO WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK . . . WE LAY UPON HIM THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHITHER HE HAS GONE, AND A MAN MUST NOT ACT DIFFERENTLY, ON ACCOUNT OF THE QUARRELS, that is well, and he must not work. But [if he goes] FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY DO WORK . . . A MAN MUST NOT ACT DIFFERENTLY, BECAUSE OF THE QUARRELS — [that is] he is to work? But you say, WE LAY UPON HIM THE RESTRICTION OR THE PLACE WHITHER HE HAS GONE AND THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHENCE HE HAS DEPARTED! — Said Abaye: It refers to the first clause.¹⁰ Raba said: After all it refers to the second clause, but this is its meaning: This does not come within [the scope of] differences which cause quarrels. What will you say: He who sees will say, '[He regards] work as forbidden?'¹¹ [No:] they will indeed say, 'How many unemployed are there in the market place!'¹²

R. Safra said to R. Abba:¹³ For instance I,¹⁴ who know [the art] of fixing the New Moon,¹⁵

(1) Rashi: It was in a Sabbatical year, and after the time when provisions must be removed from the house; v. p. 243, n. 1. Tosaf. maintains that 'and he took' implies that he pulled it out of the earth; thus it was still available for cattle, and therefore it was before the time of removal.

(2) Because you can rely upon me.

(3) Whereas Rabbah b. Bar Hanah told his son not to rely upon him even in his presence.

(4) After the time of removal (Rashi); v. however next note.

(5) Rashi offers two explanations the first of which he rejects. The second, about which he is also doubtful, is this:

cabbages remain in the ground right through winter, whereas the aftergrowths of other vegetables are consumed earlier: hence we are more lenient with cabbages, because we can never apply to them the principle, 'when it ceases for the beasts in the field, it must cease — (i.e., be removed from) the man in the house'. V. p. 251, n. 1, for a different interpretation.

(6) Lev. XXV, 20.

(7) Then why state 'nor gather in our increase'?

(8) And to this they refer.

(9) R. Tam: the reference is to the time before the removal. Both R. Simeon and the Rabbis accept R. Akiba's view that the aftergrowth is Scripturally forbidden, but only that aftergrowth which is similar to sowing (seeds), for the verse, 'we may not sow, nor gather in our increase, implies that 'our increase,' which refers to the aftergrowth, is similar to what 'we may not sow'; but the cabbage plant has more affinity to trees than to seeds (v. Keth. 111b), hence it is not forbidden by Biblical law. This view is held by both, and they differ whether the cabbage aftergrowth is Rabbinically forbidden as a preventive measure or not. Another explanation is given in Tosaf. on quite different lines.

(10) I.e., HE MUST NOT ACT DIFFERENTLY if he goes FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY DO WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK.

(11) Though we permit it; do you fear that this will lead to strife?

(12) Raba explains the Mishnah thus: IF A MAN GOES FROM A PLACE WHERE THEY DO NOT WORK TO A PLACE WHERE THEY WORK . . . WE IMPOSE UPON HIM THE RESTRICTION OF THE PLACE WHENCE HE HAS DEPARTED. For the general principle that a man MUST NOT ACT DIFFERENTLY from the rest of the people was only ON ACCOUNT OF THE QUARRELS, whereas here we have no fear.

(13) Var. lec. Raba.

(14) [So Tosaf. and MS. M., cur. edd. 'we'.]

(15) By Biblical law Festivals are holy on the first and the seventh days only (Pentecost one day altogether). But owing to uncertainty in early time about the exact day of New Moon, i.e., when the month began, it became a binding practice in the Diaspora to observe two days instead of one, and this remained binding even when New Moon was ascertained by mathematical calculation, which obviated all doubt.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 52a

in inhabited places I do not work,¹ because it is a change [which would lead to] strife. [But] how is it in the wilderness? — Said he to him, Thus did R. Ammi say: In inhabited regions it is forbidden; in the desert it is permitted. R. Nathan b. Asia went from Rab's academy [in Sura]² to Pumbeditha on the second Festival day of Pentecost, [whereupon] R. Joseph put him under the ban. Said Abaye to him, Yet let the master punish him with lashes? — Said he to him, I have treated him more severely, for in the West [sc. Palestine] they take a vote for punishing a disciple with lashes, yet they do not take a vote on the ban.³ Others say, R. Joseph had him lashed. Said Abaye to him, Yet let the Master ban him, for Rab and Samuel both said: We impose the ban for [the violation of] the two Festival days of the Diaspora? — Said he to him, That refers only to an ordinary person, but here it is a scholar, so I did what was better for him, for in the West they take a vote for punishing a disciple with lashes, yet they do not take a vote on the ban.

SIMILARLY, HE WHO TRANSPORTS SABBATICAL-YEAR PRODUCE etc. Does then R. Judah not accept what we learned, WE LAY ON HIM THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHENCE HE DEPARTED AND THE RESTRICTIONS OF THE PLACE WHITHER HE HAS GONE? — Said R. Shisha the son of R. Idi, R. Judah says⁴ a different thing, and this is its meaning: or from a place where it has not ceased to a place where it has not ceased, and then he heard that it had ceased in his town, he is bound to remove it. R. Judah said: [He can say,]⁵ 'Do you too go out and procure [produce] for yourself from the place whence I have obtained it', since it has not ceased for them.⁶ Shall we say that R. Judah [thus] rules leniently? But surely R. Eleazar said, R. Judah did not rule otherwise than stringently?⁷ Rather, reverse it: He is not bound to remove it.⁸ R. Judah said: [His townspeople can say to him], 'Do you too go out [now] and obtain [produce] from the place whence you brought it [the produce you possess], and lo! it has ceased'.⁹ Abaye said: In truth it is as taught,¹⁰ and this is what he states: Or from a place where it has not ceased to a place where it has ceased, and [then] he brought it back to its place, and it has still not ceased [there], he is not bound to remove it. R. Judah said: [They can say to him,] ‘Go out and do you too bring [produce] from the place whence you have [now] brought it, and lo! it has ceased [there]’. To this R. Ashi demurred: According to R. Judah, has he then caught them [these restrictions] up on the back of an ass!¹¹ Rather, said R. Ashi, [This enters] in the controversy of the following Tannaim. For we learned: If a man preserves three [kinds of] preserves in one barrel,¹² — R. Eliezer said: One may eat [in reliance] upon the first [only];¹³ R. Joshua said: Even [in reliance] upon the last;¹⁴ R. Gamaliel said: Whatever kind has ceased from the field, he must remove that kind from the barrel, and the halachah is as his ruling.¹⁵

Rabina said, [It enters] into the controversy of the following Tannaim. For we learned:¹⁶ One may eat dates until the last in Zoar is finished;¹⁷ R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said:

(1) On the second day of Festivals. [I.e., when I happen to be in Babylon, v. infra p. 52a.]

(2) [Var. lec. ‘Biram’ on the West bank of the Euphrates. v. Asheri and MS.M. In Biram, which was the home of R. Nathan b. Asia, only a one day Festival was observed, v. R.H., Sonc. ed. p. 100, n. 2 and Obermeyer, p. 99].

(3) As the ban would damage his prestige more than corporal punishment. This proves that the ban is a severer punishment.

(4) [Var. lec. omit ‘R. Judah’ the reference being to the first Tanna, v. Rashi.]

(5) To the people of the place whence he came.

(6) Thus, he does not regard the practice of his own town, since they too can do as he.

(7) In this connection.

(8) I.e., insert the addition in the Mishnah thus: Or if he goes from a place where it has not ceased to a place where it has not ceased, and he then learns that it has ceased in his own town, he is not bound to remove it, as one cannot speak of the restrictions of the place whence he came, for when he left it there were as yet no restrictions.

(9) I.e., the fact remains that by now it has ceased in your own town, and the resultant law applies to yourself too just as to us.

(10) It refers to two dissimilar places, not to two similar places.

(11) So that he brings them back with him! The produce has neither grown in that second town nor does he consume it there: how then can he be subject to the restrictions of that place?

(12) I.e., three different vegetables. These may ‘cease from the field’ at different times — the reference is to the Sabbatical year.

(13) As soon as the first kind ‘ceases from the field’, he must declare the whole free to all, because their being preserved together makes them as one.

(14) He may go on eating of all three until the last kind has ceased from the field.

(15) Now in the Mishnah there is the same controversy. The first Tanna agrees with R. Joshua's lenient view, and this is what he means: If a man carries various kinds of produce from a place where they have not ceased to a place where all of them have ceased, he is bound to remove them. But if only some kinds have ceased, he may eat even of the kind which has ceased. R. Judah rules, One can say to him, ‘Go out and do you too bring of that kind from the field’, i.e., you will not find of that kind, and therefore you must remove it in accordance with R. Gamaliel.

(16) [The teaching that follows is not a Mishnah but a Baraita, Tosef. Sheb. VII. Read accordingly with MS. M.: ‘It has been taught’.]

(17) Dates may be eaten in the whole of Judea until the last palm tree is finished in Zoar, a town near the Dead Sea (Gen. XIII, 10) particularly well-stocked with palm trees (v. Deut. XXXIV, 3, though ‘the city of palm trees’ mentioned there refers to Jericho, not Zoar).

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 52b

One may eat [in reliance] on those that are among the upper [overarching] boughs but one may not eat [in reliance] on those that are among the single prickly branches.¹

We learned elsewhere: There are three [separate] districts² in respect of removal: Judea, Transjordan and Galilee;³ and there are three districts in each of them separately.⁴ Then why did they say, There are [only] three districts in respect of removal?⁵ Because in each one they may eat until it [the produce] has ceased in the last [region] thereof.⁶ Whence do we know it? — Said R. Hama b. ‘Ukba in the name of R. Jose b. Hanina, Scripture saith, [And the sabbath-produce of the land shall be food for you...]and for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land:⁷ as long as the [wild] beasts can eat in the field, feed the cattle in the house;⁸ when there is no more for the beasts in the field, make an end of it for the cattle in the house;⁹ and we have it on tradition that the beasts in Judea do not live on the produce of Galilee, and the beasts in Galilee do not live on the produce of Judea.¹⁰

Our Rabbis taught: Produce which went from the Land¹¹ abroad¹² must be removed wherever it is.¹³ R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: They must go back to their [original] place and be removed, because it is said, ‘in thy land’. But you have utilized this?¹⁴ — Read therein, ‘in the land’, ‘in thy land’.¹⁵ Alternatively, [it is deduced] from, ‘that are [asher] in thy land’.¹⁶

R. Safra went from the Land abroad, [and] he had with him a barrel of wine of the Sabbath year. Now, R. Huna the son of R. Ika and R. Kahana accompanied him. He asked them, Is there any one who has heard from R. Abbahu¹⁷ [whether] the halachah is as R. Simeon b. Eleazar or not? — Said R. Kahana to him: Thus did R. Abbahu say: The halachah is as R. Simeon b. Eleazar. R. Huna the son of R. Ika [however] said to him, Thus did R. Abbahu say: The halachah is not as R. Simeon b. Eleazar. Said R. Safra, Accept this ruling of R. Huna,¹⁸ because he is meticulously careful to learn the laws from his teacher, like Rehabah of Pumbeditha. For Rehabah said in Rab Judah's name: The Temple Mount consisted of a double colonnade, [i.e.,] a colonnade within a colonnade.¹⁹ [Thereupon] R. Joseph applied to him [R. Safra] the verse, My people ask counsel at their stock, and their staff [makkelo] declareth unto them:²⁰ whoever is lenient [mekal] to him, to him he concedes [right].²¹

R. Elai cut down date-berries of the Sabbatical year.²² How might he do thus: the Merciful One said, [It . . . shall be] for food,²³ but not for destruction? And should you answer that is only where it has reached²⁴ [the stage of] fruit,²⁵ but not where it has not reached [the stage of] fruit, — surely R. Nahman said in Rabbah b. Abbuha's name: The calyxes²⁶ of ‘orlah are forbidden, because they became a guard for the fruits. Now, when is it a guard for the fruits? When they are unripe berries, yet he calls them fruits! — R. Nahman ruled as R. Jose. For we learned, R. Jose said: The [berries of ‘orlah] in the budding stage [semadar] are forbidden, because they count as fruit; whereas the Rabbis disagree with him. To this R. Shimi of Nehardea demurred; yet do the Rabbis disagree with R. Jose in respect to other trees,²⁷ — surely we learned, From when may you not cut down trees in the Sabbatical year?²⁸ Beth Shammai maintain: All trees [may not be cut down] from when they bring forth;²⁹ but Beth Hillel rule: The carob trees from when they form chains [of carobs]; the vine trees,

(1) The lower portion of the palm tree near the roots is surrounded with single prickly, thorn-like branches. Now, when a wind blows, the falling dates are retained both among the ordinary (upper) branches as well as the prickly ones. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel rules that you may eat only as long as there are dates among the higher branches, which are accessible; but those (in the prickly branches) must be disregarded, since animals cannot take them because of the prickles. In our Mishnah the first Tanna means: When they have completely ceased, even from the prickly branches, he must remove them. Whereas R. Judah maintains that unless one can go and bring them, i.e., unless they are accessible, he must remove them, which means even if there are still dates on these thorn branches.

(2) Lit., ‘countries’.

(3) In each the time of removal is when the produce has ‘ceased from the field’ in that particular district.

(4) The produce ceasing in each at a different time.

(5) Instead of nine.

(6) Rash: until it has ceased in the last subdivision. Tosaf. explains it differently v. Shebi. IX, 2-3.

- (7) Lev. XXV, 6f.
- (8) I.e., domestic animals.
- (9) I.e., you must no longer keep the produce in the house for your private needs.
- (10) I.e., they do not stray so far in search of food (Rashi).
- (11) I.e., Palestine, 'the Land' par excellence.
- (12) Lit., 'to without the Land.'
- (13) The law of sabbatical produce, being dependent on the soil, is binding in Palestine only, v. Kid. 36b; yet it is also binding upon Palestine produce, even when transplanted elsewhere. Nevertheless, he is not bound to take it back to Palestine for removal, but can do it wherever he is.
- (14) To show that one district cannot rely on another.
- (15) I.e., Scripture could have written 'in the land', which would suffice for the present exegesis. In thy land intimates both.
- (16) Asher is superfluous; hence it can be used for this purpose.
- (17) Who was his teacher.
- (18) Lit., 'hold . . . in your hand'.
- (19) V. supra 13b and Bezah, Sonc. ed. p. 54, n. 9. The point of the quotation is not clear. In Ber. 33b Rashi explains that Rehabah was careful to use the word setaw, the exact word used by his teacher, though the passage is based on a Mishnah (v. Supra 11b), where the word iztaba is used.
- (20) Hos. IV, 12.
- (21) A humorous play on words, connecting makkal, a staff, with mekal, he is lenient.
- (22) I.e., before they ripened and were fit for food (R. Hananel); Rashi: he cut down the palm tree before the dates had ripened.
- (23) Lev. XXV, 6.
- (24) Lit., 'descended to'.
- (25) I.e., when it is ripe.
- (26) Which surround the date in its early stage.
- (27) Apart from the vine, to which the above refers.
- (28) As stated above, they must be used for food, not for destruction. Now the question is: at what stage are their fruits regarded as food, so that the tree must not be cut down, but left until its fruit ripens.
- (29) Rashi explains here: the first leaves (preceding the fruits); but in Ber. 36b Rashi explains: when they bring forth the fruit; Strashun accepts the latter view.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 53a

from when they form kernels;¹ olive trees, from when they blossom;² and all other trees, from when they bring forth. Now R. Assi said thereon: Boser [half-ripe fruit], girua' [formation of kernels], and the white bean are identical.³ 'The white bean can you think so!⁴ — Rather, say, its size is that of the white bean. Now, whom do you know to maintain that boser is fruit, but not semadar? The Rabbis.⁵ Yet it is stated, 'and all other trees, from when they bring forth?''⁶ — Rather, R. Ilai cut down nishane.⁷

Our Rabbis taught: One may eat grapes [of the Sabbatical year] until the espalier branches of okel⁸ are finished. If there are later ones than these, one may eat [in reliance] on them.⁹ One may eat olives until the last of Tekoa¹⁰ is finished. R. Eliezer said: Until the last of Gush-Heleb¹¹ is finished, so that a poor man should go out and not find a quarter¹² either on the branches or on the stem. One may eat dried figs until the unripe figs [pagge] of Beth Hini¹³ are finished. Said R. Judah: The unripe figs of Beth Hini were not mentioned except in connection with tithe, for we learned,¹⁴ The unripe figs of Beth Hini and the dates¹⁵ of Tobanya¹⁶ are subject to tithe.¹⁷ 'One may eat dates until the last in Zoar is finished; R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: One may eat [in reliance] on those that are among the upper [overarching] branches, but you may not eat [in reliance] on those that are among the single prickly branches.' But the following contradicts this: One may eat grapes until Passover; olives until Pentecost; dried figs until Hanukkah;¹⁸ [and] dates until Purim.¹⁹ Now R. Bibi said, R. Johanan transposes the last two!²⁰ — Both are one [the same] limit. Alternatively, surely it is explicitly taught, ‘If there are later ones than these, one may eat [in reliance] on them.’²¹

It was taught, R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: An indication of mountainous country is [the presence of] millin,²² an indication of valleys is palm trees; an indication of streams is reeds; an indication of lowlands is the sycamore tree. And though there is no proof of the matter, there is an allusion to the matter, for it is said, And the king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones, and cedars made he to be as the sycamore trees that are in the lowland, for abundance.²³

‘An indication of mountainous country is [the presence of] millin; an indication of valleys is palm trees.’ The practical difference is in respect of first fruits. For we learned: First fruits are not brought of any save the seven species,²⁴ nor of the palm trees in the highlands nor of the fruits in the valleys.²⁵ ‘An indication of streams is reeds.’ The practical difference is in respect of the rough valley’ [nahal ethan].²⁶ ‘An indication of lowlands is the sycamore tree.’ The practical difference is in respect of buying and selling.²⁷ Now that you have arrived at this, all the [others] too are in respect of buying and selling.

MISHNAH. WHERE IT IS THE PRACTICE TO SELL SMALL CATTLE²⁸ TO HEATHENS, ONE MAY SELL; WHERE IT IS THE PRACTICE NOT TO SELL,²⁹ ONE MAY NOT SELL. AND IN ALL PLACES ONE MAY NOT SELL LARGE CATTLE TO THEM, [NOR] CALVES OR FOALS, WHETHER SOUND OR MAIMED.³⁰ R. JUDAH PERMITS IN THE CASE OF A MAIMED [ONE].³¹ THE SON OF BATHYRA PERMITTED IT IN THE CASE OF A HORSE.³² WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO EAT ROAST [MEAT] ON THE NIGHT OF PASSOVER, ONE MAY EAT[IT]; WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM NOT TO EAT [IT],³³ ONE MAY NOT EAT [IT].

GEMARA. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: A man is forbidden to say, ‘This meat shall be for Passover,’ because it looks as though he is sanctifying his animal and eating sacred flesh without [the Temple]. Said R. Papa: This applies only to meat, but not to wheat, because he means, It is to be guarded [from fermenting] for Passover. But not ‘meat’? An objection is raised: R. Jose said, Thaddeus of Rome³⁴ accustomed the Roman [Jews] to eat helmeted goats³⁵ on the nights of Passover. [Thereupon] they [the Sages] sent [a message] to him: If you were not Thaddeus, we would proclaim the ban against you, because you make Israel eat sacred flesh without [the Temple]. ‘Sacred flesh’ — can you think so?³⁶ — Rather say,

(1) Or, ovules containing moisture (v. Jast. s.v. גרע II).

(2) I.e., when their blossoms, a calyx-like growth, come forth.

(3) Lit., ‘that is boser, that is’ etc. I.e., the three terms indicate the same stage. The Mishnah often speaks of these.

(4) We are discussing the vine!

(5) For R. Jose maintains that even semadar, which denotes an earlier stage, is fruit.

(6) Thus they agree with R. Jose in respect to other trees.

(7) Stunted dates of palms whose fruit never matures.

(8) Cur. ed. ‘Ar. (also quoted by Rashi) reads: Abel, i.e., the branches of Abel Cheramim (lit., ‘the palm of the vine-yards’ — v. Jud. XI, 33), situate six or seven Roman miles from Philadelphia (Rabbath-Ammon), and as its name implies, famous for its vineyards; v. J.E. s.v.

(9) I.e., as long as they are yet on the branches.

(10) A city of southern Judea often mentioned in the Bible (e.g., II Sam. XIV, 2f; Amos I, 1; II Chron. XI, 6), and famous for the abundance of its olives, v. Men. 85b.

(11) Lit., ‘fat ground’, (Gush-heleb) or Giscala in Galilee, not far from Tyre (Neub. Geogr. p. 230), was rich in oil; Josephus, Vita, 13; Men. 85b; v. J.E. s.v. Giscala.

(12) I.e., a log.

(13) Bethania, near Jerusalem; v. Neub. op. cit., 149f. Pagge are probably a species of figs that never reach full maturity, but are nevertheless fit for eating.

- (14) 'We learned' is absent in this passage as quoted in 'Er. 28b. [It is a Baraita (Tosef. Sheb. VII) and not a Mishnah.]
- (15) Ahina (pl. ahini) is a species of late and inferior dates.
- (16) Name of a certain place.
- (17) But these figs do not determine the time for the removal of figs.
- (18) The Feast of Lights, commencing on the twenty-fifth of Kislev and lasting for eight days. It generally falls in the latter half of December.
- (19) 'Lots' — the minor Festival in celebration of Haman's downfall. It is held on the fourteenth of Adar, and generally occurs in March.
- (20) I.e., dried figs until Purim, and dates until Hanukkah. By then the various kinds mentioned have disappeared from the field; thus this conflicts with the previous statement.
- (21) Thus even if these are different time-limits, the later one is stated in accordance with this teaching.
- (22) Milla pl. millin, a species of oak from which the gall-nut is collected (quercus infectoria). Jast.
- (23) I Kings X, 27.
- (24) Enumerated in Deut. VIII, 8; a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees and pomegranates; a land of olive trees and honey.
- (25) Because these are of inferior quality. The same idea is expressed by R. Simeon b. Gamaliel when he says that palm trees are an indication of valleys, i.e., the best grow in the valleys. His other statements bear a similar meaning.
- (26) V. Deut. XXI,4 . Nahal is a stream which in summer dries up and leaves a valley bed. The presence of reeds along the margin of the valley indicates that this is a fitting place for the purpose.
- (27) If a man sells a lowland estate it must contain sycamores (Rashi). Or, if a man sells sycamore trees, guaranteeing them to be of the best quality, they must be from lowland country.
- (28) E.g., sheep and goats.
- (29) For fear that large cattle too may be sold to them; v. n. 5.
- (30) Large cattle, because they are thereby deprived of the Sabbath rest (v. A.Z. 15a); calves or foals, being the young of large cattle, as a preventive measure; maimed, likewise as a preventive measure on account of whole animals.
- (31) Because it is unfit for work and will immediately be killed for food. Therefore the few will not see it in the heathen's possession, and so will not come to sell him others too.
- (32) The main use of a horse is for riding, and riding on the Sabbath, even by a Jew, is not regarded as Scripturally forbidden but merely as a shebuth (v. Glos.).
- (33) This means after the destruction of the Temple. While the Temple stood the Passover sacrifice was eaten roast (Ex. XII, 8). Consequently, when the Temple was no more it became the practice to refrain from eating roast meat on the night of Passover, so that it should not appear that a sacrifice was brought without the Temple, which is forbidden.
- (34) Lit., 'a man of Rome'.
- (35) Goats roasted whole with the entrails and the legs on the head, like a helmet (the verb kalas denotes to put on a helmet). That is how the Passover sacrifice was roasted, v. infra 74a.
- (36) Surely the goats were not dedicated as sacrifices.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 53b

It is near to making Israel eat sacred flesh without [the Temple].¹ [Thus,] only a 'helmeted' goat,² but not if it is not 'helmeted'? — I will tell you: if it is 'helmeted', there is no difference whether he stated³ or he did not state; [but] if it is not 'helmeted', if he specified, it is [forbidden]; if he did not specify, it is not [forbidden].

R. Aha learned this Baraita as [the statement of] R. Simeon.⁴ To this R. Shesheth demurred: It is well according to him who learns it as [the statement of] R. Jose; then it is correct. But according to him who learns it as [the statement of] R. Simeon, is it correct?, Surely we learned, R. Simeon declares him exempt, because he did not make the offering in the way which people make [this] offering!⁵ Said Rabina to R. Ashi: And is it correct [even] according to him who learns it as [the statement of] R. Jose? Surely Raba said: R. Simeon stated this according to the view of R. Jose, who maintained: A man is held responsible⁶ for his last words too. Surely then, since R. Simeon agrees with R. Jose, R. Jose also agrees with R. Simeon?⁷ — No: R. Simeon agrees with R. Jose, but R.

Jose does not agree with R. Simeon.⁸ The scholars asked: Was Thaddeus, the man of Rome, a great man or a powerful man?⁹ — Come and hear: This too did Thaddeus of Rome teach: What [reason] did Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah see that they delivered themselves, for the sanctification of the [Divine] Name,¹⁰ to the fiery furnace? They argued a minori to themselves: if frogs, which are not commanded concerning the sanctification of the [Divine] Name, yet it is written of them, and they shall come up and go into thy house . . . and into thine ovens, and into thy kneading troughs:¹¹ when are the kneading troughs to be found near the oven? When the oven is hot.¹² We, who are commanded concerning the sanctification of the Name, how much the more so.¹³ R. Jose b. Abin said: He cast merchandise into the Passover-sacrifice at the time of roasting, this is not the way in which people consecrate animals: therefore his words are invalid. pockets of scholars.¹⁴ For R. Johanan said: Whoever casts merchandise into the pockets of scholars will be privileged to sit in the Heavenly Academy, for it is said, for wisdom is a defence even as money is a defence.¹⁵

MISHNAH. WHERE IT IS THE PRACTICE TO LIGHT A LAMP [AT HOME] ON THE NIGHT OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT,¹⁶ ONE MUST LIGHT [ONE]; WHERE IT IS THE PRACTICE NOT TO LIGHT [A LAMP], ONE MUST NOT LIGHT [ONE]. AND WE LIGHT [LAMPS] IN SYNAGOGUES, SCHOOL-HOUSES, AND DARK ALLEYS, AND FOR THE SAKE OF INVALIDS.

GEMARA. It was taught: Whether they maintained that we should light [lamps] or they maintained that we should not light [them], both intended [it] for the same purpose.¹⁷ R. Joshua said, Raba lectured: Thy people also shall all be righteous, they shall inherit the land for ever: etc.¹⁸ whether they maintained that we should light [lamps] or they maintained that we should not light [them], both intended nought but the same purpose.

Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: We do not recite a blessing over light except at the termination of the Sabbath, since it was then created for the first time.¹⁹ Said a certain old man to him-others state, Rabbah b. Bar Hanah — ‘Well spoken! and thus [too] did R. Johanan say.

‘Ulla was going along, riding an ass, while R. Abba proceeded at his right and Rabbah b. Bar Hanah at his left. Said R. Abba to ‘Ulla: Do you indeed say in R. Johanan's name: We do not recite a blessing over light except at the termination of the Sabbath, since it was then created for the first time? ‘Ulla turned round and looked at Rabbah b. Bar Hanah with displeasure.²⁰ Said he to him, I said it not in reference to that but in reference to this.²¹ For a tanna recited before R. Johanan, R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: When the Day of Atonement falls on the Sabbath, even where they maintain that we must not light [a lamp], we do light [it] in honour of the Sabbath; which R. Johanan followed with the remark,²² But the Sages forbid it. Said he to him, Let it be this.²³ R. Jose applied to this the verse, Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water’;

(1) I.e., it is similar to sacrifices,

(2) Should be forbidden.

(3) That it was for Passover.

(4) Not R. Jose.

(5) V. Men. 103a. If a man declares, ‘I vow a meal-offering of barley’, the first Tanna rules that he must bring a meal-offering of wheat. For a man's liabilities are determined by his first words only, where these contradict his last words. Thus, when he declared, ‘I vow a meal-offering’, this is a binding vow; when he adds ‘of barley’, this is impossible, since only wheat is permitted; therefore his first words are binding. But R. Simeon maintains that he must be judged by his last words too: hence he really meant a meal-offering of barley, thinking that this is permitted; consequently his entire statement is invalid, and he is exempt. Now, in this case, how could it be regarded as near to sacred flesh? He did not consecrate the animal whilst alive, and even if he designated it a

(6) Lit., 'seized'.

(7) That a vow made in an unusual manner is not binding. Hence the same difficulty arises according to R. Jose.

(8) He maintains that even when a vow is not made in a usual manner it must be taken into account, because no man speaks without a purpose. Hence though R. Simeon bases his ruling on R. Jose's view, R. Jose himself does indeed hold that a man is held responsible for his last words too, but only when both his first words and his last can take effect (v. Tem. 25b); but where his last words would completely nullify his statement, as here, they are disregarded; hence the vower is liable to a wheat meal-offering (Maharsha). So here too, if he declared at the roasting, 'This be for a Passover sacrifice', though such a vow is unusual, I would say that he means that a sacrifice shall be bought with its monetary value. Thus it is 'near to sacred flesh' on R. Jose's view. But according to R. Simeon this is a real difficulty, which remains unanswered.

(9) Lit., 'a man of fists'. — On what grounds did they refrain from imposing the ban?

(10) This is one of the great principles of Judaism: a man must by his actions sanctify the Divine Name, i.e., prove his deep conviction of the truth of Judaism even to the extent of suffering for it, and thereby shed lustre and glory upon it.

(11) Ex. VII, 28.

(12) And yet at God's command they entered them.

(13) This quotation shows that he was a great scholar.

(14) I.e., he gave them opportunities for trading.

(15) Eccl. VII, 12. R. Johanan translates: he will enter within the precincts (lit., 'shadow') of wisdom, who brings a scholar within the protection of his wealth.

(16) I.e., before it commences, so that it should burn through the night.

(17) viz., to curb their desire for sexual indulgence. The former argued that this would be the better effected by the presence of a lamp, because darkness is generally required; while the latter held that a lamp would strengthen his desire, as he could see his wife by the light.

(18) Isa. LX, 21.

(19) Lit., 'that was the beginning of its creation' on the evening of the first day.

(20) For misrepresenting R. Johanan's view.

(21) [MS. M.: I did not say this but that.]

(22) Lit., 'and R. Johanan answered after him'.

(23) I admit this to be right.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 54a

but a man of understanding will draw it out.¹ 'Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water' — this applies to 'Ulla;² 'but a man of understanding will draw it out' — this applies to Rabbah b. Bar Hanah.³ And in accordance with whom did they hold their view?⁴ — In accordance with the following which R. Benjamin b. Japheth said in R. Johanan's name: We recite a blessing over light both at the termination of the Sabbath and at the termination of the Day of Atonement, and that is the popular practice. An objection is raised: We do not recite a blessing over light except at the termination of the Sabbath, since it was then created for the first time; and as soon as he sees [it] he immediately recites a blessing. R. Judah said: He recites them⁵ in order over the cup [of wine]. Now R. Johanan said thereon: The halachah is as R. Judah? — There is no difficulty: here the reference is to light that has burnt over the Sabbath;⁶ there it refers to light which issues from tinder and stones.⁷ One [Baraita] taught: We can recite a blessing over light which issues from tinder and stones; [while] another taught: We cannot recite a blessing over it? — There is no difficulty: one refers to the termination of the Sabbath, [and] the other refers to the termination of the Day of Atonement.

Rabbi used to 'scatter' them.⁸ R. Hiyya 'collected' them.⁹ R. Isaac b. Abdimi said: Though Rabbi scattered them, he subsequently repeated them in [their] order over the cup [of wine], so as to quit his children and household [of their obligation].¹⁰ Yet was light created at the termination of the Sabbath? Surely It was taught: Ten things were created on the eve of the Sabbath at twilight. These are they: the well,¹¹ the manna, the rainbow,¹² the writing¹³ and the writing instrument[s], the Tables,¹⁴ the sepulchre of Moses, the cave in which Moses and Elijah stood,¹⁵ the opening of the ass's mouth,¹⁶ and the opening of the earth's mouth to swallow up the wicked.¹⁷ R. Nehemiah said in his father's name: Also fire and the mule.¹⁸ R. Josiah said in his father's name: Also the ram¹⁹ and the shamir.²⁰ R. Judah said: Tongs too. He new thing to the person, since he did not benefit from the light during the day. used to say: Tongs are made with tongs;²¹ then who made the first tongs? Hence in truth it was²² a Heavenly creation. Said they to him, it is possible to make it in a mould and shape it simultaneously.²³ Hence in truth it is of human manufacture!²⁴ — There is no difficulty: one refers to our fire, the other to the fire of the Gehenna.²⁵ Our fire [was created] at the termination of the Sabbath; the fire of the Gehenna, on the eve of the Sabbath.

Yet was the fire of the Gehenna created on the eve of the Sabbath? Surely it was taught: Seven things were created before the world was created, and these are they: The Torah, repentance, the Garden of Eden, Gehenna, the Throne of Glory, the Temple, and the name of the Messiah. The Torah, for it is written, The Lord made me [sc. the Torah] as the beginning of his way.²⁶ Repentance, for it is written, Before the mountains were brought forth, and it is written, Thou turnest man to contrition, and sayest, Repent, ye children of men.²⁷ The Garden of Eden, as it is written, And the Lord planted a garden in Eden from aforetime.²⁸ The Gehenna, for it is written, For Tophet [i.e., Gehenna] is ordered of old.²⁹ The Throne of Glory and the Temple, for it is written, Thou throne of glory, on high from the beginning, Thou place of our sanctuary.³⁰ The name of the Messiah, as it is written, His [sc. the Messiah's] name shall endure for ever, and has existed before the sun!³¹ — I will tell you: only its cavity was created before the world was created, but its fire [was created] on the eve of the Sabbath.

Yet was its fire created on the eve of the Sabbath? Surely it was taught, R. Jose said: The fire which the Holy One, blessed be He, created on the second day of the week shall never be extinguished,³² as it is said, And they shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of the men that have rebelled against me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched?³³ Again, R. Bana'ah son of R. 'Ulla said: Why was 'it was good' not said concerning the second day of the week?³⁴ Because the fire of the Gehenna was created therein. Also R. Eleazar said, Although 'it was good' was not said in connection with it, yet He re-included it in the sixth, as it is said, And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good.³⁵ — Rather, the cavity [was made] before the world was created, and its fire on the second day of the week; while as for our fire, on the eve of the Sabbath He decided³⁶ to create it, but it was not created until the termination of the Sabbath. For it was taught, R. Jose said: Two things He decided to create on the eve of the Sabbath, but they were not created until the termination of the Sabbath, and at the termination of the Sabbath the Holy One, blessed be He, inspired Adam with knowledge of a kind similar to Divine [knowledge],³⁷ and he procured two stones and rubbed them on each other, and fire issued from them; he also took two [heterogenous] animals and crossed them, and from them came forth the mule. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: The mule came into existence in the days of Anah, for it is said, This is the Anah who found the mules³⁸ in the wilderness.³⁹ Those who interpret symbolically⁴⁰ used to say: Anah was unfit,⁴¹ therefore he brought unfit [animals]⁴² into the world, for it is said, These are the sons of Seir the Horite [. . . And Zibeon and Anah],⁴³ while it is written, And these are the children of Zibeon: Aiah and Anah.⁴⁴ Hence it teaches that Zibeon cohabited with his mother and begat Anah by her. But perhaps there were two Anahs? Said Raba: I say a thing which [even] King Shapur could not say, and who is that? Samuel. Others say, R. Papa said: I say a thing which even King Shapur did not say, and who is that? Raba.⁴⁵ The Writ saith, that is Anah [meaning], that is the original Anah.⁴⁶

Our Rabbis taught: Ten things were created on the eve of the Sabbath at twilight, and these are they: The well, manna, the rainbow, writing, the writing instruments, the Tables, the sepulchre of Moses and the cave in which Moses and Elijah stood, the opening of the ass's mouth, and the opening of the earth's mouth to swallow up the wicked. While some say, Also Aaron's staff, its almonds and its blossoms.⁴⁷ Others say, The harmful spirits [demons] too. Others say, Also

(1) Prov. XX, 5.

(2) Who understood from R. Abba the error of Rabbah b. Bar Hanah.

(3) He understood why 'Ulla looked at him with displeasure, though he gave no reason.

(4) viz., 'Ulla and Rabbah, who would not accept R. Abba's ruling.

(5) Various blessings which are to be recited on the termination of Sabbath.

(6) It had burnt during the day. Nevertheless it had observed the Sabbath, as it were, in that it was lit in permitted circumstances, e.g. for an invalid or a woman about to be delivered of child. Or in the case of the Day of Atonement, it had been lit prior to its commencement. There a blessing is recited at the termination of the latter too, because it is as a

(7) I.e., which is made now. A blessing over this is recited only at the termination of the Sabbath, when light was likewise created for the first time, but not at the termination of the Day of Atonement.

(8) Immediately he saw light after the termination of the Sabbath he recited the appropriate blessing. Later, when spices were brought to him, he recited a further blessing over them. Thus the blessings were 'scattered'.

(9) He recited both blessings together over a cup of wine, as is the present practice.

(10) I.e., he recited the blessings a second time on their behalf.

(11) The Well of Miriam which followed the Israelites in the Wilderness; v. Num. XXI, .16-18, which some relate to this.

(12) V. Gen. IX, 13f.

(13) I.e., the shape of letters.

(14) Ex. XXXII, 16.

(15) When God allowed them to see His glory; v. Ex. XXXIII, 22; I Kings XIX, 9.

(16) Num. XXII, 28.

(17) Ibid. XVI, 30. That these last two should happen when the need arose was decreed at the time of the creation.

(18) The mule is regarded as a hybrid, as stated infra. But according to R. Nehemiah, the first was created directly, and was not the result of cross-breeding.

(19) Which Abraham offered as a substitute for Isaac, Gen. XXII, 13; it was ordained at the Creation that the ram should thus be ready to hand.

(20) A legendary worm used for the building of the Temple. It was laid upon the stones and cut through them, and so obviated the need for iron tools, in conformity with Ex. XX, 22; v. I Kings VI, 7 and Git. 68a.

(21) The already manufactured tongs must hold the iron on the anvil as it is beaten out into another pair of tongs.

(22) Lit., 'was this not etc.?'

(23) Without beating it out.

(24) For the whole passage v. Ab. V, 5 and notes a.l. in Sonc. ed. pp. 62-64. — This shows that fire was created already on Sabbath eve.

(25) Hell or purgatory.

(26) Prov. VIII, 22.

(27) Ps. XC, 2f. 'Before' etc. applies to 'repent'.

(28) Gen. II, 8.

(29) Isa. XXX, 33.

(30) Jer. XVII, 12.

(31) Ps. LXXII, 17. — Thus the Gehenna was created before the world. — The general idea of this Baraita is that these things are indispensable pre-requisites for the orderly progress of mankind upon earth. The Torah, the supreme source of instruction; the concept of repentance, in recognition that 'to err is human', and hence, if man falls, the opportunity to rise again; the Garden of Eden and the Gehenna, symbolizing reward and punishment; the Throne of Glory and the Temple, indicating that the goal of Creation is that the Kingdom of God (represented by the Temple) shall be established on earth, as it is in heaven; and finally, the name of the Messiah, i.e., the assurance that God's purpose will ultimately be achieved.

(32) Because it is the fire of the Gehenna.

(33) Isa. LXVI, 24.

(34) In which the world was created.

(35) Gen. I, 31.

(36) Lit., 'it came up in (His) intention'.

(37) Lit., 'of above'.

(38) E.V. 'hot Springs'.

(39) Gen. XXXVI, 24.

(40) דורשי המורות Lit., 'those who interpret (Scripture) as jewels', i.e., as ethical teachings. Levi connects the phrase with הומר a beautiful and graceful gazelle, i.e., those who teach with charming and graceful interpretations.

(41) Pasul, i.e., the issue of an incestuous union.

(42) I.e., the offsprings of heterogeneous breeding, i.e., one sees in this the teaching that evil begets evil.

(43) Gen. XXXVI, 20.

(44) Ibid. 24. In the first verse Anah appears as Zibeon's brother, whereas in the second he is his son.

(45) Shapur I, King of Persia, was a contemporary of Samuel, while Shapur II was a contemporary of Raba. These names are applied here to Samuel and Raba, as indicating their acknowledged authority in learning. v. MGWJ. 1936, p. 217.

(46) Identical with the first mentioned.

(47) V. Num. XVII, 23. This too was ordained at the Creation.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 54b

Adam's raiment.¹ Our Rabbis taught: Seven things are hidden² from men. These are they: the day of death, and the day of comfort,³ the depth [extent] of judgment;⁴ and a man does not know what is in his neighbour's heart; and a man does not know from what he will earn; and when the Davidic dynasty will return;⁵ and when the wicked kingdom⁶ will come to an end. Our Rabbis taught: Three things [God] willed to come to pass,⁷ and if He had not willed them, it would be but right that He should will them. And these are they: Concerning a corpse, that it should become offensive; and concerning a dead person, that he should be forgotten from the heart; and concerning produce, that it should rot;⁸ and some say, concerning coins, that they should enjoy currency.⁹

MISHNAH. WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO DO WORK ON THE NINTH OF AB,¹⁰ ONE MAY DO IT; WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM NOT TO DO WORK, ONE MAY NOT DO IT. AND IN ALL PLACES SCHOLARS CEASE [FROM WORK ON THAT DAY]. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID: A MAN MAY ALWAYS MAKE HIMSELF A SCHOLAR.¹¹

GEMARA. Samuel said: There is no public fast in Babylonia save the Ninth of Ab alone.¹² Shall we say that Samuel holds, [with regard to] the Ninth of Ab, its twilight is forbidden;¹³ but Samuel said: [with regard to] the Ninth of Ab, its twilight is permitted? And should you say, Samuel holds, The twilight of every public fast is permitted, — surely we learned: One must eat and drink while it is yet day. Now what is this to exclude is it not to exclude twilight? No: it is to exclude after nightfall. Shall we say that this supports him? [It was taught:] There is no difference between the Ninth of Ab and the Day of Atonement except that with the latter, its doubt is forbidden, while with the former, its doubt is permitted. What does 'its doubt is permitted' mean? Surely [that refers to] twilight? — No, [but] as R. Shisha the son of R. Idi said,¹⁴ It is in respect of the fixing of New Moon; so here too it is in respect of the fixing of the New Moon.¹⁵

Raba lectured: Pregnant women and suckling women must fast and complete [the fast] on that day [the Ninth of Ab], just as they fast and complete [the fast] on the Day of Atonement; and the twilight thereof is forbidden. And they said likewise in R. Johanan's name. Yet did R. Johanan say thus? Surely R. Johanan said: The Ninth of Ab is not like a public fast. Surely that means in respect of twilight? — No: in respect of work.¹⁶ [You say], 'Work'! we have learned it: WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM TO DO WORK ON THE NINTH OF AB, ONE MAY DO IT; WHERE IT IS THE CUSTOM NOT TO DO WORK, ONE MAY NOT DO IT. And even R. Simeon b. Gamaliel merely says that if he sits and does not work it does not look like conceit, yet he certainly does not forbid it?

— Rather, what does ‘is not like a public fast’ mean? In respect of the Ne’ilah service.¹⁷ But surely R. Johanan said: Would that a man would go on praying all day!¹⁸ — There it is a [statutory] obligation, whereas here It is voluntary.¹⁹ Another alternative [answer] is, ‘What does ‘it is not like a public fast’ mean? In respect of the twenty-four [benedictions].²⁰

R. Papa said: What does ‘it is not like a public fast’ mean? It is not like the first ones but like the last [ones].²¹ An objection is raised: There is no difference between the Ninth of Ab and the Day of Atonement except that with the latter, its doubt is forbidden, while with the former, its doubt is permitted. Now what does ‘its doubt is permitted’ mean? Does it not refer to its twilight? — Said R. Shisha son of R. Idi: No: [It is meant] in respect of the fixing of New Moon.

Hence in all [other] regulations they are alike. This supports R. Eleazar. For R. Eleazar said: A man is forbidden to dip his finger in water on the Ninth of Ab, just as he is forbidden to dip his finger in water on the Day of Atonement. An objection is raised: There is no difference between the Ninth of Ab and a public fast except that on one work²² is forbidden, while on the other work is permitted, where it is customary. This [implies that] in all [other] matters they are both alike; whereas in respect to a public fast it was taught, When they [the Sages] ruled, Bathing is forbidden, they spoke only of the whole body, but not of a man's face, hands, and feet?²³ — Said R. Papa:

(1) This probably refers to Gen. III, 21: And the Lord God made for Adam and for his wife garments of skins, and clothed them (Rashi).

(2) Lit., ‘covered’.

(3) No man knows when he will be relieved of his anxieties.

(4) Sc. Divine Judgment (Rashi).

(5) This was probably said in order to discourage those who tried to calculate the advent of the Messiah on the basis of Scripture; cf. Sanh. 97a.

(6) A covert allusion to Rome (Rashi).

(7) Lit., ‘came up in (God's) intention to be created’.

(8) If kept too long. This is necessary in order to restrain the producer from withholding supplies and thus artificially raising the prices.

(9) For the benefit of the poor who have no other means of obtaining sustenance (v. Marginal Glosses).

(10) Which is a fast-day in commemoration of the destruction of the Temple.

(11) I.e., he may abstain from work even if he is not a scholar.

(12) I.e., if a public fast is proclaimed, it does not commence on the previous evening, nor is work forbidden, even where it is the practice not to work on the Ninth of Ab. (The Day of Atonement, of course, stands in a different category entirely.) In the whole of the subsequent discussion ‘public fast’ does not mean one of the statutory fasts, but a fast proclaimed on account of drought or disaster etc.

(13) I.e., it is forbidden to eat at twilight on the eve of the fast, since he regards the twilight as possessing the full rigours of a fast-day. Twilight is a period of doubt, and it is not certain whether it is day or night.

(14) v. infra.

(15) E.g., if a man is in the wilderness and does not know what day was fixed as New Moon, he must observe two Days of Atonement (his doubt could only be whether the previous month had consisted of twenty-nine days or thirty days), but only one day as the Ninth of Ab.

(16) On the fast-day itself. On a specially proclaimed public fast work is forbidden, whereas on the Ninth of Ab it is permitted.

(17) On specially proclaimed public fast-days an extra service was added at the end of the day’, called ne’ilah, which means ‘closing’. R. Johanan states that there is no ne’ilah on the Ninth of Ab.

(18) If a man does not remember whether he has recited his statutory prayers, R. Johanan rules that he should recite them now, though there is an opposing view that a man must not pray when in this doubt. Now, since R. Johanan holds that a man must pray when in doubt, why should there not be a ne’ilah service on the Ninth of Ab, seeing that it is like a specially proclaimed public fast in many respects?

(19) On a public fast-day ne’ilah is obligatory; on the Ninth of Ab a man may recite it if he desires.

(20) On public fast-days six benedictions were added to the usual eighteen which constituted the 'Prayer' par excellence (Ta'an. 15a). R. Johanan teaches that these are not recited on the Ninth of Ab.

(21) In times of drought three public fasts were proclaimed, which began at daybreak. But if the drought nevertheless continued, another three were proclaimed, and these began the previous evening (v. Ta'an. Mishnah 10a and 12b). R. Johanan thus ruled that the Ninth of Ab begins on the previous evening, and eating is forbidden from twilight.

(22) Lit., 'the doing of work'.

(23) Which shows that on the Ninth of Ab washing of face and hands and feet is permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 55a

The Tanna teaches a series of leniencies.¹ AND IN ALL PLACES SCHOLARS etc. Shall we say that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel holds that we do not fear [the appearance of] conceit, while the Rabbis hold that we do fear [the appearance of] conceit? But we know them [to hold] the reverse! For we learned: A bridegroom, if he wishes to recite the reading of the shema'² on the first night, he may recite it. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: Not everyone who wishes to assume³ the name [reputation] may assume it.⁴ — Said R. Johanan: The discussion must be reversed. R. Shisha the son of R. Idi said, Do not reverse it. The Rabbis are not self-contradictory: here, since everybody works, while he [alone] does not work, it looks like conceit; but there, since everybody recites [the shema'] and he too recites [it], it does not look like conceit. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel too is not self-contradictory: There only, since devotion is required, while we are witnesses that he cannot devote his mind,⁵ it looks like conceit. But here it does not look like conceit, [for] people will say, 'It is work that he lacks: go out and see how many unemployed there are in the market place!'

MISHNAH. BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN⁶ IN JUDEA THEY USED TO DO WORK ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER UNTIL MIDDAY, WHILE IN GALILEE THEY DID NOT WORK AT ALL. [AS FOR] THE NIGHT,⁷ — BETH SHAMMAI FORBID [WORK], WHILE BETH HILLEL PERMIT IT UNTIL DAYBREAK.

of Ab is not more lenient than public fasts save that work is permitted on the former. But he does not refer to the reverse cases where the Ninth of Ab is more stringent; hence you cannot deduce that they are alike in all other matters. GEMARA. At first he [the Tanna] teaches custom,⁸ and then he teaches a prohibition? — Said R. Johanan, There is no difficulty: one is according to R. Meir; the other, according to R. Judah. For it was taught, R. Judah said: In Judea they used to do work on the eve of Passover, until midday, while in Galilee they did not work at all. Said R. Meir to him: What proof is Judea and Galilee for the present [discussion]?⁹ But where they are accustomed to do work, one may do it, [while] where they are accustomed not to do [work], one may not do it. Now, since R. Meir states [that it is merely a matter of] custom, it follows that R. Judah states [that it is] a prohibition.¹⁰

Yet does R. Judah hold that work on the fourteenth is permitted?¹¹ Surely it was taught, R. Judah said: He who weeds on the thirteenth and [an ear of corn] is uprooted in his hand, must replant it in swampy [damp] soil, but must not replant it in a dry place.¹² Thus, only on the thirteenth, but not on the fourteenth,¹³ Now consider: we know that R. Judah maintains: Any grafting which does not take root within three days will never take root. Then if you think that work may be done on the fourteenth, why [state] the thirteenth; surely there is the fourteenth, the fifteenth and part of the sixteenth?¹⁴ — Said Raba: We learned [this] of Galilee. But there is the night?¹⁵ — Said R. Shesheth: This is according to Beth Shammai.¹⁶ R. Ashi said: In truth it is as Beth Hillel, [yet the night of the fourteenth is not stated] because it is not the practice of people to weed at night — Rabina said: After all it refers to Judea, but in respect to taking root we do say once that part of the day is as the whole of it, but we do not say twice that part of the day is as the whole of it.¹⁷

MISHNAH. R. MEIR SAID: ANY WORK WHICH HE BEGAN BEFORE THE FOURTEENTH,

HE MAY FINISH IT ON THE FOURTEENTH; BUT HE MAY NOT BEGIN IT AT THE OUTSET ON THE FOURTEENTH, EVEN IF HE CAN FINISH IT [ON THE SAME DAY]. BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN: THREE CRAFTSMEN MAY WORK ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER UNTIL MIDDAY, AND THESE ARE THEY: TAILORS, HAIRDRESSERS, AND WASHERMEN. R. JOSE B. R. JUDAH SAID: SHOEMAKERS TOO.¹⁸

GEMARA. The scholars asked: Did we learn [that it may be finished] when required for the Festival, but when not required for the Festival he may not even finish it; or perhaps we learned [that he must not begin work] when it is not required for the Festival, but when it is required we may indeed begin it; or perhaps, whether it is needed for the Festival or it is not needed, he may finish but not start? — Come and hear: But he may not begin at the outset on the fourteenth even a small girdle, [or] even a small hair-net — What does ‘even’ imply? Surely, even these which are required for the Festival, he may only finish, but not begin; whence it follows that where it is not required [for the Festival], we may not even finish! — No: after all, even when it is not required we may indeed finish [the work], and yet what does ‘even’ connote? Even these too, which are small. For you might argue, their beginning, that is the end of their work;¹⁹ then we should even begin them at the very outset; therefore he informs us [that it is not so]. Come and hear: R. Meir said: Any work which is required for the Festival,

(1) The whole series of ‘there is no difference’ etc. is taught by the same Tanna, and in each he merely wishes to intimate a point of leniency. Thus he first teaches that the Ninth of Ab is not more lenient than the Day of Atonement save that the doubt of the former is permitted. Then he states that the Ninth

(2) ‘Hear’ — the passage commencing ‘Hear O Israel’ etc. (Deut. VI, 4f). This is recited every morning and evening, but a bridegroom is exempt on the evening of his marriage.

(3) Lit., ‘take’.

(4) Unless he has a reputation for great piety, as otherwise it looks like an unwarrantable assumption of piety (Rashi in Ber. 17b).

(5) His feelings are obviously such that unless he is extremely pious he cannot recite the shema’ with proper devotion.

(6) This is a continuation of the last Mishnah.

(7) Following the thirteenth day of Nisan.

(8) The preceding Mishnah regards abstention from work a mere custom and in this Mishnah it is treated as a prohibition!

(9) I.e., why cite Judea and Galilee? the matter is everywhere determined by local custom.

(10) Viz., that in Judea it is held to be permitted, while in Galilee it is held to be definitely prohibited, and not merely dependent on custom.

(11) According to the views held in Judea.

(12) It takes root in damp soil more quickly. Now the ‘omer (v. Glos. and Lev. XXIII, 10-14) is effective in permitting everything which has taken root before it is waved; hence it is desirable that this should take root before the omer is waved on the sixteenth of the month.

(13) For it is obvious that the law is so stated as to give the latest possible time.

(14) And it is a principle that part of the day counts as the whole day; thus there is time for it to take root even if it is replanted on the fourteenth.

(15) Following the thirteenth, when it is permissible even in Galilee.

(16) Who in our Mishnah forbid the night.

(17) For if he weeds some time on the fourteenth we would have to count the rest of the day as a complete day, and also the beginning of the sixteenth until the waving of the ‘omer as another complete day.

(18) These may work everywhere.

(19) I.e., they require so little time.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 55b

he may finish it on the fourteenth.¹ When is that? When he began it before the fourteenth; but if he did not begin it before the fourteenth, he must not begin it on the fourteenth, even a small girdle, even a small hair-net. [Thus,] only when required for the Festival, but not when it is not required! — No: the same law holds good that even when it is not required for the Festival we may also finish it, and he informs us this: that even when it is required for the Festival, we may only finish, but not begin.

Come and hear: R. Meir said: Any work which is required for the Festival, he may finish it on the fourteenth; but that which is not required for the Festival is forbidden; and one may work on the eve of Passover until midday where it is customary [to work]. [Thus,] only where it is the custom, but if it is not the custom, it is not [permitted at all]. Hence this proves that when required for the Festival it is [permitted], but when it is not required for the Festival it is not [permitted]. This proves it.

BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN, THREE CRAFTSMEN [etc.]. A Tanna taught: Tailors, because a layman² may sew in the usual way on the intermediate Days;³ hairdressers and washermen, because he who comes from overseas and he who comes out of prison may cut their hair and wash [their garments] on the Intermediate Days.⁴ R. Jose son of R. Judah said: Shoemakers too, because the Festival pilgrims⁵ repaired their shoes on the Intermediate Days. Wherein do they differ? — One Master holds, We learn the beginning of the work from the end of the work;⁶ while the other Master holds, We do not learn the beginning of the work from the end of the work. MISHNAH. ONE MAY SET UP CHICKEN-HOUSES FOR FOWLS ON THE FOURTEENTH,⁷ AND IF A [BROODING] FOWL RAN AWAY,⁸ ONE MAY SET HER BACK IN HER PLACE; AND IF SHE DIED, ONE MAY SET ANOTHER IN HER PLACE. ONE MAY SWEEP AWAY FROM UNDER AN ANIMAL'S FEET ON THE FOURTEENTH,⁹ BUT ON THE FESTIVAL¹⁰ ONE MAY REMOVE [IT] ON A SIDE [ONLY].¹¹ ONE MAY TAKE UTENSILS [TO] AND BRING [THEM BACK] FROM AN ARTISAN'S HOUSE, EVEN IF THEY ARE NOT REQUIRED FOR THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. Seeing that you may [even] set [the fowls for brooding], is there a question about putting back?¹² — Said Abaye: The second clause refers to the Intermediate Days of the Festival.¹³ R. Huna said: They learnt this¹⁴ only [when it is] within three [days] of her rebellion,¹⁵ so that her heat¹⁶ has not yet left her, and after three days of her brooding, so that the eggs are quite spoiled.¹⁷ But if it is after three days since her rebellion, so that her heat has left her, or within three days of her brooding, so that the eggs are still not completely spoiled,¹⁸ we must not put [her] back.¹⁹ R. Ammi said: We may even put her back within [the first] three days of her brooding.²⁰ Wherein do they differ? — One Master holds, They [the Sages] cared about a substantial loss, but they did not care about a slight loss; while the other Master holds: They cared about a slight loss too.

ONE MAY SWEEP AWAY FROM UNDER [etc.]. Our Rabbis taught: The manure which is in the court-yard may be moved aside; that which is in the stable and in the court-yard may be taken out to the dunghill. This is self-contradictory: you say, The manure which is in the court-yard may [only] be moved aside; then he [the Tanna] teaches, that which is in the stable and in the court-yard may [even] be taken out to the dunghill? — Said Abaye, There is no difficulty: one refers to the fourteenth [of Nisan]; the other, to the Intermediate Days. Raba said: Both refer to the Intermediate Days, and this is what he says: If the courtyard became like a stable,²¹ it may be taken out to the dunghill.

ONE MAY TAKE UTENSILS [TO] AND BRING [THEM BACK] FROM AN ARTISAN'S HOUSE. R. Papa said: Raba examined us. We learned: ONE MAY TAKE [UTENSILS TO] AND BRING UTENSILS FROM AN ARTISAN'S HOUSE, EVEN IF THEY ARE NOT REQUIRED FOR THE FESTIVAL. But the following contradicts it: One may not bring utensils from an artisan's house, but if he fears that they may be stolen, he may remove them into another court-yard?²² And we answered, There is no difficulty: Here it means on the fourteenth; there, on the Intermediate Days. Alternatively, both refer to the Intermediate Days, yet there is no difficulty: here it is where he trusts him;²³ there, where he does not trust him. And thus it was ‘taught: One may bring vessels from the artisan's house, e.g., a pitcher from a potter's house, and a [glass] goblet from a glass-maker's house; but [one may] not bring wool from a dyer's house nor vessels from an artisan's house.²⁴ Yet if he [the artisan] has nothing to eat, he must pay him his wages and leave it [the utensil] with him; but if he does not trust him, he places them in a nearby house; and if he is afraid that they may be stolen, he may bring them secretly home.²⁵ You have reconciled [the contradictions on] bringing; but [the contradictory statements on] taking [the utensils to the artisan's house] present a difficulty, for he teaches, ‘One must not bring [from the artisan's house]’, hence how much more that we must not take [them to his house]!²⁶ — Rather, it is clear [that it must be reconciled] as we answered it at first.²⁷

MISHNAH. SIX THINGS THE INHABITANTS OF JERICHO DID: THREE THEY [THE SAGES] FORBADE THEM,²⁸ AND THREE [THEY] DID NOT FORBID THEM. AND IT IS THESE WHICH THEY DID NOT FORBID THEM: THEY GRAFTED PALM TREES ALL DAY,²⁹ THEY ‘WRAPPED UP’ THE SHEMA,³⁰ AND THEY HARVESTED AND STACKED [THEIR PRODUCE] BEFORE [THE BRINGING OF] THE ‘OMER.³¹ AND IT IS THESE WHICH THEY FORBADE THEM: THEY PERMITTED [FOR USE] THE BRANCHES — [OF CAROB OR SYCAMORE TREES] BELONGING TO HEKDESH,³²

-
- (1) Even where it is customary not to do any work.
 - (2) I.e., a man who is not a craftsman in this particular trade.
 - (3) Lit., ‘the non-holy (portion) of the Festival’; v. p. 16, n. 4. Only professional work is forbidden, but not the work a non-professional does at home.
 - (4) Hence on the fourteenth, which is certainly lighter than the Intermediate Days, these may be done in general, and even by professionals.
 - (5) v. Deut. XVI, 16.
 - (6) Making shoes is the beginning; repairing them is the end. Just as repairing is permitted, so is making them permitted.
 - (7) I.e., you may put in eggs for brooding (Jast.). Rashi reads ‘and’ instead of ‘FOR’, and renders: One may set up dove-cots and fowls (to brood).
 - (8) From its eggs.
 - (9) Sc. the dung, and throw it away.
 - (10) Which of course is stricter.
 - (11) But not sweep it altogether away.
 - (12) It is obvious!
 - (13) A fowl may not be set to brood then, but she may be put back.
 - (14) That she may be put back even on the Intermediate Days of the Festival.
 - (15) I.e., of her running away.
 - (16) The desire to hatch.
 - (17) They can no longer be eaten, being too addled.
 - (18) They can still be eaten.
 - (19) In the Intermediate Days.
 - (20) Since the eggs have been slightly spoiled, and not all people would eat them. (15) After three days there is a substantial loss, as the eggs are quite unfit; but within three days the loss is only slight, since some people would eat them.
 - (21) It contains so much manure that it cannot be moved aside.
 - (22) Near the artisan's house, where it is better guarded, but he may not take them home if it is a long distance.
 - (23) Either that the artisan will not dispose of them, or that he will not claim payment a second time.
 - (24) The latter two when they are not needed for the Festival.
 - (25) Not publicly, as that would give a too workday appearance to these days.
 - (26) While the question of trusting does not arise here.
 - (27) viz., that our Mishnah refers to the fourteenth, while the Baraita refers to the Intermediate Days.
 - (28) Lit., ‘stayed their hand’.

(29) Of the fourteenth.

(30) I.e., they recited it without the necessary pauses, v. Gemara 56a.

(31) V. Glos. and Lev. XXIII, 10-14. Rashi deletes HARVESTED, as that was quite permissible as far as Jericho was concerned, since no 'omer could be brought from Jericho which was situated in a valley. V. Men. 71a, 8a.

(32) I. e., the branches which grew after the trees had been vowed to the Sanctuary.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 56a

AND THEY ATE THE FALLEN FRUIT FROM BENEATH [THE TREE] ON THE SABBATH, AND THEY GAVE PE'AH¹ FROM VEGETABLES; AND THE SAGES FORBADE THEM.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: Six things King Hezekiah did; in three they [the Sages] agreed with him, and in three they did not agree with him — He dragged his father's bones [corpse] on a rope bier,² and they agreed with him; he crushed the brazen serpent,³ and they agreed with him; [and] he hid the book of remedies,⁴ and they agreed with him. And in three they did not agree with him: He cut [the gold off] the doors of the Temple⁵ and sent them to the King of Assyria,⁶ and they did not agree with him; and he closed up the waters of Upper Gihon,⁷ and they did not agree with him;⁸ and he intercalated [the month of] Nisan in Nisan,⁹ and they did not agree with him.

THEY GRAFTED PALM TREES ALL DAY. How did they do it? — Said Rab Judah: They brought a fresh myrtle, the juice of bay-fruit and barley flour which had been kept¹⁰ in a vessel less than forty days,¹¹ and boiled them together and injected [the concoction] into the heart of the palm tree; and every [tree] which stands within four cubits of this one, if that is not treated likewise immediately withers. R. Aha the son of Raba said: A male branch was grafted on to a female [palm tree].¹²

THEY 'WRAPPED UP' THE SHEMA'. What did they do? — Rab Judah said, They recited, Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God, the Lord is One¹³ and did not make a pause.¹⁴ Raba said: They did make a pause, but [the meaning is] that they said [And these words, which I command thee] this day shall be upon thy heart,¹⁵ which implies, this day [shall they be] upon thy heart, but to-morrow [they shall] not [be] upon thy heart.

Our Rabbis taught: How did they 'wrap up' the shema'? They recited 'Hear O Israel the Lord our God the Lord is One' and they did not make a pause: this is R. Meir's view. R. Judah said: They did make a pause, but they did not recite, 'Blessed be the name of His glorious Kingdom for ever and ever.'¹⁶ And what is the reason that we do recite it? — Even as R. Simeon b. Lakish expounded. For R. Simeon b. Lakish said: And Jacob called unto his sons, and said: Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you [that which shall befall you in the end of days].¹⁷ Jacob wished to reveal to his sons the 'end of the days',¹⁸ whereupon the Shechinah departed from him. Said he, 'Perhaps, Heaven forbend! there is one unfit among my children,¹⁹ like Abraham, from whom there issued Ishmael, or like my father Isaac, from whom there issued Esau.' [But] his sons answered him, 'Hear O Israel, the Lord our God the Lord is One:²⁰ just as there is only One in thy heart, so is there in our heart only One.' In that moment our father Jacob opened [his mouth] and exclaimed, 'Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever.' Said the Rabbis, How shall we act? Shall we recite it, — but our Teacher Moses did not say it. Shall we not say it — but Jacob said it! [Hence] they enacted that it should be recited quietly.

R. Isaac said, The School of R. Ammi said: This is to be compared to a king's daughter who smelled a spicy pudding.²¹ If she reveals [her desire], she suffers disgrace;²² if she does not reveal it, she suffers pain.²³ So her servants began bringing it to her in secret. R. Abbahu said: They [the Sages] enacted that this should be recited aloud, on account of the resentment of heretics.²⁴ But in Nehardea, where there are no heretics so far, they recite it quietly.

Our Rabbis taught: Six things the inhabitants of Jericho did, three with the consent of the Sages, and three without the consent of the Sages. And these were with the consent of the Sages: They grafted palm trees all day [of the fourteenth], they ‘wrapped up’ the shema’, and they harvested before the ‘omer.²⁵ And these were without the consent of the Sages: They stacked [the corn] before the ‘omer,²⁶ and they made breaches in their gardens and orchards to permit the poor to eat the fallen fruit in famine years on Sabbaths and Festivals, and they permitted [for use] the branches of carob and sycamore trees belonging to hekdesch: this is R. Meir's view. Said R. Judah to him, If they did [these things] with the consent of the Sages, then all people could do so! But they did both without the consent of the Sages, [save that] three they forbade them [to do], and three they did not forbid them [to do]. And it is these which they did not forbid them: They grafted palm trees the whole day, and they ‘wrapped up’ the shema’, and they stacked [the corn] before the ‘omer. And it is these which they forbade them to do: They permitted [for use] branches of hekdesch of carob and sycamore trees, and they made breaches in their garden and orchards to permit the poor to eat the fallen fruit in famine years on Sabbaths and Festivals; they gave pe'ah from vegetables; and the Sages forbade them.

Yet does R. Judah hold that the reaping was not with the consent of the Sages? Surely we learned: The inhabitants of Jericho reaped before the ‘omer with the consent of the Sages and stacked before the ‘omer without the consent of the Sages, but the Sages did not forbid them to do it.

-
- (1) V. Glos. Pe'ah is exempt from tithes, and the poor, by eating the vegetables without tithing them in the belief that they were Pe'ah, ate tebel (v. Glos.).
- (2) Instead of showing him the honour due to a king. He did this in order to effect atonement for him, his father (Ahaz) having been very wicked.
- (3) Set up by Moses, Num. XXI, 8f; v. II Kings XVIII, 4.
- (4) Because they cured so quickly that illness failed to promote a spirit of contrition and humility. V. Ber. 10b.
- (5) Or, he cut down the doors etc.
- (6) Sennacherib, as a bribe to leave him in peace; v. II Kings XVIII, 16.
- (7) v. II Chron. XXXII, 1-4.
- (8) In both cases he should have trusted in God.
- (9) Ibid. XXX, 1-3. The Talmud holds that he effected this by declaring Nisan an intercalated month, calling it the second Adar, after it (Nisan) had already commenced. (Since the Jewish year which is lunar is some eleven days shorter than the solar year, it is necessary periodically to lengthen it by the intercalation of a second Adar, the last month of the civil year. In ancient times this was done not by mathematical calculation, as nowadays, but according to the exigencies of the moment, but this had to be done before Nisan actually commenced, v. Sanh. 12b and Ber. 10a).
- (10) Lit., ‘cast’.
- (11) Lit., ‘over which forty days had not passed’.
- (12) Jast. translates: they put the male flower (scatter the pollen) over the female tree. — But he does not regard the operation described by Rab Judah as grafting.
- (13) Deut. VI, 4.
- (14) Before proceeding with the next verse, And thou shalt love etc.: ‘One’ (Heb. אֱלֹהִים) must be prolonged in utterance, which creates a pause, but they did not do thus (Rashi). Tosaf.: they did not pause between ‘Hear O Israel’ and ‘the Lord’ etc. thus read together it is a prayer that God may hearken to Israel, which of course gives a completely wrong sense in this instance.
- (15) Deut. VI, 6. Reading it without a pause at ‘day’ as is indicated in the E.V.
- (16) Before ‘and thou shalt love’ etc.
- (17) Gen. XLIX, 1.
- (18) The final universal redemption, v. Dan. XII, 13.
- (19) Lit., ‘in my bed’.
- (20) ‘Israel’ referring to their father.
- (21) And conceived a strong desire for it.

(22) Through her lack of self-control.

(23) Through her restraint.

(24) Heb. min, sectarian. They might think that the Jews were cursing them.

(25) V. supra p. 277, n. 6.

(26) As it is quite unnecessary, for the produce will not suffer loss if it is left unstacked until after the 'omer, and while engaged in stacking it, they might come to eat it.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 56b

Whom do you know to maintain [that] they forbade and did not forbid?¹ R. Judah. Yet he teaches, They reaped with the consent of the Sages? — Then according to your reasoning, [surely] these are four! Rather, delete reaping from this.

‘And they permitted the branches of carob and sycamore trees of hekdesch.’ They said: Our fathers sanctified nought but tree trunks, hence we will permit [for use] the branches of hekdesch of carob and sycamore trees. Now we discuss the growth which came after that;² so that while they held as he who rules, There is no trespass-offering [due] when [one benefits from] what grows, the Rabbis held, Granted that there is no trespass-offering [due], there is nevertheless a prohibition.

‘And they made breaches [etc.]’ ‘Ulla said in the name of R. Simeon b. Lakish: The controversy is in respect of [the dates of] the upper branches, for the Rabbis held, We forbid them preventively, lest he go up and cut them off, while the inhabitants of Jericho held, We do not forbid them preventively, lest he go up and cut them off. But as for the dates which are among the lower branches, all agree that it is permitted.³ Said Rabbah to him, But they are mukzeh?⁴ And should you say, [that is] because they [the dates] were fit for [his] ravens,⁵ [I would rejoin], — seeing that that which is ready⁶ for man is not ready for dogs, for we learned, R. Judah said, If it was not nebelah from the eve of the Sabbath, it is forbidden, because it is not of that which is ready,⁷ then shall what is ready for birds be [regarded as] ready for human beings?⁸ — Yes, he replied. That which is ready for human beings is not ready for dogs, for whatever is fit for a man, he does not put [it] out of his mind;⁹ [but] that which is ready for birds is [also] ready for human beings,¹⁰ [for] his mind is [set] upon it. When Rabin came,¹¹ he said in the name of R. Simeon b. Lakish: The controversy is in respect of [the fallen dates] among the lower branches, the Rabbis holding, That which is ready for birds is not ready for man, while the men of Jericho hold, That which is ready for birds is ready for man. But [the fallen dates] on the place are permitted now that they have fallen to earth, for since none grow there, there was never any fear that he might go up and cut off the growing dates. — Though this explanation removes several difficulties, Tosaf. observes that it raises a practical difficulty: how is one to distinguish between those which fell down before the Festival and those which fell on the Festival itself, and those which had fallen on the upper branches in the first place and those which had first fallen on the lower branches? upper branches, all agree that they are forbidden; we forbid [them] preventively, lest he ascend and cut off [some dates].

AND THEY GAVE PE'AH FROM VEGETABLES. Yet did not the inhabitants agree with what we learned: They stated a general principle in respect to pe'ah: whatever is an eatable, and is guarded, and its growth is from the earth, and is [all] gathered simultaneously,¹² and is collected for storage,¹³ is subject to pe'ah. ‘Whatever is an eatable’ excludes the aftergrowth of woad¹⁴ and madder;¹⁵ ‘and is guarded’ excludes hefker;¹⁶ ‘and its growth is from the earth’ excludes mushrooms and truffles;¹⁷ ‘and is [all] gathered simultaneously’ excludes the fig tree;¹⁸ ‘and is collected for storage excludes vegetables!’¹⁹ — Said Rab Judah in Rab's name: The reference is to turnip tops, and they differ [in respect to what] one collects for storing by means of something else:²⁰ one Master holds, If he takes it in for storage by means of something else it is designated storage; while the other

Master holds, What he takes in for storage by means of something else is not designated storage.²¹

Our Rabbis taught: At first they used to leave Pe'ah for turnips and cabbages. R. Jose said: Also for porret. While another [Baraita] taught: They used to give pe'ah for turnips and porret; R. Simeon said: For cabbage too.

(1) I.e., who makes this distinction, but not the distinction between with and without their consent.

(2) Sc. after the trees had been dedicated.

(3) Mekabedoth are the upper branches on which dates grow; kipin are the lower branches where dates do not grow. Rashi: they differ in respect of the dates which fell on the Festival and were caught on these upper branches. Since they are high up, he must climb up to get them, and the Rabbis held that we fear that this will lead him to pull off some dates still on the branches, which is forbidden; while the inhabitants of Jericho held that there was no need to fear this. But all agree that he may take those which had been caught by the lower branches, for no dates grow there in any case, that we should fear that he will pull some off. Tosaf.: the reference is to dates which fell off before the Festival commenced, being caught either by the upper or the lower branches, and then they fell to the ground on the Festival. The Rabbis held that those which had been caught on the upper branches are forbidden, for since they were there at twilight, when the Festival was about to commence, and also there are dates growing on these upper branches, we fear that he might ascend and pluck some; while the inhabitants of Jericho did not thus forbid them, preventively, since they were already detached on the eve of the Festival. But all agree that those which had fallen on the lower branches in the first

(4) v. Glos. Rashi: on the eve of the Sabbath or Festival at twilight they were mukzeh on account of the prohibition of cutting them off then from the tree, and consequently they remain so for the whole day, even after they fall. (Mukzeh is always determined by the status of an object at twilight of the Sabbath or Festival.) Tosaf.: they were mukzeh at twilight because one must not make use of a tree on the Sabbath or Festival, e.g., by climbing it, taking articles which had been suspended upon it, etc.

(5) If he has ravens at home, they could have eaten these dates on the Sabbath even while they were still on the tree; since they are fit for his birds, they are also regarded as fit for himself too.

(6) Mukan, a technical term denoting the opposite of mukzeh.

(7) If an animal dies on the Sabbath, the first Tanna holds that the carcass may be cut up for dogs. But R. Judah rules as stated. For while alive it could have been ritually killed and then permitted for human consumption; hence it was ready not for dogs but for human beings, and thus R. Judah holds that its readiness for human beings does not make it ready for dogs too.

(8) Surely not!

(9) To think of giving it to dogs.

(10) Even if it is fit for dogs.

(11) From Palestine to Babylonia.

(12) I.e., the whole of the crop ripens about the same time.

(13) Lit., 'he brings it in to keep'. This applies to cereals in general, which are stored in granaries for long periods.

(14) GR. , isatis tinctora, a plant producing a deep blue dye.

(15) Both are used as dyes.

(16) V. Glos.

(17) Though these grow in the earth, they were held to draw their sustenance mainly from the air.

(18) Whose fruits are likewise excluded.

(19) Which must be eaten fresh.

(20) R. Han.: i.e., by means of pickling.

(21) It must be capable of storing in its natural state.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 57a

Shall we say that there are three Tannaim [in dispute]? — No: there are [only] two Tannaim [in dispute], the first Tanna opposed to¹ R. Simeon being R. Jose, while the first Tanna opposed to R. Jose is R. Simeon. And what does 'too' mean? It refers to the first mentioned.² Our Rabbis taught: The son of Bohayon³ gave pe'ah from vegetables, and his father came and found the poor laden with vegetables and standing at the entrance to the kitchen garden. Said he to them, 'My sons, cast it from you, and I will give you twice as much of tithed [produce]; not because I begrudge it to you, but because the Sages said, You must not give pe'ah from vegetables.' Why had he to say to them, 'Not because I begrudge it to you?' So that they should not say, 'He is merely putting us off.'

Our Rabbis taught: At first they used to place the skins of sacrifices in the chamber of Beth Ha-Parwah.⁴ In the evening they used to divide them among the men of the paternal division,⁵ but men of violence⁶ used to seize [more than their due share] by force. So they enacted that they should divide them every Sabbath eve, so that all the 'wards' came and received their portions together.⁷ Yet the chief priests still seized [them] by force; thereupon the owners⁸ arose and consecrated them to Heaven.⁹ It was related: It did not take long before they covered the whole Temple with gold plaques a cubit square of the thickness of a gold denar. And on festivals they used to lay them together¹⁰ and place them on a high eminence on the Temple Mount, so that the Festival pilgrims might see that their workmanship was beautiful,¹¹ and that there was no imperfection in them.

It was taught, Abba Saul said: There were sycamore tree-trunks in Jericho, and the men of violence seized them by force, [whereupon] the owners arose and consecrated them to Heaven. And it was of these and of such as these that Abba Saul b. Bothnith said in the name of Abba Joseph b. Hanin: 'Woe is me because of the house of Boethus; woe is me because of their staves!¹² Woe is me because of the house of Hanin, woe is me because of their whisperings!¹³ Woe is me because of the house of Kathros,¹⁴ woe is me because of their pens!¹⁵ Woe is me because of the house of Ishmael the son of Phabi,¹⁶ woe is me because of their fists! For they are High Priests¹⁷ and their sons are [Temple] treasurers and their sons-in-law are trustees and their servants beat the people with staves.'¹⁸

Our Rabbis taught: Four cries did the Temple Court cry out. The first: 'Depart hence, ye children of Eli,' for they defiled the Temple of the Lord. And another cry: 'Depart hence, Issachar of Kefar Barkai, who honours himself while desecrating the sacred sacrifices of Heaven'; for he used to wrap his hands with silks and perform the [sacrificial] service.¹⁹ The Temple Court also cried out: 'Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and let Ishmael the son of Phabi, Phineas's disciple,²⁰ enter and serve in the [office of the] High Priesthood.' The Temple Court also cried out: 'Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and let Johanan the son of Narbai,²¹ the disciple of Pinkai,²² enter and fill his stomach with the Divine sacrifices. It was said of Johanan b. Narbai that he ate three hundred calves and drank three hundred barrels of wine and ate forty se'ah of young birds as a desert for his meal.²³ It was said: As long as Johanan the son of Narbai lived,²⁴ nothar²⁵ was never found in the Temple.

What was the fate of²⁶ Issachar of Kefar Barkai? It was related: The king and queen²⁷ were sitting: the king said, 'Goat's [flesh] is better,' while the queen said, 'Lamb is better'. Said they, Who shall decide?²⁸ The High Priest, who offers up sacrifices every day. So he came,

(1) Lit., 'of'.

(2) Thus: the first Tanna states turnips and cabbages, whereupon R. Jose says, for porret too, just as for turnips, but not for cabbages; similarly R. Simeon in the second Baraitha.

(3) The name of a certain man.

(4) Name of a Persian builder and Magian, after whom a compartment in the Temple was supposed to have been named (Jast.).

(5) The priests were divided into 'wards', (משמר), each 'ward' officiating a week at a time in the Temple; these were further subdivided into paternal divisions (beth ab), of which each officiated one day in the week.

(6) Among the priests (Rashi). Lit., 'men of (strong) arms'.

(7) Cur. edd.; Rashi's reading seems to be: so that the whole ward (sing.) i.e., all the paternal divisions etc. This is more correct, and if our reading is retained it must also be understood in the same sense. — The larger number present would act as a check.

- (8) I.e., all the priests of each ward.
- (9) Sc. for the Temple.
- (10) The word really means 'fold them', but as gold plates of that thickness could hardly be folded, it must be understood as translated.
- (11) For the sacrifices, with the skins of which these were brought, were mostly offered by the Festival pilgrims.
- (12) With which they beat the people.
- (13) Their secret conclaves to devise oppressive measures.
- (14) Supposed to be identical with GR. , Josephus, Antiquities XX, 1, 3.
- (15) With which they wrote their evil decrees.
- (16) He himself was religious and held in high repute, as is seen below (v. also Par. III, 5; Sot. IX, 5; Yoma 35b), but he did not restrain his sons from lawlessness; in the passage of Josephus too, already cited, reference is only made to his children.
- (17) The High Priesthood by this time was a source of great political power. Once a man became a High Priest he retained much of his power, and perhaps his title too, even if he was deposed; hence there were often several High Priests at the same time; v. Halevi, Doroth, I, 3, p. 445, n. 30; pp. 633f; 718.
- (18) For this passage cf. Josephus, Antiquities XX, 8,8.
- (19) This disqualifies the sacrifice.
- (20) In his zeal for God.
- (21) [Ananias son of Nebedus. v. Josephus, Antiquities XX, 5, 2.]
- (22) Perhaps this is a nickname formed by a play on words, פִּינְקָא (here פִּינְקָא) being a meat dish; i.e., the gourmand.
- (23) The marginal note softens this statement by observing that this was eaten by his whole household, which was very numerous
- (24) Lit., '(during) all the days of' etc.
- (25) V. Glos.
- (26) Lit., 'what happened to?'
- (27) Hasmonean monarchs [In Ker. 28b: King Yannai and the Queen. The name Jannai appears in the Talmud as a general name for kings of the Hasmonean dynasty.]
- (28) Lit., '(from) whom is it proved?'

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 57b

[and] indicated with his hand,¹ 'If the goat were better, let it be offered for the daily sacrifice'. Said the king, 'Since he had no fear of my royal person, let his right hand be cut off.' But he gave a bribe [and] they cut off his left hand [instead]. Then the king heard [of it] and they cut off his right hand [too]. Said R. Joseph: Praised be the Merciful One Who caused Issachar of Kefar Barkai to receive his deserts in this world.

R. Ashi said: Issachar of Kefar Barkai had not studied the Mishnah. For we learned, R. Simeon said: Lambs take precedence over goats in all places.² You might think that that is because they are the best of their species, therefore it is stated, And if he bring a lamb as his offering.³ Rabina said: He had not even studied Scripture either, for it is written, If [he bring] a lamb . . . And if [his offering be] a goat:⁴ if he wishes, let him bring a lamb; if he wishes, let him bring a goat.⁵

CHAPTER V

- (1) I.e., in a contemptuous fashion.
- (2) Wherever both are mentioned together in the same verse the lamb is stated first.
- (3) Lev. IV, 32; this is given as an alternative to a goat, which is prescribed earlier in the same section in v. 28.
- (4) Lev. III, 7, 12.
- (5) And neither is preferable to the other.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 58a

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 58a

MISHNAH. THE [AFTERNOON] TAMID¹ IS SLAUGHTERED AT EIGHT AND A HALF HOURS² AND IS OFFERED AT NINE AND A HALF HOURS.³ ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER⁴ IT IS SLAUGHTERED AT SEVEN AND A HALF HOURS AND OFFERED AT EIGHT AND A HALF HOURS, WHETHER IT IS A WEEKDAY OR THE SABBATH. IF THE EVE OF PASSOVER FELL, ON SABBATH EVE [FRIDAY], IT IS SLAUGHTERED AT SIX AND A HALF HOURS AND OFFERED AT SEVEN AND A HALF HOURS, AND THE PASSOVER OFFERING AFTER IT.⁵

GEMARA. Whence do we know it? — Said R. Joshua b. Levi, Because Scripture saith, The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning, and the other lamb shalt thou offer between the two evenings:⁶ insert⁷ it between the two ‘evenings’, [which gives] two and a half hours before and two and a half hours after⁸ and one hour for its preparation.⁹

Raba objected: ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER IT IS SLAUGHTERED AT SEVEN AND A HALF HOURS AND OFFERED AT EIGHT AND A HALF HOURS, WHETHER IT IS A WEEKDAY OR THE SABBATH. Now if you think that [it must be slaughtered] at eight and a half hours according to Scriptural law, how may we perform it earlier? Rather, said Raba: The duty of the tamid¹⁰ properly [begins] from when the evening shadows begin to fall.¹¹ What is the reason? Because Scripture saith, ‘between the evenings’, [meaning] from the time that the sun commences to decline in the west. Therefore on other days of the year, when there are vows and freewill-offerings,¹² in connection with which the Divine Law states, [and he shall burn] upon it the fat of the peace-offerings [he-shelamim],¹³ and a Master said, ‘upon it’ complete [shalem] all the sacrifices,¹⁴ we therefore postpone it two hours and sacrifice it at eight and a half hours.¹⁵ [But] on the eve of Passover, when there is the Passover offering after it, we advance it one hour and sacrifice¹⁶ it at seven and a half hours. When the eve of Passover falls on the eve of the Sabbath, so that there is the roasting too [to be done], for it does not override the Sabbath,¹⁷ we let it stand on its own law, [viz.,] at six and a half hours.

Our Rabbis taught: Just as its order during the week, so is its order on the Sabbath: these are the words of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: Just as its order on the eve of Passover. What does this mean? — Said Abaye, This is what it means: Just as its order on a weekday which is the eve of Passover, so is its order on the Sabbath which is the eve of Passover:¹⁸ these are the words of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: Just as its order on the eve of Passover which falls on the eve of the Sabbath, so is its order on the Sabbath;¹⁹ and our Mishnah which teaches, WHETHER ON A WEEKDAY OR THE SABBATH, agrees with R. Ishmael. Wherein do they differ? — They differ as to whether the additional sacrifices²⁰ take precedence over the [burning of the frankincense in the] censers:²¹ R. Ishmael holds, The additional offerings take precedence over the [burning of the frankincense in the] censers: therefore he [the priest] sacrificed the additional sacrifices at six hours, [burned the incense in] the censers at seven, and sacrificed the tamid at seven and a half [hours]. R. Akiba holds: [The burning of the frankincense in] the censers takes precedence over the additional sacrifices: [hence] the [burning in the] censers took place at five [hours], the additional offering at six hours, and the tamid was sacrificed at six and a half hours.

To this Raba demurred: Does then R. Akiba teach, Just as its order on the eve of Passover which falls on the Sabbath, so is its order on the Sabbath; surely he teaches, ‘Just as its order on the eve of Passover,’ without qualification? Rather, said Raba, This is what he means: Just as its order on the weekdays in general,²² so is its order on the Sabbath which is the eve of Passover:²³ these are the words of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: Just as its order on the eve of Passover;²⁴ hence our Mishnah which teaches, WHETHER ON WEEKDAYS OR ON THE SABBATH agrees with R. Akiba. Wherein do they differ? — They differ in the heating of the flesh.²⁵ R. Ishmael holds, We fear for the heating of the flesh; while R. Akiba holds: We do not fear for the heating of the flesh.

-
- (1) The daily burnt-offering: one was brought every morning and another every afternoon. Num. XXVIII, 4.
- (2) The day being counted from sunrise to sunset, i.e., about six a.m. to six p.m.
- (3) The sacrificial ceremonies took an hour.
- (4) The Heb. is in the plural: on the eves of Passovers.
- (5) When the eve of Passover falls on a Friday, time must be left for roasting the Passover offering before the Sabbath commences; hence the earlier hour of the tamid.
- (6) Ibid. Literal translation. 'Evening' (ערב) 'ereb) is defined as the whole afternoon until nightfall.
- (7) Lit., 'divide'.
- (8) Lit., 'here' . . . 'there'.
- (9) Thus the 'two evenings' are from midday (= six) until eight and a half hours, and from nine and a half hours until nightfall (= twelve).
- (10) The slaughtering of it.
- (11) Lit., 'decline'. The sun reaches its zenith at midday and then begins to decline in the west, the decline being perceptible from half an hour after midday, and this is regarded as the falling of the evening shadows.
- (12) These are two technical terms: a 'vow' is a votive sacrifice, the particular animal having been unspecified when the vow was made; in a freewill-offering a particular animal was specified at the time of the vow. The difference is that in the former case, if the animal which he subsequently dedicates dies or is rendered unfit before it is sacrificed, he must bring another; but in the latter case he has no further obligation.
- (13) Lev. VI, 5.
- (14) Rashi: upon it, Sc. the morning tamid, to which the verse refers, complete etc., i.e., all the sacrifices of the day are to be brought after the morning tamid, but not after the afternoon tamid, which must be the last of the day. This exegesis connects shelamim with shalem (whole, complete). Jast. translates: with it (the evening sacrifice) cease all sacrifices (none can be offered after it). This is simpler, but not in accordance with the context.
- (15) To allow time for the voluntary offerings.
- (16) Lit., 'make'.
- (17) Though the roasting is a precept, yet it may not be done on the Sabbath.
- (18) I.e., in both cases the tamid is slaughtered at seven and a half hours.
- (19) Hence in both cases it is slaughtered at six and a half hours. For since no vows are offered on the Sabbath, it is unnecessary to delay the tamid, which is therefore sacrificed as early as possible, to leave ample time for the Passover sacrifice.
- (20) Offered on Sabbaths, New Moons, and Festivals; midday (six hours) was the earliest time when they could be offered. — In memory of these additional sacrifices there is now an Additional Service (Musaf) on these days.
- (21) Two censers of frankincense stood by the rows of shewbread; this shewbread was set on the Table every Sabbath and removed and replaced by fresh bread the following Sabbath. At the same time the frankincense was burnt, and after that the priests ate the shewbread. The removing, replacing and burning of the incense took an hour.
- (22) During the year.
- (23) Viz., at eight and a half hours. For the flesh of the Passover sacrifice may not be roasted until evening, therefore it is inadvisable to slaughter it earlier, lest the flesh became overheated and putrid, and consequently the tamid is slaughtered at the usual time.
- (24) Viz., at seven and a half hours, so likewise on
- (25) v. p. 289. n. 5; also perhaps, the shrinking of the flesh caused by overheating; v. Jast. s.v. כָּמַר and Rashi on Gen. XLIII. 30.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 58b

If we do not fear, let us sacrifice it at six and a half [hours]?¹ — He holds that the [burning of the frankincense in the] censers takes precedence over the additional sacrifices: [hence] he sacrificed the additional sacrifices at six hours, [performed the burning in] the censers at seven, and sacrificed the tamid at seven and a half. To this Rabbah b. 'Ulla 'demurred: Does he then teach, Just as its order on weekdays [in general], so is its order on the Sabbath which is the eve of Passover: these are the words of R. Ishmael? [Surely] he teaches, 'so is its order on the Sabbath,' without qualification! Rather, said Rabbah b. Ulla, this is what he means: Just as its order on a weekday in general, so is its order on the Sabbath in general:² these are the words of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: Just as its order on the eve of Passover in general, so is its order on the Sabbath in general:³ [hence] our Mishnah which teaches, WHETHER ON WEEKDAYS OR ON THE SABBATH agrees with all.⁴ Wherein do they differ? — They differ as to [whether there is] a preventive measure on account of vows and freewill-offerings. R. Ishmael holds: We enact a preventive measure for the Sabbath on account of weekdays;⁵ while R. Akiba holds: We do not enact a preventive measure. If we do not enact a preventive measure, let us sacrifice it at six and a half?⁶ — He holds the Sabbath. Since many are to be offered, we must start as early as possible. that the additional sacrifices take precedence over [the burning of the frankincense in] the censers: [hence] the additional sacrifices are [offered] at six hours, the [burning in the] censers at seven, and he sacrifices the tamid at seven and a half [hours].

An objection is raised: The tamid, during the whole year it is offered according to its law, [viz..] it is slaughtered at eight and a half [hours] and offered at nine and a half hours. But on the eve of Passover it is slaughtered at seven and a half and offered at eight and a half; if it [the eve of Passover] fell on the Sabbath, it is as though it fell on a Monday.⁷ R. Akiba said: As its order is on the eve of Passover. As for Abaye, it is well;⁸ but according to Raba it is a difficulty?⁹ — Raba can answer you: Do not say, It is the same as when it falls on a Monday. but say, it is the same as a Monday in general.¹⁰

An objection is raised: If it falls on the Sabbath, it is as its order during the whole year: these are the words of R. Ishmael.¹¹ R. Akiba said: It is as its order on the eve of Passover in general.¹² Now as for Raba, it is well;¹³ but according to Abaye it is difficult? — Abaye answers you: Do not say, 'It is as its order during the whole year,' but say, It is as its order in all [other] years:¹⁴ these are the words of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: It is as the order when the eve of Passover falls on the eve of the Sabbath.¹⁵

Our Rabbis taught: How do we know that there must not be anything before the morning tamid?¹⁶ Because it is said, and he shall lay the burnt-offering in order upon it.¹⁷ What is the exegesis?¹⁸ — Said Raba: The burnt-offering implies the first burnt-offering.¹⁹ And how do we know that nothing may be offered after the evening tamid? Because it is stated, and he shall burn upon it the fat of the peace-offerings.²⁰ What is the exegesis?²¹ Said Abaye: After it²² [sc. the morning tamid] [you may sacrifice] peace-offerings, but not after its companion [sc. the evening tamid] [may you sacrifice] peace-offerings. To this Raba demurred: Say [then], it is only peace-offerings that we may not present,²³ yet we may present burnt-offerings? Rather, said Raba: Ha-shelamim implies, upon it complete all the sacrifices.²⁴

Our Rabbis taught: The [evening] tamid is [sacrificed] before the Passover offering, the Passover offering is [sacrificed] before the [burning of the evening] incense, the incense before [the kindling of] the lights;

(1) Since there are many Passover sacrifices, while there is no need to delay it on account of vows, which are not offered on the Sabbath.

(2) In both cases the tamid is slaughtered at eight and a half hours, though on the Sabbath no voluntary sacrifices are offered.

(3) Viz., in both cases the tamid is slaughtered at seven and a half hours.

(4) For their controversy does not refer to the eve of Passover at all.

(5) If we permit him to slaughter the afternoon tamid on Sabbath at seven and a half hours, he may slaughter it at the same hour during the week too, leaving no time for voluntary offerings, which are disqualified if brought after the afternoon tamid.

(6) For it is a general principle that all precepts must be performed as early as possible.

(7) Lit., 'the second (day) of the week' — there are no specific names for the days of the week in Hebrew, except of course, for the Sabbath. — I.e., it is the same as when it falls during the week, Monday being mentioned as an example (Rashi and Tosaf.).

(8) For since R. Ishmael says that if it falls on the Sabbath it is the same as when it falls on a Monday, R. Akiba must mean, Just as its order on the eve of Passover which falls on the eve of the Sabbath.

(9) For Raba interprets R. Ishmael's statement thus: just as its order on weekdays in general etc. But since R. Ishmael concludes, it is the same as when it falls on a Monday, i.e., a weekday in general, it is obvious that he does not refer to a weekday in general in the first half of his statement.

(10) An ordinary weekday which is not Passover eve when the tamid is slaughtered at eight and a half hours, because we fear for the overheating of the flesh.

(11) I.e., the tamid is slaughtered at eight and a half hours, because we fear for the overheating of the flesh.

(12) It is slaughtered at seven and a half hours.

(13) For this is exactly as Raba interprets the Baraita.

(14) I.e., just as in all other years when the eve of Passover falls on an ordinary weekday and the tamid is slaughtered at seven and a half hours, so likewise when it falls on the Sabbath.

(15) Viz., the tamid is slaughtered at six and a half hours.

(16) Rashi: nothing must be burnt upon the wood pile before the morning tamid, after the latter has been laid in order upon it. Tosaf.: no voluntary offering may be sacrificed before the morning tamid. Tosaf. accepts Rashi's interpretation as an alternative.

(17) Lev. VI, 5. This follows, 'and the priest shall kindle wood on it every morning' (ibid.) showing that immediately after the wood pile is kindled, the tamid is the first thing to be burnt.

(18) How is it implied that 'the burnt-offering' mentioned in the verse refers to the morning tamid?

(19) The def. art. points to some particular sacrifice, viz., the first burnt-offering mentioned in the chapter on sacrifices, Num. XXVIII, which is the daily morning tamid, and this verse teaches that it must be the first thing to ascend the altar every day, and nothing else may take precedence over it.

(20) Ibid.

(21) How is it implied in this verse?

(22) Taking עָלָיו ('upon it') in this sense.

(23) After the evening tamid.

(24) v. supra p. 288, n. 5.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 59a

let that in connection with which ba-'ereb [at evening] and ben ha-'arbayim [between the evenings]¹ are said be deferred after that in connection with which ba-'ereb is not said, save ben ha-'arbayim alone.² If so, let [the burning of] the incense [and the kindling of] the lights also take precedence over the Passover offering, [for] let that in connection with which ba-'ereb and ben ha-'arbayim are stated be deferred after that in connection with which nought save ben ha-'arbayim alone is said?³ — There it is different, because Scripture expressed a limitation, 'it'. For it was taught: [Aaron and his sons shall set it in order, to burn] from evening to morning:⁴ furnish it with its [requisite] measure, so that it may burn from evening to morning. Another interpretation: you have no [other] service which is valid from evening to morning save this alone. What is the reason? Scripture saith, 'Aaron and his sons shall set it in order, to burn from evening to morning': 'it' [shall be] from evening to morning, but no other thing shall be from evening until morning;⁵ and [the burning of] the incense is likened to [the kindling of] the lights.⁶

Now it was taught in accordance with our difficulty: The [evening] tamid is [sacrificed] before [the burning of] the incense, the incense is [burnt] before [the kindling of] the lamps, and the lamps are [kindled] before [the sacrificing of] the Passover offering: let that in connection with which ba-'ereb and ben ha-'arbayim are stated be deferred after that in connection with which nought save ben ha-'arbayim alone is stated. But 'it' is written?⁷ — That 'it' is required to exclude a service of the inner [Temple]; and what is it? [The burning of] the incense.⁸ You might think

But in connection with the former only ben ha-'arbayim is stated, Num. XXVIII,⁶ : and the other lamb shalt thou offer at dusk (ben ha'arbayim). that I would say, since it is written, And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at dusk, he shall burn it,⁹ say, let us first light the lamps and then burn the incense; therefore the Merciful One expressed a limitation, 'it'. Then what is the purpose of, 'at dusk he shall burn it'? — This is what the Merciful One saith: When thou lightest the lamps, the incense must [already] be burning.

Our Rabbis taught: There is nothing which takes precedence over the morning tamid except [the burning of] the [morning] incense alone, in connection with which 'in the morning, in the morning' is stated; so let [the burning of the] incense, in connection with which 'in the morning, in the morning,' is stated, for it is written, And Aaron shall burn thereon incense of sweet spices, in the morning, in the morning,¹⁰ take precedence over that in connection with which only one 'morning' is stated.¹¹ And there is nothing which may be delayed until after the evening tamid save [the burning of] the incense, [the lighting of] the lamps, [the slaughtering of] the Passover sacrifice, and he who lacks atonement¹² on the eve of Passover, who performs ritual immersion a second time¹³ and eats his Passover sacrifice in the evening. R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka said: He who lacks atonement at any other time of the year too, who performs ritual immersion and eats of sacred flesh in the evening.¹⁴ According to the first Tanna, it is well: let the affirmative precept of [eating] the Passover sacrifice, which involves kareth,¹⁵ come and override the affirmative precept of completion.¹⁶ which does not involve kareth.¹⁷ But according to R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka, wherein is this affirmative precept stronger than the other affirmative precept? — Said Rabina in R. Hisda's name: We treat here of a sin-offering of a bird, the blood of which alone belongs to the altar.¹⁸ R. Papa said: You may even say [that we treat of] an animal sin-offering: he takes it up and keeps it overnight on the top of the altar.¹⁹ But there is the guilt-offering?²⁰ As for R. Papa. it is well: hence we keep it overnight. But according to R. Hisda, what can be said? — I will tell you: It means where he has offered up his guilt-offering.²¹ But there is the burnt-offering?²² And should you answer, The burnt-offering is not indispensable,²³ surely it was taught. R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: Just as his sin-offering and his guilt-offering are indispensable for him, so is his burnt-offering indispensable for him. And should you answer, It means where he has offered his burnt-offering; yet can his burnt-offering be offered first before his sin-offering? Surely it was taught: And he shall offer that which is for the sin-offering first:²⁴ for what purpose is this stated? If to teach that it comes before the burnt-offering, surely it is already said, And he shall prepare the second for a burnt-offering, according to the ordinance?²⁵ But this furnishes a general rule for all sin-offerings, that they take precedence of all burnt-offerings which accompany them; and we have an established principle²⁶ that even a bird sin-offering takes precedence of an animal burnt-offering!²⁷ — Said Raba, The burnt-offering of a leper is different, because the Merciful One saith,

(1) E.V.: 'at dusk'.

(2) This is why the evening tamid is before the Passover sacrifice. For in connection with the latter both these expressions are used: Ex. XII, 6: and the whole assembly . . . shall kill it at dusk (ben ha-'arbayim); Deut. XVI, 6: thou shalt sacrifice the passover-offering at even (ba-'ereb).

(3) For only ben ha-'arbayim is stated in connection with the former two, Ex. XXX, 7f: And Aaron shall burn thereon incense of sweet spices . . . And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at dusk (ben ha-'arbayim), he shall burn it, 'ben ha-'arbayim' applying to both the burning of the incense and the lighting of the lamps.

(4) Ex. XXVII, 21.

(5) Hence nothing may come after the kindling of the lights, and consequently the slaughtering of the Passover offering must take precedence.

(6) Just as no service after the former is valid, so is no service valid after the latter.

- (7) Implying that nothing must be done after the kindling of the lights.
- (8) For it is logical that a service similar to itself should be excluded, the kindling of the lamps likewise being a service in the inner Temple, and 'it' shows that no other inner service may take place after the kindling of the lamp. But the Passover offering was sacrificed in the outer Court.
- (9) Ex. XXX, 7.
- (10) Ibid.; E.V.: 'every morning'. The literal translation is given in the text, and the repetition implies an earlier hour.
- (11) Num. XXVIII, 4: The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning.
- (12) The technical designation, of an unclean person who may not eat holy flesh until he has brought a sacrifice after regaining his cleanliness, viz., a zab and a zabah (v. Glos.). a leper and a woman after childbirth. If one of these forgot to bring his sacrifice before the evening tamid was sacrificed on the eve of Passover, he must bring it after the tamid, since otherwise he may not partake of the Passover offering in the evening. which is obligatory.
- (13) Though he must perform ritual immersion the previous day, this being necessary before the purificatory sacrifice may be offered, he nevertheless repeats it before partaking of holy flesh.
- (14) If he brought a peace-offering that day but forgot to bring his purificatory sacrifice, he must bring it even after the afternoon tamid, so that he may eat the flesh of his peace-offering in the evening. R. Ishmael regarding this too as obligatory.
- (15) If unfulfilled, v. Num. IX, 13.
- (16) V. supra 58b bottom: 'after it complete all the sacrifices'.
- (17) Even if a sacrifice is unlawfully brought after the evening tamid it is not punished by kareth.
- (18) R. Ishmael, in speaking of one who lacks atonement during the rest of the year, refers to a poor leper, who brought a bird for his sin-offering. This was eaten by the priests, and nothing of it was burnt on the altar, whereas the affirmative precept of 'completion' is written in reference to burning on the altar (v. Lev. VI, 5: and he shall burn thereon the fat of the peace-offerings). and hence applies only to animal sacrifices, the fat of which was burnt on the altar.
- (19) He slaughters the sacrifice after the evening tamid, but carries the animal on to the top of the altar and leaves it there overnight, postponing the burning of the fat until after the tamid of the following morning.
- (20) Required by a leper; even if poor, he brought a lamb, v. Lev. XIV, 21.
- (21) But had forgotten about the sin-offering.
- (22) Likewise required by a leper. ibid. 19, 22. This of course was burnt on the altar (v. n. 4).
- (23) To the eating of sacred flesh.
- (24) Lev. V, 8, q.v.
- (25) Ibid. 10.
- (26) Binyan Ab, a building up of a principle (or class). i.e., a conclusion by analogy.
- (27) V. Zeb. 90b.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 59b

And the priest shall [have] offer[ed] the burnt offering.¹ [implying], that which he has already offered.²

R. Shaman b. Abba said to R. Papa: According to you who maintain [that] he takes it up and keeps it overnight on the top of the altar, shall we arise and do a thing to the priests whereby they may come to a stumbling-block, for they will think it is of that day. and thus come to burn it?³ — he priests are most careful, replied he.

R. Ashi said to R. Kahana-others state, R. Huna the son of R. Nathan [said] to R. Papa: But as long as the emurim⁴ have not been burnt, the priests may not eat the flesh?⁵ For it was taught: You might think that the priests should be permitted [to partake] of the breast and the thigh before the burning of the emurim: therefore it is stated, And the priest shall burn the fat upon the altar,⁶ and then follows, but the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons'. And as long as the priests have not eaten [it], the owners obtain no atonement, for it was taught: And they shall eat those things wherewith atonement was made:⁷ this teaches that the priests eat [it] and the owners obtain atonement! — Said he to him, Since it is impossible,⁸ they [the emurim] are treated⁹ as though they were defiled or lost.

For it was taught: You might think that if the emurim were defiled or lost, the priests have no right to the breast or the thigh, therefore it is stated, 'But the breast shall be Aaron's and his sons', in all cases.

R. Kahana opposed [two verses]: It is written, neither shall the fat of My feast remain all night until the morning:¹⁰ [thus] it is only 'until the morning' that 'it shall not remain all night,' but it may be kept for the whole night;¹¹ but it is written, and he shall burn thereon the fat of the peace-offerings,¹² [implying,] after it complete all the sacrifices?¹³ He raised the difficulty; and he himself answered it: That is where they were left over.¹⁴

R. Safra pointed out a contradiction to Raba: It is written, neither shall the sacrifice of the feast of the Passover be left unto the morning:¹⁵ thus it is only 'unto the morning' that 'it shall not be left,' but it may be kept all night;¹⁶ but it is written, The burnt-offering of the Sabbath [shall be burnt] on its Sabbath,¹⁷ but not the burnt-offering of a weekday on the Sabbath, nor the burnt-offering of a weekday on a Festival? — Said he to him, R. Abba b. Hiyya has already pointed out this contradiction to R. Abbahu, and he answered him, We treat here of the case where the fourteenth falls on the Sabbath,¹⁸ for the fats of the Sabbath may be offered on the Festival. Said he to him, Because the fats of the Sabbath may be offered on the Festival, we are to arise and assume that this verse is written [only] in respect of the fourteenth which falls on the Sabbath?¹⁹ Leave the verse, he answered, for it is compelled to establish its own [particular] case.²⁰

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SLAUGHTERED THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE,²¹ AND HE CAUGHT [THE BLOOD] AND WENT AND SPRINKLED IT FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE;²² OR FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE AND FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE; OR FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE,²³ IT IS DISQUALIFIED. HOW IS 'FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE AND FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE' MEANT? IN THE NAME OF THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE [FIRST] AND [THEN] IN THE NAME OF A PEACE-OFFERING. 'FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE' [MEANS] IN THE NAME OF A PEACE-OFFERING [FIRST] AND [THEN] IN THE NAME OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING.

GEMARA. R. Papa²⁴ asked: Did we learn [of a dual intention expressed even] in respect to one service,²⁵ or did we learn [only of a dual intention expressed] at two separate services? Did we learn [of a dual intention expressed even] in respect of one service, this being in accordance with R. Jose, who maintained, A man is responsible for²⁶ his last words too;²⁷ for if [it agreed with] R. Meir, surely he said, Seize [i.e., determine the matter by] the first expression;²⁸

(1) Lev. XIV, 20; the bracketed additions show the meaning which the verse is capable of bearing, by treating והעלה as a pluperfect, beside its usual and obvious meaning.

(2) Hence although the sin-offering should come before the burnt-offering, yet the possible meaning of this verse teaches that even if the order is reversed it is valid. Therefore we can explain the present Baraita as meaning that he had already sacrificed his burnt-offering.

(3) During the night the limbs of the sacrifices of the previous day are burnt, all before the tamid of the following morning. Here, however, the animal sin-offering which was kept untouched overnight must be burnt after the morning tamid, whereas the priest may confuse it with the rest and burn it before.

(4) V. Glos.

(5) And in consequence atonement is incomplete, so that the owner may not partake of the Passover sacrifice in any case, if his sin-offering is left overnight.

(6) Lev. VII, 31.

(7) Ex. XXIX, 33.

(8) To burn the emurim after the evening tamid, on account of the affirmative precept of 'completion'.

(9) Lit., 'they (the Sages) treated them'.

(10) Ex. XXIII, 18.

- (11) I.e., the priest has the whole night in which to burn the fat, providing that nothing is left by the morning.
- (12) Lev. VI, 5.
- (13) V. supra 58b. Thus nothing may be done after the evening tamid.
- (14) Of the sacrifices whose blood was sprinkled before the evening tamid. Immediately the blood is sprinkled the fat etc. is ready for burning on the altar, and therefore even if it is delayed, its ultimate burning during the night is regarded as following the tamid of the previous morning, not that of the evening.
- (15) Ex. XXXIV, 25.
- (16) During which the altar portions of the Passover sacrifice are burnt. Although these, strictly speaking, belong to a sacrifice which has been offered on a weekday, i.e., the fourteenth, yet they may be burnt on the night of the Festival.
- (17) Num. XXVIII, 10.
- (18) I.e., only then is the implication of the first verse applicable.
- (19) Surely there is no warrant for this limitation.
- (20) Since there is a contradiction, the verse itself proves that it can only relate to this particular instance.
- (21) Lit., 'not for its own name', i.e., as a different sacrifice. E.g., when he killed it he stated that it was for a peace-offering, not for a Passover sacrifice.
- (22) Slaughtering the sacrifice, catching the blood, going with it to the side of the altar where it is to be sprinkled, and sprinkling it, are regarded as four distinct services, any of which, if performed with an illegal intention, disqualifies the Passover sacrifice.
- (23) I.e., one of the services was for its own sake and another was for a different purpose, in the order stated.
- (24) Rashal reads: Raba.
- (25) I.e., even if he declared at one of the services, e.g., the slaughtering, that he was doing it for its own purpose and for another purpose.
- (26) Lit., 'seized'.
- (27) v. supra 53b. Hence since his last words were illegal, the sacrifice is disqualified.
- (28) Where the two parts of a man's statement are mutually exclusive, regard the first only.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 60a

or perhaps we learned [it only] in respect to two services, and even according to R. Meir, who said, 'Seize the first expression.' that applies only in the case of one service, but in the case of two services he agrees that it is disqualified?¹ — I will tell you: to which [case does this problem refer]? Shall we say, to [the case where it was] for another purpose [first] and [then] for its own purpose, then whether it was in connection with one service or in connection with two services, according to both R. Meir and R. Jose it was disqualified by the first [wrongful intention], for according to R. Jose too, he holds that a man is held responsible for his last words also?² — Rather, [the problem refers] to [where it was done] for its own purpose [first] and then for another purpose: what then? — Come and hear: IF A MAN SLAUGHTERED THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND CAUGHT [THE BLOOD]. AND WENT AND SPRINKLED IT FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE: how is it meant? Shall we say, [literally] as he teaches it,³ why must he intend all of them [for a wrong purpose]? From the first it is disqualified! Hence he must teach thus: IF A MAN SLAUGHTERED THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE, or even if he slaughtered it for its own purpose, but HE CAUGHT [ITS BLOOD], AND WENT AND SPRINKLED IT FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE,⁴ or even if he slaughtered it, caught [its blood], and went [with it] for its own purpose. but SPRINKLED IT FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE, so that it is [a question of] two services.⁵ Then consider the second clause: FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE AND FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE: how is it meant? Shall we say, in respect of two services: then it is identical with the first clause! Hence it must surely be in respect of one service, and this agrees with R. Jose, who maintained: A man is held responsible for his last words too! — No. After all it refers to two services,⁶ but the first clause [discusses] where he is standing at [engaged in] the slaughtering and intends [with due purpose] in respect of the slaughtering, or again⁷ he is standing at the sprinkling and intends [for another purpose] in respect of sprinkling.⁸ While the second clause means when he is standing at the slaughtering and intends in respect of the sprinkling, when he [for instance] declares, 'Behold, I slaughter the Passover sacrifice for its own purpose, [but] to sprinkle its blood for another purpose'; and he [the Tanna] informs us that you can intend at one service for another service,⁹ and that is R. Papa's question.¹⁰

Come and hear: OR FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, [IT] IS DISQUALIFIED. How is it meant? If we say, in the case of two services, [then] seeing that where [if the first is] for its own purpose and [the second is] for another purpose. you say that it is disqualified. is it necessary [to state it where it is first] for another purpose and [then] for its own purpose?¹¹ Hence it must surely refer to one service, and since the second clause refers to one service, the first clause too refers [also] to one service! — No, after all it refers [only] to two services, and logically indeed it is not required, but because he speaks of 'FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE AND FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE,' he also mentions 'FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE.'¹²

Come and hear: If he killed it [the Passover sacrifice] for those who cannot eat it or for those who were not registered for it,¹³ for uncircumcised¹⁴ or for unclean persons,¹⁵ it is disqualified. Now here it obviously refers to one service, and since the second clause refers to one service, the first clause too treats [also] of one service!¹⁶ — What argument is this? The one is according to its nature, while the other is according to its nature; the second clause [certainly] refers [only] to one service, while the first clause may refer either to one service or to two services.¹⁷

Come and hear: [If he killed it] for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, it is fit. How is it meant? Shall we say, at two services:¹⁸ and the reason [that it is fit] is because he intended it [for non-eaters] at the sprinkling, for there can be no [effective] intention of eaters at the sprinkling;¹⁹ hence [if it were] at one service, e.g.. at the slaughtering, where an intention with reference to eaters is effective, it would be disqualified, but we have an established law that if some are eaters it is not disqualified?²⁰

(1) On the first hypothesis the Mishnah refers even to one service, and will certainly also hold good in the case of two services; while on the second hypothesis the Mishnah refers to two services only, but will not hold good in the case of one service; Rashi infra 60b. s.v. סיפא בעבודה אחת and as is evident from the context.

(2) I.e., they too must be taken into account, but his first words certainly cannot be ignored.

(3) Viz., that all four services were performed for another purpose.

(4) [The text seems to be in slight disorder, v. D.S. The general meaning is, however, clear.]

(5) I.e., this clause states the case of a legal purpose at one service and an illegal purpose at another service.

(6) And still the two clauses are not identical as it goes on explaining.

(7) [MS.M. omits: 'or again'.]

(8) ['Slaughtering' and 'sprinkling' are taken merely as examples, the same applying to the other services. Each was performed with the due or undue intention, as the case may be, in respect of itself.]

(9) And that such intention is taken into account, so that if it is illegitimate the sacrifice is disqualified.

(10) Riba: that is why R. Papa asks his question, because the Mishnah affords no solution. Rashba: R. Papa's question as to whether the Mishnah may refer to two services is in such conditions, viz., where an illegitimate intention for one service is expressed in the course of another service.

(11) For the very first intention is illegitimate and disqualifies it; how then is it to regain its validity? The same difficulty arises if the Mishnah refers to one and the same service, but then it can be answered that the Mishnah informs us in the first clause ('FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE AND FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE') that we do not determine the matter purely by his first words, and in the second clause ('FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE AND FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE') that the matter is not determined purely by his last words, but that due weight must be given to both.

(12) For the sake of parallelism.

(13) Every Paschal lamb required its registered consumers before it was slaughtered, in accordance with Ex. XII, 4. In the present instance he enumerated those for whom he was slaughtering it, all of whom, however, were incapable of eating through old age or sickness (Rashi: none others had registered for it; Tosaf.: others who were capable had also registered for it, but he ignored them in his declaration), or had not registered for this particular animal.

(14) 'Uncircumcised' in this connection always means men whose brothers had died through circumcision, and they were afraid of a similar fate. These may not eat thereof, ibid. 48.

(15) Who may likewise not eat it, being forbidden all sacred flesh. Lev. XXII, 4ff.

(16) The Mishnahs printed on 59b and 61a are actually clauses of the same Mishnah.

(17) I.e., either also to one service or exclusively to two services. And the question is, to which?

(18) Thus: at the slaughtering he declared that it was for those who can eat, and at the sprinkling he declared that it was for those who cannot eat (R. Han.).

(19) I.e., an intention with respect to the eaters expressed at the sprinkling is of no account.

(20) Since even if only one desired to eat of it the whole animal must be killed, v. infra 61a.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 60b

Hence it surely refers [also] to one service,¹ and since the second clause refers [also] to one service, the first clause too refers [also] to one service! — What argument is this: the one is according to its nature, while the other is according to its nature: the second clause refers [also] to one service,² while the first clause refers either to one service or to two services.³ The scholars asked: What is the law of a Passover sacrifice which he killed at any other time of the year for its own purpose and for another purpose?⁴ Does the other purpose come and nullify⁵ its own purpose, and [thus] make it fit, or not? — When R. Dimi came,⁶ he said, I stated this argument before R. Jeremiah: Since [slaughtering it] for its own purpose makes it fit at its own time, while [slaughtering it] for another purpose makes it fit at a different time,⁷ then just as [the slaughtering] for its own purpose, which makes it fit at its own time, does not save⁸ it from [the disqualifying effect of] another purpose,⁹ so also [the slaughtering] for another purpose, which makes it fit at a different time, does not save it [from the disqualifying effect] of its own purpose, and it is unfit. Whereupon he said to me, It is not so: If you say thus in respect to another purpose.¹⁰ that is because it operates in the case of all sacrifices;¹¹ will you say [the same where it is slaughtered] for its own purpose, seeing that it does not operate [as a cause of disqualification] in the case of all [other] sacrifices but only in the case of the Passover sacrifice alone?

What is [our decision] thereon? — Said Raba, A Passover sacrifice which he slaughtered at any other time of the year for its own purpose and for another purpose is fit. For it tacitly stands [to be killed] for its own purpose, yet even so, when he kills it for another purpose¹² it is fit, which proves that the other purpose comes and nullifies its own purpose. Hence, when he slaughters it for its own purpose and for another purpose too, the other purpose comes and nullifies its own purpose. Said R. Adda b. Ahabah to Raba: Perhaps where he states it, it is different from where he does not state it?¹³ For [if he kills it] for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, it is fit, yet when he kills it for those who cannot eat it alone, it is disqualified. Yet why so? Surely it tacitly stands for those who can eat it?¹⁴ Hence [you must admit that] where he states it, it is different from where he does not state it; so here too, where he states it, it is different from where he does not state it. Is this all argument? he rejoined. As for there, it is well: there, as long as he does not [expressly] overthrow it at the slaughtering, its tacit [destiny] is certainly to be killed for its own purpose. But here, does it tacitly stand for those who are [registered] to eat it? Perhaps these will withdraw and others will come and register for it, for we learned: They may register and withdraw their hands from it [the Paschal lamb] until he kills it.

The scholars asked: What is the law of a Paschal lamb which was slaughtered during the rest of the year with a change of its offering, which may then not be eaten, or in part, in the sense that they may be eaten, but their owners have not discharged their obligations and must bring another. Therefore it is logical that its disqualifying power should be so strong as to render of no avail the fact that it was slaughtered for its purpose too. owners?¹⁵ Is a change of owner like a change of sanctity,¹⁶ and it validates it; or not? — Said R. Papa. I stated this argument before Raba: Since a change of sanctity disqualifies it at its own time, and a change of owner disqualifies it at its own time: then just as a change of sanctity, which disqualifies it at its own time, validates it at a different time,¹⁷ so a change of owner, which disqualifies it at its own time, validates it at a different time. But he said to me, It is not so: If you say thus in the case of a change of sanctity, [that is] because its disqualification is intrinsic,¹⁸ and it is [operative] in respect of the four services,¹⁹

(1) I.e., also to one service.

(2) This will not have quite the same meaning as the same phrase used before. There it obviously meant that it treats of one service only. Here however the meaning is this: even in the case of one service the sacrifice is fit, this law holding good in the case of both one service or two services. Thus, if this intention, viz., that he was killing it for eaters and non-eaters, was expressed at the slaughtering, the sacrifice is fit, because eaters were included. While it may also refer to two services, as explained on p. 301, n. 7.

(3) V. p. 301. n. 6.

(4) E.g., if a man dedicated a lamb for the Passover sacrifice a considerable time beforehand. Now it is stated infra 70b that if he kills it as a peace-offering at any time other than the eve of Passover it is fit; if as a Passover offering, it is unfit.

(5) Lit., 'exclude from'.

(6) From Palestine to Babylon

(7) Lit., 'not in its own time'.

(8) Lit., 'draw out'.

(9) So that if it is killed both for its purpose and for another purpose, it is unfit.

(10) That it disqualifies the Passover sacrifice even if it is also killed for its own purposes.

(11) All sacrifices, if slaughtered for a purpose other than their own, are disqualified, either wholly, viz., in the case of a sin-offering and the Passover

(12) Before the eve of passover.

(13) The other purpose can nullify the tacit assumption that it stands for its own purpose, but it may be unable to nullify the explicit declaration that it is slaughtered for its own purpose too.

(14) So that according to your argument it is the same as though he explicitly killed it for both.

(15) The animal was set aside for a certain person and then slaughtered for a different person, but for its own purpose (Rashi).

(16) I.e., like slaughtering it as a different sacrifice.

(17) The text must be emended thus.

(18) I.e., an illegitimate intention is expressed in respect to the sacrifice itself.

(19) V. Mishnah supra 59b and note a.l.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 61a

and it is [operative] after death,¹ and it is [operative] in the case of the community as in the case of an individual;² will you say [the same] of a change of owner, where the disqualification is not intrinsic, and it is not [operative] in respect of the four services,³ and it is not [operative] after death,⁴ and it is not [operative] in the case of the community as in the case of an individual? And though two [of these distinctions] are not exact,⁵ two nevertheless are exact. For how is a change of owners different, that [you say] its disqualification is not intrinsic: because its disqualification is merely [one of] intention? Then with a change of sanctity too, its disqualification is merely one of intention. Again, as to what he says. A change of owners is not [operative as a disqualification] after death, then according to R. Phineas the son of R. Ammi who maintained, There is [a disqualification in] a change of owner after death, what is there to be said? Two [of these distinctions] are nevertheless exact! Rather, said Raba: A Paschal lamb which he slaughtered during the rest of the year with a change of owners is regarded as though it had no owners in its proper time,⁶ and it is disqualified.

MISHNAH. IF HE KILLED IT FOR THOSE WHO CANNOT EAT IT OR FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT REGISTERED FOR IT, FOR UNCIRCUMCISED PERSONS OR FOR UNCLEAN PERSONS, IT IS UNFIT. [IF HE KILLED IT] FOR THOSE WHO ARE TO EAT IT AND FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT TO EAT IT, FOR THOSE WHO ARE REGISTERED FOR IT AND FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT REGISTERED FOR IT, FOR CIRCUMCISED AND FOR UNCIRCUMCISED, FOR UNCLEAN AND FOR CLEAN PERSONS, IT IS FIT. IF HE KILLED IT BEFORE MIDDAY, IT IS DISQUALIFIED, BECAUSE IT IS SAID, [AND THE WHOLE ASSEMBLY . . . SHALL KILL IT] AT DUSK.⁷ IF HE KILLED IT BEFORE THE [EVENING] TAMID, IT IS FIT, PROVIDING THAT ONE SHALL STIR ITS BLOOD UNTIL [THAT OF] THE TAMID IS SPRINKLED;⁸ YET IF IT WAS SPRINKLED,⁹ IT IS FIT.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: How is 'for those who cannot eat it' meant? [If it was killed] in the name of an invalid or an old man. How is 'for those who were not registered for it' meant? If one company registered for it and he killed it in the name of a different company.

How do we know this? Because our Rabbis taught, [Then shall he and his neighbour next unto him take one] according to the number of [be-miksath] [the souls]:¹⁰ this teaches that the Paschal lamb is not slaughtered save for those who are registered [numbered] for it. You might think that if he slaughtered it for those who were not registered for it, he should be as one who violates the precept, yet it is fit. Therefore it is stated, 'according to the number of [be-miksath] [the souls] . . . ye shall make your count [takosu]': the Writ reiterated it, to teach that it is indispensable. Rabbi said, This is a Syriac expression, as a man who says to his neighbour, 'Kill [kos] me this lamb.'¹¹ We have thus found [it disqualified if killed] for those who are not registered for it; how do we know [the same of] those who cannot eat it? Scripture saith, according to every man's eating ye shall make your count,' [thus] eaters are assimilated to registered [persons].

(1) If the owner of the sacrifice died, his son must bring it, and if the latter slaughters it for a different purpose it is disqualified.

(2) A public sacrifice, just like a private sacrifice, is disqualified if offered for another purpose.

(3) In the case of sacrifices other than the Passover a change of owner is a disqualification only when it is expressed in connection with the sprinkling of the blood, i.e., he declares that he will sprinkle the blood on behalf of another person.

(4) When its owner dies the sacrifice loses his name, and therefore even if it is offered in another man's name it is fit.

(5) They are not true distinctions, as shown anon.

(6) I.e., as though it were slaughtered on Passover eve as a Passover sacrifice, but for no persons in particular.

(7) Ex. XII, 6; lit., 'between the evenings'.

(8) To prevent it from congealing.

(9) Before the blood of the tamid.

(10) Ex. XII, 4.

(11) Thus Rabbi connects the word with slaughter. But he also admits its Hebrew connotation of counting, and he thus points out that an intention for those who cannot eat it or who are not registered for it disqualifies the sacrifice only when it is expressed at the killing, but not when it is expressed at one of the other services (Tosaf.).

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 61b

If he slaughtered it for circumcised persons on condition that uncircumcised persons should be atoned for therewith at the sprinkling,¹ — R. Hisda said: It [the lamb] is disqualified; Rabbah ruled: It is fit. R. Hisda said, It is disqualified: There is [a disqualification in] an intention for uncircumcised at the sprinkling. Rabbah ruled, It is fit: There is no [disqualification in] an intention for uncircumcised at the sprinkling. Rabbah said, Whence do I know it? Because it was taught: You might think that he [an uncircumcised person] disqualifies the members of the company who come with him,² and it is logical: since uncircumcision disqualifies, and uncleanness disqualifies, [then] just as with uncleanness, part uncleanness was not made tantamount to entire uncleanness,³ so with uncircumcision, part uncircumcision was not made tantamount to entire uncircumcision.⁴ Or turn this way:⁵ since uncircumcision disqualifies, and time disqualifies: then just as with time, part [in respect to] time was made tantamount to the whole [in respect of] tithing,⁶ so with uncircumcision, part [in respect] to uncircumcision should be made tantamount to the whole [in respect to] uncircumcision. Let us see to what it is similar: you judge [draw an analogy between] that which does not apply to all sacrifices by that which does not apply to all sacrifices,⁷ and let not time provide an argument, which operates [as a disqualification] in the case of all sacrifices. Or turn this way: you judge a thing which was not freed⁸ from its general rule by a thing which was not freed from its general rule;⁹ and let not uncleanness provide an argument, seeing that it was freed from its general rule.¹⁰ Therefore it is stated. This [is the ordinance of the Passover].¹¹ What is [the purpose of] ‘this’?¹² If we say. [to teach] that entire uncircumcision disqualifies it [the Paschal lamb], but part thereof¹³ does not disqualify it, surely that is deduced from, and all uncircumcised person[s] [shall not eat thereof]?¹⁴ Hence he [the Tanna] must have taught thus: Therefore it is stated, ‘and all uncircumcised shall not eat thereof. Entire uncircumcision disqualifies it, [but] part thereof does not disqualify it. And should you say, the same law applies to sprinkling, viz., that entire uncircumcision at least does disqualify it:¹⁵ therefore ‘this’ is stated, [teaching,] it is only at the slaughtering that entire uncircumcision disqualifies, but [as for] sprinkling, even entire uncircumcision too does not disqualify it.¹⁶ And should you ask, What is the leniency of sprinkling?¹⁷ That there is no intention of eaters in respect to sprinkling.¹⁸

But R. Hisda [maintains,] On the contrary, [the Baraita is to be explained] in the opposite direction. [Thus:] therefore it is stated, and all uncircumcised person[s] [shall not eat thereof]: if the whole of it [the registered company] is [in a state of] uncircumcision, it disqualifies it, but part thereof does not disqualify it. But [as for] sprinkling, even part thereof disqualifies it.¹⁹ And should you say, the same law applies to sprinkling, viz., that unless there is entire uncircumcision it does not disqualify it, therefore ‘this’ is stated, [teaching,] only at the slaughtering does part thereof not disqualify it, but at the sprinkling even part thereof disqualifies it. And should you ask, What is the stringency of sprinkling?²⁰ [It is] that [the prohibition of] piggul cannot be imposed save at the sprinkling.²¹ To this R. Ashi demurred: Whence [do you know] that this [verse] ‘and all uncircumcised person[s],’ implies in its entirety; perhaps this [verse], ‘and all uncircumcised person[s]’ implies whatever there is of uncircumcision,²² [and] therefore the Merciful One wrote ‘this’ to teach that unless there is an entire [company in a state of] uncircumcision, it does not disqualify it, there being no difference whether [it is] at the slaughtering or at the sprinkling?²³ Rather, said R. Ashi, R. Hisda and Rabbah

(1) Whether the latter were registered for it or not. [‘To be atoned for’ here is employed in a technical sense denoting to have the blood sprinkled on behalf of (a person), as there is no question of atonement with the Paschal lamb. The words ‘at the sprinkling’ are accordingly superfluous, and in fact do not appear in MS.M.]

(2) I.e., if he registered together with duly circumcised, all are disqualified from partaking of this lamb.

(3) Only if all who register are unclean is the sacrifice disqualified. but not if merely some of them are unclean.

(4) Hence it is not disqualified.

(5) I.e., argue thus.

- (6) I.e., if he expressed an intention of eating only part of the sacrifice even after the time legally permitted, the whole sacrifice is piggul (q.v. Glos.) and disqualified.
- (7) Uncircumcision and uncleanness are not disqualifications in the case of other sacrifices, which may be killed on behalf of their owners even if they are uncircumcised or unclean.
- (8) Lit., 'permitted'.
- (9) In no case may a sacrifice be eaten by an uncircumcised person or after its permitted time.
- (10) If the whole community is unclean, the Paschal lamb is sacrificed and eaten by them. — Thus two contradictory arguments are possible.
- (11) Ex. XII, 43; the passage proceeds to disqualify an uncircumcised person (v. 49), and this word is quoted as teaching that an uncircumcised person does not disqualify others who register with him. 'This' is a limitation, teaching that the law is exactly as stated, and is not to be extended to others.
- (12) This is part of Rabbah's argument. How does 'this' signify that the uncircumcised does not disqualify the members of the company that come with him?
- (13) I.e., when only some of the registered company are uncircumcised.
- (14) Ibid. 48, which is thus interpreted: when all who have registered for a particular animal are uncircumcised, none must eat thereof. But if only a fraction are uncircumcised, the circumcised may eat thereof. (E.V. but no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof.)
- (15) Viz., where he expressed an intention that the sprinkling should make atonement for uncircumcised only.
- (16) 'This' implies that uncircumcision disqualifies at one of the four services only, which is assumed to be the slaughtering. This interpretation of the Baraita supports Rabbah's view.
- (17) What other leniency do you find in sprinkling, that you assume that the limitation of 'this' teaches a further leniency in respect to uncircumcision.
- (18) He need not sprinkle expressly for those who are registered, as the requirement of registration and eaters is stated in connection with slaughtering, v. supra 61a note on Rabbi's exegesis.
- (19) As his view supra.
- (20) What other stringency do you find in sprinkling, that you assume that the limitation of 'this' teaches a further stringency in respect to uncircumcision.
- (21) An illegitimate intention to partake of the sacrifice after the permitted time, expressed at one of the four services (v. Mishnah supra 59b) renders it piggul, and he who eats it even within the permitted time, incurs kareth, only if the subsequent services are performed without any intention at all or with a legitimate intention or with the same illegitimate intention. But if any one of the subsequent services is performed with a different illegitimate intention, e.g. to eat it without the permitted boundaries, it ceases to be piggul and does not involve kareth, v. Zeb. 28b. Hence the only service in which it can definitely be fixed as piggul without possibility of revocation is sprinkling, because that is the last service. That is regarded as a stringency of sprinkling.
- (22) I.e., on the contrary it may imply that even if a single person of those who are registered for the sacrifice is uncircumcised, it is disqualified.
- (23) For on the present exegesis there is no verse to intimate a distinction.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 62a

differ in this verse: And it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him:¹ 'for him', but not for his companion.² Rabbah holds, His companion must be like himself: just as he is capable of atonement, so must his companion be capable of atonement,³ thus excluding this uncircumcised person, who is not capable of atonement.⁴ But R. Hisda holds, This uncircumcised person too, since he is subject to the obligation, he is [also] subject to atonement, since if he wishes he can make himself fit.⁵

Yet does R. Hisda accept [the argument of] 'since'?⁶ Surely it was stated, If one bakes [food] on a Festival for [use on] a weekday. — R. Hisda said: He is flagellated; Rabbah said: He is not flagellated. 'Rabbah said, He is not flagellated': We say, Since if guests visited him, it would be fit for him, [on the Festival itself]. it is fit for him now too.⁷ 'R. Hisda said, He is flagellated': We do not say, 'since'.⁸ As for Rabbah, it is well, [and] he is not self contradictory: here [in the case of circumcision], an action is wanting,⁹ whereas there an action is not wanting.¹⁰ But R. Hisda is self-contradictory?¹¹ — I will tell you: when does R. Hisda reject [the argument of] ‘since’? [where it leads] to [greater] leniency;¹² [but where it results] in stringency, he accepts it.¹³

Mar Zutra son of R. Mari said to Rabina: [The Baraita] teaches: ‘since uncircumcision disqualifies, and uncleanness disqualifies, [then] just as uncleanness, part uncleanness was not made tantamount to entire uncleanness, so uncircumcision, part uncircumcision was not made tantamount to entire uncircumcision. How is this uncleanness meant? Shall we say, it means uncleanness of the person, and what is meant by, ‘part uncleanness was not made tantamount to entire uncleanness’? That if there are four or five unclean persons and four or five clean persons,¹⁴ the unclean do not disqualify [the Paschal lamb] for the clean. But then in the case of uncircumcision too they do not disqualify, for we learned, FOR CIRCUMCISED AND UNCIRCUMCISED . . . IT IS FIT: how then is uncleanness different, that he is certain about it, and how is uncircumcision different, that he is doubtful?¹⁵ Hence it must refer to uncleanness of the flesh, and what is meant by, ‘part uncleanness was not made tantamount to entire uncleanness’? For where one of the limbs becomes unclean, that which becomes unclean we burn, while the others we eat. To what have you [thus] referred it?¹⁶ To uncleanness of the flesh! Then consider the sequel: ‘you judge that which does not apply to all sacrifices by that which does not apply to all sacrifices,¹⁷ hence let not time [dis]prove it, since it applies to all sacrifices’. Now what does ‘uncleanness mean? Shall we say, uncleanness of the flesh, — why does it not apply to all sacrifices?¹⁸ Hence it is obvious that it refers to uncleanness of person, and what does ‘it does not apply to all sacrifices’ mean? For whereas in the case of all [other] sacrifices an uncircumcised person and an unclean person can send their sacrifices,¹⁹ in the case of the Passover offering an uncircumcised person and an unclean person cannot send their Passover offerings. Thus the first clause refers to uncleanness of the flesh, while the second clause refers to uncleanness of the person? — Yes, answered he to him, he argues²⁰ from the designation of uncleanness.²¹

Alternatively, the sequel too refers to the uncleanness of flesh. Then what is [meant by] ‘it does not apply to all sacrifices’? [It means this], for whereas in the case of all [other] sacrifices, whether the fat²² is defiled while the flesh remains [clean], or the flesh is defiled while the fat remains [clean], he [the officiating priest] sprinkles the blood;²³ in the case of the Passover offering, if the fat²² is defiled while the flesh remains [clean], he sprinkles the blood; but if the flesh is defiled while the fat remains [clean], he must not sprinkle the blood.²⁴

To what have you referred it: to uncleanness of the flesh? Then consider the final clause: ‘you judge a thing which was not freed from its general interdict by a thing which was not freed from its general interdict, hence let not uncleanness disprove it, seeing that it was freed from its general interdict.’ In which [case]? Shall we say.

(1) Lev. I, 4. [I.e., by sprinkling, v. supra p. 306, n. 2.]

(2) I.e., if the blood is sprinkled on behalf of a different person, the sacrifice is disqualified.

(3) Only then does this change of name disqualify the sacrifice.

(4) I.e., he is not fit to have the Paschal offering made acceptable on his behalf; cf. loc. cit. Hence the intention that the sprinkling shall be on his behalf does not disqualify it.

(5) By circumcision.

(6) I.e., does he accept the view that since a different state of affairs is possible, we take it into account as though it were already in existence?

(7) Though he has no guests. He is therefore regarded as having baked for the Festival itself.

(8) V. supra 46b.

(9) Viz., circumcision, before he is fit; hence though he is potentially circumcised, we cannot regard him as actually so.

(10) The coming of guests involves no action on his part; hence Rabbah's ruling.

(11) As in the case of baking on a Festival for a weekday.

- (12) If he accepts the argument of 'since' even in the case of circumcision, where an action is wanting, how much the more where no action is wanting!
- (13) Tosaf.: according to this, R. Hisda disqualifies the sacrifice (supra 61a top) only by Rabbinical law, for in Scriptural law this distinction is unacceptable.
- (14) Registered for the same Paschal lamb.
- (15) That the one must be deduced from the other.
- (16) Lit., 'in what (case) have you established it?'
- (17) The reference to uncleanness. V. supra p. 307, n. 2.
- (18) It certainly does.
- (19) To be sacrificed on their behalf, though they cannot partake of them personally.
- (20) Lit., 'he rebuts'.
- (21) I.e., from uncleanness as a cause of disqualification, without particularizing the nature of the uncleanness.
- (22) Which is burnt on the altar.
- (23) And the sacrifice effects its purpose.
- (24) For there must be at least as much as an olive of eatable flesh before its blood may be sprinkled.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 62b

in the case of uncleanness of the flesh; where was it permitted? Hence it obviously refers to uncleanness of the person, and where was it permitted? In the case of a community?¹ Thus the first clause refers to uncleanness of flesh, while the second clause refers to the uncleanness of the person? — Yes: he argues from the designation of uncleanness. Alternatively, the whole refers to uncleanness of the flesh; and [as to the question,] where was it permitted? [It was] in [the case of] the uncleanness of the Paschal lamb. For we learned: The Paschal lamb which comes [if offered] in uncleanness is eaten in uncleanness, for at the very outset it did not come for [aught] except to be eaten.² R. Huna son of R. Joshua raised an objection: If a Paschal lamb has passed its year³ and he [its owner] slaughtered it at its own time⁴ for its own purpose;⁵ and similarly, when a man kills other [sacrifices] as a Passover offering in its [own] time, — R. Eliezer disqualifies [it];⁶ while R. Joshua declares it fit.⁷ Thus the reason [that R. Eliezer disqualifies it] is that it is in its own time, but [if it were slaughtered] at a different time⁸ it is fit; yet why so? Let us say, Since he disqualifies [it]⁹ in its own time, he also disqualifies it at a different time?¹⁰ — Said R. Papa. There it is different, because Scripture saith, Then ye shall say, The sacrifice of the Lord's passover it is:¹¹ let it retain its own nature:¹² neither may it be [slaughtered] in the name of other [sacrifices], nor may others [be slaughtered] in its name; in its time¹³ when it is disqualified [if slaughtered] in the name of others, others are disqualified [if slaughtered] in its name; at a different time, when it is fit [if slaughtered] in the name of others, others are fit [if slaughtered] in its name.

R. Simlai came before R. Johanan [and] requested him, Let the Master teach me the Book of Genealogies.¹⁴ Said he to him, Whence are you? — He replied, From Lod.¹⁵ And where is your dwelling? In Nehardea.¹⁶ Said he to him, We do not discuss it¹⁷ either with the Lodians or with the Nehardeans, and how much more so with you, who are from Lod and live in Nehardea!¹⁸ But he urged¹⁹ him, and he consented, Let us learn it in three months, he proposed. [Thereupon] he took a clod and threw it at him, saying, If Beruriah, wife of R. Meir [and] daughter of R. Hanina b. Teradion, who studied three hundred laws from three hundred teachers in [one] day, could nevertheless not do her duty²⁰ in three years, yet you propose [to do it] in three months!

As he was going he said to him, Master, What is the difference between [a Passover sacrifice which is offered both] for its own purpose and for a different purpose, and [one that is offered both] for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it?²¹ — Since you are a scholar, he answered him, come and I will tell you. [When it is killed] for its own purpose and for another purpose, its disqualification is in [respect of] itself;²² [when he kills it] for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, its disqualification is not in [respect of] itself; [when it is] for its own purpose and for another purpose, it is impossible to distinguish its prohibition;²³ [when it is] for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, it is possible to distinguish its interdict.²⁴ [Sacrificing] for its own purpose and for another purpose applies to the four services;²⁵ for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, does not apply to the four services.²⁶ [The disqualification of sacrificing] for its own purpose and for another purpose applies to the community as to an individual;²⁷ for those who can eat it and for those who cannot eat it, does not apply to the community as to an individual.²⁸ R. Ashi said: [That] its disqualification is intrinsic and [that] it is impossible to distinguish its prohibition are [one and] the same thing. For why does he say [that]²⁹ its disqualification is intrinsic? Because it is impossible to distinguish its prohibition.

Rami the son of Rab Judah said: Since the day that the Book of Genealogies was hidden,³⁰ the strength of the Sages has been impaired and the light of their eyes has been dimmed.³¹ Mar Zutra said, Between 'Azel' and 'Azal' they were laden with four hundred camels of exegetical interpretations!³²

It was taught: Others³³ say, If he put the circumcised before the uncircumcised,³⁴ it is fit; the uncircumcised before the circumcised, it is disqualified. Wherein does [the case where he put] circumcised before uncircumcised differ, that it is fit, — because we require [them to be] all uncircumcised.³⁵ then [where he put] the uncircumcised before the circumcised too, we require all [to be] uncircumcised, which is absent?

(1) V. supra 61b, p. 307, n. 5.

(2) V. infra 76a.

(3) It became a year old on the first of Nisan, and was then set aside for the Passover sacrifice. Since a year is the extreme limit for such (v. Ex. XII, 5: a male of the first year), it automatically stands to be a peace-offering, being unfit for its original purpose.

(4) I.e., on the eve of Passover.

(5) Sc. as a Passover offering. Thus he killed a peace-offering as a Passover sacrifice.

(6) He infers this a minori: if an animal set aside for the Passover offering is disqualified if slaughtered in its time (on the eve of Passover) as a peace-offering, though if left until after Passover it must be offered as such; then how much the more is a peace-offering disqualified if killed on the eve of Passover as a Passover offering, seeing that if left over and not brought as a peace-offering at the time appointed for same, it cannot be brought as a Passover offering on Passover eve.

(7) For all sacrifices, except the Passover offering and the sin-offering, if sacrificed for another purpose, are fit. He too argues a minori: if during the rest of the year, when it is disqualified if slaughtered in its own name (Sc. as a Passover sacrifice), yet if others (i.e., peace-offerings) are slaughtered in its name they are fit (in accordance with the general rule stated at the beginning of this note); then in its own time, when it is of course fit if slaughtered in its own name, how much the more are others fit if killed in its name!

(8) Lit., 'not in its time'.

(9) This is the reading in cur. edd. Tosaf.'s reading is preferable: since it is disqualified, etc.

(10) Now that R. Hisda accepts the argument of 'since' where this results in greater stringency.

(11) Ibid. 27.

(12) Lit., 'it is in its own being'. Hu ('it is') is an emphatic assertion that it must always retain its own peculiar nature, as explained in the text.

(13) Sc. the eve of Passover.

(14) A commentary on Chronicles, presumably so called because of the many genealogical lists it contains.

(15) Lydda in southern Palestine. [The original home of R. Simlai, v. Hyman, Toledo, p. 1151.]

(16) The famous academy town on the Euphrates in Babylonia. It is fully discussed in Obermeyer, Landshaft, pp. 244ff.

(17) So. cur. edd. Var. lec.: we do not teach it.

(18) Probably he was simply putting him off.

(19) Lit., 'compelled'.

(20) I.e., study it adequately.

- (21) Why is it disqualified in the first case but fit in the second?
- (22) The illegitimate intention is in respect of the sacrifice itself.
- (23) I.e., you cannot say this portion of the animal was sacrificed for its own purpose, and that portion for another purpose.
- (24) It is possible to allocate separately the share for those who cannot eat it.
- (25) V. Mishnah 58b.
- (26) An intention with respect to the eaters expressed or conceived at the sprinkling has no effect, v. supra p. 306, n. 1.
- (27) I.e., both to private and to public sacrifices.
- (28) Intention in respect to eaters has effect only in the case of the Passover sacrifice, which is a private one, and in no others.
- (29) [MS.M.: 'For why is?'].
- (30) This probably means either suppressed or forgotten; perhaps destroyed.
- (31) Rashi: it contained the reasons for many Scriptural laws which have been forgotten.
- (32) I.e., on the passage commencing with 'And Azel had six sons' (I Chron. VIII, 38) and ending with 'these were the sons of Azel' (Ibid. IX, 44) there were such an enormous number of different interpretations! This too, of course, is not to be understood literally.
- (33) 'Others' frequently refers to R. Meir, v. Hor. 13b, and does refer to him here, as is evident from the text infra.
- (34) I.e., if he first intended it for the former and then for the latter.
- (35) In order to disqualify the sacrifice.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 63a

Shall we [then] say that the 'others' hold, Slaughtering does not count save at the end, and [this is] in accordance with Raba, who said, There is still the controversy. Therefore if he put the circumcised before the uncircumcised, it operates in respect of the circumcised,¹ but it does not operate in respect of the uncircumcised; while if he put the uncircumcised before the circumcised, it operates in respect of the uncircumcised, but it does not operate in respect of the circumcised?² — Said Rabbah, Not so: in truth the 'others' hold [that] slaughtering counts from beginning to end, but the case we discuss here is this: e.g., where he mentally determined [it] for both of them, [i.e.,] both for circumcised and for uncircumcised, and he verbally expressed³ [his intention] for uncircumcised, but he had no time to say, 'for the circumcised' before the slaughtering was completed with [the expressed intention of] the uncircumcised [alone], and they differ in this: R. Meir holds [that] we do not require his mouth and his heart [to be] the same [in intention];⁴ while the Rabbis hold, We require his mouth and his heart [to be] the same.⁵

Yet does R. Meir hold that we do not require his mouth and at the same service or at different services, because the first statement only is regarded. But the Rabbis maintain that his last words too count, so that if both are expressed at the same service there is a mixing of intentions, and it does not become piggul, for a sacrifice becomes piggul only when the blood has otherwise been properly sprinkled. This proves that the view that the first statement only is regarded is maintained even in respect of halves, for the sacrifice is large enough to permit us to assume that each wrongful intention was expressed with respect to a different part thereof, and yet R. Judah disagrees. To this Abaye answered, Do not think that the slaughtering counts only when it is completed, so that the two intentions come together at the same moment. On the contrary, the slaughtering counts from beginning to end, and in the passage quoted he cut one organ of the animal with the intention of eating it after time, and the second organ with the intention of eating it without the permitted area, R. Meir holding that you can make an animal piggul even at one organ only. (Ritual slaughtering — shechitah — consists of cutting across the two organs of the throat, viz, the windpipe and the gullet.) This proves that Raba, who raised this objection, holds that in the views of R. Meir and R. Judah slaughtering counts only at the end. Hence the present passage too can be explained on that basis too. Thus: he must express his intention for whom he is slaughtering the Passover sacrifice at the end of the slaughtering, and at that moment there is insufficient time to mention both, and so only the first expression is regarded, the second being entirely disregarded. Therefore if he first mentions the circumcised, it is fit; while if he first mentions the uncircumcised, it is unfit. his heart [to be] the same, but the following contradicts it: He who intended saying '[Let this be] terumah,' but he said 'tith' [instead], [or, 'let this be] tith,' and he said 'terumah,' or, '[I swear] that I will not enter this house,' but he said, 'that [house],' or, '[I vow] that I will not benefit from this [person],' but he said 'from that [person],' he has said nothing,⁶ unless his mouth and his heart are alike?⁷ — Rather, said Abaye, The first clause means where he stated, '[I cut] the first organ for the circumcised and the second organ for the uncircumcised too,' so that at the second organ also circumcised too are included.⁸ [But] the second clause means where he stated '[I cut] the first organ for uncircumcised, the second organ for circumcised' so that at the first organ circumcised are not included. Now R. Meir is consistent with his opinion, for he maintained, You can render [a sacrifice] piggul at half of that which makes it permitted; while the Rabbis⁹ are consistent with their view, for they maintain, You cannot render [a sacrifice] piggul at half of that which makes it permitted.¹⁰

MISHNAH. HE WHO SLAUGHTERS THE PASSOVER OFFERING WITH LEAVEN [IN HIS POSSESSION]¹¹ VIOLATES A NEGATIVE COMMAND.¹² R. JUDAH SAID: [ALSO] THE [EVENING] TAMID TOO.¹³ R. SIMEON SAID: [IF HE SLAUGHTERS] THE PASSOVER OFFERING [WITH LEAVEN] ON THE FOURTEENTH FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, HE IS LIABLE [TO PUNISHMENT]; [IF] FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE, HE IS EXEMPT.¹⁴ BUT [FOR] ALL OTHER SACRIFICES,¹⁵ WHETHER SLAUGHTERED FOR THEIR OWN PURPOSE OR FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE, HE IS EXEMPT. [BUT IF HE SLAUGHTERS THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE WITH LEAVEN] ON THE FESTIVAL, IF FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, HE IS EXEMPT; IF FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE, HE IS LIABLE;¹⁶ BUT [FOR] ALL OTHER SACRIFICES [SLAUGHTERED ON THE FESTIVAL WITH LEAVEN], WHETHER FOR THEIR OWN PURPOSE OR FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE, HE IS LIABLE,¹⁷ EXCEPT [IN THE CASE OR] A SIN-OFFERING WHICH HE SLAUGHTERED FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE.¹⁸

GEMARA. R. Simeon b. Lakish said: He is never liable unless there is leaven belonging to him who slaughters or to him who sprinkles [the blood]

(1) Lit., 'the circumcised fall' (i.e., are counted). — The slaughtering counts as having been performed for the circumcised.

(2) When a man would substitute an animal for another consecrated animal, both are holy (Lev. XXVII, 33), the former bearing the same holiness as that of the latter, and it must be offered as the same sacrifice. Now if he declares, 'This animal be a substitute for a burnt-offering', 'This (the same) animal be a substitute for a peace-offering', R. Meir rules that it is a substitute for the first only, for only his first words are regarded. R. Jose holds that his last words too are regarded, and therefore it is a substitute for both; hence it must be redeemed, and the redemption money expended on two animals, one for a burnt-offering and another for a peace-offering. Now a problem is raised in Zeb. 30a: What if he declares, 'Half of this be a substitute for a burnt-offering, and half be a substitute for a peace-offering'; does R. Meir agree with R. Jose or not? Is R. Meir's reason in the former case because he regards the second statement as a change of mind, which is invalid, since by his first statement it has already become a burnt-offering? But that is obviously inapplicable to the case in question, hence R. Meir will agree. Or perhaps here too R. Meir holds that since the sanctity of the burnt-offering first takes possession of it, as it were, that of the peace-offering cannot operate? Abaye maintains that R. Meir does agree in this case, but Raba holds that there is still the controversy. Thereupon Raba raised an objection to Abaye from this: If a man slaughters a sacrifice with the intention of eating as much as an olive without the permitted area and as much as an olive after the permitted time, R. Judah disagrees with the Rabbis and rules as R. Meir, that only his first statement is counted, hence it is not piggul, which applies to the second only, and kareth is not incurred for eating it. For R. Judah states this as a general rule: If the intention of an illegitimate time is expressed before the intention of an illegitimate place, it is piggul, and kareth is incurred for eating it, whether these two intentions are both expressed

- (3) Lit., 'uttered with his mouth'.
- (4) I.e., we merely regard the explicit intention. Hence since he mentioned the uncircumcised only, the sacrifice is unfit.
- (5) I.e., both are regarded. Therefore the Mishnah supra 61a states that if it is sacrificed for both, whatever the order, it is fit.
- (6) I.e., his words are invalid.
- (7) This is an anonymous Mishnah, and it is a general rule that such reflects R. Meir's view; Sanh. 86a.
- (8) Hence it is fit.
- (9) I.e., the view of the Mishnah supra 61a.
- (10) 'That which makes it permitted' (the matir) here is the slaughtering; half of that etc., is the cutting of one organ. R. Meir holds that the intention expressed at the cutting of the first organ determines the status of the sacrifice. Hence, if this intention was to eat it after time, it is piggul; while in the present case, since it was for the uncircumcised, it is disqualified. The Rabbis, however, hold that an illegitimate intention at the first organ cannot render it piggul, and in the same way an intention for uncircumcised at the first organ does not disqualify it.
- (11) I.e., before the leaven has been destroyed. The phraseology is Biblical: Thou shalt not slaughter (E.V. 'offer') the blood of My sacrifice with leavened bread (Ex. XXXIV, 25).
- (12) V. preceding note.
- (13) I.e., if he kills the evening tamid of the fourteenth before the leaven is destroyed, he violates a negative command.
- (14) In the former case the sacrifice is fit, hence the shechitah is duly regarded as shechitah. But in the latter the sacrifice is unfit; hence R. Simeon does not regard the shechitah as shechitah, and the verse quoted on p. 317, n. 6. does not apply to it.
- (15) Offered on Passover eve with leaven in his possession.
- (16) For a Passover offering killed at a time other than its own, viz., the fourteenth, is disqualified if sacrificed as a Passover offering, but fit if sacrificed as a peace-offering.
- (17) Because they are fit, v. Zeb. 2a.
- (18) Because it is disqualified, ibid.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 63b

or to one of the members of the company,¹ and providing that it [the leaven] is with him in the Temple Court. R. Johanan said: Even if it is not with him in the Temple Court.

Wherein do they differ? Shall we say that they differ in whether 'with' ['al] means 'near,'² R. Simeon b. Lakish holding, 'with' means near, while R. Johanan holds, We do not require 'with' [in the sense of] near,' — but surely they have differed in this once [already]?³ For we learned: If a man slaughters the thankoffering within [the Temple Court], while its bread is without the wall, the bread is not sanctified.⁴ What does 'without the wall' mean? R. Johanan said, Without the wall of Beth Pagi;⁵ but [if] without the wall of the Temple Court, it is sanctified, and we do not require 'with' [in the sense of] near. R. Simeon b. Lakish said: Even if without the wall of the Temple Court, it is not sanctified; which proves that we require 'with' [in the sense of] near! — Rather, they differ over a doubtful warning.⁶ But in this too they have already differed once? For it was stated: [If a man declares, 'I take] an oath that I will eat this loaf to-day,' and the day passed and he did not eat it, — R. Johanan and R. Simeon b. Lakish both maintain, He is not flagellated. R. Johanan said, He is not flagellated, because it is a negative injunction not involving an action,⁷ and every negative command not involving an action, we do not flagellate for it; but a doubtful warning counts⁸ as a warning.⁹ While R. Simeon b. Lakish said, He is not flagellated, because it is a doubtful warning, and a doubtful warning does not count as a warning; but as for a negative command not involving an action, we flagellate for it!

I will tell you: After all they differ in whether 'with' implies near, yet it is necessary.¹⁰ For if they differed on the subject of leaven [alone], I would say: It is only there that R. Johanan maintains that we do not require 'with' [in the sense of] near, because it is a prohibited article, and wherever it is, it is; but in the matter of sanctifying the bread, it is not sanctified save within [the Temple Court], [hence] I would assume [that] he agrees with R. Simeon b. Lakish, that if it is inside it is sanctified, and if not, it is not sanctified, by analogy with service vessels.¹¹ Thus this [latter case] is necessary. And if we were informed [of this] in the matter of sanctifying the bread, I would say: in this R. Simeon b. Lakish maintains that we require ‘with’ [in the sense of] near, so that if it is inside it is sanctified, [and] if not, It is not sanctified. But in the matter of leaven [I would say that] he agrees with R. Johanan that we do not require ‘with’ [in the sense of] near, because it is a prohibited article, and wherever it is, it is. Hence they are [both] necessary.

R. Oshaia asked R. Ammi: What if he who slaughters has none, but one of the members of the company has [leaven]?¹² — Said he to him, Is it then written, ‘Thou shalt not slaughter [the blood of My sacrifice] with thy leavened bread’? ‘Thou shalt not slaughter [the blood of My sacrifice] with leavened bread’ is written.¹³ If so, he countered, [he is culpable] even if a person at the end of the world [possesses leaven]! — Said he to him, Scripture saith, Thou shalt not slaughter [the blood of My sacrifice with leavened bread]; neither shall [the sacrifice of the feast of the Passover] be left overnight unto the morning: [thus,] ‘Thou shalt not slaughter . . . with leavened bread’ [applies to] those who are subject to ‘it shall not be left overnight’ on its account.¹⁴ R. Papa said: As a corollary, the priest who burns the fat [on the altar] violates a negative command, since he is subject to the general [interdict of] leaving the emurim overnight.¹⁵ It was taught in accordance with R. Papa. He who slaughters the Passover sacrifice with leaven violates a negative command — When is that? When it belongs to him who slaughters or to him who sprinkles [the blood] or to one of the members of the company. If it belonged to someone at the end of the world, he is not tied to him.¹⁶ And whether he slaughters or sprinkles or burns [the fat],¹⁷ he is liable. But he who wrings a bird's neck on the fourteenth¹⁸ does not violate anything.¹⁹ But the following contradicts it: He who slaughters the Passover offering with leaven violates a negative command. R. Judah said: The tamid too.²⁰ Said they to him, They [the Sages] said [thus] of nought except the Passover-offering alone. When is that? When either he who slaughters or he who sprinkles or one of the members of the company possesses [the leaven]. If a person at the end of the world possesses it, he is not tied to him. And whether he slaughters or he sprinkles or he wrings [a bird's neck] or he sprinkles²¹ [the blood of the bird], he is liable. But he who takes the handful of the meal-offering²² does not violate a negative command. He who burns the emurim does not violate a negative command.

(1) Registered for this sacrifice.

(2) In Ex. XXXIV, 25, quoted on p. 317, n. 6.

(3) Why then repeat the controversy here?

(4) The thankoffering was accompanied by forty loaves. These were verbally sanctified before the sacrifice was actually slaughtered, whereupon they acquired a monetary consecration, which means that they might not henceforth be eaten or put to use until the offering is sacrificed; while if they became defiled, they were redeemed and reverted to hullin. The slaughtering of the sacrifice conferred intrinsic (‘bodily’) sanctity upon them; they were more readily disqualified then, and if defiled they had to be burnt. In this connection too ‘with’ (עִם) is written: then he shall offer with the sacrifice of the thankoffering unleavened cakes . . . with (עִם) cakes of leavened bread he shall present his offering (Lev. VII, 12f). — ‘Not sanctified’ means not intrinsically sanctified.

(5) A fortified suburb of Jerusalem (Jast.), which is the uttermost boundary of the town (Rashi). Its exact spot has not been identified, v. Neubauer, Geographie, pp. 247ff.

(6) ‘Flagellation, the punishment for violating a negative command, is imposed only if the offender has been duly warned before he sinned. Now, if the leaven is in the Temple Court, he can be warned with the certainty that his proposed action is forbidden. But if it is not in the Temple Court, we are doubtful, as we do not know whether he has leaven at home, and thus it is a doubtful warning. R. Simeon b. Lakish holds that such is not a valid warning, and flagellation is not thereby incurred; while R. Johanan holds that it is a warning, and when we subsequently learn that he had leaven at home, he is flagellated.

(7) I.e., he violates the injunction, ‘Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain (Ex. XX, 7) by remaining passive, not by a positive act, v. Shebu. 20b.

(8) Lit., ‘its name is’.

- (9) For naturally until the last moment of the day only a doubtful warning can be given, as we do not know that he will permit the day to pass without eating it.
- (10) For them to differ in both cases.
- (11) These sanctify whatever is put into them, but only when they are in the Temple Court (Tosaf.).
- (12) Resh Lakish states it (supra) as an obvious thing, but R. Oshaia was in doubt.
- (13) Ex. XXXIV, 25. Hence he is culpable.
- (14) And that obviously applies to its owners only.
- (15) I.e., if he still has leaven when he burns the fat, even if none of the company has any.
- (16) He has no connection with him, — or, he is not bound to take him into account, — is unaffected thereby.
- (17) This supports R. Papa.
- (18) While he still possesses leaven. The reference is to a bird offered as a sacrifice for a man lacking atonement; as stated supra 59a, it could be brought on the fourteenth after the afternoon tamid, i.e., when it is time for the Passover sacrifice to be slaughtered.
- (19) This is explained anon.
- (20) V. note on Mishnah.
- (21) מִזְבֵּחַ, term used in connection with bird sacrifices, as distinct from קִרְבָּן, which refers to animal sacrifices.
- (22) V. Lev. II, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 64a

Now [the rulings on] wringing are contradictory, [and the rulings on] burning [the fat] are contradictory? — Then according to your reasoning, let that [Baraita] itself present a difficulty to you. For it teaches, ‘They said [this] of nought except the Passover offering alone; and then it teaches, ‘Whether he slaughters or he sprinkles or he wrings [a bird's neck] or he sprinkles [the blood of the bird]?’¹ [Say] rather, both are [according to] R. Simeon; [the rulings on] wringing are not contradictory: here² it refers to the fourteenth,³ while there it⁴ means during the Intermediate Days, and thus both the one and the other are [according to] R. Simeon. [The rulings on] the burning [of fat] too are not contradictory: it is dependent on Tannaim. For some compare burning to slaughtering,⁵ whilst others do not compare [them].

R. JUDAH SAID: THE [EVENING] TAMID TOO etc. What is R. Judah's reason? — He tells you: Scripture saith, [Thou shalt not slaughter the blood of] My sacrifice,⁶ [implying] the sacrifice which is particularly assigned to Me; and which is that? the tamid.

R. SIMEON SAID: [IF HE SLAUGHTERS] THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE [WITH LEAVEN] ON THE FOURTEENTH etc. What is R. Simeon's reason? — Because ‘My sacrifice,’ ‘My sacrifice,’ is written twice:⁷ read it, ‘a sacrifice,’ ‘My sacrifices’.⁸ For what law did the Divine Law divide them from one another and not write ‘My sacrifices’ [in one word]? To intimate: when there is ‘a sacrifice’ [viz., the Paschal lamb], you are not liable on account of ‘My sacrifices’; when there is no ‘sacrifice,’ you are liable for ‘My sacrifices’.

[BUT IF HE KILLS THE PASSOVER OFFERING WITH LEAVEN] ON THE FESTIVAL, IF FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, HE IS EXEMPT etc. The reason is that it is for a different purpose,⁹ but if it is unspecified, he is exempt. [Yet] why? The Passover offering during the rest of the year¹⁰ is a peace-offering!¹¹ Can you then infer from this¹² [that] the Passover offering during the rest of the year requires cancellation?¹³ — Said R. Hiyya b. Gamada: It was thrown out from the mouth of the company¹⁴ and they said: [The circumstances are] e.g., that its owners were unclean by reason of a dead body and relegated to the second Passover,¹⁵ so that while unspecified it [still] stands [to be sacrificed] as a Passover offering.¹⁶

MISHNAH. THE PASSOVER OFFERING IS SLAUGHTERED IN THREE DIVISIONS,¹⁷ FOR IT IS SAID, AND THE WHOLE ASSEMBLY OF THE CONGREGATION OF ISRAEL SHALL

KILL IT:¹⁸ [I.E.,] ‘ASSEMBLY,’ ‘CONGREGATION,’ AND ‘ISRAEL.’¹⁹ THE FIRST DIVISION ENTERED, THE TEMPLE COURT WAS FILLED, THEY CLOSED THE DOORS OF THE TEMPLE COURT, THEY SOUNDED A TEKIAH, A TERUAH, AND A TEKIAH.²⁰ THE PRIESTS STOOD IN ROWS, AND IN THEIR HANDS WERE BASINS²¹ OF SILVER AND BASINS OF GOLD; A ROW WHICH WAS ENTIRELY OF SILVER WAS OF SILVER, AND A ROW WHICH WAS ENTIRELY OF GOLD WAS OF GOLD: THEY WERE NOT MIXED; AND THE BASINS HAD NO [FLAT] BOTTOMS, LEST THEY PUT THEM DOWN AND THE BLOOD BECOME CONGEALED. THE ISRAELITE KILLED [THE LAMB], AND THE PRIEST CAUGHT [THE BLOOD]; HE HANDED IT TO HIS COLLEAGUE AND HIS COLLEAGUE [PASSED IT ON] TO HIS COLLEAGUE; AND HE RECEIVED THE FULL [BASIN] AND GAVE BACK THE EMPTY ONE.²² THE PRIEST NEAREST THE ALTAR SPRINKLED IT ONCE OVER AGAINST THE BASE [OR THE ALTAR].²³ THE FIRST DIVISION [THEN] WENT OUT AND THE SECOND ENTERED; THE SECOND WENT OUT AND THE THIRD ENTERED. AS THE MANNER OF THE FIRST [GROUP], SO WAS THE MANNER OF THE SECOND AND THE THIRD. THEY RECITED THE HALLEL;²⁴ IF THEY FINISHED IT²⁵ THEY REPEATED, AND IF THEY REPEATED [AND WERE NOT FINISHED YET], THEY RECITED IT A THIRD TIME, THOUGH THEY NEVER DID RECITE IT A THIRD TIME. R. JUDAH SAID: THE THIRD DIVISION NEVER REACHED²⁶ ‘I LOVE THAT THE LORD SHOULD HEAR’ [ETC.],²⁷ BECAUSE THE PEOPLE FOR IT WERE FEW. AS WAS DONE ON WEEK-DAYS SO WAS DONE ON THE SABBATH, SAVE THAT THE PRIESTS SWILLED THE TEMPLE COURT, [BUT] WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE SAGES. R. JUDAH SAID: HE [A PRIEST] USED TO FILL A GOBLET WITH THE MIXED BLOOD²⁸ [AND] HE SPRINKLED IT ONCE ON THE ALTAR; BUT THE SAGES DID NOT AGREE WITH HIM.

HOW DID THEY HANG UP [THE SACRIFICES] AND FLAY [THEM]? THERE WERE IRON HOOKS FIXED IN THE WALLS AND IN THE PILLARS, ON WHICH THEY SUSPENDED [THE SACRIFICES] AND FLAYED [THEM]. IF ANY ONE HAD NO PLACE TO SUSPEND AND FLAY, THERE WERE THERE THIN SMOOTH STAVES WHICH HE PLACED ON HIS SHOULDER AND ON HIS NEIGHBOUR'S SHOULDER, AND SO SUSPENDED [THE ANIMAL] AND FLAYED [IT]. R. ELIEZER SAID: WHEN THE FOURTEENTH

(1) The last two refer to birds, hence not to the Passover offering, v. p. 321, n. 7.

(2) In the first Baraitha.

(3) As is distinctly stated. Then he is exempt, culpability being incurred on that day only for the Paschal lamb.

(4) In the second Baraitha.

(5) Actually only slaughtering which includes sprinkling is mentioned in Ex. XXXIV, 25. (Thou shalt not slaughter the blood of etc.), but some maintain that burning is the same.

(6) Ex. XXIII, 18; XXXIV, 25.

(7) In Ex. XXIII, 18 and XXXIV, 25.

(8) I.e., by transferring the yod (י) from one זבחי to the other, we have זבחי, זבחי, a ‘sacrifice’ referring to the Paschal lamb, and זבחי, ‘My sacrifices’, plural, referring to all others.

(9) I.e., he explicitly states thus.

(10) I.e., at any time other than the eve of Passover.

(11) Automatically. Why then is an explicit declaration required.

(12) Viz., that we do nevertheless require this explicit statement.

(13) Lit., ‘uprooting’, ‘eradicating’. I.e., it does not become a peace-offering automatically, but its character as a Passover offering must be explicitly cancelled.

(14) I.e., all the scholars unanimously declared.

(15) V. Num. IX, 10ff.

(16) In the following month; therefore it is not a peace-offering automatically. But in other cases it is, and an explicit declaration is then unnecessary.

(17) Irrespective of the number sacrificing.

- (18) Ex. XII, 6.
 (19) Each denotes a separate division.
 (20) Teki'ah is a long, straight blast on the shofar (ram's horn); teru'ah is a series of three short consecutive blasts.
 (21) To receive the blood.
 (22) After the blood had been sprinkled. Thus it was worked on the 'endless-chain' system.
 (23) I.e., on the side which has a projecting base, viz., the north and west sides of the altar, v. Mid. III, 1.
 (24) Lit., 'praise', a liturgical passage at present consisting of Ps. CXIII-CXVIII. This was recited by each group.
 (25) Before they finished sacrificing.
 (26) Lit., 'from the days of the third party they did not reach'.
 (27) Ps. CXVI, 1 seq.
 (28) The blood of many sacrifices which ran together.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 64b

FELL ON THE SABBATH, HE PLACED HIS HAND ON HIS NEIGHBOUR'S SHOULDER AND HIS NEIGHBOUR'S HAND ON HIS SHOULDER, AND HE [THUS] SUSPENDED [THE SACRIFICE] AND FLAYED [IT].¹ THEN HE TORE IT AND TOOK OUT ITS EMURIM, PLACED THEM IN A TRAY AND BURNT THEM ON THE ALTAR.

THE FIRST DIVISION WENT OUT AND SAT DOWN ON THE TEMPLE MOUNT,² THE SECOND [SAT] IN THE HEL,³ WHILE THE THIRD REMAINED IN ITS PLACE. WHEN IT GREW DARK THEY WENT OUT AND ROASTED THEIR PASCHAL LAMBS.

GEMARA. R. Isaac said: The Passover offering was not slaughtered except in three divisions each consisting of thirty men. What is the reason? 'Assembly' 'congregation,' and 'Israel' [are prescribed, and] we are doubtful whether [that means] at the same time or consecutively.⁴ Therefore we require three divisions each consisting of thirty men, so that if [it means] at the same time, they are there; and if consecutively, they are there. Hence fifty [in all] too are sufficient, thirty entering and preparing [their sacrifices], then ten enter and ten leave, [and another] ten enter and [another] ten leave.

THE FIRST DIVISION ENTERED etc. It was stated, Abaye said: We learned, 'They [the doors] locked themselves';⁵ Raba said, We learned: THEY LOCKED. Wherein do they differ? — They differ in respect of relying on a miracle. 'Abaye said, We learned, They locked themselves'; as many as entered, entered, and we rely on a miracle.⁶ Raba said, We learned, THEY LOCKED, and we do not rely on a miracle. And as to what we learned, R. Judah said: Heaven forbid that Akabia b. Mehalallel was banned! for the wisdom and fear of sin to Akabia b. Mehalallel,⁷ — Abaye explains Temple Court was never closed upon any man in Israel equal in it according to his view, [while] Raba explains it according to his view. Abaye explains it according to his view: there was none in the Temple Court when it closed itself upon every man in Israel like Akabia b. Mehalallel in wisdom and fear of sin. Raba explains it according to his view: There was none in the Temple Court when they closed it on all Israel like Akabia b. Mehalallel in wisdom and the fear of sin.

Our Rabbis taught: No man was ever crushed in the Temple Court⁸ except on one Passover in the days of Hillel, when an old man was crushed, and they called it 'The Passover of the crushed'.

Our Rabbis taught: King Agrippa once wished to cast his eyes on the hosts of Israel.⁹ Said he to the High Priest, Cast your eyes upon the Passover sacrifices. He [thereupon] took a kidney from each, and six-hundred-thousand pairs of kidneys were found there, twice as many as those who departed from Egypt, excluding those who were unclean and those who were on a distant journey; and there was not a single Paschal lamb for which more than ten people had not registered; and they called it, 'The Passover of the dense throngs.'

‘He took a kidney’! but it required burning [on the altar]? He burned them subsequently.¹⁰ But it is written, And [Aaron's sons] shall burn it etc.,¹¹ [which intimates] that he must not mix the fat [portions] of one [sacrifice] with [that of] another? — He subsequently burned them each separately. But it was taught: And [the priest] shall burn then,¹² [this teaches] that all of it must be [burnt] simultaneously.¹³ But it was a mere seizure, i.e., he took it from them until they gave him something else.¹⁴

THE PRIESTS STOOD IN ROWS etc. What is the reason? Shall we say, lest they take [a basin] of gold and return [a basin] of silver;¹⁵ then here too,¹⁶ perhaps they might take [a basin] of two hundred [measures] capacity and return one of one hundred? Rather, [the reason is] that it is more becoming thus.¹⁷

AND THE BASINS DID NOT HAVE [FLAT] BOTTOMS etc. Our Rabbis taught: None of the basins in the Temple had [flat] bottoms, except the basins of the frankincense for the shewbread, lest they put them down and they break up the bread.¹⁸

AN ISRAELITE KILLED AND THE PRIEST CAUGHT [THE BLOOD] etc. Is then an Israelite indispensable?¹⁹ — He [the Tanna] informs us that very fact, viz., that the shechitah is valid [when done] by a lay Israelite. AND THE PRIEST CAUGHT [THE BLOOD] informs us this: from the receiving of the blood and onwards it is a priestly duty.

HE HANDED IT TO HIS COLLEAGUE. You can infer from this that carrying without moving the feet is carrying!²⁰ [No:] perhaps he moved slightly [too]. Then [in that case] what does he inform us? — He informs us this: In the multitude of people is the king's glory.²¹ HE RECEIVED THE FULL [BASIN] AND GAVE BACK THE EMPTY ONE etc. But not the reverse.²² This supports R. Simeon b. Lakish. For R. Simeon b. Lakish said: You must not postpone the precepts.²³

THE PRIEST NEAREST THE ALTAR etc. Which Tanna [holds] that the Passover offering requires sprinkling?²⁴ Said R. Hisda, it is R. Jose the Galilean. For it was taught, R. Jose the Galilean said: Thou shalt sprinkle their blood against the altar, and thou shalt burn their fat.²⁵ ‘its blood’ is not said, but ‘their blood’; ‘its fat’ is not said, but ‘their fat’.²⁶ This teaches concerning the firstling, the tithe [of animals] and the Passover offering, that they require the presenting of blood and emurim at the altar.²⁷ How do we know that they require [sprinkling against] the base? — Said R. Eleazar: The meaning of ‘sprinkling’ is deduced from, a burnt-offering.²⁸ Here it is written, thou shalt sprinkle their blood against the altar, while there it is written, And Aaron's sons, the priests, shall sprinkle its blood against the altar round about:²⁹ just as the burnt-offering requires [sprinkling against] the base, so does the Passover offering too require [sprinkling against] the base.

(1) But the staves might not be used on that day.

(2) If the fourteenth fell on the Sabbath, as they could not carry their sacrifices home and had to wait for the evening.

(3) A place within the fortification of the Temple (Jast.); v. Mid. I, 5.

(4) And each expression denotes a minimum of ten.

(5) Or, were locked-miraculously, without human agency.

(6) That the doors should shut themselves when sufficient had entered.

(7) V. ‘Ed. V, 6 for the whole discussion. ‘Was never closed’ — on the eve of Passover, at the sacrificing of the Paschal lambs.

(8) In spite of the enormous crowds that thronged it.

(9) I.e., to take a census of the Jewish people. This was an unpopular proceeding, as it was regarded as of unfortunate omen; cf. I Chron. XXI. In addition, a census was looked upon with suspicion as being the possible precursor of fresh levies and taxation, and the decision of Quirinius, the governor of Syria, to take a census in Judea (c. 6-7 C.E.) nearly precipitated a revolt; v. Graetz. History of the Jews (Eng. translation) II, ch. V. pp. 129 seq. According to Graetz (op. cit.

p. 252) the present census was undertaken by Agrippa II in the year 66 C.E. as a hint to the Roman powers not to underrate the strength of the Jewish people, and therefore avoid driving them too far by the cruelty and greed of the Procurator, at that time Gessius Florus. Graetz assumes that an extra large number flocked to Jerusalem on that occasion, and it is then that the old man was suffocated. This however does not agree with the statement that the man was crushed in the days of Hillel, which is a far earlier date, Hillel having flourished or commenced his Patriarchate one hundred years before the destruction of the Temple, i.e., 30 B.C.E.

(10) After the event.

(11) Lev. III, 5.

(12) Lev. III, 16.

(13) All the parts of the sacrifice which are burnt on the altar (called emurim) must be burnt at the same time. Here, however, the kidneys would be burnt separately.

(14) The unpopularity of the census (v. p. 326, n. 2) may have necessitated this procedure.

(15) Which is 'descending in sanctity', and this must be avoided.

(16) I.e., even with the present arrangements.

(17) The general beauty and dignity of the proceedings are thereby enhanced.

(18) These vessels were kept near the shewbread, and if they were not provided with a base to stand on they might fall against the rows of shewbread and break up their formation.

(19) Lit., 'is it not enough that it should not be an Israelite?' — Surely a priest too could kill it!

(20) Carrying the blood to be sprinkled was one of the four services (v. supra 59b Mishnah), and there is a controversy in Zeb. 14b whether the priest actually had to walk a little for this or not. From the present passage we see that this was unnecessary.

(21) Prov. XIV, 28.

(22) It had to be done in this order.

(23) Lit., 'one must not pass by precepts', but must perform them immediately they come to hand. Thus when the full basin is held out, the next priest must accept it immediately, before returning the empty one, as the reception of the full basin on its way to the sprinkling is a religious service.

(24) From the distance, and not just pouring out; v. infra 121a.

(25) Num. XVIII, 17.

(26) Though the passage treats of one sacrifice only, viz., the firstling. The plural possessive suffix indicates that other sacrifices too are included in this law.

(27) These are the only sacrifices in connection with which it is not mentioned elsewhere, hence the plural is applied to them. Furthermore, Scripture states 'thou shalt sprinkle' (tizrok), not 'thou shalt pour out' (tishpok).

(28) Lit., "'sprinkling", "sprinkling" is deduced from a burnt-offering'.

(29) Lev. I, 11.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 65a

And how do we know it of the burnt-offering itself? — Scripture saith, at the base of the altar of the burnt-offering:¹ this proves that the burnt-offering requires [sprinkling at] the base.²

THE FIRST DIVISION WENT OUT etc. A Tanna taught: It [the third division] was called the slothful division.³ But It was impossible otherwise? What should they have done! — Even so, they should have hurried themselves, as it was taught: Rabbi said: The world cannot exist without a perfume maker and without a tanner: happy is he whose craft is [that of] a perfume maker, [and] woe to him whose craft is [that of] a tanner. Nor can the world exist without males and females: happy is he whose children are males, [and] woe to him whose children are females.⁴

AS HE DID ON WEEK-DAYS etc. Without whose consent?⁵ — Said R. Hisda, Without the consent of R. Eliezer; for if [the ruling of] the Rabbis [is regarded], surely they maintain that it is a shebuth,⁶ and a shebuth is not [interdicted] in the Temple. What is this [allusion]? — For it was taught: Whether he milks, sets milk [for curdling],⁷ or makes cheese, [the standard for culpability is] as much as a dried fig. He who sweeps [the floor], lays [the dust by sprinkling water], and removes loaves of honey, [if he does this] unwittingly on the Sabbath, he is liable to a sin-offering; if he does it deliberately on a Festival, he is flagellated with forty [lashes]: this is R. Eliezer's view. But the Sages maintain: In both cases it is [forbidden] only as a shebuth.⁸ R. Ashi said: You may even say, [it means] without the consent of the Sages, this agreeing with R. Nathan. For it was taught, R. Nathan said: A shebuth that is necessary they permitted [in the Temple]; [but] a shebuth which is not necessary they did not permit.

R. JUDAH SAID: HE USED TO FILL A GOBLET etc. It was taught, R. Judah said: He used to fill goblet with the mingled blood,⁹ so that should the blood of one of them be spilled, it is found that this renders it fit. Said they to R. Judah, But surely it [this mingled blood] had not been received in a basin? How do they know?¹⁰ Rather, they said thus to him: Perhaps it was not caught in a vessel?¹¹ I too, he answered them, spoke only of that which was received in a vessel. How does he know?¹² The priests are careful. If they are careful, why was it spilled? — Because of the speed with which they work,¹³ it is spilled.

But the draining blood¹⁴ is mixed with it?¹⁵ — R. Judah is consistent with his view, for he maintained, The draining blood is [considered] proper blood. For it was taught: The draining blood is subject to a 'warning';¹⁶ R. Judah said: It is subject to kareth.¹⁷ But surely R. Eleazar said, R. Judah agrees in respect to atonement, that it does not make atonement, because it is said, for it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of life:¹⁸

(1) Lev. IV, 7.

(2) For in fact the altar was not used for the burnt-offering exclusively, the very sentence quoted treating of a sin-offering. Hence the verse must mean, at the base of the altar, as is done with the burnt-offering.

(3) For remaining to the last.

(4) This was not said in a spirit of contempt for the female sex, but in the realization of the anxieties caused by daughters; v. Sanh. 100b, (Sonc. ed.) p. p. 681).

(5) I.e., on whose view is this wrong?

(6) V. Glos.

(7) Rashi, Jast.: beats milk into a pulp.

(8) Which is only a Rabbinical prohibition, and involves neither a sin-offering nor flagellation, v. Shab. 95a.

(9) Lit., 'the blood of those which were mixed'.

(10) This is an interjection: how do the Rabbis, who raise this objection, know that it was not caught in a vessel?

(11) But poured straight from the animal's throat on to the ground. Rashi: in that case sprinkling is of no avail. Tosaf.: sprinkling, if already performed, is efficacious, but such blood must not be taken up to the altar in the first place.

(12) That it was caught in a vessel? For R. Judah prescribed this merely because the blood might have been spilled; then how can it be remedied with blood about which there is a doubt?

(13) Zariz denotes both careful and speedy; they hurried to catch the blood, present it at the altar, and sprinkle it.

(14) Tamzith denotes the last blood which slowly drains off the animal, contrad. to the lifeblood, which gushes forth in a stream.

(15) Whereas the 'life-blood' is required for sprinkling.

(16) This is a technical designation for a negative injunction whose violation is punished by lashes. But it involves no kareth, as does the consuming of the life-blood (v. Lev. XVII, 10f).

(17) Just like life-blood. Hence it is also the same in respect to sprinkling.

(18) Ibid.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 65b

blood wherewith life departs, makes atonement; and blood wherewith life does not depart, does not make atonement? — Rather [reply],¹ R. Judah is consistent with his view, for he maintained: Blood cannot nullify [other] blood.²

It was taught, R. Judah said to the Sages: On your view, why did they stop up [the holes in] the Temple Court?³ Said they to him: It is praiseworthy for the sons of Aaron [the priests] to walk in blood up to their ankles. But it interposed?⁴ — It is moist [liquid] and does not interpose. As it was taught: Blood, ink, honey and milk, if dry, interpose; if moist, they do not interpose.⁵ But their garments become [blood-] stained, whereas It was taught: If his garments were soiled and he performed the service, his service is unfit? And should you answer that they raised their garments.⁶ surely it was taught: [And the priest shall put out] his linen measure:⁷ [that means] that it must not be [too] short nor too long?⁸ — [They could raise them] at the carrying of the limbs to the [Altar] ascent, which was not a service. Was it not? But since it required the priesthood, it was a service! For it was taught, And the priest shall offer the whole, [and burn it] on the altar:⁹ this refers to the carrying of the limbs to the [altar] ascent. — Rather [they could raise them] at the carrying of the wood to the [altar] pile, which was not a service. Nevertheless, how could they walk when carrying the limbs to the [altar] ascent and when carrying the blood? They walked on balconies.¹⁰

HOW DID THEY HANG UP [THE SACRIFICES] AND FLAY [THEM] etc. THEN HE TORE IT OPEN AND TOOK OUT ITS EMURIM, PLACED THEM ON A TRAY AND BURNT THEM [ON THE ALTAR]. Did he then burn them himself?¹¹ Say, To burn them on the altar.

THE FIRST DIVISION WENT OUT etc. A Tanna taught: Each one placed his paschal lamb in its hide and slung it behind him. Said R. 'Ilish: In Arab-like fashion.¹²

CHAPTER VI

MISHNAH. THESE THINGS IN [CONNECTION WITH] THE PASSOVER OFFERING OVERRIDE THE SABBATH: ITS SHECHITAH AND THE SPRINKLING OF ITS BLOOD AND THE CLEANSING OF ITS BOWELS AND THE BURNING OF ITS FAT. BUT ITS ROASTING AND THE WASHING OF ITS BOWELS DO NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH. ITS CARRYING¹³ AND BRINGING IT FROM WITHOUT THE TEHUM¹⁴ AND THE CUTTING OFF OF ITS WART DO NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH. R. ELIEZER SAID: THEY DO OVERRIDE [THE SABBATH]. SAID R. ELIEZER, DOES IT NOT FOLLOW A FORTIORI: IF SHECHITAH, WHICH IS [USUALLY FORBIDDEN] AS A LABOUR, OVERRIDES THE SABBATH, SHALL NOT THESE, WHICH ARE [ONLY FORBIDDEN] AS A SHEBUTH, OVERRIDE THE SABBATH?¹⁵ R. JOSHUA ANSWERED HIM, LET FESTIVAL[S] REBUT¹⁶ IT, WHEREIN THEY PERMITTED LABOUR AND FORBADE A SHEBUTH.¹⁷ SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM, WHAT IS THIS, JOSHUA, WHAT PROOF IS A VOLUNTARY ACT IN RESPECT OF A PRECEPT! R. AKIBA ANSWERED AND SAID, LET HAZA'AH¹⁸ PROVE IT, WHICH IS [PERFORMED] BECAUSE IT IS A PRECEPT AND IS [NORMALLY FORBIDDEN ONLY] AS A SHEBUTH, YET IT DOES NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH;¹⁹ SO YOU TOO, DO NOT WONDER AT THESE, THAT THOUGH THEY ARE [REQUIRED] ON ACCOUNT OF THE PRECEPT AND ARE [ONLY FORBIDDEN] AS A SHEBUTH, YET THEY DO NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH. SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM, BUT IN RESPECT OF THAT [ITSELF] I ARGUE: IF SHECHITAH, WHICH IS A LABOUR, OVERRIDES THE SABBATH, IS IT NOT LOGICAL THAT HAZA'AH, WHICH IS [ONLY] A SHEBUTH, OVERRIDES THE SABBATH!

(1) To the question, 'But the draining blood is mixed with it'.

(2) Therefore there must be a little of proper (i.e., life-) blood, if spilled in this goblet of mixed blood, and that is sufficient for atonement.

(3) On the eve of Passover they stopped up the holes through which the blood of the sacrifices passed out to the stream of Kidron.

(4) Between the pavement and their feet, whereas they had to stand actually on the pavement itself, Zeb. 15b.

(5) When a person takes a ritual bath (tebillah), nothing must interpose between the water and his skin; if something does interpose, it invalidates the bath.

(6) I.e., they made them short, so that they did not reach down to the blood.

(7) E.V. Garment. Lev. VI, 3.

(8) But reach exactly to the ground.

(9) Lev. I, 13.

(10) Projecting boards alongside the walls.

(11) This was not necessarily done by the same priest.

(12) In the fashion of Arab merchants, Rashi. Jast.: in the manner of travellers.

(13) Lit., 'riding' — i.e., carrying it upon one's shoulder.

(14) V. Glos.

(15) 'Labour' (עֲמָלָה) denotes work regarded as Biblically forbidden, whereas a shebuth is only a Rabbinical interdict.

(16) Lit., 'prove'.

(17) Lit., 'they permitted (that which is forbidden on the Sabbath) on account of labour' etc. Slaughtering and cooking, for example, are permitted on Festivals, whereas bringing food from without the tehum which is only a Rabbinical prohibition, is forbidden.

(18) Haza'ah connotes the sprinkling of the waters of purification (v. Lev. XIV, 7, 16; Num. XIX, 19) upon an unclean person; zerikah, the sprinkling of the blood of the sacrifice upon the altar.

(19) If the seventh day of the unclean person (v. Num. ibid.) falls on the Sabbath, which happens to be the eve of

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 66a

SAID R. AKIBA TO HIM, OR ON THE CONTRARY: IF HAZA'AH, WHICH IS [FORBIDDEN] AS A SHEBUTH, DOES NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH,¹ THEN SHECHITAH, WHICH IS [NORMALLY FORBIDDEN] ON ACCOUNT OF LABOUR, IS IT NOT LOGICAL THAT IT DOES NOT OVERRIDE THE SABBATH.² AKIBA! SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM, YOU WOULD ERASE WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, [LET THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL PREPARE THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE] IN ITS APPOINTED TIME,³ [IMPLYING] BOTH ON WEEK-DAYS AND ON THE SABBATH. SAID HE TO HIM, MASTER, GIVE ME AN APPOINTED TIME FOR THESE AS THERE IS AN APPOINTED SEASON FOR SHECHITAH!⁴ R. AKIBA STATED A GENERAL RULE: WORK WHICH COULD BE DONE ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH OVERRIDES⁵ THE SABBATH; SHECHITAH, WHICH COULD NOT BE DONE ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH, DOES OVERRIDE THE SABBATH.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: This halachah was hidden from [i.e., forgotten by] the Bene Bathyra.⁶ On one occasion the fourteenth [of Nisan] fell on the Sabbath, [and] they forgot and Passover, R. Akiba holds that the haza'ah must not be performed, though the man is thereby prevented from joining in the Passover sacrifice. did not know whether the Passover overrides the Sabbath or not. Said they, 'Is there any man who knows whether the Passover overrides the Sabbath or not?' They were told, 'There is a certain man who has come up from Babylonia, Hillel the Babylonian by name, who served⁷ the two greatest men of the time,⁸ and he knows whether the Passover overrides the Sabbath or not [Thereupon] they summoned him [and] said to him, 'Do you know whether the Passover overrides the Sabbath or not?' 'Have we then [only] one Passover during the year which overrides the Sabbath?' replied he to them, 'Surely we have many more than two hundred Passovers during the year which override the Sabbath!⁹ Said they to him, 'How do you know it?'¹⁰ He answered them, 'In its appointed time' is stated in connection with the Passover, and 'In its appointed time'¹¹ is stated in connection with the tamid; just as 'Its appointed time' which is said in connection with the tamid overrides the Sabbath, so 'Its appointed time' which is said in connection with the Passover overrides the Sabbath. Moreover, it follows a minori, if the tamid, [the omission of] which is not punished by kareth, overrides the Sabbath, then the Passover, [neglect of] which is punished by kareth,¹² is it not logical that it overrides the Sabbath! They immediately set him at their head and appointed him Nasi [Patriarch] over them,¹³ and he was sitting and lecturing the whole day on the laws of Passover. He began rebuking them with words. Said he to them, 'What caused it for you that I should come up from Babylonia to be a Nasi over you? It was your indolence, because you did not serve the two greatest men of the time, Shemaiah and Abtalyon.' Said they to him, 'Master, what if a man forgot and did not bring a knife on the eve of the Sabbath?' 'I have heard this law,' he answered, 'but have forgotten it. But leave it to Israel: if they are not prophets, yet they are the children of prophets!' On the morrow, he whose Passover was a lamb stuck it [the knife] in its wool; he whose Passover was a goat stuck it between its horns. He saw the incident and recollected the halachah and said, 'Thus have I received the tradition from the mouth[s] of Shemaiah and Abtalyon.'

The Master said: "'In its appointed season" is stated in connection with the Passover, and "in its appointed time" is stated in connection with the tamid: just as "its appointed time" which is said in connection with the tamid overrides the Sabbath, so "its appointed time" which is said in connection with the Passover overrides the Sabbath.' And how do we know that the tamid itself overrides the Sabbath? Shall we say, because 'in its appointed time' is written in connection with it;¹⁴ then the Passover too, surely 'in its appointed time' is written in connection with it?¹⁵ Hence [you must say that] 'its appointed time' has no significance for him [Hillel]; then here too, 'its appointed time' should have no significance for him? — Rather Scripture saith, This is the burnt-offering of every Sabbath, beside the continual burnt-offering:¹⁶ whence it follows that the continual burnt-offering [tamid] is offered on the Sabbath.

The Master said: 'Moreover, it follows a minori: if the tamid, [the omission of] which is not punished by kareth, overrides the Sabbath; then the Passover, [neglect of] which is punished by kareth, is it not logical that it overrides the Sabbath!' [But] this can be refuted: as for the tamid, that is because it is constant,¹⁷ and entirely [burnt]?¹⁸ — He first told them the a minori argument, but they refuted it; [so] then he told them the gezerah shawah. But since he had received the tradition of a gezerah shawah, what was the need of an a minori argument? — Rather he spoke to them on their own ground: It is well that you do not learn a gezerah shawah, because a man cannot argue [by] a gezerah shawah of his own accord.¹⁹ But [an inference] a minori, which a man can argue of his own accord, you should have argued! — Said they to him, It is a fallacious a minori argument.

The Master said: 'On the morrow, he whose Passover was a lamb stuck it in its wool; [he whose Passover was] a goat stuck it between its horns.'

(1) I regard this as certain.

(2) This is a reductio ad absurdum.

(3) Num. IX, 2.

(4) Shechitah must be done on the fourteenth; have these a similar fixed time? — surely not!

(5) Lit., 'every work. ... does not override'.

(6) 'The children of Bathyra' — they were the religious heads of Palestine at the time of this incident. — Bathyra is a town of Babylonia. [Their name is, however, generally held to be derived from the colony of that name in Batanea mentioned in Josephus, Antiquities, XVII, 2, 2, and established by Herod for the settlement of the Jews who had come from Babylon.]

(7) I.e., studied under.

(8) Lit., 'generation'.

(9) I.e., during the year more than two hundred sacrifices are offered on the Sabbath, viz., the two daily burnt-offerings and the two additional sacrifices of every Sabbath, besides the extra sacrifices offered on the Sabbath which occurs in the middle of Passover and the middle of Tabernacles.

(10) A question of such importance cannot be decided by a mere argument, however strong, but must have Biblical support, as well as the support of tradition.

(11) Num. XXVIII, 2.

(12) V. Num. IX, 13.

(13) This story of Hillel's rise to eminence contains a number of difficulties particularly (i) The ignorance of Bene Bathyra, the religious heads of the people, and (ii) the fact that there was no single head, but the authority lay in the hands of a family. V. Halevi, Doroth, I, 3. pp. 37ff, where this is discussed at great length; he maintains that the Great Sanhedrin, which was the ruling authority on all religious matters, had been abolished, and there was no single religious head at the time. [Buchler Synhedrion pp. 144ff connects this story with the controversy related infra 70b which led to the retirement of Judah b. Durtai to the south.]

(14) Which implies whenever it is.

(15) Then why is it regarded as axiomatic in the case of the former, whereas the latter must be learnt from it?

(16) Num. XXVIII, 10.

(17) Every day; in comparison therewith the Passover, which is only once a year, is not constant.

(18) Each of which fact gives it a stronger claim to override the Sabbath.

(19) A man must have received a tradition from his teachers that a particular word in the Pentateuch is meant for a gezerah shawah, but he cannot assume it himself. Hence the Bene Bathyar, not having received this tradition, could not adduce this gezerah shawah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 66b

But he performed work with sacred animals?¹ [They did] as Hillel. For it was taught: It was related of Hillel, As long as he lived² no man ever committed trespass through his burnt-offering.³ But he brought it unconsecrated [hullin] to the Temple Court, consecrated it, layed his hand upon it,⁴ and slaughtered it.

[Yet] how might a person consecrate the Passover on the Sabbath? Surely we learned: You may not consecrate, nor make a valuation vow,⁵ nor make a vow of herem,⁶ nor separate⁷ terumah and tithes. They said all this of Festivals, how much the more of the Sabbath! — That applies only to obligations for [the discharge of] which no time is fixed; but in the case of obligations for [the discharge of] which a time is fixed, you may consecrate. For R. Johanan said: A man may consecrate his Passover on the Sabbath, and his Festival-offering [hagigah] on the Festival.

But he drives [a laden animal]?⁸ — It is driving in an unusual way.⁹ [But] even driving in an unusual manner, granted that there is no Scriptural prohibition, there is nevertheless a Rabbinical prohibition? — That is [precisely] what they asked him: An action which is permitted by Scripture, while a matter of a shebuth stands before it to render it impossible,¹⁰ such as [an action performed] in an unusual manner [standing] in the way of a precept, what then? Said he to them, 'I have heard this halachah, but have forgotten it: but leave [it] to Israel, if they are not prophets they are the sons of prophets.'

Rab Judah said in Rab's name: Whoever is boastful, if he is a Sage, his wisdom departs from him; if he is a prophet, his prophecy departs from him. If he is a Sage, his wisdom departs from him: [we learn this] from Hillel. For the Master said, 'He began rebuking them with words,' and [then] he said to them, 'I have heard this halachah, but have forgotten it'.¹¹ If he is a prophet, his prophecy departs from him: [we learn this] from Deborah. For it is written, The rulers ceased in Israel, they ceased, until that I arose, Deborah, I arose a mother in Israel;¹² and it is written, Awake, awake, Deborah, awake, awake, utter a song.¹³

Resh Lakish said: As to every man who becomes angry, if he is a Sage, his wisdom departs from him; if he is a prophet, his prophecy departs from him. If he is a Sage, his wisdom departs from him: [we learn this] from Moses. For it is written, And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host etc.;¹⁴ and it is written, And Eleazar the Priest said unto the men of war that went to the battle: This is the statute of the law which the Lord hath commanded Moses etc.,¹⁵ whence it follows that it had been forgotten by Moses.¹⁶ If he is a prophet, his prophecy departs from him: [we learn this] from

Elisha. Because it is written, 'were it not that I regard the presence of Johoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee',¹⁷ and it is written, 'But now bring me a minstrel,' And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the Lord [i.e., the spirit of prophecy] came upon him.¹⁸

R. Mani b. Pattish said: Whoever becomes angry, even if greatness has been decreed for him by Heaven, is cast down. Whence do we know it? From Eliab, for it is said, and Eliab's anger was kindled against David, and he said: 'Why art thou come down? and with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the wilderness? I know thy presumptuousness, and the naughtiness of thy heart; for thou art come down that thou mightest see the battle.'¹⁹ And when Samuel went to anoint him [sc. a king], of all [David's brothers] it is written, neither hath the Lord chosen this,²⁰ whereas of Eliab it is written, But the Lord saith unto Samuel, 'Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have rejected him':²¹ hence it follows that He had favoured him until then.

We have [thus] found that the tamid and the Passover override the Sabbath; how do we know that they override uncleanness?²² — I will tell you: just as he learns the Passover from the tamid in respect to the Sabbath, so also does he learn the tamid from the Passover in respect to uncleanness. And how do we know it of the Passover itself? — Said R. Johanan. Because the Writ saith, If any man of you shall be unclean by reason of a dead body:²³ a man [i.e.. an individual] is relegated to the second Passover,²⁴ but a community is not relegated to the second Passover, but they must offer it in [a state of] uncleanness. R. Simeon b. Lakish said to R. Johanan: Say, a man is relegated to the second Passover, [whereas] a community has no remedy [for its uncleanness]. neither on the first Passover not on the second Passover? Rather, said R. Simeon b. Lakish. [It is deduced] from here: [Command the children of Israel,] that they send out of the camp of every leper, and every one that hath an issue, and whosoever is unclean by the dead:²⁵ let [Scripture] state those who are unclean by the dead, and not state zabin²⁶ and lepers, and I would argue, if those who are unclean by the dead are sent out [of the camp]. how much the more zabin and lepers!²⁷

(1) Which is forbidden, v. Deut. XV, 19: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thine ox — a firstling being sacred.

(2) Lit., 'from his days'.

(3) I.e.. through making unlawful use of the consecrated animal.

(4) v. Lev. I, 4: and he shall lay his hand upon the head of the burnt-offering.

(5) I.e.. vow your own value to the Temple; v. Lev. XXVII, 2-13.

(6) A vow dedicating an object for priestly use, ibid. 28 seq.

(7) Lit., 'raise', 'lift off'.

(8) Which is likewise forbidden.

(9) Lit., 'as in a back-handed manner' — an idiom connoting an unusual way of doing anything. Sheep and goats are not employed as beasts of burden, hence this is unusual, whereas by Scriptural law work is forbidden on the Sabbath and Festivals only when performed in the usual way.

(10) Lit., 'to eradicate it'.

(11) Though his rebuke was probably justified and timely, he should not have drawn attention to his own promotion.

(12) Judg. V, 7.

(13) Ibid. 12; thus after boasting that she was a mother in Israel, she had to be urged to awake and utter song. i.e., prophecy, the spirit having departed from her.

(14) Num. XXXI, 14.

(15) Num. XXXI, 21.

(16) Lit., 'it had become hidden from Moses'.

(17) II Kings III, 14; this was an expression of anger.

(18) Ibid. 15.

(19) I Sam. XVII, 28.

(20) Ibid. XVI, 8f. passim.

(21) Ibid. 7.

(22) If the larger part of the community is unclean, these offerings are still sacrificed.

(23) Num. IX, 10.

(24) I.e., in the second month, ibid. II.

(25) Num. V, 2.

(26) Those who have an issue. Pl. of zab, q.v. Glos.

(27) Their uncleanness is more stringent, since it emanates from themselves.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 67a

But [it intimates,] there is a time when zabin and lepers are sent out, whereas those who are unclean by the dead are not sent out; and when is that? It is [when] the Passover comes [is sacrificed] in uncleanness.

Said Abaye, If so, let us also argue: 'Let [Scripture] state a zab and those who are unclean by the dead, and let it not state a leper, and I would argue, If a zab is sent out, how much the more a leper; but [the fact that a leper is stated intimates] there is a time when lepers are sent out, whereas zabin and those who are unclean by the dead are not sent out, and when is that? It is [when] the Passover comes in uncleanness'? And should you say. That indeed is so—surely we learned: The Passover which comes in uncleanness, zabin and zaboth, menstruant women and women in childbirth must not eat thereof, yet if they ate, they are not liable [to kareth]?' Rather, said Abaye. After all, [it is derived] from the first verse;¹ [and as to the question raised,² the reply is]. If so,³ let the Divine Law write, 'If any man of you shall be unclean'; what is the purpose of 'by reason of a dead body'? And should you say, this [phrase] 'by reason of a dead body' comes for this [purpose, viz..] only he who is unclean by reason of a dead body is relegated to the second Passover, but not other unclean [persons], surely' it was taught: You might think that only those who are unclean by the dead and he who was on a distant journey keep the second Passover; whence do we know [to include] zabin and lepers and those who had intercourse with menstruant women?⁴ Therefore it is stated, 'any man'.⁵ Then what is the purpose of [the phrase] 'by reason of a dead body' which the Divine Law wrote? But this is what [Scripture] states: A man [i.e.. an individual] is relegated to the second Passover, whereas a community is not relegated to the second Passover, but they keep [the first Passover] in uncleanness. And when do the community keep [the first Passover] in uncleanness? When [they are] unclean by reason of the dead; but in the case of other forms of uncleanness, they do not keep [it thus].

R. Hisda said: If a leper entered within his barrier,⁶ he is exempt [from flagellation],⁷ because it is said, he shall dwell solitary; without the camp shall his dwelling be:⁸ the Writ transformed it [his prohibition] into a positive command.⁹ An objection is raised: A leper who entered within his barrier [is punished] with forty lashes; zabin and zaboth who entered within their barrier [are punished] with forty lashes; while he who is unclean by the dead is permitted to enter the Levitical camp;¹⁰ and they said this not only [of] him who is unclean by the dead but even [of] the dead himself, for it is said, And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him,¹¹ 'with him' [implying] within his barrier [precincts]!¹² — It is [a controversy of] Tannaim. For it was taught: 'He shall dwell solitary': [that means,] he shall dwell alone so that other unclean persons¹³ should not dwell with him.¹⁴ You might think that zabin and unclean persons are sent away to one [the same] camp; therefore it is stated, that they defile 'not their camps':¹⁵ [this is] to assign a camp for this One and a camp for that one: this is R. Judah's opinion. R. Simeon said, It is unnecessary. For lo, it is said, '[Command the children of Israel] that they send out of the camp every leper, and everyone that hath all issue, and whosoever is unclean by the dead'.¹⁶ Now, let [Scripture] state those who are unclean by the dead and not state zab, and I would say, if those who are unclean by the dead are sent out, how much the more zabin! Why then is zab stated? To assign a second camp to him. And let [Scripture] state zab and not state leper, and I would say, if zabin are sent out, how much the more lepers! Why then is a leper stated? To assign a third camp to him. When it states, 'he shall dwell solitary', the Writ transforms it [the prohibition] into a positive command.¹⁷

What is the greater stringency of a zab over him who is unclean by reason of the dead?¹⁸ — Because uncleanness issues upon him from his own body. On the contrary, he who is unclean by the dead is more stringent, since he requires sprinkling on the third and the seventh [days]?¹⁹ — Scripture saith, [instead of] ‘the unclean,’ ‘and whosoever [kol] is unclean,’²⁰ to include him who is unclean through a reptile, and a zab is more stringent than he who is unclean through a reptile; and what is his greater stringency? As we have stated.²¹ On the contrary, a reptile is more stringent, since it defiles [even] accidentally?²² I will tell you:

(1) Num. IX, 10.

(2) By Resh Lakish.

(3) That the deduction is to be made as R. Simeon b. Lakish proposes.

(4) Which act defiles them.

(5) Heb. ish ish: the doubling indicates extension, and therefore includes these.

(6) I.e., into the precincts that are forbidden to him.

(7) Though he thereby transgressed the negative injunction, that they defile not their camp. — Num. V, 3.

(8) Lev. XIII, 46.

(9) Only a negative command involves flagellation, but not a positive command. Though a negative command is stated in this connection, this verse teaches that he is regarded as having violated a positive command only.

(10) The whole of the Temple Mount outside the walls of the Temple Court is so called.

(11) Ex. XIII, 19.

(12) Moses was a Levite.

(13) E.g., zabin and those unclean through the dead.

(14) This shows that his uncleanness is greater and stricter than theirs.

(15) Num. V, 3: ‘camps’. plural.

(16) Num. V, 2.

(17) Since according to R. Simeon this can have no other purpose; thus we have a controversy of Tannaim.

(18) That the former could be deduced as stated a minori from the latter.

(19) V. Num. XIX. 19.

(20) I.e., Scripture employs the second, more-embracing phrase, where the first would suffice.

(21) That the uncleanness emanates from himself. Hence the reference to a zab is superfluous, and therefore it teaches as above.

(22) I.e., even if it touches the person by accident. But a discharge makes a man unclean as a zab only if it issues of its own accord. If, however, it is caused by an ‘accident’, e.g., physical over-exertion or highly-seasoned food, he is not unclean.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 67b

To that extent¹ a zab too is certainly defiled through an accident, in accordance with R. Huna. For R. Huna said: The first discharge² of a zab defiles [when it is caused] by an accident.³

What is the greater stringency of a leper over a zab? Because he requires peri'ah⁴ and rending [of garments], and he is forbidden sexual intercourse.⁵ On the contrary, a zab is more stringent, because he defiles couch and seat,⁶ and he defiles earthen vessels by hesset?⁷ — Scripture saith, [instead of] ‘a leper’, ‘and every [kol] leper’⁸ to include a ba'al kerî;⁹ and a leper is more stringent than a ba'al kerî, and what is his greater stringency? As we have stated.¹⁰ On the contrary, a ba'al kerî is more stringent, because he defiles by the smallest quantity [of semen]?¹¹ — He agrees with R. Nathan. For it was taught, R. Nathan said on the authority of R. Ishmael: A zab requires [a discharge of matter] sufficient for the closing of the orifice of the membrum, but the Sages did not concede this to him. And he holds that a ba'al kerî is assimilated to a zab.¹² What is the purpose of ‘and every [kol] leper’?¹³ — Since ‘every one [kol] that hath an issue’ is written, ‘every [kol] leper’ too is written.¹⁴

Now [as for] R. Judah. [surely] R. Simeon says well?¹⁵ — He requires that¹⁶ for what was taught; R. Eliezer said: You might days, but only until evening, while a reptile too defiles until evening only. think, if zabin and lepers forced their way through and entered the Temple Court at a Passover sacrifice which came in uncleanness,¹⁷ — you might think that they are culpable; therefore it is stated, [‘Command the children of Israel,] that they send out of the camp every leper’, and every one that hath an issue [zab], and whosoever is unclean by the dead’: when those who are unclean by the dead are sent out, zabin and lepers are sent out; when those who are unclean by the dead are not sent out, zabin and lepers are not sent out.

The Master said: “And every [kol] one that hath an issue” is to include a ba'al kerī. This supports R. Johanan. For R. Johanan said: The cellars [under the Temple] were not consecrated; and a ba'al kerī is sent without the two camps.¹⁸

An objection is raised: A ba'al kerī is like [a person defiled through] contact with a reptile. Surely that means in respect of their camp?¹⁹ No: [it means] in respect of their uncleanness.²⁰ [You say] ‘In respect of their uncleanness!’ [Surely] uncleanness until evening is written in connection with the one, and uncleanness until evening is written in connection with the other?²¹ Hence it must surely mean in respect of their camp! — No: after all [it means] in respect of their uncleanness, and he informs us this: that a ba'al kerī is like [a person defiled through] the contact of the reptile: just as the contact of a reptile defiles [even] accidentally, so is a ba'al kerī defiled [when the semen is discharged] accidentally.²² An objection is raised:

(1) Lit., ‘in such a manner’ as that defilement caused by a reptile.

(2) Lit., seeing’ — of discharge.

(3) He is not unclean as a zab, for a period of seven

(4) Letting the hair grow long and neglected, v. Lev. XIII, 45.

(5) V. M.K. 7b.

(6) This is a technical phrase. He defiles that whereon he lies or sits, imposing such a high degree of uncleanness on it that if a man touches it he in turn becomes so unclean as to defile his garments, even if they did not touch it. But a leper, though he too defiles couch and seat, the degree of uncleanness is less, and the man who touches it becomes unclean only in so far that he in turn defiles food and drink, but not his garments, nor can he defile any other utensils by touch. — Rashi. But Maim. and others omit this passage, whence it appears that they do not accept this distinction; v. also Tosaf. a.l. s.v. שכך.

(7) Lit., ‘shaking’. A zab defiles an earthen vessel when he causes it to move through his weight. e.g., if it is standing on one end of a rickety bench and he sits down on the other, causing it to move upwards, as on a see-saw.

(8) V. p. 341. n. 5.

(9) A man who has discharged semen.

(10) Rashi understands this as part of the following question: Now what is his greater stringency as stated? On the contrary etc.

(11) Whereas for leprosy there must be at least as much as a bean (geris).

(12) As it is written, This is the law of him that hath an issue (zab), and of him from whom the flow of seed goeth out (ba'al kerī) — Lev. XV, 32. Thus a ba'al kerī too requires a certain minimum; hence a leper is more stringent, and therefore a leper is mentioned in order to assign a third camp to him.

(13) I.e., the ‘kol’ written in connection with a leper.

(14) For the sake of parallelism.

(15) What then is the purpose of the verse quoted by R. Judah supra 67a?

(16) Sc. the verse employed by R. Simeon for this purpose.

(17) I.e., when the community as a whole was unclean.

(18) Viz., the camp of the Shechinah (the place of the Sanctuary) and the Levitical camp, just like a zab. R. Johanan heard these two teachings from his master (Rashi).

(19) I.e., just as a man who is defiled by a reptile is sent out from the camp of the Shechinah only. i.e., from the Temple, so is a ba'al kerî.

(20) Neither is unclean for seven days, but only until the evening.

(21) V. Lev. XI, 24; XV, 16. Hence the comparison is pointless and unnecessary.

(22) V. supra 67a bottom and note a.l.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 68a

He who has intercourse with a niddah¹ is like he who is unclean by the dead.² In respect of what: shall we say, in respect of their uncleanness, — but uncleanness for seven [days] is written in connection with the one, and uncleanness for seven days is written in connection with the other?³ Hence it must surely be in respect of their camp;⁴ and since the second clause is in respect of their camps, the first clause too is in respect of their camps? — What argument is this! the one is as stated, and the other is as stated.⁵

An objection is raised: A leper is more stringent than a zab,⁶ and a zab is more stringent than he who is unclean by the dead.⁷ A ba'al kerî is excepted, for he who is unclean by the dead is more stringent than he. What does 'is excepted' mean? Surely [it means], he is excepted from the rule of a zab and is included⁸ in the rule of him who is unclean by the dead, seeing that he who is unclean by the dead is more stringent than he, and [yet] he is permitted within the Levitical camp? — No: [it means that] he is excepted from the camp of him who is unclean by the dead and is included in the camp of a zab; and though he who is unclean by the dead is more stringent than he, and [yet] he may enter the Levitical camp. [nevertheless] we compare him [the ba'al kerî] to what is like himself.⁹

A tanna recited before R. Isaac b. Abdimi: Then he shall go abroad out of the camp:¹⁰ this means the camp of the Shechinah;¹¹ he shall not come within the camp:¹² this means the Levitical camp. From this [we learn] that a ba'al kerî must go without the two camps.¹³ Said he to him, You have not yet brought him in that you should [already] expel him!¹⁴ Another version: you have not yet expelled him, and [already] you [discuss whether] he should enter!¹⁵ Rather say: 'abroad out of the camp' — this is the Levitical camp; 'he shall not come within the camp' — that is the camp of the Shechinah. To this Rabina demurred: Assume that both refer to the camp of the Shechinah, [it being repeated] so that he should violate an affirmative command and a negative command on its account? If so, let Scripture say, 'Then he shall go abroad out of the camp' and 'he shall not enter': what is the purpose of 'within the camp'? Infer from it that it is to prescribe another camp for him.¹⁶

AND THE CLEANSING [MIHUY] OF ITS BOWELS. What is THE CLEANSING OF ITS BOWELS? — R. Huna said: [It means] that we pierce them with a knife.¹⁷ Hiyya b. Rab said: [It means the removal of] the viscous substance of the bowels, which comes out through the pressure of the knife. R. Eleazar observed, What is Hiyya b. Rab's reason? Because it is written, and the waste places of the fat ones [mehim] shall wanderers eat.¹⁸ How does this imply it? — As R. Joseph¹⁹ translated: and the estates of the wicked shall the righteous inherit.²⁰

Then shall the lambs feed as in their pasture [kedobram]:²¹ Menassia b. Jeremiah interpreted it in Rab's name: As was spoken about them [kimedubbar bam].²² What means 'as was spoken about them'? — Said Abaye: 'And the waste places of the fat ones shall wanderers eat'. Said Raba to him, If 'the waste places' were written, it would be well as you say;²³ since, however, 'and the waste places' is written, this states another thing. Rather, said Raba: [It is to be explained] as R. Hananel said in Rab's name. For R. Hananel said in Rab's name: The righteous are destined to resurrect the dead. [For] here it is written, 'Then shall the lambs feed kedobram', while elsewhere it is written, Then shall Bashan and Gilead feed as in the days of old.²⁴ [Now] Bashan means Elisha, who came from Bashan, as it is said, 'and Janai and Shaphat in Bashan,²⁵ while it is written, Elisha the son of Shaphat is here, who poured water on the hands of Elijah.²⁶ [Again,] Gilead alludes to Elijah, for it is said, And Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the settlers of Gilead, said [unto Ahab].²⁷

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in R. Jonathan's name: The righteous are destined to resurrect the dead, for it is said, There shall yet old men and old women sit in the broad places of Jerusalem, every man with his staff in his hand for very age;²⁸ and it is written, and lay my staff upon the face of the child.²⁹

‘Ulla opposed [two verses]. It is written, He will swallow up death for ever;³⁰ but it is written, For the youngest shall die a hundred years old?³¹ There is no difficulty: there the reference is to Israel; here, to heathens. But what business have the heathens there? — Because it is written, And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and aliens shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers.³²

R. Hisda opposed [two verses]. It is written, Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed;³³ whereas it is written, Moreover the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun, and the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of the seven days?³⁴ There is no difficulty: the former refers to the world to come;³⁵ the latter to the days of the Messiah.³⁶ But according to Samuel, who maintained, This world differs from the Messianic age only in respect of the servitude to governments,³⁷ what can be said? — Both refer to the world to come, yet there is no difficulty: one refers to the camp of the righteous; the other, to the camp of the Shechinah.

Raba opposed [two verses]: It is written, I kill, and I make alive;³⁸ whilst it is also written, I have wounded, and I heal.³⁹ seeing that He even resurrects, how much the more does He heal!⁴⁰ But the Holy One, blessed be He, said thus: What I put to death I make alive, just as I wounded and I heal [the same person].⁴¹

Our Rabbis taught: ‘I kill, and I make alive’: You might say, I kill one person and give life to another, as the world goes on.⁴² Therefore it is stated, ‘I have wounded, and I heal’: just as the wounding and the healing [obviously] refer to the same person, so death and life refer to the same person. This refutes those who maintain that resurrection is not intimated in the Torah.⁴³ Another interpretation: At first what I slay I resurrect;⁴⁴ and then, what I wounded I will heal.⁴⁵

(1) V. Glos.

(2) This is the conclusion of the Mishnah just quoted, Zab. V, 11.

(3) V. Lev. XV, 24; Num. XIX. 11.

(4) Both are sent out of the camp of the Shechinah only.

(5) Lit., ‘as it is’, i.e., each clause is governed by its own particular requirements.

(6) The leper being sent out of all three camps, whereas the zab is sent out of two only; supra 67a.

(7) The last-named being sent out of the camp of the Shechinah only.

(8) Lit., ‘enters’.

(9) Viz., a zab. Thus the meaning of the Baraita is this: A leper, a zab, and he who is unclean by the dead follow the rule that the more stringent the uncleanness the further away is he sent; but a ba'al kerai is excepted from this rule, and though his uncleanness is less than that of a person unclean by the dead, he is sent further away, because he must be compared to a zab, since both are unclean through bodily discharge.

(10) Deut. XXIII, 11; the reference is to a ba'al kerai.

(11) The Sanctuary.

(12) Ibid.

(13) I.e., if he is in the Temple (‘the camp of the Shechinah’) when he becomes a ba'al kerai, he must leave both that and the Temple mount (‘the Levitical camp’).

(14) I.e., since Scripture states that he must not enter the Levitical camp, it follows that he is without: how then say that he is inside? (Rashi).

(15) I.e., you have not yet ordered him to leave the Levitical camp, and yet you are already forbidding him to enter.

(16) From which he must depart.

- (17) To allow the dung to fall out.
- (18) Isa. V, 17.
- (19) [V. Targum version a.l. The Targum on the Prophets is ascribed by some to R. Joseph. V. B.K., Sonc. ed. p. 9, n. 9.]
- (20) Thus he translates ‘mehim’ the wicked, i.e., the repulsive; similarly ‘mihuy’ refers to the repulsive matter, viz., the viscous substance.
- (21) Ibid. One part of the verse having been quoted and translated, the Gemara proceeds to discuss the other half.
- (22) I.e., in accordance with the promise made: ‘lambs’ is understood as meaning Israel.
- (23) The second part of the verse being explanatory of the first.
- (24) Mic. VII, 14.
- (25) I Chron. V, 12.
- (26) II Kings III, 11.
- (27) I Kings XVII, 1. Now both Elijah and Elisha resurrected the dead (v. ibid. IV; I Kings XVII, 21 seq.) ‘feed’ is therefore understood to allude to this metaphorically; hence the same meaning is assigned to ‘feed’ in the first verse too, ‘the lambs’ being the righteous.
- (28) Zech. VIII, 4.
- (29) II Kings IV, 29. The staff was employed to revive the child (ibid. seq.), and the same purpose is assumed for it in the first verse.
- (30) Isa. XXV, 8.
- (31) Ibid. LXV, 20.
- (32) Ibid. LXI, 5.
- (33) Ibid. XXIV, 23.
- (34) Ibid. XXX, 26.
- (35) Then the sun and the moon shall be ashamed — i.e., fade into insignificance because of the light radiating from the righteous (Rashi in Sanh. 91b).
- (36) V. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 601, n. 3.
- (37) I.e., delivery from oppression.
- (38) Deut. XXII, 39.
- (39) Ibid.
- (40) Why then state it? v. Sanh. 91b and notes a.l. in the Sonc. ed.: the point of the difficulty is explained there differently.
- (41) As explained in the next passage.
- (42) People dying and others being born.
- (43) V. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 601, n. 5 and p. 604, n. 12.
- (44) I.e., in the same state.
- (45) After their resurrection I will heal them of the blemishes they possessed in their former life.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 68b

AND THE BURNING OF ITS FAT. It was taught, R. Simeon said: Come and see how precious is a precept in its [proper] time.¹ For lo! the [precept of] burning the fats and limbs and the fat-pieces is valid all night, yet we do not wait for [burning] them until nightfall.²

ITS CARRYING AND ITS BRINGING etc. But the following contradicts it: You may cut off a wart [of an animal] in the Temple, but not in the country,³ and if [it is done] with a utensil [a knife], it is forbidden in both cases?⁴ R. Eleazar and R. Jose b. Hanina one answered, Both refer to [removing the wart] with the hand: one refers to a moist [wart]; the other, to a dry one⁵ While the other maintains, Both refer to a moist [wart], yet there is no difficulty: one means by hand, and the other means with a utensil.⁶

Now according to him who explained. ‘One means by hand, and the other means with a utensil,’ why did he not say. Both mean by hand, yet there is no difficulty: one refers to a moist [wart]; the other, to a dry one? — He can answer you: a dry one [just] crumbles away.⁷ And according to him who maintained, 'Both mean by hand, yet there is no difficulty: one refers to a moist [wart]; the other to a dry one'; why did he not say: Both refer to a moist [wart], yet there is no difficulty: one means by hand, and the other means with a utensil? — He can answer you: as for a utensil, Surely he [the Tanna] teaches there, 'if [it is done] with a utensil, it is forbidden in both cases!'⁸ And the other?⁹ That which he teaches [about] a utensil here, [is because] he comes to inform us of the controversy of R. Eliezer and R. Joshua. SAID R. ELIEZER . . . IF SHECHITAH etc. R. Joshua is consistent with his view, for he maintains, Rejoicing on a Festival too is a religious duty.¹⁰ For it was taught, R. Eliezer said: A man has nought else [to do] on a Festival save either to eat and drink or to sit and study. R. Joshua said: Divide it: [devote] half of it to eating and drinking, and half of it to the Beth Hamidrash. Now R. Johanan said thereon: Both deduce it from the same verse. One verse says, a solemn assembly to the Lord thy God,¹¹ whereas another verse says, there shall be a solemn assembly unto you:¹² R. Eliezer holds: [That means] either entirely to God or entirely to you; while R. Joshua holds, Divide it: [Devote] half to God and half to yourselves.

(Mnemonic: 'abam.)¹³ R. Eleazar said: All agree in respect to the Feast of Weeks ['azereth]¹⁴ that we require [it to be] 'for you' too. What is the reason? It is the day on which the Torah was given.¹⁵ Rabbah said: All agree in respect to the Sabbath that we require [it to be] 'for you' too. What is the reason? And thou shalt call the Sabbath a delight.¹⁶ R. Joseph said: All agree that on Purim we require 'for you' too. What is the reason? Days of feasting and gladness¹⁷ is written in connection therewith.

Mar son of Rabina would fast¹⁸ the whole year,¹⁹ except on the Feast of Weeks, Purim, and the eve of the Day of Atonement. The Feast of Weeks, [because] it is the day on which the Torah was given: Purim, [because] 'days of feasting and gladness' is written in connection therewith. The eve of the Day of Atonement: for Hiyya b. Rab of Difti taught: And ye shall afflict your souls on the ninth day of the month:²⁰ do we then fast on the ninth? Surely we fast on the tenth! But this is to tell you: whoever eats and drinks on the ninth thereof, the Writ ascribes [merit] to him as though he had fasted on the ninth and the tenth.²¹

R. Joseph would order on the day of Pentecost: 'Prepare me a third-born calf,'²² saying. 'But for the influence of this day.²³ how many Josephs are there in the market place!'²⁴

R. Shesheth used to revise his studies every thirty days, and he would stand and lean at the side of the doorway and exclaim, 'Rejoice, O my soul, Rejoice. O my soul; for thee have I read [the Bible], for thee have I studied [the Mishnah].' But that is not so, for R. Eleazar said, But for the Torah, heaven and earth would not endure, for it is said, If not for my covenant by day and by night, I had not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth?²⁵ — In the first place when a man does it [sc. studies], he does so with himself in mind.

R. Ashi said: Yet according to R. Eliezer too, who maintained that [rejoicing on] a Festival is [merely] voluntary, he can be refuted:²⁶ if a Festival, when labour for a voluntary [requirement] is permitted,²⁷ yet the shebuth which accompanies it is not permitted; then the Sabbath, whereon only labour [required for the carrying out of] a precept is permitted, is it not logical that the shebuth which accompanies it is not permitted!

(1) I.e., as soon as it can be performed, even if it can be postponed.

(2) But do it immediately, though it is the Sabbath.

(3) Medinah, 'province'. This is the technical designation for all places outside the Temple.

(4) 'Er. 103a.

(5) Our Mishnah refers to a moist wart. Even when it is removed by hand, which is merely a Shebuth, it is forbidden, since it could have been removed the previous day. But in 'Er. 103a the reference is to a dry one, the removal of which is not even regarded as a shebuth.

- (6) The former is permitted, while the latter is forbidden. — This of course is a more lenient explanation.
- (7) It would not be called cutting at all.
- (8) Why then should it be repeated in the present Mishnah?
- (9) Does he not accept the force of this argument?
- (10) Not merely permitted.
- (11) Deut. XVI, 8.
- (12) Num. XXIX, 35.
- (13) A mnemonic is a word or phrase, whose letters or words respectively each stand for a title or catchword of a subject, strung together as an aid to the memory. Here 'a _ 'azereth' B _ Shabbath; M _ Purim.
- (14) Lit., 'the solemn assembly' — without a further determinant this always means the Feast of Weeks.
- (15) Therefore we must demonstrate our joy in it by feasting.
- (16) Isa. LVIII, 13.
- (17) Esth. IX, 22.
- (18) Lit., 'sat in a fast'.
- (19) That is if the occasion arose.
- (20) Lev. XXIII, 32. The punctuation of the E.V. has been disregarded, as is required by the context.
- (21) Together.
- (22) I.e., the third calved by its mother. Others translate: (i) in its third year; or (ii) third grown, i.e., one that has reached a third of its full growth. On all translations this was regarded as particularly choice.
- (23) Lit., 'if this day had not caused (it).'
- (24) I.e., I owe my eminence to having studied the Torah, which was given on this day.
- (25) Jer. XXXIII, 25. I.e., if not for my Torah, which is to
- (26) Lit., 'there is a refutation for him'.
- (27) I.e., shechitah, though the eating of meat, which constitutes rejoicing, is voluntary.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 69a

And R. Eliezer?¹ — In his view the shebuth [required] for a precept is more important.²

It was taught. R. Eliezer said: I argue, if³ the necessary adjuncts of the precept which [come] after shechitah,⁴ when the precept has [already] been performed, override the Sabbath; shall not the necessary adjuncts of the precept which [come] before shechitah override the Sabbath! Said R. Akiba to him: If the necessary adjuncts of the precept which [come] after shechitah override the Sabbath, the reason is⁵ because the shechitah has [already] overridden the Sabbath;⁶ will you say that the necessary adjuncts of the precept before the shechitah shall override the Sabbath, seeing that the shechitah has not [yet] overridden the Sabbath?⁷ Another argument is: the sacrifice may be found to be unfit, and thus he will be found retrospectively to have desecrated the Sabbath.⁸ If so, let us not slaughter it either, lest the sacrifice be found unfit, and thus it be found that he retrospectively desecrated the Sabbath? — Rather, he first told him this [argument], and he refuted it; and then he told him this 'the reason is etc.

be studied by day and by night, heaven and earth would not enjoy permanence. How then could R. Shesheth take such a selfish view of his studies? R. AKIBA ANSWERED AND SAID: LET HAZA'AH PROVE IT etc. It was taught, R. Eliezer said to him: 'Akiba, you have refuted me by shechitah,' by shechitah shall be his death!⁹ Said he to him 'Master, do not deny me at the time of argument:¹⁰ I have thus received [the law] from you. [vis.] haza'ah is a shebuth and does not override the Sabbath.'¹¹ Then since he himself had taught it to him, what is the reason that he retracted? — Said 'Ulla: When R. Eliezer taught it to him it was concerning haza'ah for [the sake of] terumah,¹² since terumah itself does not override the Sabbath;¹³ [and] R. Akiba too, when he refuted him refuted him by haza'ah for [the sake of] terumah, which is [likewise] a religious duty¹⁴ and is [usually forbidden] as a shebuth; but he [R. Eliezer] thought that he was refuting him by haza'ah for the Passover sacrifice.¹⁵

Rabbah raised an objection: R. Akiba answered and said, Let the haza'ah of a person unclean through the dead prove [refute] it, — when his seventh [day] falls on the Sabbath and on the eve of Passover, so that it is a religious duty¹⁶ and it is [only] a shebuth, yet it does not override the Sabbath.¹⁷ Hence he [R. Eliezer] certainly taught him about haza'ah for [the sake of] the Passover sacrifice. Then since he [himself] had taught it to him what is the reason that R. Eliezer rebutted him [thus]? — R. Eliezer had forgotten his own tradition, and R. Akiba came to remind him of his tradition. Then let him tell it to him explicitly? — He thought that it would not be mannerly.¹⁸

Now, what is the reason that haza'ah does not override the Sabbath; consider, it is mere handling,¹⁹ [then] let it override the Sabbath on account of the Passover sacrifice? — Said Rabbah, It is a preventive measure, lest he take it [the water of purification] and carry it four cubits in public ground.²⁰ But according to R. Eliezer, let us [indeed] carry it, for R. Eliezer ruled, The necessary adjuncts to a precept override the Sabbath? I will tell you: that is only when the man himself is fit [to perform the precept] and the obligation lies upon him; but here that the man himself is not fit,²¹ the obligation does not lie upon him.

Rabbah said: According to the words of R. Eliezer,²² [if there is] a healthy infant,²³ one may heat water for him to strengthen him²⁴ and to circumcise him on the Sabbath, since it is fit for him. [If there is] a sickly infant,²⁵ one may not heat hot water for him to strengthen him and to circumcise him, since it is not fit for him.²⁶ Said Raba: But if he is healthy, why does he need hot water to strengthen him? Rather, said Raba, all are regarded as invalids in respect to circumcision: both in the case of a strong infant or a sickly infant, one may not heat hot water for him to strengthen him and to circumcise him on the Sabbath,²⁷ since it is not fit for him.

Abaye raised an objection against him: An [adult] uncircumcised person who did not circumcise himself [on the eve of Passover] is punished by kareth:²⁸ this is the view of R. Eliezer. Now here, though the man himself is unfit, yet he states that he is punished by kareth, which proves that the obligation lies upon him.²⁹ — Said Rabbah: R. Eliezer holds, One may not slaughter [the Passover] and sprinkle [its blood] for him who is unclean through a reptile,

(1) How does he rebut this argument?

(2) Hence though a shebuth is not permitted on a Festival, it nevertheless overrides the Sabbath when it is necessary for the performance of a precept.

(3) Lit., 'and what is to me', this being the ethic dative.

(4) I.e., the cleansing of the bowels.

(5) Lit., 'for what is it to me' — i.e., I need not wonder at it, for the reason that etc.

(6) Therefore it may be overridden again by a shebuth.

(7) Surely not.

(8) For no precept will have been performed.

(9) I.e., your argument is obviously a humorous one and cannot be taken seriously, since you would thereby eradicate a Scriptural law; v. Mishnah.

(10) Rashi; i.e., do not deny what you yourself have taught me — viz., that haza'ah does not override the Sabbath. Just.: do not make me an atonement, (saying, 'may his death be atonement') at the time of judgment — i.e., I need no apology for my attitude; or perhaps, do not be angry with me.

(11) Consequently I am justified in using this fact to prove, by a reductio ad absurdum (since it would overthrow a Scriptural law), that your argument is fallacious.

(12) An unclean priest may not undergo haza'ah on the Sabbath in order to eat terumah in the evening.

(13) Terumah may not be separated on the Sabbath.

(14) It is the priests' duty to eat terumah.

(15) Which he holds is permitted on the Sabbath, since otherwise the unclean person is debarred from discharging his obligation.

- (16) Haza'ah will make him fit to partake of the Passover in the evening, which is a religious duty.
- (17) Thus it is explicitly stated that R. Akiba argued that haza'ah, even for the sake of the Passover sacrifice, does not override the Sabbath.
- (18) To tell him plainly; hence he intimated it to him indirectly.
- (19) It is not a labour.
- (20) Which is Scripturally forbidden.
- (21) Since he is unclean.
- (22) That wherever the man is unfit he has no obligation.
- (23) To be circumcised on the Sabbath. 'Healthy' means that he is strong enough to be circumcised even without bathing.
- (24) I.e., to make him even stronger.
- (25) I.e., one who is too weak to be circumcised in his present state unless he is first bathed.
- (26) For at present he is too weak; consequently it is not our duty to strengthen him so that he should be immediately liable. Tosaf.: this distinction can be drawn only according to R. Eliezer. But according to R. Akiba it is forbidden in all cases, just as haza'ah is forbidden.
- (27) But the water must be prepared from the previous day.
- (28) Because he could have circumcised himself after midday, when the Passover is obligatory; hence he incurs kareth for not partaking of the Passover sacrifice, v. Ex. XII, 48 and Num. IX, 10-13. He is not comparable to an unclean person or one who is on a distant journey, since they could not make themselves fit after midday, while before that there was as yet no obligation.
- (29) Where it is possible to make the person fit. Hence haza'ah too should override the Sabbath, since a man is bound to make himself fit.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 69b

and wherever an individual would be relegated [to the second Passover], in the case of the community they keep [it] in uncleanness, and whatever is [obligatory] in the case of a community is [obligatory] in the case of an individual, and whatever is not [obligatory] in the case of a community is not [obligatory] in the case of an individual. [Hence as for the defect of] uncircumcision, where if the whole community are uncircumcised we say to them, 'Arise, circumcise yourselves, and sacrifice the Passover, then an individual too, we say to him, 'Arise, circumcise yourself, and sacrifice the Passover,' while if he does not circumcise [himself] and [does not] sacrifice he is punished with kareth. But [in the case of] uncleanness, where if the whole community is unclean we do not sprinkle [the water of purification] upon them but they keep [it] in uncleanness, [therefore] an individual too is not culpable.¹ R. Huna son of R. Joshua said to Raba: Yet there is the second Passover, which is not [practised] in the case of a community, yet it is [practised] in the case of an individual? — There it is different, replied he, because the community has [already] sacrificed at the first [Passover].²

An objection is raised: You might think that there is no penalty of kareth [for neglecting to offer the Passover] except if he [the delinquent] was clean and was not on a journey afar off;³ how do we know it of an uncircumcised person and one who was unclean through a reptile and all others who are unclean?⁴ Because it is stated, and the man [that is clean etc.].⁵ Now, since he seeks [a verse to teach the inclusion of] him who is unclean through a reptile, he [evidently] holds, One may not slaughter [the Passover sacrifice] and sprinkle [its blood] for him who is unclean through a reptile; for if one may slaughter and sprinkle, why seek [a verse] for him, [seeing that] he is indeed [identical with] a clean person?⁶ by the rule stated, a community in like condition is not bound to purify itself but may sacrifice in uncleanness. Again, since the community need not purify itself by sprinkling, an individual is not obliged to either, for an individual has no obligation which is not likewise binding upon the community; consequently, since an individual is not bound to purify himself, he may not do so on the Sabbath. But if the whole community are uncircumcised, it is their duty to circumcise themselves on the eve of Passover, and therefore it is the duty of an individual too, neglect of which entails kareth. Had he, however, held that we do slaughter the Passover for a man who is unclean through a reptile or through a corpse when his seventh day falls on the eve of Passover, then since the individual is not relegated, the community too might not sacrifice in uncleanness but would have to purify itself; and as a corollary, since the community would have to perform haza'ah, it would also be an individual's duty, and in consequence it would be permitted on the Sabbath. This proves that though he is not fit, the obligation is upon him [to make himself fit], and though this is not [so] in the case of a community,⁷ yet it is [so] in the case of an individual? — Rather, said Raba: R. Eliezer holds, One may slaughter and sprinkle for a man who is unclean through a reptile, and the same law applies to a man who is unclean through the dead on his seventh day;⁸ then for what [purpose] is the haza'ah? for the eating⁹ — [yet] the eating of the Passover sacrifice Is not indispensable.¹⁰ R. Adda b. Abba said to Raba, If so, it is found that the Passover sacrifice is slaughtered for those who cannot eat it?¹¹ 'For those who cannot eat it' means for the infirm and the aged, he replied, since they are [physically] unfit; but this one is indeed fit, save that he is not made ready.

R. AKIBA STATED A GENERAL RULE etc. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: The halachah is as R. Akiba. And we learned similarly in respect to circumcision. R. Akiba stated a general rule: No labour which can be performed on the eve of the Sabbath overrides the Sabbath; circumcision, which cannot be performed on the eve of the Sabbath,¹² overrides the Sabbath; and Rab Judah said in Rab's name: The halachah is as R. Akiba. Now [both] are necessary. For if he informed us [this] in connection with, the Passover, [I would say,] it is only there that the necessary adjuncts of the precept do not override the Sabbath, because thirteen covenants were not made over it; but as for circumcision, over which thirteen covenants were made,¹³ I would say that they [the adjuncts] override [the Sabbath]. While if he informed us [this of] circumcision, [I would argue], it is only there that the necessary adjuncts of the precept do not override the Sabbath, since there is no kareth;¹⁴ but as for the Passover sacrifice, where there is kareth,¹⁵ I might argue, Let the necessary adjuncts override [the Sabbath]. Thus they are necessary.

MISHNAH. WHEN DOES HE⁶ BRING A HAGIGAH¹⁷ WITH IT [THE PASSOVER SACRIFICE]? WHEN IT COMES DURING THE WEEK, IN PURITY, AND IN SMALL [PORTIONS].¹⁸ BUT WHEN IT COMES ON THE SABBATH, IN LARGE [PORTIONS], AND IN UNCLEANNESS, ONE DOES NOT BRING THE HAGIGAH WITH IT. THE HAGIGAH WAS BROUGHT OF FLOCKS, HERDS, LAMBS OR GOATS, OF THE MALES OR THE FEMALES, AND IT IS EATEN TWO DAYS AND ONE NIGHT.¹⁹

GEMARA. What has he taught [previously] that he [now] teaches [about] the hagigah?²⁰ — He has taught about carrying it [the paschal lamb on his shoulders] and bringing it, which do not override the Sabbath, so he also teaches about the hagigah that it [too] does not override the Sabbath, and he states thus: WHEN DOES ONE²¹ BRING A HAGIGAH WITH IT? WHEN IT COMES DURING THE WEEK, IN PURITY, AND IN SMALL [PORTIONS].²²

R. Ashi said: This proves that the hagigah of the fourteenth

(1) This explains why a person who is unclean through a corpse need not purify himself, yet an uncircumcised person must circumcise himself. Thus: — the whole community are not bound to purify themselves by sprinkling, even if the seventh day of their uncleanness falls on the eve of Passover, so that after haza'ah they would be clean in the evening, when the Passover is to be eaten. For he holds that if an individual is unclean through a reptile and has not performed tebillah (q.v. Glos.), though he can do so and be clean in the evening, nevertheless the Passover may not be slaughtered on his behalf; the same applies to him who is unclean through the dead whose seventh day falls on the eve of Passover, though he too would be clean in the evening if he were besprinkled during the day. Thus he must postpone his sacrifice for the second Passover; and therefore

(2) Where, however, the community as a whole did not sacrifice at the first Passover for some other reason of uncleanness than that of corpse uncleanness, there is no second Passover for individuals who are unclean through a corpse.

(3) v. Num. IX, 10, 13.

(4) In the same way. viz., that they could be clean by the evening, as explained in note 5.

(5) 'And' is an extension, and teaches the inclusion of these.

(6) For he could have the animal sacrificed by another, and he would be clean in the evening to eat it. Hence he must hold that you cannot sacrifice for him whilst he is unclean, i.e., before he performs tebillah, yet even so he incurs kareth since he could have performed tebillah.

(7) The community is not bound to perform haza'ah, even if it could, but sacrifices in uncleanness.

(8) If he held that you may not slaughter etc., then haza'ah would certainly be permitted on the Sabbath and obligatory too, notwithstanding that it is not obligatory upon a community. Since he holds the reverse, however, the actual sacrificing is possible without haza'ah at all.

(9) He cannot eat of the Passover sacrifice, as indeed of all sacrifices, without previous haza'ah.

(10) For the fulfilment of the precept of the paschal sacrifice. Tosaf.: in such a case where he could make himself fit for eating but does not.

(11) Whereas it is stated supra 61a that such a Passover sacrifice is unfit.

(12) When the Sabbath is the eighth day from birth.

(13) In the passage enjoining circumcision upon Abraham and his descendants (Gen. XVII) 'covenant' is mentioned thirteen times, which shows its great importance.

(14) If circumcision is postponed.

(15) For not offering it.

(16) Var. lec. 'ONE'.

(17) Festival sacrifice. Such was obligatory on the first day of all Festivals; hence in the case of Passover, on the fifteenth of Nisan. The obligation is deduced in Hag. 9a from, and ye shall keep it a feast (hag) unto the Lord (Lev. XXIII, 41), hag being interpreted as referring to a Festival sacrifice. In this Mishnah, however, the reference is to a hagigah brought on the fourteenth, and the Mishnah lays down the conditions when it is brought, it being in addition to the hagigah of the fifteenth. Besides the Festival hagigah there was another obligatory sacrifice, called the peace-offering of rejoicing, deduced from, and thou shalt rejoice in thy feast (Deut. XVI, 14). This is discussed anon.

(18) I.e., so many are registered for one paschal lamb that each person can receive but a small portion.

(19) The night between the two days.

(20) The sudden introduction of the hagigah is abrupt and irrelevant, unless it has some point in common with the preceding Mishnah.

(21) Cf. n. 3.

(22) While the next clause proceeds to state when the hagigah does not override the Sabbath, and that is the connection with the preceding Mishnah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 70a

is not obligatory. For if you should think that it is obligatory, let it come [be sacrificed] on the Sabbath, and let it come [when the Passover sacrifice is divided] in large [portions], and in uncleanness. Nevertheless, what is the reason that it comes [when the paschal lamb is divided] in small portions? — As it was taught: The hagigah which comes with the Passover is eaten first, so that the Passover be eaten after the appetite is satisfied.

AND IT IS EATEN FOR TWO DAYS etc. Our Mishnah is not in agreement with the son of Tema. For it was taught: The son of Tema said: The hagigah which comes with the Passover is as the Passover, and it may only be eaten a day and a night, whereas the hagigah of the fifteenth¹ is eaten two days and one night; again, the hagigah of the fourteenth, a man discharges therewith [his duty] on account of rejoicing, but he does not discharge therewith [his duty] on account of hagigah.² What is the son of Tema's reason?³ — As R. Hiyya taught his son, Neither shall the sacrifice of the feast [zebah hag] of the passover be left unto the morning:⁴ 'zebah hag,' this is the hagigah; 'the passover' is what it implies, and the Divine Law saith, 'it shall not be kept overnight'.⁵

The Scholars asked: According to the son of Tema, is it [the hagigah] eaten roast or is it not eaten roast?⁶ [Do we say,] When the Divine Law compared it to the Passover it was in respect of keeping it overnight, but not in respect of roast; or perhaps there is no difference? — Come and hear: On this night all [must be eaten] roast;⁷ and R. Hisda said: These are the words of the son of Tema. This proves it.⁸

The Scholars asked: According to the son of Tema, does it [the hagigah] come from the herd or does it not come from the herd; does it come from females or does it not come from females; does it come a two-year old, or does it not come a two-year old?⁹ [Do we say,] when the Divine Law compared it to the Passover it was in the matter of eating,¹⁰ but not in respect of all [other] things; or perhaps there is no difference? — Come and hear: The hagigah which comes with the Passover is as the Passover: it comes from the flock, but it does not come from the herd; it comes from the males but it does not come from the females; it comes a year old, but it does not come a two-year old, and it may be eaten only a day and a night, and it may be eaten only roast, and it may be eaten only by those who have registered for it. [Now,] whom do you know¹¹ to hold this view?¹² The son of Tema. This proves that we require everything.¹³ This proves it.

The Scholars asked: According to the son of Tema, is it subject to [the prohibition of] breaking a bone, or is it not subject to [the prohibition of] breaking a bone?¹⁴ [Do we say,] though the Divine Law assimilated it to the Passover, yet the Writ saith, ‘[neither shall ye break a bone] thereof,’ [implying] ‘thereof,’ but not of the hagigah;¹⁵ or perhaps, this ‘thereof’ comes [to teach], of a fit [sacrifice], but not of an unfit one?¹⁶ — Come and hear: If a [slaughtering] knife is found on the fourteenth, one may slaughter with it immediately;¹⁷ [if it is found] on the thirteenth he must repeat the tebillah.¹⁸ [If he finds] a chopper.¹⁹ whether on the one or on the other,²⁰ he must repeat the tebillah.²¹ Who [is the authority for this]?²² Shall we say the Rabbis?²³ wherein does a [slaughtering] knife differ, that we assume that it had been immersed;²⁴ because it is fit for [slaughtering] the Passover? Then a chopper too, surely it is fit for [breaking the bones of] the hagigah²⁰ ?²⁵ Hence it must be [the view] of the son of Tema, which proves that it is subject to [the prohibition of] breaking a bone! — No: in truth [it is the view of] the Rabbis, and [this was taught] e.g., when it [the Passover] comes on the Sabbath.²⁶ But since the second clause teaches, If the fourteenth occurred on the Sabbath, he may slaughter with it immediately;²⁷ and [likewise if he finds it] on the fifteenth, he may slaughter with it immediately;²⁸ if a chopper is found tied to a knife, it is as the knife,²⁹ it follows that the first clause³⁰ does not treat of the Sabbath? — Rather it means that it [the Passover] readiness for slaughtering the Passover on the fourteenth. We disregard the possibility that the owner may have lost it some time ago, for Jerusalem was thronged at Passover and it could not have lain long without being discovered. came

(1) V. p. 356, n. 4.

(2) V. note on Mishnah on these two sacrifices. Now the hagigah of the fourteenth is a voluntary sacrifice (supra), and it is a general rule that an animal already dedicated for such cannot be used for all obligatory sacrifice, except in the case of the peace-offering of rejoicing. v. infra, 71a. Hence if the hagigah dedicated for the fourteenth is not killed on that day, it can be utilized the next day as the peace-offering of rejoicing but not as the obligatory hagigah of the fifteenth

(3) That the hagigah may be eaten only a day and a night.

(4) Ex. XXXIV, 25.

(5) Referring to the hagigah too.

(6) I.e., must it be eaten roast or not? Similarly the problems which follow.

(7) V. infra 116a.

(8) That the hagigah too must be roast.

(9) V. Ex. XII, 5: your lamb (sc. the Passover) shall be . . . a male of the first year; ye shall take it from the sheep, or from the goats. Does the same apply to the hagigah or not?

- (10) I.e., in the conditions under which it must be eaten.
- (11) Lit., 'hear'.
- (12) That it may be eaten only a day and a night.
- (13) I.e., it must be like the passover in all respects.
- (14) v. Ex. XII, 46: neither shall ye break a bone thereof (sc. the Passover).
- (15) I.e., there is no interdict in its case.
- (16) If the Passover is unfit its bones may be broken; v. infra 83a.
- (17) Without immersing it. For if it were unclean its owner would have immersed it on the thirteenth, so that it should be clean at sunset (v. Num. XIX, 14-19; shall be clean at even applies to utensils too), in
- (18) I.e., he must immerse it, though even if it was unclean its owner may already have done so.
- (19) A large knife used for cutting up meat and breaking the bones, but not as a rule for slaughtering.
- (20) Viz., the thirteenth or the fourteenth.
- (21) For since the bones of the Passover sacrifice must not be broken, even if it was unclean its owner may not have troubled to immerse it on the thirteenth but waited for the fourteenth, to have it in readiness for the use of breaking bones on the following day, to break the bones of the hagigah of the fifteenth or of the peace-offering of rejoicing.
- (22) Which implies that there is no breaking of bones on Passover eve.
- (23) Who do not assimilate the hagigah of the fourteenth to the paschal sacrifice, and consequently hold that the bones of the former may be broken.
- (24) On the day before by the owner so that he who finds it need not immerse it.
- (25) Why then should the finder repeat the immersion?
- (26) So that a hagigah cannot be brought at all. As there would be no need for the chopper, the owner, it is to be assumed, did not immerse it.
- (27) Sc. even with the chopper, if he has no knife. For if it were unclean its owner would have performed tebillah on Friday, to use it on Sunday (v. n. 4). Since tebillah is forbidden on the Sabbath.
- (28) For the same reason that tebillah must already have been performed.
- (29) And even if found on the fourteenth on a weekday he may slaughter with it immediately, for since they are tied together they must both have received tebillah at the same time.
- (30) Which requires a second immersion for either.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 70b

in large [portions].¹ How can we know?² — Rather it means that it came in uncleanness.³ Yet after all, how could they know?⁴ — The nasi had died.⁵ When did the nasi die? Shall we say that he died on the thirteenth,⁶ then why was it necessary for the owner to perform tebillah for the knife?⁷ Again, if he died on the fourteenth, wherein does the knife differ, that [we say] he [its owner] gave it tebillah, and wherein does the chopper differ, that [we assume] he did not give it tebillah?⁸ — This arises only when the nasi was in a dying condition on the thirteenth. As for the knife, [concerning] which [there is] one doubt,⁹ he would give it tebillah [on the thirteenth]; the chopper, [concerning] which [there are] two doubts,¹⁰ he would not give it tebillah.

It was taught: Judah the son of Durtai separated himself [from the Sages], he and his son Durtai, and went and dwelt in the South.¹¹ '[For,]' said he, 'if Elijah should come and say to Israel, "why did you not sacrifice¹² the hagigah on the Sabbath?" what can they answer him? I am astonished at the two greatest men of our generation. Shemaiah and Abtalyon, who are great Sages and great interpreters [of the Torah], yet they have not told Israel, The hagigah overrides the Sabbath.'¹³ Rab said, What is the reason of the son of Durtai? Because it is written, And thou shalt sacrifice the passover-offering unto the Lord thy God, of the flock and the herd:¹⁴ yet surely the Passover offering is only from lambs or goats? But 'flock' refers to the Passover offering, [while] 'herd' refers to the hagigah, and the Divine Law saith, 'And thou shalt sacrifice the passover-offering'.¹⁵ Said R. Ashi: And are we to arise and explain the reason of schismatics?¹⁶ But the verse comes for [the exegesis] of R. Nahman. For R. Nahman said in Rabbah b. Abbuha's name: How do we know that the left-over of the paschal offering is brought as a peace-offering?¹⁷ Because it is said, 'and thou shalt sacrifice the passover-offering unto the Lord thy God, of the flock and of the herd'. Now, does then the Passover offering come from the herd: surely the Passover offering comes only from lambs or from goats? But [it means] the left-over of the paschal offering is to be [utilized] for something which comes from the flock and from the herd.¹⁸ Now according to the Rabbis, what is the reason that it [the hagigah] does not override the Sabbath, seeing that it is certainly a public sacrifice? — Said R. Illa'a on the authority of R. Judah b. Safra: Scripture saith, And ye shall keep it a feast [hag] unto the Lord seven days in the year.¹⁹ 'Seven!' but there were eight?²⁰ Hence from here [we learn that] the hagigah does not override the Sabbath.²¹ When Rabin came,²² he said: I stated before my teachers, Sometimes you can only find six, e.g., if the first day of the Feast [of Tabernacles] fell on the Sabbath?²³ — Said Abaye: That Abin the childless should say such a thing! Eight is altogether impossible. [while] seven are found in most years.²⁴

'Ulla said in R. Eleazar's name: Peace-offerings which a man slaughtered on the eve of the Festival, he does not discharge therewith [his duty] either on account of rejoicing or on account of hagigah.²⁵ 'On account of rejoicing.' because it is written, and thou shalt sacrifice [peace-offerings . . .] and thou shalt rejoice;²⁶ we require the slaughtering

-
- (1) In which case a hagigah does not accompany it.
 - (2) So MS.M. Cur. edd. 'they know' that a small number had registered for the Passover for which the unknown owner of this chopper was registered. Aliter: 'how could they (the owners) know on the thirteenth that only a small number would register for the Passover, so that it would not be necessary to have the chopper immersed in readiness?' V. Rashi.
 - (3) Hence a hagigah was possible.
 - (4) How could the owner know on the thirteenth that on the morrow the majority of the community would be unclean?
 - (5) And the whole community would have to take part in his funeral, which would defile them.
 - (6) When the vessels are generally taken for tebillah.
 - (7) Seeing that the Passover is brought in uncleanness. Hence the finder should not be permitted to assume that it is clean, as he might then slaughter the Festival peace-offerings with it, which is forbidden. [Even when the Passover comes in uncleanness, the Festival sacrifices on the following or subsequent days must be brought in cleanness:]
 - (8) He would not have known on the thirteenth, and therefore just as he assumed that a clean knife was necessary for slaughtering the Passover, so he would also assume that a clean chopper would be required for breaking the bones of the hagigah which would accompany it.
 - (9) Viz., whether the nasi would die on the fourteenth or not.
 - (10) (i) Whether the nasi would die; and (ii) whether a hagigah would be brought, for even if he did not die, only a few people might register for that particular paschal offering, in which case it would not be required.
 - (11) Far from Jerusalem, so that he could not be in Jerusalem on Passover and therefore avoid the obligation of bringing a hagigah. He held that it was obligatory even if only a small number registered for the paschal offering, and even on the Sabbath.
 - (12) Lit., 'celebrate'.
 - (13) [Judah b. Durtai is held to have belonged to the Sadducean party, and his son is identified with Dortos (v. Josephus, Antiquities XX, 6, 2) who had been captured by Quadratus in Lydda and executed for having incited the Jews in rebellion against the Romans, v. Derenbourg, Essai, p. 187 note.]
 - (14) Deut. XVI, 2.
 - (15) I.e., both are called by the same name, and therefore the same law applies to both.
 - (16) Though of course the Talmud abounds in controversies, even of one against many, and the views of the minorities too have to be explained, in actual practice the minority always fell in with the final decision of the majority. Hence R. Judah the son of Durtai was unjustified in separating himself, and we have no need to study his view; v. Halevi, Doroth I, 5, pp. 206f. — Or perhaps R. Ashi merely meant that since the interpretation of this verse is according to a minority view, it behoves us to know how the verse is interpreted on the view of the Sages. This appears to be the explanation given by R. Han., whose text differs slightly.
 - (17) E.g., if an animal dedicated for a Passover sacrifice was lost, whereupon its owners registered for another animal, and then it was found after the second was sacrificed. Or again, if a certain sum of money was dedicated to buy a paschal lamb, but it was not all expended; then too the surplus must be used for a peace-offering.

(18) Sc. a peace-offering.

(19) Lev. XXIII, 41. This treats of Tabernacles, which was observed for eight days, and the verse teaches that a hagigah was to be brought (v. supra p. 356, n. 4).

(20) For the hagigah, if not brought on the first day of the Festival, could be brought on any other day.

(21) And since one of the eight days must be the Sabbath, there are actually only seven days when it can be brought.

(22) From Palestine to Babylonia.

(23) Why is this too not intimated in Scripture?

(24) Therefore there is no need for Scripture to intimate that there may only be six,

(25) V. note on Mishnah.

(26) Deut. XXVII, 7.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 71a

at the time of rejoicing,¹ which is absent [here]. 'On account of hagigah': this is an obligatory sacrifice,² and every obligatory sacrifice comes from nought but hullin.³

Shall we say that [the following] supports him? [For it was taught]; And thou shalt be altogether [ak] joyful.⁴ this is to include the night of the last day of the Festival for rejoicing.⁵ You say, the night of the last day of the Festival; yet perhaps it is not so, but the night of the first day of the Festival?⁶ Therefore 'ak' is stated, dividing it.⁷ Now what is the reason?⁸ Is it not because he has nought wherewith to rejoice!⁹ — No: [it is] as it states the reason: Why do you prefer¹⁰ to include the night of the last day of the Festival and to exclude the night of the first day of the Festival? I include the night of the last day of the Festival, because there is rejoicing before it, while I exclude the night of the first day of the Festival, seeing that there is no rejoicing before it.¹¹

R. Joseph raised an objection: The hagigah of the fourteenth, one discharges with it [his duty] on account of rejoicing. but one does not discharge with it [his duty] on account of hagigah.¹² [Yet] why so?¹³ Surely we require slaughtering to be at the time of rejoicing, which is lacking [here]?¹⁴ — Said R. Idi b. Abin: It is meant where he delayed and slaughtered it [on the fifteenth]. R. Ashi observed: This too is logical, for if you should not say thus, who taught this teaching? The son of Tema?¹⁵ But [according to] the son of Tema, surely he has disqualified it through keeping it overnight!¹⁶

Raba objected: [The reciting of] hallel¹⁷ and rejoicing¹⁸ are [observed] eight [days].¹⁹ Now if you say [that] we require the slaughtering at the time of rejoicing, then there are many occasions when only seven are found, e.g.. if the first day of the Festival falls on the Sabbath?²⁰ Said R. Huna son of Rab Judah: He rejoices with the he-goats of the Festivals.²¹ Said Raba: Of this there are two refutations: firstly, because the he-goats of the Festivals can be eaten raw [on the Sabbath], but cannot be eaten roast,²² and there is no rejoicing in [eating] raw [meat]; moreover, the Priests eat it; and wherewith do the Israelites rejoice? Rather, said R. Papa: He rejoices with clean garments and old wine.

When Rabin came, he said in R. Eleazar's name: Peace-offerings which one slaughtered on the eve of the Festival, he discharges therewith [his duty] on account of rejoicing, but he cannot discharge therewith [his duty] on account of hagigah. 'He discharges [his duty] on account of rejoicing,' [for] we do not require the slaughtering at the time of rejoicing. 'But not on account of hagigah'; this is an obligatory [sacrifice], and every obligatory [sacrifice] comes from nought but hullin.

An objection is raised: 'And thou shalt be altogether' [ak] joyful:' this is to include the night of the last day of the Festival for rejoicing. You say, to include the light of the last day of the Festival; yet perhaps it is not so, but it is to include the night of the first day of the Festival? Therefore 'ak' is stated, dividing it. Now what is the reason? Is it not because he has no light wherewith to rejoice! — No: [it is] as it was taught. Why do you prefer to include the night of the last day of the Festival and to exclude the night of the first day of the Festival? I include the night of the last day of the Festival, because there is rejoicing before it; while I exclude the night of the first day of the Festival, because there is no rejoicing before it.

R. Kahana said: How do we know that the emurin²³ of the hagigah of the fifteenth are disqualified through being kept overnight?²⁴ Because it is said, neither shall the fat of My feast [haggi] remain all night until morning;²⁵ and in proximity thereto ‘the first’ [is stated],²⁶ to intimate that this ‘morning’ means the first morning.²⁷ To this R. Joseph demurred: [Thus] the reason is that ‘first is written, but if ‘first’ were not written I would say, what does ‘morning’ mean? the second morning; [but] is there a case where the flesh is disqualified from the evening, whereas the emurim [are fit] until morning?²⁸ Said Abaye to him, Yet why not? Surely there is the paschal offering according to R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah, where the flesh is disqualified from midnight,²⁹ whereas the emurim [are fit] until morning? — Said Raba, This is R. Joseph's difficulty: is there a case where the Tanna does not require ‘first’ in respect of the flesh, whereas R. Kahana requires ‘first’ in respect of the emurim?³⁰ What is this [allusion]? — For it was taught: Neither shall any of the flesh which thou sacrificest the first day at even, remain all night until the morning.³¹

(1) Viz., on the Festival itself.

(2) Lit., ‘a matter of an obligation’.

(3) V, p. 357. n. 3.

(4) Deut. XVI, 15. This is superfluous, since v. 14 states, And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast. Hence it is intended as an extension.

(5) I.e., the night of the eighth day. Rashi: It cannot mean the eighth day itself, since ‘seven’ is twice specified (in v. 13 and v. 15). Tosaf.: ‘night’ is not meant particularly. as the same applies to the day. By ‘rejoicing’ is meant the eating of the peace-offering of rejoicing.

(6) Perhaps one must eat of the peace-offering then? And since sacrifices cannot be slaughtered at night, it would be necessary to slaughter it on the eve of the Festival.

(7) Ak is always interpreted as a limitation; hence it excludes the first night.

(8) That you include the last night and exclude the first; why not reverse it?

(9) Since the sacrifice is not to be offered until the following morning. Thus this supports ‘Ulla's statement that the peace-offering of rejoicing cannot be offered on the eve of the Festival.

(10) Lit., ‘what (reason) do you see?’

(11) It is more logical to assume that a continuation of rejoicing already begun is included than that the rejoicing must commence before the time actually prescribed.

(12) V. supra 70a for notes.

(13) Why should he discharge with it his duty on account of rejoicing?

(14) He understood it to mean that it was actually slaughtered on the fourteenth.

(15) As stated supra 70a.

(16) Since he holds that the hagigah of the fourteenth may be eaten only a day and a night. I.e., not after the night of the fifteenth, like the Passover. Hence he must have slaughtered it on the fifteenth.

(17) ‘Praise’ — i.e., Ps. CXIII-CXVIII, which are recited on every Festival.

(18) With the peace-offerings of rejoicing.

(19) The reference is to the Feast of Tabernacles.

(20) When the peace-offering may not be slaughtered.

(21) V. Num. XXVIII, 22, 30; XXIX, 16 et seq. These were public sacrifices, and therefore slaughtered even on the Sabbath.

(22) Though they are slaughtered on the Sabbath, their roasting or cooking does not override the Sabbath.

(23) V. Glos.

(24) Though its flesh may be eaten the whole of the following day too.

(25) Ex. XXIII, 18; ‘haggi’ refers to the hagigah.

(26) ראשית The first (E.V. ‘choicest’) of the fruits etc. Here, however, it is read with ‘morning’, as explained in the text.

(27) I.e., the fat is not to remain until the first morning after the offering is sacrificed.

(28) Surely not, for the flesh may be eaten only on the day it is slaughtered and on the following, but not the night after it!

(29) V. infra 120b.

(30) The sanctity of emurim, which are burnt on the altar, is naturally greater than that of the flesh, which is eaten, and accordingly the former becomes unfit more easily than the latter. Yet we see anon that the Tanna assumes that morning' written in connection with the flesh must mean the first morning. without having recourse to ראשית 'first'; why then does R. Kahana require the proximity of ראשית 'first' in order to establish that 'morning' written in connection with the emurim means the first morning?

(31) Deut. XVI, 4.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 71b

this teaches concerning the hagigah of the fourteenth, that it may be eaten two days and one night.¹ Yet perhaps it is not so, but [only] one day and one night?² When it [Scripture] says, 'the first day,' the second morning³ is meant.⁴ Yet perhaps it is not so, but the first morning [is meant], and to what do I relate⁵ [the case of] the hagigah which may be eaten two days and one night?⁶ [To all other hagigoth] excepting this? When [Scripture] says thereof, But if [the sacrifice of his offering be] a vow, or a freewill-offering,⁷ it teaches concerning the hagigah of the fourteenth that it may be eaten for two days and one night.⁸

The Master said.⁹ 'Yet perhaps it is not so, but the first morning [is meant]'. But you have [already] said, 'When it [Scripture] says. "the first day" the second morning is meant'? — This is what he means: Yet perhaps it is not so, but the Writ speaks of two hagigoth, one the hagigah of the fourteenth, and one the hagigah of the fifteenth, and the former [must not remain] until its morning, while the latter [must not remain] until its morning?¹⁰ Then he argues, as to our general ruling¹¹ [that there is] a hagigah which is eaten two days and one night.¹² if so, in which [case does] 'if, a vow or a freewill-offering' [hold good]? if the hagigah of the fourteenth, surely a day and a night is written in connection therewith; if the hagigah of the fifteenth, surely a day and a night is written in connection therewith?¹³ But this is in respect of the hagigah of the fifteenth, while the whole of the other verse is in respect of the hagigah of the fourteenth [only,] [and thus] it teaches concerning the hagigah of the fourteenth that it may be eaten two days and one night. Thus the reason is that 'on the first day until the morning' is written, so that what does 'morning' mean? the second morning;¹⁴ hence wherever 'morning' is written without qualification, it means the first morning, even if 'first'¹⁵ is not written in connection with it.¹⁶ MISHNAH. IF THE PASSOVER WAS SLAUGHTERED FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE¹⁷ ON THE SABBATH, HE [THE SLAUGHTERER] IS LIABLE TO A SIN-OFFERING ON ITS ACCOUNT.¹⁸ WHILE ALL OTHER SACRIFICES WHICH HE SLAUGHTERED AS A PASSOVER,¹⁹ IF THEY ARE NOT ELIGIBLE,²⁰ HE IS CULPABLE; WHILE IF THEY ARE ELIGIBLE, — R. ELIEZER RULES HIM LIABLE TO A SIN-OFFERING, WHILE R. JOSHUA RULES HIM NOT CULPABLE,²¹ SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM: IF THE PASSOVER, WHICH IS PERMITTED FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, YET WHEN HE CHANGES ITS PURPOSE HE IS CULPABLE; THEN [OTHER] SACRIFICES, WHICH ARE FORBIDDEN [EVEN] FOR THEIR OWN PURPOSE,²² IF HE CHANGES THEIR PURPOSE IS IT NOT LOGICAL THAT HE IS CULPABLE! R. JOSHUA ANSWERED HIM, NOT SO. IF YOU SAY [THUS] OF THE PASSOVER, [HE IS CULPABLE] BECAUSE HE CHANGED IT FOR SOMETHING THAT IS FORBIDDEN; WILL YOU SAY [THE SAME] OF [OTHER] SACRIFICES, WHERE HE CHANGED THEM FOR SOMETHING THAT IS PERMITTED?²³ SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM, LET THE PUBLIC SACRIFICES²⁴ PROVE IT, WHICH ARE PERMITTED FOR THEIR OWN SAKE,²⁵ YET HE WHO SLAUGHTERS [OTHER SACRIFICES] IN THEIR NAME IS CULPABLE. R. JOSHUA ANSWERED HIM: NOT SO. IF YOU SAY [THUS] OF PUBLIC SACRIFICES, [THAT IS] BECAUSE THEY HAVE A LIMIT,²⁶ Will YOU SAY [THE SAME] OF THE PASSOVER, WHICH HAS NO LIMIT?²⁷ R. MEIR SAID:

HE TOO WHO SLAUGHTERS [OTHER SACRIFICES] IN THE NAME OF PUBLIC SACRIFICE IS NOT LIABLE.

IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT²⁸ FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT ITS EATERS,²⁹ OR FOR THOSE WHO WERE NOT REGISTERED³⁰, FOR UNCIRCUMCISED OR FOR UNCLEAN [PERSONS], HE IS CULPABLE; [IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT] FOR ITS EATERS AND FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT ITS EATERS, FOR THOSE WHO ARE REGISTERED FOR IT AND FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT REGISTERED FOR IT, FOR CIRCUMCISED AND FOR UNCIRCUMCISED, FOR UNCLEAN AND FOR CLEAN [PERSONS], HE IS NOT LIABLE.³¹ IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT, AND IT WAS FOUND TO POSSESS A BLEMISH, HE IS LIABLE. IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT AND IT WAS FOUND TEREFAH³² INTERNALLY,³³ HE IS NOT LIABLE.³⁴ IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT, AND [THEN] IT BECAME KNOWN THAT ITS OWNERS HAD WITHDRAWN THEIR HANDS FROM IT,³⁵ OR THAT THEY HAD DIED, OR THAT THEY HAD BECOME UNCLEAN, HE IS NOT CULPABLE, BECAUSE HE SLAUGHTERED WITH PERMISSION.³⁶

(1) Understanding 'morning' to refer to the sixteenth of Nisan.

(2) Relating 'morning' to the fifteenth.

(3) After it is slaughtered, i.e., the morning of the sixteenth.

(4) Lit., 'said'. For 'the first day' implies that it may be eaten the whole of the first day after it is slaughtered.

(5) Lit., 'how do I fulfil?'

(6) That there are such hagigoth (pl. hagigah) is deduced anon.

(7) Lev. VII, 16.

(8) The verse continues: it shall be eaten on the day he offereth his sacrifice and on the morrow. Thus two days are allotted, which 'if a vow' is regarded as superfluous, and therefore is interpreted as an extension to include the present case.

(9) The Talmud now proceeds to elucidate this Baraita leading up to the explanation of R. Joseph's argument.

(10) I.e., the former must not remain until the morning of the fifteenth, while the latter must not remain until the morning of the sixteenth. Then the verse would be translated thus: 'neither shall any of the flesh . . . which thou sacrificest . . . at even' — sc. of the hagigah of the fourteenth — 'remain all night', which naturally means until the morning of the fifteenth; while that 'which thou sacrificest the first day', i.e., on the fifteenth, must not remain . . . until the morning' viz., of the sixteenth.

(11) Lit., 'what is established to us'.

(12) Rashi: but as to our principle that there is a hagigah apart from this which may be eaten etc. Thus a different meaning is now given to the phrase 'apart from this'.

(13) On the present hypothesis.

(14) Because of 'the first day'.

(15) אֵשֶׁת.

(16) This is the point of R. Joseph's objection as explained by Raba,

(17) Lit., 'not for its name' — e.g., as a peace-offering.

(18) For having desecrated the Sabbath unintentionally, as he thought that just as it is permitted for its own purposes³ it is permitted for another purpose.

(19) I.e., the animals had been consecrated for other sacrifices.

(20) For a Passover, e.g., if they are females or two-years old (v. Ex. XII, 5).

(21) R. Eleazar holds that even when a man performs a forbidden action while thinking that he is doing a religious deed, he is culpable. R. Joshua, however maintains that if the action actually performed is a religious deed, even a slight one, he is not liable, as he is regarded not as having unwittingly desecrated the Sabbath, but as having erred in a religious matter. This applies to the present case, for he did offer a sacrifice, and R. Joshua rules supra 62b that all sacrifices, including the Passover, even if slaughtered for a different purpose, are nevertheless fit. But in the first case he definitely did not perform a religious action, since all know that a female etc. is not eligible for a Passover, and therefore both agree that he is culpable.

(22) On the Sabbath.

- (23) I.e., he slaughtered them as a Passover, which is actually permitted.
- (24) Rashi: the sacrifices which are prescribed (amure fr. amur).
- (25) The daily burnt-offering and the additional offerings of Sabbaths and Festivals override the Sabbath.
- (26) Only a few animals are slaughtered as public sacrifices, and it is easy to avoid the mistake. Therefore when a man slaughters an animal consecrated for a different purpose as a public sacrifice, he cannot be regarded as having erred in a religious act but as one who unwittingly desecrated the Sabbath.
- (27) An enormous number of animals were slaughtered (cf. supra 64b) — seemingly limitless. Hence his error is pardonable, and he is regarded as having erred in a religious duty.
- (28) The Passover offering, on the Sabbath.
- (29) Such who could not eat of it; e.g.. sick or old people.
- (30) Lit., ‘numbered’,
- (31) In the former case the offering is unfit; hence his act constitutes desecration of the Sabbath; but in the latter case the offering is valid, v. supra 61a.
- (32) V. Glos.
- (33) Lit., ‘in a secret part’.
- (34) A sin-offering is incurred only when a person intends doing what he does, but is unaware that in the circumstances it is forbidden; he is then technically called shogeg, an unwitting offender, But if he did not intend doing it at all, he is called anus, the victim of an unforeseen accident, and is not liable. Now an external examination of the animal would have revealed its blemish; his neglect to do this renders him shogeg, as though he had known that it was blemished, but thought it permitted. But he could not have known here that it was terefah; therefore he is regarded as anus, and is not culpable.
- (35) I.e., they had re-registered for a different animal before this was slaughtered.
- (36) He could not have known of this, and therefore he too is regarded as anus.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 72a

GEMARA. What are we discussing? Shall we say, where he erred?¹ then you may infer from this that abrogation in error constitutes abrogation?² Hence it means that he [intentionally] abrogates [its status].³ Then consider the sequel: WHILE ALL OTHER SACRIFICES WHICH HE SLAUGHTERED AS A PASSOVER, IF THEY ARE NOT ELIGIBLE, HE IS CULPABLE; WHILE IF THEY ARE ELIGIBLE,- R. ELIEZER RULES HIM LIABLE To A SIN-OFFERING, WHILE R. JOSHUA RULES HIM NOT CULPABLE. But if he abrogates [their status], what does it matter whether they are eligible or they are not eligible?⁴ Hence it obviously refers to a man who errs; [then] the first clause refers to a man who abrogates [its status], whereas the second clause refers to him who errs? — Said R. Abin: Yes the first clause refers to a man who abrogates, whereas the second clause refers to him who errs. R. Isaac b. Joseph found R. Abbahu standing in a large concourse of people. Said he to him, How is our Mishnah meant? — The first clause refers to a man who abrogates, whereas the second clause refers to him who errs, he answered him. He learnt it from him forty times, and it seemed to him as though it were lying in his wallet.⁵

We learned: SAID R. ELIEZER: IF THE PASSOVER, WHICH IS PERMITTED FOR ITS OWN PURPOSE, YET WHEN HE CHANGES ITS PURPOSE, HE IS CULPABLE; THEN [OTHER] SACRIFICES, WHICH ARE FORBIDDEN FOR THEIR OWN PURPOSE, IF HE CHANGES THEIR PURPOSE IS IT NOT LOGICAL THAT HE IS CULPABLE. But if this [interpretation] is so, surely they are dissimilar,⁶ since the first clause refers to a man who abrogates, whereas the second clause refers to him who errs? — In R. Eliezer's view there is no difference. But according to R. Joshua, who holds that there is a difference, let him answer him thus? — He says thus to him: According to my view, they are dissimilar, [for] the first clause refers to a man who abrogates, whereas the second clause refers to him who errs. [But even] according to you, it is NOT SO. IF YOU SAY [THUS] OF THE PASSOVER, [HE IS CULPABLE] BECAUSE HE CHANGED IT FOR SOMETHING THAT IS FORBIDDEN; WILL YOU SAY [THE SAME] OF [OTHER] SACRIFICES, WHERE HE CHANGED THEM FOR SOMETHING THAT IS PERMITTED?

SAID R. ELIEZER TO HIM: LET THE PUBLIC SACRIFICES PROVE IT, WHICH ARE PERMITTED FOR THEIR OWN SAKE, YET HE WHO SLAUGHTERS [OTHER SACRIFICES] IN THEIR NAME IS CULPABLE. R. JOSHUA ANSWERED HIM: NOT SO: IF YOU SAY [THUS] OF PUBLIC SACRIFICES, [THAT IS] BECAUSE THEY HAVE A LIMIT; WILL YOU SAY [THE SAME] OF THE PASSOVER, WHICH HAS NO LIMIT? Are we to say that wherever there is a limit R. Joshua holds him culpable? Yet surely infants have a limit⁷ yet we learned: He who had two infants for circumcision, one for circumcision after the Sabbath and the other for circumcision on the Sabbath,⁸ and he erred⁹ and circumcised the one belonging to after the Sabbath on the Sabbath, he is culpable.¹⁰ [If he had] one for circumcision on the eve of the Sabbath and another for circumcision on the Sabbath, and he erred and circumcised the one belonging to the eve of the Sabbath on the Sabbath, — R. Eliezer holds him liable to a sin-offering.¹¹ but R. Joshua exempts him,¹² — Said R. Ammi: The circumstances here are e.g., that he first circumcised [the infant] of the eve of the Sabbath on the Sabbath, so that there is this [infant] of the Sabbath with whom he is pre-occupied;¹³ here e.g.. it means that he first slaughtered the public sacrifices at the beginning.¹⁴

If so, [when] ‘R. MEIR SAID: HE TOO WHO SLAUGHTERS [OTHER SACRIFICES] IN THE NAME OF PUBLIC SACRIFICES IS NOT LIABLE’ — [he meant] even if he had first slaughtered the public sacrifices at the beginning? Surely it was taught. R. Hiyya of Ebel ‘Arab¹⁵ said in R. Meir's name: R. Eliezer and R. Joshua did not differ concerning him who had two infants, one for circumcision on the eve of the Sabbath and one for circumcision on the Sabbath, and he erred and circumcised the one belonging to the eve of the Sabbath on the Sabbath [both agreeing] that he is culpable. About what do they disagree? About a man who had two infants, one for circumcision after the Sabbath and another for circumcision on the Sabbath, and he erred and circumcised the one belonging to after the Sabbath on the Sabbath, R. Eliezer ruling him liable to a sin-offering, while R. Joshua exempts [him].¹⁶ Now is that logical?¹⁷ If there [in the second clause], where he did not perform a religious duty.¹⁸ R. Joshua exempts him; then where he did perform a religious duty, he rules him liable!¹⁹ Said the School of R. Jannai: The first clause means e.g., that he previously circumcised [the infant] belonging to the Sabbath on the eve of the Sabbath,

(1) Thinking that it was a different sacrifice.

(2) Lit., ‘uprooting’. By slaughtering it for a different purpose he abrogates (lit., ‘uproots’) its true status; but this matter is disputed in Men. 49a.

(3) Thinking, however, that this is permitted.

(4) Since he deliberately abrogates its designation, he is certainly not erring in thinking that he is performing a religious act; why then does R. Joshua hold him not liable?

(5) I.e., he then knew it perfectly, and was certain that he would not forget it.

(6) Sc. the two cases.

(7) I.e., in the case adduced he knows definitely that he has only one infant for circumcision on the Sabbath, and therefore when he circumcises another his error is inexcusable, as explained in the note on the Mishnah.

(8) E.g.. twins, one being born on the Sabbath late in the day, and the second born after nightfall (or even during twilight).

(9) Lit., ‘forgot’.

(10) For unwittingly desecrating the Sabbath. For since circumcision is not obligatory before the eighth day, this is not circumcision but the mere infliction of a wound, which entails culpability.

(11) For though he has actually fulfilled a precept, nevertheless circumcision after its proper time does not override the Sabbath.

(12) He erred though fulfilling a precept, viz., because he was occupied with the circumcision of the second, which was actually obligatory for that day; and he also did fulfill a precept by circumcising the first, and R. Joshua holds that in such a case he is not culpable. Hence here too, if he slaughtered a private sacrifice for a public sacrifice, he was occupied with a precept, viz., slaughtering a sacrifice, and he did fulfil a precept, for the sacrifice he did actually offer is valid.

Hence he should not be liable.

(13) When he circumcised the infant whose circumcision was due on the previous day, he had not yet circumcised the other; hence his error arose because he was rightly pre-occupied with the obligation of circumcision on that day.

(14) So that his subsequent error was unjustified, since he had no pre-occupation with any obligation of offering sacrifices at all when he made that error, all permitted sacrifices on that day having been disposed of.

(15) [In the Gilead district, v. Horowitz, Palestine, p. 6.]

(16) It is now assumed that in the first clause R. Meir holds him culpable when he circumcised both, because he thought that it was already time for both, and he first circumcised the infant belonging to the Sabbath, which was due for that day, and then circumcised the other. Now though he did actually perform a religious duty, yet since there was no occasion to be further occupied with this one after having circumcised the one belonging to the Sabbath, he is not regarded as having erred in the fulfilment of a precept. Whereas in the second clause he is exempt because he was pre-occupied with the infant belonging to the Sabbath and circumcised the other by mistake; for it is assumed that he certainly did not circumcise both on that day, as he must have known that one was due for the next day. Thus we see that where he has no occasion at all to be occupied at present with a precept, R. Meir rules him liable.

(17) That the reason is as stated in the last note.

(18) The infant not yet being due for circumcision.

(19) Surely not!

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 72b

so that the Sabbath does not stand to be overridden¹ whereas in the second clause the Sabbath stands to be overridden by him;² [thus] here, [too], surely the Sabbath stands to be overridden in respect of a public sacrifice.³ R. Ashi said to R. Kahana: But here too [in the first clause] the Sabbath stands to be overridden in connection with infants in general? Nevertheless it was not given [to be overridden] in connection with this man, he answered him.

WHILE ALL OTHER SACRIFICES WHICH HE SLAUGHTERED AS A PASSOVER, IF THEY ARE NOT ELIGIBLE, HE IS CULPABLE; WHILE IF THEY ARE ELIGIBLE, — R. ELIEZER RULES HIM LIABLE TO A SIN-OFFERING, WHILE R. JOSHUA RULES HIM NOT CULPABLE. Which Tanna draws a distinction between eligible and not eligible? It is R. Simeon. For it was taught: The sacrifices which are eligible [for a Passover] and the sacrifices which are not eligible are as one; and similarly he who slaughters for the sake of public sacrifices is not liable; this is R. Meir's view. R. Simeon said: R. Eliezer and R. Joshua did not differ about those which are not eligible, [agreeing] that he is liable. About what do they differ? About those which are eligible. R. Eliezer ruling him liable to a sin-offering, while R. Joshua declares him not liable.

R. Bibi said in R. Eleazar's name: R. Meir declared him not liable even [if it was] a calf of a peace-offering sacrifice which he slaughtered in the name of a Passover-offering.⁴ Said R. Zera to R. Bibi, But R. Johanan said: R. Meir admitted [that he is liable] in the case of blemished [animals]?⁵ — He is not pre-occupied with blemished animals [at all],⁶ whereas he is occupied with this [calf],⁷ he answered him.

Raba asked R. Nahman: What is R. Meir's opinion⁸ [where a man slaughters] hulin for the sake of a Passover?⁹ Said he to him: R. Meir declared him not liable even [if he slaughtered] hulin for the sake of a Passover. But R. Johanan said: R. Meir admitted [that he is liable] in the case of blemished [animals]? Blemished [animals] cannot be confused [for these] these can be confused,¹⁰ Is then R. Meir's reason because they can be confused or they cannot be confused; surely R. Bibi said in R. Eleazar's name, R. Meir declared him exempt even [if it was] a calf of a peace-offering sacrifice which he slaughtered in the name of a Passover-offering,¹¹ which proves that R. Meir's reason is because he is pre-occupied with the [sacrificing of an animal].¹² — Said he to him, If he is pre-occupied [he is not liable] even if it cannot be confused; if it can be confused [he is not liable] even if he is not pre-occupied [with sacrificing], which excludes blemished [animals], which can neither be confused nor is he indeed pre-occupied [with the sacrificing of them].

R. Zera and R. Samuel b. Isaac were sitting in the hall of R. Samuel b. Isaac[’s house], and they sat and said: R. Simeon b. Lakish said: If a man mistook a spit of nothar¹³ for a spit of [ordinary] roast meat¹⁴ and he ate it, he is liable.¹⁵ While R. Johanan said: If a man had intercourse with his wife, a niddah,¹³ he is liable; if he had intercourse with his yebamah,¹³ a niddah, he is not liable.¹⁶ Some say, In the former case¹⁷ he is all the more liable, seeing that he did not perform a religious duty [at all].¹⁸ Others say, In the former case he would not be liable. What is the reason? It is only there¹⁹ because he should have asked; but here, that he could not have asked,²⁰ [he is] not [liable].

Now [according to] R. Johanan, wherein does his yebamah differ? Because he performed a religious duty! [Then in the case of] his wife too he performed a religious duty.²¹ — It refers to his wife when she is pregnant. But there is the pleasure of the periodical visit?²² — It was not at the time of her periodical visit. But Raba said: A man is bound to please his wife with a good deed?²³ — It was near her [menstruation] date,²⁴ If so, the same [applies to] his yebamah?²⁵ — he is bashful towards his yebamah,²⁶ [but] he is not bashful towards his wife.

Now R. Johanan, according to whom [does he give his ruling]? Shall we say, according to R. Jose, for we learned, R. Jose said: If the first festival-day of the Feast²⁷ fell on the Sabbath, and one forgot [himself] and carried out the palm-branch²⁸ into the street,²⁹ he is not liable [to a sin-offering], because he carried it out with permission.³⁰ But perhaps it is different there, because his time is urgent?³¹ Again, if [it is] in accordance with R. Joshua’s [ruling] on infants,³² there too his time is urgent? — Rather, it is in accordance with R. Joshua’s [ruling] on terumah. For we learned: If he [a priest] was eating terumah and it became known that he was the son of a divorced woman or of a haluzah,³³ R. Eliezer holds him liable for the principal plus a fifth,³⁴ while R. Joshua exempts [him].³⁵ Perhaps [however] this is as R. Bibi b. Abaye. for R. Bibi b. Abaye said: This refers to terumah on Passover eve, since its time is urgent?³⁶ Alternatively, terumah is different, as it is designated ‘abodah,³⁷ and the Divine Law declared ‘abodah valid,³⁸ For we learned: If he was standing and offering [sacrifices] and it became known that he was the son of a divorced woman or of a haluzah, all the sacrifices which he offered on the altar are invalid; but R. Joshua declares them valid. Now we said, what is R. Joshua’s reason? Because it is written, Bless, Lord, his substance [helo] and accept the work of his hands.³⁹ Now where is terumah designated ‘abodah? For it was taught: It once happened that R. Tarfon had not attended the Beth Hamidrash the previous evening. The [following] morning R. Gamaliel met him and said to him ‘Why did you not attend the Beth Hamidrash last night?’ ‘I performed an ‘abodah,’ replied he. ‘All your words are nought but mysteries.’⁴⁰ he retorted, ‘for whence have we ‘abodah nowadays?’⁴¹ Said he to him, ‘Behold, it is said,

(1) And he had not yet discovered his mistake when he came to perform circumcision on the Sabbath. Thus, though he thought that he was occupied with a religious duty, and did in fact perform one, he is nevertheless liable, because the Sabbath did not stand to be violated by him, since there was no infant left for whom the Sabbath must be violated.

(2) Hence he erred in the matter of a religious duty, and R. Meir holds that such is not liable even if he did not eventually perform a religious duty at all. Thus here too, if he slaughters a private sacrifice as a public sacrifice, the Sabbath did stand to be overridden in respect of a public sacrifice, and even if it had actually been slaughtered already the error is excusable, and he is not culpable.

(3) As explained in last note.

(4) Though I might think that it is impossible to confuse these two.

(5) And he assumes that the two cases are alike, since in both an error should be impossible.

(6) Since he never dedicated them as sacrifices.

(7) Having set them aside for an offering, his mind was pre-occupied with them and he might have erred in offering them for another purpose.

(8) Lit., ‘what (says) he’?

- (9) On the Sabbath. No animal may be slaughtered as a sacrifice unless it is first consecrated.
- (10) A man cannot err in respect of blemished animals, whereas he can forget that an animal has not been consecrated.
- (11) Though these too cannot be confused.
- (12) But he is not occupied in sacrificing hullin.
- (13) V. Glos.
- (14) Lit., 'a spit of nothar was exchanged to him for a spit roast'.
- (15) To a sin-offering, which the unwitting consumption of nothar involves. The roast meat was that of a sacrifice, while the eating of sacrifices is a religious duty, as it is written, and they shall eat those wherewith atonement was made (Ex. XXIX, 33). Thus he rules that he is liable even where he erred in thinking that he was fulfilling a religious duty.
- (16) As explained below, the first case means immediately prior to her menstruation period, so that he did not fulfil a religious duty. But in the latter case he fulfils a religious duty (v. Deut. XXV, 5).
- (17) Viz., that dealt with by R. Simeon b. Lakish.
- (18) Whereas he did perform a religious duty by rendering to his wife her conjugal rights.
- (19) Viz., where he cohabited with his wife, that he is liable.
- (20) There was none to ask about the spit.
- (21) Viz., that of procreation, which is enjoined in Gen. I, 28: be fruitful, and multiply.
- (22) V. Keth. 61b,
- (23) Sc. intercourse, even at other times too.
- (24) When one must hold aloof from his wife.
- (25) Neither in her case is there any religious obligation when her menstruation date is near?
- (26) Therefore he could not ask her.
- (27) 'Feast' (hag) without a further determinant always means the Feast of Tabernacles.
- (28) V. Lev, XXIII, 40.
- (29) Carrying from private into public ground constitutes a forbidden labour on the Sabbath; v. Shab.7 2a, 73a.
- (30) I.e., though his action is forbidden, nevertheless it was done as a religious duty. Thus this is similar to the case dealt with by R. Johanan.
- (31) He must do it within a fixed period; hence his anxiety not to miss that period excuses his forgetfulness.
- (32) V. supra 72a.
- (33) V. Glos. — whom a priest may not marry (Lev. XXI,7- a haluzah is forbidden by Rabbinical law only); the issue of such a union is hallal (profaned) who ranks as a zar (lay Israelite) and must not eat terumah under the same penalties as a zar.
- (34) Which a zar who eats terumah unwittingly must pay. v. Lev, XXII, 14.
- (35) Because he erred in thinking that he was performing a religious duty; v. p. 374, n. 3; and the same applies to terumah.
- (36) I.e., it was terumah of leaven and so he was in a hurry to consume it (R. Han.).
- (37) 'Abodah, lit., 'service', means the sacrificial service; it is now stated that the eating of terumah is likewise 'abodah.
- (38) When performed by a hallal, though he is not eligible to do it in the first place. Hence though he may not eat terumah, he is nevertheless not liable if he does eat it.
- (39) Deut, XXXIII, 11. The verse refers to priests, and helo (E.V.. substance) is derived here from hullin (non-sacred, profane); thus it is translated, Bless . . . (even) him who is profaned (hallal) and accept etc., i.e., let his service be valid.
- (40) Lit., 'words of astonishment'.
- (41) After the destruction of the Temple.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 73a

I give you the priesthood as a service of ['abodath] gift; and the common man that draweth nigh shall be put to death:¹ [thus] they made the eating of terumah in the borders² as [equivalent to] the 'abodah in the Temple.

IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT ITS EATERS [etc.]. That is obvious: since it is [taught] there³ [that it is] unfit, he is liable here?⁴ — Because the second clause teaches, HE IS NOT LIABLE, the first clause teaches, HE IS LIABLE. But that too is obvious: Since [the sacrifice] is fit there, he is not liable here?— Rather, because he teaches, IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT FOR A DIFFERENT PURPOSE ON THE SABBATH, he also teaches [about] THOSE WHO ARE NOT ITS EATERS. And what is the purpose of that itself?⁵ — [He states it] because he wishes to teach the controversy of R. Eliezer and R. Joshua.⁶

R. Huna b. Hinena said to his son, ‘When you go before R. Zerika, ask him: On the view that he who causes damage through a wound is not liable,⁷ [when we learned] IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT FOR THOSE WHO ARE NOT ITS EATERS, HE IS LIABLE, what [of positive value] has he effected? — He effected [this. viz.,] that if they [the emurim] ascended [the top of the altar], they do not descend.⁸ IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT, AND IT WAS FOUND TO POSSESS A BLEMISH, HE IS LIABLE: what [of positive value] has he effected?⁹ — He effected [something positive] in the case of cataracts in the eye,¹⁰ this being in accordance with R. Akiba, who maintained: If they [the emurim] ascended, they do not descend,¹¹ IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT AND IT WAS FOUND TO BE TEREFAH INTERNALLY, HE IS NOT CULPABLE. Hence if it is in an exposed part, he is culpable; [yet] what has he effected?¹² — He effected its withdrawal from the scope of nebelah.¹³ Rabina demurred: As to what was taught: He who slaughters a sin-offering on the Sabbath without [the Temple] to an idol, is liable on account thereof to three sin-offerings:¹⁴ -what has he effected?¹⁵ -Said R. ‘Awira: Because he withdraws it from [the interdict of] a limb [cut] from a live animal.¹⁶

IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT AND IT BECAME KNOWN etc. R. Huna said in Rab's name: A guilt-offering which was transferred to pasture and [then] slaughtered without a specified purpose is fit for a burnt-offering.¹⁷ This proves that he holds that it does not require [express] abrogation.¹⁸ If so, [even] if it was not transferred too?¹⁹ [When it is sacrificed thus immediately] after atonement it is preventively forbidden on account of [when it is sacrificed thus even] before atonement.²⁰ And whence do you rule [thus]? For we learned: A guilt-offering whose owner died or whose owner [otherwise] obtained atonement must graze until it becomes unfit;²¹ then it is sold, and its money falls [is utilized] for a voluntary offering.²² R. Eliezer said: It is left to die.²³ R. Joshua said: he can sell it and bring a burnt-offering for its money.²⁴ Thus, only for its money, but not that itself, because he preventively forbids [it when sacrificed] after atonement on account of [when it is sacrificed] before atonement. This proves it.

R. Hisda raised an objection against R. Huna: IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT AND IT BECAME KNOWN THAT THE OWNERS HAD WITHDRAWN THEIR HANDS etc.

(1) Num. XVIII, 7. ‘Service of gift’ refers to the priestly dues, which includes terumah, and it is designated here ‘abohah.

(2) This is a technical term denoting all places without the Temple.

(3) Supra 61a.

(4) For its unfitness renders his action a desecration of the Sabbath.

(5) For seemingly the same principles are involved here too,

(6) Lit., ‘to make R. Eliezer and R. Joshua dispute’.

(7) In general, the desecration of the Sabbath involves culpability only when it has a positive, beneficial effect. For causing damage, however, a man is not liable (Shab. 105b); but in respect to damage by wounding there is a controversy ibid, 106a.

(8) If a sacrifice becomes unfit in the Temple Court and its emurim (v. Glos.) are placed on the altar for burning, they do not descend but must be burnt there.

(9) For if the emurim of a blemished animal sacrificed unwittingly are laid on the altar, they must be taken down.

(10) Which are a blemish in respect to a sacrifice.

(11) In this case, since it is a kind of blemish that does not apply to a bird-offering, v. Zeb. 85b.

(12) For here too if the emurim are taken up to the altar they must go down again.

(13) V. Glos. As nebelah it would defile, whereas now it does not defile.

(14) (i) For slaughtering on the Sabbath: (ii) for sacrificing to an idol: and (iii) for slaughtering a sacrifice without the Temple.

(15) Seeing that the slaughtering does not withdraw it from the scope of defilement, since an idol sacrifice becomes a source of defilement!

(16) A limb cut from a live animal is forbidden even to a non-Jew. His present action renders that interdict impossible (Rashi). R. Han.: a man is culpable when he eats as much as an olive of the limb of a live animal even if it is made up of flesh, tendons and bones; now, however, it ranks as nebelah, and he is liable only when he eats as much as an olive of the flesh, by itself, excluding the tendons and bones.

(17) A sin-offering and a guilt-offering cannot be brought as votive sacrifices, but only when they are due for transgression. Now, if a man dedicates an animal for one of these, and then dies, or dedicates and sacrifices another animal in its place, then the first, if a sin-offering, must be allowed to perish; if a guilt-offering, it must be put out to pasture until it receives a blemish, when it is redeemed and reverts to hullin (v. Glos.), while the redemption money is allocated to a special fund for voluntary sacrifices, which take the form of burnt-offerings. Now, if he slaughtered it (in the Temple Court) before it received a blemish, it is valid as a burnt-offering, since that would eventually have been brought in any case. The flesh is then burnt on the altar, while the hide belongs to the priests.

(18) Lit., 'uprooting'. Since this is its ultimate destiny, he need not expressly abrogate its status of a guilt-offering.

(19) I.e., if it was slaughtered as a burnt-offering immediately its owner died etc., it should be fit.

(20) For the two cases may be confused. But once it is actually put out to pasture there is no fear of confusion. — From the text and Tosaf. a.l. it would appear that if he slaughters it as a burnt-offering before transferring it to pasture it is unfit, even if it was done. While even after it was transferred to pasture it is fit for a burnt-offering only if it was thus sacrificed, so that we are faced with a fait accompli. But at the outset it may not be sacrificed even after it is transferred to pasture.

(21) For a sacrifice by receiving a blemish.

(22) I.e., the money is placed in the fund for voluntary sacrifices.

(23) For he holds that a guilt-offering is the same as a sin-offering.

(24) I.e., the owner brings it as his own sacrifice, and the money does not go into the fund. Thus it is a private sacrifice, so that he himself can slaughter it, he lays his hands upon it (Lev. I, 4), and the accompanying drink-offerings are at his expense. Whereas when the money goes into the fund it is brought as a public sacrifice, and the foregoing are absent.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 73b

Now it was taught thereon: During the week in such circumstances it must be burnt immediately. Now it is well if you say that it requires abrogation: this is a Passover, and since it has no owners, its disqualification is in itself, [and] for that reason it must be burnt immediately. But if you say that it does not require abrogation [then] from the beginning¹ it is a peace-offering; On account of what [then] is its disqualification? [Presumably] on account of something extraneous, viz., that he slaughtered it after the evening tamid!² [But] then it requires disfigurement? For it was taught, This is the general rule: Wherever its disqualification is in itself, it must be burnt immediately; [if it is] in the blood or in its owner, [the flesh] must become disfigured and [then] it goes out to the place of burning³ — Rather, do not say,⁴ 'if he slaughtered it without specifying its purpose, it is fit as a burnt-offering,' but say, If he slaughtered it for the purpose of a burnt-offering, it is fit. This proves that it requires [express] abrogation.

Then according to R. Hiyya b. Gamada, who said: It was thrown out from the mouth of the company and they said: [The circumstances are] e.g., that its owners were unclean through a dead body and relegated to the second Passover: [thus] only this requires abrogation, but in general abrogation is not required, what can be said?⁵ — Rather, said R. Huna son of R. Joshua, what are we discussing here? E.g., if he separated it [for a Passover] before midday, and the owner died after midday, so that it was eligible and then rejected, and whatever was eligible and then rejected cannot be eligible again.⁶ — Is then our reasoning [required] for any but Rab,⁷ — surely Rab said: Live animals cannot be [permanently] rejected?⁸ Rather, said R. Papa, the author of this⁹ is R. Eliezer, who maintained: Similarly, if he slaughters other [sacrifices] for the sake of the Passover, they are unfit,¹⁰ so that its disqualification is in itself.¹¹ But if it is [according to] R. Eliezer, he would rule him liable to a sin-offering, since R. Eliezer rejects [the view that] he who errs in the matter of a precept¹² is exempt!¹³ — R. Joseph¹⁴ the son of R. Salla the Pious explained it before R. Papa: The author of this is R. Joseph b. Honai. For we learned, R. Joseph b. Honai said: Those [other sacrifices] which are slaughtered for the purpose of a Passover or for the purpose of a sin-offering are unfit.¹⁵ This proves that its disqualification is in itself, and for that [reason] it must be burnt immediately; while in the matter of non-culpability¹⁶ he agrees with R. Joshua.¹⁷

R. Ashi said, Rab ruled in accordance with R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah. For it was taught, R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: If there was sufficient time in the day to ascertain whether the owners had withdrawn their hands or died or become defiled, he is liable,¹⁸ and it [the sacrifice] must become disfigured and [then] go out to the place of burning.

he slaughtered it without a specified purpose, express abrogation not being necessary. But the reason in the Baraitha is a different one, as stated. Thus: at midday the owner was still alive and therefore it was immediately eligible for a Passover offering; the owner's death disqualified it from that purpose, and he holds that it can never be eligible again in such circumstances. What is the reason? Is it not because it does not require abrogation?¹⁹ — Whence [does this follow]: perhaps it is because he agrees with the tanna of the School of Rabbah b. Abbuha, who said: Even piggul²⁰ too requires disfigurement, because we learn the meaning of 'iniquity' from nothar.²¹ For if you should not say thus, where the owners become defiled, what can be said, for surely that certainly requires abrogation, for R. Hiyya b. Gamada said, it was thrown out from the mouth of the company and they said: [The circumstances are] e.g.. that its owners were unclean through a dead body and relegated to the second Passover? Hence it is clear as we answered at first: this is [in accordance with] R. Joseph b. Honai. [

(1) I.e., immediately the owners die or withdraw their hands.

(2) V. Glos.; that is when he would actually slaughter it, thinking that it was still a Passover, whereas as a peace-offering it must be slaughtered before; v. supra 59b.

(3) V. supra 34b for notes.

(4) In the statement of Rab reported by R. Huna.

(5) V. supra 64a for notes.

(6) The original version is to be retained, viz., that

(7) This explanation is given only in order to reconcile R. Huna's statement in Rab's name with the Baraitha.

(8) V. infra 98a.

(9) The Baraitha which was cited commenting on our Mishnah.

(10) V. supra 62b.

(11) I.e., it does not require abrogation, so that it is automatically a peace-offering; hence by slaughtering it expressly for a Passover he renders it intrinsically disqualified, and therefore on weekdays it must be burnt immediately.

(12) V. Mishnah 71 b and note a.l.

(13) Hence in the Mishnah he should be liable for desecrating the Sabbath.

(14) So MS.M. omitting 'But' of cur. edd.

(15) v. Zeb. 2a.

(16) When one errs in a matter of a precept.

(17) That he is not culpable.

(18) For he should have satisfied himself on these things before slaughtering. Therefore he is regarded not as having erred in the fulfilment of a precept but as an unwitting offender (shogeg); hence he is liable.

(19) As above. Thus this supports Rab, who does not accept the view of the Baraitha quoted at the beginning of the page.

(20) V. Glos.

(21) V. infra 82b; though piggul is certainly intrinsically disqualified.

CHAPTER VII

MISHNAH. HOW IS THE PASSOVER-OFFERING ROASTED? WE BRING A SPIT OR POMEGRANATE WOOD AND THRUST IT INTO ITS MOUTH [RIGHT DOWN] AS FAR AS ITS BUTTOCKS, AND PLACE ITS KNEES AND ITS ENTRAILS INSIDE IT: THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. JOSE THE GALILEAN. R. AKIBA SAID: THIS IS IN THE NATURE OR SEETHING;¹ BUT THEY ARE HUNG OUTSIDE IT. ONE MAY NOT ROAST THE PASSOVER-OFFERING EITHER ON A [METAL] SPIT OR ON A GRILL.² R. ZADOK SAID: IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT R. GAMALIEL SAID TO HIS SERVANT TABI, GO OUT AND ROAST US THE PASSOVER-OFFERING ON THE GRILL.’

GEMARA. But let us bring [a spit] of metal? — When part of it is hot the whole of it is hot,³ and so [part of] it is roasted through the spit,⁴ whereas the Divine Law saith, roast with fire,⁵ and not roast through something else. But let us bring [a spit] of palm wood? — Since it has grooves it exudes water [sap], so that it would be like boiled. Then let us bring [a spit] of fig wood? — Since it is hollow,⁶ it exudes water, so that it is like boiled. Then let us bring [a spit] of the oak tree, the carob tree or the sycamore tree? — Because it has knots it exudes water. [But the wood] of the pomegranate tree too has knots? — Its knots are smooth.⁷ Alternatively, this refers to a shoot of this [i.e., the first] year's growth, which has no knots. But there is the point where it is cut?⁸ — He causes the point where it is cut to protrude without [the animal].

Our Mishnah is not according to R. Judah. For it was taught, R. Judah said: Just as a wooden spit is not burnt,⁹ so a metal spit does not boil [the flesh].¹⁰ Said they to him: This [sc. metal], if part of it is hot, the whole of it is hot; whereas the other [wood], if part of it is hot, the whole of it is not hot.¹¹

AND WE PLACE ITS KNEES, etc. It was taught: R. Ishmael called it tok tok.¹² R. Tarfon called it a helmeted goat.¹³

Our Rabbis taught: What is the helmeted goat which it is nowadays forbidden to eat on the nights of Passover?¹⁴ Wherever the whole is roasted in one [piece]. If a lamb was cut from it, [or] if a limb of it was boiled, that is not a helmeted goat. Now that you say that if a limb was cut from it, even if he roasted it together with it, it is not [a helmeted goat], [if a limb is] boiled need it [be stated]?¹⁵ — Said R. Shesheth: It means that he boiled it while attached [to the whole animal].

Rabbah said: A stuffed [lamb]¹⁶ is permitted. Said Abaye to him: But [the lamb] absorbs the blood?¹⁷ As it absorbs, so it exudes, he answered him.¹⁸ Shall we say that this supports him: AND [WE] PLACE ITS KNEES AND ITS ENTRAILS INSIDE IT: what is the reason? Is it not because we say, as it absorbs, so it exudes? — I will tell you: it is different there, [for] since there is the place of slaughtering, which is hollow,

(1) The entrails inside the animal are like meat in a pot, which is seething, not roasting.

(2) This is explained in the Gemara.

(3) Metal-iron — being a good conductor of heat.

(4) The flesh actually in contact with it is roasted in the heat of the spit, not by the heat of the fire.

(5) Ex. XII,8.

(6) Having a marrow-like substance inside.

(7) Hence they do not exude sap.

(8) Which naturally exudes moisture.

(9) For being inside the lamb it is protected from the fire.

(10) Thus he permits the use of a metal spit.

(11) Hence there is no analogy between the two.

(12) ‘Tok’ is the sound of boiling. Thus he held that the knees etc. are placed inside it, so that it emits a sound of boiling.

MS. M. reads: R. Ishmael called it a takbera i.e., a basket, as the animal was stuffed with the loose pieces, v. Jast. s.v. תכברה.

(13) He held that the knees etc. must hang outside, so that it looked like a helmet on the head of a warrior.

(14) I.e., after the destruction of the Temple; v. supra 53a.

(15) Surely it is superfluous.

(16) I.e., the lamb being stuffed with meat salted only enough for roasting, which is less than is required by law when it is to be boiled (Rashi). Blood in flesh is forbidden, hence the prescribed, process of soaking and salting in order to draw it out.

(17) Which exudes from the pieces of meat with which it is stuffed when the whole is roasted.

(18) It exudes on the outside the same amount of blood which it first absorbs on the inside.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 74b

[the blood] indeed oozes out.¹

Shall we say that this supports him: The heart must be torn and the blood withdrawn;² if he did not tear it [open], he must tear it after it is boiled³ and it is permitted.⁴ What is the reason? Is it not because we say, as it absorbs, so it exudes?⁵ — The heart is different, because it is smooth.⁶ But surely Rabin the Elder put a paste of dough over a [roasted] pigeon for Rab, and he [Rab] said to him, 'If the paste is good [tasty], give it me and I will eat it?'⁷ — That was [done] with [a paste of] fine flour, which is crumbly.⁸

But Raba visited the home of the Resh Galutha⁹ and they put a paste of dough over a [roasted] duck for him. Said he, 'Had I not seen that it was as clear as white glass, I would not eat of it.' Now should you think, as it absorbs, so it exudes, why particularly when it is clear; [it is permitted] even if not clear? — There it was [prepared] with white flour, so that it [the paste] is compact.¹⁰ Now the law is: [a paste] of finest flour, whether it looks red or does not look red, is permitted;¹¹ [a paste] of white flour: if it is as clear as white glass, it is permitted, if not, it is forbidden; [a paste] of other flours: if it looks red, it is forbidden; if it does not look red, it is permitted. [As to] a stuffed [lamb], he who forbids [does so] even if the mouth is at the bottom; while he who permits [does so] even if the mouth is on top. Now the law is: a stuffed [lamb, etc.] is permitted even if the mouth is on top.¹²

[With regard to] raw meat,¹³ eggs,¹⁴ and the jugular veins, R. Aha and Rabina differ therein. (In the whole Torah¹⁵ R. Aha is stringent while Rabina is lenient, and the law is as Rabina [viz.,] as the lenient [view]; except in these three, where R. Aha is lenient and Rabina is stringent, and the law is as R. Aha, [viz.,] as the lenient view.) If raw meat turns reddish, if one cuts¹⁶ and salts it, it is permitted even for a pot; if one impales it on a spit [over the fire], it is permitted,¹⁷ [because] it [the blood] certainly oozes out. If he placed it on [burning] coals, R. Aha and Rabina differ therein; one forbids and the other permits. He who forbids [holds that] it [the fire] binds [the blood],¹⁸ while he who permits [holds] that it draws [the blood] out. And the law is: it does indeed draw [the blood] out. Similarly with eggs: if he cut and salted them, they are permitted even for a pot. If he suspended them from a spit, they are permitted, [because] it [the blood] certainly oozes out. If he laid them on coals, Aha and Rabina differ therein: one forbids and the other permits them. He who forbids [holds]: it certainly binds [the blood]; while he who permits [maintains]: it draws it out. Similarly with the [throat portion containing the] jugular veins: if he cut and salted it, it is permitted even for a pot; if he suspended it on a spit, the place of the cut¹⁹ being underneath,²⁰ it is permitted, [because] it does indeed ooze out. If he laid it on coals, R. Aha and Rabina differ therein: one forbids and the other permits. He who forbids [holds]: it does indeed bind [the blood]; while he who permits [maintains]: it draws it out. And the law is: it draws it out.

Raw meat which turns red, its serum is forbidden;²¹ if it does not turn red, its serum is permitted. Rabina said: Even if it does not turn red, its serum is forbidden, [for] it cannot but contain streaks of blood. Mar b. Amemar said to R. Ashi: My father did indeed drink it.²² Others say: R. Ashi himself drank it.

Mar b. Amemar said to R. Ashi: Vinegar which had been used once for contracting [meat],²³ my father would not use it again for contracting'.²⁴ How does it differ from weak vinegar, which may be used for contracting'? — There

-
- (1) The animal being hung throat downwards.
 - (2) Before it is boiled; the heart is full of blood and therefore ordinary salting, as is done with other flesh, is insufficient.
 - (3) Rashi: this is assumed to mean, after it is roasted over an open fire, roasting being occasionally referred to as boiling, v. II Chron. XXXV, 13: and they boiled (wa-yebashshelu) the passover with fire according to the ordinance.
 - (4) V. Hul. 109a.
 - (5) The reference is not to the heart absorbing blood from other meat, but to one part of the heart absorbing blood from another, and it is now suggested that it exudes the same blood, since it is roasted over an open fire.
 - (6) Hence it does not absorb, so that even if it were boiled in a pot it would be permitted, though there that it is not directly over the fire we certainly cannot say, so it exudes.
 - (7) Now the paste absorbs blood from the roasted pigeon; since he wanted to eat it, he must have known that it reexudes it.
 - (8) And so leaves room for the blood to ooze.
 - (9) V. Glos.
 - (10) Which prevents the blood from oozing.
 - (11) Even in the former case we assume that the blood which the paste absorbed certainly oozed out, the redness being a mere hue which it leaves.
 - (12) When it is suspended for roasting; though there is no opening for the blood to run out, it nevertheless oozes out through the flesh.
 - (13) Umza is raw meat, unsalted and unsoaked. Blood in flesh is forbidden only if it travels from one part of the flesh to another. But if it remains in its original place, e.g., when raw meat is pickled dry, it is permitted (Rashi).
 - (14) The eggs of a male. Rashi: the controversy infra arises when they look red. Tosaf.: these eggs are covered with a membrane which is forbidden on account of blood, hence the controversy.
 - (15) Where R. Aha and Rabina differ.
 - (16) To allow for the blood to flow out.
 - (17) Even if only slightly salted, as one salts ordinary meat when it is to be roasted.
 - (18) Though not before it has time to travel from its place.
 - (19) I.e., the throat.
 - (20) So that the blood can flow out.
 - (21) This is R. Aha's view; though he permits the meat itself, he agrees that the serum is forbidden.
 - (22) The serum.
 - (23) Meat was washed in vinegar in order to contract the blood vessels and bind the blood.
 - (24) Because after it has been used once the vinegar loses its strength to bind the blood in its place.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 75a

the tartness of the fruit is present in its natural state, whereas here the tartness of the fruit is not present in its natural state.

ONE MAY NOT ROAST THE PASSOVER-OFFERING etc. A story [is quoted] in contradiction? — The text is defective, and it teaches thus: But if it is a perforated grill, it is permitted, and R. ZADOK SAID [LIKEWISE]: IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT R. GAMALIEL SAID TO HIS SERVANT: GO OUT AND ROAST US THE PASSOVER-OFFERING ON THE PERFORATED GRILL'.

R. Hinena b. Idi asked R. Idi b. Ahabah: If a man fires an oven with the shells of 'orlah¹ and then sweeps it out and bakes bread in it, what is [the law] on the view that it is forbidden?² The bread is permitted, he answered. Said he to him, But R. Hinena the Elder said in R. Assi's name in R. Johanan's name: If a man fires an oven, sweeps it out, and roasts the Passover-offering in it, that is not 'roast with fire,' because 'roast with fire,' is stated twice.³ [Thus] the reason is that the Divine Law revealed [it by stating] roast with fire' twice; but if the Divine Law had not revealed it, I would say, it is 'roast with fire'?⁴ — The Divine Law revealed it there, replied he, and we learn from it [for elsewhere]. Alternatively, there the reason is that the Divine Law wrote roast with fire' twice; but if the Divine Law had not written 'roast with fire' twice, I would say, the Divine Law insisted on fire, and even if he swept it out, that too is 'roast with fire';⁵ but here the Divine Law objected to forbidden fuel, which is [now] absent.

Our Rabbis taught: If he cut it⁶ and placed it on the coals, Rabbi said: I maintain that this is 'roast with fire.' R. Ahadeboi b. Ammi pointed out a contradiction to R. Hisda: Did then Rabbi rule [that] coals are fire? But the following contradicts it: [Or when the flesh hath in the skin thereof] a burning by fire [etc.]:⁷ I know it only where it was burnt by fire; if it was burnt with coals, hot ashes, boiling lime, boiling gypsum, or anything produced by fire, which includes hot water [heated] by fire, how do we know it?⁸ Therefore 'a burning' is stated twice, as an amplification. [Hence] it is only because the Divine Law amplified [it by writing] 'a burning' twice, but if the Divine Law had not amplified [it by writing] 'a burning' twice, [I would say that] coals are not fire? Scripture does not find it necessary to include a wood coal, he answered him;⁹ a verse is necessary only in respect of a coal of metal. Then are not coals of metal fire? Surely in respect of a priest's daughter [who committed adultery], though it is written, she shall be burnt with fire,¹⁰ R. Mattenah said: They made a lead wick for her?¹¹ — There it is different, because the Divine Law said, 'she shall be burnt with fire': 'she shall be burnt' is to include all burnings which come from fire, then all the more fire itself! [If so] let us surround her with bundles of faggots and burn her? — The meaning of 'burning' is learnt from the children of Aaron: just as there it was a burning of the soul while the body remained intact, so here burning of the soul while the body remains intact [is meant].¹² Then let us prepare for her boiling water [heated] by the fire?¹³ — [That is ruled out] on account of R. Nahman' [s dictum]. For R. Nahman said, Scripture saith, but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself:¹⁴ choose an easy death for him. Now, since there is R. Nahman['s deduction], what is the purpose of the gezerah shawah?¹⁵ — I will tell you: But for the gezerah shawah, I would say [that] the burning of the soul while the body remains intact is not burning,¹⁶ while as for R. Nahman's [teaching], let us use many bundles of faggots for her, so that she should die quickly. Therefore it [the gezerah shawah] informs us [that it is not so]. Then what is the purpose of '[she shall be burnt] with fire'?¹⁷ — It is to exclude [boiling] lead [drawn straight] from its source.

R. Jeremiah said to R. Zera: Then wherever 'she shall be burnt with fire' is written, it is to include all burnings which are produced by fire? Surely in respect to the [sacrificial] bullocks which were burnt, though it is written, and the [the priest] shall burn it on wood with fire,¹⁸ it was nevertheless taught: 'With fire,' but not with boiling lime or boiling gypsum? — Said he to him, How compare! There 'with fire' is written [first] and 'she shall be burnt' after: [hence] it is to include all burnings which are produced by fire;¹⁹ [whereas] here is written, and he shall burn it on wood with fire,' 'with fire' being at the end, to intimate that fire only [is permitted], but not anything else. But there too burning is written at the end, for it is written,

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Where it is not first swept out; V. supra 26b. Here, however, there is no improvement of the fuel in the loaf; hence the question.

(3) Ex. XII, 8, 9. The repetition emphasizes that it must be roast actually over the fire itself.

(4) Hence in the present case as there is no Biblical intimation, we should regard it as though the fire itself were present, and by corollary, as though, the oven were unswept.

(5) Since the heat was the result of fire.

- (6) The Passover-offering; not actually dividing it, but making a number of deep cuts, so that it should roast more quickly.
- (7) Lev. XIII, 24.
- (8) That it falls within this particular category of leprosy? V. Hul. 8a.
- (9) For that indeed is fire.
- (10) Lev. XXI, 9.
- (11) V. Sanh. 52a.
- (12) V. Sanh. 52a.
- (13) I.e., let us execute her by scalding.
- (14) Lev. XIX, 18.
- (15) V. Glos. I.e., the derivation from the sons of Aaron. it. Nahman's dictum in itself excludes also burning by faggots.
- (16) So that the only alternative left is burning by faggots.
- (17) Since after all the verse is taken to include all burnings which come from fire.
- (18) Ibid. IV, 12.
- (19) Since the addition of 'she shall be burnt', after 'with fire' has already been stated, it is superfluous.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 75b

where the ashes are poured out shall it be burnt?¹ I will tell you: that 'shall it be burnt' is required for what was taught: 'It shall be burnt': even if no ashes are there; 'it shall be burnt', even if he made the fire catch on to the greater part of it.² Rabina said:³ Unite them⁴ and learn: 'A burning by fire': I know it only if it was burnt by fire or with a coal;⁵ if it was burnt with hot ashes, boiling lime, boiling gypsum or with anything produced by fire, which includes hot water [heated] by the fire, how do we know it? Therefore 'a burning' is stated twice as an amplification.

Raba pointed out a contradiction: did then Rabbi say [that] coals are designated fire? But the following contradicts it: [And he shall take a censer full of] coals [of fire]:⁶ you might think [that] quenched [smouldering] coals are meant;⁷ therefore 'fire' is stated. If 'fire', you might think [that] a flame [must be brought]; therefore 'coals of' is stated. How then [is it to be understood]? He must bring of the brightly-burning [coals].⁸ Now this is self-contradictory: you say: "'coals," you might think [that] quenched coals [are meant], which proves that brightly-burning [coals] are [termed] fire. Then consider the second clause: 'if "fire", you might think [that] a flame [must be brought]; therefore "coals of" is stated,' which proves that even brightly-burning [coals] are not fire? Whereupon R. Shesheth answered, This is what he teaches: coals: you might think, both smouldering and brightly-burning [can be taken]; therefore 'fire' is stated. if 'fire,' you might think [that] a flame [must be brought]; therefore 'coals of' is stated. How then [is this to be understood]? He must bring of the brightly-burning [coals]. Yet at all events coals are not called fire, which is a difficulty according to Rabbi? — Said Abaye, Explain it thus: coals of: you might think quenched, but not brightly-burning; therefore 'fire' is stated; if 'fire,' you might think, he can bring a flame⁹ or a coal, whichever he desires; therefore 'coals of fire is stated. How then [is it meant]? He must bring of the brightly burning [coals]. Raba¹⁰ asked: [You say] 'He can bring a flame or a coal, as he desires.' [But] how is a flame without a coal possible? [Only] if one smears a vessel with oil and lights a fire in it! [Then] why do I need a verse [to exclude] that? Seeing that you do not do thus before a king of flesh and blood, is it not all the more [forbidden] before the Holy One, blessed be He! Rather said Raba, Explain it thus: 'coals of': you might think, quenched but not brightly-burning; therefore 'fire' is stated; if fire, you might think, let him bring half coal and half flame,¹¹ so that by the time he carries it within [the Holy of Holies] it is all a coal; therefore it is stated, 'And he shall take a censer full of coals of fire from off the altar': at the very time of taking they must be coals.

The Scholars asked: [Is the word] omemoth or 'omemoth?¹² -R. Isaac quoted: The cedars in the garden of God could not hide it ['amamuhu].¹³

MISHNAH. IF IT [THE PASCHAL LAMB] TOUCHED THE EARTHEN[WARE] OF THE OVEN, HE MUST PARE ITS PLACE; IF SOME OF ITS JUICE DRIPPED ON TO THE EARTHEN[WARE] AND DRIPPED BACK ON TO IT, HE MUST REMOVE ITS PLACE.¹⁴ IF SOME OF ITS JUICE FELL ON THE FLOUR, HE MUST TAKE A HANDFUL AWAY FROM ITS PLACE. IF HE BASTED IT [THE PASCHAL LAMB] WITH OIL OF TERUMAH¹⁰ IF THEY WHO REGISTERED FOR IT ARE A COMPANY OF PRIESTS, THEY MAY EAT [IT]; BUT IF ISRAELITES, IF IT IS [YET] RAW, LET HIM WASH IT OFF; IF IT IS ROAST, HE MUST PARE THE OUTER PART. IF HE ANOINTED IT WITH OIL OF SECOND TITHE,¹⁵ HE MUST NOT CHANGE ITS VALUE TO THE MEMBERS OF THE COMPANY, BECAUSE SECOND TITHE MUST NOT BE REDEEMED¹⁶ IN JERUSALEM.¹⁷

GEMARA. It was stated: [If] hot matter [falls] into hot,¹⁸ all agree

(1) Ibid.

(2) Yet he must not leave it until the whole is burning. This is deduced because 'it shall be burnt' is repeated at the end of the sentence, which emphasizes that it is to be entirely burnt in all cases.

(3) In reply to the contradiction pointed out by R. Ahadeboi.

(4) Lit., 'wrap'.

(5) Coal is included as implied by the term 'fire', and not derived from the repetition of 'a burning', as stated in the original version.

(6) Lev. XVI, 12.

(7) I.e., without a flame, for otherwise they are simply called 'fire'.

(8) Lit., 'whispering,' for when coals are burning brightly they make a slight hissing noise something like a sibilant whisper.

(9) Without a coal.

(10) As emended in margin from Rabbah.

(11) E.g., a piece of wood part only of which is well alight.

(12) With an alef (ס) or with an 'ayin (ע)?

(13) Ezek. XXXI, 8; 'amamuhu is with an 'ayin (ע), and the root really means to dim, darken, whence E.V. 'hide'.

(14) I.e., the part on to which it dripped. 'Pare' denotes a very thin strip; 'to remove,' the thickness of the finger. The reason is explained in the Gemara.

(15) Second tithe was brought to Jerusalem and eaten there by its Israelite owners; if it was too burdensome, they redeemed it and expended the redemption money in Jerusalem, v. Deut. XIV, 22f.

(16) Var. lec.: sold.

(17) Even to eat it in Jerusalem as holy food. If the owner of this oil charges the other members for their share, he virtually redeems or sells it as far as he is concerned.

(18) E.g., hot milk into hot meat, or hot forbidden flesh into hot permitted flesh, or vice versa. By 'hot', boiling is meant.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 76a

that it is forbidden;¹ cold into cold, all agree that it is permitted.² [If] hot [falls] into cold, or cold into hot, — Rab maintained: The upper prevails;³ while Samuel maintained: The lower prevails.

We learned: IF SOME OF ITS JUICE DRIPPED ON TO THE EARTHEN[WARE] AND DRIPPED BACK ON TO IT HE MUST REMOVE ITS PLACE. It was assumed that this refers to a cold earthenware; now it is well on Rab's view that the upper prevails: consequently he must remove its place, because the juice goes and heats the earthenware and the earthenware in turn heats the juice, and when the juice drips back on to the paschal lamb, the paschal lamb is roasted [at that spot] by the heat of the earthenware, whereas the Divine Law said, roast with fire,⁴ but not roast with something else. But on Samuel's view that the lower prevails, since the earthenware is cold it actually cools the juice; why then should he remove its place? — As R. Jeremiah said⁵ in Samuel's name: The reference is to hot flour; so here too the reference is to hot earthenware.

We learned: IF SOME OF ITS JUICE DRIPPED ON TO THE FLOUR, HE MUST REMOVE A HANDFUL FROM ITS PLACE. It was assumed that this refers to cold flour. It is well on Rab's view that the upper prevails: consequently he must remove a handful from its place, because it heats the flour around it and the flour in turn heats it, and the juice is roast by the heat of the flour, whereas the Divine Law said, 'roast with fire', but not roast with something else. But on Samuel's view that the lower prevails, since the flour is cold it actually cools it; why then must he remove a handful from its place? — Said R. Jeremiah b. Samuel: This refers to hot flour.

We learned: IF HE BASTED IT With OIL OF TERUMAH, IF THEY [WHO REGISTERED FOR IT] ARE A COMPANY OF PRIESTS, THEY MAY EAT [IT]; IF IT BELONGS TO ISRAELITES: IF IT IS [YET] RAW, LET HIM WASH IT OFF; IF IT IS ROAST, HE MUST PARE THE OUTER PART. It is well on Rab's view that the upper prevails: consequently [mere] paring is sufficient, because the upper is cold.⁶ But on Samuel's view that the lower prevails, since it is hot it certainly absorbs; why then is paring sufficient: let us forbid it entirely? — Basting is different, because a mere trifle is used.

It was taught in accordance with Samuel: [If] hot matter [falls] into hot, it is forbidden; similarly, if he put cold into hot, it is forbidden; hot into cold or cold into cold, he must wash it off. [You say], 'Hot into cold, he must wash it off'; [surely] since it is hot, until it cools it cannot but absorb a little; then it should at least require paring? Rather say: hot into cold, he must pare it; cold into cold, he must wash it off.

Another [Baraita] taught: If hot meat fell into hot milk, and likewise if cold fell into hot, it is forbidden. Hot into cold or cold into cold, he must wash [the meat]. 'Hot into cold, he must wash [the meat]'; [surely] since it is hot, until it cools it cannot but absorb a little, then it should at least require paring? — Rather say: hot into cold, he must pare [it]; cold into cold, he must wash [the meat].

The Master said: 'Cold into cold, he must wash the meat. R. Huna said: They learned this only where he had not [previously] salted it; but if he had salted it, it is forbidden, for Samuel said: Salted [matter] is like hot;⁷ if preserved [in vinegar], it is like boiled.⁸ Raba said: As to what Samuel said, Salted [matter] is like hot, — this was said⁹ only where it cannot be eaten through the salt;¹⁰ but if it can be eaten in spite of the salt, it is not so. A young pigeon fell into a jug of kamka,¹¹ [and] R. Hinena the son of Raba of Pashrunia¹² permitted it. Said Raba: Who is so wise as to permit such a thing if not R. Hinena the son of Raba of Pashrunia, who is a great man. [For] he can tell you: when did Samuel say, Salted matter is like hot? — Where it cannot be eaten through the salt; whereas this could be eaten in spite of the salt. That is, however, only if it is raw; but if roast, it requires paring. Further, this was said only if it contains no splits;¹³ but if it contains splits, it is [altogether] forbidden; and if it is seasoned with condiments, it is forbidden.¹⁴

Rab said:

-
- (1) Because each absorbs from the other.
 - (2) Because they do not absorb from each other.
 - (3) Thus: if hot falls into cold, the upper heats the lower, and it is tantamount to hot into hot: while if cold falls into hot, it is as cold into cold.
 - (4) Ex. XII, 8.
 - (5) V. infra.
 - (6) I.e., the oil is cold. Nevertheless paring at least is required, because the oil cannot but soak slightly into the flesh.
 - (7) 'Salted', this is soon defined — it is regarded as hot, and necessitates paring.
 - (8) And the whole of the permitted matter rendered forbidden.

(9) Lit., 'we said'.

(10) Until the salt is washed off

(11) A relish containing milk, among other things.

(12) A town in Babylonia. Obermeyer does not identify it. Jast., however, s.v. פרשוניא identifies it with Perishna, which is mentioned infra 91a, and Obermeyer, p. 297, n. 1. thinks that the latter is identical with Barus, which was included in the district of Sura for taxation purposes.

(13) Then paring is sufficient.

(14) In both cases the flesh absorbs more freely than otherwise.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 76b

Fat meat of a [ritually] slaughtered [animal] which was roasted together with lean meat of nebelah¹ is forbidden. What is the reason? They fatten each other.² But Levi maintained: Even lean meat of a [ritually] slaughtered [animal] which was roasted together with fat meat of nebelah is permitted. What is the reason? It is a mere smell, and smell is nothing. Levi gave a practical decision³ at the house of the Resh Galutha⁴ in the case of a goat and 'something else.'⁵

An objection is raised: One may not roast two Passover offerings together, on account of the mixture. Surely that means, the mixture of [the] flavours,⁶ which is a difficulty on Levi's view? No: [it means] the mixture of their carcasses.⁷ This too is logical, since the second clause teaches: Even a kid and a lamb. Now it is well if you say [that it is] on account of the carcasses: hence he teaches, 'even a kid and a lamb.'⁸ But if you say [that it is] on account of the mingling of [the] flavours, what does it matter whether it is a kid and a lamb or a kid and a kid? — What then? You are bound [to say] that it is forbidden only on account of the mixing of the carcasses, but the mingling of flavours is permitted; shall we say [then] that this is a refutation of Rab? — Said R. Jeremiah: The case we discuss here⁹ is e.g., where he roasted them in two pots. [You say] 'In two pots — can you think so!¹⁰ — Rather say, as though [they were roasted in] two pots,¹¹ and this is what it teaches: One may not roast two Passover-offerings together, on account of the mixture. What mixture? The mixture of the flavours. And even [when roasted] as it were in two pots it is forbidden on account of the [possible] confusing of the carcasses, and even a kid and a lamb [must not be roasted together].

R. Mari said: This is dependent on Tannaim. If a man removes a hot loaf [from the oven] and places it on a wine barrel of terumah, — R. Meir forbids it;¹² whereas R. Judah permits it; while R. Jose permits it in the case of [a loaf of] wheat, but forbids it in the case of barley [flour], because barley absorbs. Surely then it is dependent on Tannaim, one Master holding: Smell is nothing; while the other Master holds: Smell is something [substantial]? According to Levi, it is certainly dependent on Tannaim.¹³ Shall we say that it is [dependent on] Tannaim according to Rab [too]? — Rab can tell you: All agree that smell is something [substantial]; [and as to the ruling of R. Judah] was it not stated thereon, Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in the name of Resh Lakish: In the case of a hot loaf and an open barrel, all agree that it is forbidden; in the case of a cold loaf and a closed [stoppered] barrel, all agree that it is permitted. They differ only in the case of a hot loaf and a sealed barrel, [or] a cold loaf and an open barrel;¹⁴ and this too¹⁵ is like a hot loaf and an open barrel.¹⁶

R. Kahana the son of R. Hinena the Elder recited: A loaf which was baked together with roast [meat] in an oven may not be eaten with kutah.¹⁷ A fish was roasted [i.e., baked] together with meat, [whereupon] Raba of Parzikia¹⁸ forbade it to be eaten with kutah. Mar b. R. Ashi said: Even with salt too it is forbidden, because it is harmful to [one's] smell and in respect of 'something else.'¹⁹

MISHNAH. FIVE THINGS [SACRIFICES] MAY COME IN UNCLEANNES, YET MUST NOT BE EATEN IN UNCLEANNES: THE 'OMER,²⁰ THE TWO LOAVES,²¹ THE SHEWBREAD,²² THE SACRIFICES OF THE PUBLIC PEACE-OFFERINGS,²³ AND THE HE-GOATS OF NEW MOONS.²⁴ THE PASCHAL LAMB WHICH COMES IN UNCLEANNES IS EATEN IN UNCLEANNES, FOR FROM THE VERY BEGINNING IT CAME FOR NO OTHER PURPOSE BUT TO BE EATEN.

GEMARA. What does 'FIVE' exclude?²⁵ — It excludes the hagigah [for example] of the fifteenth.²⁶ For I might argue, since it is a public sacrifice²⁷ and a season is fixed for it, let it override uncleanness; therefore he informs us [that] since you can make it up the whole seven [days],²⁸ it does not override the Sabbath,²⁹ and since it does not override the Sabbath, it does not override uncleanness.

Now, let him [the Tanna] state the he-goats of festivals too?³⁰ — He does indeed state THE SACRIFICES OF THE PUBLIC PEACE-OFFERINGS.³¹ If so, let him not state the he-goats of New Moons either, seeing that he States THE SACRIFICES OF THE PUBLIC PEACE-OFFERINGS? — I will tell you:

- (1) In the same oven on separate spits and not touching.
- (2) The odour of the fat meat enters the lean meat and makes it fat, and then in turn the odour of the lean meat, which is forbidden enters the permitted meat and renders it forbidden too. — Hence if the meat of nebelah itself is fat, it is certainly forbidden.
- (3) As distinct from a mere theoretical ruling — in accordance with his view.
- (4) V. Glos.
- (5) I.e., a swine, which was generally referred to thus; cf. supra 3b. These had been roasted together.
- (6) Each absorbs the flavour of the other through its smell, which would thus be enjoyed by those who have not registered for that animal.
- (7) The animals themselves may be mixed up with each other.
- (8) Though a mistake is less likely there.
- (9) In the teaching cited.
- (10) The Passover-offering may not be roasted in pots at all.
- (11) A heap of coals or ashes intervening between the two sacrifices.
- (12) To a lay Israelite, because it has absorbed the odour of the wine.
- (13) For R. Meir's view certainly contradicts his.
- (14) And it is only in such cases that R. Judah permits.
- (15) Sc. the case disputed by Rab and Levi.
- (16) Which even R. Judah agrees is forbidden.
- (17) V. Glos. This contains milk.
- (18) Obermeyer, p. 227, n. 2 thinks this identical with Perezina (Faransag), near Bagdad.
- (19) Leprosy.
- (20) V. Glos. and Lev. XXIII, 10f.
- (21) V. ibid. 17.
- (22) V. Ex. XXV, 30.
- (23) The lambs offered on Pentecost, v. Num. XXVIII, 27.
- (24) V. ibid. 15 — all these are brought even if the community is unclean, which of course makes them unclean too through the handling of the officiating priest; nevertheless, they may not be eaten for they are brought merely in discharge of public obligations, but their main purpose is not to be eaten.
- (25) It is assumed that the number has this purpose, for otherwise the Mishnah would simply state, The 'omer . . . come in uncleanness etc.
- (26) And similarly the hagigah of any other Festival.
- (27) In the sense that all Jews must bring a hagigah.
- (28) If not brought on the first day it can be brought for a week afterwards, v. Hag. 9a.
- (29) A public sacrifice overrides the Sabbath only when it cannot be offered on any other day.
- (30) V. Num. XXVIII, 15, 22, 30; XXIX, 5, 16, 38.
- (31) For the he-goats too are public sacrifices (R. Han).

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 77a

It is necessary for him [to teach about] the he-goats of New Moons. I might argue, surely 'appointed season' [mo'ed] is not written in connection therewith;¹ therefore he informs us that New Moon is designated mo'ed, in accordance with Abaye's [dictum]. For Abaye said, The Tammuz² of that year³ was indeed made full,⁴ as it is written, He hath proclaimed an appointed time [mo'ed] against me to crush my young men.⁵

Shall we say that all of them⁶ are derived from mo'ed ['appointed time']? How do we know it? For our Rabbis taught: And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the appointed times of the Lord.⁷ For what purpose is this stated?⁸ Because we have learnt only of the daily offering and the Passover-offering [that they override the Sabbath and uncleanness], since ‘in its appointed time’ is stated in connection with them,⁹ ‘in its appointed time’ [implying] even on the Sabbath, ‘in its appointed time’ implying even in uncleanness. Whence do we know it of other public sacrifices? Because it is said, These shall ye offer unto the Lord in your appointed time.¹⁰ Whence do we know to include the ‘omer — and that which is offered with it, and the two loaves and that which is offered with them? Therefore it is stated, ‘And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the appointed times of the Lord’: the Writ fixed it as one appointed season for all of them.¹¹

Now, what is the purpose of all these?¹² — They are necessary. For if the Divine Law wrote it of the daily offering [alone], I would say: The daily offering [overrides the Sabbath and uncleanness] because it is constant and entirely burnt, but the Passover is not so;¹³ hence we are informed [otherwise]. While if the Divine Law wrote it of the Passover-offering, [I would argue that] the Passover-offering [must be offered under all circumstances] because it involves the penalty of kareth,¹⁴ but [as for] the continual offering, for [neglect of] which there is no penalty of kareth, I would say that it is not [so]; hence we are informed [otherwise]. Again, if the Divine Law wrote it of these two, I would say: These alone [override Sabbath and uncleanness, since they] possess a stringent feature, the continual offering being constant and entirely [burnt], the Passover-offering involving the penalty of kareth; but [as for] other public sacrifices, I would say, It is not so. [Hence] the Divine Law wrote, ‘These shall ye offer unto the Lord in your appointed times.’ While if the Divine Law [merely] wrote, ‘These shall ye offer unto the Lord in your appointed times,’ I would argue: [It refers only to] other public sacrifices, which come to make atonement,¹⁵ but [the sacrifices accompanying] the ‘omer and the two loaves, which do not come to make atonement but are merely in order to permit [the new harvest] are not so; hence we are informed [otherwise]. Again, if the Divine Law wrote [about] the ‘omer and the two loaves alone, I would have said: On the contrary, it [applies only to] the ‘omer and the two loaves which are more important, because they come to permit; but these others are not so. Hence we are informed [otherwise].

Now it was assumed that all hold that uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community, hence the headplate is required for propitiation.¹⁶ For there is no [other] Tanna whom you know to maintain [that] uncleanness is permitted in the case of a community¹⁷ but R. Judah. For it was taught: The headplate, whether it is on his [the High Priest's] forehead¹⁸ or it is not on his forehead, propitiates; this is the view of R. Simeon. R. Judah maintained: If it is still on his forehead, it propitiates; if it is not still on his forehead, it does not propitiate. Said R. Simeon to him: Let the High Priest on the Day of Atonement prove it, for it is not on his forehead, and [yet] it propitiates!¹⁹ — Leave the Day of Atonement, replied he, because uncleanness is permitted in the case of a community. Whence it follows that R. Simeon holds: Uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community. Again, [it was assumed that all hold,] the headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables,²⁰ for there is no Tanna whom you know to maintain [that] the headplate propitiates for [the defilement of] eatables save R. Eleazar. For it was taught, R. Eleazar said: The headplate propitiates for [the defilement of] eatables; R. Jose said: The headplate does not propitiate for the defilement of eatables.²¹ [Accordingly,] shall we say that our Mishnah²² does not agree with R. Joshua? For it was taught, And thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh, and the blood.²³ R. Joshua said: If there is no blood there is no flesh, and if there is no flesh there is no blood.²⁴ R. Eliezer said: The blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh, because it is said, And the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out [against the altar of the Lord thy God].²⁵ Then how do I interpret,²⁶ ‘and thou shalt offer thy burnt-offering, the flesh and the blood?’ [It is] to teach you: just as the blood requires throwing,²⁷ so does the flesh require throwing:²⁸ hence say, there was a small passage-way between the stairway and the altar.²⁹ Now [according to] R. Joshua too, surely it is written, ‘and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out?’ — He can answer you: surely in connection therewith is written, and thou shalt eat the flesh.³⁰

-
- (1) Whereas it is from this word that we deduce anon that festival public sacrifices override the Sabbath and uncleanness.
- (2) The fourth month of the year, generally corresponding to June.
- (3) In which the spies reconnoitered the promised Land, with disastrous results, v. Num. XIII.
- (4) I.e., it consisted of 30 days. When it consists of 29 days it is called defective. Now, as they set out on the 29th of Sivan, the third month (Ta'an. 29a), the 40 days of their mission ended on the ninth of Ab, the fifth month. Thus their weeping on that night (ibid. XIV, 1) became the forerunner of subsequent lamentation on that date for many generations, for it is the anniversary of the destruction of the Temple.
- (5) Lam. I, 15. Abaye appears to interpret thus: God caused New Moon (i.e., the 'appointed time' — mo'ed) of Tammuz in that year to be proclaimed on such a day that their return and the weeping of the people would coincide with the future anniversary of the destruction of the Temple. Hence, on this interpretation, New Moon too is designated 'mo'ed'.
- (6) I.e., those mentioned in the Mishnah that may be offered in uncleanness.
- (7) Lev. XXIII, 44.
- (8) Seeing that all the Festivals are individually treated in that chapter.
- (9) Num. XXVIII, 2; IX, 2. 'In its appointed time' implies that the sacrifice must be offered in all circumstances, as explained in the text.
- (10) Ibid. XXIX, 39. This verse ends the section (chs. XXVIII-XXIX) dealing with the public additional sacrifices on New Moon, the Sabbath and Festivals, and its effect is that the whole section is to be so understood as though 'in its appointed season' were explicitly written in connection with each.
- (11) V. previous note; the same applies here, and the 'omer and the two loaves are prescribed in this section (vv. 10f, 17f).
- (12) Scripture could have written appointed season' in connection with one only, and the rest would follow.
- (13) It is not constant by comparison.
- (14) For not bringing it; v. Num. IX, 13.
- (15) The additional sacrifices make atonement for the transgression of affirmative precepts, v. Yoma 36a.
- (16) I.e., though uncleanness is not a bar when the whole community is unclean, Scripture does not mean that the normal interdict of uncleanness is completely abrogated, so that it is permitted, but merely that the interdict is overridden in favour of the community. Now in Ex. XXVIII, 38 it is stated: And it (the head plate) shall be upon Aaron's forehead, and Aaron shall bear (i.e., atone for) the iniquity committed in the holy things (sc. sacrifices) . . . and it shall always be upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord (i.e., that these sacrifices shall be fit). 'The iniquity' is understood to refer to a case where a sacrifice accidentally became unclean, and the headplate atones for it, so that it remains fit. Since we hold that even in the case of a community uncleanness is merely overridden, but not actually permitted, the head plate is required for propitiation even then.
- (17) So that the propitiation of the headplate is not required at all.
- (18) When the sacrifice accidentally becomes unclean.
- (19) On that day he put aside all his usual vestments, which included the headplate, and wore simple linen garments (v. Lev. XVI,4). Yet if the community was unclean he still offered the sacrifices, and the headplate 'made them acceptable'.
- (20) I.e., if the flesh or the part of the meal-offering which is eaten is defiled, the sacrifice cannot be proceeded with, the headplate propitiating only if the blood or the handful which is burnt on the altar is defiled.
- (21) These two assumptions are the necessary premises for the question which follows.
- (22) Which states that the 'omer, the two loaves, etc., may be offered in uncleanness, although the plate does not propitiate on the eatable parts of these offerings.
- (23) Deut. XII, 27.
- (24) I. e., if either is defiled, the other is unfit for its purpose.
- (25) Ibid.
- (26) Lit., 'fulfil'.
- (27) I.e., dashing against the altar.
- (28) On to the altar.
- (29) Consequently a priest standing at the top of the ascent could not place the flesh on the altar but had to throw it.
- (30) Deut. XII, 27. This proves that the flesh too must be fit for eating.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 77b

Then what is the purpose of these two verses?¹ — One refers to the burnt-offering and one refers to a peace-offering, and both are necessary. For if the Divine Law wrote it in connection with a burnt-offering, I would say: It is [only with] the burnt-offering² which is stringent — because it is entirely [burnt]; but as for the peace-offering which is not stringent — I would say that it is not so. Again, if the Divine Law wrote [it of] a peace-offering I would say: on the contrary [the reason is] because it has two forms of consumption;³ but [as for] the burnt-offering, where there are not two forms of consumption.⁴ I would say that it is not so. Hence we are informed [otherwise].

Now [according to] R. Eliezer too, surely it is written, ‘and thou shalt eat the flesh?’ — He can answer you: He utilizes that [to teach] that the flesh is not permitted for eating until the blood is sprinkled. If so, say that the whole verse comes for this [purpose], then how do we know [that] the blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh? — He can answer you: If so, let the Divine Law [first] write ‘thou shalt eat the flesh,’ and then, ‘and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out,’ as is written in the beginning [of the verse], ‘and thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh and the blood?’ Why then does [Scripture] place ‘the blood of thy sacrifices’ first? Hence infer from it [that] the blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh, and infer from it also that the flesh is not permitted for eating until the blood is sprinkled.⁵ And R. Joshua?⁶ — [That] the flesh is not permitted for eating until the blood is sprinkled follows a minori: if the emurim,⁷ which when not available⁸ are not indispensable [to the eating of the flesh], yet when available are indispensable;⁹ then the blood, which if not available is indispensable, if available how much the more is it indispensable! And R. Eliezer?¹⁰ [Even] a law which can be inferred a minori, the Writ takes the trouble of writing it. And R. Joshua? — Wherever we can interpret, we do interpret.¹¹ Shall we now say that our Mishnah is not in accordance with R. Joshua, for since he says that we require both,¹² while the headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables, how can it come in uncleanness?¹³ — You may even say [that it agrees with] R. Joshua, but R. Joshua holds: The headplate propitiates for those that ascend.¹⁴ That is well of sacrifices, where there are objects which ascend [sc. emurim]; but what can be said of the ‘omer and the two loaves, where there are no objects to ascend [the altar]? — I will tell you: R. Joshua too said that we require both only in the case of sacrifices; [but] he did not say [it] in the case of meal-offerings.

Yet did he not say [it] in the case of meal-offerings? Surely we learnt: If the remainder thereof¹⁵ was defiled, [or] if the remainder thereof was lost:¹⁶ according to the view of R. Eliezer¹⁷ it [the handful] is fit;¹⁸ according to the view of R. Joshua,¹⁹ it is unfit!²⁰ It is according to his view, yet not entirely so.²¹ [Thus]: according to the view of R. Joshua, that we require both, yet not entirely so, for whereas R. Joshua ruled [thus] in the case of sacrifices, but he did not rule [thus] in the case of meal-offerings, this Tanna holds [that it is so] even in the case of meal-offerings.

Now who is this Tanna that agrees with him but is more stringent than he?²² Moreover, it was taught, R. Jose said: I agree with the words of R. Eliezer²³ in respect to meal-offerings and [animal] sacrifices, and with the words of R. Joshua in respect to [animal] sacrifices and meal-offerings. ‘The words of R. Eliezer in respect to [animal] sacrifices,’ for he used to say: The blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh; ‘and the words of R. Joshua in respect to sacrifices,’ for he used to say: If there is no blood there is no flesh, and if there is no flesh there is no blood. ‘The words of R. Eliezer in respect to meal-offerings’: for he used to say: the handful [is fit] even if there is no remainder [for consumption]; ‘and the words of R. Joshua in respect to meal-offerings,’ for he used to say: if there is no handful there is no remainder, [and] if there is no remainder there is no handful?²⁴ — Rather R. Joshua holds: The headplate propitiates for [the defilement of] the objects which ascend [the altar] and for eatables.²⁵ If so, why [do you say,] ‘according to the view of R. Joshua it is unfit?’²⁶ [That refers] to what is lost or burnt.²⁷ Then according to whom does he teach, ‘[if the remainder] was defiled?’ according to R. Eliezer? [But] that is obvious; seeing that you say that [even when it is] lost or burnt, where they are [now] non-existent, R. Eliezer declares [the handful] fit, need it [be stated] where it is defiled, when it is in existence! Hence it is obviously [taught] according to R. Joshua, yet he teaches [that] it is unfit?²⁸ Furthermore, it was taught, R. Joshua said: [In the case of] all the sacrifices of the Torah, whether the flesh was defiled while the fat has remained [clean], or the fat was defiled while the flesh has remained [clean], he [the priest] sprinkles the blood. But not if both were defiled. This proves that R. Joshua holds that the headplate does not propitiate either for [the defilement of] the objects which ascend [the altar]²⁹ or for the eatables!³⁰ — Rather [explain it thus:] after all our Mishnah is [the view of] R. Joshua, yet there is no difficulty: here it means in the first place; there it means if it was done [offered]. R. Joshua said [that both are required] only in the first place, but not if it was done.³¹ And whence do you know³² that R. Joshua draws a distinction between [what is required] in the first place and what was done? — Because it was taught: If the flesh was defiled, or disqualified,³³ or it passed without the curtains, — R. Eliezer said: He must sprinkle [the blood]; R. Joshua maintained: He must not sprinkle [the blood]. Yet R. Joshua admits that if he does sprinkle [it], it is accepted.³⁴ But surely this explanation is not acceptable: firstly, because ‘it is unfit’³⁵ implies [even] where it was done. Moreover,³⁶ FIVE THINGS MAY COME [IN UNCLEANNES] implies [even] in the first place!³⁷

-
- (1) According to R. Joshua, since both teach that the blood and the flesh are interdependent.
 - (2) That both are interdependent.
 - (3) The fat portions are consumed (‘eaten’) on the altar while the flesh is consumed partly by priests and partly by its owners.
 - (4) The whole being consumed on the altar.
 - (5) The reversed order intimating this additional teaching.
 - (6) How does he know this?
 - (7) V. Gos.
 - (8) E.g., if lost or defiled.
 - (9) The flesh may not be eaten until the emurim are burnt on the altar, v. supra 59b.
 - (10) Does he not accept this argument?
 - (11) The principle that Scripture writes explicitly what can be inferred a minori holds good only when the verse cannot be employed for any other purpose.
 - (12) The blood and the flesh.
 - (13) Sc. the objects enumerated in the Mishnah. For on the one hand, propitiation is required (v. p. 398, n. 2), while on the other there cannot be propitiation for eatables, and according to R. Joshua the eatables and the blood, or in the case of the meal-offering, the handful, are interdependent.
 - (14) The altar, sc. the emurim; i.e., providing that as much as an olive of the emurim ascends the altar, the headplate propitiates for its defilement, and the blood too can be sprinkled.
 - (15) Of the meal-offering, after the handful was removed (v. Lev. II, 9). In the Hebrew the word is in the plural. This remainder would normally be eaten by the priests (ibid. 10).
 - (16) In both cases before the handful was burnt on the altar.
 - (17) That the blood is fit for sprinkling even if the flesh is not available; the handful of a meal-offering is the equivalent of the blood of an animal sacrifice, while the remainder is the equivalent of the flesh.
 - (18) For burning on the altar, and the owner thus discharges his obligation and need not bring another meal-offering.
 - (19) That the blood and the flesh are interdependent.
 - (20) V. Men. 9a Thus R. Joshua requires both in the case of meal-offerings too.
 - (21) Lit., ‘and not according to his view.’
 - (22) I.e., do we in fact find any such Tanna?
 - (23) Lit., ‘I see (as right) the words of R. Eliezer.’
 - (24) This Baraita is explained anon. From it we see that R. Joshua maintained his view even in respect to meal-offerings.
 - (25) Hence our Mishnah can agree with him.
 - (26) Surely the headplate propitiates, i.e., makes the handful fit for burning on the altar, even if the remainder is unclean?
 - (27) If the remainder is lost or burnt the handful is unfit for the head plate propitiates only for defilement.

(28) on his view this is necessary, as it informs us that he holds the handful unfit not only if the rest is now entirely non-existent, but even if the rest is in existence, but unclean.

(29) Sc. the fat.

(30) Sc. the flesh. For if the headplate does propitiate, why is it unfit?

(31) I.e., R. Joshua holds that in the first place both are required; nevertheless, if only the blood was clean and it was sprinkled, though it should not have been, it is fit. Our Mishnah too means where it was done.

(32) Lit., say'.

(33) By the touch of a tebul yom, q.v. Glos.; v. also supra 14a Mishnah and note a.l.

(34) V. supra 34b for the whole passage.

(35) In the ruling of R. Joshua where the remainder was defiled, v. supra.

(36) Even granted that 'it is fit' implied only in the first instance.

(37) So that our Mishnah could still not be in accordance with R. Joshua.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 78a

— Rather, there is no difficulty: here the reference is to an individual;¹ there [in the Mishnah] the reference is to a community.²

Shall we say that our Mishnah does not agree with R. Jose? For it was taught, R. Eliezer said: The headplate propitiates for [the defilement of] eatables; R. Jose said: The headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables. Now it was assumed: since R. Jose rules, The headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables, he agrees with R. Joshua who maintains: We require both.³ Shall we now say [that] our Mishnah does not agree with R. Jose? — No: R. Jose agrees with R. Eliezer, who maintained: The blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh. If so, in respect of what law [does he rule]: the headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables?⁴ — Then on your reasoning, when R. Eliezer rules: The headplate does propitiate [for the defilement of eatables], — since he maintains [that] the blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh, in respect of what law [does the headplate propitiate]? — Rather they differ in respect of branding⁵ it with [the unfitness of] piggul⁶ and excluding it from [the law of] trespass.⁷ R. Eliezer holds: The headplate propitiates for it [the defilement of the flesh] and renders it as clean, and so brands it as piggul⁸ and excludes it from [the law of] trespass; while R. Jose holds: The headplate does not propitiate for it and does not render it as clean; hence it cannot be branded as piggul, nor does it exclude it from [the law of] trespass.

To this R. Mari demurred: Even granted that R. Jose agrees with R. Eliezer: as for sacrifices,⁹ It is well, [since] there is blood; as for the 'omer, there is the handful; [in the case of] the shewbread too there are the censers [of frankincense].¹⁰ But [in the case of] the two loaves, what can be said?¹¹ And should you answer, it is in respect of what is offered together with them,¹² then it is tantamount to the public peace-offerings, [and] if so there are [only] four, whereas we learned FIVE? — Rather, R. Jose holds: uncleanness was permitted in the case of a community.¹³

But surely it was taught: Both [in the case of] the one and the other,¹⁴ we besprinkle them the whole seven [days]¹⁵ with [the ashes of] all the purification offerings¹⁶ which were there:¹⁷ this is R. Meir's view. R. Jose said: We besprinkle them on the third day and on the seventh day alone.¹⁸ Now if you should think that R. Jose holds, Uncleanness was permitted in the case of a community, why do I need sprinkling at all?¹⁹ Hence it is clear that our Mishnah does not agree with R. Jose.

R. Papa said to Abaye: And does R. Jose grant the [Court's] document to two!²⁰ For it was taught, R. Jose said: I agree with the words of R. Eliezer in respect to meal-offerings and [animal] sacrifices, and with the words of R. Joshua in respect to sacrifices and meal-offering. 'The words of R. Eliezer in respect to sacrifices,' for he used to say: The blood [is fit] even if there is no flesh; 'the words of R. Joshua in respect to sacrifices,' for he used to say: If there is no blood there is no flesh, if there is no flesh there is no blood. 'The words of R. Eliezer in respect to meal-offerings, for he used to say:

the handful [is fit] even if there is no remainder [fit for consumption]; ‘and the words of R. Joshua in respect to meal-offerings,’ for he used to say: if there is no remainder there is no handful, [and] if there is no handful there is no remainder!

Said he to him: He states what appears logical [to him].²¹ [Thus:] when he was studying [the subject of] sacrifices²² he said: It is logical [that] just as they differ in respect to sacrifices, so do they differ in respect to meal-offerings too. [And] when he was studying [the subject of] meal-offerings he said: It is logical [that] just as they differ in respect to meal-offerings, so do they differ in respect to sacrifices too. Said he to him: It is correct [that] when he was studying [the subject of] sacrifices he said: It is logical [that] just as they differ in respect to sacrifices, so do they differ in respect to meal-offerings too, because the verses [on this matter] are written fundamentally in connection with sacrifices.²³ But when he is studying [the subject of] meal-offerings and he says, It is logical [that] just as they differ in respect to meal-offerings, so do they differ in respect to sacrifices too, — but surely, the verses are fundamentally written in connection with sacrifices! — Rather [explain it thus], there is no difficulty: I agree with the words of R. Eliezer, where it [the flesh] was defiled, and with the words of R. Joshua, where it was lost or burnt. Where it was defiled, what is the reason [that he agrees with R. Eliezer]? Because the headplate propitiates! Surely you know R. Jose to maintain [that] the headplate does not propitiate for [the defilement of] eatables! — Rather [explain it thus], there is no difficulty: I agree with the words of R. Eliezer in the case of the community; I agree with the words of R. Joshua in the case of an individual. In the case of the community, what is the reason [that he agrees with R. Eliezer]? Because uncleanness is permitted in the case of a community? But one [objection] is that you know R. Jose to maintain [that] uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community. Again, if it refers to a community, [does only] R. Eliezer declare it fit, but not R. Joshua?

(1) Then it is unfit in the first place, but valid if done.

(2) Which is unclean; then it is permitted at the very outset.

(3) The blood and the flesh.

(4) Since you now say that the blood can be sprinkled in any case.

(5) Lit., ‘appointing.’

(6) V. Glos.

(7) For piggul v. Lev. XIX, 7 (E.V. vile thing); mere intention renders it piggul, and it may then not be eaten even within the permitted precincts or within the permitted time. But a sacrifice cannot become piggul unless it is otherwise fit. Again, if one benefits from sacrifices of the higher sanctity (v. p. 108, n. 2) before their blood is sprinkled, he is liable to a trespass-offering; if after, he is exempt, for by then the flesh is permitted to priests.

(8) For now there is no other disqualification.

(9) Mentioned in our Mishnah that they may be offered in uncleanness.

(10) All these ascend the altar, and therefore the headplate makes them acceptable.

(11) For these consist entirely of eatables, for whose defilement R. Jose holds that the headplate does not propitiate. How then can they be offered in uncleanness?

(12) V. Lev. XXIII, 18f. The slaughtering of these sacrifices sanctifies the loaves, and the sprinkling of their blood permits them for eating; thus the Mishnah teaches that the headplate propitiates for the defilement of the shewbread in so far as the sacrifices can now be brought.

(13) So that propitiation is not required at all; v. supra 77a p. 398, nn. 2 and 3.

(14) Sc. the priest who burnt the red heifer (Num. XIX 4ff) and the High Priest.

(15) The former prior to his burning the red heifer; the latter, before the Day of Atonement, when he officiated in the Temple.

(16) The red heifer was designated חטאת, i.e., a sin-offering, here translated purification offering, v. ibid. 9.

(17) Some ashes were kept of every red heifer killed since Moses.

(18) V. Yoma 4a.

(19) Seeing that the sacrifices of the Day of Atonement were public offerings.

(20) In a lawsuit the court granted a document containing the verdict to the winner. Here R. Jose grants this document to

- both sides — i.e., he agrees with both R. Eliezer and R. Joshua.
(21) Without expressing agreement either with the one or the other.
(22) Lit., ‘when he stands at sacrifices.’
(23) V. verses quoted supra 77a.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 78b

Surely you have said, even R. Joshua agrees in the case of a community! Rather [explain it thus:] I agree with the words of R. Eliezer where It was done [offered], and with the words of R. Joshua [where it is] at the very outset. [But] if it was done, even R. Joshua agrees, for it is taught: R. Joshua agrees that if he sprinkled [the blood] it is made acceptable? One refers to uncleanness; the other to [the case where it] is lost or burnt. [Thus:] when does he teach, R. Joshua agrees that if he sprinkled [the blood] it is made acceptable, where [the flesh] was defiled, but not if it was lost or burnt; [and] when does R. Jose say, I agree with the words of R. Eliezer if it was done, where [the flesh] was lost or burnt.

MISHNAH. IF THE FLESH WAS DEFILED WHILE THE FAT¹ HAS REMAINED [CLEAN], HE MUST NOT SPRINKLE THE BLOOD;² IF THE FAT WAS DEFILED WHILE THE FLESH HAS REMAINED [CLEAN], HE MUST SPRINKLE THE BLOOD. BUT IN THE CASE OF [OTHER] DEDICATED SACRIFICES IT IS NOT SO, FOR EVEN IF THE FLESH WAS DEFILED WHILE THE FAT HAS REMAINED CLEAN, HE MUST SPRINKLE THE BLOOD.³

GEMARA. R. Giddal said in Rab's name: If he sprinkled [the blood], it [the Passover-offering] is made acceptable.⁴ But we require eating?⁵ — The eating is not indispensable. But surely it is written, according to every man's eating [ye shall make your count for the lamb]?⁶ — That is for preference.⁷ And is [this] not [to intimate that] it is indispensable? Surely it was taught: According to the number of [bemiksath] the souls:⁸ this teaches that the paschal lamb is killed for none save those who registered for it. You might think that if he killed it for those who are not registered for it, he should be regarded as violating the precept, yet it is fit. Therefore it is stated, ‘according to every man's eating ... ye shall make your count [takosu]’: The Writ reiterated it, to teach that it is indispensable; and eaters are assimilated to registered persons.⁹ -Rather, Rab ruled as R. Nathan, who said: The eating of the Passover-offerings is not indispensable. Which [statement of] R. Nathan [is alluded to]?¹⁰ Shall we say, the following [dictum] of R. Nathan? For it was taught, R. Nathan said: How do we know that all Israel can discharge [their obligation] with one Passover-offering? Because it is said, and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it at dusk:¹¹ does then the whole assembly kill? Surely only one kills! But it teaches that all Israel can discharge [their duty] with one Passover-offering.¹² Perhaps it is different there, because if some withdraw it is fit for the others, and if the others withdraw it is fit for these?¹³ — Rather it is this [dictum of] R. Nathan. For it was taught: If one company registered for it, and then another company registered for it, the former, for whom there is as much as an olive [per person], eat it and are exempt from sacrificing a second Passover-offering; the latter, for whom there is not as much as an olive [per person], cannot eat, and they are bound to sacrifice a second Passover-offering. R. Nathan said: Both are exempt from sacrificing a second Passover-offering, because the blood has already been sprinkled.¹⁴ Yet still perhaps it is different there, because if these withdraw it is fit for them [the others]?¹³ — If so, let him teach, because it is possible for them¹⁵ to withdraw? Why [state] ‘because the blood has already been sprinkled?’ That proves’ that the matter depends [entirely] on [the sprinkling of] the blood, but the eating is not indispensable. Now, what compels Rab to establish our Mishnah as meaning in the first place [only] and [in accordance with] R. Nathan: let us establish it as [agreeing with] the Rabbis, and even if it was done,¹⁶ it is not [fit]? — To Rab our Mishnah presents a difficulty: why does it state, HE MUST NOT SPRINKLE THE BLOOD: let it teach, ‘It is unfit’? Hence this proves that he must not sprinkle in the first place [only], but if done it is indeed well.

But on R. Nathan's view, what is the purpose of 'according to every man's eating?' — [To teach] that we require men who are fit to eat [to register for it].

Who is the author of the following which our Rabbis taught: If he slaughtered it for those who can eat of it, but sprinkled its blood for those who cannot eat of it, the paschal-offering itself is fit,¹⁷ and a man discharges his duty therewith? With whom [does this agree]? Shall we say [that] it is [according to] R. Nathan, but not the Rabbis? — You may even say [that it agrees with] the Rabbis: There is no intention of eaters at the sprinkling.¹⁸ Who is the author of the following which our Rabbis taught: If he was ill at the time of the slaughtering but well at the time of sprinkling, [or] well at the time of slaughtering but ill at the time of sprinkling, one may not slaughter and sprinkle on his behalf, unless he is well from the time of the slaughtering until the time of the sprinkling? With whom [does this agree]? Shall we say [that] it is [according to] the Rabbis but not R. Nathan? — You may even say [that it agrees with] R. Nathan: we require a man who is capable of eating [to be registered for it].

Who is the author of the following which our Rabbis taught: If he slaughtered it in cleanness and then its owners became unclean, he must sprinkle the blood in cleanness,¹⁹ but the flesh must not be eaten in uncleanness? With whom [does this agree]? — Said R. Eleazar: This was taught as a controversy, and it is [the view of] R. Nathan.²⁰ But R. Johanan said: You may even say [that] it is [the view of] the Rabbis: we treat here of the community,²¹ who may even sacrifice in [a state of] uncleanness. If it refers to the community, why may the flesh not be eaten in uncleanness? — As a preventive measure, lest the owners²² become unclean [in a subsequent year] after the sprinkling and they argue: Were we not unclean last year, and yet we ate; then now too we will eat! But they will not know that in the previous year the owners were unclean when the blood was sprinkled,²³ whereas this year the owners were clean [when the blood was sprinkled].²⁴

(1) The portions burnt on the altar.

(2) Even according to R. Eliezer, because the main purpose of the Passover-offering is that it should be eaten.

(3) Even according to R. Joshua, since the fat is clean.

(4) And the owner does not bring another.

(5) Which is impossible, since the flesh is defiled.

(6) Ex. XII, 4.

(7) Lit. , 'for a precept'. I.e. 'in the first place the lamb must certainly be brought for this purpose; nevertheless, even when it cannot be eaten the sacrifice is valid.

(8) Ibid.

(9) Just as registration is indispensable, so are eaters, and consequently eating, indispensable.

(10) For he does not rule thus explicitly, and it must be inferred from some other statement.

(11) Ex. XII, 6.

(12) Now in that case there is certainly not as much as an olive of flesh for each, which is the minimum to constitute eating.

(13) So that virtually it is fit for all, but in the present case it is not fit for any.

(14) Which proves that in R. Nathan's view the eating is not indispensable.

(15) Lit., 'they are fit, eligible.'

(16) I.e., even if the blood was sprinkled.

(17) This is assumed to mean that it is fit for the sprinkling of its blood and the burning of the fat, but not for eating.

(18) V. supra, 61b.

(19) I.e., by ritually clean priests and with clean service vessels.

(20) Who maintains that the eating is not indispensable. R. Eleazar holds that he does not require those registered for it even to be fit to eat. Consequently he explains the previous Baraita as the view of the Rabbis only

(21) I.e., the whole or the majority of the community became unclean between the killing and the sprinkling, e.g., if the nasi died just then.

(22) I.e., the community, cf. n. 1.

(23) So that it was a Passover-offering sacrificed in uncleanness, which is eaten in uncleanness too.

(24) Hence the sacrifice came in a state of cleanness, and may therefore not be eaten now that the owners are unclean.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 79a

Alternatively I may answer, Rab ruled as R. Joshua.¹ For it was taught, R. Joshua said: [In the case of] all the sacrifices of the Torah, whether the flesh was defiled while the fat has remained [clean] or the fat was defiled while the flesh has remained [clean], he must sprinkle the blood. [In the case of] a nazirite² and one who sacrifices the Passover-offering, if the fat was defiled and the flesh has remained [clean], he must sprinkle the blood; if the flesh was defiled while the fat has remained [clean], he must not sprinkle the blood. Yet if he sprinkled it, it is acceptable.³ If the owners became unclean through a dead body, he must not sprinkle [the blood], and if he does sprinkle the blood it is not acceptable.⁴

BUT IN THE CASE OF [OTHER] DEDICATED SACRIFICES IT IS NOT SO etc. Who is [the author of] our Mishnah? — It is R. Joshua. For it was taught, R. Joshua said: [With regard to] all the sacrifices of the Torah of which as much as an olive of flesh or an olive of fat has remained [clean], he sprinkles the blood. [If there remains] as much as half an olive of flesh and half an olive of fat, he must not sprinkle the blood. But in the case of a burnt-offering, even [if there remains] as much as half an olive of flesh and half an olive of fat, he sprinkles the blood, because the whole of it is entirely [burnt].⁵ While in the case of a meal-offering, even if the whole of it is in existence,⁶ he must not sprinkle [the blood]. What business has a meal-offering [here]?⁷ — Said R. Papa: [This refers to] the meal-offerings of libations.⁸ You might have said, Since it comes in virtue of⁹ the sacrifice, it is as the sacrifice:¹⁰ hence he informs us [that it is not so].

How do we know [it of] fat?¹¹ Said R. Johanan on R. Ishmael's authority, while it is [ultimately] derived from R. Joshua b. Hananiah: Scripture saith, [And the priest shall sprinkle the blood . . .] and burn the fat [heleb] for a sweet savour unto the Lord:¹² the fat [authorizes the sprinkling of the blood] even if there is no flesh. We have thus found [this to hold good of] fat; how do we know it of the lobe above the liver and the two kidneys?¹³ [But] where have we said that we do sprinkle?¹⁴ Since he states, 'while in the case of a meal-offering, even if the whole of it is in existence, we do not sprinkle [the blood],' [that implies,] the meal-offerings alone is not [sufficient for the sprinkling of the blood], but the lobe above the liver and the two kidneys are well.¹⁵ Whence [then] do we know it? — R. Johanan, giving his own [exegesis] said: Scripture saith, 'for a sweet savour': whatever you offer up for a sweet savour.¹⁶ Now, it is necessary that both 'heleb' and 'for sweet savour' be written. For if the Divine Law wrote 'heleb' [alone], I would say: only 'fat', but not the lobe on the liver and the two kidneys; [therefore] the Divine Law wrote 'for a sweet savour.' While if the Divine Law wrote 'for a sweet savour' [alone], I would say: all that ascend for a sweet savour, and even the meal-offering [permit the sprinkling of the blood]; therefore the Divine Law wrote 'heleb.'

MISHNAH. IF THE COMMUNITY OR THE MAJORITY THEREOF WAS DEFILED, OR IF THE PRIESTS WERE UNCLEAN AND THE COMMUNITY CLEAN, THEY MUST SACRIFICE IN UNCLEANNESS. IF A MINORITY OF THE COMMUNITY WERE DEFILED: THOSE WHO ARE CLEAN OBSERVE THE FIRST [PASSOVER], WHILE THOSE WHO ARE UNCLEAN OBSERVE THE SECOND.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: Behold, if the Israelites were unclean, while the priests and the service-vessels¹⁷ were clean, or the Israelites were clean while the priests and the service-vessels were unclean, and even if the Israelites and the priests were clean while the service-vessels were unclean, they must sacrifice in uncleanness, because a public sacrifice cannot be divided.¹⁸ R. Hisda said: They learned this only if the [slaughtering] knife became defiled through a person unclean by the dead,¹⁹ because the Divine Law saith, [and whosoever . . . toucheth] one that is slain by the sword,²⁰ [intimating,] the sword is [of the same degree of uncleanness] as the slain;²¹ hence it defiles the person. Thus from the very beginning when it is sacrificed,²² it is sacrificed in [a state of] personal uncleanness, which involves kareth. But if the knife became unclean with the uncleanness conferred by a reptile, so that it defiles the flesh alone, but does not defile the person, [only] those who are clean sacrifice, but the unclean do not sacrifice, [for] it is better eaten when the flesh is unclean, which is subject to a negative injunction, rather than that the flesh should be eaten when the person is unclean, which is subject to kareth.²³ This proves that R. Hisda holds: uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community.²⁴ And thus said R. Isaac [too]: uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community.

But Raba said: Even the unclean too may sacrifice. What is the reason? Because it is written, And the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire. And as for the flesh, every one that is clean may eat thereof.²⁵ Wherever we read ‘and the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten,’ we [also] read, ‘and as for the flesh, every one that is clean may eat thereof;’ and wherever we do not read, ‘and the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten’ we [also] do not read, ‘and as for the flesh, every one that is clean may eat thereof.’²⁶

It was stated: Behold, if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half unclean, Rab said: Half against half is as a majority; while R. Kahana said: Half against half is not as a majority. Rab said, Half against half is as a majority; [hence] these sacrifice²⁷ by themselves, while those sacrifice by themselves.²⁸ ‘While R. Kahana said: Half against half is not as a majority; [hence] the clean observe the first [Passover], while the unclean observe the second. Others say, R. Kahana said: Half against half is not as a majority: the clean observe the first [Passover],

(1) Who does not consider the eating indispensable.

(2) Rashi: the peace-offering brought by a nazirite on the completion of his naziriteship (v. Num. VI, 14) is essentially intended to be eaten: hence the eating is indispensable. Tosaf. however maintains that it is not indispensable, and deletes ‘nazirite,’ adding that it is absent in the Tosef. too; Bah also deletes it.

(3) Thus the eating is not indispensable.

(4) Because though the eating is not indispensable, the people registered for it must be fit to eat, while Scripture itself relegated him to the second Passover (Num. IX, 10f).

(5) Since both the flesh and the fat are food for the altar, they combine. But this does not hold good of other sacrifices.

(6) I.e., it is clean.

(7) There is no blood to sprinkle in a meal-offering.

(8) Which accompanied the sacrifice.

(9) Lit., ‘by the strength of.’

(10) Hence if as much as an olive of the flour is clean, and certainly if all is clean, the blood is sprinkled.

(11) Sc. that the blood may be sprinkled if there is as much as an olive of clean fat?

(12) Lev. XVI, 6.

(13) That the blood is to be sprinkled if these alone are clean.

(14) If these alone are left.

(15) I.e., since they are part of the sacrifice itself, the blood is sprinkled if they alone are clean.

(16) Authorizes by itself the sprinkling of the blood.

(17) Used in connection with the sacrifice, the slaughtering knife and basins in which the blood is caught.

(18) That some should bring it in a state of cleanness and others in a state of uncleanness. Since the majority bring it in uncleanness, even the minority who are clean bring it in uncleanness too.

(19) This is the ‘service-vessel’ referred to and its degree of uncleanness.

(20) Num. XIX, 16.

(21) V. supra 14b.

(22) Lit., ‘made.’

(23) V. Mishnah supra 14a and p. 62, n. 2 a.l. Now in the first instance the knife bears a principal degree of uncleanness and defiles human beings. Hence the man who kills with it must in any case become unclean, while normally the penalty for eating sacred flesh in this state is kareth (v. Lev. VII, 20). But in the second instance the knife is unclean in the first degree only and does not defile the person who handles it, though it defiles the flesh of the animal which is killed with it. Since this is a lower stage, for eating unclean sacred flesh is merely subject to a negative injunction but does not involve kareth, we do not permit the greater uncleanness of the person too; hence those who are bodily unclean must observe the second Passover.

(24) But not permitted; v. supra 77a, p. 398, n. 2. Consequently we seek as far as possible to bring the sacrifice in cleanness or at least with the smallest possible degree of uncleanness.

(25) Lev. VII, 19.

(26) I.e., the two are interdependent. Since the flesh is now eaten unclean, unclean persons too may eat it.

(27) Lit., 'do'.

(28) They must all observe the first Passover. The clean must not show themselves to be defiled, for

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 79b

while the unclean observe neither the first nor the second. They cannot sacrifice on the first, because they are not a majority, [while] they cannot sacrifice at the second because they are not a minority.¹

We learned: IF THE COMMUNITY OR THE MAJORITY THEREOF WAS DEFILED, OR IF THE PRIESTS WERE UNCLEAN AND THE COMMUNITY CLEAN, THEY MUST SACRIFICE IN UNCLEANNESS. [Thus] it is only the majority that sacrifices in uncleanness, but [when it is] half and half, they do not sacrifice at the first [Passover], which is a difficulty on Rab's view? — Rab can answer you: [When] a majority [is unclean], all sacrifice in uncleanness; [whereas where there is] half and half, these observe [the Passover] by themselves, and those observe [it] by themselves. That too is logical, because the second clause states IF A MINORITY OF THE COMMUNITY WERE DEFILED: THOSE WHO ARE CLEAN OBSERVE THE FIRST [PASSOVER], WHILE THOSE WHO ARE UNCLEAN OBSERVE THE SECOND. [Thus] only a minority sacrifice at the second, but not [when it is] half against half, for then they sacrifice at the first, these sacrificing by themselves and those sacrificing by themselves.

But in that case it is a difficulty on R. Kahana's view? — R. Kahana can answer you: [It states] IF A MINORITY OF THE COMMUNITY WERE DEFILED, THOSE WHO ARE CLEAN OBSERVE THE FIRST [PASSOVER], WHILE THOSE WHO ARE UNCLEAN OBSERVE THE SECOND; hence [when it is] half against half, the clean observe the first, but the unclean observe neither the first nor the second. Now that is well according to the latter version of P. Kahana[‘s ruling]; but according to the version in which R. Kahana states, ‘The clean observe the first and the unclean each half ranks as a majority, and when the majority is clean they must not sacrifice in uncleanness. On the other hand, the unclean half is not relegated to the second Passover, since they too count as a majority. observe the second,’ what is to be said? — R. Kahana can answer you: The same law [holds good] that even half against half, the clean observe the first while the unclean observe the second; yet as to what he [the Tanna] teaches, A MINORITY OF THE COMMUNITY: because he teaches THE MAJORITY in the first clause, he also teaches A MINORITY in the second clause.

It was taught in accordance with Rab; it was taught in accordance with R. Kahana, and as both versions [of his ruling]. It was taught in accordance with Rab: If the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, the former sacrifice by themselves and the latter sacrifice by themselves. It was taught as the first version of R. Kahana[‘s ruling]: Behold, if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, the clean observe the first [Passover] while the unclean observe the second. And it was taught as the second version of R. Kahana[‘s ruling]:

Behold, if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean the clean observe the first, while the unclean observe neither the first nor the second.

Now according to Rab and the second version of R. Kahana[‘s ruling], when he² teaches, ‘The clean observe the first and the unclean [observe] the second,’ how do they reconcile it [with their views]? — E.g., if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, with women making up [the number of] the unclean;³ now he holds: [The observance of the Passover-offering by] women at the first [Passover] is voluntary;⁴ [hence] deduct the women from the [number of] unclean, so that the unclean are a minority, and a minority are relegated to the second Passover.

According to Rab and the first version of R. Kahana, as to what was taught, ‘The clean observe the first and the unclean observe neither the first nor the second,’ how do they reconcile it [with their views]? — Rab reconciles it [thus]: e.g., if the [male] Israelites were half [of them] unclean and half of them clean, with women as an addition to the clean.⁵ Now he holds: [The observance of the Passover-offering by] women at the first [Passover] is a duty, but voluntary at the second. [Hence] they [the unclean] cannot sacrifice at the first, because they are a minority,⁶ and a minority do not sacrifice at the first. While they cannot sacrifice at the second, [because] deduct the women from them,⁷ so there is half and half, and a half do not sacrifice at the second. While according to R. Kahana who maintained, a half too sacrifice at the second, he explains it thus: e.g., if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, with women making up [the number of] the clean. Now he holds: [The observance of the Passover-offering by] women at the first Passover is a duty, while at the second it is voluntary. [Hence] they cannot sacrifice at the first, because they are half against half, and a half does not sacrifice at the first. At the second too they cannot sacrifice, [because] deduct the women from the clean [and] the unclean are a majority, and a majority do not sacrifice at the second. Again, according to R. Kahana, as to what was taught, ‘Behold, if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, the former sacrifice by themselves while the latter sacrifice by themselves,’ how does he explain it? — R. Kahana can answer you: It is [a controversy of] Tannaim: there is a view [that] half against half is as a majority, and there is a view [that] half against half is not as a majority.

[To turn to] the main text:⁸ ‘Behold, if the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, the former sacrifice by themselves and the latter sacrifice by themselves. If the unclean exceeded the clean even by one, they all sacrifice in uncleanness, because a public sacrifice cannot be divided.’⁹ R. Eleazar b. Mathia said: A single individual cannot overbalance the community to uncleanness, because it is said,

(1) Whereas only a minority sacrifices at the second Passover.

(2) The Tanna of the cited teaching.

(3) I.e., there were half unclean only when women are included.

(4) They need not observe it all.

(5) Bringing up the clean to a majority.

(6) Since it is obligatory for women they must be counted.

(7) Sc. the clean; for since it is only voluntary for women at the second they cannot be counted.

(8) From which the teaching cited supra, p. 415, is taken.

(9) V. supra p. 412, n. 2.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 80a

Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover-offering at one of thy gates.¹ R. Simeon said: Even if one tribe is unclean and all the other tribes are clean, the former sacrifice by themselves while the latter sacrifice by themselves. (What is R. Simeon's reason? — He holds: One tribe is designated a community.)² R. Judah said: Even if one tribe is unclean and all the other tribes are clean, let them

[all] sacrifice in uncleanness, because a public sacrifice cannot be divided. (R. Judah holds: One tribe is designated a community, so that it is half against half,³ and [since] a public sacrifice is not divided, they all sacrifice in uncleanness.)

It was stated: If the Israelites were half [of them] clean and half [of them] unclean, — said Rab: we defile one of them with a reptile.⁴ But why so: let the former sacrifice by themselves and the latter by themselves, for surely Rab said: These sacrifice by themselves and those sacrifice by themselves? — I will tell you: what do we discuss here? E.g., where the unclean exceeded the clean by one. If so, the majority are unclean, [then] let them all sacrifice in uncleanness? — He holds as R. Eleazar b. Mathia, who maintained: A single individual cannot overbalance the community to uncleanness. If so, our difficulty returns in full force:⁵ let the former sacrifice by themselves and the latter by themselves? Rather this is what he means: If there is a Tanna who agrees with the first Tanna⁶ who rules: [When there is] half against half they must not all sacrifice in uncleanness, and [also] he agrees with R. Judah who said: A public sacrifice cannot be divided, then we defile one of them with a reptile.

But ‘Ulla maintained: We send away one of them on a journey afar off.⁷ But let us defile him with a reptile? — He holds: We slaughter [the Passover-offering] and sprinkle [its blood] for a man who is unclean through a reptile.⁸ Then let us defile him through a dead body? — Then you debar him from his hagigah.⁹ But now too you debar him from his Passover-offering? — It is possible to sacrifice at the second [Passover]. Then in the case of [defilement by] a dead body too it is possible to sacrifice [the hagigah] on the seventh [day of Passover] which would be his eighth [day after defilement]? — ‘Ulla holds: They are all a compensation for the first [day]:¹⁰ [hence] he who is eligible on the first is eligible [to sacrifice] on all of them, but wherever one is not eligible on the first, he is not eligible on any of them.

R. Nahman said to them [his disciples], Go and tell ‘Ulla: Who will obey you to pull up his tent-pegs and tent and speed away!¹¹

It was stated: If the majority were zabin¹² and the minority unclean though the dead, — Rab said: Those unclean through the dead cannot sacrifice either on the first or on the second. They do not observe the first [Passover], because they are a minority, and a minority do not observe [it] on the first. They cannot observe it on the second either: whenever the community observes [it] on the first, individual[s] observe [it] on the second; [but] whenever the community does not observe it on the first, individual[s] do not observe [it] on the second. Said Samuel to them [his disciples], Go out and say to Abba:¹³ How do you dispose of, Let the children of Israel keep the Passover in its appointed season!¹⁴ — He [Rab] answered them: Go and say to him: [yet] how do you dispose of it [the verse] when they are all zabin?¹⁵ But [you must say] since it is impossible [to carry it out], it is impossible; so here too it is impossible.

It was stated: If the majority were unclean through the dead and a minority were zabin, — R. Huna said: There is no compensation for a Passover-offering which comes in uncleanness;¹⁶ while R. Adda b. Ahabah said: There is compensation for a Passover-offering which comes in uncleanness. Shall we say that they differ in this, viz., he who maintains [that] there is no compensation for a Passover-offering which comes in uncleanness holds: Uncleanness is overridden in the case of the community; while he who maintains [that] there is compensation for a Passover-offering which comes in uncleanness holds: Uncleanness is permitted in the case of a community!¹⁷ — I will tell you. It is not so, for all hold [that] uncleanness is overridden in the case of a community, and they differ in this: one Master holds:

(1) Deut. XVI, 5. He translates: you must not sacrifice it on account of one person, i.e., one person has no power to change any of the conditions of the sacrifice.

- (2) V. Hor. 5b. Hence it is not relegated to the second.
- (3) Communities are not regarded numerically.
- (4) So that there is a majority unclean, and all can now sacrifice in uncleanness.
- (5) Lit., 'to its place.'
- (6) in the previously cited Baraitha.
- (7) Which is tantamount to being unclean (v. Num. IX, 10) and effects the same result. For the definition of a journey afar off', v. infra 93b.
- (8) Since he can have a ritual bath (tebillah) and be fit to eat in the evening.
- (9) V. Glos. The reference is to the hagigah brought on the fifteenth, and he would be debarred from it, since a man defiled by the dead is unclean for seven days. [But when he is sent away on a 'journey afar off', he might manage to be back in Jerusalem on the following day to offer the hagigah, v. Tosaf.]
- (10) All the days of the Festival, though fit for the sacrificing of the hagigah, are only regarded as a compensation for the first day, this being the day when it should really be brought. This question is disputed in Hag. 9b.
- (11) None will consent to depart on a distant journey! Hence Rab's expedient is preferable. [R. Nahman must have accepted R. Akiba's definition (v. loc. cit.) of a 'journey afar off', v. Tosaf.]
- (12) Pl. of zab, q.v. Glos. They are unclean, but the law that an unclean majority sacrifice in uncleanness applies only to those who are unclean through the dead.
- (13) Rab. His name was Abba Arika, but he was called Rab (the Master) in the same way that R. Judah ha-Nasi was called Rabbi.
- (14) Num. IX, 2.
- (15) When obviously the precept cannot be fulfilled.
- (16) Hence the zabin cannot observe the second Passover.
- (17) V. supra 77a; hence it is really the same as any other Passover-offering, and therefore permits of compensation.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 80b

Cleanness defers, [whereas] uncleanness does not defer;¹ while the other Master holds: Even uncleanness defers.

It was stated: If a third were zabin, a third clean, and a third unclean through the dead, — R. Mani b. Pattish said: Those unclean through the dead observe neither the first [Passover] nor the second. They do not sacrifice on the first, [because] the zabin swell the number of the clean² who do not sacrifice in uncleanness; [hence] the unclean through the dead are a minority, and a minority do not sacrifice on the first. They do not sacrifice on the second, [because] the zabin combine with those who are unclean through the dead who did not sacrifice on the first; [hence] they are a majority, and a majority is not relegated to the second Passover.

MISHNAH. IF THE BLOOD OF A PASSOVER-OFFERING IS SPRINKLED AND THEN IT BECOMES KNOWN THAT IT³ WAS UNCLEAN, THE HEADPLATE PROPITIATES; IF THE PERSON [THE OWNER] BECAME UNCLEAN,⁴ THE HEADPLATE DOES NOT PROPITIATE, BECAUSE THEY [THE SAGES] RULED: [IN THE CASE OF] A NAZIRITE, AND HE WHO SACRIFICES⁵ THE PASSOVER-OFFERING, THE HEADPLATE PROPITIATES FOR THE UNCLEANNESS OF THE BLOOD, BUT THE HEADPLATE DOES NOT PROPITIATE FOR THE UNCLEANNESS OF THE PERSON. IF HE WAS DEFILED WITH THE UNCLEANNESS OF THE DEEP,⁶ THE HEADPLATE PROPITIATES.⁷

GEMARA. Thus it is only because it was [first] sprinkled and it became known afterwards [that it was unclean]; but if it [first] became known and [the blood] was sprinkled afterwards, it does not propitiate. But the following contradicts it: For what does the headplate propitiate? For the blood, flesh, and fat which were defiled, whether in ignorance or deliberately, accidentally or intentionally, whether in the case of an individual or of a community?⁸ — Said Rabina: [With regard to] its defilement, whether [it occurred] in ignorance or deliberately, [the offering] is made acceptable;⁹

[but as to its] sprinkling, [if done] in ignorance [that the blood was unclean], it is acceptable; if deliberately, it is not acceptable. R. Shila said: [With regard to] its sprinkling, whether [done] in ignorance [that the blood was unclean] or deliberately, it is accepted; [but as to] its uncleanness, [if it occurred] in ignorance, it is acceptable; if [caused] deliberately, it is not acceptable. But surely he states, ‘whether in ignorance or deliberately?’ This is what it means: If it was defiled in ignorance, and he [the priest] sprinkled it, whether unwittingly or deliberately, it is accepted. Yet surely it is taught, IF THE BLOOD WAS SPRINKLED AND THEN IT BECAME KNOWN: thus it is only because it was sprinkled [first] and it became known afterwards; but if it became known [first] and it was sprinkled afterwards, it is not so? — The same law holds good even if it became known [first] and it was sprinkled afterwards, and the reason that he states, IF IT WAS SPRINKLED AND THEN IT BECAME KNOWN is because he wishes to teach in the second clause, IF THE PERSON BECAME UNCLEAN, THE HEADPLATE DOES NOT PROPITIATE, where even if it was sprinkled [first] and it became known afterwards [it does] not [propitiate]; therefore he teaches the first clause too, IF IT WAS SPRINKLED AND THEN IT BECAME KNOWN.

IF HE WAS DEFILED WITH ‘THE UNCLEANNESS OF THE DEEP’ etc. Rami b. Hama asked: The priest who propitiates with their sacrifices, is the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ permitted to him or not?¹⁰ Do we say, when have we a tradition about the ‘uncleanness of the deep’?¹¹ [It is] in the case of the owners, but we have no tradition in respect of the priest; or perhaps we have a tradition in respect of the sacrifice,¹² no matter whether the owners or the priest [are thus defiled]? — Said Raba, Come and hear: For R. Hiyya taught: They [the Sages] spoke of the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ in respect of a corpse alone. What does this exclude? Surely it is to exclude ‘uncleanness of the deep’ caused by a reptile; and to what [then] do we refer? Shall we say, to the owners [who are thus defiled]? Then in the case of whom? If we say, in the case of a nazirite? Does it [a reptile uncleanness] affect him,¹³ [seeing that] the Divine Law said, and if any man die beside him [etc.].¹⁴ Hence it must refer to him who sacrifices the Passover-offering. Now that is well on the view [that] we may not slaughter [the Passover-offering] and sprinkle [its blood] for those who are unclean through a reptile.¹⁵ But on the view [that] we slaughter and sprinkle on behalf of those who are unclean through a reptile, what can be said? Seeing that known uncleanness was permitted to him [who sacrifices at Passover], how much the more ‘uncleanness of the deep’! Hence it must surely refer to the priest, whence it is proved that ‘uncleanness of the deep’ was permitted to him! — Said R. Joseph, No: After all it refers to the owners and the Passover-offering, and it excludes ‘uncleanness of the deep’ of gonorrhoea.¹⁶

Yet does it [the headplate] not propitiate for the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ of gonorrhoea? Surely it was taught, R. Jose said: A woman who watches from day to day¹⁷ on whose behalf they slaughtered [the Passover-offering] and sprinkled [its blood]

(1) I.e., when the sacrifice comes in a state of cleanness, it relegates the unclean to the second Passover; but when it comes itself in a state of uncleanness, it cannot relegate those who are otherwise unclean to the second Passover.

(2) Lit., ‘they make large.’

(3) Rashi: The offering — i.e., the flesh-or the blood. In the former case the head plate makes it acceptable only in the sense that the owner is not liable to another offering and the emurim are burnt on the altar; yet the flesh itself may not be eaten (Tosaf. on the basis of Rashi's interpretation). Tosaf. itself maintains that the Mishnah refers to the defilement of the blood only.

(4) Through the dead.

(5) Lit., ‘does,’ ‘prepares.’

(6) This is a technical term denoting the hidden uncleanness of a corpse which is now discovered for the first time. E.g., if he was in a house and it is subsequently learned that a corpse had been buried therein.

(7) And he is not liable to a second offering. This is a traditional law.

(8) V. supra 16b. ‘In ignorance’ and ‘deliberately’ are assumed to mean respectively: ignorance of the uncleanness of the blood, and deliberately sprinkling it with that knowledge.

(9) The headplate propitiates.

(10) If the priest who offers the Passover sacrifice or the sacrifices of a nazirite on behalf of their owners was defiled with the 'uncleanness of the deep,' does the breastplate propitiate, so that the sacrifice is valid, or not?

(11) That the headplate propitiates for it.

(12) Viz., that in the case of the Passover-offering and the sacrifice of a nazirite the head plate propitiates for personal defilement caused by the 'uncleanness of the deep.'

(13) Even if he is certainly defiled by a reptile.

(14) Num. VI,9 thus his naziritship is affected only by uncleanness through the dead.

(15) V. supra 69a p. 353. Hence R. Hiyya can mean that when one is defiled through the 'uncleanness of the deep' of a reptile the Passover-offering must not be sacrificed for him.

(16) A zab (gonorrhoeist) is unclean seven days and the Passover-offering may not be offered on his behalf. Now, if the eve of Passover marks the seventh day of his uncleanness, he is in a state of a doubt; for if he does not discharge on that day he will be clean in the evening; while if he does discharge he becomes unclean for a further seven days. Thus he too is unclean with the 'uncleanness of the deep,' and R. Hiyya teaches that the headplate does not propitiate in his case and the offering must not be killed or its blood sprinkled on his behalf.

(17) Lit., 'day against day.'

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 81a

on her second day, and then she saw [a discharge], may not eat [of the sacrifice] and is exempt from observing the second Passover.¹ What is the reason? Is it not because the headplate propitiates?² — I will tell you: It is not so, [the reason being] because R. Jose holds: She is defiled from now and henceforth.³ But it was taught, R. Jose said: A zab of two discharges⁴ on whose behalf they slaughtered [the Passover-offering] and sprinkled [its blood] on the seventh day,⁵ and then he discharged again;⁶

for the third to see whether another discharge will follow, rendering her a zabah, or not. Thus on the first or second day of her discharge within these eleven days she is called 'a woman who watches from day to day.' Should another discharge follow on the third day, she cannot regain cleanness until seven days have passed without any issue at all. (The foregoing is on the basis of the ancient law, but already in the period of the Talmud itself the law was adopted that a single blood issue at any time imposes all the restrictions which necessitate for cleanness a period of seven consecutive clean days.) Now in the present instance the eve of Passover occurred on the second day of her discharge; the sacrifice was offered and its blood was sprinkled on her behalf before she had a discharge on that day, so that if she had not discharged later she would have been fit to eat in the evening. Since, however, she subsequently discharged, she cannot eat of the sacrifice, as she cannot perform tebillah until the following evening. similarly, a woman who watches from day to day on whose second day they slaughtered and sprinkled on her behalf, and then she discharged again, — these defile their couch or their seat retrospectively,⁷ and they are exempt from observing the second Passover.⁸ — I will tell you: what does 'retrospectively' mean? By Rabbinical law.⁹

Now R. Oshaia too holds [that] he defiles retrospectively by Rabbinical law [only].¹⁰ For it was taught, R. Oshaia said:¹¹ But a zab who saw [a discharge] on his seventh day upsets the preceding [period];¹² whereupon R. Johanan said to him: He does not upset [aught] save that day.¹³ (What will you? If he holds [that] he defiles retrospectively,¹⁴ let us upset even all of them; while if he holds that he defiles [only] from now and onwards,¹⁵ let him not upset even that day?¹⁶ — Rather say: He does not even upset that day.) Whereupon he [R. Oshaia] said to him [R. Johanan], R. Jose agrees with you.¹⁷ Yet surely R. Jose said: They defile their couch and their seat retrospectively? Hence it certainly proves that they defile retrospectively by Rabbinical law [only]. This proves it.

Now according to R. Jose, seeing that he rules [that] he defiles from now and onwards [only], what does '[They spoke of the "uncleanness of the deep"] in respect of a corpse alone' exclude?¹⁸

[Hence] let us solve from this that it refers to the priest, and [thus] the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ is permitted to him? — I will tell you: After all it refers to the owners and [treats] of the Passover-offering, but he [R. Jose] holds: One may not slaughter [the Passover-offering] and sprinkle [its blood] on behalf of those who are unclean through a reptile, and thus it is necessary to exclude it.¹⁹ But according to R. Jose, how is a complete zabah possible?²⁰ — When she has a continuous discharge.²¹ Alternatively, e.g., if she sees [a discharge] the whole of two [successive] twilights.²²

R. Joseph asked: The priest who officiates at²³ the continual-offering,²⁴ is the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ permitted to him or not? If you should say that the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ is permitted to the priest who officiates at their sacrifices,²⁵ what about the gonorrhoea which has no connection with the preceding, and when a man has a single discharge he is unclean only until the evening, when he performs tebillah and becomes clean. Why then does he need another day? priest who officiates at the continual-offering? Do we say, when have we a tradition about ‘the uncleanness of the deep’, in respect of the Passover-offering, [but] we have no tradition about the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ in respect to the continual-offering; or perhaps the continual-offering is learned from the Passover-offering? — Said Rabbah: It stands to reason: if where known uncleanness was not permitted to him,²⁶ yet the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ was permitted to him,²⁷ then where known uncleanness was permitted to him,

(1) During the eleven days following the seven days of niddah (menstruation) which are called the eleven days between the menses, a woman cannot become a niddah again, it being axiomatic that a discharge of blood in that period is not a sign of niddah, but may be symptomatic of gonorrhoea (zibah). A discharge on one or two days within the eleven renders her unclean for that day or those days only, but she cannot perform tebillah (v. Glos.) to become clean until the evening of the following day (for full details v. Nid. 71b ff), and she must wait

(2) For when the blood was sprinkled she was doubtfully unclean, since she might discharge again on that day. Thus she is assumed to be unclean with the ‘uncleanness of the deep,’ and is exempt from observing the second Passover because the headplate propitiates and makes her sacrifice valid, though she cannot partake of it.

(3) If she discharges on one day, waits part of the following and performs tebillah, she is clean, and if she subsequently discharges on the same day she becomes unclean anew, but does not continue her previous uncleanness. Hence when the sacrifice was slaughtered she was actually clean, having already performed tebillah, so that no propitiation is required.

(4) When a man suffers three gonorrhoeic discharges within three days or less (in this respect a man differs from a woman, who becomes a zabah only if the three discharges are on three consecutive days), he becomes a full zab, i.e., he does not regain his cleanness until seven consecutive days pass without a discharge, while during these seven days he is unclean as a zab; should he discharge on any of these days, he requires a further seven days, and so on. On the eighth day he brings a sacrifice, and on the evening that follows he may eat of sacred flesh (having performed tebillah the previous day). If, however, he suffers two discharges only, he is likewise unclean for seven days, but does not bring a sacrifice on the eighth; hence he can partake of sacrifices on the evening following the seventh day.

(5) So that if the day passes without a further discharge, he is fit to partake of the Passover-offering in the evening.

(6) Lit., ‘Saw.’ ‘Saw’ and ‘sight’ are technical terms denoting the gonorrhoeic discharges of a zab.

(7) Anything upon which they sit or lie, even without actually touching it, becomes unclean, its degree of defilement being that of a ‘principal uncleanness’ which in turn defiles people or utensils (v. Mishnah supra 14a and note a.l.). ‘retrospectively’ means, since the tebillah (q.v. Glos.) on the seventh day. Before the tebillah of course he would in any case be unclean.

(8) Thus they are not unclean only for the future, and yet they are exempt from a second Passover; the reason must be because it is an ‘uncleanness of the deep’ of gonorrhoea, and he holds that the headplate propitiates.

(9) But according to Biblical law she was clean during the interval between the tebillah until the third discharge.

(10) I.e., he interprets R. Jose's ruling thus.

(11) So cur. edd. But marginal note emends this to, ‘For R. Oshaia said’, omitting ‘it was taught’, as we never find his view expressed in a Baraitha, though he was the compiler of a series of Baraithas.

(12) I.e., the seven days are nullified and he must count another seven days; v. p. 423, n. 3. Rashi observes that he does not know to what R. Oshaia refers when he says ‘But’, which obviously indicates a contrast with some other law.

Possibly, however, אכן means here 'indeed', 'in truth', in which case it is an independent statement.

(13) Which is disregarded, and he requires only one more day free from discharge in order to regain his cleanness.

(14) I.e., from the beginning of the seventh day, the portion of the seventh day during which he had no discharge not being regarded as a complete day, that we should look upon him as having had seven consecutive days without an unclean discharge.

(15) Not from the beginning of the day, for the part of the day during which he was free from discharge counts as a whole day.

(16) For on that view he has enjoyed seven consecutive days of cleanness, which purifies him. The present discharge therefore is as an entirely new attack of

(17) Since he exempts her from observing the second Passover, he too holds that she is not retrospectively unclean.

(18) For, as seen above, on the present ruling there is no 'uncleanness of the deep' in connection with gonorrhoea. Hence it must refer to defilement by a reptile and to the priest; v. supra 80b.

(19) The steps of the argument are stated supra 80b.

(20) Since he holds that part of the day is counted as a whole day, and she is unclean only from when she discharges, each day is distinct and she can never be unclean for the three consecutive days which are necessary before she becomes a complete zabah.

(21) For the whole three days.

(22) Twilight counts as the end of one day and the beginning of the following. Hence if she discharges right through the twilights of Sunday and Monday, she is regarded as having 'seen' on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, and as this includes the beginnings of Monday and Tuesday, she is unclean the whole of these days.

(23) Lit., 'propitiates with'.

(24) During the whole year.

(25) V. supra 80b.

(26) E.g., a nazirite and one who sacrifices his Passover-offering. The headplate does not propitiate to make the sprinkling permissible.

(27) In the case of the continual-offering, where none are clean.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 81b

is it not logical that the 'uncleanness of the deep' was permitted to him? — I will tell you: can we then argue a fortiori from a traditional law: surely it was taught, R. Eliezer said to him: Akiba! That a bone [of a corpse] the size of a barley grain defiles¹ is a traditional law, whereas [that] a quarter [log] of blood [of a corpse defiles] is [deduced by you] a fortiori,² and we do not deduce a fortiori from a traditional law! — Rather said Raba: We learn [the scope of] 'its appointed time' from the Passover-offering.³ And where is [the law about] the 'uncleanness of the deep' itself written?⁴ — Said R. Eleazar: Scripture saith, And if any man die beside him ['alaw],⁵ [which means] when it is quite clear beside him.⁶ We have thus found [it in the case of] a nazirite; how do we know [it in the case of] one who sacrifices a Passover-offering? — Said R. Johanan: Because Scripture saith, [If any man shall be unclean by reason of a dead body or] in a distant road unto you:⁷ [that means] when it is quite clear unto you. R. Simeon b. Lakish said, It is as the road: just as the road is manifest, so must the [cause of] defilement be manifest too.

An objection is raised: What is the 'uncleanness of the deep'? Wherever not [even] a person at the end of the world had been cognizant thereof.⁸ If a person at the end of the world had been cognizant thereof, it is not the 'uncleanness of the deep.' [But] according to R. Eleazar who interpreted — when it is quite clear beside him, then [it is 'uncleanness of the deep'] unless he himself [the nazirite] knows of it.⁹ According to R. Johanan who interpreted 'unto you' [as meaning] when it is quite clear unto you, then [at least] two should know thereof.¹⁰ According to R. Simeon b. Lakish who said, It is as a road, then all should know of it? — Rather the 'uncleanness of the deep' is known as a traditional law, while the verse[s] are a mere support.¹¹

Mar son of R. Ashi said: They learned this¹² only where it became known to him¹³ after the sprinkling, so that when the blood was sprinkled it was rightly sprinkled; but if it was known to him before the sprinkling — it does not propitiate. An objection is raised: If a man finds a corpse lying across the width of a path,¹⁴ in respect of terumah he is unclean;¹⁵ in respect of [the laws of] a nazirite or one who sacrifices the Passover-offering, he is clean; and all [statements of] unclean and clean refer to the future.¹⁶ Rather if stated, it was thus stated: Mar son of R. Ashi said: Do not say that only if it became known to him after sprinkling does it propitiate, whereas if it became known to him before sprinkling, it does not propitiate; for even if it became known to him before sprinkling it [still] propitiates.

[To revert to] the main text: If a man finds a corpse lying across the width of a path, in respect of terumah he is unclean; in respect of [the laws of] a nazirite or one who sacrifices a Passover-offering, he is clean. When is that said? If he has no room to pass by,¹⁷ but if he has room to pass by, he is clean even in respect of terumah. When is that said? If he finds it whole. But if it was broken or dismembered, he is clean, as he might have passed between the pieces. But [if it lay] in a grave, even if broken and dismembered, he is unclean, because the grave unites it.¹⁸ When is this said? If he was walking on foot. But if he was laden [with a burden] or riding, he is unclean; because he who walks on foot can avoid touching it or overshadowing it,¹⁹ but when he is laden or riding, he cannot but touch [it] or overshadow it.²⁰ When is this said?²¹ In the case of ‘uncleanness of the deep’; but in the case of known uncleanness, he is unclean. And what is ‘uncleanness of the deep’? Wherever not [even] one at the end of the world had been cognizant thereof. But if one [even] at the world's end was cognizant thereof, it is not ‘uncleanness of the deep.’ If he found it hidden in straw, earth, or pebbles, it is ‘uncleanness of the deep.’²² [If he found it] in water, in darkness, or in the clefts of rocks, it is not ‘uncleanness of the deep.’²³ And they did not state [the law of] ‘uncleanness of the deep’ in respect of aught save a corpse alone.

MISHNAH. IF IT [THE PASCHAL LAMB] BECAME UNCLEAN, [EITHER] WHOLLY OR THE GREATER PART THEREOF, WE BURN IT IN FRONT OF THE BIRAH²⁴ WITH THE WOOD OF THE PILE.²⁵ IF THE LESSER PART THEREOF BECAME UNCLEAN, ALSO NOTHAR,²⁶ THEY [THE PEOPLE] BURN IT IN THEIR COURT-YARDS OR ON THEIR ROOFS WITH THEIR OWN WOOD. MISERS BURN IT IN FRONT OF THE BIRAH, IN ORDER TO BENEFIT FROM THE WOOD OF THE PILE.

GEMARA. What is the reason?²⁷ — Said R. Jose b. Hanina: In order to put them to shame.²⁸

IF THE LESSER PART THEREOF BECAME UNCLEAN etc. But the following contradicts it: Similarly, he who went out of Jerusalem and reconnected that he had holy flesh with him, if he has passed Scopus he burns it where he is; but if not,

(1) A nazirite, if he touches or carries it, and he must commence again (v. Num. VI, 9-12).

(2) R. Akiba deduced a fortiori from the former that if a nazirite is under the same covering as a quarter log of blood taken from a corpse he is defiled, just as in the first case; v. Naz. 57a.

(3) Mo'ado (its appointed time) is written in connection with both the continual-offering and the Passover-offering (v. Num. XXVIII, 2; IX, 2). Hence just as the head plate propitiates for the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ in the latter case, so in the former too.

(4) That the headplate propitiates in the case of a nazirite and one who sacrifices his Passover-offerings. At this stage it is as yet unknown that it is not intimated in Scripture at all but is a traditional law.

(5) Num. VI, 9.

(6) I.e., he becomes unclean only if the existence of the corpse is ‘beside him’, clear and known to him. But in the ‘uncleanness of the deep’ it was unknown hitherto.

(7) Ibid. IX, 10, lit. translation.

(8) Until after the nazirite or the Israelite sacrificing his Passover-offering was defiled by it. In that case the headplate propitiates.

- (9) Since the verse refers to him.
- (10) 'Unto you', Heb. lakem, is in the plural, hence must refer to two at least.
- (11) But not really the source of the law.
- (12) Sc. that the headplate propitiates for 'uncleanness of the deep' in the two cases stated.
- (13) The owner of the sacrifice, that he had been thus defiled.
- (14) Where he had passed, and he must either have actually touched or passed over it.
- (15) He may not eat terumah.
- (16) Thus though it is now known to him before the blood is sprinkled, the headplate propitiates, for this too was a case of 'uncleanness of the deep', since as far as is known none was aware of the corpse before.
- (17) V. p. 427, n. 7.
- (18) And the whole length of the grave is unclean and defiles.
- (19) יִשְׁתַּלְתֵּל < שָׁלַל means to form a tent, and is the technical term for overshadowing a corpse without touching it.
- (20) Because the burden or the action of the riding makes him sway from side to side.
- (21) That a nazirite etc. is clean.
- (22) These completely cover a corpse and make him quite invisible; hence its presence would not be known.
- (23) Because one might have seen it previously.
- (24) V. supra 49a.
- (25) The wood specially arranged for the altar for the burning of the burnt-offerings etc.
- (26) That which remained over from a clean Passover sacrifice, v. Ex. XII, 10.
- (27) That it is burnt before the Temple, publicly.
- (28) For their carelessness in permitting it to become defiled.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 82a

he returns and burns it in front of the Temple with the wood of the [altar] pile?¹ — Said R. Hama b. 'Ukba, There is no difficulty: One refers to a lodger;² the other [our Mishnah] refers to a householder. R. Papa said, Both refer to a lodger: there he had repaired to the road;³ here he had not repaired to the road. R. Zebid said: in truth it is as was first stated, [viz.,] there it refers to a lodger, while here it refers to a householder, and even where he had not taken to the road; [in the case of] a lodger, since he has not [wood of his own] he was regarded as a miser, for we learned: MISERS BURN IT IN FRONT OF THE TEMPLE IN ORDER TO BENEFIT FROM THE WOOD OF THE [ALTAR] PILE.

Our Rabbis taught: If they come [desire] to burn it in their own court-yards and with the wood of the [altar] pile, we do not heed [permit] them; in front of the Temple and with their own wood, we do not heed them. As for not heeding them [when they wish to burn it] with the wood of the pile in their own courtyards, that is well, [the reason being] lest some of it [the wood] be left over and they come to a stumbling-block through it.⁴ But what is the reason that [they may] not [burn it] in front of the Temple with their own wood? — Said R. Joseph: So as not to shame him who has none [of his own]. Raba said: On account of suspicion.⁵ Wherein do they differ? — They differ where he brought cane reeds and dried branches, which are not fit for the pile.⁶

We learned elsewhere: The head of the ma'amad⁷ used to place the unclean⁸ by the East Gate.⁹ What is the reason? Said R. Joseph: In order to put them to shame.¹⁰ Raba said: Because of suspicion.¹¹ Wherein do they differ? — They differ in respect of delicate persons or ropemakers.¹²

MISHNAH. A PASSOVER-OFFERING WHICH PASSED OUT¹³ OR WAS DEFILED MUST BE BURNT IMMEDIATELY.¹⁴ IF ITS OWNERS WERE DEFILED OR THEY DIED,¹⁵ IT MUST BECOME DISFIGURED¹⁴ AND BE BURNT ON THE SIXTEENTH. R. JOHANAN B. BEROKAH SAID: THIS TOO MUST BE BURNT IMMEDIATELY, BECAUSE THERE ARE NONE TO EAT IT.

GEMARA. As for uncleanness, It is well, because it is written, And the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire.¹⁶ But how do we know it of what goes out? Because it is written, Behold, the blood of it was not brought into the sanctuary within.¹⁷ Moses said to Aaron: 'Why did ye not eat the sin-offering? Perhaps its blood entered the innermost [sanctuary]?'¹⁸ 'No,' he answered him. 'Perhaps it passed without its barrier?'¹⁹ he asked. 'No,' replied he, 'it was in the sanctuary.' Said he to him, 'If it was in the sanctuary, and "behold, the blood of it was not brought into the sanctuary within," wherefore have ye not eaten it?' Whence it follows that if it passed out, or if its blood entered within, it requires burning.

As for when it is defiled, it is well: the Divine Law revealed it in the case of lesser Holy sacrifices, and all the more²⁰ in the case of Most Holy sacrifices.²¹ But as to what goes out; we have found [that it is disqualified in the case of] superior sacrifices; whence do we know [it of] inferior sacrifices? Moreover, as to what was taught: If its blood was kept overnight,²²

-
- (1) V. Mishnah supra 49a for notes. — This shows that even a small portion is burnt thus.
 - (2) Who has no home of his own and lacks the facilities for burning it at home.
 - (3) Therefore it is too much trouble to return home, and so he burns it in front of the Temple.
 - (4) They may use it for other purposes, which is forbidden.
 - (5) He will take away any wood that is left over, but the onlooker will think that it is wood of the altar pile and so suspect him of theft.
 - (6) Raba's reason is not applicable here, and therefore it is permitted; whereas R. Joseph's reason still hold hence it is forbidden.
 - (7) Post, a division of popular representatives deputed to accompany the daily services in the Temple with prayers, and also a corresponding division in the country town, answering to the divisions (v. supra 57a, p. 284, n. 3) of priests and Levites. — Jast.
 - (8) Of the priestly division that should have officiated that day in the Temple.
 - (9) That all who entered might see them.
 - (10) For not having taken care to be clean.
 - (11) Lest they be suspected of neglecting the Temple service for their private affairs.
 - (12) Who receive little pay; no priest will neglect the Temple service for this. Raba's reason does not apply here, whereas R. Joseph's reason does.
 - (13) Beyond its proper boundaries.
 - (14) On the fourteenth.
 - (15) So there is none to eat it. (13) V. supra 34a, p. 156, n. 7.
 - (16) Lev. VII, 19.
 - (17) Ibid. X, 18; the previous verses relate how Moses was angry with Eleazar and Ithamar for having the sin-offering burnt instead of eating it.
 - (18) I.e., the Holy of Holies — in that case you had rightly burnt it; v. ibid. VI, 23.
 - (19) I.e., outside the Temple court.
 - (20) Var. lec.: the same law applies.
 - (21) V. supra 24a, p. 108, n. 2. The verse quoted in connection with defilement refers to a peace-offering.
 - (22) I.e., the blood of the sacrifice had not yet been sprinkled by sunset.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 82b

if its blood was poured out, or if the blood passed outside the Temple enclosures, — where it is all established law that it requires burning;¹ whence do we learn it? — We deduce it from R. Simeon['s teaching]. For it was taught, R. Simeon said: In the holy place . . . it shall be burnt with fire:² this teaches of the sin-offering that is burnt in the holy place [sanctuary]. Now, I only know this alone: how do we know it of the unfit of the [other] Most Holy sacrifices and the emurim of the lesser Holy sacrifices? Therefore it is stated, 'in the holy place . . . it shall be burnt with fire.'³ We have [thus] found it of the Most Holy sacrifices; whence do we know it of the lesser Holy sacrifices?⁴ Rather

[that] wherever there is a disqualification in the sacred [sacrifices]⁵ burning is required, no matter whether it is the Most Holy sacrifices or the lesser Holy sacrifices; — this is known by tradition.⁶ And as for Aaron's sin-offering, that is because the incident that happened, happened thus.⁷

Now, according to the tanna of the School of Rabbah b. Abbuha who said, Even piggul requires disfigurement,⁸ whence do we know it — [because] he learns the meaning of iniquity from nothar:⁹ yet let us learn the meaning of iniquity from Aaron's sacrifice?¹⁰ — He can answer you: [A sacrifice such as] Aaron's sin-offering too in such a case¹¹ would require disfigurement in [future] generations;¹² but there it was a special dispensation.¹³ Now that we say, [that] 'wherever there is a disqualification in the sacred [sacrifices] burning is required, no matter whether it is the most sacred sacrifices or the lesser sacrifices, — this is known by tradition,' what is the purpose of 'in the holy place . . . it shall be burnt with fire'? — That is required [to teach] that its burning [must be] in the holy place.¹⁴ What is the purpose of, 'and the flesh that toucheth any unclean thing shall not be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire'?-That is required for its own sake.¹⁵ You might say, All disqualifications of the sacred [sacrifices mean] e.g., if its blood was kept overnight, if its blood was spilled, if its blood went outside, or if it was slaughtered by night: these require burning because they do not apply to hullin.¹⁶ But if it became unclean, which disqualifies in the case of hullin too' I would say, since it has been treated as profane [non-holy], it does not require burning, and burial should suffice for it. Hence we are informed [that it is not so].

IF ITS OWNERS WERE DEFILED OR THEY DIED, IT MUST BECOME DISFIGURED etc.

R. Joseph said: The controversy is where the owners were defiled after the sprinkling, so that the flesh had become fit for eating. But if the owners were defiled before the sprinkling, so that the flesh had not become fit for eating, all agree that it must be burnt immediately. An objection is raised: This is the general rule: Wherever its disqualification is in itself, it must be burnt immediately; [if it is] in the blood or in its owner, [their flesh] must become disfigured and [then] it goes out to the place of burning? Now [the disqualification through] the owners is taught as analogous to [that of] the blood: just as [that of] the blood is before sprinkling, so was [the defilement of] the owners before sprinkling? — Rather if stated, it was thus stated: The controversy is where the owners were defiled before the sprinkling, so that the flesh is not fit for eating, whereby it is as though its disqualification were in itself; but if the owners were defiled after the sprinkling, so that the flesh had become fit for eating, all agree that its disqualification is through something else [extraneous] and it requires disfigurement.

But R. Johanan maintained: The controversy holds good [even if the owners were defiled] after sprinkling too. Now R. Johanan is consistent with his view. For R. Johanan said: R. Johanan b. Berokah, and R. Nehemiah said the same thing. R. Johanan b. Berokah, this which we have stated. What is [the allusion to] R. Nehemiah? — For it was taught, R. Nehemiah said: This [Aaron's sin-offering] was burnt on account of bereavement, therefore it is stated, [and there have befallen me such things] as these.¹⁷ Now surely bereavement is as [a disqualification] after sprinkling.¹⁸ Yet when it was burnt; it was burnt immediately.¹⁹

(1) In all these cases the blood is unfit for sprinkling and in turn the flesh cannot be eaten, and it must be burnt.

(2) Lev. VI, 23.

(3) V. supra 24a and notes a.l.

(4) The verse quoted refers only to the emurim of the lesser holy sacrifices.

(5) Or, whatever its disqualification (that arises) in the sanctuary.

(6) It is not intimated in the Bible.

(7) The Bible does not record this story in order to teach, as stated above, but simply because it happened so.

(8) Though the disqualification is certainly in itself; v. supra 34b.

(9) 'Iniquity' is written in connection with piggul and nothar. Piggul: and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity (Lev. VII, 18); nothar: but every one that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity (ibid. XIX, 8, — this verse is applied to nothar in Ker. 5a). Now nothar is naturally disfigured, having been kept too long, and the employment of 'iniquity' in both cases teaches that piggul too requires disfigurement,

(10) Lev. X, 17: and he hath given it to you to bear the iniquity of the congregation. Hence just as it was burnt there on the same day, before it could become disfigured, so should piggul be.

(11) Whatever the cause of its disqualification. On this there are two views: (i) it had been defiled; (ii) it could not be eaten because Aaron and his sons were bereaved that day by the death of Nadab and Abihu.

(12) I.e., if a sin-offering becomes thus disqualified it normally requires disfigurement.

(13) Lit., 'the ruling of the hour'.

(14) In the Temple Court.

(15) I.e., to teach that uncleanness too is a sacred disqualification in this respect.

(16) V. Glos. Hullin remains unaffected by these. Thus in spite of these disqualifications the sacrifice has not been subjected to an indignity, as it were, which would disqualify even in the case of hullin. (2) V. supra 34b for notes.

(17) Lev. X, 19; 'as these' directly refers to his bereavement.

(18) For even if Nadab and Abihu died before the sprinkling, this would not be invalid, the sin-offering being dissimilar to the Passover-offering in this respect. For the latter stands primarily to be eaten, and therefore if the owners are defiled before the sprinkling, the sprinkling is invalid, while if they are defiled after the sprinkling the sprinkling is valid. The purpose of the sin-offering however, is atonement, so that even if the priests are defiled (here, bereaved) before the sprinkling and cannot eat, the sprinkling is valid. Hence this bereavement, even if it occurred before the blood was sprinkled, is the same as when the owners of the Passover-offering are defiled after the sprinkling.

(19) Hence since R. Johanan identifies R. Johanan b. Berokah's view with that of R. Nehemiah, this must be the former's opinion also, and thus they differ in our Mishnah where the owners are defiled after the sprinkling too.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 83a

Rabbah added: R. Jose the Galilean too. For it was taught, R. Jose the Galilean said: The whole passage speaks only of the bullocks which were burnt and the he-goats which were burnt, and its purpose is to teach that when they are disqualified, they must be burnt before the Temple, and to impose a negative injunction against eating them.¹ Said they to him: A sin-offering whose blood entered the innermost [sanctuary], whence do we know [that it is disqualified]? Said he to them, [From the verse] Behold, the blood of it was not brought into the sanctuary within,² whence it follows that if it [the sacrifice] went outside or if its blood entered within, it requires burning.³ But R. Johanan⁴ holds: The blood and the flesh are one thing;⁵ [while the defilement of] the owners is a different thing.⁶

MISHNAH. THE BONES,⁷ AND THE SINEWS, AND THE NOTHAR OF THE PASCHAL LAMB ARE TO BE BURNT ON THE SIXTEENTH.⁸ IF THE SIXTEENTH FALLS ON THE SABBATH, THEY ARE TO BE BURNT ON THE SEVENTEENTH, BECAUSE THEY⁹ DO NOT OVERRIDE EITHER THE SABBATH OR THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. R. Mari b. Abbuha said in R. Isaac's name: Bones of sacrifices which served nothar¹⁰ defile the hands,¹¹ since they became a stand for a forbidden article.¹² Shall we say that this supports him: THE BONES, AND THE SINEWS, AND THE NOTHAR ARE TO BE BURNT ON THE SIXTEENTH. How are these bones meant? If we say that they contain no marrow, why burn them? Let us throw them away!¹³ Hence it is obvious that they contain marrow. Now, it is well if you agree that the serving of nothar is a [substantial] fact:¹⁴ then it is right that they require burning.¹⁵ But if you say [that] the serving of nothar is not a [substantial] fact, why do they need burning? Let us break them, scoop out their marrow and burn it, and throw them [the bones] away.¹⁶ Hence this surely proves that the serving of nothar is a [substantial] fact! — I will tell you. It is not so: in truth I may argue that the serving of nothar is not a [substantial] fact, but he¹⁷ holds: [neither shall ye break a bone] thereof¹⁸ [means] of a fit [bone], and even of an unfit [one]. [You say] 'Even of an unfit [one]' — can you think so! Surely we learned: But he who leaves anything over [even] of clean [flesh], or he who breaks [a bone] of: an unclean [Passover-offering], does not receive forty [lashes]?¹⁹ — There is no difficulty: here it means where it enjoyed a period of fitness;²⁰ there it means where it never enjoyed a period of fitness;²⁰ And which Tanna admits a distinction between where it enjoyed a period of fitness and where it did not enjoy a period of fitness? — It is R. Jacob. For it was taught: ‘Neither shall ye break a bone thereof’: ‘thereof’ implies of a fit one, but not of an unfit one. R. Jacob said: If it enjoyed a period of fitness and became unfit, it is subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone; if it did not enjoy a period of fitness, it is not subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone. R. Simeon said: Both the one and the other are not subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone. An objection is raised: No bones of sacrifices require burning,²¹ except the bones of the Passover-offering,²² on account of the stumbling-block.²³ How are these bones meant? If we say that they contain no marrow, why do they need burning? Hence it is obvious that they contain marrow. Now if you should think [that] the serving of nothar is something substantial, why do the bones of [other] sacrifices not require burning? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: The circumstances here are e.g., if he found them [the bones] scooped out:²⁴ [in the case of] the bones of [other] sacrifices which are not subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone, [we assume that] they were scooped out before it²⁵ [the marrow] became nothar’, Hence they did not serve nothar and do not require burning. [But in the case of] the bones of the Passover-offering which are subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone, we assume that they were scooped out after they became nothar; hence they had served nothar and require to be burnt.

R. Zebid said: The circumstances here are e.g.,

(1) This refers to Lev. VI, 23: And no sin-offering, whereof any of the blood is brought into the tent of meeting to make atonement in the holy place, shall be eaten; it shall be burnt with fire. The Rabbis relate this to a sin-offering which is sacrificed in the inner court, whose blood was carried into the inner court, thereby thus qualifying it. But R. Jose the Galilean relates it to a sin-offering which is sacrificed in the inner court, e.g., the bullock brought when the entire congregation sins in ignorance (v. Lev. IV, 13 f.). Hence he interprets the verse thus: And no sin-offering thereof any of the blood is rightly brought into the tent of meeting etc., shall be eaten. Now this is superfluous in respect of a valid sacrifice, since it is explicitly stated in IV, 21: and he shall carry forth the bullock without the camp, and burn it. Hence the verse must mean that if it became unfit though going outside its legitimate boundary or through defilement, it must be burnt in front of the Birah, and not be carried ‘without the camp’, i.e., beyond the Temple Mount. Further, this prohibits the eating of its flesh by a negative injunction, violation of which involves flagellation (Lev. IV, 21 merely contains an affirmative precept whose disregard is not punished by flagellation).

(2) Lev. X, 18.

(3) Now, since R. Jose the Galilean learns sacrifices for all time from Aaron's sin-offering, he evidently holds that for all time if the blood is brought within, it requires immediate burning without awaiting disfigurement, though the disqualification of the blood is like a disqualification through something else. Rabbah assumes that the same law viz., that it must be burnt without awaiting disfigurement, applies to the owner's defilement, though it is a disqualification through something else. Hence R. Jose the Galilean and R. Johanan b. Berokah say the same thing.

(4) Who does not include R. Jose the Galilean.

(5) Hence when the blood goes without its precincts, it is a disqualification in the sacrifice itself.

(6) I.e., it is a disqualification through something else, and therefore one cannot be deduced from the other.

(7) Of the paschal lamb. They may not be broken (Ex. XII, 46), and therefore their marrow becomes nothar (v. Glos.) and must be burnt (ibid. 10).

(8) Not on the fifteenth, which is a festival day, but on the sixteenth, which is the first of the Intermediate days (hol ha-mo'ed); v. p. 16, n. 4.

(9) I.e., the burning of them.

(10) I.e., the marrow was left in them after the time permitted for the eating of the sacrifice, and thus became nothar, for which the bones served as a container.

(11) Just as nothar itself, v. infra 85a, 120b.

(12) Sc. the marrow.

(13) Nothar, which must be burnt, is applicable only to what can be eaten in the first place, viz., the flesh and the marrow.

(14) I.e., of sufficient importance to be treated as nothar itself.

(15) I.e., the bones themselves too.

(16) For as stated anon, only a fit bone may not be broken; here, once the marrow is nothar, the bone ceases to be fit.

(17) The Tanna of our Mishnah.

(18) Ex. XII, 46.

(19) Flagellation, the penalty for violating a negative injunction. V. infra 84a. Since he is not so punished, the prohibition evidently does not apply.

(20) E.g., if a bone is rendered unfit on account of nothar, it was fit before it became nothar. Then the prohibition remains even when it becomes unfit. (9) E.g., if the bone was defiled before the sprinkling of the blood. Then it was never fit, and the prohibition does not apply to it.

(21) Though the marrow in them, if uneaten, is nothar. The bones are broken while the marrow is scooped out and burnt.

(22) Where the bones themselves are burnt.

(23) One might Otherwise be led to violate the prohibition of breaking bones.

(24) I.e., the bones were already broken and their marrow removed.

(25) The plural in the text probably refers to the separate marrows distributed among the bones.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 83b

that he found them piled up in heaps and some of them were scooped out:¹ [in the case of] bones of [other] sacrifices which are not subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone, [I assume] that they have all been scooped out and [the marrow] eaten; hence they do not require burning. But in the case of bones of the Passover-offering which are subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone, [I say] perhaps it is these [only] which were scooped out, while the others² were not scooped out; hence they require burning.

Rab Judah said in Rab's name: All sinews are flesh, except the sinews of the neck. We learned: THE BONES, THE SINEWS, AND THE NOTHAR ARE TO BE BURNT ON THE SIXTEENTH. How are these sinews meant? If they are sinews of flesh, let us eat them! While if they remained over,³ then they are [indeed] nothar?⁴ Hence it is obvious [that] the sinews of the neck [are meant]. Now it is well if you say that they are flesh:⁵ therefore they require burning. But if you say that they are not flesh, why do they require burning? — Said R. Hisda: This [teaching] arises only in respect of the thigh sinew, and in accordance with R. Judah. For it was taught, R. Judah said: [The prohibition of the thigh sinew] is operative only in respect of one, and reason determines, that of the right [thigh].⁶ Then in that case conclude that R. Judah is in doubt,⁷ for if he is really certain, let us eat that which is permitted, and throw away that which is forbidden. Why then do they [both] need burning? — Said R. Ika b. Hinena: [This law was stated] where e.g., they were [originally] distinguished but subsequently mixed up.⁸

R. Ashi said: It is necessary [to teach it] only in respect of the fat of the sinew of the thigh. For it was taught: Its fat is permitted, but the Israelites are holy and treat it as forbidden.⁹

Rabina said: It refers to the outer [sinew of the thigh], and is in accordance with Rab Judah's dictum in Samuel's name. For Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: The inner one which is near the bone is forbidden, and a person is liable on its account [to flagellation]; the other which is near the flesh is forbidden, but a person is not liable on its account.¹⁰ IF THE SIXTEENTH FELL etc. Yet why so? Let the affirmative command come and override the negative command?¹¹ — Said Hezekiah, and the School of Hezekiah taught likewise: And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; but that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire: now [the second] 'until the morning' need not be stated, What then is the teaching of 'until the morning'? [Scripture comes] to appoint a second morning for its burning.¹² Abaye said: Scripture saith, The burnt-offering of the Sabbath [shall be burnt] on its Sabbath:¹³ but the burnt-offering of weekdays is not [to be burnt] on the Sabbath, nor is the burnt-offering of weekdays [to be burnt] on Festivals.¹⁴ Raba said: Scripture saith, [no manner of work shall be done in them — sc. Festivals — , save that which every man must eat,] that only may be done by you:¹⁵ ‘that’ but not its preparatory requisites:¹⁶ ‘only,’

(1) He only examined those on top and found them thus.

(2) Which he did not examine.

(3) Accidentally or through negligence.

(4) Why state it separately?

(5) In spite of their woodenness.

(6) V. Gen. XXXII, 33. Thus actually one of the thigh sinews is permitted, though we do not know which; this one therefore is really nothar and must be burnt.

(7) Which is forbidden and which is permitted.

(8) R. Judah may be certain that the prohibition applies to the right thigh only, but these sinews referred to in our Mishnah, though distinguished when drawn out, are now mixed up and we do not know which is the right and which is the left, and hence both require burning.

(9) Since therefore according to Scriptural law it can be eaten, it is nothar and must be burnt. On the other hand, since in actual practice it could not be eaten the Tanna cannot include it in the term nothar, which generally implies flesh which could have been eaten, and must mention it separately.

(10) It is forbidden by Rabbinical law only. The reasoning in the preceding note applies here too.

(11) It is a general principle that if an affirmative command and a negative command are in conflict, the former overrides the latter. Here we have all affirmative command to burn the nothar, Ex. XII, 10, and a negative command forbidding work on a festival, ibid. 16.

(12) Translating: but that which remaineth of it, (ye shall wait) until the (following) morning (sc. that of the sixteenth) (and) burn (it) with fire.

(13) Num. XXVIII, 10; this is the literal translation.

(14) E.g., the animal sacrificed before the Sabbath or Festival must not be burnt the following evening. Hence sacrifices and sacred food in general, if unfit, must not be burnt on Festivals, a fortiori.

(15) Ex. XII, 16.

(16) E.g., you may roast meat, but may not sharpen a spit for impaling the meat on it.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 84a

but not circumcision out of its proper time, which might [otherwise] be inferred a fortiori.¹ R. Ashi said: [On the seventh day is a Sabbath of] solemn rest [Shabbathon],² [written] in connection with Festivals, is an affirmative precept³ and one affirmative precept cannot override a negative precept and an affirmative precept [combined]. MISHNAH. EVERYTHING WHICH CAN BE EATEN OF A FULL-GROWN OX MAY BE EATEN OF A TENDER GOAT,⁴ AND ALSO THE TOPS OF THE FORELEGS AND THE GRISTLES.⁵

GEMARA. Rabbah pointed out a contradiction. We learned: EVERYTHING WHICH CAN BE EATEN OF A FULL-GROWN OX MAY BE EATEN OF A TENDER GOAT; hence that which cannot be eaten [of the former] may not [be eaten of the latter]. Then consider the sequel: [AND ALSO] THE TOPS OF THE FORELEGS AND THE GRISTLES: yet surely these cannot be eaten in the case of a full-grown ox? — Rather it is [dependent on] Tannaim, and it is taught thus: EVERYTHING WHICH CAN BE EATEN OF A FULL-GROWN OX MAY BE EATEN OF A TENDER GOAT, while that which cannot be eaten [of the former] may not be eaten [of the latter]: but some maintain, also THE TOPS OF THE FORELEGS AND THE GRISTLES. Raba said: This [the second] is a defining clause,⁶ and it teaches thus: EVERYTHING WHICH CAN BE EATEN OF A FULL-GROWN OX after [much] boning MAY BE EATEN OF A TENDER GOAT when roasted, and what is it? THE TOPS OF THE FORELEGS AND THE GRISTLES.

It was taught in accordance with Raba: Everything which can be eaten of a full-grown ox after [much] boning may be eaten of a tender goat when roasted, and what is it? The tops of the forelegs and the gristles, and the soft sinews are treated⁷ as flesh.

It was stated: [With regard to] sinews which would ultimately harden,⁸ — R. Johanan said: One may register for them in the Passover-offering; Resh Lakish maintained: One may not register for them in the Passover-offering. R. Johanan said, One may register for them in the Passover-offering, [because] we decide by the present. Resh Lakish maintained. One may not register for them in the Passover-offering, [because] we decide by its ultimate [condition].⁹ Resh Lakish raised an objection against R. Johanan: Everything which can be eaten of a full-grown ox may be eaten of a tender goat, and what is it? The tops of the forelegs and the gristles; [thus] only these,¹⁰ but not sinews which would ultimately harden! — Said he to him: He teaches those, and the same applies to these. [Thus] why are those [permitted]? Because they can be eaten in the case of a full-grown ox after [much] boning; [so] these too call be eaten of a full-grown ox after [much] boning.

R. Jeremiah said to R. Abin: When you go before R. Abbahu, point out a contradiction to him. Did then R. Johanan say, '[With regard to] sinews which would ultimately harden, one may register for them in the Passover-offering', which shows that we decide by the present? Surely Resh Lakish asked R. Johanan: 'Can the skin of the head of a tender [sucking] goat be defiled?'¹¹ And he answered him: 'It cannot be defiled', which proves that we decide by the future? — Said he to him: he who pointed out this contradiction to you was not particular about his flour.¹² Surely R. Johanan retracted in favour of Resh Lakish[’s view], and he said to him: Do not provoke me, for I learn it as the opinion of an individual.¹³ MISHNAH. HE WHO BREAKS A BONE OF A CLEAN PASSOVER-OFFERING RECEIVES FORTY [LASHES]. BUT HE WHO LEAVES OVER [FLESH] OF A CLEAN [OFFERING] OR BREAKS [A BONE] OF AN UNCLEAN [ONE] IS NOT FLAGELLATED WITH FORTY [LASHES].

GEMARA. As for leaving over [flesh] of a clean [offering], it is well. For it was taught: And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.¹⁴ Scripture desires to state an affirmative command after a negative command, thus teaching that one is not flagellated for it; this is R. Judah's view.¹⁵ R. Jacob said: This is not the real reason,¹⁶ but because It is a negative injunction involving no action,¹⁷ for which one is not flagellated. But how do we know [that] he who breaks [a bone] of an unclean [offering is not flagellated]? — Because Scripture states, Neither shall ye break a bone thereof:¹⁸ 'thereof' [implies] of a fit sacrifice but not of an unfit one. Our Rabbis taught: 'Neither shall ye break a bone thereof': 'thereof' implies of a fit sacrifice but not of an unfit one. Rabbi said: In one house shall it be eaten . . . neither shall ye break a bone thereof:¹⁸ [this intimates,] whatever is fit for eating is subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, while whatever is not fit for eating is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. Wherein do they differ? Said R. Jeremiah: They differ in respect of a Passover-offering which came in a state of uncleanness:¹⁹ on the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice].

(1) An infant is circumcised even on the Sabbath, if it is the eighth day after birth (Lev. XII, 3), but not otherwise. This is deduced from 'alone', which is a limitation. But for this, one could infer a fortiori that it is permissible (v. Shab. 132b). Thus we see that an act which need not be done on a particular day may not be done on the Sabbath or on Festivals, and the same applies to unfit sacred food.

(2) Lev. XXIII, 3.

(3) For it intimates: rest thereon, so that work on a festival involves the transgression of both affirmative and negative precepts.

(4) But not those portions of a full-grown ox which are too hard to be eaten (the reference, of course, is to the Passover-offering), though in the case of a young goat these are soft and edible.

(5) E.g., the cartilage of the ears, the gristly portion of the breast, and the small ribs at the end of the spine.

(6) Lit., 'he teaches what they are'.

(7) Lit., 'judged'.

(8) The sinews of the neck of a young goat fit for a Passover-offering are soft, but when it grows older they harden and are unfit for food.

(9) Thus R. Johanan interprets the 'soft sinews' of the foregoing Baraita as meaning those which are soft now, even if they ultimately harden; while in the view of Resh Lakish it means only those which remain permanently soft.

(10) Which even in the case of a full-grown ox can be eaten after protracted boiling.

(11) At present it is edible, but not when the goat grows older. Can it be defiled as food, since it can now be eaten, or not, since it will ultimately harden.

(12) Whether he milled sound wheat or the refuse! I.e., he was careless about his data.

(13) This refers to the Mishnah in Hul. 122a which states that the skin of the head of a tender goat is as its flesh, i.e., can be defiled as an eatable, which proves that we decide by the present and thus contradicts R. Johanan's answer to Resh Lakish. He, however, countered by stating that he regarded it as an individual's ruling only. Hence when he rules in the present discussion that we decide by the present, it must be on the assumption that that Mishnah represents the opinion of the majority, an assumption, however, which he evidently abandoned.

(14) Ex. XII, 10.

(15) This is a general principle, for when an affirmative precept follows a negative one, it is implied that if the latter is violated, the remedy lies in the former.

(16) Lit., 'this is not of the same denomination'.

(17) It is violated by remaining passive, not by committing a positive act.

(18) Ibid. 46.

(19) I.e., when the majority of the community were unclean; v. Mishnah supra 79a.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 84b

this however is unfit;¹ but on the view that whatever is fit for eating [is subject to this law], [surely] this too is fit for eating.² R. Joseph said: In such a case all agree that it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, for Rabbi comes to be [more] lenient³ and this is surely unfit. But⁴ they differ where it enjoyed a period of fitness and then became unfit:⁵ on the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this [indeed] was fit; but on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is meant], surely it is not fit for eating now.

Abaye said: In such a case all hold that it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. What is the reason? [Because] at all events it is unfit now. But they differ in respect of breaking a bone during the daytime.⁶ On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this [indeed] is fit; but on the view, that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], at present⁷ it is not fit for eating.

An objection is raised: 'Rabbi said: One may register for the marrow in the head, but one may not register for the marrow in the thigh-bone'. Why [may one register for] the marrow in the head? Because one is able to scrape it and extract it. Now if you think that the breaking of the bone by daylight is permitted, then the thigh-bone too, let us break it during the day, extract the marrow, and register for it? — Abaye can answer you: Yet even according to your view,⁸ let us still take a glowing coal after nightfall, place it upon it, burn it and extract the marrow and register for it? For surely it was taught: But he who burns the bones or cuts the sinew does not violate [the prohibition of] breaking a bone? Then what can you say?⁹ Abaye said: Because it may split.¹⁰ Raba said: [This is impossible] on account of the loss of sacred food, which he may destroy with [his own] hands, as the fire may destroy some of the marrow. [Hence] during the daytime too [it may not be broken] as a preventive measure on account of after nightfall.¹¹

R. Papa said: In such a case all hold that it is subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. What is the reason? [Because] in the evening it is fit for eating. But they differ in respect of a limb part of which went out:¹² On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this [indeed] is fit;¹³ while on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], this, however, is not fit for eating, as was taught: R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: A lamb part of which went outside, and which he broke, is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone.

R. Shesheth the son of R. Idi said: In such a case all agree that it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, for this limb is surely unfit. But they differ in respect of breaking a bone of a half-roast [offering].¹⁴ On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this is fit;¹⁵ while on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], now [however] it is not fit for eating.

R. Nahman b. Isaac said: In such a case all agree that it is subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. What is the reason? Because it is surely fit for eating, as he can roast it [completely] and eat it. But they differ in respect of [the breaking of the bone of] the fat tail. On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this is indeed fit, but on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], this [however] is not fit for eating, for the fat tail is offered to the Most High.¹⁶

R. Ashi said: In such a case it is certainly not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, for it is certainly unfit for eating at all. But they differ in respect of [breaking the bone of] a limb upon which there is less than an olive of flesh.¹⁷ On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this indeed is fit; but on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], we require the standard of eating, which is absent.

Rabina said: In such a case it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, because we require the standard of eating. But they differ in respect of a limb upon which there is less than an olive of flesh at this point,¹⁸ but which contains as much as an olive of flesh elsewhere. On the view that [the verse refers to] a fit [sacrifice], this indeed is fit. But on the view that [only what is] fit for eating [is subject to this law], we require the standard of eating at the point where it is broken, which is absent.

It was taught as four of these.¹⁹ For it was taught, Rabbi said: ‘In one house shall it be eaten . . . neither shall ye break a bone thereof’: he is culpable on account of that which is fit, but he is not culpable on account of that which is not fit. [Thus:] If it had a period of fitness but became unfit by the time of eating, it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. If it contains the standard of eating,²⁰ it is subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone; if it does not contain the standard of eating, it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. That which is intended for the altar²¹ is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. [Only] at the time of eating is it subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone; when not at the time of eating²² it is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. It was stated: If a limb does not contain as much as an olive of flesh at this point,²³ but does contain as much as an olive of flesh elsewhere, — R. Johanan maintained: It is subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone; R. Simeon b. Lakish said: It is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone. R. Johanan raised an objection against Resh Lakish: ‘Neither shall ye break a bone thereof’: both a bone upon which there is as much as an olive of flesh and a bone upon which there is not as much as an olive of flesh. Now what does ‘there is not as much as an olive of flesh upon it’ mean? Shall we say that there is not as much as an olive of flesh upon it at all, then why is it subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone?²⁴ Hence surely this is what it means: Both a bone upon which there is as much as an olive of flesh at this [very] point and a bone upon which there is not as much as an olive of flesh at this point, but there is as much as an olive of flesh upon it elsewhere? — Said he to him,

(1) Normally such is unfit, for uncleanness is merely overridden in favour of a community, but not permitted, v. supra 77a, p. 398, n. 2; hence it is not subject to the prohibition of breaking a bone.

(2) Since a Passover offered in uncleanness may be eaten in uncleanness, v. supra 76b.

(3) Some versions omit this (Bah).

(4) [Var. lec. omit ‘In such a case . . . But’.]

(5) E.g., the paschal sacrifice became unclean after the sprinkling of the blood.

- (6) Of the fourteenth, before the Festival commences on the evening of the fifteenth.
- (7) I.e., when he actually breaks it.
- (8) Sc. that this is forbidden.
- (9) Why one may not register for the marrow.
- (10) The fire may not burn it through but cause it to crack and split and this is the same as breaking it.
- (11) The point of the 'too' ('during the daytime too') is this: just as it must not be burnt at night by Rabbinical law only, lest something else happen, so he must not break it during the day by Rabbinical law only', also because he may do something else instead, viz., break it at night.
- (12) Without the walls of Jerusalem. The offering had to be eaten in Jerusalem; whatever went outside became unfit. Here as only part of a limb had gone out, this part should be cut out', but this entails cutting across the bone in the limb.
- (13) Sc. the part which remained inside, and when he breaks the bone he naturally touches on that part. Consequently it is forbidden; for the remedy v. Mishnah infra 85b.
- (14) Which is itself forbidden, v. Ex. XII, 9: Eat not of it half-roast (so translated supra 41a).
- (15) The sacrifice itself is fit, though it may not be eaten because it was not properly prepared.
- (16) I.e., it is burnt on the altar together with the emurim (v. Glos.).
- (17) That is the least quantity which constitutes eating
- (18) Where he actually breaks the bone.
- (19) [R. Joseph, R. Nahman b. Isaac, Abaye and Rabina (or R. Ashi). V. n. 5. Var. lec., however, omits the passage.]
- (20) [Either at the point where it is broken, as required by Rabina, or on the limb itself', as required by R. Ashi.]
- (21) I.e., the bone of the fat tail.
- (22) I.e., before nightfall.
- (23) At the point of breaking.
- (24) For R. Johanan and Resh Lakish both, agree that it must contain as much as an olive of flesh before it is subject to the prohibition.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 85a

No: it means this: Both a bone which has as much as an olive of flesh on the outside and a bone which has not as much as an olive of flesh on it on the outside, but contains as much as an olive of flesh [marrow] inside, [yet still] at the point of breaking. And it was taught [even so]: 'Neither shall ye break a bone thereof': [this refers to] both a bone which contains marrow and a bone which does not contain marrow, while to what do I apply,¹ and they shall eat the flesh in that night?² To the meat on the bone. Yet perhaps it is not so, but [it applies] to the meat [marrow] inside the bone [too], while to what do I apply, 'neither shall ye break a bone thereof'? To a bone which does not contain marrow; but in the case of a bone which contains marrow he breaks [it] and eats [the marrow]; and do not wonder thereat, for the affirmative command comes and overrides the negative command!³ When, [however,] 'they shall not break a bone thereof'⁴ is stated in connection with the second Passover, which need not have been taught, seeing that it has already been said, according to all the statute of the Passover they shall keep it,⁵ deduce from this [that it means] both a bone which, contains marrow and a bone which does not contain marrow.

An objection is raised: [With regard to] a limb part of which went outside,⁶ he cuts [the flesh] as far as the bone, and pares it until he reaches the joint and then cuts it off.⁷ Now if you say [that] a limb upon which there is not as much as an olive at this point but there is as much as an olive on it elsewhere is not subject to the [prohibition of] breaking a bone, why does he pare it until he reaches the joint and [then] cut it off? Let us scrape a little away and break it? — Abaye said: [This cannot be done] because of a [possible] split.⁸ Rabina said: This refers to the thigh bone.⁹

We learned elsewhere: Piggul and nothar¹⁰ defile the hands.¹¹ R. Huna and R. Hisda, — One maintained: It was on account of the suspects of the priesthood;¹² while the other maintained: It was on account of the lazy priests.¹³ One recited [the reason] in reference to piggul, while the other recited it in reference to nothar. He who recited it in reference to piggul [gave the reason as being] on account of the suspects of the priesthood. While he who recited it in reference to nothar [stated that it was] on account of the lazy priests. One recited: As much as an olive;¹⁴ while the other recited: As much as an egg. He who recited, as much as an olive [took the same standard] as its prohibition,¹⁵ while he who recites, as much as an olive, [takes the same standard] as its uncleanness.¹⁶

The scholars asked: Did the Rabbis enact uncleanness in respect of what goes outside¹⁷ or not? Do we say, they imposed uncleanness on nothar because they [the priests] might come to be lazy about it; but [concerning] that which goes outside, they will [certainly] not carry it out with [their own] hands, [and so] the Rabbis did not decree uncleanness in connection therewith. Or perhaps there is no difference? — Come and hear: If part of a limb went outside, he cuts [the flesh] as far as the bone and pares it until he reaches the joint and then cuts it off. Now if you say that the Rabbis imposed uncleanness upon it, what if he does cut? Surely it defiles it?¹⁸ — It is concealed uncleanness,¹⁹ and concealed uncleanness does not defile. But according to Rabina who maintained: The connection of foodstuffs is not a real connection, and they are as though separated,²⁰ what can be said: surely they²¹ touch each other and it [the inner portion] is defiled? — Hence according to him who recited, as much as an olive, [we must say here] that it²² did not contain as much as an olive; while according to him who recited, as much as an egg, [we must say] that it did not contain as much as an egg.

Come and hear: If a man carries out flesh of a Passover-offering from one company to another,²³ though he [has violated] a negative injunction, it [the flesh] is clean. Now does that not mean that it is clean yet forbidden, because that which goes out from one company to another company is like that which goes outside its boundary²⁴ and is disqualified [for eating], yet even so it teaches [that] it is clean, which proves that the Rabbis did not decree uncleanness! — No: it is clean and permitted, because that which goes out from company to company is not like that which goes outside its boundary, and it is not disqualified. But surely the second clause teaches: He who eats it is subject to a negative injunction? As for him who says, as much as an egg, it is well: [this may refer to] where it contains as much as an olive²⁵ but not as much as an egg. But according to him who says as much as an olive, what can be said? — Rather [say thus]: We do not ask in respect of what goes out in the case of a Passover-offering, for the Rabbis [certainly] did not decree uncleanness [there]. What is the reason? The members of a company²⁶ are most scrupulous, and so are very careful with it.²⁷ But we do ask in respect of what goes out in the case of sacrifices [in general]: what [is the law]? The question stands over.

Now he who carries out flesh of the Passover-offering

(1) Lit., 'and how do I fulfil?'

(2) Ex. XII, 8.

(3) V. supra 83b, P. 439. n. 1.

(4) Num. IX, 12.

(5) Num. IX, 12.

(6) V. supra 84b, p. 444, n. 2.

(7) While the flesh which he cut on (i.e., which had not gone outside) is eaten.

(8) When he hits the bone to break it, it may split elsewhere, not just where it was scraped.

(9) Which contains marrow; hence scraping the flesh off is of no avail.

(10) V. Glos.

(11) By Rabbinic law; v. infra 120b.

(12) Who were suspected of maliciously making the sacrifice piggul to hurt its owner, who would have to bring another; therefore the priest who handles it was declared unclean, since defilement was regarded as very serious even by the wicked (Rashi, and Tosaf. quoting Yoma 23a). Another interpretation: so that he who touched it should not be suspected of intending to eat it, as it would be known that he could not do this in his unclean state.

(13) Who were too indolent to consume the flesh within the permitted period and allowed it to become nothar.

- (14) Of these defiled the hands.
- (15) That quantity involves punishment if it is eaten.
- (16) As much as an egg is the smallest quantity which defiles by Biblical law. Hence when the Rabbis enacted that this defiles the hands, they adopted the same standard.
- (17) Its appointed boundaries.
- (18) The inner portion of the flesh is defiled by contact with the part which went outside.
- (19) This is a technical term: the actual point of contact is not visible in the same way that the contact of two separate pieces of flesh is visible.
- (20) Since foodstuffs are intended to be cut up. In his view the law of concealed uncleanness is only applicable where the object is not intended to be cut, e.g., a piece of cloth, v. Hul. 72b.
- (21) The two parts.
- (22) The portion which went outside.
- (23) Cf. Mishnah infra 86a.
- (24) Within which it much be eaten. Viz., the walls of Jerusalem.
- (25) Which involves punishment.
- (26) Who have registered for one paschal sacrifice.
- (27) Hence there is no need for a preventive measure.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 85b

from one company to another company, how do we know [that he violates a negative injunction]? — Because it was taught: Thou shalt not carry forth aught of the flesh abroad out of the house:¹ I only know [that it must not be taken] from one house to another house; whence do we know [that it must not be taken] from one company to another company?² Because it is stated, ‘abroad’, [meaning] outside [the place of] its consumption.

R. Ammi said: He who carries out flesh of the Passover-offering from one company to another company is not culpable unless he deposits [it there]: ‘carrying out’ is written in connection with it as [in connection with] the Sabbath;³ [hence] just as [in the case of] the Sabbath, [he is not culpable] unless he removes and deposits,⁴ so here too [he is not culpable] unless he removes it [from one company] and deposits it [with the second]. R. Abba b. Mammel raised an objection: If they were carrying them on staves, the front bearers having gone outside the walls of the Temple Court while the rear ones had not [yet] gone out, those in front defile [their] garments while those behind do not defile their garments.⁵ But it has not come to rest?⁶ He raised the objection and he himself answered it: It refers to [carcasses] which are trailed [along the ground].⁷

MISHNAH. IF PART OF A LIMB WENT OUTSIDE, HE CUTS [THE FLESH] AS FAR AS THE BONE AND PARES IT UNTIL HE REACHES THE JOINT AND CUTS IT AWAY. BUT IN THE CASE OF [OTHER] SACRIFICES HE CUTS IT OFF WITH A CHOPPER, BECAUSE THEY ARE NOT SUBJECT TO THE [PROHIBITION OF] BREAKING A BONE. FROM THE DOOR-STOP AND WITHIN RANKS AS WITHIN [THE CITY];⁸ FROM THE DOOR-STOP AND WITHOUT IS AS OUTSIDE [THE CITY]. THE WINDOWS⁹ AND THE THICKNESS OF THE WALL ARE AS THE INSIDE.

GEMARA. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: And it is likewise in respect of prayer.¹⁰ He differs from R. Joshua b. Levi. For R. Joshua b. Levi said: Even an iron partition cannot interpose between Israel and their Father in Heaven.¹¹ Now this is self-contradictory. You say, FROM THE DOORSTOP AND WITHIN RANKS AS WITHIN [THE CITY]; hence the [area of] the door-stop itself is as the outside. Then consider the sequel: FROM THE DOOR-STOP AND WITHOUT IS AS OUTSIDE [THE CITY]; hence the door-stop itself is as the inside? — There is no difficulty: one refers to the gates of the Temple Court;¹² the other, to the gates of Jerusalem.¹³ For R. Samuel b. R. Isaac said: Why were the gates of Jerusalem not sanctified?¹⁴ Because lepers shelter under them in summer¹⁵ from the sun and in winter¹⁶ from the rain. R. Samuel son of R. Isaac also said: Why was the gate of Nicanor¹⁷ not sanctified? Because lepers stand there and insert the thumbs of their hands [into the Court].¹⁸

THE WINDOWS AND THE THICKNESS OF THE WALL etc. Rab said: The roofs and the upper chambers were not sanctified.¹⁹ But that is not so, for Rab said on the authority of R. Hiyya: There was [only] as much as an olive of the Passover-offering [to eat],²⁰ yet the Hallel²¹ split the roofs!²²

(1) Ex. XII, 46.

(2) Even in the same house.

(3) Sc. in Ex. XVI, 29: let no man go out of his place on the seventh day (Tosaf. s.v. הוֹצֵא).

(4) Lit., 'he uproots and lays at rest'. Removing it from private and depositing it in public ground or the reverse; v. Shab. 2a.

(5) This refers to the bullocks which were burnt outside the three camps (v. p. 343 n. 2); Jerusalem itself is the third camp but the bearers defiled their garments as soon as they left the first camp, viz., the Temple Court. This is deduced in Yoma 68a from Lev. XVI, 27: and the bullocks of the sin-offering . . . shall be carried forth without the camp.

(6) It was not put down, yet it defiles, though 'carrying out' is written there.

(7) Which constitutes depositing.

(8) The door-frame in the the city walls of Jerusalem was of considerable breadth — sufficient for the Passover-offering to be eaten there. The Mishnah states that everywhere on the inside of this door-frame is as inside the city, while that on the outside is as the outside of the city. The Gemara discusses the status of the door-frame space itself.

(9) In the city walls; these too occupied a considerable breadth.

(10) Certain portions of the service are recited only when there is a quorum of ten men (called minyan). A man standing in the inside of the door-stop is counted with those inside the room, but not he who is standing outside the door-stop.

(11) Hence even if he stands outside the door-stop, he is counted with the others.

(12) There the space of the door-stop itself is as the inside.

(13) There it is as the outside.

(14) I.e., the space occupied by the thickness of the gates.

(15) Lit., 'the sun'.

(16) Lit., 'the rain'.

(17) The east gate of the Temple Court.

(18) V. Lev. XIV, 17 and Yeb. 7b.

(19) The roofs of the houses of Jerusalem are not sanctified, in the sense that sacrifices which are eaten anywhere in Jerusalem may not be eaten on them. Similarly, the sacrifices which had to be eaten within the Temple precincts might not be eaten on its roof or in its upper chambers.

(20) Very large companies registered for each sacrifice, so that each person could not receive more than that.

(21) V. p. 324, n. 2.

(22) It was sung with such gusto.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 86a

Does that not mean that they ate on the roof and recited [the Hallel] on the roof? No: they ate on the ground and recited [it] on the roof. Yet that is not so, for surely we learned: You must not conclude after the Paschal meal [by saying] 'To the aftermeal entertainment!'¹ and Rab said: [That means] that they must not remove from one company to another?² — There is no difficulty: there it is at the time of eating;³ here it is not at the time of eating.⁴ Come and hear: Abba Saul said: The upper chamber of the Holy of Holies was more stringent than the Holy of Holies, for the High Priest entered the Holy of Holies once a year, whereas the upper chamber of the Holy of Holies was entered only once a septennate — others say, twice a septennate — others say, once in a Jubilee — to see what it required?⁵ -Said R. Joseph: Shall a man stand up and raise an objection from the Hekal!⁶ The Hekal is different, because it is written, Then David gave to Solomon his son the pattern of the porch [of the Temple], and of the houses thereof, and of the treasuries thereof, and of the upper rooms thereof, and of the inner chambers thereof, and of the place of the ark-cover;⁷ and it is written, All this [do I give thee] in writing, as the Lord hath made me wise by His hand upon me.⁸

Come and hear: [With regard to] the chambers built in the sacred area⁹ and opening into the non-sacred area,¹⁰ their inside is non-sacred,¹¹ while their roofs are sacred? — R. Hisda explained this [as meaning] where their roofs were level with the ground of the Temple Court.¹² If so, consider the second clause: [As to] those built in the non-sacred [area] and opening into the sacred [area], their inside is sacred, while their roofs are non-sacred. Now if you think that it means where their roofs are level with the ground of the Temple Court, then they are cellars, whereas R. Johanan said: The cellars were not sanctified? — R. Johanan said this only in respect of those opening into the Temple Mount; [whereas] that was taught in respect of those opening into the Temple Court. But it was taught, R. Judah said: The cellars under the Hekal were non-sacred?¹³ — That was taught where they opened into the non-sacred [area].

Come and hear: And its roof is sacred?¹⁴ — Now is that logical: surely he teaches: As for these roofs, you may not eat there sacrifices of the greater sanctity, nor kill there sacrifices of the lesser sanctity.¹⁵ But in that case 'its roof is holy' presents a difficulty? — Said R. Hama b. Guria: [That was taught] in respect of those two cubits. For we learned: There were two cubits [measures] in Shushan the Castle,¹⁶ one on the north-east corner and one on the south-east corner. That on the north-east corner exceeded [the cubit] of Moses¹⁷ by half a fingerbreadth, while that on the south-east corner exceeded it [sc. the first cubit] by half a fingerbreadth, so that it exceeded [the cubit] of Moses by a fingerbreadth. And why was one large and one small?¹⁸ So that the workers might receive [contracts] by the small [measure] and deliver [the work] by the large one, to avoid liability to a trespass-offering.¹⁹ Any why two? One was for [work in] gold and silver,²⁰ while the other was [or building].²¹ We learned: THE WINDOWS AND THE THICKNESS OF THE WALL ARE AS THE INSIDE. As for the windows, it is well, this being possible where they were level with the ground of the Temple Court; but how is the thickness of the wall conceivable?²² — It is possible in the case of the inner wall,²³ as it is written, But he hath made the rampart and the wall to mourn,²⁴ which R. Aha — others say, R. Hanina — interpreted: the wall proper and the minor wall.

MISHNAH. IF TWO COMPANIES ARE EATING IN ONE ROOM,²⁵ THESE MAY TURN THEIR FACES IN ONE DIRECTION AND THOSE MAY TURN THEIR FACES IN ANOTHER DIRECTION,²⁶ WITH THE BOILER²⁷ IN THE MIDDLE.²⁸ WHEN THE WAITER²⁹ RISES TO MIX [THE WINE], HE MUST SHUT HIS MOUTH AND TURN HIS FACE AWAY [FROM THE OTHER COMPANY] UNTIL HE REACHES HIS OWN COMPANY.³⁰ BUT A BRIDE³¹ MAY TURN HER FACE AWAY AND EAT.

GEMARA. Who is [the author of] our Mishnah? — It is R. Judah. For it was taught: Upon the houses wherein they shall eat it:³² this teaches that a Paschal lamb may be eaten in two companies. You might think that the eater may eat in two places,³³ therefore It is stated, In one house shall he eat it.³⁴ Whence it was said: If the waiter³⁵ ate as much as an olive at the side of the oven, if he is wise he eats his fill³⁶ of it; but if the members of the company wish to do him a favour, they come and sit at his side:³⁷ this is R. Judah's opinion. R. Simeon said: 'Upon the houses wherein they shall eat it:' this teaches that the eater may eat in two places.³⁸

(1) It was customary among ancient nations to conclude a banquet with bouts of drinking, revelry and music. The sanctity of the Paschal meal precluded this, as it would turn an occasion of solemnity and reverential gratitude to God into one of light-hearted frivolity.

(2) For the purpose mentioned in the preceding note. Thus the whole service must be carried out in the same place.

(3) Then a change of place is forbidden.

(4) The hallel was recited after the meal was concluded; praise to God is then permissible anywhere.

- (5) E.g., repairs. Thus the upper chambers were sanctified.
- (6) The Holy, the hall containing the golden altar etc. , contrad. to the Holy of Holies (Jast.). In the present passage, however, R. Joseph appears to use the word more elastically, making it embrace the Holy of Holies too.
- (7) I Chron. XXVIII, 11.
- (8) Ibid. 19. 'The Lord hath made me wise' is understood to mean that he was Divinely inspired to sanctify all those mentioned in the foregoing, which include the 'upper room'.
- (9) I.e., the Temple Court.
- (10) Sc. the Temple Mount; i.e., they had no doors opening into the Temple Court.
- (11) They lack the sanctity of the Temple Court, though they possess that of the Temple Mount, for their status is determined by their openings.
- (12) The chambers referred to being cellars.
- (13) This is now assumed to refer even to those opening into the Temple Court.
- (14) Sc. the roof of the Hekal, this being the conclusion of R. Judah's statement. R. Joseph's answer that the hekal was different on account of the explicit verse is inapplicable here, for the roofs are not mentioned in that verse.
- (15) V. supra p. 108, n. 2. Thus it is definitely stated that they did not enjoy the sanctity of the Temple Court.
- (16) A chamber built above the eastern gate of the Temple, so called because the picture of the castle of Shushan in the capital of the Persian empire, was sculptured upon it.
- (17) I.e., the standard cubit.
- (18) Why not simply the standard cubit of Moses?
- (19) E.g., they contracted to build a certain length in terms of the standard cubit; nevertheless they completed their contract according to the length of the larger measure. The purpose was to preclude the possibility of benefiting from the Sanctuary over and above their exact due, which would involve them in trespass.
- (20) This being more difficult, they added only half a fingerbreadth to the standard measure.
- (21) Where a whole fingerbreadth was added. — Now the roofs were sanctified only in so far that these measuring rods and similar utensils or vessels which were not used in the actual service of the altar might be kept in them. But they were not sanctified in respect of anything else.
- (22) For by the thickness of the wall must be meant the top, which is the same as the upper chambers and the roofs, while the top of the city wall was certainly not on a level with the Temple Mount.
- (23) A smaller wall on the inside of the larger wall; the top of the former was level with the greatest height of the ground of the Temple Court, which itself reached several different heights in gradient.
- (24) Lam. II, 8.
- (25) Of the same Paschal offering.
- (26) They are not bound all to face each other, though they were originally one company for this offering.
- (27) In which water was heated for diluting the wine.
- (28) Though this seems further to emphasize their separateness.
- (29) Who is waiting on both parties. He too had registered for this offering—a Jewish waiter, of course is meant.
- (30) Lest he be suspected of eating with the other company too. This Tanna holds that one Paschal lamb may be eaten in two companies, but one person may not eat in two places.
- (31) Who in her modesty does not wish to face the company.
- (32) Ex. XII, 7.
- (33) Of the same offering. E.g., either in two separate rooms or even in one room containing two companies, which makes it like two rooms.
- (34) Ex. XII, 46. The vocalization is יֵאָכַל (passive E.V.: shall it be eaten), but it may also be read יֵאָכְלוּ, and R. Judah holds that the traditional consonantal form of the word determines Its meaning regardless of vocalization.
- (35) Engaged in roasting the offering.
- (36) Lit., 'fills his stomach'.
- (37) And eat there, but he may not go and eat with them, as he would thereby be eating in two places.
- (38) 'They shall eat' referring to each individual separately, who is thus permitted to eat in 'the houses'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 86b

You might think that it may be eaten in two companies. Therefore it is stated, 'In one house shall it be eaten.’¹ Wherein do they differ? R. Judah holds: The traditional [non-vocalized] text is authoritative; while R. Simeon holds: The text as read [as vocalized] is authoritative.²

If they were sitting [in one company], and a partition was spread between them,³ — on the view that [one] Paschal lamb may be eaten in two companies, they may eat [thus]; [but] on the view that [one] Paschal lamb may not be eaten in two companies, they may not eat [thus]. If they were sitting⁴, when the partition was removed from between them:⁵ on the view that the eater may eat in two places, they may [go on] eating [thus]; but on the view that the eater may not eat in two places, they may not [go on] eating. R. Kahana sat [and] stated this as a definite ruling. Said R. Ashi to R. Kahana: You should [rather] ask it as a question: Does the removing of a partition or the setting up of a partition transform it into two places or two companies [respectively] or not? The question stands over.

THE BRIDE TURNS HER FACE AWAY etc. What is the reason? — Said R. Hiyya b. Abba in R. Johanan's name: Because she is modest.⁶

R. Huna the son of R. Nathan visited the home of R. Nahman b. Isaac. They asked him, ‘What is your name?’ ‘Rab Huna,’ replied he.⁷ ‘Would you, Sir, sit down on the couch,’ said they, and he sat down. Then they offered him a goblet, which he accepted at the first [invitation]⁸ but he drank it in two times, without turning his face away. They asked him, ‘What is the reason that you called yourself Rab Huna?’ [He replied:] ‘That is my name.’⁹ ‘What is the reason that when they told you to sit on the couch you did sit?’¹⁰ Said he to them: ‘Whatever your host tells you, do.’¹¹ ‘What is the reason that when a goblet was offered you you accepted it at the first invitation?’ Said he to them: ‘One must show reluctance to a small man, but one must not show reluctance to a great man. ‘Why did you drink it in two times?’ — Said he to them: ‘Because it was taught: He who drinks his goblet in once is a gourmand; in two times, shows good breeding; in three times, is of the arrogant. Why did you not turn your face away?’¹² — ‘We learned, A BRIDE TURNS HER FACE AWAY,’ replied he.¹³

R. Ishmael Son of R. Jose visited the home of R. Simeon b. R. Jose b. Lakunia. They offered him a goblet, which he accepted at the first invitation and drank in one draught. Said they to him: ‘Do you not agree that he who drinks his goblet in one draught is greedy?’ Said he to them: ‘This was not said when your goblet is small, your wine sweet, and my stomach broad’.¹⁴ R. Huna said: The members of a company enter three at a time, and depart even singly.¹⁵ Rabbah observed: But that is only if they enter at the time when people generally enter,¹⁶ and providing that the attendant had taken notice of them.¹⁷ Rabina said: And they must make their [full] payment;¹⁸ and the last must pay extra.¹⁹ But the law does not agree with him. [

(1) Each Paschal lamb must be eaten in one company, but the person is not bound to retain the same position in the company all the time.

(2) V. n. 1; also Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 10, n. 4.

(3) Thus transforming them into two companies.

(4) In two rooms.

(5) Thus making them into one company; furthermore, a new area is added to each, and this renders the whole as another place.

(6) And as a bride she is naturally the cynosure of all eyes.

(7) Mentioning his title of Rabbi.

(8) Lit. , ‘in one time’ — he did not wait to be pressed a second time.

(9) Lit., ‘I am the master of the name’. Rashi: I have been called Rab Huna even as a child. Thus Rab in his case was a proper name, not only a title. [R. Hananel: an ordained Rabbi and known by this designation.]

(10) The couch was reserved for distinguished visitors, others sitting on ordinary stools. His immediate compliance therefore savoured of arrogance.

(11) Var. lec.: except 'depart'. The text reads better without this addition, but if it is retained it was probably meant humorously — a guest should not outstay his welcome until he is told to go!

(12) Which would have been more mannerly in their opinion.

(13) But not others.

(14) R. Ishmael was very stout, v. 84a.

(15) Rashi: This does not refer particularly to the Passover-offering. The members of a company should enter for meals three at a time in order to facilitate the work of the waiter, but may depart even singly though the waiter has still to attend on the rest. R. Han.: When a company registers for a Passover-offering and three of them (but not less) enter the house at the normal time for eating, they can eat without waiting for the rest. But if they had already assembled and then left for some purpose, even if only one is left he can eat alone and need not wait for their return.

(16) I.e., not earlier, in which case they must wait for the rest.

(17) According to Rashi: They notified the waiter of their intention to depart singly. R. Hananel: The waiter had been sent to find them and failed. MS.M. too reads: the attendant has searched for them.

(18) [To the waiter for the extra trouble incurred. R. Hananel: the one who eats the Paschal lamb on his own, if he ate more than his share, v. Aruch s.v. שייט.]

(19) To the water for the extra trouble incurred. [R. Hananel omits this clause.]

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 87a

CHAPTER VIII

MISHNAH. A WOMAN, WHEN SHE IS IN HER HUSBAND'S HOME, AND HER HUSBAND SLAUGHTERED ON HER BEHALF AND HER FATHER SLAUGHTERED ON HER BEHALF, MUST EAT OF HER HUSBAND'S. IF SHE WENT TO SPEND THE FIRST FESTIVAL IN HER FATHER'S HOME,¹ AND HER FATHER SLAUGHTERED ON HER BEHALF AND HER HUSBAND SLAUGHTERED ON HER BEHALF, SHE MAY EAT WHEREVER SHE PLEASURES. AN ORPHAN ON WHOSE BEHALF HIS GUARDIANS SLAUGHTERED² MAY EAT WHEREVER HE PLEASURES. A SLAVE OF TWO PARTNERS MAY NOT EAT OF EITHER.³ HE WHO IS HALF SLAVE AND HALF FREE⁴ MUST NOT EAT OF HIS MASTER'S.⁵

GEMARA. [Hence] you may infer from this that selection is retrospective?⁶ — [No:] what does 'SHE PLEASURES' mean? At the time of the slaughtering.⁷ Now the following contradicts this: A woman, on the first Festival, eats of her father's; thereafter, if she desires she eats of her father's, [while] if she desires she eats of her husband's?⁸ There is no difficulty: there it means when she is eager to go [to her father's home];⁹ here [in our Mishnah] it means when she is not eager to go. For it is written, Then was I in his eyes as one that found peace [shalom],¹⁰ which R. Johanan interpreted: Like a bride who was found perfect [shelemah] in her father-in-law's home and is eager to go and recount her merits in her father's house, as it is written,¹¹ And it shall be at that day, saith the Lord, that thou shalt call Me My husband [Ishi], and thou shalt call Me no more My Master [Ba'ali]:¹² R. Johanan said: [That means] like a bride in her father-in-law's house, and not like a bride in her father's house.¹³

We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts¹⁴ R. Johanan said: This alludes to Elam, who was privileged to study but not to teach.¹⁵

I am a wall, and my breast like the towers thereof.¹⁶ R. Johanaïl said: 'I am a wall' alludes to the Torah; 'and my breasts like the towers thereof,' to scholars. While Raba interpreted: 'I am a wall' symbolizes the community of Israel; 'and my breasts like the towers thereof' symbolizes the synagogues and the houses of study.

R. Zutra b. Tohiah said in Rab's name: What is meant by the verse, We whose sons are as plants grown up in their youth; whose daughters are as corner-pillars carved after the fashions of the Temples?¹⁷ 'We whose sons are as plants' alludes to the young men of Israel who have not experienced the taste of sin. 'Whose daughters are as corner pillars,' to the virgins of Israel who reserve themselves¹⁸ for their husbands; and thus it is said, And they shall be filled like the basins, like the corners of the altar.¹⁹ Alternatively. [a parallel is drawn] from the following. Whose garners are full, affording all manner of store.²⁰ 'Carved after the fashion of the Temple.'²¹ both the one and the other, the Writ ascribes [Praise] to them as though the Temple were built in their days.

The word of the Lord that came unto Hosea the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah:²² Four prophets prophesied in one age, and the greatest of all of them was Hosea. For it is said, The Lord spoke at first with Hosea:²³ did He then speak first with Hosea; were there not many prophets from Moses until Hosea? Said R. Johanan: He was the first of four prophets who prophesied in that age. and these are they: Hosea, Isaiah, Amos and Micah. The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Hosea, 'Thy children have sinned,' to which he should have replied. 'They are Thy children, they are the children of Thy favoured ones they are the children of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; extend²⁴ Thy mercy to them.' Not enough that he did not say thus, but he said to Him: 'Sovereign of the Universe! The whole world is Thine; exchange them for a different nation. Said the Holy One, blessed be He, 'What shall I do with this old man? I will order him: "Go and marry²⁵ a harlot and beget thee children of harlotry"; and then I will order him: "Send her away from thy presence." If he will be able to send [her] away. so will I too send Israel away.' For it is said, And the Lord said unto Hosea!: 'Go, take unto thee a wife of harlotry and children of harlotry';²⁶ and it is written, So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim.²⁷ 'Gomer': Rab said, [That intimates] that all satisfied their lust [gomerim]²⁸ on her; 'the daughter of

-
- (1) It was the custom for a woman to spend the first Festival after her marriage in her father's house.
 - (2) He had more than one guardian, and each kind a Passover-offering with him as one of its eaters.
 - (3) Even if one specifically registered him in his company, since half of the slave belongs to another man. Hence he may eat only if both agree that he should be registered with one. — A slave in a Jewish house has the status of a semi-Jew, and if circumcised he ate of the Paschal offering (v. Ex. XII, 44).
 - (4) E.g. 'he had belonged to two masters, and one had manumitted him.
 - (5) As we assume that his master did not count in the free half.
 - (6) Lit., 'there is bererah'. Bererah is a technical term denoting that a choice or selection made now has retrospective validity in a legal sense. For it is assumed that the Mishnah means that the woman may eat of whichever offering she desires now, though she had not yet made her choice when it was killed and its blood was sprinkled. But the Passover-offering may be eaten only by those who had registered for it and on whose behalf it was killed. Hence when we say that her present choice permits her to eat thereof, it proves that this choice is retrospectively valid, as though she had declared it before the offering was killed. Actually there is a controversy (B.K. 51b; Bez. 38a; GIT. 25a) in this matter.
 - (7) It was then that she had declared her choice.
 - (8) Whereas the Mishnah states that at the first Festival she makes her choice.
 - (9) Then she eats of her father's even if she had not expressed her desire previously, as it is taken for granted. Cf. Keth. 71b, (Sonc. ed.) pp. 445ff notes.
 - (10) Cant. VIII, 10.
 - (11) Var. lec.: it is written, this introducing a new passage.
 - (12) Hos. II, 18.
 - (13) I.e., like a bride who has already gone over to her husband completely, and is more intimate with him (viz., after nissu'in, the completion of marriage), and not like a bride in her father's house, which is after erusin (betrothal) only (Rashal).
 - (14) Cant. VIII, 8.
 - (15) V. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 138. n. 5.
 - (16) Ibid. 10.
 - (17) Ps. CXLIV, 12. On hekal v. infra p. 512. n. 6. E.V.: a palace.
 - (18) Lit., 'seal their openings'.

- (19) Zech. IX, 1.
 (20) Ps. CXLIV, 13.
 (21) Ibid. 12.
 (22) Hos. I, 1.
 (23) Ibid. 2. lit. translation. E.V.: When the Lord etc.
 (24) Lit., 'roll'.
 (25) Lit., 'take'.
 (26) Ibid.
 (27) Ibid. 3.
 (28) Lit., 'to complete'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 87b

Dibblaim': [a woman of] in fame [dibbah] and the daughter of [a woman of] in fame [dibbah].¹ Samuel said: [It means] that she was as sweet in everyone's mouth as a cake of figs [debelah]. While R. Johanan interpreted: [It means] that all trod upon her² like a cake of figs [is trodden]. Another interpretation: 'Gomer': Rab Judah said: They desired to destroy [le-gammer] the wealth of Israel in her days. R. Johanan said: They did indeed despoil [their wealth]. for it is said, For the king of Aram [Syria] destroyed then, and made them like the dust in threshing.³

And she conceived, and bore him a son. And the Lord said unto him: 'Call his name Jezreel; for yet in little while, and I will visit the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel. And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.' And she conceived again, and bore a daughter. And He said unto him: 'Call her name Lo-ruhamah [that hath not obtained compassion]; for I will no more have compassion upon the house of Israel, that I should in any wise pardon them . . . And she conceived, and bore a son. And He said: 'Call his name Lo-ammi [not my people]; for ye are not My people, and I will not be yours.⁴ After two sons and one daughter were born to him, the Holy One, blessed be He, said to Hosea: 'Shouldst thou have not learned from thy teacher Moses, for as soon as I spoke with him he parted from his wife; so do thou too part from her.' 'Sovereign of the Universe!' pleaded he: 'I have children by her, and I can neither expel her nor divorce her.' Said the Holy One, blessed be He, to him: 'Then if thou, whose wife is a harlot and thy children are the children of harlotry, and thou knowest not whether they are thine or they belong to others, yet [thou] art so; then Israel who are My children, the children of My tried ones, the children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; one of the four possessions which I have acquired in this world — (The Torah is one possession, for it is written, The Lord acquired me as the beginning of His way.⁵ Heaven and earth is one possession. as It is written, [God Most High] Who possesses heaven and earth.⁶ The Temple is one possession, for it is written, This mountain [sc. the Temple Mount], which His right hand had acquired.⁷ Israel is one possession, for it is written, This people that Thou hast gotten.)⁸ Yet thou sayest, Exchange them for a different people!' As soon as he perceived that he had sinned, he arose to supplicate mercy for himself. Said the Holy One, blessed be He, to him: 'Instead of supplicating mercy for thyself, supplicate mercy for Israel, against whom I have decreed three decrees because of thee'.⁹ [Thereupon] he arose and begged for mercy, and He annulled the decree[s]. Then He began to bless them, as it is said: Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea . . . and it shall come to pass that, instead of that it which was said unto them: Ye are not My people', it shall be said unto them: Ye are the children of the living God.' And the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together . . . And I will sow her unto Me in the land; and I will have compassion upon her that hath not obtained compassion; and I will say to them that were not My people: 'Thou art My people.'¹⁰

T. Johanan said: 'Woe to lordship which buries [slays] its possessor, for there is not a single prophet who did not outlive¹¹ four kings, as it is said, The vision of Isaiah the sun of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah.¹²

R. Johanan said: How did Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel merit to be counted together with the kings of Judah? Because he did not heed¹³ slander against Amos. Whence do we know that he was counted [with them]? Because it is written, The word of the Lord that came into Hosea the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel.¹⁴ And whence do we know that he did not heed slander? Because it is written, Then Amaziah the priest of Beth-el sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee [etc.];¹⁵ and it is written, For thus Amos saith: Jeroboam shall die by the sword [etc.].¹⁶ Said he [Jeroboam]: 'Heaven forfend that that righteous man should have said thus! Yet if he did say, what can I do to him! The Shechinah told it to him.

R. Eleazar said: Even when the Holy One, blessed be He, is angry,¹⁷ He remembers compassion, for it is said, for I will no more have compassion upon the house of Israel.¹⁸ R. Jose son of R. Hanina said [i.e., deduced] it from this: that I would in any wise pardon them.¹⁹ R. Eleazar also said: The Holy One, blessed be He, did not exile Israel among the nations save in order that proselytes might join them, for it is said: And I will sow her unto Me in the land;²⁰ surely a man sows a se'ah in order to harvest many kor! While R. Johanan deduced it from this: And I will have compassion upon her that hath not obtained compassion.²¹

R. Johanan said on the authority of R. Simeon b. Yohai: What is meant by the verse, Slander not a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty?²² And it is written, A generation that curse their father, and do not bless their mother:²³ because they curse their father and do not bless their mother, therefore do not slander?²⁴ But [it means:] even if they [the slaves] are a generation that curse their father and do not bless their mother, yet do not slander [etc.]. Whence do we know it? From Hosea.²⁵

R. Oshaia said: What is meant by the verse, Even the righteous acts of His Ruler in Israel?²⁶ The Holy One, blessed be He, showed righteousness [mercy] unto Israel by scattering them among the nations. And this is what a certain sectarian²⁷ said to R. Hanina, 'We are better than you. Of you it is written, For Joab and all Israel remained there six months, until he had cut off every male in Edom;²⁸ whereas you have been with us many years yet we have not done anything to you!' Said he to him, 'If you agree, a disciple will debate it with you.' [Thereupon] R. Oshaia debated it with him, [and] he said to him, ' [The reason is] because you do not know how to act. If you would destroy all, they are not among you.²⁹ [Should you destroy] those who are among you, then you will be called a murderous kingdom!' Said he to him, 'By the Capitol of Rome!³⁰ with this [care] we lie down and with this [care] we get up.'³¹

R. Hiyya taught: What is meant by the verse, God understandeth the way thereof, and He knoweth the place thereof?³² The Holy One, blessed be He, knoweth that Israel are unable to endure³³ the cruel decrees of Edom,³⁴ therefore He exiled them to Babylonia. R. Eleazar also said: The Holy One, blessed be He, exiled Israel to Babylonia only because it is as deep as she'ol, for it is said, I shall ransom them from the power of the nether-world [she'ol]; I shall redeem them from death.³⁵ R. Hanina said: Because their language is akin to the language of the Torah. R. Johanan said: Because He sent them back to their mother's house.³⁶ It may be compared to a man who becomes angry with his wife: Whither does he send her? To her mother's house. And that corresponds to [the dictum] of R. Alexandri, who said: Three returned to their original home,³⁷ viz., Israel, Egypt's wealth, and the writing of the Tables. Israel, as we have said. Egypt's wealth, as it is written, And it came to pass in the fifth year of King Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem; and he took away the treasurers of the house of the Lord.³⁸ The writing of the Tables, for it is written, and I broke them before your eyes.³⁹ It was taught: The Tables were broken, yet the Letters flew up.⁴⁰ 'Ulla said:

[Their exile] was in order that they might eat

-
- (1) He interprets diblain as a dual form of dibbah, ill fame.
 - (2) A euphemism for sexual indulgence.
 - (3) II Kings XIII, 7.
 - (4) Hos. I, 3-6; 8-9.
 - (5) Prov. VIII, 22.
 - (6) Gen. XIV, 19.
 - (7) Ps. LXXVIII, 54.
 - (8) Ex. XV, 16. V. Ab. VI, 10.
 - (9) Jezreel, which symbolizes exile (Jezreel zera', to sow) indicating that Cod would sow (scatter) Israel among the nations; Lo-ammi (not my people) and Lo-Ruhamah (without compassion).
 - (10) Hos. II, 1f, 25.
 - (11) Lit., 'cut clown in his days'.
 - (12) Isa. I, 1.
 - (13) Lit., 'receive', 'accept'.
 - (14) Hos. I, 1.
 - (15) Amos. VII, 10.
 - (16) Ibid. 11.
 - (17) Lit., 'at the time of his anger'.
 - (18) Hos. I, 6. 'Compassion' is thus mentioned even in connection with retribution.
 - (19) Ibid.
 - (20) Hos. II, 25.
 - (21) Ibid. R. Johanan makes this refer to the Gentiles, who in God's compassion will be given the opportunity. through Israel's exile, of coming under the wings of the Shechinah. According to Rashi, R. Johanan deduces it from the concluding part of the verse, 'And I will say to them that are not My people; thou art My people'. This passage shows these two Rabbis in favour of proselytes. For the general attitude of the Rabbis towards proselytization v. f. E. art. Proselyte.
 - (22) Prov. XXX, 10.
 - (23) Ibid. 11.
 - (24) What connection is there between the two verses?
 - (25) Who was rebuked for slandering Israel to God, though they had indeed sinned.
 - (26) Judg. V, 11.
 - (27) Min, v. Glos.
 - (28) I Kings XI, 16.
 - (29) Many live among other nations.
 - (30) Jast. Or perhaps: by the Roman eagle!
 - (31) How to destroy you without incurring odium.
 - (32) Job. XXVIII, 23.
 - (33) Lit., 'receive', 'accept'.
 - (34) I.e., Rome, for which Edom was the general disguise; v. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 52. n. 8.
 - (35) Hos. XIII, 14. I.e., its very depth compels a speedy redemption.
 - (36) Abraham having come to Palestine from Ur of the Chaldees.
 - (37) Lit., '(the place of) their planting'.
 - (38) I Kings XIV, 25f. The Israelites took much Egyptian wealth with them at the Exodus: v. Ex. XII, 35f.
 - (39) Deut. IX, 17: 'before your eyes' implies that they saw something wonderful happen, as explained in the text.
 - (40) Back to God. — Though physical matter may be destroyed, the spirit (symbolized by the letters) is indestructible, but waits until mankind is ready to receive it.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 88a

dates¹ and occupy themselves with the Torah.

‘Ulla visited Pumbeditha. On being offered a basket [tirama] of dates, he asked them, How many such [are obtainable] for a zuz? ‘Three for a zuz’, they told him. ‘A basketful [zanna]² of honey for a zuz’, exclaimed he, ‘yet the Babylonians do not engage in [the study of] the Torah!’³ At night they [the dates] upset him. ‘A basketful of deadly poison cost a zuz in Babylonia, exclaimed he, ‘yet the Babylonians study the Torah!’⁴

R. Eleazar also said, What is meant by the verse, And many people shall go and say: ‘Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, To the house of the God of Jacob’,⁵ the God of Jacob, but not the God of Abraham and Isaac? But [the meaning is this: we will] not [be] like Abraham, in connection with whom ‘mountain’ is written, as it is said, As it is said to this day, ‘In the mountain where the Lord is seen.’⁶ Nor like Isaac, in connection with whom ‘field’ is written, as it is said, ‘And Isaac when out to meditate in the field at eventide.’⁷ But [let us be] like Jacob, who called Him ‘home’, as it is said, ‘And he called the name of that place Beth-el [God is a home].’⁸

R. Johanan said: The reunion of the Exiles is as important as the day when heaven and earth were created, for it is said, And the children of Judah and the children of Israel shall be gathered together, and they shall appoint themselves one head, and shall go up out of the land; for great shall be the day of Jezreel,⁹ and it is written, And there was evening and there was morning, one day.¹⁰

AN ORPHAN ON WHOSE BEHALF HIS GUARDIANS SLAUGHTERED etc. You may infer from this that selection is retrospective?¹¹ — Said R. Zera: [No:] a lamb according to their father's houses¹² [implies] in all cases.¹³

Our Rabbis taught: A lamb for a household.¹⁴ this teaches that a man can bring [a lamb] and slaughter [it] on behalf of his son and daughter, if minors, and on behalf of his Canaanitish [non-Jewish] slave and bondmaid, whether with their consent or without their consent. But he cannot slaughter [it] on behalf of his son and daughter, if adults, or on behalf of his Hebrew slaves and bondmaids, or on behalf of his wife, save with their consent.

Another [Baraita] taught: A man must not slaughter [the Passover-offering] on behalf of an adult, his son and daughter, and on behalf of his Hebrew slave and bondmaid, and on behalf of his wife, save with their consent. But he may slaughter [it] on behalf of his son and daughter, if minors, and on behalf of his Canaanitish slave and bondmaid, whether with their consent or without their consent. And all of these, if they [themselves] slaughtered and their master [also] slaughtered on their behalf, can discharge [their duty] with their master's, but they cannot discharge [their duty] with their own, except a woman,¹⁵ because she is able to protest.¹⁶ How is a woman different?¹⁷ — Said Raba, [It means] a woman and those who are like her.¹⁸

This is self-contradictory. You say, ‘Except a woman, because she is able to protest.’ [Thus] the reason is because she protested, but if she did not protest, she cannot discharge [her duty] with her husband's. Yet surely the first clause teaches: ‘Nor on behalf of his wife [etc.] save with their consent’: hence if nothing is said, she cannot discharge [her obligation thus]? — What does ‘save with their consent’ mean? Not that they said ‘yes,’ but when they said nothing, which excludes [the case] where they said ‘no.’ But surely ‘and all of these, if they [themselves] killed and their master killed on their behalf, can discharge [their duty] with their master's, but they cannot discharge [their duty] with their own meal's where nothing is said, yet it teaches, ‘except a woman, because she can protest’? — Said Raba: Since they [themselves] slaughtered, you can have no greater protest than this. A SLAVE BELONGING TO TWO PARTNERS etc. R. ‘Ena Saba¹⁹ pointed out a contradiction to R. Nahman: We learned: A SLAVE BELONGING TO TWO PARTNERS MAY NOT EAT OF EITHER’; yet it was taught: If he wishes, he can eat of this one's [and] if he wishes, he can eat of that one's? Said he to him, ‘Ena Saba!²⁰ others say, You black pot!²¹ Between you and me the law will be clearly defined:²² our Mishnah [holds good] where they are particular with each other;²³ the Baraita [was taught] when they are not particular with each other.

HE WHO IS HALF SLAVE AND HALF FREE MUST NOT EAT OF HIS MASTER'S. It is only of his master's that he must not eat, yet he may eat of his own? But it was taught: He may not eat, either of his own or of his master's! — There is no difficulty: one is according to the earlier Mishnah, while the other is according to the later Mishnah. For we learned: He who is half slave and half free works one day for his master and one day for himself: this is the view of Beth Hillel. Beth Shammai say:

-
- (1) Which grow abundantly in Babylonia.
 - (2) [The text appears to be in slight disorder. Read with MS.M.: For how much are such obtainable? — They replied, For a zuz. A zanna denotes a large basket with a capacity of three tirama, cf. Ta'an. 9b.]
 - (3) With the cost of living so low, surely they have plenty of time to study.
 - (4) Suffering makes one charitable-minded.
 - (5) Isa. II, 3.
 - (6) Gen. XXII, 14.
 - (7) Ibid. XXIV, 63.
 - (8) Ibid. XXVIII, 19. Visits to the mountain and the held are only made at certain times, but a home is permanent. Thus this teaches that man must live permanently in God.
 - (9) Hos. II, 2.
 - (10) Gen. I, 4.
 - (11) V. supra 8a.
 - (12) Ex. XII, 3.
 - (13) I.e., the head of the house does not require the consent of the members of the household. For that reason the orphan may now eat whichever he desires and there is no question of retrospective validity.
 - (14) Ibid.
 - (15) She discharges her duty with her own.
 - (16) A married woman can renounce her right to her husband's support and refuse to work for him as she is normally obliged to do.
 - (17) I.e., an adult son and daughter and Hebrew slaves can also protest!
 - (18) I.e., his adult son and daughter and his Hebrew slaves.
 - (19) 'The old man'.
 - (20) Probably as a pun on his name-scholarly eye!
 - (21) He was of unattractive appearance (Jast.), perhaps swarthy. Rashi in A.Z. 16b softens this by explaining that he was either begrimed through toil (many Rabbis in Talmudic days being workmen) or that in his preoccupation with his studies he had neglected the appearance of his garments.
 - (22) As a result of your question and my answer the exact conditions of the law will emerge. Jast. translates: this tradition will be named from myself and from thee.
 - (23) Not to benefit from one another; hence the half of the slave which belongs to one, as it were, may not eat of the other's offering.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 88b

You have [thus] safeguarded his master,¹ but you have not safeguarded him! He is unable to marry a [Canaanitish] bondmaid, because he is already half free; he is unable to marry a free woman, because he is still half slave. Shall he be made as nought,² — but surely the world was not created for aught but procreation as it is said, He created it not a waste, He formed it to be inhabited.³ Hence in the public interest we compel his master, and he makes him a free man, and he indites a bond for half his value.⁴ Then Beth Hillel reverted to rule as Beth Shammai.⁵

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS SLAVE, 'GO FORTH AND SLAUGHTER THE

PASSOVER-OFFERING ON MY BEHALF': IF HE SLAUGHTERED A KID, HE EATS [THEREOF]. IF HE SLAUGHTERED A LAMB, HE EATS [THEREOF]. IF HE SLAUGHTERED A KID AND A LAMB, HE MUST EAT OF THE FIRST.⁶ IF HE FORGOT WHAT HIS MASTER TOLD HIM, HOW SHALL HE ACT? HE SLAUGHTERS A LAMB AND A KID AND DECLARES, 'IF MY MASTER TOLD ME [TO SLAUGHTER] A KID, THE KID IS HIS [FOR HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING] AND THE LAMB IS MINE; WHILE IF MY MASTER TOLD ME [TO SLAUGHTER] A LAMB, THE LAMB IS HIS AND THE KID IS MINE. IF HIS MASTER [ALSO] FORGOT WHAT HE TOLD HIM, BOTH GO FORTH TO THE PLACE OF BURNING,⁷ YET THEY ARE EXEMPT FROM SACRIFICING THE SECOND PASSOVER.⁸ GEMARA. It is obvious that if he slaughtered a kid, he [the master] may eat [thereof] even though he is accustomed to lamb;⁹ if he slaughtered a lamb, he may eat [thereof] even though he is accustomed to a kid. But how is it stated, IF HE SLAUGHTERED A KID AND A LAMB, HE MUST EAT OF THE FIRST; surely it was taught, One cannot register for two Passover-offerings simultaneously?¹⁰ — Our Mishnah refers to a king and a queen.¹¹ And it was taught even so: One may not register for two Passover offerings simultaneously. Yet it once happened that the king and queen instructed their servants, 'Go forth and slaughter the Passover-offering on our behalf,' but they went and killed two Passover-offerings for them. [Then] they went and asked the king [which he desired and] he answered then, 'Go and ask the queen.' [When] they went and asked the queen she said to them, 'Go and ask R. Gamaliel.' They went and asked R. Gamaliel who said to them: The king and queen, who have no particular desires,¹² must eat of the first; but we [in a similar case] might not eat either of the first or of the second. On another occasion a lizard was found in the [Temple] abattoir,¹³ and they wished to declare the entire repast unclean. They went and asked the king, who answered them, 'Go and ask the queen.' When they went to ask the queen she said to them, 'Go and ask it. Gamaliel.' [So] they went and asked him. Said he to them, 'Was the abattoir hot or cold?'¹⁴ 'It was hot,' replied they. 'Then go and pour a glass of cold water over it,' he told them. They went and poured a glass of cold water over it, and it moved,¹⁵ whereupon R. Gamaliel declared the entire repast clean. Thus the king was dependent on the queen and the queen was dependent on R. Gamaliel: hence the whole repast was dependent on R. Gamaliel.¹⁶ IF HE FORGOT WHAT HIS MASTER HAD TOLD HIM etc. MINE? Whatever a slave owns his master owns!¹⁷ — Said Abaye: He repairs to a shepherd with whom his master generally has dealings,¹⁸ who is therefore pleased to make things right for his master, and he gives him possession of one of them on condition that his master shall have no rights therein.¹⁹

IF HIS MASTER FORGOT WHAT HE HAD TOLD HIM etc. Abaye said: They learned this only where he forgot after the sprinkling, so that when the blood was sprinkled it was fit for eating. But if he [the master] forgot before the sprinkling, so that when the blood was sprinkled it was not fit for eating, they are bound to observe the Second Passover.

Others recite this in reference to the [following] Baraitha: If the hides of five [companies'] Passover-offerings became mixed up with each other, and a wart²⁰ was found on one of them, they all²¹ go out to the place of burning, and they [their owners] are exempt for observing the Second Passover. Said Abaye: This was taught only where they were mixed up after the sprinkling, so that at least when the blood was sprinkled it was fit for eating; but if they were mixed up before the sprinkling, they are bound to observe the Second Passover.

He who recites [this] in reference to our Mishnah, [holds that] all the more [does it apply] to the Baraitha.²² But he who recites it in reference to the Baraitha [holds] that [it does] not [apply] to our Mishnah: since [the sacrifices themselves] are valid, for if he reminds himself [of what the Master had told him], it would be fit for eating, it is [indeed] revealed²³ before Heaven. The Master said: 'And [their owners] are exempt from observing the Second Passover.' But one has [definitely] not discharged [his duty]?²⁴ — [The reason is] because it is impossible [to do otherwise]. What should be done? Should each bring a [second] Passover-offering, — then they bring hullin to the Temple

Court, since four of them have [already] sacrificed.²⁵ If all of them bring one Passover-offering, the result is that the Passover-offering is eaten by those who have not registered for it.²⁶ How so? Let each of them bring his Passover-offering and stipulate and declare: 'If mine was blemished, let this one which I am bringing now be a Passover-offering; while if mine was unblemished, let this one which I am bringing now be a peace-offering'? — That is impossible,

- (1) Lit., 'repaired his master, — so that he should not suffer loss.
- (2) Do neither and end in futility.
- (3) Isa. XLV, 18.
- (4) Which becomes an ordinary debt to his former master.
- (5) After having ruled in actual practice on their own view for some time (v. Halevi, Doroth, I, 3, p. 576), they adopted Beth Shammai's ruling. Now the law is always as Beth Hillel. Before they retracted, he could not eat of his own, because the half in him that is free is sharply differentiated from the half that is not. But when they retracted they would regard him as entirely free, even before he is actually so, since we compel his master to free him; hence he could eat of his own.
- (6) While the second is burnt.
- (7) Because they do not know which belongs to whom, and a Paschal offering may be eaten only by those registered for it.
- (8) For both the killing and the sprinkling of the blood were valid acts.
- (9) And that is really what the Mishnah informs us.
- (10) To eat subsequently whichever one chooses, because selection is not retrospective (v. supra, p. 458, n. 6). Thus the same applies here.
- (11) Being surfeited with luxury they do not care what they eat, and generally leave it to their servants. Hence the question of retrospective validity does not arise.
- (12) Lit., 'their mind is light'.
- (13) A dead lizard (halta'ah) defiles.
- (14) I.e., was it found in hot water or in cold?
- (15) They now saw that it was alive.
- (16) [Derenbourg (Essai p. 211) identifies the King and Queen in these two stories with Agrippa I and his wife Kypros; Buchler (Synedrion p. 129 n. 1) with Agrippa II and his sister Berenice. On either view it is to R. Gamaliel I that reference is here made.]
- (17) How then can the slave stipulate that one of these should be his?
- (18) Lit., 'where his master is accustomed'.
- (19) Since this is in the master's own interests.
- (20) This is a blemish which disqualifies an animal as a sacrifice.
- (21) I.e., the Paschal-offerings.
- (22) For in the Mishnah the sacrifices themselves are both definitely fit, but that we do not know who registered for them, and yet if the doubt arose before the sprinkling they are bound to observe the Second Passover. How much the more then in the Baraitha, where the fitness of the sacrifices themselves is in question!
- (23) Hence even if the doubt arose before the sprinkling, they are exempt from observing the Second] Passover.
- (24) Sc. the one whose offering was blemished.
- (25) A Passover-offering can only be brought when there is an actual obligation. and if a man not under this obligation consecrates an animal as such, the consecration is invalid and the animal remains hullin (q.v. Glos.), which may not be brought into the Temple Court for slaughtering. Here four have actually discharged their duty already, though we do not know who they are, so that four of the animals must remain unconsecrated.
- (26) Because the registration of those whose duty has been done is of no account.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 89a

because there is the breast and the shoulder [of the peace offering], which is eaten by priests [only].¹ Then let each one bring a priest with him?² — What is the position of this priest? If he has [already] sacrificed a Passover-offering, then perhaps this [too] is a passover-offering, with the result that the Passover offering is eaten by those who have not registered for it. While if he has not observed the Passover,³ perhaps this is a peace offering, and so he will not observe the Passover? Then let all the five [jointly] bring one priest who had not kept the Passover and register him for these five Passover-offerings, for on any hypothesis⁴ there is one [sacrifice] with which he will discharge [his duty]!⁵ — Rather [the reason is] because he reduces [the time allowed for] the eating of the peace-offering, for the Passover offering [is eaten] a day and a night,⁶ whereas a peace-offering [is eaten] two days and one night.⁷ Then let them bring a Passover ‘remainder’⁸ and declare, ‘If mine was blemished, let this which I bring now be a passover-offering; while if mine was unblemished, let this which I bring now be a peace-offering,’ for a Passover ‘remainder’ is eaten one day and one night [only]?⁹ — May we then set aside [animals] in the first instance to be remainders!¹⁰ Then let us take the trouble to bring a Passover-remainder?¹¹ Rather [the reason is] because of the laying [of hands]; for whereas the Passover-offering does not require laying [of the hands], a remainder requires laying [of the hands].¹² That is well of a mens’ sacrifice, [but] what can be said of a women s sacrifice?¹³ — Rather it is on account of the [blood] applications: for whereas the Passover-offering [requires] one application, the peace-offering [requires] two, which are four.¹⁴ [But] what does that matter? Surely we learned: All [blood] which is sprinkled on the outer altar,¹⁵ if he [the priest] applied them with one sprinkling, he has made atonement?¹⁶ — Rather [the reason is] because whereas [the blood of] the Passover-offering must be poured out [gently],¹⁷ [that of] the peace-offerings requires dashing [against the altar].¹⁸ But what does that matter? Surely it was taught: All [blood] which is applied by dashing [against the altar], if he [the priest] applied [it] by pouring it out, he has discharged [his duty]?¹⁹ — Granted that we say [thus] where he has done so; [do we say thus] as the very outset too?²⁰

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS CHILDREN, ‘BEHOLD, I SLAUGHTER THE PASSOVER-OFFERING ON BEHALF OF WHICHEVER OF YOU GOES UP FIRST TO JERUSALEM,’ AS SOON AS THE FIRST HAS INSERTED HIS HEAD AND THE GREATER PART OF HIS BODY [IN JERUSALEM] HE HAS ACQUIRED HIS PORTION, AND HE ACQUIRES IT ON BEHALF OF HIS BRETHREN WITH HIM.

GEMARA. This proves that selection is retrospective?²¹ Said R. Johanan: He [their father] said this in order to encourage them in [the performance of] precepts.²² This may be proved too, for he [the Tanna] teaches: AND HE ACQUIRES IT ON BEHALF OF HIS BRETHREN WITH HIM; now it is well if you say that he had registered them beforehand, then it is correct. But if you say that he had not registered them beforehand, can they be registered after he has slaughtered it? Surely we learned: They may register and withdraw their hands from it until it is killed!²³ This proves it. It was taught likewise: It once happened that the daughters outstripped the sons, and so it was seen that the daughters were zealous while the sons were indolent. MISHNAH. ONE MAY ALWAYS REGISTER FOR IT AS LONG AS THERE IS AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE THEREIN FOR EACH ONE [REGISTERED]. THEY MAY REGISTER AND WITHDRAW THEIR HANDS FORM IT UNTIL IT IS SLAUGHTERED; R. SIMEON SAID: UNTIL THE BLOOD IS SPRINKLED.

GEMARA. What does he inform us? — He informs us this, viz., though this company had registered for it, it can retract [entirely] and a different company register for it.²⁴

THEY MAY REGISTER AND WITHDRAW THEIR HANDS FROM IT UNTIL IT IS KILLED etc. Abaye said: The controversy is in respect of withdrawing, for the Rabbis hold: [And if the household be too little] for being [me-heyoth] for a lamb²⁵ [implies] in the lifetime [mi-hayuth] of the lamb;²⁶ while R. Simeon holds [that it implies] during the existence [mi-hawayuth] of the lamb.²⁷ But in respect of registering all agree [that this can be done only] until it is killed, because the Writ saith, according to the number of [bemiksath] the souls, and then, ye shall make your count [takosu].²⁸ It was taught likewise: They may register and withdraw their hands from it until it is slaughtered. R. Simeon said: They may register until it is slaughtered and withdraw until the blood is sprinkled.

-
- (1) And since it may be a Passover sacrifice and no priests are registered for this, they cannot eat it.
- (2) I.e., let a priest register for each sacrifice.
- (3) Having been unclean or on a distant journey at the First Passover.
- (4) Lit., 'whatever you will'.
- (5) This is Rashi's text. Cur. edd. read: there is one who has kept the Passover and so they will discharge etc., i.e., by this device we ensure that all shall have discharged their duty. — The priest then would partake of the breast and shoulders of each sacrifice.
- (6) And what is left over after that must be burnt as nothar,
- (7) Since each sacrifice may be a Passover-offering, we can only permit the shorter period, whereas actually it may be a peace-offering.
- (8) [The text is not clear. R. Hananel reads, let him bring (an offering) and make a stipulation for (it to become if necessary) a Passover-'remainder'.]
- (9) If an animal is consecrated as a Passover-offering but not sacrificed as such, it is a Passover-'remainder', which is then brought as a peace-offering but eaten only during the shorter period. Hence here, let each consecrate the animal for a Passover-offering. If his animal was blemished, he discharges his duty with this one. But if his animal was unblemished, this is automatically a Passover-'remainder', since it cannot be sacrificed for its own purpose (Tosaf.; Rashi explains slightly differently.)
- (10) Surely not.
- (11) I.e., let us find an animal which was actually left over from the first Passover.
- (12) V, Lev, III, 2.
- (13) This does not require laying of the hands.
- (14) The blood was applied to the north-east and the south-west corners of the altar, thus making it appear that the four corners were besprinkled; v. Zeb. 53b.
- (15) This includes the blood of the peace-offering.
- (16) I.e., the sacrifice is valid, though in the first place two applications are required.
- (17) From the basin on to the wall of the altar near the base.
- (18) Vigorously, from a distance.
- (19) The sacrifice is valid.
- (20) Surely we may not arrange at the very outset that the blood should be gently poured out where it really requires to be dashed against the altar. Hence there is no possibility of observing the Second Passover.
- (21) V. supra 87a. It is now assumed that only one was registered.
- (22) But actually he had registered all of them beforehand.
- (23) But not after.
- (24) This disagrees with R. Judah, who maintains infra 99a that one member at least of the original company must remain.
- (25) Ex. XII, 4.
- (26) The verse is understood to refer to withdrawal, it being translated: And if the household has become too little etc., because some of its members have withdrawn. The present interpretation of mi-heyoth teaches that this withdrawal is possible only while the animal is still alive.
- (27) I.e., as long as it still exists for its sacrifice rites to be preformed, which is until the blood is sprinkled.
- (28) Ibid. 'Be-miksath' and 'takosu' are connected with a root meaning to slaughter, while at the same time retaining their connotation of numbering, i.e., registering. Hence registration is permitted only until it is slaughtered; cf. supra 61a.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 89b

MISHNAH. IF A MAN REGISTERS ANOTHER WITH HIM [TO SHARE] IN HIS PORTION,¹ THE MEMBERS OF THE COMPANY² ARE AT LIBERTY TO GIVE HIM HIS [PORTION],³ AND HE EATS HIS AND THEY EAT THEIRS.⁴

GEMARA. The scholars asked: Can the members of a company, one of whom is quickhanded,⁵ say to him, 'Take your portion and go!' Do we rule that he can say to them, 'Surely you have accepted [me]'; or perhaps they can answer him, 'We accepted you for the purpose of the sacrifice,⁶ but we did not accept you with the view that you should eat more than we'? — Come and hear: IF A MAN REGISTERS ANOTHER WITH HIM, THE MEMBERS OF THE COMPANY ARE AT LIBERTY TO GIVE HIM HIS [PORTION], AND HE EATS HIS AND THEY EAT THEIR. What is the reason? Is it not because it is as though one of them were quick-handed:⁷ and if you should think that one who is quick-handed can say to them, 'You have accepted me,'⁸ then let this one be as though he is quick-handed? — I will tell you: That is not so, [for] characters differ, for even if both of them together eat [only] as much as one member of the company, they can say to him that they are not willing to have a stranger with them.

Come and hear: If the attendant ate as much as an olive at the side of the oven, if he is wise he eats his fill of it; but if the members of the company wish to do him a favour, they come and sit at his side and eat: this is R. Judah's opinion.⁹ Thus, only if they wish, but not if they do not wish. Yet why so? Let him say to them, 'Surely you have accepted [me.]'¹⁰ — There it is different, because they can say to him, 'We accepted you with the intention of troubling you to attend on us; [but] we did not accept you that we should take the trouble of attending to you.' Come and hear: Members of a company, one of whom is quickhanded, are at liberty to say [to him], 'Take your portion and go.' And not only that, but even when five arrange for a meal in common,¹¹ they are at liberty to say to him, 'Take your portion and go.' This proves it.

What does 'and not only that' mean?¹² — He proceeds to a climax.¹³ In the case of Passover-offerings it goes without saying, for they can say to him, 'We accepted you for the purpose of the sacrifice.' But even in the case of a meal in common, which is mere companionship, they are at liberty to say to him, 'Take your portion and go.'

Others state: That is no problem to us,¹⁴ but this is our question: Are the members of a company permitted to divide,¹⁵ or are they not permitted to divide?¹⁶ — Come and hear: Members of a company, one of whom was quick-handed, are at liberty to say to him, 'Take your portion and go.' Thus, only if he is quickhanded, but not if he is not quick-handed. This proves it.¹⁷

R. Papa and R. Huna the son of R. Joshua joined their bread together. But by the time R. Huna the son of R. Joshua ate one [piece], R. Papa ate four. Said he to him, 'Divide with me.' 'You have accepted [me as a partner],' he retorted. [Thereupon] he raised all these objections¹⁸ to him, and he answered him as we have answered them. He then refuted him by [the teaching regarding] 'the members of a company [etc.]'. Said he to him, There the reason is because they can say to him, 'We accepted you for the purpose of the sacrifice.' He refuted him by [the teaching regarding] 'a meal in common [etc.]', so he divided with him. Then he went and joined bread with Rabina. By the time R. Huna the son of R. Joshua ate one [piece], Rabina ate eight. Said he: A hundred Papas rather than one Rabina!

Our Rabbis taught: If a man registers others with him for his Passover-offering and his hagigah,¹⁹ the money he holds²⁰ is hullin. And he who sells his burnt-offering and his peace-offering²¹ has effected nothing,²² and the money, however much it is,²³ is utilized²⁴ for a freewill-offering. But since he has not effected anything, why should it be utilized for a freewill-offering?²⁵ Said Raba: As a penalty.²⁶ And what does 'however much it is' mean? — Even if they [the animals] were only worth four [zuz] and he paid five, the Rabbis penalized him even in respect of that additional [zuz].

'Ulla — others state, R. Oshaia — said: Perhaps our Babylonian colleagues know the reason for this ruling. [Consider:] one set aside a lamb for his Passover-offering, and another set aside money for his Passover-offering: how can sanctification fall upon sanctification, that he teaches, 'the money he holds is hullin.'²⁷ —

- (1) Without the knowledge of the other members of the company.
- (2) Who disapprove of the new companion.
- (3) Bidding him to go and eat it elsewhere with the new companion of his choice.
- (4) This Tanna holds that one Paschal lamb may be eaten by two separate companies.
- (5) To seize food — i.e., he is a glutton and eats more than his due share. Lit., ‘who has fine hands’ — a euphemism.
- (6) We calculated that so many are required for this lamb.
- (7) Presumably the two will eat more than the ordinary share of one.
- (8) Enabling me to eat as much as I like.
- (9) V. supra 86a for notes.
- (10) As one of your company, and since I cannot go to you, you must come to me.
- (11) Each contributing an equal share.
- (12) In which way is the second ruling more noteworthy than the first?
- (13) Lit., ‘he states, it is unnecessary’.
- (14) That the quick-handed companion may be told to take his portion and go.
- (15) Each to take his share.
- (16) But must all eat together.
- (17) They must eat together.
- (18) From the teaching cited above.
- (19) Here the Festive peace-offering which was brought on the fourteenth likewise and eaten before the Passover-offering. This was eaten by the same who had registered for the Passover-offering.
- (20) Which he received from those whom he registered.
- (21) I.e., animals which he consecrated for that purpose.
- (22) The sacrifice must be offered on behalf of the first owner.
- (23) Even if it exceeds the animal's worth.
- (24) Lit., ‘falls’.
- (25) His action being null, the money remains hullin.
- (26) He should not have bought another man's sacrifice.
- (27) Money consecrated for a sacrifice can revert to hullin only if an animal of hullin is bought therewith, whereby the animal receives the sanctity of the money, which in turn loses it and becomes hullin. Here, however, the money was consecrated and given for an animal (or part of it, which is the same) which was already consecrated for a Passover-offering: how then can additional sanctity fall upon the animal, in the sense that the sanctity of the money is transferred thereto, leaving the money hullin? — It cannot be answered that this refers to unconsecrated money, for in that case it is obvious.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 90a

Said Abaye: Had not R. Oshaia related that [Mishnah]¹ to a case where he registers a harlot for his Passover-offering,² and in accordance with Rabbi,³ I would have related it to sacrifices of lesser sanctity⁴ and in accordance with R. Jose the Galilean who maintained: sacrifices of lesser sanctity are their owner's property. But [on Rabbi's view] a man does not leave anything over [unconsecrated] in the Passover-offering, yet he certainly does leave over in the case of money, because when he set it aside [for a Passover-offering] in the first place, he did so with this intention.⁵ While this [the present Baraitha]⁶ is [the view of] Rabbi,⁷ and for that reason the money he holds is hullin, as a man certainly leaves over [something] of money [unconsecrated]. Again, what R. Oshaia explains as the view of Rabbi, I do not explain as [the view of] Rabbi, for a man does not leave over anything [unconsecrated] of the Passover-offering.⁸ But this [present Baraitha] cannot be established as agreeing with R. Jose, since it is taught therein, ‘and he who sells his burnt-offering and his peace-offering has effected nothing.’⁹ Now however that R. Oshaia related that [Mishnah] to the case of a man who registers a harlot in his Passover-offering and in accordance with Rabbi, it follows that he¹⁰ holds that a man leaves [something unconsecrated] even in his Passover-offering [itself].¹¹ What is [this statement] of R. Oshaia [which is alluded to]? — For we learned: If he gave her [a harlot] consecrated animals as her hire, they are permitted [for the altar];¹² [if he gave her] birds of hullin, they are forbidden.¹³ Though [the reverse] would have been logical: if with consecrated animals, which a blemish disqualifies, yet [the interdict of] ‘hire’ or ‘price’¹⁴ does not fall upon them;¹⁵ then with birds, which a blemish does not disqualify, is it not logical that [the interdict of] ‘hire’ and ‘price’ does not fall upon them? Therefore it is stated, ‘for any vow,’ which includes birds. [But] now you might argue a minori in respect of consecrated animals: if with birds, though a blemish does not disqualify them, yet ‘hire’ and ‘price’ fall upon them, then with consecrated animals, which a blemish disqualifies, is it not logical that ‘hire’ and ‘price’ fall upon them? Therefore it is stated, ‘for any vow [neder],’ which excludes that which is [already] vowed [nadar].¹⁶ Now the reason is because the Divine Law wrote ‘vow’; but otherwise I would say: The interdict of ‘hire’ falls upon consecrated animals: but surely a man cannot prohibit that which is not his? — Said R. Oshaia: It refers to the case of a man registering a harlot for his Passover offering, this being according to Rabbi.

What is [this allusion to] Rabbi? — For it was taught, And If the household be too little from being for a lamb:¹⁷ sustain him with [the proceeds of] the lamb in his food requirements, but not in his requirements of [general] purchases. Rabbi said: In his requirements of [general] purchases too, so that if he has nought [wherewith to purchase], he may register another in his Passover offering and his hagigah,¹⁸ while the money he receives is hullin, for on this condition did the Israelites consecrate their Passover offerings.

Rabbah and R. Zera [disagree]. One maintains: None differ about fuel for roasting it, for since this makes the Passover offering fit [to be eaten], it is as the Passover-offering itself.¹⁹ Their controversy is only about unleavened bread and bitter herbs: the Rabbis hold: This is a different eating;²⁰ while Rabbi holds: Since it is a requisite of the Passover-offering,²¹ it is as the Passover-offering itself. The other maintains: None disagree about unleavened bread and bitter herbs either, for it is written, [They shall eat the flesh . . .] and unleavened bread; with bitter herbs they shall eat it;²² hence since they are a requisite of the Passover-offering they are as the Passover-offering. Their controversy is only about buying a shirt therewith [or] buying a cloak therewith. The Rabbis hold: The Divine Law saith, from being for a lamb [mi-heyoth miseh]: devote it [hahayehu] to the lamb;²³ while Rabbi holds: Sustain [hahayeh] thyself with [the proceeds of] the lamb.

But according to Abaye, who said: ‘Had not R. Oshaia related that [Mishnah] to a case where he registers a harlot in his Passover offering, and in accordance with Rabbi, I would have related it to sacrifices of lesser sanctity, and in accordance with R. Jose the Galilean who maintained, Sacrifices of lesser sanctity are their owner's property; but [on Rabbi's view] a man does not leave anything over [unconsecrated] in the Passover-offering’; — surely it is explicitly stated, ‘for on this condition did the Israelites consecrate their Passover-offerings’?²⁴ — Say: ‘for on this condition did the Israelites consecrate the money for their Passover-offerings.’²⁵

MISHNAH. IF A ZAB HAS SUFFERED TWO ATTACKS [OF DISCHARGE], ONE SLAUGHTERS [THE PASSOVER-OFFERING] ON HIS BEHALF ON HIS SEVENTH [DAY]; IF HE HAS HAD THREE ATTACKS, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HIS BEHALF ON HIS EIGHTH [DAY].²⁶ IF A WOMAN WATCHES DAY BY DAY,²⁷ ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HER BEHALF ON HER SECOND DAY; IF SHE SAW [A DISCHARGE] ON TWO DAYS, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HER BEHALF ON THE THIRD [DAY]. AND AS TO A ZABAH,²⁸ ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HER BEHALF ON THE EIGHTH [DAY].

GEMARA. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: One slaughters and sprinkles on behalf of a *tebul yom*²⁹ and one who lacks atonement,³⁰

(1) V. infra in reference to a man who gave a sanctified animal to a harlot, where it is implied that but for a certain verse this would disqualify the animal from being offered as a sacrifice (v. Deut. XXIII, 19). Though a mail cannot render forbidden that which does not belong to him, we say there that he would do so, though since it is sanctified it is really not his.

(2) In return for the 'hire' which he owes her.

(3) Rabbi rules infra that if a man needs money e.g. for clothes, he may register other people with him for his Passover-offering and spend his money so acquired on clothes. Thus he holds that an animal sanctified for a Passover offering is entirely his private property; consequently he could also render it forbidden (but for the verse) by making it a harlot's hire.

(4) V. supra p. 108, n. 2. Thus he gave the harlot an animal consecrated for a peace-offering.

(5) I.e., when Rabbi permits the owner to spend the money on clothes etc., it is not because he holds that when a man consecrates an animal for a Passover-offering he leaves part of it unconsecrated, as it were, so that if a man gives him consecrated money for a share in the sacrifice the sanctity of the money is transferred to that unconsecrated portion of the animal, while the money itself thereby becomes hullin and can be expended on anything. The reason is on the contrary that when a man consecrates money for the Passover-offering he leaves that money partly unconsecrated, as it were, in the sense that it automatically reverts to hullin when he gives it in payment for a share in a sacrifice, and in fact, the money is technically to be regarded as a gift, not as payment at all; Hence the vendor can use it as he pleases.

(6) Introduced by 'our Rabbis taught'.

(7) As explained in the preceding note.

(8) Hence on Rabbi's view if he registers a harlot it does not prohibit it, since nothing at all of the animal is his in that sense.

(9) Whereas on R. Jose's view that sacrifices of lesser sanctity are the owner's personal property, the sale of the peace-offering is valid.

(10) Viz., Rabbi, in R. Oshaia's view.

(11) Not only in the money set aside for the Passover-offering.

(12) Since they were consecrated before he gave them to her, he cannot make them forbidden.

(13) To be offered henceforth as a sacrifice.

(14) V. Deut. XXIII, 19: Thou shalt not bring the hire of a harlot, or the price of a dog, into the house of the Lord thy God for any vow etc.

(15) To make them forbidden.

(16) The hire of a harlot cannot be vowed as a sacrifice; but a consecrated animal has already been vowed.

(17) Ex. XII, 4, lit. translation.

(18) Of the fourteenth.

(19) Hence one may certainly sell a share in the sacrifice for this purpose.

(20) Hence he cannot buy it with the proceeds of the sacrifice.

(21) Which must be eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

(22) Ex. XII, 8. The verse actually quoted, which is slightly different, is Num. IX, 11, but the Talmud probably means the verse stated here.

(23) Lit., 'make it live for the lamb' — i.e., the money realized from the lamb must be expended on what is needed for the lamb, e.g., the unleavened bread and bitter herbs which accompany it.

(24) This definitely implies a reservation in the sacrifice itself.

(25) This is not an emendation but an interpretation.

(26) V. supra p. 423, n. 3. In both these cases they are fit to eat the Passover offering in the evening; hence we kill it on their behalf

(27) V. Supra p. 422, n. 5.

(28) Who had three discharges.

(29) V. Glos.

(30) V. p. 84, n. 1; p. 294, n. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 90b

but one may not slaughter and sprinkle for a person unclean through a reptile.¹ But 'Ulla maintained: One slaughters and sprinkles for a person unclean through a reptile. According to Rab, wherein does a tebul yom differ? Because he is fit in the evening. But one unclean through a reptile too is fit in the evening? — He lacks tebillah. Then a tebul yom too lacks the setting of the sun?² The sun goes down of its own accord.³ Then one who lacks atonement too, surely lacks forgiveness?⁴ — It means where his pair [of birds] are in his hand.⁵ Then a person unclean through a reptile too, surely the mikweh⁶ stands before him? — He may neglect it. If so, he who lacks sacrifice too, perhaps he will neglect [to sacrifice]? — It means e.g., that he had delivered them [his birds] to the Beth din, this being in accordance with R. Shemaiah, who said: It is a presumption that the Beth din of Priests⁷ do not rise from there⁸ until the money in the horn-shaped receptacles is finished.⁹ Now according to Rab, by Scriptural law he¹⁰ is indeed fit, and it was the Rabbis who preventively forbade him;¹¹ why then did Rab say: We defile one of them with a reptile?¹² — Rather [say] according to Rab he is not fit by Biblical law either, for it is written, If any man be unclean by reason of a dead body:¹³ does this not hold good [even] when his seventh day falls on the eve of Passover,¹⁴ which case is [tantamount to] uncleanness through a reptile,¹⁵ yet the Divine Law said, Let him be relegated [to the second Passover]? [But] how do you know that it is so?¹⁶ — He holds as R. Isaac, who said: They¹⁷ were unclean through an unattended corpse¹⁸ whose seventh day fell on the eve of Passover, for it is said, and they could not keep the Passover on that day:¹⁹ thus only on that day could they not keep it, but on the morrow they could keep it,²⁰ yet the Divine Law said, Let them be put off.²¹

We learned: IF A ZAB HAS SUFFERED TWO ATTACKS, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HIS BEHALF ON HIS SEVENTH [DAY]; does that not mean where he had not performed tebillah, which proves [that] one slaughters and sprinkles for a person unclean through a reptile?²² No; it means where he has performed tebillah. If he has performed tebillah, what does it [the Mishnah] inform us? If he informs us this, that though he lacks the setting of the sun, the sun sets automatically.²³ Reason too supports this [interpretation], since the second clause teaches: IF HE HAS HAD THREE ATTACKS, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HIS BEHALF ON HIS EIGHTH [DAY]. Now it is well if you agree that [the clause] 'IF A ZAB HAS SUFFERED TWO ATTACKS, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HIS BEHALF ON HIS SEVENTH [DAY]' means where he has performed tebillah: then [the second clause] is necessary. You might argue: Only when he has had two attacks [do we slaughter for him] on his seventh [day], because he does not lack a positive act; but [in the case of] 'one who has had three attacks, on his eighth day,' where an action is wanting [in that] he lacks forgiveness,²⁴ it is not so. Therefore [the Mishnah] informs us that though he lacks forgiveness, we slaughter and sprinkle on his behalf. But if you say that [the clause, 'IF A ZAB HAS SUFFERED TWO ATTACKS, [ONE SLAUGHTERS ON HIS BEHALF] ON HIS SEVENTH DAY,' means where he has not performed tebillah, what is the purpose of [teaching about] one who has had three attacks? Seeing that you say that one slaughters and sprinkles on behalf of one who had two discharges, and is in his seventh day, but has not performed tebillah, so that he is quite unclean; then how much the more does one slaughter and sprinkle for one who had three attacks, and is in his eighth day, and has performed tebillah on the seventh, so that his uncleanness is of a lighter nature! Hence it surely follows that [the law] that we slaughter on behalf of one who has had two attacks and is in [his] seventh [day] refers to the case where he has performed tebillah! — No. In truth I may tell you that he has not performed tebillah, and [yet] it is necessary. I might argue: Only on the seventh day [do we slaughter for him], since [it lies] in his own hand to make himself fit; but on the eighth day, when it is not in his power to offer the sacrifice, I might say, the priests may neglect him. Hence we are informed [that it is] as R. Shemaiah [stated].²⁵

AND AS TO A ZABAH, ONE SLAUGHTERS etc. A tanna recited before R. Adda b. Ahabah: And as to a zabah,²⁶ one slaughters on her behalf on her seventh day. Said he to him: Is then a zabah on her seventh day fit?²⁷ Even on the view that one slaughters and sprinkles for a person unclean through a reptile, that is only for a person unclean through a reptile, who is fit in the evening. But this one is not fit until the morrow when she brings her atonement. Say [instead], 'on the eighth.' Then it is obvious?²⁸ — You might say, since she lacks atonement, [one must] not slaughter [on her behalf]; hence he informs us [that it is] as R. Shemaiah [stated]. Rabina said: He [the Tanna] recited before him [about] a niddah,²⁹ [thus]: And as to a niddah, one slaughters for her on the seventh [day]. Said he to him: Is then a niddah fit on the seventh [day]? Even on the view that one slaughters and sprinkles for a person unclean through a reptile [that is] because he is fit in the evening. But a niddah performs tebillah in the evening of [i.e., following] the seventh day: [hence] she is not fit for eating [the Passover offering] until the [evening after the] eighth, by when she has had the setting of the sun.³⁰ But say, 'on the eighth.' That is obvious: seeing that one slaughters and sprinkles for a zabah on the eighth day, though as yet she lacks atonement, need it be taught that one slaughters and sprinkles on behalf of a niddah, who does not lack atonement?³¹ — He finds it necessary [to teach about] a niddah, [and] informs us this: only on the eighth, but not on the seventh, even as it was taught: All who are liable to tebillah.³² their tebillah takes place by day;³³ a niddah and a woman in confinement, their tebillah takes place at night.³⁴ For it was taught: You might think that she [a niddah] performs tebillah by day;³⁵ therefore it is stated, she shall be in her impurity seven days:³⁶ let her be in her impurity full seven days.³⁷ And a woman in confinement is assimilated to Juddah.³⁸ MISHNAH. [As To] AN OMEN,³⁹

-
- (1) Though he can perform tebillah and be fit in the evening.
 - (2) I.e., he too is not fit when the sacrifice is actually slaughtered.
 - (3) No action by himself is wanting.
 - (4) I.e., he is yet to bring his sacrifice, and thus he is on a par with a person unclean through a reptile, who is to perform tebillah.
 - (5) For sacrificing, so we need not fear that he may omit to do so and the Passover-offering will have needlessly been slaughtered for him.
 - (6) Ritual bath.
 - (7) A special court in the Temple which dealt with priestly and sacrificial matters.
 - (8) I.e., do not leave the Temple Court.
 - (9) The monies for the bird-offerings were placed daily in horn-shaped receptacles, and the priestly Beth din saw to it that these were expended on the day they were received. Hence there was no fear of neglect.
 - (10) The person unclean through a reptile.
 - (11) This must be assumed, since he gives the reason because we fear that he may neglect his tebillah.
 - (12) V. supra 80a; but an unclean majority means such as are unfit to partake of the Passover offering in the evening by Biblical law.
 - (13) Num. IX, 10.
 - (14) Since Scripture does not particularize, it must include all cases.
 - (15) Since both can be clean in the evening.
 - (16) Since Scripture mentions a dead body, it may refer only to such uncleanness that is not the same as that acquired from a reptile, viz., before the seventh day.
 - (17) The men who came to enquire of Moses and Aaron, Num. IX, 6.
 - (18) Lit., 'a corpse of a precept' — i.e., the corpse of a person whose relatives are unknown; its burial is obligatory upon the first person who finds it.
 - (19) Ibid.
 - (20) This is possible only if the morrow was their eighth day.
 - (21) Though they can make themselves fit for the evening.
 - (22) For they are exactly alike.
 - (23) As above.
 - (24) Is sacrifice is yet to be offered.
 - (25) Supra.
 - (26) Who had three discharges.
 - (27) To partake of the sacrifice in the evening.
 - (28) Though the same is stated in the Mishnah, it might be included there for the sake of parallelism, though unnecessary in itself. But here it is taught as an independent statement.
 - (29) V. Glos.
 - (30) She must not eat of sacrifices until the setting of the sun after her tebillah. Since she performs tebillah in the evening, when the sun has already set, she must wait until the following evening.

- (31) She does not require a sacrifice.
- (32) E.g., a zab and a zabah, a leper, and one defiled through a corpse (Shab. 121a).
- (33) The seventh day from their defilement.
- (34) The evening following the last day of their uncleanness. In this respect a niddah is more stringent than a zabah, who performs tebillah on the seventh day, and does not wait for the evening.
- (35) Sc. the seventh, like a zabah.
- (36) Lev. XV. 19.
- (37) But if she performs tebillah on the seventh day itself, the period is diminished.
- (38) For it is written, as in the days of the impurity of (niddath, const. of niddah) her sickness shall she (sc. a woman in confinement) be unclean (Lev. XII, 3).
- (39) V. Glos. Here it refers to one who became an omen after midday, so that the obligation of the Passover-offering was already incumbent upon him. But if he became an omen before midday, this obligation does not fall on him at all, as stated infra 98a (Tosaf).

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 91a

AND ONE WHO IS REMOVING A HEAP [OF DEBRIS],¹ AND LIKEWISE ONE WHO HAS RECEIVED A PROMISE TO BE RELEASED FROM PRISON, AND AN INVALID, AND AN AGED PERSON WHO CAN EAT AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE, ONE SLAUGHTERS ON THEIR BEHALF.² [YET IN THE CASE OF] ALL THESE, ONE MAY NOT SLAUGHTER FOR THEM ALONE, LEST THEY BRING THE PASSOVER-OFFERING TO DISQUALIFICATION.³ THEREFORE IF A DISQUALIFICATION OCCURS TO THEM, THEY ARE EXEMPT FROM KEEPING THE SECOND PASSOVER,⁴ EXCEPT ONE WHO WAS REMOVING DEBRIS, BECAUSE HE WAS UNCLEAN FROM THE BEGINNING.⁵

GEMARA. Rabbah son of R. Huna said in R. Johanan's name: They learned this only of a heathen prison; but [if he is incarcerated in] an Israelite prison, one slaughters for him separately; since he was promised, he will [definitely] be released, as it is written, The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies.⁶ R. Hisda observed: As to what you say, [If he is in] a heathen prison [one may] not [kill on his behalf alone]; that was said only [when the prison is] without the walls of Beth Pagi;⁷ but [if it is] within the walls of Beth Pagi,⁸ one slaughters on his behalf alone. What is the reason? It is possible to convey it [the flesh] to him and he will eat it.

THEREFORE IF A DISQUALIFICATION OCCURS etc. Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in R. Johanan's name: They learned [this] only of a round heap;⁹ but [if it was] a long heap, he is exempt from keeping the Second Passover, [for] perhaps he was clean at the time of the shechitah.¹⁰ It was also taught likewise: R. Simeon the son of R. Johanan b. Berokah said: One who is removing a heap [of debris] is sometimes exempt [from the Second Passover] and sometimes liable. How so? [If it was] a round heap and uncleanness [a corpse] was found underneath it, he is liable; a long heap, and uncleanness was found underneath it, he is exempt, [for] I assume [that] he was clean at the time of shechitah.

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT SLAUGHTER THE Passover offering FOR A SINGLE PERSON: THIS IS R. JUDAH'S VIEW; BUT R. JOSE PERMITS IT. AND EVEN A COMPANY OF A HUNDRED WHO CANNOT EAT AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE [JOINTLY], ONE MAY NOT KILL FOR THEM. AND ONE MAY NOT FORM A COMPANY OF WOMEN AND SLAVES AND MINORS.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: How do we know that one may not slaughter the Passover-offering for a single person? Because it is said, Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover-offering for one:¹¹ this is R. Judah's opinion. But R. Jose maintained: A single person and he is able to eat it, one may slaughter on his behalf; ten who are unable to eat it, one must not slaughter on their behalf. Now R.

Jose, how does he employ this 'for one'? — He requires it for R. Simeon's [deduction]. For it was taught, R. Simeon said: How do we know that one who sacrifices his Passover offering at a private bamah¹² at the time when bamoth were prohibited violates a negative command? Because it is said, 'Thou mayest not sacrifice the passover-offering within one of thy gates'. You might think that it is also thus when bamoth were permitted:¹³ therefore it is stated, 'within one of thy gates': They ruled [that he violates a negative injunction] only when all Israel enter through one gate.¹⁴ And how does R. Judah know this? — You may infer two things from it.¹⁵

Now according to R. Jose, whence [does he know] that its purpose is for what R. Simeon said: perhaps it comes for what was stated by R. Judah? — He can tell you: you cannot think so, for surely it is written, according to every man's eating.¹⁶

R. 'Ukba b. Hinena of Parishna¹⁷ pointed out a contradiction to Raba: Did then R. Judah Say: One may not kill the Paschal lamb for a single person? But the following contradicts it: [As to] a woman; at the First [Passover] one may slaughter for her separately, but at the second one makes her an addition to others: this is the view of R. Judah. — Said he to him, Do not Say, 'for her separately,' but 'for them separately.'¹⁸ Yet may we form a company consisting entirely of women? Surely we learned, ONE MAY NOT FORM A COMPANY OF WOMEN AND SLAVES AND MINORS. Does that not mean women separately and slaves separately and minors separately? — No, he replied, [it means] women and slaves and minors [together]. Women and slaves, on account of obscenity; minors and slaves, on account of

(1) Which had fallen upon a person, and it is unknown whether he is alive or dead.

(2) All these may be fit in the evening, including an one.

(3) The omen may defile himself through the corpse; he who is removing the debris may find the person underneath it dead, in which case he himself is unclean; the prisoner may not be freed; while the invalid and aged person may grow weaker. Therefore they must be registered with others.

(4) Since they were actually fit when the animal was slaughtered.

(5) If he finds the person underneath dead, he himself was defiled through overshadowing the dead, and thus he was unclean when the animal was sacrificed.

(6) Zeph. III, 13.

(7) V. p. 319, n. 1.

(8) Hence in Jerusalem, where the Passover-offering is eaten.

(9) I.e., one just about covering the person, so that the rescuer must have been directly over the corpse from the very beginning.

(10) He may not have been actually over the corpse then.

(11) Deut. XVI, 5 (E.v. within one [of thy gates]).

(12) 'High place'. Before the Tabernacle was erected in Shiloh, and between its destruction and the building of the Temple, sacrifices were offered at bamoth (pl. of bamah), both private and public. During the existence of the Tabernacle at Shiloh, and since the Temple was built, even after it was destroyed, bamoth were forbidden.

(13) For even then private bamoth were permitted only for votive sacrifices but not for obligatory offerings like the Passover, which were sacrificed at the public bamoth.

(14) I.e., when there is a central sanctuary; but when bamoth were permitted there was no central sanctuary. The verse is understood thus: Thou mayest not Sacrifice the Passover-offering at a private bamah when all Israel enter through one of thy gates.

(15) Presumably by interpreting 'one' separately and 'one of the gates' separately.

(16) Ex. XII, 4. Thus the matter depends solely on ability to eat.

(17) V. supra 76a, p. 393, n. 6.

(18) This is not an emendation, but an explanation: 'for her separately' means that women need not necessarily join a company of men.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 91b licentiousness.¹ [To turn to] the [main] text: [As to] a woman, at the First [Passover] one slaughters for her separately, while at the second one makes her an addition to others: this is the view of R. Judah. R. Jose said: [As to] a woman, at the Second [Passover] one slaughters for her separately, and at the First it goes without saying. R. Simeon said: [As to] a woman, at the First one makes her an addition to others; at the second one may not slaughter for her at all. Wherein do they differ? — R. Judah holds: according to the number of the souls² [implies] even women.³ And should you say, if so, even at the Second too? It is [therefore] written, that man shall bear his sin:⁴ only a man, but not a woman. Yet should you argue: if so, she may not even be [made] an addition at the Second, [therefore is written,] according to all the statute of the [first] passover⁵, which is effective in respect of [her being made] a mere addition.

And R. Jose? What is his reason! — Because in connection with the First [Passover] it is written, ‘according to the number of souls,’ [implying] even a woman. Again, in connection with the Second Passover it is written, that soul shall be cut off from his people,⁶ ‘soul’ [implying] even women. While what does ‘that man shall bear his sin’ exclude? It excludes a minor from kareth.

While R. Simeon [argues]: In connection with the First [Passover] ‘a man is written:⁷ only a man but not a woman. Yet should you say. If so, [she may] not even [be made] an addition: [therefore is written] ‘according to the number of souls’, which is effective in respect of [her being] an addition. But should you say, then even at the Second too, — [therefore] the Divine Law excluded [her] from the second, for it is written, ‘that man shall bear his sin’: [implying] only a man, but not a woman. Now from what is she excluded? If from an obligation,⁸ [this cannot be maintained]: seeing that there is no [obligation] at the first, is there a question of the second! Hence [she is surely excluded] from [participation even as] an addition.

Now, what is [this] ‘man’ which R. Simeon quotes? If we say, they shall take to them every man a lamb, according to their fathers’ houses etc.⁹ Surely that is required for [the teaching] of R. Isaac. who deduced: only a ‘man’ can acquire [on behalf of others], but a minor cannot acquire [on behalf of others]!¹⁰ Rather [it is derived] from ‘a man, according to his eating’.¹¹ But since R. Jose agrees with R. Simeon,¹² R. Simeon too must agree with R. Jose,¹³ and he needs that [verse to teach] that one slaughters the Passover-offering for a single person?¹⁴ — He can answer you: If so,¹⁵ let the Divine Law write ‘according to his eating’,¹⁶ why [state] ‘a man’? Hence you infer two [laws] from it.

With whom does the following dictum of R. Eleazar agree.¹⁷ [viz.]: ‘[The observance of the Passover-offering by] a woman at the First [Passover] is obligatory, while at the Second it is voluntary, and it overrides the Sabbath.’ If voluntary, why does it override the Sabbath? Rather say: ‘at the Second it is voluntary, while at the First it is obligatory and overrides the Sabbath.’ With whom [does it agree]? With R. Judah.

R. Jacob said in R. Johanan's name: A company must not be formed [consisting] entirely of proselytes, lest they be [too particular about it and bring it to disqualification].¹⁸ Our Rabbis taught: The Passover-offering and unleavened bread and bitter herbs are obligatory on the first [night], but voluntary from then onwards.¹⁹ R. Simeon said: In the case of men [it is] obligatory; in the case of women, voluntary. To what does this refer? Shall we say, to the Passover-offering is there then a Passover-offering the whole seven days!²⁰ Hence [it must refer] to unleavened bread and bitter herbs. Then consider the sequel: R. Simeon said: In the case of men [it is] obligatory; in the case of women, voluntary. Does then R. Simeon not agree with R. Eleazar's dictum: Women are bound to eat unleavened bread by Scriptural law, for it is said, Thou shalt eat no leavened bread with it; seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread therewith:²¹ whoever is subject to, ‘thou shalt eat no leavened bread,' is subject to [the law]. 'arise, eat unleavened bread'; and these women, since they are subject to, 'thou shalt eat no leavened bread,' are also subject to [the law], 'arise, eat unleavened bread?' — Rather say: The Passover-offering, unleavened bread, and bitter herbs are obligatory on the first [night]; from then onwards [the latter two] are voluntary. R. Simeon said: As for the Passover-offering, in the case of men it is obligatory, in the case of women it is voluntary.

MISHNAH. AN ONEN PERFORMS TEBILLAH AND EATS HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING IN THE EVENING, BUT [HE MAY] NOT [PARTAKE] OF [OTHER] SACRIFICES.²² ONE WHO HEARS ABOUT HIS DEAD [FOR THE FIRST TIME],²³

-
- (1) Pederasty; cf. Weiss, Dor, II, 21 on the rifeness of pederasty among the Romans. — Heathen slaves are meant here.
 - (2) Ex. XII, 4.
 - (3) Since men are not specified.
 - (4) Num. IX, 13; this refers to the Second Passover.
 - (5) Ibid. 12.
 - (6) Ibid. 13.
 - (7) The Gemara discusses below which verse is meant.
 - (8) I.e., the verse teaches that she need not keep the Second Passover.
 - (9) Ex. XII, 3.
 - (10) He deduces it from the present verse. For this person took the lamb not on his behalf alone but on behalf of 'their fathers' houses', who thereby gained the right to participate therein, and Scripture specifies that a man is required for this, not a minor. Hence a minor cannot be vested with the powers of an agent.
 - (11) Ibid. 4.
 - (12) That the Passover-offering may not be sacrificed at a private bamah, and that this is deduced from, thou mayest not sacrifice the Passover-offering at one of the gates, as stated supra.
 - (13) That the Passover-offering may be slaughtered for a single person.
 - (14) For if R. Simeon does not accept this view, then he should employ the verse, 'thou mayest not sacrifice the Passover offering for one' as teaching that it may not be slaughtered for a single person, as R. Judah does supra 91a, in which case his ruling on the private bamah is without foundation.
 - (15) That the verse is intended for R. Jose's teaching only.
 - (16) Which would show that the matter depends entirely on his powers of eating.
 - (17) Lit., 'as who does it go.'
 - (18) In their ignorance of the law they may object to points which really do not matter, and thus disqualify it without cause.
 - (19) I.e., for the rest of Passover.
 - (20) That is surely not permitted even voluntarily.
 - (21) Deut. XVI, 3.
 - (22) An onen may not eat the flesh of sacrifices (v. Lev. X. 19f). By Scriptural law a man is an onen on the day of death only, but not at night; the Rabbis, however, extended these restrictions to the night too. Since, however, the Passover-offering is a Scriptural obligation, they waived their prohibition in respect of the night, and hence he may eat thereof. He is not unclean, but requires tebillah to emphasize that until the evening sacred flesh was forbidden to him, whereas now it is permitted. In respect of other sacrifices the Rabbinical law stands, and he may not partake of them.
 - (23) On the day when a man is informed of the death of a near relative, e.g., his father, he is an onen by Rabbinical law, even if death took place earlier.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 92a

AND ONE WHO COLLECTS THE BONES [OF HIS PARENTS],¹ PERFORM TEBILLAH AND EAT SACRED FLESH.² IF A PROSELYTE WAS CONVERTED ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER, — BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: HE PERFORMS TEBILLAH AND EATS HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING IN THE EVENING; WHILE BETH HILLEL RULE: ONE WHO SEPARATES HIMSELF FROM [THE STATE OF] UNCIRCUMCISION IS LIKE ONE WHO

SEPARATED HIMSELF FROM A GRAVE.³

GEMARA. What is the reason? — He holds: [The law of] aninuth at night is Rabbinical [only], and where the Passover offering is concerned they did not insist on their law, since it involves⁴ kareth;⁵ but in respect to sacrifices [in general] they insisted on their law, Seeing that [only] an affirmative precept is involved.⁶

ONE WHO HEARS ABOUT HIS DEAD etc. ONE WHO COLLECTS BONES? — But he requires sprinkling on the third and the seventh [days]?⁷ — Say: One for whom [his parent's] bones were collected.⁸ A PROSELYTE WHO WAS CONVERTED etc. Rabbah b. Bar

Hanah said in R. Johanan's name: The controversy is in respect of an uncircumcised heathen, where Beth Hillel hold: [He is forbidden to eat in the evening] as a preventive measure lest he become defiled the following year [by the dead] and he argues, 'Did I not perform tebillah last year and eat [of the Passover offering]? So now too I will perform tebillah and eat.' But he will not understand that the previous year he was a heathen and not susceptible to uncleanness, whereas now he is an Israelite and susceptible to uncleanness. While Beth Shammai hold: We do not enact a preventive measure. But with regard to an uncircumcised Israelite⁹ all agree that he performs tebillah and eats his Passover-offering in the evening, and we do not preventively forbid an uncircumcised Israelite on account of an uncircumcised heathen¹⁰ it was taught likewise, R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not differ about an uncircumcised Israelite, [both agreeing] that he performs tebillah and eats his Passover-offering in the evening. About what do they differ? About an uncircumcised heathen, where Beth Shammai rule: He performs tebillah and eats his Passover-offering in the evening; while Beth Hillel maintain: He who separates himself from uncircumcision is as though he separated from a grave.

Raba said: [In the case of] an uncircumcised person, sprinkling, and a knife, they [the Sages] insisted on their enactments [even] where kareth is involved;¹¹ [in the case of] an onen, a leper and beth ha-peras,¹² they did not insist on their enactments where kareth is involved. 'An uncircumcised person,' as stated.¹³ 'Sprinkling,' for a Master said: Sprinkling is [forbidden as] a shebuth, yet it does not override the Sabbath.¹⁴ 'A knife,' as it was taught: Just as one may not bring it [sc. a knife for circumcision] through the street, so may one not bring it by the way of roofs, court-yards. or enclosures.¹⁵

'An onen,' as we have stated.¹⁶ What is this [law of] 'a leper'? For it was taught: A leper whose eighth day fell on the eve of Passover¹⁷ and who had a nocturnal discharge [keri] on that day.¹⁸ performs tebillah¹⁹ and eats [the Passover-offering in the evening].²⁰ [For] the Sages said: Though a tebul yom²¹ may not enter [the Levitical Camp], this one does enter:²² it is preferable that an affirmative precept which involves kareth²³ should come and override an affirmative precept which does not involve kareth.²⁴ Now R. Johanan said: By the law of Torah²⁵ there is not even an affirmative precept in connection therewith, for it is said, And Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the Lord, before the new court.²⁶ What does 'the new court' mean? That they innovated a law there and ruled: A tebul yom must not enter the Levitical Camp.²⁷

'Beth ha-peras': for we learned: Now Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel both agree

(1) He too is a mourner on that day by Rabbinical law.

(2) In the evening. This applies to all sacrifices, for since even during the day he is an onen by Rabbinical law only, the Rabbis did not extend his aninuth (v. Glos.) to the evening.

(3) He must be besprinkled with the water of purification on the third and seventh days after the circumcision; hence he is not yet fit in the evening.

(4) Lit., 'in the place of'.

- (5) Since the neglect of the Passover offering involves kareth, they waived their law.
- (6) It is an affirmative precept to eat of one's own sacrifice (Ex. XXIX, 33), but the violation of this law does not involve kareth.
- (7) The Mishnah was understood literally as meaning that he himself gathered them; but these defile just like a corpse, and he is unclean for seven days, and must be besprinkled on the third and the seventh days (Num. XIX, 19).
- (8) By others: he himself is nevertheless regarded as an onen on that day.
- (9) Who was circumcised on the eve of Passover.
- (10) I.e., through fear that if the former is permitted it may be thought that the latter is permitted too.
- (11) I.e., though thereby a Scriptural command, failure to observe which involves kareth, is disregarded.
- (12) Peras is half the length of a hundred-cubit furrow, hence fifty cubits; beth ha-peras is the technical designation for a field a square peras in area, declared unclean on account of crushed bones carried over it from a ploughed grave (Jast.). Its uncleanness is Rabbinical only.
- (13) Supra: Beth Hillel forbid him to eat of the Passover-offering as a preventive measure, which is only a Rabbinical enactment.
- (14) V. Supra 65b. Thus on account of a Shebuth, which is a Rabbinical prohibition, the unclean person may not participate in the Passover-offering.
- (15) Karpf, pl. karpifoth, is an enclosure not more than two se'ahs in area (this is slightly over seventy cubits square). If the eighth day of birth, when a child must be circumcised (v. Lev. XII, 3), falls on the Sabbath, the knife must be brought the previous day. If it was forgotten, however, it must not be brought on the Sabbath, even by way of roofs, etc., carrying on which is forbidden by Rabbinical law only, and circumcision must be postponed, notwithstanding that failure to circumcise involves kareth (Gen. XVII, 14). — Actually no kareth would be incurred in the present case, since it would be done another day, but Raba means that to the precept of circumcision there is attached the penalty of kareth.
- (16) V. Mishnah and p. 490. n. 4.
- (17) When a leper was healed from his leprosy he waited seven days, performing tebillah on the seventh, and brought his sacrifices on the eighth (v. Lev. XIV, 9f). When he brought these he was still not permitted to enter the Temple Court ('the camp of the Shechinah) but stood at the east gate ('the gate of Nicanor'). whose sanctity was lower (it was regarded as 'the Levitical camp'), while the priest, standing inside the Temple Court, applied the blood and the oil to the thumbs and the great toes of the leper (ibid. 14f).
- (18) Before he had offered his sacrifices. A ba'al keri (v. Glos.) might not enter even the Levitical Camp (v. supra 67b).
- (19) Again. Though he had performed tebillah the previous day, that was on his leprosy, whereas now he performs it on account of his discharge.
- (20) Thus after the tebillah he would bring his sacrifices for leprosy.
- (21) V. Glos.
- (22) For his purification rites; v. n. 3.
- (23) Sc. the Passover-offering.
- (24) Sc. that a tebul yom must not enter the Levitical Camp. That is derived in Naz. 45a from, 'he shall be unclean; his uncleanness is yet upon him' (Num. XIX, 13); since that is an affirmative statement, the injunction likewise counts as an affirmative precept. Its violation does not involve kareth.
- (25) The Pentateuch.
- (26) II Chron. XX, 5.
- (27) Since this was all innovation, it is only Rabbinical, and as seen supra it was waived for the sake of the Passover-offering. V. Yeb., Sonc. ed. pp. 31ff notes.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 92b

that we examine [a beth ha-peras] for the sake of those who would keep the Passover,¹ but we do not examine [it] for those who would eat terumah.² How is it examined? Said Rab Judah in Samuel's name: He sifts the beth ha-peras as he proceeds.³ R. Judah b. Abaye⁴ said in Rab's name: A beth ha-peras which was [thoroughly] trodden down is clean.⁵

CHAPTER IX

MISHNAH. HE WHO WAS UNCLEAN OR IN A JOURNEY AFAR OFF⁶ AND DID NOT KEEP THE FIRST [PASSOVER] MUST KEEP THE SECOND. IF HE UNWITTINGLY ERRED OR WAS ACCIDENTALLY PREVENTED AND DID NOT KEEP THE FIRST, HE MUST KEEP THE SECOND. IF SO, WHY IS AN UNCLEAN PERSON AND ONE WHO WAS IN 'A JOURNEY AFAR OFF SPECIFIED? [TO TEACH] THAT THESE⁷ ARE NOT LIABLE TO KARETH, WHEREAS THOSE ARE LIABLE TO KARETH.⁸

GEMARA. It was stated: If he was in a journey afar off⁹ and they slaughtered [the Passover-offering] and sprinkled [its blood] on his behalf, — R. Nahman said: It is accepted;¹⁰ R. Shesheth said: It is not accepted. R. Nahman said, It is accepted: The Divine Law indeed had compassion on him,¹¹ but if he kept [the first], a blessing come upon him!¹² While R. Shesheth said, It is not accepted: The Divine Law did in fact suspend him, like an unclean person.¹³

R. Nahman said, Whence do I know it? Because we learned, HE WHO WAS UNCLEAN OR IN A JOURNEY AFAR OFF AND DID NOT KEEP THE FIRST [Passover] MUST KEEP THE SECOND; whence it follows that if he wished, he could keep it. And R. Shesheth?¹⁴ -He can answer you: If so, the second clause which teaches, IF HE UNWITTINGLY ERRED OR WAS ACCIDENTALLY PREVENTED AND DID NOT KEEP THE FIRST, HE MUST KEEP THE SECOND: [will you argue that] since he [the Tanna] states, AND DID NOT KEEP, it follows that had he desired he could have kept it? But surely he had unwittingly erred or been accidentally prevented! Hence [you must answer that] he teaches of deliberate neglect together with these;¹⁵ so here too [in the first clause] he teaches about an onen together with these.¹⁶ R. Ashi said: Our Mishnah too implies this,¹⁷ for it is taught, THESE ARE NOT LIABLE TO KARETH, WHILE THOSE ARE LIABLE TO KARETH: Now to what [does this refer]? Shall we say, to one who errs unwittingly or is accidentally prevented? are then he who errs unwittingly and he who is accidentally prevented subject to kareth!¹⁸ Hence it must surely [refer] to a deliberate offender and an onen. And R. Nahman?¹⁹ -He can answer you: In truth it refers to a deliberate offender alone,²⁰ and logically he should have taught, he is liable [in the singular]; but the reason that he teaches, THEY ARE LIABLE is that because the first clause teaches THEY ARE NOT LIABLE, the second clause teaches THEY ARE LIABLE.

R. Shesheth said: Whence do I know it? Because It was taught, R. Akiba said: 'Unclean' is stated and 'in a journey afar off'²¹ is stated:

(1) If there is no other way to reach Jerusalem in time to sacrifice the Passover-offering save by crossing a beth ha-peras, the field is examined and they pass through it.

(2) If a priest wishes to go somewhere to eat terumah and his way lies across a beth ha-peras, he cannot examine it but must take a circuitous course, even if this delays him a day or more. — One who passes over the beth ha-peras becomes unclean, and may not partake either of the Passover-offering or of terumah.

(3) He takes up the earth en route and sifts it, to see if any small bones are hidden there, and if there are none he is clean, cf. note 7.

(4) Var. lec.: Ammi.

(5) As it is assumed that every bone which may be there has been reduced to less than the size of a wheat, which is the minimum standard for conveying uncleanness 'through contact' or treading upon it. Therefore if a man sees this he may cross it to sacrifice the Passover-offering, but not to eat terumah. Now the uncleanness of a beth ha-peras is only Rabbinical, and as we see here this law was waived somewhat in favour of the Passover-offering.

(6) V. Num. IX, 10 f.

(7) Enumerated in this Mishnah-all the four.

(8) This is explained in the Gemara.

(9) He can reach Jerusalem by nightfall in time to eat the offering, but not by day when the offering is sacrificed.

(10) The sacrifice is valid, and he does not keep the second Passover.

(11) By giving him the opportunity of a second Passover.

(12) I.e., all the better.

(13) So that he is not permitted to keep the first.

(14) How does he rebut this?

(15) I.e., though it is not specifically stated, yet the words 'AND DID NOT KEEP' can only apply to such, and he is therefore to be understood as included in the Mishnah.

(16) I.e., the Mishnah is to be read in the first clause as including onen (v. Hananel). He could have kept the First Passover had he desired, v. supra 90b, and it is to this that the words 'AND DID NOT KEEP' refer.

(17) That the first clause includes also onen.

(18) Surely not.

(19) Does he not admit this argument?

(20) For the first clause does not treat of an onen, and consequently R. Nahman's deduction holds good.

(21) Num. IX, 10.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 93a

just as an unclean [person] is one who has the means of keeping it,¹ yet must not keep it, so [a man 'in] a journey afar off' means one who has the means of keeping it,² yet he must not keep it.³ And R. Nahman? - He can answer you: R. Akiba is consistent with his view, for he holds: One must not slaughter and sprinkle on behalf of a person unclean through a reptile;⁴ whereas I agree with the view that one slaughters and sprinkles on behalf of a person unclean through a reptile.⁵

Our Rabbis taught: The following keep the second [Passover]: zabin and zaboth,⁶ male lepers and female lepers, niddoth⁷ and those who had intercourse with niddoth, and women after confinement, those who [do not observe the first Passover] inadvertently, and those who are forcibly prevented, and those who [neglect it] deliberately, and he who is unclean, and he who was in 'a journey afar off'. If so, why is an unclean person mentioned? [You ask] 'why is he mentioned'? [Surely to teach] that if he wishes to keep it at the first we do not permit him? Rather [the question is] why is [a person] on a journey afar off mentioned? — To exempt him from kareth, this being in accordance with the view that it is accepted.⁸

Is then a woman obliged [to keep] the second [Passover],⁹ but surely it was taught: You might think that only a person unclean through the dead and one who was in 'a journey afar off' keep the second [Passover], — whence do we know [that] zabin and lepers and those who had intercourse with niddoth [must keep it]? From the verse, If any man [etc.]?¹⁰ -There is no difficulty: one is according to R. Jose; the other, according to R. Judah and R. Simeon.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: One incurs kareth on account of the first [Passover], and one incurs kareth on account of the second:¹² this is Rabbi's view. R. Nathan said: One incurs kareth on account of the first, but does not incur it on account of the second.¹³ R. Hanania b. 'Akabia said: One does not incur kareth even on account of the first, unless he [deliberately] does not keep the second.

Now they are consistent with their views. For it was taught: A proselyte who became converted between the two Passovers, and similarly a minor who attained his majority between the two Passovers,¹⁴ are bound to keep the second Passover:¹⁵ that is Rabbi's view. R. Nathan said: Whoever is subject to the first is subject to the second, and whoever is not subject to the first is not subject to the second. Wherein do they differ? — Rabbi holds: The second is a separate Festival. R. Nathan holds: The second is a compensation for the second,¹⁶ [but] it does not make amends for the first.¹⁷ While R. Hanania b. 'Akabia holds: The second makes amends for the first. Now the three deduce [their views] from the same verse: But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey.¹⁸ Rabbi holds: And forbearth to keep the Passover, that soul shall be cut off¹⁹ - because he did not keep [it] at the first; or alternatively [if] he brought not the offering of the Lord in its appointed season²⁰ [i.e.] at the second. And how do you know that that [phrase], 'that man shall bear his sin,'²¹ means kareth?

-
- (1) He is physically able to keep it.
- (2) E.g., one could sacrifice on his behalf and he could reach Jerusalem in time.
- (3) But must postpone it; hence if he does have it sacrificed on his behalf, it is not accepted.
- (4) Though he will be fit to eat in the evening, because at the time of sacrificing he is not fit. The present case is similar.
- (5) The translation and explanation follows cur. edd. Tosaf. records a different reading, which is supported by the Sifre (Be-ha alotheke): Just as an unclean person is one who cannot possibly keep it, on account of his uncleanness, and he must not keep it, so a person in 'a journey afar off' means one who cannot possibly reach Jerusalem in time (according to 'Ulla, for the sacrificing; according to Rab Judah, for the eating), and he too must not keep it. R. Shesheth deduces that 'he must not keep it' means that even if it is sacrificed on his behalf it is not accepted, since it is completely analogous to the case of an unclean person. R. Nahman answers that because R. Akiba holds that you may not slaughter and sprinkle on behalf of a person unclean through a reptile, therefore he learns the case of 'a journey afar off' from that of uncleanness, since the former two are alike in that both are unfit at the time of slaughtering and fit and able at the time of eating. Hence it is true that in R. Akiba's opinion the sacrifice is not accepted' if offered, but R. Nahman holds that you do slaughter and sprinkle for a person unclean through a reptile. Tosaf. adds that R. Shesheth too holds thus, but that in his view R. Akiba learns it from 'a person unclean through the dead, though the cases are not really alike then.
- (6) Plural of zabb and zabah respectively, q.v. Glos.
- (7) Pl. of niddah, q.v. Glos.
- (8) Supra 92b. For if he held that it is not accepted, then this case must be stated for that very teaching.
- (9) So that female lepers, menstruants and women after childbirth are included.
- (10) Num. IX, 10. Heb. וַיִּשְׂא וַיִּשְׂא, the repetition denoting extension. Thus nothing is said about women.
- (11) V. Supra 91b. R. Jose holds that even at the second Passover a company consisting entirely of women may be formed; hence in his view the second Passover is binding upon women. Whereas R. Judah and R. Simeon hold that it is voluntary only.
- (12) Deliberate neglect to keep either when there is the obligation involves kareth. Of course, no man can actually incur kareth twice, but the point is that if a man sinned unwittingly in respect of one but deliberately in respect of the other he incurs kareth. Similarly, where a proselyte becomes converted between the two Passovers and deliberately neglects the second.
- (13) Hence if he inadvertently neglected the first, he does not incur kareth even if he deliberately neglects the second.
- (14) Thus both were exempt from the first Passover, but are in a condition to keep the second.
- (15) He regards it as a separate obligation entirely, even for those who were not subject to the law at all at the first, as in the present instances.
- (16) Hence only he who was subject to the law at the first can keep the second.
- (17) Hence if a person deliberately neglects the first he incurs kareth even if he keeps the second. On the other hand, if he neglects the first unwittingly, he is not liable to kareth even if he deliberately neglects the second, since the second is not an independent obligation apart from the first.
- (18) Num. IX, 13.
- (19) Ibid.
- (20) Ibid. because (Heb. ki) he brought not the offering etc. Ki is variously translated according to the context, v. R.H. 3a. Rabbi renders it 'if'.
- (21) Ibid.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 93b

He holds that megaddef is one who curses¹ the [Divine] Name,² while of him who curses the [Divine] Name It Is written, [Whosoever curseth his God] shall bear his sin,³ and [the meaning of] this 'his sin' is learnt from 'his sin' there: just as there [it means] kareth, so here too, [it means] kareth.

Again, R. Nathan holds: And forbearth to keep, the Passover, that soul shall be cut off' for this ki denotes 'because'⁴ and this is what the Divine Law saith, Because he brought not the offering of the Lord at the first. How does he employ this [phrase] 'that man shall bear his sin'?⁵ — He holds that megaddef is not one who curses the [Divine] Name,⁶ and so [the meaning of] this 'his sin' [written] there is learnt from 'his sin' [written] here; just as [it means] kareth here,⁷ so there too [it means] kareth.

While R. Hanania b. 'Akabia holds [that we translate thus]: 'and forbearth to keep the Passover, that soul shall be cut off';⁸ if [also] he brought not the offering of the Lord in its appointed season, [viz.,] at the second. And how does he employ this 'shall bear his sin'? — As we have stated.⁹

Therefore if [he neglected] deliberately both [Passovers], all agree that he is culpable. If [he neglected] both unwittingly, all agree that he is not culpable. If [he neglected] the first deliberately but the second unwittingly: according to Rabbi and R. Nathan he is culpable; according to R. Hanania b. 'Akabia, he is not culpable. If [he neglected] the first unwittingly but the second deliberately: according to Rabbi he is culpable; according to R. Nathan and R. Hanania b. 'Akabia he is not culpable.

MISHNAH. WHAT IS 'A JOURNEY AFAR OFF'? FROM MODI'IM¹⁰ AND BEYOND, AND THE SAME DISTANCE ON ALL SIDES [OF JERUSALEM]: THIS IS R. AKIBA'S OPINION. R. ELIEZER SAID: FROM THE THRESHOLD OF THE TEMPLE COURT AND WITHOUT. SAID R. JOSE TO HIM: FOR THAT REASON THE HEH IS POINTED¹¹ IN ORDER TO TEACH: NOT BECAUSE IT IS REALLY AFAR OFF, BUT [WHEN ONE IS] FROM THE THRESHOLD OF THE TEMPLE COURT AND WITHOUT [HE IS REGARDED AS BEING 'AFAR OFF'].

G E M A R A. 'Ulla said: From Modi'im to Jerusalem is fifteen miles.¹² He holds as Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in R. Johanan's name: what is an [average] man's journey in a day?¹³ Ten parasangs: five mils from daybreak until the first sparklings of the rising sun, [and] five mils from sunset until the stars appear. This leaves thirty: fifteen from the morning until midday, and fifteen from midday until evening [i.e., sunset]. 'Ulla is consistent with his view, for 'Ulla said: What is 'a journey afar off'? Any place whence a man is unable to enter [Jerusalem] at the time of slaughtering.¹⁴

The Master said: 'Five mils from daybreak until the first sparklings of the rising sun.' Whence do we know it? — Because It is written, And when the morning arose [i.e., at daybreak], then the angels hastened Lot, saying etc.;¹⁵ and it is written, The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot came unto Zoar.,¹⁶ while R. Hanina said: I myself saw that place and it is five mils [from Sodom].

The [above] text [stated]: "'Ulla said, what is "a journey afar off"? Any place whence a man is unable to enter [Jerusalem] at the time of slaughtering.' But Rab Judah maintained: Any place whence one is unable to enter [Jerusalem] at the time of eating. Rabbah said to 'Ulla: on your view there is a difficulty, and on Rab Judah's view there is a difficulty. On your view there is a difficulty, for you say, 'Any place whence a man is unable to enter at the time of slaughtering': yet surely a man unclean through a reptile is unable to enter¹⁷ at the time of slaughtering, yet you say, One slaughters and sprinkles on behalf of a person unclean through a reptile? On Rab Judah's view there is a difficulty, for he says, 'Any place whence one is unable to enter at the time of eating': but surely he who is unclean through a reptile is able to enter at the time of eating, yet he says, One may not slaughter and sprinkle on behalf of a man unclean through a reptile?¹⁸ Said he to him: Neither on my view nor on Rab Judah's view is there a difficulty. On my view there is no difficulty: 'A journey afar off' [is stated] in reference to a clean person, but 'a journey afar off' is not [stated] in reference to an unclean person.¹⁹

(1) Lit., 'blesses', a euphemism for 'curses'

(2) V. Num. XV, 30; he blasphemeth (Heb. megaddef, R.V.: reproacheth) the Lord; and that soul shall be cut off(i.e., kareth). The meaning of megaddef is disputed in Ker. 7b.

(3) Lev. XXIV, 15. From Num. XV, 30 'ye know that he incurs kareth, and therefore that must be the meaning in this verse.

(4) R. Nathan renders 'ki' as 'because'.

(5) According to Rabbi it is necessary, as it refers to the punishment for the neglect of the second. But since R. Nathan relates it to the first, it is superfluous, having been already stated.

(6) But one who takes part in an idolatrous service, e.g., by singing hymns in a heathen Temple, v. Ker. 7b. Consequently, Nun., XV, 30 cannot be identified with Lev. XXIV, 15 (v. notes supra), and so there is nothing to indicate the meaning of 'shall bear his sin' in the latter verse, which refers to blasphemy.

(7) As explicitly stated in the first half of the verse.

(8) Translating ki like Rabbi, except that he connects it with the preceding part of the verse.

(9) In connection with R. Nathan.

(10) Generally known as Modim, a town famous in Jewish history as the residence of Mattathias and his sons, where the Maccabean revolt against Antiochus flared up; it was some fifteen miles N.W. of Jerusalem.

(11) The Heb. for 'a journey afar off' (Num. IX, 10) is רַחֵק רַחֵק the ה (heh) being traditionally written with a dot, thus . Such a point was regarded as a weakening or limitation, as though the word were not really written.

(12) A mil=two thousand cubits, a quarter of a parasang.

(13) From daybreak to nightfall, when the day and night are of equal length, i.e., from six a.m. To six p.m.

(14) I.e., so far, that if a man started walking at midday, which is the earliest time for sacrificing the Passover-offering, he could not reach it by sunset, which is the latest. Taking this statement in conjunction with the preceding calculation, we see that Modim must be fifteen mils from Jerusalem.

(15) Gen. XIX, 15.

(16) Ibid. 23.

(17) Sc. the Temple.

(18) For this controversy v. supra 90b.

(19) V. Num. IX, 13: But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbearth to keep (lit., 'do') the Passover etc. From this we see, (i) that the exemption for a man who is in a 'journey afar off' applies to a clean person, and (ii) that a 'journey (afar off)' is determined by his inability to do the Passover, i.e., to slaughter it. Hence if he is so far away that he cannot reach the Temple Court in time for the slaughtering, he is in a journey afar off'. But an unclean person is exempt because of his uncleanness, which prevents his eating, but not his sacrificing, since that can be done by another acting on his behalf. Moreover, since Scripture specifies one who is 'unclean by reason of a dead body' and does not state one who is unclean through a reptile, it follows that this exemption applies only to such as the former, who are unclean for a long period (seven days) and cannot be fit in the evening, but not to such as the latter, who can be fit to eat in the evening.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 94a

On Rab Judah's view there is no difficulty: When one is unclean through a reptile, the Divine Law relegated him [to the second Passover], for it is written, 'If any man shall be unclean by reason of a dead body': does this not refer [even] to one whose seventh day falls on the eve of Passover, yet even so the Divine Law said: Let him be relegated [to the second].¹

Our Rabbis taught: If he was standing beyond Modi'im and is able to enter by horses and mules, you might think that he is culpable. Therefore it is stated: 'and is not in a journey,'² whereas this man was in a journey.³ If he was standing on the hither side of Modi'im, but could not enter on account of the camels and wagons which held him up,⁴ you might think that he is not culpable. Therefore It is stated, 'and is not in a journey,' and lo, he was not in a journey.⁵

Raba said: The world is six thousand parasangs,⁶ and the thickness of the heaven [rakia'] is one thousand parasangs the first one [of these statements] is a tradition, while the other is [based on] reason. [Thus:] he agrees with Rabbah b. Bar Hanah's dictum in R. Johanan's name: What is an average man's journey in a day? Ten parasangs: from daybreak until the first sparklings of the rising sun five mils, and from sunset until the stars appear five mils: hence the thickness of the heaven is one sixth of the day['s journey].⁷

An objection is raised: Rab Judah said: The thickness of the sky is one tenth of the day's journey. The proof is this: what is an [average] man's journey in a day? Ten parasangs, and from daybreak until the rising sun four mils, [and] from sunset until the stars appear four mils,: hence the thickness of the sky is one tenth of the day[’s journey].⁸ This is a refutation of Raba, and a refutation of ‘Ulla! It is a refutation.⁹ Shall we say that this is [also] a refutation of R. Johanan?-He can answer you: I spoke only of [an average man's journey] in a [complete] day, and it was the Rabbis¹⁰ who erred by calculating [the distance for] pre-dawn and after nightfall.¹¹ Shall we say that this is a refutation of R. Hanina?¹² — No: ‘and [the angels] hastened’¹³ is different —¹⁴

Come and hear: Egypt was four hundred parasangs square. Now Egypt is one sixtieth of Ethiopia [Cush], Ethiopia one sixtieth of the world, the world one sixtieth of the Garden, the Garden one sixtieth of Eden, Eden one sixtieth of the Gehenna: thus the whole world is like a pot lid [in relation] to Gehenna. This is [indeed] a refutation .¹⁵ Come and hear: Tanna debe Eliyahu¹⁶ [taught]: R. Nathan said: The whole of the inhabited world is situate under one star. The proof is that a man looks at a star, [and] when he goes eastward it is opposites [and when he goes] to the four corners of the world it is opposite him. This proves that the whole of the inhabited world is situate under one star. This is indeed a refutation.¹⁷

Come and hear: The Wain [‘Waggon’]¹⁸ is in the north and Scorpio is in the south, the whole of the inhabited world lies between the Wain and Scorpio, and the whole of the inhabited world represents but one hour of the day,¹⁹ for the sun enters [the space above] the inhabited world only for one hour in the day.²⁰ The proof is that at the fifth [hour] the sun is in the east while at the seventh the sun is in the west: [during] half of the sixth and half of the seventh the sun stands overhead all people.²¹ This is [indeed] a refutation. Come and hear: For R. Johanan b. Zakkai said: What answer did the Bath Kol²² give that wicked man [Nebuchadnezzar] when he asserted, ‘I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High’?²³ A Bath Kol came forth and rebuked him: ‘Thou wicked man, son of a wicked man,

(1) V. supra 90b and notes a.l.

(2) Ibid.

(3) As defined in the Mishnah.

(4) He too being on one, and the road was blocked.

(5) He should have completed it on foot.

(6) Rashi: in diameter from east to west.

(7) The periods from daybreak until the rising sun is in the heavens, and again from sunset until the stars appear, were regarded as the time during which the sun was passing through the sky, which was conceived as a solid vault stretched out above the earth. Hence it follows from Rabbah's dictum that since five mils can be walked in each of these two periods, while thirty mils can be walked during the day excluding these periods (ten parasangs=fifty mils), the thickness of the sky is one sixth of the world's diameter.

(8) The one tenth is of the inclusive figure, i.e., four in forty, whereas one sixth mentioned before was exclusive: six in thirty. But in any case they disagree.

(9) Both (for ‘Ulla v. supra 93b) hold that five mils can be walked from daybreak until the sun is in the heavens, which certainly cannot be reconciled with the present statement.

(10) I.e., ‘Ulla and R. Johanan.

(11) He had merely stated that an average man can walk ten parasangs in a day, but Raba and ‘Ulla had erred by adding that one travels five mils in the period stated; though most people do indeed walk five mils by the time the sun is in the heavens, that is because they generally start a little before dawn; similarly in the evening they continue their journey a little after nightfall.

(12) Supra 93b.

(13) Gen. XIX, 15.

(14) They would naturally cover a greater distance.

(15) For according to the present calculation the surface area of the world is 576,000,000 sq. parasangs (thus: 400 X 400 X 60 x 60) whereas according to Raba, even if the 6000 is squared, we have only 36,000,000 sq. parasangs.

(16) This is a Midrash consisting of two parts, 'Seder Eliyahu Rabbah' and 'Seder Eliyahu Zuta'. According to the Talmud Keth. 106a the Prophet Elijah recited this Midrash to R. 'Anan, a Babylonian Amora of the third century. Scholars are agreed that the work in its present form received its final redaction in the tenth century C.E., though they are not agreed as to where it was written. V. Bacher, Monatschrift, XXIII, 267f; idem in R.E.J. XX, 144-146; Friedmann, Introduction to his edition of Seder Eliyahu; v. Keth., Sonc. ed. p. 680, n. 2.

(17) And since there are countless stars in the sky, it follows that the sky is immeasurably greater than the earth, not, as Raba says, only one sixth.

(18) The Great Bear.

(19) The sun in travelling through the sky takes one hour only to travel across the actual breadth of the world.

(20) As explained in the previous note.

(21) "Wherever they are; thus it is during this hour only that the sun is actually above the world. This too proves that the sky is infinitely larger than the earth.

(22) V. Glos.

(23) Isa. XIV, 14.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 94b

descendant of the wicked Nimrod, who incited the whole world to rebel [himrid]¹ against Me during his reign!² How many are the years of man? Seventy years; and if by reason of strength, eighty years, for it is said, The days of our years are threescore years and ten, or even by reason of strength fourscore years.³ Now from earth to heaven is a five hundred years journey, the thickness of heaven is a five hundred years' journey, and between the first heaven and the next lies a five hundred years' journey, and similarly between each heaven,⁴ 'Yet thou shalt be brought down to the nether-world, to the uttermost parts of the pit' —⁵ This is [indeed] a refutation.

Our Rabbis taught: The Sages of Israel maintain: The Galga⁶ is stationary [fixed], while the mazzaloth⁷ revolve; while the Sages of the nations of the world maintain: The Galgal revolves and the mazzaloth are stationary.⁸ Rabbi observed: This disproves their view [viz.,] we never find the Wain in the south or Scorpio in the north.⁹ To this R. Aha b. Jacob demurred: Perhaps it is like the pivot¹⁰ of a millstone,¹¹ or like the door socket?

The Sages of Israel maintain: The sun travels beneath the sky by day and above the sky at night; while the Sages of the nations of the world maintain: It travels beneath the sky by day and below the earth at night. Said Rabbi: And their view is preferable to ours, for the wells are cold by day but warm at night.¹²

It was taught, R. Nathan said: In summer the sun travels in the heights of the heaven,¹³ therefore the whole world is hot while the wells [springs] are cold; in winter the sun travels at the lower ends of the sky,¹⁴ therefore the whole world is cold while the wells are hot.

Our Rabbis taught: The sun travels over four courses: [during] Nisan,¹⁵ Iyar and Sivan, it travels over the mountains, in order to melt the snows; [in] Tammuz, Ab and Elul, over the inhabited world, to ripen the fruits; [in] Tishri, Marheshwan and Kislev, over seas, to dry up the rivers; in Tebeth, Shebat and Adar, through the wilderness, so as not to dry up the seeds [in the ground]. R. ELIEZER SAID: FROM THE THRESHOLD etc. Even though he can enter, and we do not say to him, 'Arise and enter'? but it surely was taught: An uncircumcised Jew who did not circumcise himself is punished by kareth: this is the opinion of R. Eliezer? — Said Abaye: 'A journey afar off' [is stated] in respect of a clean person, but 'a journey afar off' is not [stated] in respect of an unclean person.¹⁶ Raba said: It is [a controversy of] Tannaim. For it was taught, R. Eliezer said: Distance of place is stated in connection with the Passover, and distance of place is stated in connection with tithe:¹⁷ just as there [it means] without [the boundaries of] its eating,¹⁸ so here too it means outside [the place of] its eating.¹⁹ R. Jose son of R. Judah said on R. Eliezer's authority: [It means] outside [the place] where it is sacrificed.²⁰ With whom does the following dictum of R. Isaac son of R. Joseph agree. [viz.:] In respect of those who are unclean, decide by the majority who are standing in the Temple Court.²¹ With whom [does it agree]? With R. Jose son of R. Judah, as he stated [the law] on R. Eliezer's authority.²²

SAID R. JOSE TO HIM, THEREFORE etc. It was taught, R. Jose the Galilean said: [BY] 'a journey afar off' I may understand a distance of two or three days: but when it is said, and is not in a journey, it teaches that from the threshold of the Temple Court and without is designated a journey

²³

MISHNAH

- (1) This is a play on the name Nimrod, deriving it from marad, to rebel.
- (2) According to Talmudic tradition Nimrod instigated the building of the tower of Babel to storm heaven.
- (3) Ps. XC, 10.
- (4) According to the ancient tradition there were seven heavens.
- (5) Isa. XIV, 15. [In Hag. 13a the distance is further extended and according to the calculation given there amounts to a total of 4,096,000 years' journey, which at the rate of eighty rabbinic mils in 24 hours (v. supra) amounts to 119,603,200,000 say — 120,000 million mils, which shows that the Rabbis had a fair idea of stellar distance. Cf. Feldman, W. M., Rabbinical Mathematics, p. 213.]
- (6) ['Wheel sphere' probably the celestial sphere, v. n. 7.]
- (7) Here fixed stars.
- (8) [This will probably represent the Ptolemaic view according to which the stars are fixed on the surface of the celestial sphere which moves round the earth carrying the stars with it, v. op. cit. p. 71.]
- (9) But if the Galgal revolves, the mazzaloth too would change their position. The view of the Jewish Sages is difficult to explain.
- (10) Rashi. 'Aruch: the socket.
- (11) "Which remains fixed in its place.
- (12) [On this passage v. op. cit. p. 72.]
- (13) Above the earth.
- (14) Not above the earth but at its side.
- (15) The first month of the Jewish civil year, commencing some time in March. The remaining eleven months are enumerated in order.
- (16) v. supra 93b. Similarly, a man must make himself fit for the Passover, and otherwise he incurs kareth. But it is not his duty to bring himself within the area of obligation. Tosaf. points out an obvious difficulty: if he is uncircumcised or unclean and standing without the Temple court, as he must be in that case, he must make himself fit and keep the Passover on penalty of kareth; whereas if he is already circumcised or clean and standing without he is exempt! Tosaf explains it with the principle laid down by R. Zera, v. Yeb. 104b.
- (17) Deut. XIV, 24 q.v.
- (18) The second tithe must be eaten in Jerusalem. Anywhere outside Jerusalem is regarded as a distant place and the law of redemption applies.
- (19) When Scripture states that if a man is on a journey afar off he is exempt, it means if he is anywhere outside Jerusalem, in the whole of which the Passover-offering was eaten. Hence if he is merely outside the Temple Court but in Jerusalem he is not exempt.
- (20) viz., the Temple Court. Thus we have a controversy of Tannaim as to R. Eliezer's view.
- (21) when the majority of those in the Temple Court are unclean, the Passover is sacrificed in uncleanness (supra 79a). But those who are not in the Temple Court are disregarded entirely. as they are on a 'journey afar off'.
- (22) For according to the first Tanna a majority of all in Jerusalem would be required.
- (23) Since 'afar off' is not mentioned here.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 95a

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE FIRST PASSOVER AND THE SECOND? THE FIRST IS SUBJECT TO THE PROHIBITION OF [LEAVEN] SHALL NOT BE SEEN AND [LEAVEN] SHALL NOT BE FOUND;¹ WHILE AT THE SECOND [A MAN MAY HAVE] LEAVENED AND UNLEAVENED BREAD IN THE HOUSE WITH HIM. THE FIRST REQUIRES [THE RECITING OF] HALLEL WHEN IT [THE PASCHAL LAMB] IS EATEN, WHEN THE SECOND DOES NOT REQUIRE HALLEL WHEN IT IS EATEN. BUT BOTH REQUIRE [THE RECITING OF] HALLEL WHEN THEY ARE SACRIFICED, AND THEY ARE EATEN ROAST WITH UNLEAVENED BREAD AND BITTER HERBS, AND THEY OVERRIDE THE SABBATH.

GEMARA. Our rabbis taught: According to all the statute of the Passover they shall keep it:² the Writ refers to the ordinance[s] pertaining to itself.³ How do we know the ordinance[s] indirectly connected with itself?⁴ Because it is said, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.⁵ You might think that regulations which are not even indirectly connected with itself [are included too]; therefore it is stated, nor shall they break a bone thereof:⁶ just as the breaking of a bone stands out as an ordinance pertaining to itself, so is every ordinance pertaining to itself [included].⁷ Issi b. Judah said: 'they shall keep it' [implies that] the Writ treats of regulations pertaining to itself.⁸

The Master said: 'You might think that regulations which are not even indirectly connected with itself [are included too]' — But surely you have said that the Writ refers to ordinance[s] pertaining to itself?—This is what he means: now that you have quoted, 'they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, which proves that 'they shall keep it'⁹ is not exact, then say that it is like a particularization and a general proposition, whereby the general proposition is accounted as adding to the particularization, so that even all regulations [are included]:¹⁰ hence he informs us [that It is not so].

Now Issi b. Judah, how does he utilize this [law concerning a] bone?—He requires it for [teaching that] both a bone which contains marrow and a bone which does not contain marrow [are meant].¹¹ And the Rabbis: how do they utilize this [verse] 'they shall keep it'?—they require it to teach that one may not kill the Passover-offering on behalf of a single person, so that as far as it is possible to procure [another unclean person] we do so.¹² Our Rabbis taught: 'According to all the statute of the Passover they shall keep it': you might think, just as the first is subject to the prohibition of [leaven] 'shall not be seen' and 'shall not be found', so is the second subject to the prohibition of [leaven] shall not be seen and shall not be found: therefore it is stated, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.¹³ Again, I know it only of positive precepts;¹⁴ how do we know it of negative precepts? Because It is stated, They shall leave none of it unto the morning.¹⁵ Also, I know it only of a negative precept modified to a positive precept;¹⁶ how do we know it of an absolute negative precept? Because It is stated, 'and they shall not break a bone thereof': [hence] just as the particularization is explicitly stated as a positive precept, and a negative precept modified to a positive precept, and an absolute negative precept, so every positive precept, and a negative precept modified to a positive precept, and complete negative precept [are included].¹⁷ What is included in the general proposition as applied to '[they shall eat it] with unleavened bread and bitter herbs'?—Roast with fire.¹⁸ What does it exclude in its particularization?¹⁹—The putting away of leaven. May I [not] reverse it? — [The inclusion of] a precept pertaining to itself is preferable. What is included in the general proposition as bearing on 'they shall leave none of it unto the morning'?— thou shall not carry forth aught [of the flesh abroad out of the house],²⁰ (which is similar thereto, since the one is disqualified through being nothar,²¹ while the other is disqualified through going out [of its permitted boundary]).²² What does it exclude by its particularization?—[Leaven] 'shall not be seen and 'shall not be found,' (which is similar thereto, for the one does not involve flagellation, since it is a negative precept modified to a positive precept, while the other does not involve flagellation, since It is a negative precept modified to a positive precept.)²³ May I [not] reverse it?- [The inclusion of] a precept pertaining to itself is preferable.

What is included in the general proposition as bearing on 'they shall not break a bone thereof'?

- (1) Ex. XII, 19; Deut. XVI, 4
- (2) Num. IX, 12 with reference to the second Passover.
- (3) E.g.. how the sacrifice shall be prepared, that it is to be eaten roast etc.; but regulations not directly pertaining to itself, e.g.. the removing of leaven, are not included.
- (4) E.g., that it is to be eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.
- (5) Num. IX, 11.
- (6) Ibid. 12.
- (7) But not others.
- (8) So that 'nor shall they break a bone thereof' is unnecessary for that purpose.
- (9) 'It' might imply that only the regulations directly bearing on the sacrifice itself are meant, and therefore exclude the eating of unleavened bread and bitter herbs.
- (10) This is a general principle of exegesis that if a law is first stated in a particular instance and then in a general form, the former does not limit the latter but on the contrary the latter generalizes the former, so that all instances are included. Here a particular instance of similarity between the first Passover and the second is stated in v. 11 while in v. 12 a general law is stated that the two are alike in all respects.
- (11) Supra 85a.
- (12) Even if we have to defile a person at the first Passover, so that there may be at least two at the second; v. supra 91a.
- (13) V. p. 508. they are alike only in respect of the regulations pertaining to or connected with itself, just like the particular case which is stated.
- (14) 'They shall eat it' etc. is a positive precept, and therefore teaches that all the positive precepts applicable to the first Passover are also binding upon the second, e.g., the precept to eat it roast.
- (15) Num. IX, 12; hence the deduction stated in the preceding note applies to negative precepts too.
- (16) A prohibition which if violated must be repaired by a positive act. Thus 'and ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning' (Ex. XII, 10) is followed by 'but that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire'. Technically such an injunction is less stringent than an ordinary negative precept and does not involve flagellation.
- (17) Hence the general proposition, 'according to all the statute etc., is applied separately to each of these three particular laws, teaching that all laws which partake of their nature are included.
- (18) V. n . 2.
- (19) For just as the general proposition includes laws unstated, so the particularization teaches that some laws are excluded, as otherwise the former alone would suffice.
- (20) Ex. XII, 46
- (21) V. Glos.
- (22) Var. lec. omits the bracketed passage.
- (23) If flesh of the Passover sacrifice is left over, it must be burnt, while if leaven is not completely removed before Passover, so that it is 'seen' or 'found', it must be destroyed whenever discovered. Hence both of these negative precepts are modified to positive precepts, and he who violates them is not flagellated.-Var. lec. omits the bracketed passage.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 95b

— Eat not of it half-roast.¹ By its particularization what does it exclude? Thou shall not offer the blood of My sacrifice with leavened bread.² May I [not] reverse it?- [The inclusion of] a precept pertaining to itself is preferable.

THE FIRST REQUIRES [THE RECITING OF] HALLEL WHEN IT IS EATEN etc. Whence do we know it?-Said R. Johanan on the authority of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: Scripture saith, Ye shall have a song as in the night when a feast is hallowed:³ the night that is hallowed for a feast [Festival] requires [the reciting of] Hallel ['Song'], while the night which is not hallowed for a feast does not require [the reciting of] Hallel.

BUT BOTH REQUIRE [THE RECITING OF] HALLEL WHEN THEY ARE SACRIFICED etc. What is the reason?-I can either say, [Scripture] excludes the night, but not the day; or alternatively, is it possible that Israel sacrifice their Passover-offerings or take their palm-branches⁴ without reciting Hallel!

AND THEY ARE EATEN ROAST etc. Only the Sabbath [do they override], but not uncleanness.⁵ our Mishnah does not agree with R. Judah, for it was taught: It [the second Passover] overrides the Sabbath, but it does not override uncleanness; R. Judah maintained: It overrides uncleanness too. What is the reason of the first Tanna?-Seeing that I have suspended him [from the first Passover] on account of uncleanness, shall he after all keep it in uncleanness?⁶ And R. Judah?⁷ — The Torah sought [means] for him to keep it in cleanness; yet if he was not privileged [thus], he must keep it in uncleanness. Our Rabbis taught: The first Passover overrides the Sabbath, [and] the second Passover overrides the Sabbath; the first Passover overrides uncleanness, [and] the second Passover overrides uncleanness; the first Passover requires the spending of the night [in Jerusalem], [and] the second Passover requires the spending of the night [in Jerusalem]. ‘[The second Passover] overrides uncleanness . With whom [does this agree]? — With R. Judah. But according to R. Judah, does it require the spending of the night [in Jerusalem]? Surely it was taught, R. Judah said: How do we know that the second Passover does not require the spending of the night [in Jerusalem]? Because it is said, and thou shalt turn in the morning, and go unto thy tents;⁸ and it is written, six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread:⁹ that which is eaten six [days] requires the spending of the night [in Jerusalem], but that which is not eaten six [days] does not require the spending of the night [in Jerusalem]?¹⁰ -There is [a controversy of] two Tannaim as to R. Judah's opinion.

MISHNAH. [WITH REGARD TO] THE PASSOVER-OFFERING WHICH COMES IN UNCLEANNESS, ZABIN AND ZABOTH, MENSTRUANT WOMEN AND WOMEN AFTER CONFINEMENT MUST NOT EAT THEREOF, YET IF THEY DID EAT THEY ARE EXEMPT FROM KARETH;¹¹ BUT R. ELIEZER EXEMPTS [THEM] EVEN [OF THE KARETH NORMALLY INCURRED] FOR ENTERING THE SANCTUARY.

G E M A R A. Our Rabbis taught: If zabin and zaboth, menstruant women and women after confinement ate of the Passover-offering which was sacrificed in uncleanness, you might think that they are culpable, therefore it is stated, Every one that is clean may eat flesh [of sacrifices]. But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace-offerings, that pertain unto the Lord, having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off:¹² with regard to that which is eaten by clean persons, you are culpable on its account on the score of uncleanness, but as to that which is not eaten by clean persons, you are not culpable on its account on the score of ‘uncleanness —¹³ R. Eliezer said: If zabin and lepers¹⁴ forced their way through and entered the Temple Court at a Passover-offering which came in uncleanness, you might think that they are culpable; therefore it is stated , [command the children of Israel,] that they send out of the camp every leper, and everyone that hath an issue [zab], and whosoever,- is unclean by the dead:¹⁵ when those who are unclean by the dead are sent out, zabin and lepers are sent out; when those who are unclean by the dead are not sent out, zabin and lepers are not sent out.

R. Joseph asked: What if persons unclean through the dead forced their way in and entered the Temple [hekal]¹⁶ at a Passoveroffering which came in uncleanness? [Do we say,] since the uncleanness of the Temple Court was permitted, the uncleanness of the Temple [hekal] too was permitted;¹⁷ or perhaps, what was permitted was permitted, while what was not permitted was not permitted? Said Raba: Scripture saith, ‘that they send out of the camp,’ [implying] even from part of the camp.¹⁸ Others maintain. Raba said: Scripture saith, without [mi-huz] the camp shall ye send them:¹⁹ only where²⁰ ‘without the camp shall ye send them,’ is applicable, is ‘that they send out of the camp' applicable.²¹

A. Joseph asked: What if persons unclean by the dead forced their way through [to the altar] and ate the emurim: of a Passover-offering which came in uncleanness?²²

(1) Ex. XII, 9.

(2) Ex. XXXIV, 25.

(3) Isa. XXX, 29.

(4) On the Feast of Tabernacles, v. Lev. XXIII, 40.

(5) If the majority of those who should keep the second Passover are unclean, the sacrifice is not brought.

(6) Surely not.

(7) How does he rebut this argument?

(8) Deut. XVI, 7' 'Thy tents' is understood to refer to tents pitched without Jerusalem; but it cannot mean home, firstly because one might not travel on a Festival, and secondly because the pilgrimage burnt-offering was yet to be offered. The phrase 'in the morning' teaches that the night was to be spent in Jerusalem, even after the Passover sacrifice was consumed.

(9) Ibid. 8.

(10) I.e., only the Passover-offering which necessitates the eating of unleavened bread six days (actually seven; v. infra 120a), and prohibits leaven necessitates the spending of the night in Jerusalem; the first Passover alone fulfils this condition, but not the second. — Thus R. Judah is self-contradictory.

(11) The usual penalty for eating sacred flesh in a state of personal uncleanness. But if they actually entered the Temple too, they are liable to kareth on that account.

(12) Lev. VII, 19f.

(13) Hence when the Passover-offering comes in uncleanness, though zabin etc. may not eat of it, they nevertheless do not incur kareth.

(14) So the text as emended and Supra 67b.

(15) Num. V, 2.

(16) The hall containing the golden altar; the Temple proper, as opposed to the Temple court. Even priests might enter it only when necessary; here entry was unnecessary, since the offering was sacrificed in the Temple Court.

(17) I.e., no penalty is incurred on account of uncleanness.

(18) Even when they are not sent out of the entire camp, as here, they are sent out of the part where their presence is not necessary; hence if they enter it they incur kareth.

(19) Num. V, 3; 'mi-huz' implies right outside the whole of it.

(20) Lit., 'read in his case'.

(21) Hence, since he is not sent out of the whole camp, he is not liable.

(22) The emurim were burnt on the altar, and were therefore forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 96a

[Do we say,] since the uncleanness of the flesh was permitted, the uncleanness of the emurim too was permitted;¹ or perhaps, what was permitted was permitted, and what was not permitted was not permitted? Said Raba, Consider: whence is the uncleanness of emurim included?² From the uncleanness of the flesh, for it is written, That pertain onto the Lord,³ which includes emurim: [hence] wherever the uncleanness of the flesh is interdicted, the uncleanness of the emurim is interdicted: while wherever [the interdict of] the uncleanness of the flesh is absent, [the interdict of] the uncleanness of the emurim is absent.

R. Zera asked: Where did they burn the emurim of the Passover offering of Egypt?⁴ -Said Abaye, And who is to tell us that it was not prepared roast?⁵ Moreover, surely R. Joseph learned: Three altars were there [for the sprinkling of the blood] viz., the lintel and the two doorposts.⁶ Further, was there nothing else?⁷

M I S H N A H. WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE PASSOVER-OFFERING OF EGYPT AND THE PASSOVER-OFFERING OF [SUBSEQUENT] GENERATIONS?⁸ THE PASSOVER-OFFERING IN EGYPT WAS TAKEN ON THE TENTH [OF NISAN],⁹ [ITS BLOOD] REQUIRED SPRINKLING WITH A BUNCH OF HYSSOP ON THE LINTEL AND ON THE TWO DOOR-POSTS, AND IT WAS EATEN IN HASTE ON ONE NIGHT; WHEREAS THE PASS OVER- OFFERING OF [SUBSEQUENT] GENERATIONS IS KEPT THE WHOLE SEVEN [DAYS].¹⁰

G E M A R A. Whence do we know it?—Because it is written, Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying: in the tenth day of this month they shall take [to them every man a lamb]:¹¹ the taking of this one was on the tenth, whereas the taking of the Passover-offering of [subsequent] generations is not on the tenth. If so, [when it is written,] And ye shall keep it [mishmereth] until the fourteenth day of this month,¹² does that too [intimate], this requires a four days' examination before slaughtering,¹³ but no other requires examination? Surely it was taught, The son of Bag Bag¹⁴ said: How do we know that the tamid¹⁵ requires a four days' examination before slaughtering? Because it is said, Ye shall observe [tishmeru] to offer unto Me in its due season,¹⁶ while elsewhere it is said, And ye shall keep it [mishmereth] until the fourteenth [etc.]:¹⁷ just as there it requires a four days' examination before slaughtering, so here too it requires a four days examination before slaughtering? — There it is different, because tishmeru ['ye shall observe'] is written.¹⁸ And thus [in connection with] the annual Passover-offering it is indeed written, then thou shalt keep this service in this month,¹⁹ [which intimates] that all the services of this month [in subsequent generations] should be like this.²⁰ Hence that [word] 'this'²¹ is to exclude the second Passover, which is like itself.²²

But [again] if so, when it is written, and they shall eat the flesh in this night,²³ does that too [teach] that this is eaten at night, but another is not eaten at night?²⁴ -Scripture saith, then thou shalt keep this service [etc.].²⁵ Then what is the purpose of 'this'?- [It is required] for [the exegesis] of R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah and A. Akiba [respectively].²⁶

But if so, when it is written, But no uncircumcised person shall eat thereof,²⁷ does that too [teach] that he may not eat 'thereof,' yet he may eat of the Passover-offering of [subsequent] generations?-[No, for] Scripture saith, 'Then thou shalt keep [this service etc.].' Then what is the purpose of 'thereof'?- Thereof he must not eat, but he eats unleavened bread and the bitter herbs. But if so, when it is written, There shall no alien eat thereof,²⁸ is it the case there too that he must not eat thereof, yet he eats of the Passover-offering of [subsequent] generations? — Scripture saith, 'Then thou shalt keep [etc.].' Then what is the purpose of 'thereof'?- In that case only ['thereof'] does apostasy disqualify, but apostasy does not disqualify in the case of terumah — Now it is necessary that an uncircumcised person should be stated, and it is necessary that an alien should be stated. For if the Divine Law stated an uncircumcised person, [I would say that he is disqualified] because he is repulsive, but an alien is not repulsive [so] I would say [that he is] not [excluded] from the Passover-offering; hence [an alien] is necessary. And if we were informed about an alien, [I would argue that he is disqualified] because his heart is not toward Heaven, but [as for] an uncircumcised person, whose heart is toward Heaven,²⁹ I would say [that he is] not [excluded]. Thus both are necessary.

But if so, [when it is written,] A sojourner [toshab] and a hired servant [sakir] shall not eat thereof,³⁰ does that too [intimate] that he must not eat thereof, but he does eat of the annual Passover? — Scripture saith, 'Then thou shalt keep [etc.].' Then what is the purpose of 'thereof'?- Only in this case does apostasy disqualify, but apostasy does not disqualify from terumah.³¹ But if so, [when it is written, But every man's servant that is bought for money,] when thou hast circumcised him, then shall he eat thereof,³² — does that too [intimate] that he must not eat thereof, but he does eat of the annual Passover? — Scripture saith, 'then thou shalt keep [etc.].' Then what is the purpose of 'thereof' [bo]? Only in this case [bo] is the circumcision of his males and his slaves indispensable,³³ but the circumcision of his males and his slaves is not indispensable in the case of terumah. But if so, when it is written, Neither shall ye break a bone thereof,³⁴ does that too [intimate] that he may not break [a bone] thereof, but he may break [a bone] of the annual Passover?-Scripture saith, 'then thou shalt keep [etc.]'. Then what is the purpose of 'thereof'? 'Thereof' [indicates] of a fit [sacrifice], but not of an unfit [one].³⁵

But if so, when it is written, Eat not of it half-roast,³⁶ [does that too intimate,] of it you may not eat [half-roast], but you may eat half-roast of the annual Passover-offering?-Scripture saith, 'then thou shalt keep etc.' Then what is the purpose of 'of it'?- For the teaching of Rabbah in R. Isaac's name.³⁷

AND WAS EATEN IN HASTE etc. How do we know it?- Because Scripture saith, and ye shall eat it in haste:³⁸ 'it' was eaten in haste, but no other was eaten in haste.

AND THE ANNUAL PASSOVER-OFFERING IS KEPT THE WHOLE SEVEN [DAYS] etc. To what does this refer? If we say, to the Passover-offering, — is there then a Passover-offering all the seven [days]?

-
- (1) So that liability on eating is not incurred on the grounds of their uncleanness, although there still remains the liability for the eating of emurim which are reserved for the altar.
 - (2) Whence do we learn that for eating emurim in an unclean state liability is incurred? — Actually only the uncleanness of the flesh is explicitly mentioned.
 - (3) Lev. VII, 20.
 - (4) No mention is made of an altar there.
 - (5) And eaten.
 - (6) I.e., there were three places for the sprinkling of the blood, corresponding to the altar in the Temple. But there was no altar for the burning of the emurim.
 - (7) In which the Passover-offering in Egypt differed from those offered in the Temple. Surely there were many points of difference (v. next Mishnah): why then assume that in this respect they were alike?
 - (8) I.e., the annual Passover.
 - (9) Its owner had to take it four days beforehand, declaring, 'This is for the Passover-offering'.
 - (10) This is explained in the Gemara.
 - (11) Ex. XII, 3.
 - (12) Ibid. 6.
 - (13) It was taken on the tenth and examined every day until the fourteenth for a blemish.
 - (14) V. Aboth, Sonc. ed. p. 76, n. 7
 - (15) V. Glos.
 - (16) Num. XXVIII, 2.
 - (17) Tishmeru and mishmereth have the same root.
 - (18) Hence the animal must be examined daily for four days before it is sacrificed, and the same applies to the annual Passover-offering, though the latter is not actually declared to be taken for that purpose.
 - (19) Ex. XIII, 5.
 - (20) I.e., all the regulations of the Egyptian Passover hold good for the annual Passover too, and this includes the four days' examination. The special 'taking' however has been excluded by the exegesis above.
 - (21) In the verse, 'and ye shall keep it until the fourteenth day of this month'.
 - (22) Just as the Egyptian Passover was only one day, so is the annual second Passover of one day's duration only, and it is logical that 'this' should exclude another Passover which is similar to itself. Hence it teaches that the animal sacrificed at the second Passover does not require a four days' examination.
 - (23) Ex. XII, 8.
 - (24) Surely not-the annual Passover-offering was of course eaten at night.
 - (25) Ex. XIII, 5.
 - (26) According to the former, to teach that it may be eaten until midnight only; according to the latter, to show that it may not be eaten two nights; v. Ber. 9a.

(27) Ibid. XII, 48.

(28) Ibid. 43. By 'alien' is understood not a non-Jew but a Jewish apostate, whose actions have alienated him from God.

(29) For this is understood to refer to one whose brothers died through circumcision, so that he fears the operation, but would otherwise have it performed.

(30) Ex. XII, 45.

(31) This seems quite unintelligible; Rashi deletes the whole passage on other grounds, observing that the answer is in any case pointless. Tosaf. in Yeb. 71 s.v. ב defends the present reading.

(32) Ibid. 44.

(33) The master may not partake of the Passover-offering until the males of his household are circumcised.

(34) Ex. XII, 46.

(35) V. supra 70a and 83a.

(36) Ibid. 9.

(37) Viz., that an uncircumcised person may not eat of tithe; v. Yeb. 74a.

(38) Ibid. 11.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 96b

— Rather [it must refer] to leaven. Hence it follows that at the Passover of Egypt [leaven was forbidden] one night and no more; but surely it was taught, R. Jose the Galilean said: How do we know that at the Passover of Egypt the [prohibition of] leaven was in force one day only? Because it is said, There shall no leavened bread be eaten¹ and in proximity [thereto] is written, This day ye go forth!² -Rather this is its meaning: [The Passover-offering is kept] one night, and the same law applies to the annual Passover-offering; while [the prohibition of] leaven [was in force] the whole day, whereas at the Passover-offering of [subsequent] generations [the interdict of leaven] holds good for the entire seven [days].

MISHNAH. R. JOSHUA SAID: I HAVE HEARD [FROM MY TEACHERS] THAT THE SUBSTITUTE OF A PASSOVER-OFFERING³ IS OFFERED,⁴ AND THAT THE SUBSTITUTE OF A PASSOVER-OFFERING IS NOT OFFERED,⁵ AND I CANNOT EXPLAIN IT.⁶ SAID R. AKIBA, I WILL EXPLAIN IT: THE PASSOVER-OFFERING WHICH WAS FOUND BEFORE THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING MUST BE LEFT TO GRAZE UNTIL IT BECOMES UNFIT,⁷ BE SOLD, AND ONE BRINGS A PEACE-OFFERING FOR ITS MONEY; AND THE SAME APPLIES TO ITS SUBSTITUTE. [IF FOUND] AFTER THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER, IT IS OFFERED AS A PEACE-OFFERING, AND ITS SUBSTITUTE LIKEWISE.⁸

G E M A R A. BUT LET HIM SAY, The Passover-offering is offered, and the Passover-offering is not offered?⁹ -He informs us this, [viz.,] that there is a substitute of a Passover-offering which is not offered [as a peace-offering].¹⁰ It was stated: Rabbah said: We learned, Before slaughtering and after slaughtering;¹¹ R. Zera maintained: We learned, Before midday and after midday.¹² But according to R. Zera, surely he teaches, BEFORE THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING?-SAY: BEFORE THE TIME OF THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING,¹³

This is dependent on Tannaim: The Passover which is found before slaughtering must graze [etc.]; [if found] after slaughtering, it is offered. R. Eleazar said: [If found] before midday it must graze [etc.]; after midday, it is offered.

[IF IT IS FOUND] AFTER THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER, HE BRINGS IT AS A PEACE-OFFERING etc. Raba¹⁴ said: They learned this only if it was found after the slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it after the slaughtering. But if it was found before the slaughtering while he substituted [another] for it after the slaughtering, its substitute derives from the power of rejected sanctity, and it cannot be offered.¹⁵ Abaye raised an objection against him: If [he bring] a lamb [for his offering' etc.]:¹⁶ for what purpose is 'if [he bring] a lamb' stated? To include the substitute of a Passover-offering after Passover, [teaching] that it is offered as a peace-offering. How is it meant? If we say that it was found after the slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it after the slaughtering, then it is obvious:¹⁷ why do I require a verse? Hence it must surely apply where it was found before slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it after slaughtering?¹⁸ — No: in truth it applies where it was found after slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it after slaughtering, while the verse is a mere support.¹⁹

Then for what [purpose] does the verse come?²⁰ -For what was taught: '[If he bring] a lamb [etc.]': this is to include the Passover-offering, in respect of its fat tail.²¹ When it is stated, 'If [he bring] a lamb,' this is to include [an animal] more than a year old [dedicated for] a Passover-offering²² and a peace-offering which comes in virtue of a Passover-offering²³, in respect of all the regulations of the peace-offering, [viz.,] that they require laying [of the hands],²⁴ libations, and the waving of the breast and shoulder. Again, when it states, and if [his offering be] a goat,²⁵ it breaks across the subject [and] teaches of a goat that it does not require [the burning of the] fat tail [on the altar].²⁶

Others recite it [Raba's dictum] in reference to the first clause: THE PASSOVER-OFFERING WHICH WAS FOUND BEFORE THE SLAUGHTERING OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING MUST GRAZE UNTIL IT BECOMES UNFIT, BE SOLD, AND ONE BRINGS A PEACE-OFFERING FOR ITS MONEY, AND THE SAME APPLIES TO ITS SUBSTITUTE. Said Raba, They learned [this] only where It was found before the slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it before the slaughtering. But if it was found before the slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it after the slaughtering, it is offered as a peace-offering. What is the reason? The slaughtering [of the Passover-offering] stamps [with its sanctity] only something that is eligible therefor, [but] it does not stamp [with its sanctity] that which is not eligible therefor.²⁷

Abaye raised an objection against him: 'If [he bring] a lamb [etc.]': what is its purpose? To include the substitute of a Passover-offering after Passover, [teaching] that it is offered as a peace-offering.

(1) Ibid. XIII, 3.

(2) Ibid. 4; v. supra p. 130, n. 9. Thus it was prohibited the whole day, not during the night only.

(3) When an animal is dedicated for a sacrifice, another must not be declared as a substitute for it; if it is, both animals are holy, the holiness of the second being of the same nature as that of the first. But the substitute of a Passover-offering cannot be offered as such, but must be kept until after the Festival. Normally if a Passover-offering is not sacrificed at the proper time, e.g., if it was lost, it is subsequently sacrificed as a peace-offering.

(4) As a peace-offering, after Passover.

(5) As a peace-offering, but must graze until it becomes blemished, whereupon it is redeemed.

(6) When it is offered and when it is not.

(7) Through a blemish.

(8) The animal originally dedicated for the Passover was lost, and another was dedicated in its stead. Now if it was found again before the second was slaughtered or before the time of slaughtering the Passover in general (the exact meaning is disputed in the Gemara), the fact that it was present at the time of slaughtering stamps it as a Passover, and by not slaughtering it, one has rejected it, as it were, with his own hands. Consequently, it can no longer be offered itself, but must be sold, etc. If after finding it he substituted another animal for it, that too is governed by the same law, as stated in n. I. But if it was found after the second was killed, the time of the slaughtering has not stamped it with the name of a Passover-offering, nor has it been rejected therefrom. Consequently, it is brought itself after the Festival as a peace-offering.

(9) Why does R. Joshua speak about the substitute of a Passover: surely he could say the same about the Passover itself?

(10) For I might otherwise think that since the substitute cannot be sacrificed as a Passover-offering, it is as though he dedicated it in the first place for a peaceoffering, and therefore must itself be offered as such in all cases, irrespective of what happens to the original. Hence he informs us that where the original cannot be offered, the substitute too cannot be offered.

(11) I.e., if it was found before or after the second was actually slaughtered.

(12) The time for slaughtering the Passover is from midday until evening. R. Zera maintains that if it is still unfound by midday, it can no longer be stamped as a Passover-offering even if it is found before the second is actually slaughtered, and therefore is subsequently sacrificed itself as a peace-offering.

(13) This does not emend the Mishnah but rather explains it.

(14) Var. lec. Rabbah.

(15) I.e., since the original is rejected, as explained in n. 6 on the Mishnah, the substitute is in the same position.

(16) Lev. III, 7. This refers to a peace-offering, and it is superfluous. For v. 6 states, and if his offering... be of the flock, while v. 12 states, and if his offering be a goat: since 'flock' only comprises goats and lambs, v. 6 must refer to lambs, which renders v. 7 unnecessary. Hence it must be written for a particular exegesis.

(17) Since it follows from the general principle of substitution, as explained in n. 1 and 6 on the Mishnah.

(18) And we are then informed that although the original itself cannot be offered, its substitute is offered!

(19) But not the actual source of the law, which follows indeed from general principles.

(20) Since it is superfluous, as explained on p. 519, n. 6.

(21) The fat tail of all other sacrifices is explicitly stated to be part of the emurim which are burnt on the altar (v. Lev. III, 9; VII, 3). The burning of the emurim is not mentioned at all in connection with the Passover, however, but deduced from elsewhere (v. supra 64b); consequently a verse is required to teach that the fat tail too is included.

(22) Hence unfit for its purpose (v. Ex. XII, 5).

(23) E.g., the substitute for a Passover-offering, or where the owner of a Passover-offering registered for a different animal, so that the first is a Passover remainder; both are sacrificed as peace-offerings.

(24) V. Lev. III, 2.

(25) Ibid. 12.

(26) 'And if' is regarded as a disjunctive, teaching that the provisions that apply to a lamb do not apply to a goat, unless expressly stated. The fat tail is mentioned in connection with the former (v. 9) but not the latter.

(27) I.e., if the animal is dedicated for a Passover-offering, the act or time of slaughtering the second animal stamps it with that sanctity, and since it was not offered then, it was rejected and must graze. But the act of slaughtering cannot stamp an animal with that sanctity, that it should be regarded as rejected if it was not fit for a Passover-offering at the time, and in the latter case this substitute was indeed unfit, since at that time it was as yet unconsecrated. Consequently now that it is consecrated, it is offered itself as a peace-offering.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 97a

You might think that it is also thus before Passover,¹ therefore it is stated, 'it':² 'it' is offered [as a peace-offering], but the substitute of a Passover-offering is not offered [as such] —³ How is it meant? If we say that it was found before slaughtering and he substituted [another] for it before slaughtering, then it is obvious!⁴ Why do I require a verse? Hence it must surely apply to where it was found before the slaughtering, 'while he substituted [another] for it after the slaughtering. Thus the refutation of Raba is indeed a refutation.⁵

Samuel said: Whatever must be left to perish in the case of a sin-offering, is brought as a peace-offering in the case of a Passover,⁶ and whatever must be left to graze in the case of a sin-offering,⁷ must also be left to graze in the case of a Passover. While R. Johanan said: No Passover is brought as a peace-offering save that which is found after the slaughtering, but not [if it is found] before the slaughtering. To this R. Joseph demurred: Now is this a general rule? Surely there is the sin-offering more than a year old, which goes forth to pasture,⁸ for R. Simeon b. Lakish said: A sin-offering more than a year old, we regard as though it stood in a cemetery,⁹ and it must be left to graze; whereas a Passover in such a case is brought as a peace-offering, for it was taught: '[If he bring] a lamb [etc.]': this is to include the Passover-offering, in respect of its fat tail. When it is stated, 'If [he bring] a lamb,' this is to include [an animal] more than a year old [dedicated for] a Passover and a peace-offering which comes In virtue of a Passover-offering in respect of all the regulations of a peace-offering,¹⁰ [viz.,] that they require laying [of the hands], libations, and the waving of the breast and shoulder. Again, when it [Scripture] states, 'and if [his offering be] a goat', it breaks across the subject and teaches of a goat that it does not require [the burning of its] fat tail [on the altar]!¹¹ — Said he to him, Samuel spoke only of lost [sacrifices],¹² but he did not say it of rejected [animals]. Yet is [this principle] possible [in the case of] a lost [sacrifice]? Surely an [animal which was] lost at the time of separating [another],¹³ in the view of the Rabbis goes to pasture [until it receives a blemish], for we learned: If he set apart [an animal as] his sin-offering and it was lost, and he [then] set apart another in its stead, and [then] the first was found again, and behold! both stand [before us], [any] one of them may be sacrificed, while the other must die: this is Rabbi's ruling. But the Sages maintain: No sin-offering must die except one found after its owner has been atoned for.¹⁴ Hence [if found again] before its owner was atoned for, it must graze. Whereas in the case of a Passover-offering, if it was lost and found again after midday [but] before the slaughtering [of the second], it is brought as a peace-offering? — Samuel agrees with Rabbi, who maintained: A lost animal goes forth to perish. But every lost [sin-offering], according to Rabbi, is left to die, whereas in the case of a Passover-offering, if it was lost before midday and found again before midday it must be left to graze?— [If found] before midday it is not [regarded as lost],¹⁵ in accordance with Raba. For Raba said: A loss at night is not designated a loss .¹⁶

Then according to Rabbi, how is it possible that [a sin-offering] should be left to graze?

-
- (1) That the substitute of a Passover which is found before Passover is offered as a peace-offering.
- (2) He seems to translate, If it (hu) is a lamb (which) he brings etc. , and treats the 'it' as a limitation.
- (3) this does not mean that where the Passover itself is offered as a peace-offering its substitute is not, but that there is a substitute of the Passover which is not offered as a peace-offering.
- (4) that it cannot be offered itself', having been rejected as explained in n. 6 on the Mishnah.
- (5) Here we cannot answer that the verse is a mere support, as above, for in that case what is the purpose of the verse?
- (6) There are five cases of the former: (i) the offspring of a sin-offering; (ii) the substitute of a sin-offering; (iii) a sin-offering whose owner died; (iv) a sin-offering which was lost, and re-found after its owner had made atonement with another; and (v) a sin-offering more than a year old. All these must be allowed to perish. It is now assumed that all these, in the case of a Passover (the first of course is excluded, the Passover being a male), are brought as a peace-offering.
- (7) until it receives a blemish, when it can be redeemed.-It is discussed anon which these are.
- (8) Until it receives a blemish.
- (9) Thus inaccessible to the priest for sacrifice-i.e., it cannot be sacrificed.
- (10) This is the point of the objection.
- (11) V. supra 96b for notes.
- (12) I.e., iv in p. 521, n. 7.
- (13) If a sin-offering was lost and another consecrated, and then the first was found again before the second was sacrificed, so that the first was a lost animal only when the second was set apart, but not when it was sacrificed.
- (14) By another offering.
- (15) Even if another had been separated in its place.
- (16) If a sin-offering was lost at night, and another was separated in its stead, and the first was found by the morning, even on Rabbi's view It is not regarded as having been lost, since it could not have been sacrificed at night in any case, and therefore it goes forth to pasture. By the same reasoning, if the lost Passover-offering is found before midday, it is not regarded as having been lost, since it could not have been sacrificed before midday.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 97b

— In accordance with R. Oshaia. For R. Oshaia said: If he set apart two sin-offerings as security,¹ he is atoned for by one of them, while the second must be left to graze. Yet surely a Passover-offering in such a case is brought as a peace-offering?² — Rather, Samuel holds as R.

Simeon, who maintained: The five sin-offerings are left to die.³ But surely R. Simeon does not hold at all that [any sin-offering] must be left to graze?⁴ Samuel too stated one rule [only]: Whatever must be left to perish in the case of a sin-offering must be left to graze in the case of a Passover-offering. Then what does he inform us?⁵ — [His purpose is] to rebut R. Johanan, who said: No Passover is brought as a peace-offering except if it is found after the slaughtering, but not [if it is found] before the slaughtering, which proves that [in his opinion] the slaughtering stamps [it as a rejected animal]; hence he [Samuel] informs us that midday stamps [it]. Another version: Whereas in the case of the Passover, where it is lost and found after midday [but] before the slaughtering [of the second], it is brought as a peace-offering?⁶ — Samuel agrees with Rabbah, who maintained: The slaughtering stamps [it].⁷ But surely, since R. Johanan said thereon: ‘No Passover-offering is brought as a peace-offering save when it is found after the slaughtering, but not [if it is found] before the slaughtering,’ which proves that [in his opinion] the slaughtering stamps [it], it follows that Samuel holds [that] midday stamps it? — Rather Samuel agrees with Rabbi, who ruled: A lost [sacrifice] goes forth to perish — But all lost [sacrifices] are left to perish, in Rabbi's opinion, whereas in the case of the Passover-offering, where it is lost before midday and found before midday it must be left to graze? — He holds that [if it is found] before midday it is not [regarded as] lost, and he also holds: Midday stamps [it].

M I S H N A H. IF A MAN SETS ASIDE A FEMALE OR A TWO-YEAR OLD MALE FOR HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING,⁸ IT MUST BE LEFT TO GRAZE UNTIL IT BECOMES UNFIT,⁹ THEN BE SOLD, AND ITS MONEY IS SPENT¹⁰ ON A VOLUNTARY SACRIFICE, ON A PEACE-OFFERING.¹¹

(1) Each as security for the other, in case the other is lost.

(2) For this is definitely a case where one is a remainder’, not a rejected sacrifice.

(3) v. supra 97a. Those die in all cases, this holding good of iv whether it was refound before atonement was made with the second or after. Similarly, if two are set aside as a security for each other, the unsacrificed one must die.

(4) How then can Samuel say’, whatever must be left to graze in the case of a sin-offering’?

(5) Since all sin-offerings must be left to die, it follows that Samuel teaches that all lost Passover-offerings are brought as peace-offerings. But this is already taught in the Mishnah, viz., IF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING IS FOUND AFTER THE SLAUGHTERING, IT IS BROUGHT AS A PEACE-OFFERING; this is explained supra as meaning after the time for slaughtering, i.e., after midday, which proves that if it is still lost at midday it is brought as a peace-offering.

(6) This is another version of the difficulty raised supra 97a: ‘But surely an animal which was lost at the time of separating another, in the view of the Rabbis goes to pasture, whereas in the case etc. (continuing as in the text).

(7) V. supra 96b. Hence if found before the second is slaughtered it goes to pasture.

(8) Both are ineligible; v. Ex. XII, 5. ‘A two-year old’ means in its second year.

(9) Through a blemish.

(10) Lit., ‘falls’.

(11) In the separate edition of the Mishnah ‘On a peace-offering’ is omitted, while Tosaf. in Zeb. 9b s.v. תן gives the reading as, ‘and he brings a peace-offering with its money’. — By separating it for a Passover-offering he has stamped it as such, and since it is unfit, it is regarded as a rejected sacrifice, which cannot be offered itself but must be redeemed and the money expended on a sacrifice. Cf. Mishnah on 96b and n. 6 a.l.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 98a

IF A MAN SEPARATES HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING AND DIES, HIS SON AFTER HIM MUST NOT BRING IT AS A PASSOVER-OFFERING¹ BUT AS A PEACE-OFFERING.

G E M A R A.R.Huna son of R.Joshua said, This proves three things: [i] Live animals may be [permanently] rejected;² [ii] that which is rejected [even] ab initio is rejected;³ and [iii] rejection is applicable to monetary sanctity.⁴

IF A MAN SEPARATES HIS PASSOVER-OFFERING etc. Our Rabbis taught: If a man separates his Passover-offering and dies, — If his son is registered with him, he must bring it as a Passover-offering; [if] his son is not registered with him, he must bring it as a peace-offering on the sixteenth [of Nisan].⁵ Only on the sixteenth, but not on the fifteenth: he holds, Vows and voluntary offerings⁶ may not be offered on a Festival.

Now when did the father die? Shall we say that he died before midday [then how is it stated], ‘if his son is registered with him he must bring it as a peace-offering’? — But surely aninuth [bereavement] has previously fallen upon him!⁷ Again, if he died after midday, ‘[if] his son is not registered with him, he must bring it as a peace-offering’?—But midday has stamped it?⁸ Said Rabbah: In truth it is meant where he died before midday, and what does ‘he must bring it as a Passover-offering’ mean? He must bring it for the second Passover.⁹ Abaye said, It is taught disjunctively: If he died after midday, [and] his son is registered with him, he must bring it for the sake of a Passover. If he died before midday, [and] his son is not registered with him, he must bring it as a peace-offering. R. Sherabia said: In truth it means where he died after midday, the case being e.g., where his father was in a dying condition at midday.¹⁰ R. Ashi said: In truth it means that he died after midday,¹¹ this being in accordance with R. Simeon, who maintained: Live animals cannot be [permanently] rejected.¹² Rabina said: [It means] e.g., where he set it aside after midday and its owner died after midday, and he holds: [only] midday establishes it .¹³

M I S H N A H. IF A PASSOVER-OFFERING BECAME MIXED UP WITH OTHER SACRIFICES, ALL MUST BE LEFT TO GRAZE UNTIL THEY BECOME UNFIT [THROUGH A BLEMISH], THEN BE SOLD, AND FOR THE PRICE OF THE BEST ONE MUST PURCHASE [AN ANIMAL] OF EACH DENOMINATION, AND MAKE UP¹⁴ THE EXCESS FROM ONE'S PRIVATE PURSE.¹⁵ IF IT BECAME MIXED UP WITH FIRSTLINGS,¹⁶ -R. SIMEON SAID: IF [THE PASSOVER-OFFERING BELONGED TO] A COMPANY OF PRIESTS, THEY EAT [ALL ON THAT NIGHT].¹⁷

G E M A R A.

(1) As now there are none registered for it.

(2) As here: the animal being rejected from its original purpose, viz., a Passover-offering, it remains ineligible even for a peace-offering, for which it is fit, but must graze. There is an opposing view in Yoma 63b, and quoted infra, that only a dead animal can be rejected permanently.

(3) This animal was not eligible for its purpose from the very outset. There is an opposing view in Suk. 33b that an animal can be permanently rejected only if it was originally eligible.

(4) Since this animal is unfit for a Passover-offering, it was sanctified from the very outset only for its value, viz., that its redemption money should be expended on a sacrifice. Nevertheless it becomes permanently ineligible for the altar.

(5) I.e., on the first of the Intermediate Days.

(6) P. 288, n. 3.

(7) Before the obligation of the Passover, which commences at midday. It is stated supra 91a that the Passover must not be sacrificed on behalf of an onen (v. Glos.) by himself, whereas the present passage implies that he brings it himself, even when he is not registered with others.

(8) As a Passover, and since it cannot be sacrificed as such it remains rejected and cannot be offered itself, as supra 96b ff.

(9) If he did not keep the first through his bereavement.

(10) Hence if his son was registered with him, he must bring it as a Passover, since that obligation preceded his bereavement. But if his son was not registered with him, he must bring it as a peace-offering, for since his father was already in a dying condition, midday did not establish it as a Passover-offering.

(11) But was not necessarily dying at midday.

(12) Save when they become actually unfit, e.g., if they receive a blemish or are given as a harlot's hire (v. Deut. XXIII, 19).

(13) But not the rest of the time allotted for its slaughtering. Hence it has not been established and therefore it cannot be rejected. Consequently, if his son was not registered with him, he must bring it as a peace-offering.

(14) Lit., 'lose'.

(15) Lit., 'house'. Thus: if three lambs of unequal value, one dedicated for a Passover-offering, another for a guilt-offering, and the third for a burnt-offering, became mixed up, they must all be sold. Since the best may have been any of the three sacrifices, he must buy an animal for each sacrifice at the cost of the best; naturally he will need more than they realized, and he must make that up himself.-Instead of 'he must lose' there is a variant: 'and he must set aside'.

(16) Which are offered in the same way as Passover-offerings, viz., the blood of both is sprinkled in the same way, and neither require the waving of the breast and shoulder, nor laying of the hands, nor libations.

(17) Stipulating at the time of slaughtering: 'Whichever is the Passover-offering, we sacrifice it as such, and whichever is the firstling, we offer it as such'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 98b

But he brings sacrifices to the place of unfitness?¹ -R. Simeon is consistent with his view, for he maintains: One may bring sacrifices to the place of unfitness.² For we learned: If a guilt-offering was mixed up with a peace-offering, — R. Simeon said: They must be slaughtered at the north [side of the altar]³ and eaten in accordance with [the laws of] the more stringent of them.⁴ Said they to him: One may not bring sacrifices to the place of unfitness.⁵

Now according to the Rabbis, what do we do?⁶ -Said Raba: We wait until they receive a blemish. Then he brings a choice animal and declares: 'Wherever the Passover-offering may be,⁷ let it[s sanctity] be transferred to this one,'⁸ and he eats them In accordance with the laws of a blemished firstling.⁹

M I S H N A H. IF A COMPANY LOST THEIR PASCHAL SACRIFICE AND INSTRUCTED ONE [OF THEIR NUMBER], 'GO AND SEEK IT, AND SLAUGHTER IT ON OUR BEHALF'; AND HE WENT, FOUND, AND SLAUGHTERED IT, WHILE THEY [Also] TOOK AN ANIMAL AND SLAUGHTERED [IT]: IF HIS WAS SLAUGHTERED FIRST, HE EATS OF HIS AND THEY EAT WITH HIM.¹⁰ WHILE IF THEIRS WAS FIRST SLAUGHTERED, THEY EAT OF THEIRS,¹¹ WHILE HE EATS OF HIS.¹² BUT IF IT IS UNKNOWN WHICH OF THEM WAS FIRST SLAUGHTERED, OR IF THEY KILLED BOTH OF THEM AT THE SAME TIME, HE EATS OF HIS, BUT THEY MAY NOT EAT WITH HIM;¹³ WHILE THEIRS GOES FORTH TO THE PLACE OF BURNING,¹⁴ AND THEY ARE EXEMPT FROM KEEPING THE SECOND PASSOVER.¹⁵

IF HE SAID TO THEM, IF I DELAY, GO FORTH AND SLAUGHTER ON MY BEHALF,¹⁶ [AND] THEN HE WENT AND FOUND AND SLAUGHTERED [IT], WHILE THEY TOOK [ANOTHER] AND SLAUGHTERED [IT], IF THEIRS WAS SLAUGHTERED FIRST, THEY EAT OF THEIRS WHILE HE EATS WITH THEM.¹⁷ WHILE IF HIS WAS SLAUGHTERED FIRST, HE EATS OF HIS¹⁸ AND THEY EAT OF THEIRS.¹⁹ But IF IT IS UNKNOWN WHICH OF THEM WAS SLAUGHTERED FIRST, OR IF THEY SLAUGHTERED BOTH OF THEM AT THE SAME TIME, THEY EAT OF THEIRS, BUT HE MAY NOT EAT WITH THEM, WHILE HIS OWN GOES FORTH TO THE PLACE OF BURNING, AND HE IS EXEMPT FROM KEEPING THE SECOND PASSOVER.²⁰

IF HE INSTRUCTED THEM, AND THEY INSTRUCTED HIM,²¹ THEY MUST ALL EAT OF THE FIRST [TO BE SLAUGHTERED],²² AND IF IT IS UNKNOWN WHICH OF THEM WAS SLAUGHTERED FIRST, BOTH GO FORTH TO THE PLACE OF BURNING.²³

IF HE DID NOT INSTRUCT THEM AND THEY DID NOT INSTRUCT HIM,²⁴ THEY ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR EACH OTHER.²⁵

IF THE PASCHAL SACRIFICES OF TWO COMPANIES BECOME MIXED UP, THESE TAKE POSSESSION OF ONE [ANIMAL] AND THOSE TAKE POSSESSION OF ONE. ONE MEMBER OF THESE JOINS THOSE, AND ONE MEMBER OF THOSE JOINS THESE, AND THEY DECLARE THUS:²⁶ IF THIS PASCHAL SACRIFICE IS OURS, YOUR HANDS ARE WITHDRAWN FROM YOUR OWN AND YOU ARE REGISTERED FOR OURS; WHILE IF THIS PASCHAL SACRIFICE IS YOURS,²⁷ OUR HANDS ARE WITHDRAWN FROM OURS AND WE ARE REGISTERED FOR YOURS.²⁸ SIMILARLY, IF THERE ARE FIVE COMPANIES CONSISTING OF FIVE MEMBERS EACH OR OF TEN EACH, THEY DRAW ONE FROM EACH COMPANY TO THEMSELVES AND MAKE THE FOREGOING DECLARATION.²⁹

IF THE PASCHAL SACRIFICES BELONGING TO TWO [SINGLE INDIVIDUALS] BECOME MIXED UP, EACH TAKES POSSESSION OF ONE [ANIMAL]; THIS ONE REGISTERS A STRANGER³⁰ WITH HIMSELF AND THAT ONE REGISTERS A STRANGER WITH HIMSELF.³¹ THE FORMER GOES OVER TO THE LATTER SACRIFICE AND THE LATTER GOES OVER TO THE FORMER SACRIFICE, AND THEY [I.E., EACH OWNER] DECLARE THUS: IF THIS PASCHAL SACRIFICE IS MINE, YOUR HANDS ARE WITHDRAWN FROM YOUR OWN AND YOU ARE REGISTERED FOR MINE; WHILE IF THIS PASCHAL SACRIFICE IS YOURS, MY HANDS ARE WITHDRAWN FROM MINE AND I AM REGISTERED FOR YOURS.³²

G E M A R A. Our Rabbis taught: if he instructed them and they instructed him, they must [all] eat of the first. If he did not instruct them and they did not instruct him, they are not responsible for each other.³³

-
- (1) This difficulty arises on R. Simeon's ruling. A firstling may be eaten two days and the night in between, whereas the Passover-offering may be eaten only on the first night. Thus if it is not eaten by morning he must burn it as nothar (v. Glos.), whereas it is actually still fit.
 - (2) In such a case, rather than let them graze until they receive a blemish, which is the only alternative.
 - (3) The side prescribed for the slaughtering of a guilt-offering. Peace-offerings could be slaughtered on any side of the Temple Court.
 - (4) I.e., as guilt-offerings, viz., during one day and a night only, within the Temple precincts, and by male priests.-A peace-offering is eaten two days and one night, anywhere in Jerusalem, and by Israelites as well as priests.
 - (5) But they must be left to graze until blemished.
 - (6) When a Passover-offering is mixed up with a firstling. When it is mixed up with a burnt-offering or guilt-offering, or when a peace-offering is mixed up with a guilt-offering, the expedient stated in the Mishnah is possible. But a firstling, even when blemished, can not be redeemed in the sense that it becomes hullin but must be eaten by a priest with its blemish; while on the other hand when a Passover-offering receives a blemish, it must be redeemed and may not be eaten otherwise.
 - (7) I.e., whichever of these two animals is the Passover.
 - (8) Thus whichever is the Passover-offering is redeemed.
 - (9) These are: it may not be slaughtered or sold in the ordinary abattoir, nor weighed with the ordinary weights. These restrictions do not apply to a redeemed Passover-offering, and would not apply here if he knew which it was.
 - (10) By instructing him to slaughter it on their behalf they become registered for his and cannot register for another after the first was slaughtered. Hence their own is unfit and must be burnt.
 - (11) By slaughtering their own first they ipso facto cancelled their registration for the original, which is permissible, v. supra 89a.
 - (12) But not of theirs, since he had not registered with them.
 - (13) Lest their own was slaughtered first, whereby they had cancelled their registration for his.
 - (14) For his may have been killed first; v. n. 4.
 - (15) Because they were certainly registered for one animal at the first Passover, while the eating is not indispensable.

- (16) But they did not instruct him to slaughter the lost animal on their behalf.
- (17) While his own must be burnt, for according to his instructions he was now registered for theirs; hence his is unfit, having none registered for it.
- (18) Cf. p. 528, n. 5.
- (19) For they were not registered for his, since they had not instructed him to slaughter it on their behalf.
- (20) Cf. p. 528, n. 9.
- (21) He instructed them to slaughter on his behalf if he delayed, and they instructed him to slaughter on their behalf if he found the lost animal.
- (22) For which they are all automatically registered now.
- (23) Each must thus go forth lest it was slaughtered last and had none registered for it.
- (24) To slaughter on each other's behalf.
- (25) Each party eats of its own, whatever the order of their slaughtering.
- (26) Each company declares thus to the newcomer.
- (27) I.e., it belongs to your first company.
- (28) One of each company must join the other, for otherwise each company would have to withdraw en masse from their own, if it had been taken by the second, thus leaving it momentarily entirely without owners, and this is forbidden.
- (29) Each company consists of four new members and one original member. The latter (or all the original members, where each company consisted of more than five) makes the foregoing declaration to each new member in turn.
- (30) Lit., 'a man from the street'.
- (31) Thus there are now two registered persons for each sacrifice.
- (32) The general reasoning is the same as in the previous cases.
- (33) Thus in the first case one animal must be destroyed, whatever happens, while in the second both are eaten.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 99a

Hence the Sages said: Silence is better for the wise, and how much more so for fools, as it is said, Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise.¹ IF THE PASCHAL SACRIFICES BELONGING TO TWO [SINGLE

PERSONS] BECOME MIXED UP etc. Shall we say that our Mishnah does not agree with R. Judah? For it was taught: And if the household be too little for a lamb:² this teaches that they may go on decreasing [their numbers] ,³ providing, however, that one of them remains:⁴ this is R. Judah's view. R. Jose said: Providing that they do not leave the Paschal sacrifice as it is!⁵ — Said R. Johanan: You may even say [that it agrees with] R. Judah. Since R. Judah said, One may not slaughter the Passover-offering for a single person, then from the outset he stood to register another with himself, and he [the newly-registered person] is accounted as one of the [original] members of the company. R. Ashi said: Our Mishnah too proves this, for it teaches, SIMILARLY, IF THERE ARE FIVE COMPANIES CONSISTING OF FIVE MEMBERS EACH: thus, only of five [each], but not [if some consist] of five and [others of] four; is not[the reason] because one of the [original] members of the company does not remain with it?⁶ This proves it.

CHAPTER X

MISHNAH.

(1) Prov. XVII, 28.

(2) Ex. XII, 4.

(3) V. supra p.474, n. 3.

(4) For 'if it be too few' implies that someone at least is registered for it.

(5) Without owners. Now R. Judah must mean that one of the persons who originally registered for it, when the animal was first set aside for a Passover-offering, must remain registered for it, while in R. Jose's opinion it is sufficient that someone remains, even if he is not of those who originally registered for it. For if R. Judah's view is not as stated, it does not differ in any way from R. Jose's. But in the Mishnah, when A, the only original owner of one of the sacrifices, declares, 'If this animal is not mine, I withdraw from the other and register for this', the other is left without anyone who first registered for it, since A is the only original owner.

(6) If it consisted of less than five, and one joins each other's company. For if it were unnecessary for all original member to remain, the Mishnah could teach that whatever the number of original members, each company increases itself to five and then does as stated.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 99b

ON THE EVE OF PASSOVER¹ CLOSE TO MINHAH² A MAN MUST NOT EAT UNTIL NIGHTFALL. EVEN THE POOREST MAN IN ISRAEL MUST NOT EAT [ON THE NIGHT OF PASSOVER] UNTIL HE RECLINES;³ AND THEY⁴ SHOULD GIVE HIM NOT LESS THAN FOUR CUPS [OF WINE],⁵ AND EVEN [IF HE RECEIVES RELIEF] FROM THE CHARITY PLATE.⁶

G E M A R A. Why particularly THE EVE OF PASSOVER? Even the eves of Sabbaths and Festivals too [are subject to this law]? For it was taught: A man must not eat on the eves of Sabbaths and Festivals from minhah and onward, so that he may enter [i.e., commence] the Sabbath with an appetite [for food]: [these are] the words of R. Judah. R. Jose said: He may go on eating until nightfall! — Said R. Huna: This [our Mishnah] is necessary only on the view of R. Jose, who said: He may go on eating until nightfall: that is only on the eves of Sabbaths and [other] Festivals; but with respect to the eve of Passover he agrees [with R. Judah], because of the duty of [eating] unleavened bread.⁷ R. Papa said: You may even say [that it must be taught on] R. Judah['s view too]: there, on the eve of Sabbaths and Festivals, it is forbidden only from minhah and after, but close to minhah it is permitted; whereas on the eve of Passover it is forbidden even close to minhah too. Now is it permitted just before minhah on the eve of the Sabbath and Festivals? Surely it was taught: A man must not eat on the eve of the Sabbath or Festivals from nine hours⁸ and onwards, in order that he may enter the Sabbath with an appetite: [these are] the words of R. Judah. R. Jose said: He may go on eating until nightfall? — Said Mar Zutra: Who is to tell us that this is authentic?

(1) Lit., 'on the eve of Passovers'. Tosaf. suggests that this may mean either on the eve when Passover-offerings are sacrificed, or on the eve of the first and second Passovers. But there is a variant reading ON THE EVES OF PASSOVER, the whole being in the plural; its meaning will then be on the eve of (every) Passover, as translated in the text, Heb. often using the plural in this way.

(2) V. Glos.; i.e., from just before minhah.

(3) As a sign of freedom, this being the practice in ancient days.

(4) Rashbam and Tosaf.: the charity overseers.

(5) Which every Jew must drink on the night of Passover. These correspond to the four expressions of redemption employed in Ex. VI, 6f: I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians, and I will deliver you from their bondage, and I will redeem you with an outstretched arm, and with great judgments; and I will take you to me for a people (commentaries and Jerusalemi).

(6) Tamhuy, daily distributed food collected from contributors, soup kitchen (Jast.). This was available only to the poorest of the poor, for he who had enough even for two meals only might not receive from the tamhuy (Pe'ah VIII, 7); even such must drink four cups of wine on the night of Passover.

(7) For since the eating of unleavened bread on the first night of Passover is compulsory (v. Ex. XII, 18) it is unfitting that should be eaten when one is already satisfied.

(8) I.e., about three p.m., whereas minhah time was nine and a half hours, about half past three p.m., two and a half hours before nightfall.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 100a

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 100a

Perhaps it is a corrupted version.¹ Said Meremar to him — others state, R. Yemar; I visited the session of R. Phineas the son of R. Ammi, and a tanna arose and recited it² before him and he accepted it [as correct]. If so, there is a difficulty? Hence it is clearly [to be explained] as R. Huna.³

Yet is it satisfactory according to R. Huna? Surely R. Jeremiah said in R. Johanan's name—others state, R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Jose b. R. Hanina — : The halachah is as R. Judah in respect to the eve of Passover, and the halachah is as R. Jose in respect to the eve of the Sabbath. 'The halachah is as R. Judah in respect to the eve of Passover, whence it follows that R. Jose disagrees on both?'⁴ - No: 'The halachah [etc.]' proves that they disagree in respect to interruption. For it was taught: One must interrupt [the meal] for the Sabbath:⁵ this is R. Judah's ruling. R. Jose said: One need not interrupt [the meal].⁶ And it once happened that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, R. Judah and R. Jose were dining⁷ at Acco, when the day became holy upon them.⁸ Said R. Simeon b. Gamaliel to R. Jose: 'Berabbi,⁹ is it your wish that we interrupt [our meal] and pay heed to the words of our colleague Judah?' Said he to him: 'Every [other] day you prefer my words to those of R. Judah, whereas now you prefer R. Judah's words in my very presence — "will he even force the queen before me in my house"?'¹⁰ 'If so,' he rejoined, 'we will not interrupt [the meal], lest the disciples see it and establish the halachah [thus] for all time.'¹¹ It was related: They did not stir thence until they had established the halachah as R. Jose.

Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: The halachah is neither as R. Judah¹² nor as R. Jose,¹³ but one must spread a cloth¹⁴ and sanctify [the day].¹⁵ But that is not so, for R. Tahlifa b. Abdimi said in Samuel's name: Just as one must interrupt [the meal] for kiddush,

(1) This Baraitha contradicts the previous one, and there is nothing to show that this is more correct, particularly as the latter agrees with the Mishnah as explained above.

(2) The second Baraitha: from nine hours.

(3) Hence 'from minhah' in the first Baraitha means just before nightfall, and thus the Mishnah and both Baraithas are in agreement.

(4) Whereas in R. Huna's view R. Jose agrees in respect of Passover eve.

(5) The Heb. is in the plural: Sabbaths. I.e., if one started eating before the Sabbath, he must interrupt the meal when the Sabbath commences, remove the table and recite grace (the table was generally removed before grace, v. Ber. 42a), then recite kiddush, the prayer of sanctification, and proceed as with a new meal. According to a version infra 100b, the table was removed before kiddush, which then preceded grace (Tosaf.).

(6) But he completes the meal, recites grace, and then kiddush. Now when R. Jeremiah states that the halachah is as R. Judah in respect to Passover eve, whence it follows that R. Jose disagrees there too, this disagreement is likewise in reference to interrupting the meal, R. Jose maintaining that even on the eve of Passover he need not interrupt it once he has commenced (i.e., if he commenced at the permitted time — Rashbam and Tosaf). But he admits that a man must not commence a meal in the first place shortly before minhah, and that is the meaning of the Mishnah too.

(7) Lit., 'reclining'.

(8) I.e., the Sabbath or festival commenced.

(9) A title of honour, v. Naz., Sonc. ed. p. 64, n. 1.

(10) Esth. VII, 8; i.e., will you shame me in my own presence?

(11) Lit., 'for generations'

(12) Who maintains that one must interrupt the meal, which implies that the table must be removed.

(13) Who ruled that no interruption whatsoever is required.

(14) Which hides the table so that it is not there, as it were.

(15) By reciting kiddush.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 100b

so must one interrupt it for habdalah.¹ Now what does 'one must interrupt' mean: surely by removing the table?² — No: by [spreading] a cloth. Rabbah b. R. Huna visited the Resh Galutha.³ When a tray [with food] was placed before him, he spread a cloth and sanctified [the day].⁴ It was taught likewise: And they both agree that⁵ one must not bring the table⁶ unless one has recited kiddush;⁷ but if it was brought, a cloth is spread [over it]⁸ and kiddush is recited.⁹

One [Baraita] taught: Both¹⁰ agree that one must not commence;¹¹ while another taught: And both agree that one may commence. As to what was taught, ‘and both agree that one must not commence, it is well: that holds good on the eve of Passover.¹² But as to the statement, ‘And both agree that one may commence,’ when [is that]? If we say, on the eve of the Sabbath, — but surely they differ? — There is no difficulty: here it means before nine [hours]; there, after nine [hours].¹³

As for people who have sanctified [the day] in the synagogue,¹⁴ Rab said: They have not done their duty in respect of wine,¹⁵ but they have done their duty in respect of kiddush.¹⁶ But Samuel maintained:

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Thus the mere spreading of a cloth is insufficient.

(3) Exilarch, the official head of Babylonian Jewry.

(4) It was at the beginning of the meal, the Sabbath having commenced.

(5) Rashbam is inclined to delete this phrase. If retained, it refers to R. Judah and R. Jose (Tosaf. and one alternative in Rashbam): though’ they differ as to whether the meal must be interrupted, they agree where it has not yet begun.

(6) Small tables were set for each person separately; these were brought in for the meal and removed when it was finished.

(7) So that the table is then brought in honour of the Sabbath. Nevertheless it was laid before the Sabbath.

(8) Cf. p. 534, n. 9.

(9) This expedient is adopted nowadays that large tables are used, as it would be too troublesome to bring them in after kiddush.

(10) R. Judah and R. Jose, who disagree in respect of commencing a meal on the eve of the Sabbath just before minhah and also in respect of interrupting a meal at nightfall, if it was begun well before minhah.

(11) A meal from minhah and onwards.

(12) As R. Huna Supra 99b.

(13) There is no controversy in respect to the former.

(14) I.e., who have listened to the kiddush recited by the Reader.

(15) If they wish to drink wine at home, they must recite the benediction for wine. Even if they drank wine in the synagogue, over which a benediction had been recited, that does not exempt them, at home, for the change of place breaks the continuity and renders this drinking a new act.

(16) And as far as they are concerned they need not repeat the kiddush at home.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 101a

They have not done their duty in respect of kiddush either. Then according to Rab, why he [the Reader] recite kiddush at home? — In order to acquit his children and his household [of their duty]. And [according to] Samuel, why must he recite kiddush in the synagogue?¹ — In order to acquit travellers of their obligation, for they eat, drink, and sleep in the synagogue.² Now Samuel is consistent with his view, for Samuel said: Kiddush is [valid] only where the meal is eaten. From this it was understood [by the disciples] that only [to adjourn] from one house to another [is forbidden],³ but [to adjourn] from one place to another in the same house is not [forbidden]. Said R. ‘Anan b. Tahlifa to them: On many occasions I was standing before Samuel, when he descended from the roof to the ground and then recited [again] kiddush.⁴

Now R. Huna too holds that kiddush is [valid] only where the meal is eaten. For [on one occasion] R. Huna recited kiddush and [then] his lamp was upset, whereupon he carried his utensils into the marriage chamber [baldachin] of his son Rabbah, where a lamp was [burning] recited kiddush [again], and then ate something, which proves that he holds: kiddush is [valid] only where the meal is eaten.

Now Rabbah too holds: kiddish is [valid] only where the meal is eaten. For Abaye said: When I was at the Master's [sc. Rabbah's] house,⁵ and he recited kiddush, he would say to us: 'Eat a little [here], lest by the time you reach your lodgings your lamps become upset, and you do not recite kiddush in the house where you eat, while you will not have discharged [your duty] with the kiddush of this place, because kiddush is [valid] only where the meal is eaten. But that is not so, for surely Abaye said: In all matters the Master [sc. Rabbah] acted in accordance with Rab, except these three, where he did as Samuel: [viz.,] one may light from lamp to lamp;⁶ one can detach [the fringes] from one garment for [insertion in] another garment;⁷ and the halachah is as R. Simeon in respect to dragging. For it was taught, R. Simeon said: A man may drag a bed, seat, or bench,⁸ providing that he does not intend to make a rut!⁹ — He acted upon Rab's stringent rulings,¹⁰ but he did not act upon Rab's lenient rulings.

But R. Johanan maintained: They have done their duty in respect of wine too.¹¹ Now R. Johanan is consistent with his view, for R. Hanin b. Abaye said in the name of R. Pedath in R. Johanan's name: Both for a change of wine

(1) Seeing that one's duty is not fulfilled thereby in any case.

(2) Not actually in the synagogue, but in adjoining rooms (Tosaf. on the basis of Meg. 28a). Hence the synagogue is like home to them.

(3) After kiddush, since the meal must be eaten in the same place.

(4) V. R. Hananel. Proving that you must not adjourn from one place to another even in the same house.

(5) Abaye was an orphan, and brought up in Rabbah's house.

(6) One may kindle one Hanukkah lamp from another.

(7) V. Num. XV, 38.

(8) Over an earthen floor on the Sabbath or festival.

(9) Though the dragging will possibly make one. — Why then does he rule as Samuel in respect to kiddush?

(10) That was the general rule stated by Abaye, the three exceptions all being leniencies, where he acted as Samuel.

(11) This refers back to 100b bottom. Having heard the benediction for wine in the synagogue, they do not repeat the benediction at home, for in R. Johanan's view their departure from the synagogue does not break the continuity, as they are regarded as having had their mind set upon the meal and the wine from when they heard kiddush.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 101b

and for a change of place, he need not recite the benediction [again].¹

An objection is raised: [For] a change of place, he must recite the benediction [again]; for a change of wine, he need not recite the benediction [again]? This refutation of R. Johanan is [indeed] a refutation.

R. Idi b. Abin sat before R. Hisda, while R. Hisda sat and said in R. Huna's name: As to what you said, [for] a change of place he must recite the benediction [again], they taught this only [of a change] from one house to another, but not from one place to another place.² Said R. Idi b. Abin to him: We have learnt it thus in the Baraitha of the School of R. Henak — others state, in the School of Bar Henak — in accordance with your ruling. Does then R. Huna teach us a Baraitha?³ — R. Huna had not heard the Baraitha.⁴

Furthermore, R. Hisda sat and said in his own name: As to what you said: For a change of place he must recite the benediction [again], we said this only of things which do not require a benediction after them in the same place;⁵ but for the things which demand a blessing after them in the same place, he need not recite the benediction [again]. What is the reason? He [mentally] returns to the first appointed place.⁶ But R. Shesheth maintained: Both for the one and the other he must recite the benediction [again].

An objection is raised: If the members of a company were reclining to drink, and they [precipitately] arose⁷ to go out to welcome a bridegroom or a bride, when they go out, they do not need [to recite] a benediction beforehand;⁸ when they return, they do not need [to recite] a benediction at the beginning.⁹ When is that? If they left an old man or an invalid there;¹⁰ but if they did not leave an old man or an invalid there, when they go out they need [to recite] a benediction beforehand, [and] when they return they need a benediction at the beginning. Now since he teaches, 'they [precipitately] arose,' it follows that we are treating of things which require a blessing after them in the same place,¹¹ and it is only because they left an old man or an invalid there that when they go out they do not need a benediction beforehand, and when they return they do not need a benediction at the beginning. But if they did not leave an old man or an invalid there, when they go out they need a blessing beforehand and when they return they need a blessing at the beginning: this is a difficulty according to R. Hisda?—Said R. Nahman b. Isaac:

(1) If a man recites a blessing for wine and drinks, and the more wine is brought from a different barrel, even if the second is of a different quality, he does not repeat the blessing; similarly, if he recites a blessing over food or drink and then continues his meal elsewhere. Hence the same applies here. — Where a man need not recite a blessing, he may not recite, as a blessing must not be recited where there is no obligation.

(2) In the same house, e.g., from one room to another.

(3) Surely it is superfluous!

(4) Rashbam deletes both the question and the answer, as it is quite usual for an amora to state what is taught in the Baraitha.

(5) Where they are eaten, Rashbam: sc. water or fruit. After everything else, however, (i.e., wine, the seven species enumerated in Deut. VIII, 8, bread, and the five species of grain enumerated in the Mishnah Supra 35a) a blessing in the nature of grace must be recited where it is consumed. Tosaf.: after everything except bread and perhaps also the five species of grain a blessing need not be recited where they are eaten.

(6) Since these things must be followed by a blessing in the place where they are consumed, even when he changes his place he keeps the first in mind, so that his eating in both places should be as one act of eating, the subsequent blessing being for what he ate in both. Consequently, he does not recite a blessing before eating in the second place either.

(7) Lit., 'detached their feet'.

(8) I.e., the blessing after wine, since it is their Intention to return.

(9) When they drink afresh.

(10) Which assures that their departure is only an interruption.

(11) 'They detached their feet' implies that they hurried, on account of the bridegroom or bride, but otherwise they would have remained there, in order to recite the benediction before leaving. — According to Tosaf. (p. 538, n. 3) 'to drink must be omitted from the Baraitha, since in their view no beverage, not even wine, is subject to this rule.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 102a

Which Tanna [rules thus on precipitate] rising? R. Judah. For it was taught: If companions were reclining, and they [precipitately] arose to go to the synagogue or to the Beth Hamidrash, when they go out they do not need a blessing beforehand, and when they return they do not need a blessing at the beginning. Said R. Judah: When is that said? When they left some of their companions behind. But if they did not leave some of their companions behind, when they go out they need a blessing beforehand, and when they return they need a blessing at the beginning.

Then [make an opposite deduction]: it is only because they are things which need a blessing in the same place that when they go out they do not need a blessing beforehand and when they return they do not need a blessing at the beginning. But for things which do not need a blessing in the same place, even on the view of the Rabbis, when they go out they need a blessing beforehand and when they return they need a blessing at the beginning: shall we say that this is a refutation of R. Johanan[‘s ruling]?¹ — But have we not [already] refuted him once? Shall we [then] say that from this too there is a refutation?-[No:] R. Johanan can answer you: The same law holds good that even for things which do not require a blessing after them in the same place it is unnecessary to recite a blessing [afresh], but as to why he teaches, ‘They [precipitately] arose,’ that is to inform you the extent² of R. Judah[‘s view], [viz.,] that even for things which require a blessing after them in the same place, it is only because they left some companions behind [that these additional blessings are not recited]; but if they did not leave some companions behind, when they go out they need a blessing beforehand, and when they return they need a blessing at the beginning.

It was taught in accordance with R. Hisda: If companions were reclining to drink wine and they arose [departed] and returned, they need not recite a blessing [anew].³

Our Rabbis taught: If members of a company were reclining when the day became holy upon them,⁴ a cup of wine is brought to one of them and he recites over it the sanctity of the day [i.e., kiddush], and a second [cup is brought] over which he recites the Grace after meals:⁵ these are the words of R. Judah. R. Jose said: he goes on eating until nightfall.⁶

(1) V. supra 101b top that for a change of place no fresh blessing is required under any circumstances.

(2) Lit., ‘strength’.

(3) V. supra p. 538, n. 3. According to Rashbam the proof is obvious. On the view of Tosaf. ‘to drink wine’ must be deleted, the reference being to bread or the five pieces of grain.

(4) I.e., the sun set ushering in the Sabbath or Festival.

(5) Immediately, without waiting to finish the meal. Nevertheless, since the Sabbath has commenced, he must first recite the kiddush and then Grace. Hence if he wishes to eat more after Grace, he must begin a new meal.

(6) He need not interrupt his meal but may continue until the end.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 102b

When they finish [their meal], he recites the Grace after meals over the first cup and the sanctity of the day over the second. Yet why so: let us recite both over one cup?¹ — Said R. Huna in R. Shesheth's name: One may not recite two sanctities over the same cup.² What is the reason? Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Because you may not perform religious duties in wholesale fashion.³ Yet [may you] not? Surely it was taught: He who enters his house at the termination of the Sabbath, recites blessings over the wine, the light and the spices,⁴ and then recites habdalah over the cup [of wine].⁵ But if he has one cup only, he leaves it until after the meal⁶ and he recites them all together after it?⁷ — Where he has not [enough,] it is different. But on the Festival which falls after the Sabbath, though he has [wine],⁸ yet Rab said: [The order is] Yaknah.⁹ — I will tell you: Since he [Rab] did not include ‘the season’ [zeman],¹⁰ it follows that we are discussing the seventh day of Passover,¹¹ by which time he has consumed all that he had and has one more. But on the first day of the Festival he has [wine], yet Abaye said: [The order is] Yakzanah; while Raba said: [The order is] Yaknehaz?¹² — But habdalah and kiddush constitute one observance,¹³ [whereas] the Grace after meals and kiddush are two [distinct observances].

[To turn to] the [main] text: When a Festival falls after the Sabbath, Rab said: [The order is] Yaknah;¹⁴ Samuel said: [The order is] Yanhak;¹⁵

(1) The difficulty is on R. Jose's view only. But on R. Judah's, since the meal must be interrupted and the table removed, it is natural that two separate cups should be required for kiddush and Grace.

(2) Grace is here designated a ‘sanctity’: i.e., Grace and kiddush are two distinct religious duties, and therefore they require separate cups.

(3) Lit. , 'bundles'. I.e. , each requires separate attention.

(4) As is done at the termination of the Sabbath. Kiddush and habdalah are both recited over wine; a blessing is pronounced over light because it is then that light was created, v. Supra 54a; spices are inhaled on the termination of the Sabbath to compensate for the loss of the superior ('additional') soul with which man is endowed on the Sabbath, Rashbam and Tosaf. a.l. and in Bez. 33b.

(5) Habdalah, being longer, is left to the last.

(6) Or perhaps, 'until after grace', מִזֶּן being elliptical for בְּרַכַּת הַמִּזֶּן .

(7) Lit., 'he chains them together after it'. Thus two religious acts are combined.

(8) This is assumed to refer to the first evening of Passover, when, as stated supra 99b, even the poorest man was provided with four cups of wine.

(9) This is a mnemonic: Y == Yayin (wine); K == kiddush; N == Ner (light, i.e., a blessing over light); and H == Habdalah thus kiddush and habdalah are both recited over the same cup.

(10) The benediction 'who has kept us alive and preserved us and enabled us to reach this season'. This is recited on the first night (in the Diaspora on the first two nights) of every Festival, as well is in certain other occasions.

(11) Kiddush must be recited then too, as it follows the Intermediate Days, which are only semi-sacred; v. p. 16, n. 4; again, if it follows the Sabbath, Habdalah also is recited.

(12) V.n. 6. Z == zeman ('season').

(13) Both being recited on account of the sanctity of the Festival, to which reference is made even in the habdalah

(14) Wine is first, in accordance with Beth Hillel's view in Ber. 51b that since wine is more constant it takes precedence. Kiddush precedes habdalah because it is regarded as more important; also, if he recited habdalah first, it might appear that the Sabbath were a burden to him, which he desired to end at the earliest possible moment. After kiddush the order is NH ('light' and habdalah), this being the usual order at the conclusion of the Sabbath.

(15) Samuel gives precedence to habdalah over kiddush; the reason is stated infra 103a in the illustration on the ruling of R. Joshua b. Hananiah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 103a

Rabbah said: Yahnak;¹ Levi said: Kanyah;² the Rabbis said: Kiynah;³ ' Mar the son of Rabina said: Nakyah;⁴ Martha said in R. Joshua's name: Niyhak.⁵

Samuel's father sent to Rabbi: Let our Master teach us what is the order of habdalah.⁶ He sent [back] to him: Thus did R. Ishmael b. R. Jose say, speaking in the name of his father who said it on the authority of R. Joshua b. Hananiah: [The order is] Nahiyk.⁷ R. Hanina said: R. Joshua b. Hananiah's [ruling] may be compared to a king who departs [from a place] and governor who enters: [first] you escort the king [out], and then you go forth to greet the governor.⁸ What is our decision thereon? — Abaye said: [The order is] Yakaznah;⁹ while Raba maintained: Yaknehaz.¹⁰ And the law is as Raba.

R. Huna b. Judah visited Raba's home. Light and spices were brought before them, [whereupon] Raba recited a blessing over the spices first and then one over the light. Said he to him: But both Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel [agree that] light comes first and then spices? And to what is this [allusion]? For we learned: Beth Shammai maintain. Light and Grace [after meals], spices and habdalah;¹¹ while Beth Hillel rule: Light and spices, Grace and habdalah!¹² Thereat Raba answered: These are the words of R. Meir; but R. Judah said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not differ about Grace, [agreeing] that it comes at the beginning and about habdalah, that it comes at the end. About what do they differ? About light and spices. Beth Shammai maintain: Light [first] and then spices; while Beth Hillel rule: Spices [first] and then light; and R. Johanan said [thereon]: The people act in accordance with Beth Hillel as interpreted by R. Judah.

R. Jacob b. Abba visited Raba's home. He saw him recite the blessings 'who create the fruit of the vine over the first cup, and then he recited a blessing over the cup of Grace¹³ and drank it. Said he to him: 'Why do you need all this? Surely, sir, you have [already] recited a blessing for us once?' 'When we were at the Resh Galutha's¹⁴ we did thus,' replied he. 'It is well that we did this at the Resh Galutha's,' said he, 'because there was a doubt whether they would bring us [more wine] or they would not bring us [more].'¹⁵ But here, surely the [second] cup stands before us and we have it in mind?' 'I acted in accordance with Rab's disciples' he replied. For R. Beruna and R. Hananel, disciples of Rab, were sitting at a meal,

(1) He agrees with Rab that Ner (light) interposes between kiddush and habdalah, because it is illogical to recite them consecutively, since they are mutually contradictory, as it were, kiddush declaring that the day is sacred, whereas habdalah declares that it is not as sacred as the Sabbath. He also agrees with Samuel that habdalah comes before kiddush, and he places wine (Yayin) at the head of all, for the reason stated on p. 541, n. 10.

(2) He too puts kiddush before habdalah, but holds that if wine is put at the beginning, the interval between it and habdalah will be so great that it may appear that the habdalah is not being recited over wine, which is essential. But kiddush need not be in immediate proximity to the wine, since it may be recited over bread too. For that reason too Ner (light) precedes the wine, so that the latter may be nearer to habdalah than to kiddush. — Rashbam transposes these last two views, mainly on the basis of J.T.

(3) They too place kiddush before habdalah. Hence we commence with kiddush, and then recite habdalah in its usual order, which is yayin (wine), Ner (light) and habdalah.

(4) He too places kiddush before habdalah, and also holds that wine must come near habdalah. But just as Ner generally precedes habdalah, because he enjoys the light first, so must it precede kiddush. Again, it cannot be recited between wine and habdalah, so that the wine should precede it, in accordance with the usual practice, because that would cause an interruption between the wine and the habdalah.

(5) He places habdalah before kiddush for the reason stated anon. He then puts wine before habdalah, for since that is immediately followed by kiddush, the wine is accounted for both, which is as it should be. For both kiddush and habdalah should be recited over wine in the first place, though the former is permitted over bread where wine is not available. Again, he puts wine before habdalah and kiddush instead of between them, since wine generally precedes. Furthermore, since Ner generally precedes habdalah, for the reason stated in the last note, it must now come at the very beginning.

(6) The pl. of habdalah employed generically.

(7) V. preceding note. He however places wine between habdalah and kiddush, so that it should really be near to both.

(8) The Sabbath, whose sanctity is greater, is the king; the Festival is the governor. Hence we first bid farewell to the Sabbath with habdalah and then welcome the Festival with kiddush.

(9) Yayin (wine), Kiddush, Zeman (season), Ner (light) and Habdalah.

(10) Yayin, Kiddush, Ner, Habdalah, and Zeman.

(11) This order is followed at the conclusion of the Sabbath if there is sufficient for one cup only.

(12) V. Ber. 51b.

(13) He recited Grace after meals over a second cup, and after Grace he recited the blessing for wine over it. — This is the present practice.

(14) V. Glos.

(15) Hence when we recited a blessing over the first cup we did not think of a second, which therefore constituted a fresh act of drinking, and so the blessing had to be repeated.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 103b

[and] R. Yeba Saba¹ waited on them. Said they to him, 'Give us [wine] and we will say Grace.' Subsequently² they said, 'Give us [wine] and we will drink.'³ Said he to them, 'Thus did Rab say: Once you have said, "Give us [wine] and we will say Grace, It is forbidden to you to drink.'⁴ What is the reason? Because you let it pass out of your minds.'⁵

Amemar and Mar Zutra and R. Ashi were sitting at a meal and R. Aha the son of Raba waited on them. Amemar recited a separate blessing for each cup; Mar Zutra recited a blessing over the first cup and over the last cup;⁶ [but] R. Ashi recited a blessing over the first cup and no more. Said R.

Aha b. Raba to them: in accordance with whom are we to act?-Amemar replied: I made a [fresh] decision [each time] .⁷ Mar Zutra replied: I acted in accordance with Rab's disciples. But R. Ashi maintained: The law is not as Rab's disciples for surely when a Festival falls after the Sabbath, Rab ruled: [The order is] Yaknah.⁸ But that is not so: there⁹ he had detached his mind from drinking;¹⁰ [whereas] here he had not detached his mind from drinking.

When he came to perform habdalah,¹¹ his attendant arose and kindled a torch at a lamp.¹² Said he to him, 'Why take all this trouble? Surely the lamp is standing before us!'¹³ 'My servant has acted of his own accord,' replied he. 'Had he not heard it thus from you,'¹⁴ he retorted, 'he would not have done it.' Said he to him: 'Do you then not hold, [To employ] a torch for habdalah is the best way of performing the precept?'

Then he commenced [habdalah] and recited: 'He who makes a distinction between holy and non-holy, between light and darkness, between Israel and the nations, between the seventh day and the six working days.' Said he to him: 'Why do you need all this? Surely Rab Judah said in Rab's name: "He who makes a distinction between holy and non-holy," was the formula of habdalah as recited by R. Judah ha-Nasi?' 'I hold with the following,' answered he. 'For R. Eleazar said in R. Oshaia's name: He who would recite but few [distinctions] must recite not less than three; while he who would add, must not add beyond seven.'¹⁵ Said he to him:

(1) The elder; or, aged.

(2) Before reciting Grace.

(3) They changed their mind and did not wish to recite Grace yet.

(4) Until after grace.

(5) This proves that Grace constitutes an interruption, and so the blessing over the wine must be repeated after Grace; and Raba acted in accordance with this ruling.

(6) I.e., after Grace, as Raba did.

(7) After each cup I intended drinking, no more. Hence when I did drink another it was a new act of drinking, and so I repeated the blessing each time. Consequently my action does not involve a general ruling.

(8) V. supra p. 541, n. 10. Thus the benediction for wine is not recited twice, one on account of kiddush and again on account of habdalah. Hence the same applies to two cups in general.

(9) Where Rab ruled that once they had declared their intention of saying Grace they might not drink again without blessing.

(10) His decision to say Grace proved that.

(11) This is a continuation of the passage narrating .R. Jacob b. Aha's visit to Raba, which had been parenthetically interrupted by the somewhat similar story about Amemar and his companions. The meal in question took place toward the end of the Sabbath, and at the termination of the Sabbath Raba performed habdalah.

(12) For the blessing over light.

(13) Then let the blessing for light be said over the lamp itself.

(14) 'The Master'.

(15) I.e., not less than three points of distinction and not more than seven must be recited in the habdalah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 104a

'But you said neither three nor seven?'¹

'It is true,' answered he, "'between the seventh day and the six working days" is of the nature of the conclusion,² and Rab Judah said Samuel's name: He who recites habdalah must say [something] in the nature of the conclusion near to its conclusion. While the Pumbeditheans maintain: [He must say something] in the nature of the commencement just before its conclusion. Wherein do they differ?³ — They differ in respect of a Festival which falls after the Sabbath [i.e., Sunday], when we conclude with '[Who makest a distinction] between holy and holy.'⁴ On the view that something in the nature of the commencement [must be repeated] immediately before the conclusion, it will be unnecessary to say, 'Thou didst make a distinction between the sanctity of the Sabbath and the sanctity of the Festival';⁵ but on the view that [a formula] in the nature of the conclusion [must be said] immediately before the conclusion, it is necessary to say, 'Thou didst make a distinction between the sanctity of the Sabbath and the sanctity of the Festival.'

The [above] text [stated]: 'R. Eleazer said in R. Oshaia's name: He who would recite but few [distinctions] must recite not less than three; while he who would add must not add beyond seven.' An objection is raised: Habdalah is recited at the conclusion of the Sabbath, at the conclusion of Festivals, at the conclusion of the Day of Atonement, at the conclusion of the Sabbath [giving place] to a Festival, and at the conclusion of a Festival [giving place] to the Intermediary Days,⁶ but not at the conclusion of a Festival [leading] to the Sabbath.'⁷ He who is well-versed recites many [points of distinction], while he who is not well-versed recites one? — It is [dependent on] Tannaim. For R. Johanan said: The son of holy men recited one, but the people are accustomed to recite three.⁸ Who is the son of holy men? — R. Menahem b. Simai; and why did they call him the son of holy men? Because he did not look at the effigy of a coin.⁹ R. Samuel b. Idi sent [word] to him:¹⁰ 'My brother Hanania recites one.' But the law does not agree with him. R. Joshua b. Levi said: he who recites habdalah must recite [formulas] in the nature of the distinctions mentioned in the Torah.¹¹ An objection is raised: What is the order of the distinctions [recited in the habdalah]? He recites, 'Who makest a distinction between holy and profane, between light and darkness, between Israel and the nations, between the seventh day and the six working days, between unclean and clean, between the sea and dry land, between the upper waters and the nether waters, between Priests, Levites and Israelites'; and he concludes with the order of Creation.¹² Others say, with 'he who formed the Creation.' R. Jose b. R. Judah said: He concludes, 'Who sanctifiest Israel.' Now if this is correct, surely no distinction is mentioned [in the Torah] between the sea and the dry land?¹³ — Delete 'between the sea and the dry land' from this. If so, [you must] also [delete] 'between the seventh day and the six working days'?¹⁴ — That corresponds to the conclusion,¹⁵ Then there is one less' so there are not seven?¹⁶ -I will tell you: [who made a distinction between] Priests, Levites and Israelites is two formulas. between Levites and Israelites [is one], as it is written, At that time the lord made distinct the tribe of Levi.¹⁷ Between Priests and Levites [is another], as It is written, The sons of Amram: Aaron and Moses; and Aaron was made distinct that he should be sanctified as most holy.¹⁸

How does he conclude it? — Rab said: 'Who sanctifiest Israel.' While Samuel said: 'Who makest a distinction, between holy and non-holy,' Abaye, — others state, R. Joseph — denounced¹⁹ this [ruling] of Rab. It was taught in the name of R. Joshua b. Hanania: When one concludes, 'Who sanctifiest Israel and makest a distinction between holy and non-holy,' his days and years are prolonged.

(1) But four.

(2) Habdalah ends with, 'Blessed art thou, O Lord, who makest a division between holy and non-holy'. This phrase, 'between the seventh day' etc. is similar in meaning, and forms a natural bridge to the conclusion, as it were; hence it is not counted. — All benedictions commence with the formula, 'Blessed art thou, O Lord, our God, King of the universe'; if lengthy, they conclude with the formula, 'Blessed art thou, O Lord, who 'etc. It is this latter formula which is referred to as the conclusion.

(3) Seeing that in most blessings the opening and the conclusion are similar in subject. Habdalah itself commences with 'He who maketh a distinction between holy and non-holy', while the passage preceding the conclusion is likewise 'who makest a division between the seventh day (i.e., holy) and the six working days (non-holy)'.
(4) Since both are holy, save that the holiness of the Sabbath is greater.

(5) Since the opening phrase is 'Who makest a distinction between holy and non-holy'.

(6) V. p. 16, n. 4. — Most of these phrases are in the plural in the original.

(7) thus habdalah is recited only to mark the passing of a day of higher sanctity than that which follows, but not the reverse.

(8) This 'son of holy men' was a Tanna, while the common practice was likewise based on the ruling of a Tanna. Thus we have a controversy of Tannaim.

(9) V. A.Z. 50a. 'Son' is probably used attributively, R. Menahem himself being holy (v. M.K. 25b on the effect of his death); nevertheless this mode of expression is employed because this father too was holy. — Tosaf.

(10) [It is not clear to whom this refers.]

(11) As explained anon.

(12) I.e., 'Blessed art thou, O Lord, who settest the Creation in order'.

(13) I.e., no phrase with the express term 'distinction'

(14) For no phrase states that God made a 'distinction' between the seventh day etc.

(15) And is therefore not counted.

(16) Whereas the purpose of this Baraita is to enumerate the seven formulas of distinction referred to above.

(17) Deut. X, 8.

(18) I Chron. XXIII, 13.

(19) Lit., 'cursed'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 104b

But the law is not as he.¹ 'Ulla visited Pumbeditha. Said Rab Judah to R. Isaac his son, 'Go and offer him a basket of fruit, and observe how he recites habdalah.² He did not go, [however, but] sent Abaye. When Abaye returned, he [R. Isaac] asked him, 'What did he say [in the habdalah]?' 'Blessed is He who maketh a distinction between holy and profane,' replied he, 'and nothing else.' When he came before his father he asked him, 'How did he recite it?' 'I did not go myself,' replied he, '[but] I sent Abaye, and he told me [that he recited] " . . . who makest a distinction between holy and profane".' Said he to him, 'Your pride and your haughtiness are the cause that you are unable to state the law from his own mouth.'

An objection is raised: In all blessings you commence with 'blessed [art Thou]' and conclude with 'blessed [art Thou],' except in the blessings over precepts,³ the blessings over fruits,⁴ a blessing immediately preceding⁵ another, and the last blessing of the reading of the Shema';⁶ in some of these you commence with 'Blessed' but do not conclude with 'Blessed', while in others you conclude with 'Blessed' but do not commence with 'Blessed'; and [in the blessing] 'Who is good and doeth good [unto all]'⁷ you commence with 'Blessed' but do not conclude with 'Blessed'.⁸ [

(1) A double ending is not employed, and the law is as Samuel.

(2) Make this an excuse for staying with him, so that you observe him reciting habdalah.

(3) A blessing is recited before the fulfilment of every precept.

(4) I.e., which are recited before eating or drinking; 'fruits' is employed generically and includes such items as bread, water, vegetables etc.

(5) Lit., 'near to'.

(6) The morning Shema' (v. Glos.) is preceded by two long benedictions and followed by one; the evening Shema' is followed by two.

(7) This is the third blessing (if the three which constitute Grace after Meals; v. Singer's Prayer Book pp. 280-285 for the whole, and p. 283 for the blessing immediately proceeding

(8) The blessings for precepts and fruits are generally short, and therefore 'Blessed' is not repeated at the conclusion. Blessings immediately 'preceding others: e.g., those of the Amidah (the 'Eighteen Benedictions'). As each ends with the formula, 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord, who' etc., the following does not commence with 'Blessed'. Similarly, the blessing immediately preceding the Shema' concludes with 'Blessed' etc., and the Shema' together with the blessing which follows it is regarded as one long blessing; hence that too does not commence with 'Blessed'. (That benediction itself ends with 'Blessed art Thou', etc.; hence the fourth one recited in the evening — v. n. 5 — which follows immediately after, likewise does not commence with 'blessed'.) The third blessing of Grace after meals, though immediately following a conclusion containing the formula, 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord', etc., commence with 'Blessed', notwithstanding the above general rule, because it was instituted in memory of the Jews slain at Bethar in 135 C.E. which marked the 'disastrous end of the Bar Cochba revolt; hence it was regarded as quite distinct and apart from the rest. It is indeed a lengthy benediction, but as much of it consists of synonyms for God it would be unfitting to repeat 'Blessed art Thou' in the conclusion.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 105a

Now this raises a difficulty according to 'Ulla?¹ — 'Ulla can answer you: This too is like a blessing for precepts. [For] what is the reason in the case of a blessing over precepts?² Because It is [mere] praise;³ this too is praise.⁴

R. Hanania b. Shelemia and the disciples of Rab were sitting at a meal, and R. Hamnuna Saba⁵ was waiting on them. Said they to him, 'Go and see if the day has become holy,⁶ in which case we will interrupt [the meal]⁷ and appoint it for the Sabbath.'⁸ 'You do not need it,' he replied; 'the Sabbath itself makes it an appointed [meal].'⁹ For Rab said: Just as the Sabbath makes [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of tithe,¹⁰ so does the Sabbath make [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of kiddush.¹¹ Now they understood from him: just as it makes [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of kiddush, so does it make [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of habdalah.¹² Said R. Amram to them, thus did Rab say: It makes [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of kiddush, but it does not make [it an] appointed [meal] in respect of habdalah.¹³ But that is only in respect of interrupting [the meal], viz., that we do not interrupt [it]; we may not however commence [one].;¹⁴ And even about interrupting we said this with respect to eating only, but not with respect to drinking.¹⁵ And with respect to drinking too we said this only of wine and beer: but as for water, it does not matter.¹⁶

Now he differs from R. Huna. For R. Huna saw a certain man drinking water before habdalah, [whereupon] he observed to him Are you not afraid of choking?¹⁷ For it was taught in R. Akiba's name: He who tastes anything before reciting habdalah shall die through choking.¹⁸ The Rabbis of R. Ashi's academy were not particular about water.

Rabina asked R. Nahman b. Isaac: He who did not recite kiddush on the eve of the Sabbath,¹⁹ can he proceed to recite kiddush at any time of the day?²⁰ — Said he to him: Since the sons of R. Hiyya said, he who did not recite habdalah at the termination of the Sabbath can proceed to recite habdalah the whole week, [it follows that] there too, he who did not recite kiddush on the eve of the Sabbath can proceed to recite kiddush at any time of the day. He raised an objection to him: On the nights of the Sabbath and on the nights of a Festival there is sanctification [kiddush] over the cup [of wine] and a reference [to the Sabbath or Festival] in the Grace after meals.²¹ On the Sabbath and a Festival²² there is no sanctification over a cup [of wine], but there is a reference in the Grace after meals. Now if you should think that he who did not recite kiddush on the eve of the Sabbath can proceed to recite kiddush the whole day, then on the Sabbath and festival [during the day] too there may be sanctification over the cup, 'or if he did not recite kiddush in the evening, he recites kiddush on the morrow?—Said he to him: He [the Tanna] does not teach a case of 'if'.

He raised an objection to him: [If a man must choose between] the honour of the day and the honour of the night,²³ the honour of the day takes precedence; and if he has only one cup [of wine], he recites

(1) Why did he not conclude habdalah with blessed' etc.?

(2) That we do not conclude with 'blessed.'

(3) It contains nothing else, and is consequently short.

(4) To God, for having made a distinction between holy and profane, and it does not treat of any other subject.

(5) The aged, or the Elder.

(6) I.e. if the Sabbath has commenced.

(7) By removing the tables; v. supra p. 533, n. 7.

(8) By removing the table and then bringing it back the meal would be specially appointed as being one account of the Sabbath. (Three meals must be eaten on the Sabbath, and probably they wished to signify that this, though started before, should count as one.)

(9) Since you must pause to recite kiddush, that itself gives it the character of an appointed meal for the Sabbath.

(10) A man may make a light meal, but not a full ('appointed') meal of untithed produce before it is completely ready and subject to tithe. (Produce is not subject to tithe until it has been harvested, threshed and carried in through the front of the house, v. B.M., Sonc. ed. p. 507f.) But the Sabbath, confers upon every meal, even if light, the character of a full, appointed meal, so that untithed produce is then forbidden.

(11) Nothing whatsoever may be eaten before kiddush; thus we see that the Sabbath automatically makes it a Sabbath meal.

(12) One must not eat at the conclusion of the Sabbath before habdalah. They understood that if a man commences during the day, the conclusion of the Sabbath automatically renders what follows an appointed meal, which is forbidden before habdalah, hence habdalah must be recited in the middle of the meal.

(13) For having commenced the meal on the Sabbath, he honours the Sabbath by concluding it without interruption, even if it continues beyond nightfall.

(14) Even a light meal before habdalah.

(15) Drinking must be interrupted for habdalah.

(16) Drinking water is of such slight consequence that it is permitted before habdalah. Drinking wine and beer however, occupies an intermediate position: it is sufficiently unimportant to be interrupted for habdalah, but too important to start after nightfall before habdalah.

(17) This was a rebuke.

(18) Through being unable to catch his breath.

(19) I.e., at the very commencement of the Sabbath' immediately after nightfall. Perhaps the phrase, eve of the Sabbath' indicates that the kiddush was slightly advanced, so as to avert the possibility of commencing the Sabbath too late; cf. O.H. 271, 1 and אברהם מוגן a.l.

(20) Sc. the Sabbath.

(21) Special passages are inserted.

(22) I.e., during the daytime.

(23) The Sabbath is honoured by indulging in more drink and special dainties; here he lacks sufficient for additions at all meals, and must choose between them.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 105b

the kiddush of the day over it,¹ because the kiddush of the day takes precedence over the honour of the day. Now if this is correct,² let him leave it until the morrow and do both with it?³ -A religious duty is [more] precious [when performed] at the proper time.

Yet do we say, A religious duty is [more] precious [when performed] at the proper time?⁴ Surely it was taught: He who enters his house on the termination of the Sabbath recites blessings over the while, the light and the spices, and then he recites habdalah over the cup [of wine]. But if he has one cup only, he leaves it until after the meal and recites then all together after it.⁵ Thus we do not say, A religious duty is [more] precious at the proper time? — Said he to him, 'I am neither a self-pretended scholar⁶ nor a visionary [i.e., story-teller] nor unique [in this ruling], but I am a teacher and systematizer of traditions,⁷ and they rule thus in the Beth Hamidrash as I do; we draw a distinction between ushering the day in and ushering the day out: as for ushering the day in, the more we advance it the better, as we thereby show our love for it; but as for ushering the day out, we delay it, so that it may not be [appear] a burden upon us.⁸

You may infer eight things from this Baraita: [i] He who recites habdalah during the prayer⁹ must [also] recite habdalah over the cup [of wine];¹⁰ [ii] Grace [after meals] requires a cup [of wine]; [iii] the cup [of wine] for Grace demands a [minimum] standard;¹¹ [iv] he who says a blessing [over anything] must partake thereof;¹² [v] if he tastes it he renders it defective;¹³ [vi] even when one has tasted [food] he recites habdalah;¹⁴

(1) I.e., kiddush on Friday evenings, which marks the sanctification of the whole day. But he must not leave it for drinking during the meal.

(2) Viz., R. Nahman's ruling.

(3) Kiddush, and pay honour to the day by drinking some of it during a meal.

(4) Even in such a case, where by postponing it an additional purpose is served.

(5) V. supra 102b notes.

(6) I have not said this on my own authority.

(7) The translation follows Jast. V.

(8) Hence kiddush is said as early as possible, and it may not be deferred for the morrow. But we willingly delay the habdalah.

(9) To Amidah or the Eighteen Benedictions, which constitute the Prayer par excellence; a habdalah formula is inserted in the fourth benediction.

(10) For 'he who enters his house' implies that he has seen away from home, presumably at the synagogue, where he would already have recited habdalah in the Amidah of the evening service.

(11) Viz., a quarter of log (rebi'ith). Otherwise, he could use half for habdalah and half for Grace.

(12) Either he or one of the listeners. For otherwise he could recite habdalah over the cup of wine and leave it untouched for Grace.

(13) it is now assumed that he had more than one rebi'ith, but not two. Hence he could perform habdalah, drink the excess, and leave a rebi'ith for Grace. Since this is not done, it follows that merely by drinking a little of the whole cup it becomes unfit for Grace.

(14) There is a contrary view infra 106b, q.v. Here we see that when there is insufficient wine, he has his meal and then recites habdalah.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 106a

[vii] you may recite two sanctities over the same cup;¹ and [viii] this is [the ruling of] Beth Shammai as interpreted by R. Judah.² R. Ashi said: [The deductions that] if he tastes it he renders it defective, and that the cup of Grace requires a [minimum] standard, are the same thing,³ and this is what he Says: What is the reason that once he tastes of it he renders it defective? Because the cup of Grace requires a [minimum] standard. R. Jacob b. Idi objected to a defective pitcher. R. Idi b. Shisha objected to a defective cup. Mar b. R. Ashi objected even to a defective barrel.⁴

Our Rabbis taught: Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy;⁵ remember it over wine.⁶ I know it only of the day; whence do we know it of the night?⁷ Because it is stated, 'remember the Sabbath day, to keep; it holy.' [You ask], 'Whence do we know it of the night?' — on the contrary, the principal kiddush is recited at night, for when he sanctifies, he must sanctify [from] the beginning of the day. Moreover, [you say,] 'whence do we know it of the night? Because it is stated, "remember the sabbath day to keep it holy"- the Tanna seeks [proof] for the night, while he adduces a verse relating to the day[time]? — This is what he means: 'Remember the Sabbath, day, to keep it holy': remember it over the wine at its commencement.⁸ I know it only of the night: whence do we know it of the day? Because it is said, 'Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.

What blessing does he recite by day?⁹ -Said Rab Judah: ...who createst the fruit of the vine.¹⁰ R. Ashi visited Mahuza.¹¹ Said they [the Mahuzaeans] to him, let the master recite the Great kiddush for us.' They gave him [the cup of wine]. Now he pondered, What is the Great kiddush? Let us see, he reasoned, for all blessings [of kiddush] we first say ' . . . who createst the fruit of the vine'¹² [So] he recited' . . .who createst the fruit of the vine,' and tarried over it,¹³ [and then] he saw an old man bend [his head] and drink. Thereupon he applied to himself [the verse], The wise man, his eyes are in his head.¹⁴

The sons of R. Hiyya Said: He who did not recite habdalah at the termination of the Sabbath proceeds to recite habdalah anytime during the week. And, until when?—Said R. Zera: Until the fourth day of the week.¹⁵ Even as R. Zera sat before R. Assi — others state, R. Assi sat before R. Johanan — and he sat and stated: In respect to divorces the first day of the week, the second, and the third [are defined as] after the Sabbath; the fourth, the fifth, and the eve of the [Sabbath] day [rank as] before the Sabbath.¹⁶ R. Jacob b. Idi said: But [he does] not [recite a blessing] over the light.¹⁷

R. Beruna said in Rab's name:

-
- (1) habdalah and Grace are two separate sanctities. i.e., religious duties.
 - (2) That the blessing for light precedes that of spices, for Beth Hillel reverse it (supra 103a). It cannot be the ruling of Beth Hillel as interpreted by R.Meir, for on that view the blessing for light precedes Grace, whereas this Baraita states that the blessings are recited after Grace.
 - (3) I.e., tasting it renders it unfit only when less than the minimum quantity is thereby left; otherwise it would remain fit.
 - (4) A small barrel is meant. If kiddush or habdalah was recited over wine contained in one of these, they insisted that it should be full.
 - (5) Ex. XX, 8.
 - (6) Kiddush, whereby the Sabbath is remembered,' must be recited over wine.
 - (7) That kiddush must be recited Friday evening over wine.
 - (8) 'To keep it holy' implies that it is to be 'remembered,' i.e., sanctified, by kiddush, when the holiness of the day commences, which is in the evening.
 - (9) It is stated Supra 105a that kiddush ('sanctification) is not recited by day.
 - (10) I.e., no special benediction apart from the usual one recited over wine.
 - (11) V. p. 20 ,n. 5.
 - (12) Hence it would be fitting for that to be called the Great kiddush, since it is recited on every occasion.
 - (13) He paused before drinking it in order to see whether this was deemed sufficient for the kiddush by day.
 - (14) Eccl. II, 14.
 - (15) Exclusive. From the fourth day onward the days are counted with the following Sabbath, and it would be inappropriate to recite habdalah then for the preceding Sabbath.
 - (16) E.g., if a man divorces his wife on condition that she performs a certain acton after a particular Sabbath, it must be done not later than the third day following; if he stipulates, before the Sabbath, Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday are meant.
 - (17) When he recites habdalah later in the week. Rashbam: the reason is presumably because the blessing for light can be recited only at the termination of the Sabbath (v. supra 54a), since it was then created for the first time.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 106b

He who washes his hands [before eating]¹ must not recite kiddush.² Said R. Isaac b. Samuel b. Martha to them: Rab has not yet died³ and we have [already] forgotten his ruling! I stood many times before Rab: sometimes he preferred bread [and] recited kiddush over bread; at others he preferred wine [and] recited kiddush over wine.⁴

R. Huna said in Rab's name: Once he has tasted [food] he must not recite kiddush.⁵ R. Hana b. Hinena asked R. Huna: May he who has tasted [food] recite habdalah?⁶ I maintain, replied he, [that] he who has tasted [food] recites habdalah. But R. Assi said: He who has tasted [food] may not recite habdalah.

R. Jeremiah b. Abba visited R. Assi. He forgot himself and ate something. [Then] they gave him a cup [of wine] and he recited habdalah. Said his [R. Assi's] wife to him [R. Assi]: But you⁷ do not act thus? Leave him, replied he; he holds as his teacher.⁸

R. Joseph said in Samuel's name: He who has tasted [food] may not recite kiddush; he who has tasted [food] may not recite habdalah. But Rabbah said in R. Nahman's name in Samuel's name: He who has tasted [food] does recite kiddush; and he who has tasted [food] does recite habdalah ‘

(1) The hands must be washed before partaking of a meal at which bread is eaten, and there must be no interruption between the washing and the eating of some bread.

(2) Before breaking bread-kiddush, of course, comes first — , as it constitutes an interruption, and he discharges his own duty thereby. If he does recite kiddush, he must wash again before eating.

(3) Lit., 'Rab's soul has not yet gone to rest.' — Or perhaps: Rab has only just died.

(4) Rashi and Rashbam: if he was very hungry he would wash and recite kiddush over the bread and immediately eat it. This proves that the reciting of kiddush is not an interruption and does not necessitate washing again. R. Tam: sometimes he preferred bread (being very hungry) and recited kiddush (over wine) with the intention of eating bread immediately after it (וַיֵּשֶׁב can bear this meaning); hence he must have washed before kiddush, and as we see, another washing is unnecessary.

(5) In the evening, but just wait for the morrow.

(6) That evening — sc. at the termination of the Sabbath — , or must he to wait for the morrow.

(7) Lit., 'the Master.'

(8) Sc. Rab, in whose name R. Huna gave his ruling.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 107a

Raba said: The law is: He who has tasted [food] recites kiddush, and he who has tasted [food] recites habdalah. Again, he who does not recite kiddush on the eve of the Sabbath proceeds to recite kiddush any time during the Sabbath, until the termination of the Sabbath. He who did not recite habdalah at the termination of the Sabbath proceeds to recite habdalah and time during the week.¹ Amemar commenced this ruling of a Raba in the following version: The law is: He who has tasted [food] recites kiddush, he who has tasted [food] recites habdalah; he who did not recite kiddush on the eve of the Sabbath proceeds to recite kiddush at any time of the day. He who did not recite habdalah proceeds to recite habdalah the whole day.² Mar Yanuka and Mar Kashisha the sons of R. Hisda³ said to R. Ashi: Amemar once visited our town: lacking wine, we brought him beer [for habdalah], but he would not recite habdalah [over it], 'and passed the night fasting.'⁴ The next day we took trouble to procure wine for him, whereupon he recited habdalah and ate something. The following year he again visited our town, [and] we offered him beer. Said he, 'If so, it is the wine of the country';⁵ [so] he recited habdalah and ate a little. This proves three things; [i] [Even] he who recites habdalah in the Prayer must recite habdalah over a cup [of wine];⁶ [ii] a man must not eat until he has recited habdalah; and [iii] he who did not recite habdalah at the termination of the Sabbath proceeds to recite habdalah any time during the week.

R. Hisda asked R. Huna:⁷ Is it permitted to recite kiddush over beer? Said he to him, Seeing that I asked Rab, and Rab asked R. Hiyya, and R. Hiyya asked Rabbi about pirzuma,⁸ fig [-beverage], and asne,⁹ and he could not resolve it for him, can there be a question about [barley] beer! Now it was understood from him: kiddush indeed may not be recited over it, yet we can recite habdalah over it. Said R. Hisda to them, Thus did Rab say: Just as you may not recite kiddush over it, so may you not recite habdalah over it. It was stated too' R. Tahlifa b. Abdimi said in Samuel's name: Just as you may not recite kiddush over it, so may you not recite habdalah over it. Levi sent to Rabbi beer strained thirteenfold.¹⁰ On tasting it he found it well-flavoured. Said he: 'Over such as this it is fitting to recite kiddush and to utter all the psalms and praises in the world.' At night it caused him pains. Said he: 'Seeing that it chastises us, shall it propitiate!' ¹¹

R. Joseph said: I will vow in the presence of a multitude¹² not to drink beer. Raba said: I would drink flaxwater,¹³ yet I would not drink beer. Raba also said: His drink shall be but beer who recites kiddush over beer.¹⁴ Rab found R. Huna¹⁵ reciting kiddush over beer. Said he to him: 'Abba¹⁶ has begun to acquire istiri¹⁷ with beer. '¹⁸

Our Rabbis taught: You recite kiddush over wine only, and you say a blessing over wine only. Do we then not recite the blessing, 'by whose word all things exist' over beer and water? — Said Abaye, this is what he means: You do not say, 'bring a cup of blessing to say Grace [after meals],' over aught except wine.

Our Rabbis taught: You do not recite kiddush over beer. On the authority of R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon they said: You can recite kiddush [over it]. The tasting of wine [demands] but a small quantity.¹⁹ R. Jose b. Judah said: [At least] a mouthful. R. Huna said in Rab's name, and thus did R. Gidal of Naresh²⁰ learn: He who recites kiddush and drinks a mouthful [of the wine] as discharged [his duty]; if not, he has not discharged [his duty]. it. Nahman b. Isaac said: I recite this [name] neither [as] Gidal b. Menassia nor Gidal b. Manyomi, but simply Gidal. What difference does that make? — In respect of opposing [one statement] of his to [another statement] of his.²¹

CLOSE TO MINHAH. The scholars asked: Did we learn, CLOSE TO the great MINHAH, or perhaps we learned, CLOSE TO the lesser "MINHAH?²² Did we learn, CLOSE to the great MINHAH, the reason being on account of the Passover-offering, lest he come to prolong [the meal]

(1) V. supra 106a.

(2) Viz., Sunday, but not the whole week.

(3) Yanuka means youth; Kashisha, old age. Some accordingly translate: the younger add the elder sons of R. Hisda respectively. Others however translate: The son born to R. Hisda in his youth and the son born in his old age, i.e., the elder and the younger sons of R. Hisda respectively. Rashi and Keth. 89b s.v. נור and Tosaf. in B.B. 7b s.v. נור

(4) Dan. VI, 19. He would not eat without reciting (habdalah).

(5) Beer is evidently a popular drink and occupies the same place here that wine generally occupies elsewhere.

(6) V. Supra p. 552, n. 4.

(7) Text as emended (Bah).

(8) Jast. A beer brewed from figs, in that case it must differ from תאניני which is also a beverage made from figs, while ordinary beer is from barley. Rashi however regards pirzuma as barley beer, while ordinary beer is made from dates.

(9) Jast.: a drink made of shrubby fruit(?) — All these are superior to the ordinary barley beer about which R. Hisda asked.

(10) R. Han.: repeatedly strained for clarity — thirteen merely indicates many. Rashbam: beer made by pouring water on dates, then pouring the same water with its date infusion over other dates, this operation being repeated many times.

(11) Rashbam: i.e., it causes pain — is it fit to propitiate God therewith, i.e., to recite kiddush over it — surely not! Others: first it entices (by its pleasant flavour) and then it causes pain.

- (12) A vow made in the presence of a multitude cannot be annulled, v. Git. 36a.
- (13) I.e., water in which flax is steeped.
- (14) If he grudges the money for wine, there will come a time when he can afford only beer for his general drinking.
- (15) Var. lec., Rabbah b. Bar Hanah.
- (16) Lit., 'father' — a title of respect.
- (17) Coins.
- (18) I.e., you have begun trading with beer, so it has become sufficiently valuable in your eyes to recite kiddush over it.
- (19) He who says a blessing over wine must taste some of it (supra 105b bottom); the smallest quantity suffices.
- (20) identical 'with Nahras or Nahr-sar, on the canal of the same name, on the east bank of the Euphrates; Obermeyer, p. 307.
- (21) If a statement by one of these two is found to contradict the present one, there is no difficulty, as he is not identical with either. Or perhaps: he may be identical with one of them, so that a contrary statement by the other does not prove a self-contradiction.
- (22) The time for the great minhah is six and a half hours (i.e., half an hour after midday) and onwards. This is the earliest hour for the sacrificing of the evening amid (v. supra 58a). The lesser minhah is two and a half hours before nightfall.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 107b

and refrain from performing the Passover [-offering]; or perhaps we learned CLOSE TO the lesser 'MINHAH, the reason being on account of the unleavened bread, lest he merely gorge himself with the unleavened bread?'¹ Said Rabina, Come and hear: Even King Agrippa² who was accustomed to eat at nine hours, might not eat on that day until night. fall. Now it is well if you say that we learned, CLOSE TO the lesser MINHAH, Hence it is that which is noteworthy about Agrippa;³ but if you say [that] we learned, CLOSE TO the great MINHAH, what is there noteworthy about Agrippa, seeing that the interdict has [already] fallen upon him from before?⁴ What then? We learned, CLOSE TO the lesser MINHAH? Yet after all what is there remarkable about Agrippa: surely the the of the interdict has come!⁵ -You might say: Nine hours⁶ to Agrippa is like four hours⁷ to us;⁸ Hence he informs us [otherwise]. R. Jose⁹ Said: But he may make a meal¹⁰ with various sweet-meats.¹¹ R. Isaac would make a meal with vegetables. It was taught likewise: The attendant may make a meal with the inwards,¹² and he may [also] offer them to the guests. And though there is no proof of this, yet there is a hint thereof, for it is said, Break up for you a fallow ground, and sow not among thorns.¹³

Raba used to drink wine the whole of Passover eve, so as to whet his appetite¹⁴ to eat more unleavened bread in the evening. Raba said: How do I know that wine whets the appetite? Because we learned:

-
- (1) Lit., 'a gross eating,' having eaten his fill beforehand.
- (2) A king of the Hasmonean dynasty, who followed Rabbinical teaching.
- (3) I.e., though he did not eat earlier, and at nine hours interdict has not yet commenced (for it commences just before nine and a half hours), he might nevertheless not start then, as he would probably prolong it.
- (4) Surely we would not think him exempt from the interdict merely because he had not yet eaten.
- (5) I.e., about three p.m.
- (6) I.e., about ten a.m.
- (7) Before he finishes his meal. For even R Jose, who maintains that a man needs not interrupt the meal once he has commenced (supra 99b), admits that he must not commence a meal knowing that he will prolong it beyond the forbidden period.
- (8) Since the latter hour is the general mealtime, while Agrippa did not breakfast until three p.m.
- (9) Alfasi reads: Assi.
- (10) Lit., 'dip.'
- (11) Fruit or meat, without bread: these were generally dipped into a relish. — The time meant is from minhah and onwards.

(12) Of an animal which he is preparing for the festival meals.

(13) Jer. IV, 3. Rashi: i.e., do not work without profit; so if a man is engaged on preparing food and is forbidden to eat thereof it causes him mental suffering. [Rashi did not seem to read: 'and he may offer them to the guest. Rashbam and Tosaf. explain the reference to a relish prepared for whetting the appetite and the verse is quoted in illustration that the stomach must be prepared to receive food as the ground for seeds].

(14) Lit., 'draw his heart'.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 108a

Between these cups,¹ if he wishes to drink [more] he may drink; between the third and the fourth he must not drink.² Now if you say that it [wine] satisfies, why may he drink? Surely he will merely gorge on the unleavened bread! Hence this proves that it sharpens the appetite.

R. Shesheth used to fast³ the whole of the eve of passover. Shall we say that R. Shesheth holds [that] we learned, Close TO the great MINHAH, the reason being on account of the Passover [sacrifice], lest he prolong [the meal] and refrain from performing the Passover [-offering]; and he [also] holds as R. Oshaia, who said: 'The son of Bathyra used to declare valid the Passover [-offering] which one slaughtered in its own name⁴ on the morning of the fourteenth'; and from the morning it is the time for the Passover, for the whole day is the time for the Passover, as he holds, [and the whole assembly . . . shall kill it] between the evenings⁵ [means any time] between yesterday evening and this evening?⁶ — I will tell you [that is] not [so]. R. Shesheth was different, for he was delicate, and if he ate anything in the morning his food would not benefit him in the evening.⁷

EVEN THE POOREST MAN IN ISRAEL MUST NOT EAT UNTIL HE RECLINES. It was stated: [For the eating of] the unleavened bread reclining is necessary; for the bitter herbs reclining is not necessary.⁸ [As for the drinking of] the wine, — It was stated in R. Nahman's name [that] reclining is necessary, and it was stated in R. Nahman's name that reclining is not necessary. Yet they do not disagree: one [ruling] refers to the first two cups, and the other ruling refers to the last two cups. Some explain it in one direction, others explain it in the other direction. [Thus:] some explain it in one direction: for the first two cups reclining is necessary, because it is at this point that freedom commences; for the last two cups reclining is necessary, [because] what has been has been.⁹ Others explain it in the contrary direction: on the contrary, the last two cups necessitate reclining, [because] it is precisely then that there is freedom; the first two cups do not necessitate reclining, [because] he is still reciting 'we were slaves.'¹⁰ Now that it was stated thus and it was stated thus, both [the first and the last ones]¹¹ necessitate reclining. Lying on the back is not reclining; reclining on the right side is not reclining.¹² Moreover he may put [his food] into the windpipe before the gullet,¹³ and thus endanger himself.

A woman in her husband's [house] need not recline,¹⁴ but if she is a woman of importance she must recline.¹⁵ A son in his father's [house] must recline.¹⁶ The scholars asked: What about a disciple in his teacher's presence? — Come and hear, for Abaye said: When we were at the Master's [Rabbah b. Nahman's] house, we used to recline on each other's knees. When we came to R. Joseph's house he remarked to us, 'You do not need it: the fear of your teacher is as the fear of Heaven.'

An objection is raised: A man must recline with all [people], and even a disciple in his master's presence? — That was taught of a craftsman's apprentice.

The scholars asked: What about an attendant? — Come and hear, [or R. Joshua b. Levi said: A attendant, who ate as much as an olive of unleavened bread while reclining has discharged [his duty]. Thus, only while reclining, but not if he was not reclining. This proves that he must recline. This proves it.

R. Joshua b. Levi also said: Women are subject to [the law of] these four cups

- (1) The first and second, and the second and third.
- (2) The third cup is drunk in connection with grace after meals. Having died already, he has no need to drink for his appetite, and if he now drinks more he will appear to be adding to the statutory number (four) of cups. T.J. states that drink after the meal (apart from the two which are still to be drunk to make up the four) intoxicates and makes the person unfit to recite the hallel.
- (3) Lit., sit in a fast'.
- (4) i.e., as a Passover, and not as a different sacrifice.
- (5) Ex. XII, 6 (E.V. (at dusk)).
- (6) I.e., the evenings commencing the fourteenth and the fifteenth. The night must be omitted, since offerings cannot be sacrifices at night. — Though of course sacrifices lead altogether ceased by the time of R. Shesheth, yet if on this view one had to fast when the temple stood, it would still be necessary, because the interdict had never formally been rescinded.
- (7) I.e., he would have no appetite in the evening.
- (8) the former symbolizes freedom; the latter, bondage. Bitter herbs may not be eaten while reclining.
- (9) The last two cups come after the meal, by which time the whole narrative of Israel's liberation has been completed. Hence there is no need then to emphasize the theme of freedom.
- (10) V. infra 116a.
- (11) var. lec.: all.
- (12) Since he must eat with his right hand.
- (13) if he eats lying on his back may go down the wrong way.
- (14) Because she stands under his authority.
- (15) Isserles (O.H. 472, 4 Gloss) remarks that women nowadays are of high worth.
- (16) He does not sense his father's authority so strongly.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 108b

because they too were included in that miracle.¹

Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: These four cups must contain sufficient for the mixing of a generous cup.² if he drank them raw [undiluted], he has discharged [his duty].³ If he drank them [all] at once,⁴ he has discharged [his duty]. If he gave his sons and household to drink of them,⁵ he has discharged [his duty].

'If he drank them raw [undiluted]. he has discharged [his duty].' Raba observed: He has discharged [his duty] of wine, but he has not discharged [his duty] of [symbolizing his] freedom.⁶ If he drank them [all] at once, Rab said:⁷ He has discharged [his duty of drinking] wine,⁸ [but] he has not discharged [his duty of] four cups.⁹ 'If he gave his sons and household to drink of them, he has discharged [his duty]': Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Providing that he [himself] drank the greater part of [each] cup.

An objection is raised: These four cups must contain the standard of a rebi'ith, whether neat or diluted, whether new [wine] or old; R. Judah said: It must possess the taste and the appearance of wine. Thus it is incidentally taught.'the standard of a rebi'ith,' whereas you say, 'a generous cup'? — I will answer you: Both are the same standard, [for] what does he mean by 'sufficient for the mixing of a generous cup? For each one separately [of the four cups]. which is a rebi'ith for all of them together.¹⁰

'R. Judah said: It must possess the taste and appearance of wine. Said Raba, What is R. Judah's reason? Because it is written, Look not thou upon the wine when it is red.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: All are bound to [drink] the four cups, men, women, and children. Said R. Judah: Of what benefit then is wine to children? But we distribute to them

(1) Of liberation; v. Sot. 11b, where it is stated that the Israelites were redeemed as a reward to the righteous women of that generation.

(2) Their wine was too strong to be drunk neat. 'A generous cup' is one of sufficient quantity for Grace, viz., a rebi'ith (quarter of a log), and Rab Judah said that each of these four cups must contain enough undiluted wine to make up to a rebi'ith of diluted wine. — The usual mixture was one Part wine to three parts water.

(3) Providing that he drank a rebi'ith on each, occasion (Rashbam).

(4) Without following the order prescribed infra 114a and 116a-b.

(5) Possibly separate cups were not set for each member of the household. as is done nowadays; v. supra 99b Tosaf. s.v.

לֹא יִפְחָתוּ לֹא מֵאַרְבַּע כּוֹסוֹת

(6) I.e., he has discharged his duty in a poor way, since drinking undiluted wine is hardly drinking at all — This does not refer to wine nowadays, which is not so strong and does not require dilution.

(7) Alfasi and Asheri omit: Rab said.

(8) V. infra 109: a man must rejoice on a Festival by drinking wine; this duty he has now discharged.

(9) But all count as one cup. and another three are necessary.

(10) I.e., a rebi'ith of the raw wine, which when diluted will make four rebi'ith of drinkable wine, a rebi'ith for each cup.

(11) Prov. XXIII, 31. Thus it does not merit the name wine unless it has its appearance too.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 109a

parched ears of corn and nuts on the eve of Passover, so that they should not fall asleep, and ask [the 'questions'].¹ It was related of R. Akiba that he used to distribute parched ears and nuts to children on the eve of Passover, so that they might not fall asleep but ask [the 'questions']. It was taught, R. Eliezer said: The mazzoth are eaten hastily² on the night of Passover, on account of the children, so that they should not fall asleep.³ It was taught: it was related of R. Akiba⁴ [that] never did he say in the Beth Hamidrash, 'It is time to rise [cease study]', except on the eve of Passover and the eve of the Day of Atonement. On the eve of Passover, because of the children, so that they might not fall asleep. On the eve of the Day of Atonement, in order that they should give food to their children.

Our Rabbis taught: A man is in duty bound to make his children and his household rejoice on a Festival, for it is said, And thou shalt rejoice it, thy feast, [thou and thy son, and thy daughter, etc.]⁵ Wherewith does he make them rejoice? With wine. R. Judah said: Men with what is suitable for them, and women with, what is suitable for them. 'Men with what is suitable for them': with wine. And women with what? R. Joseph recited: in Babylonia, with coloured garments; in Eretz Yisrael, with ironed lined garments.

It was taught, R. Judah b. Bathyra said: When the temple was in existence there could be no rejoicing save with meat, as it is said, And thou shalt sacrifice peace-offerings, and shalt eat there; and thou shalt rejoice before the Lord thy God.⁶ But now that the Temple is no longer in existence, there is no rejoicing save with wine, as it is said, and wine that maketh glad the heart of man.⁷ R. Isaac said: The xestes⁸ for muries in Sepphoris was about equal to the Temple log, and thereby we gauge the rebi'ith of [wine for] Passover.⁹ R. Johanan said: The ancient tomanta which was in Tiberias exceeded this by a quarter, and thereby we gauge the rebi'ith of [wine for] Passover. R. Hisda said: The rebi'ith of the Torah¹⁰ is [the cubic content of a vessel] two fingerbreadths square by two and seven-tenths¹¹ fingerbreadths in depth.¹² As it was taught: Then he shall bathe all his flesh in water:¹³ [this intimates] that nothing must interpose between his flesh and the water; 'in water' [means] in the water of a mikweh; 'all his flesh' [implies sufficient] water for his whole body to be covered therein. And how much is that?

(1) v. infra 116a Mishnah.

(2) Others: the plate containing the mazzoth is lifted, to draw the attention of the children to the unusual fare; others, the mazzoth are taken away from the children before they have eaten their fill, as a heavy meal conduces to sleep.

(3) Var. lec.: so that they should ask 'questions'. This agrees with the first alternative translation in the preceding note. R. Han. reads both: so that they should not fall asleep but ask.

(4) In Suk. 28a this is attributed to R. Johanan b. Zakkai.

(5) Deut. XVI, 14. Presumably the proof lies in the bracketed passage, which is absent in the text. Possibly too he reads: we-Simmakta (pi'el) 'and thou shalt cause to rejoice' instead of we-Samakta 'and thou shalt rejoice. Tosaf.'s reading, however, and Maharsha emends text accordingly, is: and thou shalt rejoice, thou and thy household (ib. XIV 26). This refers to the eating of the second tithe in Jerusalem, and its teaching is applied here to Festivals.

(6) Deut. XXVII, 7.

(7) Ps. CIV, 15.

(8) A measure kept as a standard; it was somewhat less than a pint.

(9) Required for the four cups.

(10) In respect to several Biblical laws a rebi'ith is specified by the Rabbis.

(11) Lit., 'two and a half and a fifth.'

(12) Hence the volume of a rebi'ith is $2 \times 2 \times 27 = 108$ cubic fingerbreadths.

(13) Lev. XV, 16.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 109b

A square cubit by three cubits' depth, and the Sages estimated the standard of the water of a mikweh at forty se'ahs.¹

R. Ashi said: Rabin b. Hinena told me, The Table in the Sanctuary was jointed.² For if you should think that it was [permanently] fastened, how could one immerse a cubit in a cubit?³ What difficulty is this! Perhaps it was immersed in the sea which Solomon made. For R. Hiyya taught: The sea which Solomon made held one hundred and fifty clean [i.e., regulation-sized] mikwoth.

AND THEY SHOULD GIVE HIM NOT LESS THAN FOUR [CUPS]. How could our Rabbis enact something whereby one is led into danger: Surely it was taught: A man must not eat in pairs, nor drink in pairs,⁴ nor cleanse [himself] twice nor perform his requirements⁵ twice? — Said R. Nahman: Scripture said, [it is] a night of guarding [unto the lord]:⁶ [i.e.,] it is a night that is guarded for all time⁷ from harmful spirits. Raba said: The cup of Grace [after meals] combines [with the others] for good, but does not combine for evil.⁸ Rabina said: Our Rabbis instituted four cups as symbolizing liberty: each one

(1) 1 se'ah == 6 kabs; 1 kab == 4 logs; 1 log == 4 rebi'ith; 1 cubit == 6 handbreadths; 1 handbreadth = 4 fingerbreadths. On this basis R. Hisda arrives at his estimate. Thus: 1 Se'ah == 96 rebi'ith; 40 se'as == 96 X 40 == 3840 rebi'ith. Hence cubic capacity of mikweh is 3840 X 108 == 41472 fingerbreadths which is the equivalent of cubic capacity of 3 cubic cubits, 1 cubic cubit being equal to 243 (== 13824 fingerbreadths), and 3 cubic cubits being equal to 3 X 13824 == 41472].

(2) And the joints could be taken apart.

(3) The Table was a cubit square, while a mikweh, as stated here, was likewise a cubit square; hence it would be impossible to immerse the Table in the mikweh if it became unclean and needed a ritual bath.

(4) I.e., he must not eat or drink two or a multiple of two of anything, a malignant potency being ascribed to twos.

(5) A euphemism for intimacy.

(6) Ex. XII, 42.

(7) Lit., 'that is guarded and comes on.'

(8) The third cup, which is drunk in collection with Grace after meals, combines with others to break the spell of evil which, might be caused by drinking the first two, but is not counted in the four for harm.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 110a

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 110a

is a separate obligation.¹

‘He must not perform his requirements twice.’ Why? Has he not [newly] decided?² -Said Abaye, This is what he [the Tanna] means: He must not eat in pairs and drink in pairs and he must not perform his needs even once [after eating or drinking in pairs], lest he be weakened³ and be affected.⁴

Our Rabbis taught: He who drinks in pairs, his blood is upon his own head. Said Rab Judah: When is that? If he had not seen the street;⁵ but if he has seen the street, he is at liberty [to drink a second cup]. R. Ashi said: I saw that R. Hanania b. Bibi used to go out and see the street at each cup. Now we have said [this]⁶ only [if he intends] to set out on a journey [after drinking]; but [if he intends to stay] at home, it is not [harmful]. R. Zera observed: And going to sleep is like setting out on a journey. R. Papa said: And going to the privy is like setting out on a journey. Now [if [he intends to stay] at home it is not [dangerous]? Yet surely Raba counted the beams,⁷ while when Abaye had drunk one cup, his mother would offer him two cups in her two hands;⁸ again, when R. Nahman b. Isaac had drunk two cups, his attendant would offer him one cup; [if he had drunk] one cup, he would offer him two cups in his two hands?⁹ — An important person is different.¹⁰

‘Ulla said: Ten cups are not subject to [the danger of] pairs. ‘Ulla is consistent with his view, for ‘Ulla said, while others maintain, it was taught in a Baraita: The Sages instituted ten cups in a mourner's house. Now if you should think that ten cups are subject to [the danger of] pairs, how could our Rabbis arise and enact a regulation whereby one is led into danger! But eight are subject to ‘pairs.’ R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna both maintained: ‘Shalom’ [peace] combines [with others] for good, but does not combine for evil;¹¹ but six is subject to ‘pairs’. Rabbah and R. Joseph both maintained: Wiyhuneka [‘and be gracious unto thee’] combines [with others] for good, but does not combine for evil;¹² but four is subject to ‘pairs.’ Abaye and Raba both maintained: We-yishmerekka [‘and keep thee’] combines [with others] for good, but does not combine for evil.¹³ Now Raba is consistent with his view, for Raba allowed the Rabbis to depart [from his house] after four cups, [and] though Raba b. Liwai¹⁴ came to harm, he paid no heed to the matter, saying, ‘That was [his punishment] because he raises difficulties at the public session.’¹⁵

R. Joseph said: The demon Joseph told me [that] Ashmedai the king of the demons is appointed over all pairs.¹⁶ and a king is not designated a harmful spirit.¹⁷ Others explain it in the opposite sense: On the contrary, a king is quick-tempered [and] does whatever he wishes, for a king can break through a wall to make a pathway for himself and none may stay him.¹⁸

R. Papa said, Joseph the demon told me: For two we kill; for four we do not kill, [but] for four we harm [the drinker]. For two [we hurt] whether [they are drunk] unwittingly or deliberately; for four, only if it is deliberate, but not if it is unwitting. And if a man forgot himself and happened to go out,¹⁹ what is his remedy? Let him take his right-hand thumb in his left hand and his left-hand thumb in his right hand and say thus: ‘Ye [two thumbs] and I, surely that is three!²⁰ But if he hears one saying, ‘Ye and I, surely that is four!’ let him retort to him, ‘Ye and I are surely five!’ And if he hears one saying, ‘Ye and I are six,’ let him retort to him, ‘Ye and I are seven.’²¹ This once happened until a hundred and one, and the demon burst [with mortification].

Amemar said: The chief of the sorceresses told me: He who meets sorceresses should say thus: ‘Hot dung in perforated baskets for your mouths, o ye witches! may your heads become bald,²² the wind carry off your crumbs,²³

(1) Hence they do not combine.

- (2) The second is occasioned by a new desire, and does not combine with, the first.
- (3) Through intimacy.
- (4) Since eating or drinking in pairs has already made him more susceptible to hurt than he would otherwise have been.
- (5) i.e., if he does not go out between the drinks.
- (6) That pairs is harmful.
- (7) At each cup he mentally counted one beam, to ensure not drinking in pairs.
- (8) Likewise that he should not drink in pairs.
- (9) Though in these cases they were remaining at home.
- (10) The demons are at greater pains to hurt him; hence he is endangered even when staying at home.
- (11) 'Shalom' (peace) is the seventh word (in Heb.) of the verse The Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace (Num. VI, 26). Hence the seventh cup combines with others for good etc. as on p. 565, n. 5.
- (12) Wiyhunka is the fifth Hebrew word of the verse, The Lord make His face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee (ibid. 25).
- (13) This is the third word of the verse, The Lord bless thee, and keep thee (ibid. 24).
- (14) Or, the Levite.
- (15) He would raise difficulties in the course of my public lectures, thereby putting me to shame.
- (16) Those who drink in pairs are at his mercy.
- (17) It is beneath his dignity to cause hurt. Hence there is generally no danger in pairs (though occasionally he may disregard his dignity — Rashbam).
- (18) Hence the danger is all the greater.
- (19) After drinking 'pairs.'
- (20) Thus breaking the spell of pairs.
- (21) And so on.
- (22) Lit., 'bald be your baldness' — they practised witchcraft with their hair.
- (23) Likewise used in the practice of witchcraft. Rashbam holds that this is an allusion to Ezek. XIII, 18f, q.v.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 110b

your spices be scattered, the wind carry off the new saffron which ye are holding, ye sorceresses; as long as He showed grace to me and to you, I had not come among [you]; how that I have come among you, your grace and my grace have cooled.'¹

In the West [Palestine] they were not particular about 'pairs. R. Dimi of Nehardea was particular even about the marks on a [wine-] barrel:² it once happened that a barrel burst.³ This is the position in general: when one is particular, they [the demons] are particular about him,⁴ while when one is not particular,⁵ they are not particular about him. Nevertheless one should take heed. When R. Dimi came,⁶ he said: Two eggs, two nuts, two cucumbers and something else — [these are] halachah from Moses at Sinai;⁷ but the Rabbis were doubtful what this something else was, and so the Rabbis forbid a 'pairs' on account of the 'something else.' And as to what we have said, Ten, eight, six and four are not subject to 'pairs,' that was said only in respect to the harmful spirits [mazzikin], but where witchcraft is concerned we fear even many.⁸ As [it once happened in] the case of a certain man who divorced his wife, [whereupon] she went and married a shopkeeper. Every day he [her first husband] used to go and drink wine, [and though] she exercised her witchcraft against him, she could avail nought, because he was heedful of 'pairs.' One day he drank to excess and did not know how much he drank; until sixteen [cups] he was clear-headed and on his guard; after that he was not clear-headed and took no care, [and] she turned him out at an even [number of drinks]. As he was going along an Arab met him and observed to him: A corpse is walking here!⁹ He went and clasped a palm tree; the palm tree cried out¹⁰ and he burst.

R. 'Awira said: Plates and loaves are not subject to even numbers. This is the general rule: That which is completed by man is not subject to even numbers; [but in the case of] that which is completed by Heaven, such as various kinds of eatables, we fear [even numbers]. A shop is not subject to even numbers.¹¹ If a man changes his mind,¹² it is not subject to even numbers. A guest is not subject to even numbers.¹³ A woman is not subject to even numbers; but if she is an important woman, we take heed. R. Hinena son of R. Joshua said: Asparagus [-wine] combines [with other liquors] for good, but does not combine for harm.¹⁴

Rabina said in Raba's name: [A doubt concerning] even numbers [is resolved] stringently;¹⁵ others state: [A doubt concerning] even numbers [is resolved] leniently.¹⁶

R. Joseph said: Two [cups] of wine and one of beer do not combine; two of beer and one of wine combine, and your token [is this]: 'This is the general principle: Whatever is joined thereto of a material more stringent than itself is unclean; of a material more lenient than itself, is clean.'¹⁷

R. Nahman said in Rab's name: Two [cups] before the meal¹⁸ and one during the meal combine; one before the meal and two during the meal do not combine. R. Mesharsheya demurred: Do we then desire to effect a remedy for the meal: we desire to effect a remedy for the person, and surely the person stands remedied!¹⁹ Yet all agree that two during the meal and one after the meal do not combine, in accordance with the story of Rabbah b. Nahmani.²⁰

Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: All mixed drinks combine,²¹

(1) I have not taken sufficient care of myself.

(2) Indicating the quantities sold. He took care that there should not be an even number of these.

(3) When an even number of marks had been made on it.

(4) They are more anxious to injure him.

(5) Takes no great pains to save himself from demons.

(6) From Palestine to Babylonia.

(7) It is a tradition dating back from Moses that even numbers of these and of another unnamed commodity are harmful.

(8) A large multiple of two, such as six, eight, etc.

(9) He recognized that he was doomed.

(10) Probably, made a rustling noise. [Var. lec., 'withered']

(11) I.e., if one drinks in two shops. Others: if one drinks an even number of glasses in one shop, for these are harmful at home only. The incident related above, however, took place in a tavern.

(12) He drank one glass, not intending to drink more; then decided to drink another.

(13) He does not know how much will be offered him, therefore at each he is regarded as having decided afresh.

(14) Cf. p. 565, n. 5.

(15) If a man does not know whether he has drunk an even number or not, he should drink another. This turns an even number into odd, not an odd into even, because in the latter case this glass represents a fresh decision (cf. p. 568, n. 8), and does not combine with the others.

(16) Thus showing that he is not particular about it and thereby removing the hostility of the demons (cf. supra).

(17) Materials, to become unclean, must be of a certain minimum size, which varies according to the value of the material: the greater the value, the more stringent it is, i.e., the smaller its minimum. If the material is less than the minimum and a piece of another material is joined to it, making it up to the minimum, the rule is as stated. Thus here too, wine, being more valuable than beer, combines with it; beer being less valuable than wine, it is disregarded.

(18) Lit., 'tray.'

(19) Since he has drunk three.

(20) V. B.M. 86a.

(21) If a man drinks mixed (i.e., diluted) wine and then any other mixed drink (so Rashbam), they combine.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 111a except water;¹ while R. Johanan maintained: Even water. R. Papa said: This was said only of hot [water] mixed with cold or cold mixed with hot; but not [if it is] hot mixed with hot or cold with cold.²

Resh Lakish said: There are four actions for which he who does them has his blood on his own head and forfeits his life,³ viz.: easing oneself between a palm tree and the wall passing between two palm trees; drinking borrowed water, and passing over spilt water, even if his wife poured it out in his presence. 'Easing oneself between a palm tree and the wall': this was said only if there is not four cubits,⁴ but if he leaves four cubits it does not matter. And even if he does not leave four cubits [space], it was said only where there is no other path;⁵ but if there is another path, it does not matter.

'Passing between two palm-trees.' This was said only where a public thoroughfare does not cross between them; but if a public thoroughfare crosses between them, it does not matter.

'Drinking borrowed water.' That was said only if a child borrowed it; but [if] an adult, it does not matter. And even if a child borrowed it, this was said only in respect to the countryside, where it is not found [in abundance]; but in the town, where it is found in abundance, it does not matter. And even in respect to the countryside, this was said only of water, but there is no objection against [borrowed] wine and beer.

'And passing over spilt water.' This was said only if he did not interpose dust⁶ or spit into it; but if he interposed dust or spit into it, it does not matter. Again, this was said only if the sun had not passed over it nor did he walk sixty steps over it; but if the sun had passed over it and he walked sixty steps over it, it does not matter. Again, this was said only if he was not riding an ass and was not wearing shoes; but if he was riding an ass and was wearing shoes, it does not matter. Yet that is only where there is nought to fear of witchcraft; but where there is aught to fear of witchcraft, even if there are all these [safeguards], we still fear, as in the case of a certain man who rode on a ass and was wearing his shoes; his shoes shrank, and his feet withered.

Our Rabbis taught: There are three who must not pass between [two men], nor may [others] pass between them, viz.: a dog, a palm tree, and a woman. Some say: a swine too; some say, a snake too. And if they pass between, what is the remedy? — Said R. Papa: Let them commence [a verse] with el [God] and end with el.⁷ Others say: Let them commence [a Scriptural passage] with lo [not] and finish with lo.⁸ If a Menstruant woman passes between two [men], if it is at the beginning of her menses she will slay one of them⁹ and if it is at the end of her menses she will cause strife between them. What is the remedy? Let them commence [a verse] with el and end with el. When two women sit at a crossroad, one on one side of the road and one on the other side of the road, facing each other, they are certainly engaged in witchcraft. What is the remedy? If there is another road [available], let one go through it. While if there is no other road, [then] if another man is with him, let them clasp hands and pass through; while if there is no other man, let him say thus: 'Igrath Izlath, Asya, Belusia¹⁰ have been slain with arrows.'¹¹

When one meets a woman coming up from her statutory tebillah,¹² if [subsequently] he is the first to have intercourse, a spirit of immortality will infect him; while if she is the first to have intercourse, a spirit of immortality will infect her. What is the remedy? Let him say thus: 'He poureth contempt upon princess, and causeth them to wander in the waste, where there is no way.'¹³

R. Isaac said: What is meant by the verse, Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me?¹⁴ This refers to him who sleeps in the shadow of a single palm-tree or in the shadow of the moon. Now in respect to the shadow of a single palm-tree this holds good only where the shadow of the neighbouring [tree] does not fall upon it; but if the shadow of the neighbouring tree falls upon it, it does not matter. Then when it was taught: He who sleeps in the shadow of a single palm-tree in a courtyard and he who sleeps in the shadow of the moon, has his blood on his own head, how is it meant? Shall we say that the shadow of the neighbouring tree does not fall upon it, — then even in a field too [it is dangerous]? Hence you may surely infer from this that in a courtyard [there is danger] even if the shadow of the neighbouring tree fall on it. This proves it. And in respect to the shadow of the moon too, this holds good only when [it falls] in the west,¹⁵ but when it is in the east it does not matter.

-
- (1) Cold water mixed with hot water is not regarded as a mixed drink and does not combine with other mixed drinks.
 - (2) R. Johanan too admits that this is not a mixture, and it does not combine with other mixed drinks.
 - (3) I.e., whatever happens, he has only himself to blame.
 - (4) Between tem: this leaves no room for the evil spirits to pass comfortably and so they injure him.
 - (5) For the demon to pass through.
 - (6) I.e., he did not scatter dust upon the water before passing over it.
 - (7) Rashbam: Num. XXIII, 22f, which commence and finish with el in Heb.
 - (8) Ibid. 19.
 - (9) I.e., cause perjury to one of them (Rashbam).
 - (10) The demons by whose aid you seek to work witchcraft.
 - (11) The text is obscure.
 - (12) After her period of menstruation.
 - (13) Ps. CVII, 40.
 - (14) Ps. XXIII, 4.
 - (15) I.e., at the end of the month when the moon is in the east and casts its shadow in the west.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 111b

If one eases oneself on the stump of a palm-tree, the demon Palga¹ will seize him, and if one leans one's head on the stump of a palm-tree, the demon Zerada² will seize him. He who steps over a palm-tree, if it had been cut down, he will be cut down [killed]; if it had been uprooted, he will be uprooted and die. But that is only if he does not place his foot upon it; but if he places his foot upon it, it does not matter.

There are five shades:³ the shade of a single palm-tree, the shade of a kanda-tree,⁴ the shade of a caper-tree, [and] the shade of sorb bushes.⁵ Some say: Also the shade of a ship and the shade of a willow. This is the general rule: Whatever has many branches, its shade is harmful, and whatever has hard prickles [or, wood], its shade is harmful, except the service-tree, whose shade is not harmful although its wood is hard, because Shida [the demon] said to her son, 'Fly from the service-tree, because it is that which killed your father'; and, it also killed him. R. Ashi said: I saw R. Kahana avoid all shades.

[The demons] of caper-trees are [called] Ruhe [spirits]: those of sorb-bushes are [called] Shide [demons]: those which haunt roofs are [called] Rishpe [fiery-bolts]. In respect of what does it matter? In respect of amulets.⁶ [The demon] of caper-trees is a creature without eyes. What does it matter? In respect of fleeing from it.⁷ A scholar was once about to ease himself among the caper-trees, when he heard it advancing upon him so he fled from it. Well he had gone, it embraced a palm-tree,⁸ whereupon the palm-tree cried out⁹ and it [the demon] burst.

[The demons] of sorb-bushes are [called] Shide. A sorb-bush which is near a town has not less than sixty Shide [demons] [haunting it]. How does this matter? In respect of writing an amulet. A certain town-officer went and stood by a sorb-bush near a town, whereupon he was set upon by sixty demons and his life was in danger. He then went to a scholar who did not know that it was a sorb-bush haunted by sixty demons, and so he wrote a one-demon amulet for it. Then he heard how they suspended a hinga¹⁰ on it [the tree]¹¹ and sing thus: 'The man's turban is like a scholar's, [yet] we have examined the man [and find] that he does not know "Blessed art Thou".'¹² Then a certain scholar came who knew that it was a sorb-bush of sixty demons and wrote a sixty-demon amulet for it. Then he heard them saying, 'Clear away your vessels from here.'

Keteb Meriri:¹³ there are two Ketebes, one before noon and one after noon; the one before noon is called Ketheb Meriri, and looks like a ladle turning in the jug of kamka.¹⁴ That of the afternoon is called Keteb Yashud Zaharaim ['Destruction that wasteth at noonday'];¹⁵ it looks like a goat's horn, and wings compass it about.

Abaye was walking along, with R. Papa on his right and R. Huna, son of R. Joshua on his left. Seeing a Keteb Meriri approaching him on the left, he transferred R. Papa to his left and R. Huna son of R. Joshua to his right. Said R. Papa to him: 'Wherein am I different that you were not afraid on my behalf?' 'The time is in your favour,' replied he.¹⁶

From, the first of Tammuz¹⁷ until the sixteenth they are certainly to be found; henceforth it is doubtful whether they are about or not, and they are found in the shadow of hazabe¹⁸ which have not grown a cubit, and in the morning and evening shadows when these are less than a cubit [in length], but mainly in the shadow of a privy.

R. Joseph said: The following three things cause defective eyesight: combing one's head [when it is] dry, drinking the drip-drop [of wine], and putting on shoes while the feet are still damp.

[Eatables] suspended in a house lead¹⁹ to poverty, as people say, 'He who suspends a basket [of food] puts his food in suspense.' Yet this relates only to bread, but it does not matter about meat and fish, [since] that is the usual way [of keeping them]. Bran²⁰ in a house leads to poverty. Crumbs in a house lead to poverty: the demons rest upon them on the nights of Sabbaths and on the nights of the fourth days.

The genius appointed over sustenance is called Neki'ah [Cleanliness]; the genius appointed over poverty is called Nabal [Folly or Filth]. Dirt on the spout of a pitcher leads to poverty. He who drinks water out of a plate is liable to a cataract. He who eats cress without [first] washing his hands will suffer fear thirty days.

(1) Jast. conjectures paralysis. [Aruch: 'headache on one side of the head', megrim, connecting it with rt. meaning 'to divide'].

(2) Perhaps vertigo; Rashi: megrim.

(3) Involving danger on account of the demons that inhabit them.

(4) MS.M.: kinura, the name of a shrubby tree, Christ's-thorn or lote (Jast.).

(5) [Var. lec.: add as fifth 'the shade of the willow-tree].

(6) Charms to counteract them, in which their names are written.

(7) As it is sightless it cannot follow.

(8) In error. Rashi and Rashbam read נפקא דקלא , it tripped over a palm-tree.

(9) [Or, withered v. supra p. 568, n. 5.]

(10) A musical instrument.

(11) Jast. Perhaps: they danced in chorus about it.

(12) He does not know which benediction to recite when he puts it on ridiculed his pretensions to scholarship.

(13) 'Bitter destruction' (v. Deut. XXXII, 24). Regarded here as the name of a demon.

(14) A kind of sauce made of milk and bread-crumbs. — The translation follows the reading of Rashi and Rashbam, which differs from cur. edd.

(15) Ps. XCI, 6.

(16) You have been blessed with good fortune, so the demon will not harm you.

(17) The fourth month of the Jewish year, roughly corresponding to July.

(18) A species of shrub.

(19) Lit., 'are harmful.'

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 112a

He who lets blood without washing his hands will be afraid seven days. He who trims his hair and does not wash his hands will be afraid three days. He who pares his nails and does not wash his hands will be afraid one day without knowing what affrights him.

[Putting] one's hand to one's nostrils is a step to fear; [putting] one's hand to one's forehead is a step to sleep. It was taught: If food and drink [are kept] under the bed, even if they are covered in iron vessels, an evil spirit rests upon them.

Our Rabbis taught: A man must not drink water either on the nights of the fourth days [Wednesdays] or on the nights of Sabbath,¹ and if he does drink, his blood is on his own head, because of the danger. What is the danger? An evil spirit. Yet if he is thirsty what is his remedy? Let him recite the seven 'voices' which David uttered over the water and then drink, as it is said: The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of glory thundereth, even the Lord is upon many water. The voice of the Lord is powerful; the voice of the Lord is full of majesty. The voice of the Lord breaketh the cedars; yea, the Lord breaketh in pieces the cedars of the Lebanon ... The voice of the Lord heweth out flames of fire. The voice of the Lord shaketh the wilderness; the Lord shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh. The voice of the Lord maketh the hinds to calve, and strippeth the forests bare; and in His temple all say: 'Glory.'² But if [he does] not [say this], let him say thus: 'Lul shafan anigran anirdafin,³ I dwell among the stars, I walk among lean and fat people.' But if [he does] not [say this], if there is a man with him he should rouse him and say to him, 'So-and-so the son of So-and-so, I am thirsty for water,' and then he can drink. But if not, he knocks the lid against the pitcher, and then he can drink. But if not, let him throw something into it and then drink.

Our Rabbis taught: A man should not drink water from rivers or pools at night, and if he drinks, his blood is on his own head, because of the danger. What is the danger? The danger of blindness.⁴ But if he is thirsty, what is his remedy? If a man is with him he should say to him, 'So-and-so the son of So-and-so, I am thirsty for water.' But if not, let him say to himself, 'O So-and-so,⁵ my mother told me, "Beware of shabrire" : Shabrire, berire, rire, ire re,⁶ I am thirsty for water in a white glass.'

AND EVEN [IF HE RECEIVES RELIEF] FROM THE CHARITY PLATE ETC. That is obvious? — It is necessary only even according to R. Akiba who said: Treat your Sabbath like a weekday⁷ rather than be dependent on man; yet here, in order to advertise the miracle, he agrees.⁸

Tanna debe Eliyahu [taught]:⁹ Though R. Akiba said, 'Treat your Sabbath like a weekday rather than be dependent on men,' yet one must prepare something trifling at home.¹⁰ What is it? Said R. Papa: Fish hash. As we learned, R. Judah b. Tema said: Be strong as the leopard and swift as the eagle, fleet as the deer and valiant as a lion to do the will of thy Father in heaven.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: Seven things did R. Akiba charge his son R. Joshua: My son, do not sit and study at the highest point of the town;¹² do not dwell in a town whose leaders are scholars;¹³ do not enter your own house suddenly, and a the more your neighbour's house; and do not withhold shoes from your feet.¹⁴ Arise early and eat, in summer on account of the sun [i.e., heat] and in winter on account of the cold; treat your Sabbath like a weekday rather than be dependent on man, and strive to be on good terms with the man upon whom the hour smiles. R. Papa observed: [That does] not [mean] to buy from or to sell to him, but to enter into partnership with him. But now that R. Samuel b. Isaac said: What is meant by the verse, Thou hast blessed the work of his hands?¹⁵ Whoever took a farthing [perutah] from Job was blessed; even to buy from and to sell to him is advisable.

Five things did R. Akiba charge R. Simeon b. Yohai when he was immured in prison.¹⁶ He [the latter] said to him, 'Master, teach me Torah.' 'I will not teach you,' he replied.¹⁷ 'If thou wilt not teach me,' said he, 'I will tell my father Yohai and he will deliver thee to the state.' 'My son,' answered he, 'more than the calf wishes to suck does the cow desire to suckle.' Said he to him, 'Yet who is in danger: surely the calf is in danger!'¹⁸ Said he to him: 'If you wish to be strangled, be hanged on a large tree,¹⁹ and when you teach your son, teach him from a corrected scroll.' (What is that? Said Raba, — others state, R. Mesharsheya: A new one, for once an error has entered, it remains.)²⁰ 'Do not cook in a pot in which your neighbour has cooked.' (What does that mean? [Do not marry] a divorced woman during her husband's lifetime. For a Master said: When a divorced man marries a divorced woman, there are four minds in the bed. Alternatively, [it refers] even to a widow, for

-
- (1) Rashbam: without a light.
 - (2) Ps. XXIX, 3-5, 7-9.
 - (3) This is an incantation.
 - (4) Shabrire, v. Git., Sonc. ed. p. 327, n. 4.
 - (5) Addressing himself thus.
 - (6) [An incantation against the demon of blindness resembling an Abracadabra amulet, in which each succeeding line is reduced by one letter].
 - (7) In the matter of food and drink.
 - (8) That he must take from charity.
 - (9) V. p. 504, n. 1.
 - (10) In honour of the Sabbath.
 - (11) Thus even the poorest must make an effort to honour the Sabbath.
 - (12) Many pass there, and they will disturb your studies.
 - (13) Intent on their studies, they neglect the affairs of the town!
 - (14) Cf. Shab. 129a.
 - (15) Job I, 10.
 - (16) R. Akiba was kept in prison several years and then martyred for defying Hadrian's edict against practising and teaching Judaism, Ber. 61b; v. J.E. I, 3051.
 - (17) He did not wish to endanger him.
 - (18) He pleaded to be allowed to take the risk.
 - (19) If you must depend on an authority, see that he is a great one.
 - (20) A error learned in childhood is difficult to dispel.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 112b

not all fingers¹ are alike). Enjoying the produce without interest² is a good deed and profitable investment.³ A religious deed which leaves the body pure is marrying a woman when one [already] has children.

Four things did our holy Teacher⁴ command his children: Do not dwell in Shekantzib,⁵ because [its inhabitants] are scoffers and will corrupt you to disbelief. And do not sit upon the bed of a Syrian woman. Some say, [that means:] do not lie down to sleep without reading the shema'; while others explain: do not marry a proselyte. But others explain 'Syrian' literally, [the reason being] on account of what happened to R. Papa.⁶ And do not seek to evade toll tax, lest they discover you and deprive you of a that you possess. And do not stand in front of an ox when he comes up from the meadow, because Satan dances between his horns.⁷ Said R. Samuel: this refers to a black ox and in the month of Nisan.⁸ R. Oshaia recited: One must remove a distance of fifty cubits from an ox that is a tam⁹ [and] as far as the eye can see from an ox that is a mu'ad. A Tanna taught in R. Meir's name: [Even] when the ox's head is in the feeding-bag, climb up to the roof and throw away the ladder from under you.

Rab said: The cry for an ox¹⁰ is 'hen, hen'; for a lion, 'zeh zeh'; for a camel, 'da da'; a ship's cry is 'helani hayya hela we-hiluk hulua.'¹¹

Abaye said: Skin, a fish, a cup, hot water, eggs, and the vermin in linen are all injurious to 'something else'.¹² Skin: [that means] he who sleeps on a tanner's hide.¹³ A fish: [viz.,] shibuta¹⁴ during Nisan. A cup: the residue of fish hash. Hot water: pouring extremely hot water over oneself.¹⁵ Eggs: [i.e.,] he who treads on [their] shells. Vermin in linen: if one launders his garment and does not wait eight days before putting it on, the vermin¹⁶ are produced and harmful for 'something else'.

R. Papa said: A man should not enter a house in which there is a cat, without shoes. What is the reason? Because the cat may kill a snake and eat it; now the snake has little bones, and if a bone sticks into his foot it will not come out, and will endanger him. Others say: A man should not enter a house where there is no cat, in the dark.¹⁷ What is the reason? Lest a snake wind itself about him without his knowing, and he come to danger. Three things did R. Ishmael son of R. Jose charge Rabbi: (Mnemonic: Makash).¹⁸ Do not inflict a blemish upon yourself. (What does that mean? Do not engage in a lawsuit with three, for one will be your opponent and the other two witnesses [against you] .) And do not feign interest in¹⁹ a purchase when you have no money.²⁰ When your wife as performed tebillah, do not be intimate with her the first night. Said Rab: That refers to a niddah by Scriptural law,²¹ [for] since there is the presumption of an open well,²² she may continue with gonorrhoeic discharge.²³

Three things did R. Jose son of R. Judah charge Rabbi. Do not go out alone at night, and do not stand naked in front of a lamp, and do not enter a new bath-house, lest it [the floor] split.²⁴ How long [is it regarded as new]? — Said R. Joshua b. Levi: For twelve months. 'And do not stand naked in front of a lamp,' for it was taught: He who stands naked in front of a lamp will be an epileptic, and he who cohabits by the light of a lamp will have epileptic children.

Our Rabbis taught: If one cohabits in a bed where an infant is sleeping, that infant [will be] an epileptic. Now that was said only if he is less than one year old; but if he is a year old, it does not matter. Again, this was said only if he is sleeping at [their] feet; but if he is sleeping at [their] head, it does not matter. Again, this was said only if he does not lay his hand upon him; but if he lays his hand upon him, it does not matter.

'And do not go out alone at night', for it was taught: One should not go out alone at night, i.e., on the nights of neither Wednesday nor Sabbaths, because Igrath the daughter of Mahalath,²⁵ she and one hundred eighty thousand destroying angels go forth, and each has permission to wreak destruction independently. Originally they were about a day. On one occasion she met R. Hanina b. Dosa [and] said to him, 'Had they not made an announcement concerning you in Heaven, "Take heed of Hanina and his learning," I would have put you in danger.' 'If I am of account in Heaven,' replied he, 'I order you never to pass through settled regions.' 'I beg you,' she pleaded, 'leave me a little room.' So he left her the nights of Sabbaths and the nights of Wednesdays. On another occasion she met Abaye. Said she to him, 'Had they not made an announcement about you in Heaven, "Take heed of Nahmani²⁶ and his learning," I would have put you in danger.' 'If I am of account in Heaven,' replied he, 'I order you never to pass through settled regions.' But we see that she does pass through? — I will tell you: Those are

(1) Euphemism: The wife thinks always of her first husband.

(2) Lit., 'hire.'

(3) Lit., 'a large body'. The passage is a difficult one, particularly with the reading of the ed. ס, but it would seem to refer to lending money on a field and receiving some of its produce in part repayment. But as its value is probably calculated at less than market price, this is a profitable investment, yet at the same time there is no actual interest. Such a transaction is permitted (B.M. 67b). 'Ar. and MS.M. read: רַבִּי , and Jast. accordingly translates: An act of charity and at the same time a good investment is the act of him who helps to produce fruits, while he has the reward (e.g. , one who loans money to a husbandman on security, allowing payment in small instalments).

(4) I.e., R. Judah ha-Nasi.

(5) A town in Babylonia, on the east side of the Tigris; v. Obermeyer, Landschaft, pp. 190f. It is there (p. 191, n. 4) pointed out, however, that R. Judah, a Palestinian, would have had no occasion to warn his children against living in a town in Babylonia, nor could he have known the character of its inhabitants well enough to justify this warning; hence it is conjectured that 'Raba' should be read here instead.

(6) V. Ber. 8b.

(7) Rashbam: the ox is mad, as explained infra.

(8) The first month-about April.

(9) The technical name of an ox that has not yet gored three times. When it has, it is called mu'ad.

(10) With which to chase it away or to urge it to work.

(11) Perhaps the ancient equivalent of 'yo heave ho'. [MS.M. reads simply: 'hayya, hayya'].

(12) Leprosy.

(13) Rashi and Rashbam. I.e., before it is completely dressed.

(14) Probably mullet (Jast.).

(15) At a bath.

(16) Which it may still contain.

(17) MS.M.: Without shoes.

(18) V. p. 348, n. 8. M == Mum (blemish); K == mekah (a purchase); SH == ishteka (your wife).

(19) Lit., 'stand over.'

(20) V. B.M. 58b and notes a.l. in Sonc. ed.

(21) By which a woman performs tebillah seven days after the beginning of menstruation, even if menstruation lasted all the seven days. Subsequently, however, it was enacted that she must wait seven days from the end of menstruation. Rab observes that R. Ishmael's charge held good only when the more lenient Scriptural law was practised.

(22) I.e., her blood-flow has continued almost until tebillah.

(23) During intimacy.

(24) Through the heat.

(25) The queen of demons.

(26) Abaye was so called because he was brought up in the house of Rabbah b. Nahman.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 113a

the narrow paths [which they frequent], whence their horses bolt and come [into civilized places] bringing them along.

Rab said to R. Assi: Do not dwell in a town in which no horses neigh or dogs bark.¹ And do not dwell in a town where the leader of the community is a physician.² And do not marry two [women],³ [but] if you do marry two, marry a third.⁴

Rab said to R. Kahana: Deal in carcasses, but do not deal in words;⁵ flay carcasses in the market place and earn wages and do not say, 'I am a priest and a great man and it is beneath my dignity.'⁶ [Even] if you [merely] ascend the roof, [take] victuals with you.⁷ [Even] if a hundred pumpkins cost but a zuz in town, let them, be under your skirts.⁸ Rab said to his son Hiyya: Do not take drugs⁹ and do not leap in great jumps;¹⁰ do not have a tooth extracted,¹¹ and do not provoke serpents and do not provoke a Syrian woman.

Our Rabbis taught: Three must not be provoked, viz.: an insignificant Gentile,¹² a little snake, and a humble pupil. What is the reason? Because their kingdom stands behind their ears.¹³

Rab said to his son Aibu: I have laboured over your studies but without success, [so] come and I will teach you worldly wisdom. Sell your wares while the sand is still on your feet.¹⁴ Everything you may sell and regret,¹⁵ except wine, which you can sell without regrets.¹⁶ Untie your purse and [then] open your sacks.¹⁷ Better a kab from the ground than a kor from the roof.¹⁸ When the dates are in your bag run to the brewery [beth sudna].¹⁹ And to what extent? — Said Raba: Up to three se'ahs. R. Papa said: If I were not a beer manufacturer I would not have become wealthy. Others say, R. Hisda said: If I were not a beer manufacturer, I would not have become wealthy. What is [the meaning of] sudna?²⁰ Said R. Hisda: A pleasant secret [sod na'eh] and the exercise of charity.²¹

R. Papa said: Every bil²² requires collecting;²³ in every credit sale it is doubtful whether it [payment] will be forthcoming or not, and when it is forthcoming it may be bad money.²⁴

Three things did R. Johanan say in the name of the men of Jerusalem: when you go out to battle, do not go out among the first but among the last, So that you may return among the first; and treat your Sabbath like a weekday rather than be dependent on your fellow-beings, and strive to be on good terms with him upon whom the hour smiles.

Three things did R. Joshua b. Levi say in the name of the men of Jerusalem. Do not practise immodesty²⁵ on account of the incident which occurred;²⁶ if your daughter has attained puberty, free your slave and give [him] to her;²⁷ and beware of your wife with her first son-in-law. What is the reason?—R. Hisda said: On account of immorality: R. Kahana said: On account of money.²⁸ And [in fact] both are correct.

R. Johanan said: Three are of those who will inherit the world to come, viz.: he who dwells in Eretz Yisrael; and he who brings up his sons to the Study of the Torah; and he who recites habdalah over wine at the termination of the Sabbath. Who is that? He who leaves over [wine] from kiddush for habdalah.²⁹

R. Johanan said: Concerning three does the Holy one, blessed be He, make proclamation every day:³⁰ a bachelor who lives in a large town without sinning, a poor man who returns lost property to its owner, and a wealthy man who tithes his produce in secret.³¹ R. Safra was a bachelor living in a large town.

(1) These guard the town: the dogs raise the alarm and the marauders are pursued on horseback.

(2) There seems to be no adequate reason for this. Possibly a doctor would be too busy to give proper attention to communal matters. R. Tam in B.B. 110a s.v. לא תימא reads אסי instead of אסיה, i.e., do not dwell in a town whose head is (R.) Assi — a playful warning against the cares of office, which leave but little time for study.

(3) Lest they devise plots against you.

(4) She will reveal their designs.

(5) Gossip or quibbling.

(6) The greatest man is not degraded by honest work.

(7) Do not undertake the least journey without provisions.

(8) Keep them in stock and do not wait to buy until you actually need them.

(9) Even as a medicine, as they are habit forming.

(10) Or: do not jump over a brook — the strain affects the eyesight.

(11) When you have toothache — it will eventually cease in any case. [R. Hananel refers it to a molar tooth, the extraction of which affects the eyesight. Preuss, Biblich — talmudische Medizin, p. 330, quotes Celsus: majore periculo in superioribus dentibus fit (extractio), quia potest tempora oculosque concutere].

(12) Lit., 'a little Gentile'.

(13) They will grow up and take revenge. The particular expression may have been occasioned by Diocletian's rise to be Emperor of Rome though born of slaves — according to the Rabbis he was a swineherd originally. When Emperor he tried to avenge insults offered to him in his lowly position.

(14) Immediately you return from buying, sell.

- (15) If the price advances — you might have received more.
- (16) Had you waited it might have turned to vinegar.
- (17) Pocket the money for a purchase before delivering it.
- (18) Rather earn little near home than much far away.
- (19) To brew beer of them — otherwise you may eat them.
- (20) That it is employed to denote a brewery.
- (21) It is a pleasant secret — it is profitable and affords the means of charity.
- (22) Lit., ‘everything on account (of which a bill or bond must be indited).’
- (23) Do not be certain of the money until you have actually collected it.
- (24) If payment is made in small instalments the money may be frittered away.
- (25) Do not frequent places where immodest sights are to be seen. Var. lec.: do not frequent roofs.
- (26) Viz. , David's sin with Bath Sheba.
- (27) Marry her at the earliest possible moment.
- (28) She is likely to spend your money on him.
- (29) He has only a little wine and specially reserves for habdalah that which remains over from kiddush.
- (30) As having earned His special approval.
- (31) I.e., without ostentation.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 113b

Now a tanna recited [R. Johanan's dictum] before Raba and R. Safra, [whereupon] R. Safra's face lit up. Said Raba to him: it does not mean such as you, but such as R. Hanina and R. Oshaia, who were cobblers in Eretz Yisrael and dwelt in a street of harlots and made shoes for harlots and went in to them:¹ they [the harlots] looked at them, but they [these scholars] would not lift their eyes to look at them, and their [the harlots'] oath was ‘by the life of the holy Rabbis of Eretz Yisrael.’²

Three the Holy One, blessed be He, loves: he who does not display temper, he who does not become intoxicated, and he who does not insist on his [full] rights.³

Three the Holy One, blessed be He, hates: he who speaks one thing with his mouth and another thing in his heart; and he who possesses evidence concerning his neighbour and does not testify for him; and he who sees something indecent in his neighbour and testifies against him alone.⁴ As it once happened that Tobias sinned and Zigud alone came and testified against him before R. Papa, [whereupon] he had Zigud punished. ‘Tobias sinned and Zigud is punished!’ exclaimed he, ‘Even so,’ said he to him, ‘for it is written, one witness shall not rise up against a man,⁵ whereas you have testified against him alone: you merely bring him into ill repute.’⁶ R. Samuel son of R. Isaac said in Rab's name: Yet he may hate him,⁷ for it is said, ‘If thou see the ass of thine enemy lying under its burden.’⁸ Now which enemy [is meant]: Shall we say, a Gentile enemy, — but it was taught: The enemy of whom they spoke is an Israelite enemy, not a Gentile enemy? Hence it obviously means an Israelite enemy. But is it permitted to hate him? Surely it is written, ‘Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart?’⁹ Again if there are witnesses that he had committed wrong, the all indeed hate him! why particularly this person? Hence it must surely apply to such a case where he had seen something indecent in him. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: it is a duty to hate him, as it is said, ‘The fear of the Lord is to hate evil.’¹⁰ R. Aha son of Raba asked R. Ashi: What about telling his teacher, that he should hate him?—Said he to him: If he knows that his teacher regards him as trustworthy as two [witnesses], he should tell him; but if not, he must not tell him.

Our Rabbis taught: There are three whose life is not life; the [over.] compassionate, the hot-tempered, and the [too] fastidious; whereon R. Joseph observed: And these [qualities] are found in me.

Our Rabbis taught: Three hate one another, viz.: dogs, fowls, and Parsee priests;¹¹ some say, harlots too; some say, scholars in Babylonia too.

Our Rabbis taught: Three love each other, viz.: proselytes, slaves, and ravens. Four are too impossible for words:¹² a poor man who is arrogant, the wealthy man who flatters,¹³ a lecherous old man, and a leader who lords it over the community without cause. Some say: Also he who divorces his wife a first and a second time and takes her back. And the first Tanna?¹⁴ — it may be that her kethubah¹⁵ is large,¹⁶ or else he has children from her and cannot divorce her.¹⁷

Five things did Canaan charge his sons: Love one another, love robbery, love lewdness, hate your masters and do not speak the truth. Six things were said of a horse: it loves promiscuity, it loves battle, it has a proud spirit ' it despises sleep, eats much and excretes little. Some say: it also seeks to slay its master in battle. Seven are banned¹⁸ by Heaven; these are they: A Jew who has no wife; he who has a wife but no children;¹⁹ and he who has children but does not bring them up to the study of the Torah; and he who has no phylacteries on his head and on his arm ' no fringes on his garment and no mezuzah on his door, and he who denies his feet shoes. And some say: Also he who never sits in a company assembled for a religious purpose.²⁰ Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in the name of R. Samuel b. Martha in Rab's name on the authority of it. Jose of Huzal: How do we know that you must not consult astrologers?²¹ Because it is said: Thou shalt be whole-hearted with the lord thy God.²² And how do we know that one who knows that his neighbour is greater than himself even in one thing must show him honour? Because it is said, because a surpassing [superior] spirit was in him, and the king thought to set him over' the whole realm.²³ And she [a woman] who sits over clean blood is forbidden intercourse;²⁴ for how long? Said Rab: A 'onah.²⁵

A Tanna taught: Joseph of Huzal is identical with Joseph the Babylonian with Issi b. Gur Aryeh, with Issi b. Judah, with Issi b. Gamaliel and with Issi b. Mahallalel, and what was his [real] name? Issi b. 'Akabia.²⁶ It. Isaac b. Tabla is identical with R. Isaac b. Hakla, and with R. Isaac b. Ila'a.²⁷

(1) To deliver the shoes.

(2) Thus by their chastity in face of great temptation they sanctified the Divine Name.

(3) In the sense that he does not retaliate.

(4) Being the only person who has seen it.

(5) Deut. XIX, 15.

(6) Since no action can follow your unsupported testimony.

(7) As an evildoer-hate is morally wrong otherwise.

(8) Ex. XXIII, 5.

(9) Lev. XIX, 17.

(10) Prov. VIII, 13.

(11) וְהַחֲבֵרִין Guebers, [Aliter: 'partners' v. Strashun].

(12) Lit., 'the mind does not tolerate them'.

(13) I.e., who denies his true feelings.

(14) Why does he not include the last?

(15) Marriage settlement, which she can claim from him on divorce.

(16) So that he must take her back, as he cannot pay it.

(17) I.e., he cannot remain constant to the divorce.

(18) Var. lec. : as banned.

(19) By his own volition.

(20) E.g., at a circumcision feast.

(21) Lit., 'Chaldeans,' who were versed in astrological arts.

(22) Deut. XVIII, 13.

(23) Dan. VI, 4.

(24) This is based on the Scriptural law that for a period of thirty-three or sixty-six days beginning respectively on the eighth or the fifteenth day after childbirth a woman's blood is clean (v. Lev. XII, 1-5), i.e. ' it does not defile her and cohabitation is permitted. When this period is ended, she is designated 'a woman sitting over clean blood,' and cohabitation is forbidden, lest she have a blood discharge and think that just as her blood did not defile before, it does not defile her now either.

(25) Lit. , 'a period' — Rashi: one night. — Thus the law applies to the forty-first or the eighty-first night only.

(26) [Issi (a variant of Joseph) was the son of 'Akabia b. Mahallalel, the story of whose excommunication is told in 'Ed. V, 6, and it was in order to be spared the tragic memories associated with the name of 'Akabia that Issi did not describe himself as the son of 'Akabia; v. Derenbourg, Essai p. 484].

(27) In the edd. there follows 'hu R. Isaac b. Aha': the same is R. Isaac b. Aha; Bah however deletes hu, in which case another person is now referred to.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 114a

R. Isaac b. Aha mentioned in legal discussions is the same as R. Isaac b. Phineas mentioned in homilies, and the token is 'Hear 'me [shema'uni], — my brethren [ahay] , and my people.'¹

Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in R. Johanan's name in the name of R. Judah b. R. Il'ai: Eat onions [baze] and dwell in the protection [beze] [of your house],² and do not eat geese and fowls lest your heart pursue you;³ reduce your food and drink and increase [expenditure] on your house. When 'Ulla came, he said: In the West [Palestine] a proverb is current: he who eats the fat tail [allitha] must hide in the loft ['alitha],⁴ but he who eats cress [kakule] may lie by the dunghill [kikle]⁵ of the town.⁶

M I S H N A H. THEY FILLED⁷ THE FIRST CUP FOR HIM; BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: HE RECITES A BLESSING FOR THE DAY [FIRST],⁸ AND THEN RECITES A BLESSING OVER THE WINE; WHILE BETH HILLEL RULE: HE RECITES A BLESSING OVER THE WINE [FIRST], AND THEN RECITES A BLESSING FOR THE DAY.

G E M A R A. Our Rabbis taught: [These are] the matters which are disputed by Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel in respect to the meal: Beth Shammai maintain: He recites a blessing for the day [first] and then recites a blessing over the wine, because the day is responsible for the presence of the wine;⁹ moreover, the day has already become sanctified while the wine has not yet come.¹⁰ But Beth Hillel maintain: He recites a blessing over the wine and then recites a blessing for the day, because the wine enables the kiddush to be recited.¹¹ Another reason: the blessing for wine is constant, while the blessing for the day is not constant ,¹² [and of] that which is constant and that which is not constant, that which is constant comes first. Now the law¹³ is as the ruling of Beth Hillel. Why state [another reason]?¹⁴ — [This:] for should you argue: there we have two [reasons], whereas here there is [only] one,¹⁵ [I answer that] here also there are two, [for of] that which is constant and that which is not constant, that which is constant comes first. 'Now the law is as the ruling of Beth Hillel': that is obvious, since there issued a Bath Kol?¹⁶ — If you wish I can answer that this was before the Bath Kol. Alternatively, it was after the Bath Kol, and this is [in accordance with] R. Joshua who maintained We disregard a Bath Kol.¹⁷

MISHNAH. THEY THEN¹⁸ SET [IT] BEFORE HIM.¹⁹ HE DIPS THE LETTUCE²⁰ BEFORE YET HE HAS REACHED THE AFTERCOURSE OF THE BREAD.²¹ THEY SET BEFORE HIM MAZZAH, LETTUCE [HAZERETH], AND HAROSETH²² AND TWO DISHES, THOUGH THE HAROSETH IS NOT COMPULSORY. R. ELEAZAR SON OF R. ZADOK SAID: IT IS COMPULSORY. AND IN THE TEMPLE THEY USED TO BRING THE BODY OF THE PASSOVER-OFFERING BEFORE HIM.

G E M A R A.

(1) I Chron. XXVIII, 2. Thus in legal discussions (shema'ta, connected with shema'uni) his name appears as b. Aha (connected with ahay).

- (2) Do not spend overmuch on food, then you will be able to afford your house.
- (3) Do not cultivate a greedy appetite so that you are always wanting to eat.
- (4) He who squanders his money on costly dishes must hide from his creditors.
- (5) [Aliter: 'place of assembly' from Grk. , a circle].
- (6) Afraid of none — not being in debt.
- (7) Lit. , 'mixed. ,
- (8) I.e. , the blessing on the sanctity of the Festival.
- (9) If it were not a festival no wine would be required.
- (10) The festival automatically commences with the appearance of the stars, even if no wine as yet been brought to the table. Thus it is first in time, and therefore first in respect to a blessing too.
- (11) without wine or bread kiddush cannot be said. Bread is the equivalent of wine in this respect, and the blessing for bread precedes the blessing for the day.
- (12) Whenever 'wine is drunk a blessing over it is required, whereas the blessing of sanctification is confined to festivals.
- (13) [MS.M.: the halachah].
- (14) Is not the first sufficient?
- (15) Beth Shammai give two reasons for their view, whereas only one supports both Hillel's
- (16) Proclaiming the law always to be as Beth Hillel; v. Er. 13b.
- (17) V. B.M. 59b.
- (18) After having recited the kiddush over the wine.
- (19) Rashi and Rashbam: vegetables. R. Han.: the table with the food, which was brought after kiddush.
- (20) Tosaf.: into water or vinegar, and eats it. This is to stimulate the child's wonder, as it is unusual to commence the meal thus.
- (21) Viz., the bitter herbs, which are eaten after the unleavened bread. Bertinoro reads: before he has reached the breaking (i.e., the distribution) of the bread.
- (22) V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 114b

Resh Lakish said: This¹ proves that precepts require intention, [for] since he does not eat it² the stage when bitter herbs are compulsory, he eats it with [the blessing,] 'Who createst the fruit of the ground,' and perhaps he did not intend [to fulfil the obligation of] bitter herbs; therefore he must dip it again with the express purpose of [eating] bitter herbs. For if you should think [that] precepts do not require intention, why two dippings: surely he has [already] dipped it once?³ But whence [does this food]? Perhaps after a precepts do not require intention, and as to what you argue, why two dippings, [the answer is,] that there may be a distinction for [the sake of] the children.⁴ And should you say, if so, we should be informed about other vegetables:⁵ If we were informed about other vegetables I would say: Only where other vegetables [are eaten first] do we require two dippings, but lettuce alone⁶ does not require two dippings:⁷ hence he informs us that even lettuce [alone] requires two dippings, so that there may be a distinction [shown] therewith for the children. Moreover, it was taught: If he ate them [the bitter herbs] while demai,⁸ he has discharged [his duty]; if he ate them without intention, he has discharged [his duty]; if he ate them, in half quantities,⁹ he has discharged [his duty], providing that he does not wait between one eating and the next more than is required for the eating of half [a loaf]?¹⁰ -it is [dependent on] Tannaim. For it was taught, R. Jose said: Though he has [already] dipped the lettuce [hazereth], it is a religious requirement to bring lettuce and haroseth and two dishes before him.¹¹ Yet still, whence [does this food]: perhaps R. Jose holds [that] precepts do not require intention and the reason that we require two dippings is that there may be a distinction [shown] for the children?- If so, what is the 'religious requirement'?¹²

What are the two dishes?-Said R. Huna: Beet and rice.¹³ Raba used to be particular for¹⁴ beet and rice, since it had [thus] issued from the mouth of R. Huna. R. Ashi said: From R. Huna you may infer that none pay heed to the following [ruling] of R. Johanan b. Nuri. For it was taught, R. Johanan b.

Nuri said: Rice is a species of corn and kareth is incurred for [eating it in] its leavened state, and a man discharges his duty with it on Passover.¹⁵ Hezekiah said: Even a fish and the egg on it.¹⁶ R. Joseph said: Two kinds of meat are necessary, one in memory of the Passover-offering and the second in memory of the hagigah.¹⁷ Rabina said: Even a bone and [its] broth.

It is obvious that where other vegetables are present, he recites¹⁸ the blessing, 'who createst the fruit of the ground' over the other vegetables and eats, and then¹⁹ recites the blessing, '[Who hast commanded us] concerning the eating of bitter herbs,' and eats.²⁰ But what if he has lettuce only? Said R. Huna: First he recites a blessing over the bitter herbs, 'Who createst the fruit of the ground,' and eats, and then [later] he recites over it 'concerning the eating of bitter herbs' and eats.

(1) The fact that he dips lettuce twice.

(2) The first lettuce.

(3) The first lettuce is eaten before it is obligatory (v. n. 8 in Mishnah); hence the ordinary blessing for vegetables is recited, not 'who hast commanded us concerning the eating (If bitter herbs,' though later it will be eaten as an obligation. This he did not discharge his duty of eating bitter herbs with the first lettuce, because that was not his intention, which proves that one does not discharge one's duty unless it is expressly done with that intention.

(4) v.p. 587, n. 8.

(5) The Mishnah should state that a vegetable is dipped into water and eaten Why specify hazereth (lettuce), which is one of the vegetables which may be eaten as bitter herbs (v. supra 39a)?

(6) I.e., where lettuce alone is eaten.

(7) for once he has eaten it he has done his duty in respect of bitter herbs.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) I.e., as much as half an olive the first time and the same the second time, as much as an olive being the minimum quantity which must be eaten.

(10) V. supra p. 208, n. 9. — This distinctly contradicts Resh Lakish.

(11) And Resh Lakish maintains that R. Jose's reason is because precepts require intention.

(12) mizwah implies that it is an essential obligation.

(13) Even these constitute two dishes, and of course two kinds of meat all the more (Rashbam and Tosaf.)

(14) Lit., 'go in search of.'

(15) Tabshil denotes a boiled dish: hence if it were a species of corn, boiling would make it leaven.

(16) I.e., the egg with which it is smeared before it is prepared. Though it becomes all one, yet it counts as two dishes.

(17) v. Mishnah supra 69b.

(18) At the first dipping.

(19) At the second dipping.

(20) Each blessing being over a different vegetable.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 115a

To this R. Hisda demurred: After filling his stomach with it he returns and recites a blessing over it! — Rather, said R. Hisda: On the first occasion he recites over it, 'Who createst the fruit of the ground,' and, 'concerning the eating of bitter herbs,' and eats, while subsequently he eats the lettuce without a blessing. In Syria they acted in accordance with R. Huna, while R. Shesheth the son of R. Joshua acted according to R. Hisda. And the law is in accordance with R. Hisda. R. Aha the son of Raba used to go in search of other vegetables, so as to avoid controversy.¹

Rabina said, R. Mesharsheya son of R. Nathan told me: Thus did Hillel² say on the authority of tradition:³ A man must not make a sandwich of mazzah and bitter herbs together and eat them, because we hold that mazzah nowadays⁴ is a Biblical obligation, whereas bitter herbs are a Rabbinical requirement and thus the bitter herbs, which are Rabbinical, will come and nullify the mazzah, which is Biblical. And even on the view that precepts cannot nullify each other, that applies only to a Biblical [precept] with a Biblical [precept], or a Rabbinical [precept] with a Rabbinical

[precept], but in the case of a Scriptural and a Rabbinical [precept], the Rabbinical [one] comes and nullifies the Scriptural [one]. Which Tanna do you know [to hold] that precepts do not nullify each other? — it is Hillel.⁵ For it was taught, it was related of Hillel that he used to wrap them together,⁶ for it is said, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.⁷ R. Johanan observed: Hillel's colleagues disagreed with him. For it was taught: You might think that he should wrap them together and eat them, in the manner that Hillel ate it, therefore it is stated, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, [intimating] even each separately.⁸ To this R. Ashi demurred: If so, what is [the meaning of] 'even'?⁹ Rather, said R. Ashi, this Tanna teaches thus: You might think that he does not discharge his duty unless he wraps them together and eats them, in the manner of Hillel therefore it is stated, they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, [intimating] even each separately. Now that the law was not stated either as Hillel or as the Rabbis,¹⁰ one recites the blessing. '[Who hast commanded us] concerning the eating of unleavened bread' and eats; then he recites the blessing, 'concerning the eating of bitter herbs,' and eats; and then he eats unleavened bread and lettuce together without a blessing. in memory of the Temple, as Hillel [did].¹¹

R. Eleazar said in R. Oshaia's name: Whatever is dipped in a liquid¹² requires the washing of the hands.¹³ Said R. Papa: Infer from this that the lettuce

(1) Lit., 'to exclude himself from a controversy'.

(2) The reference is to R. Hillel, the fourth century Babylonian amora, and not to Hillel, the great Nasi who flourished in the first century B.C.E.

(3) I.e., it came to him anonymously; Kaplan, Redaction of the Talmud, p. 227.

(4) I.e., after the destruction of the Temple and the cessation of sacrifices.

(5) Hillel 1.

(6) Place the paschal meat of bitter herbs between mazzah.

(7) Num. IX, 11.

(8) This is deduced from the sing. 'it.'

(9) 'Even' shows that they may certainly be eaten together.

(10) Though the aforementioned Tanna does not disagree with Hillel, as R. Ashi has shown, it was nevertheless held that some Rabbis did disagree.

(11) This he acts on both views, by eating them first separately and then together.

(12) Vegetables, which are dipped into vinegar.

(13) Unwashed hands are, unclean in the second degree and therefore disqualify terumah (v. Mishnah supra 14a and note a.l.), and whatever disqualifies teruma defiles liquids in the first degree (supra 14b). Therefore the hands must be washed.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 115b

must be plunged right into the haroseth¹ to counteract the kappa.² For if you should think that it need not be sunk into it, why is the washing of the hands required?³ Surely he does not touche [the haroseth]?⁴ Yet perhaps I may maintain that in truth it need not be sunk [into the haroseth], the kappa dying from its smell; yet why is washing of the hands required? In case he plunges it in.

R. Papa also said: A man must not keep the bitter herbs [an appreciable time] in the haroseth, because the sweetness of its ingredients [sc. the haroseth] may neutralize its bitterness, whereas the taste of bitter herbs is essential, but it is then absent.

R. Hisda brought⁵ Rabbana 'Ukba⁶ and he lectured: If he washed his hands at the first dipping- he must wash his hands at the second dipping [too]. The Rabbis discussed this before R. Papa: This was stated in general,⁷ for if you should think that it was stated here [in connection with Passover], why must he wash his hands twice? Surely he has [already] washed his hands once?⁸ Said R. Papa to them: On the contrary, it was stated here, for if you should think that it was stated in general, why two dippings?⁹ What then? it was stated here? Then why must he wash his hands twice: surely he has [already] washed his hands once? — I will tell you: since he is to recite the Haggadah¹⁰ and Hallel,¹¹ he may let his thoughts wander¹² and touch [something unclean].

Raba said: If he swallows unleavened bread, he discharges his duty;¹³ if he swallows bitter herbs, he does not discharge his duty.¹⁴ If he swallows unleavened bread and bitter herbs [together], he discharges his duty of unleavened bread, [but] not his duty of bitter herbs. If he wraps them in bast and swallows them, he does not discharge his duty of unleavened bread either.

R. Simi b. Ashi said: unleavened bread [must be set] before each person [of the company]. bitter herbs before each person. and haroseth before each person, but we remove the table¹⁵ only from before him who recites the Haggadah. R. Huna said: All these too [are Set only] before him who recites the Haggadah.¹⁶ And the law is as R. Huna.

Why do we remove the table? — The School of R. Jannai said: So that the children may perceive [the unusual proceeding] and enquire [its reasons]. Abaye was sitting before Rabbah, [when] he saw the tray taken up from before him. Said he to then: We have not yet eaten, and they have [already] come [and] removed the tray from before us! Said Rabbah to him: You have exempted us from reciting, ‘Why [is this night] different?’¹⁷

Samuel said: Bread of [‘oni]¹⁸ [means] bread over which we recite [‘onin] many words.¹⁹ It was taught likewise: ‘Bread of [‘oni]’ means bread over which we recite [‘onin] many words. Another interpretation: ‘Bread of [‘oni]’: ‘ani [poverty] is written:²⁰ just as a beggar generally has a piece,

(1) which is a liquid.

(2) A poisonous substance in the hazereth.

(3) For the first dipping, v. infra.

(4) With his hand, if the lettuce is only dipped lightly in it.

(5) אֲדַבְרִיהָ .

(6) ‘Rabbana’ is a Babylonian title, probably the equivalent of the Palestinian ‘Rabban’ lit., ‘our teacher,’ which is a peculiar title of honour, higher than ‘Rabbi.’

(7) When a man eats vegetables at other times of the year. Since the eating of vegetables then is not statutory, each time he eats them (after dipping) even at the same meal counts as a separate act, for when he ate the first time he did not intend eating them again; hence he must wash his hands at each.

(8) Knowing that he would eat vegetables a second time; hence once should suffice.

(9) The vegetable having been dipped once into vinegar, it need not be dipped again.

(10) The narrative of the exodus, which is an essential part of the ritual.

(11) ‘Praise,’ i.e., Ps. CXIII-CXVIII.

(12) I.e., not think about keeping his hands clean.

(13) Of eating unleavened bread, though he has not chewed it.

(14) Because he has not tasted its bitterness, which is essential. Rashi reads: if he swallows bitter herbs, he has discharged his duty because even then he cannot altogether avoid tasting its bitterness.

(15) V. p. 535, n. 7.

(16) Since the meal has not yet commenced it is sufficient to place the food before one.

(17) V. Mishnah infra 116a. By your observation you have in fact asked that question.

(18) E.V. ‘affliction’. Deut. XVI, 3.

(19) v. supra p. 166, n. 10.

(20) Defective, though it is read plene, denoting ‘reciting’.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 116a

so here too a piece [is taken].¹ Another interpretation: just as a poor man fires [the oven] and his wife bakes,² so here too, he heats and she bakes.³

THOUGH HAROSETH IS NOT A RELIGIOUS REQUIREMENT. Then if it is not a religious requirement, on what account does he bring it? — Said R. Ammi: On account of the kappa.⁴ R. Assi said: The kappa of lettuce [is counteracted by] radishes; the kappa of radishes, [by] leeks; the kappa of leeks, [by] hot water; the kappa of a these, [by] hot water. And in the meanwhile⁵ let him say thus: ‘Kappa kappa, I remember you and your seven daughters and your eight daughters.in.law.’

R. ELEAZAR SON OF R. ZADOK SAID: IT IS A RELIGIOUS REQUIREMENT. Why is it a religious requirement? R. Levi said: In memory of the apple-tree;⁶ R. Johanan said: In memory of the day.⁷ Abaye observed: Therefore one must make it acrid and thicken it: make it acrid, in memory of the apple-tree; and thicken it, in memory of the day. It was taught in accordance with R. Johanan: The condiments⁸ are in memory of the straw;⁹ [and] the haroseth [itself] is a reminder of the day. R. Eleazar son of R. Zadok said: Thus did the grocers¹⁰ cry, ‘Come and buy ingredients for your religious requirements. MISHNAH. THEY FILLED A SECOND CUP FOR HIM. AT THIS STAGE¹¹ THE SON QUESTIONS HIS FATHER;¹² IF THE SON IS UNINTELLIGENT, HIS FATHER INSTRUCTS HIM [TO ASK]: ‘WHY IS THIS NIGHT DIFFERENT FROM ALL [OTHER] NIGHTS. FOR ON ALL [OTHER] NIGHTS WE EAT LEAVENED AND UNLEAVENED BREAD, WHEREAS ON THIS NIGHT [WE EAT] ONLY LEAVENED BREAD; ON ALL OTHER NIGHTS WE EAT ALL KINDS OF HERBS, ON THIS NIGHT BITTER HERBS; ON ALL OTHER NIGHTS WE EAT MEAT ROAST, STEWED OR BOILED, ON THIS NIGHT, ROAST ONLY.¹³ ON ALL OTHER NIGHTS WE DIP¹⁴ ONCE, BUT ON THIS NIGHT WE DIP TWICE.’ AND ACCORDING TO THE SON’S INTELLIGENCE HIS FATHER INSTRUCTS HIM.¹⁵ HE COMMENCES WITH SHAME AND CONCLUDES WITH PRAISE; AND EXPOUNDS FROM ‘A WANDERING ARAMEAN WAS MY FATHER’¹⁶ UNTIL HE COMPLETES THE WHOLE SECTION.

G E M A R A. Our Rabbis taught: If his son is intelligent asks him, while if he is not intelligent his wife asks him; but if not,¹⁷ he asks himself. And even two scholars who know the laws of Passover ask one another.

WHY IS THIS NIGHT DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHER NIGHTS? FOR ON ALL OTHER NIGHTS WE DIP ONCE, WHILE ON THIS NIGHT WE DIP TWICE. To this Raba demurred: Is then dipping once indispensable all other days? Rather, said Raba, It was thus taught: For on all other nights we are not obliged to dip even once, whereas on this night, twice. To this R. Safra demurred: A statutory obligation on account of children!¹⁸ Rather, said R. Safra, He teaches thus: We do not dip even once, whereas this night [we dip] twice. HE COMMENCES WITH SHAME AND CONCLUDES WITH PRAISE. What is ‘WITH SHAME’? Rab said: ‘Aforetime our fathers were idolaters’; while Samuel said: ‘We were slaves.’¹⁹ R. Nahman asked his slave Daru: ‘When a master liberates his slave and gives him gold and silver, what should he say to him?’ ‘He should thank and praise him,’ replied he. ‘You have excused us from saying “Why [is this night] different?”’ observed he. [Thereupon] he commenced by reciting, ‘We were slaves.’

MISHNAH. R. GAMALIEL USED TO SAY: WHOEVER DOES NOT MAKE MENTION OF²⁰

(1) The blessing for the unleavened bread must be said over a piece of mazzah only, not over a whole one, to emphasize Israel's poverty in Egypt. (Hence three mazzoth are required, two because every festival and the Sabbath require two loaves, and a third which is broken, so that the blessing may be recited over the piece.)

(2) Without delay, as they' cannot afford more fuel should the oven cool.

(3) Even wealthy people must bake the unleavened bread without unnecessary delay, lest it turn leaven.

(4) V. supra 115b.

(5) While waiting for the cure to take effect-or perhaps, until he takes these.

- (6) Under which the Israelitish women in Egypt gave birth to their children; v. Sot., 11b.
- (7) Wit which they made bricks.
- (8) Which are mixed in the haroseth.
- (9) Just as the straw was kneaded into the clay.
- (10) Lit., ' parched grain merchants ' — such would sell spices etc. too. Rashi and Rashbam: vendors who sat behind latticed windows.
- (11) Lit. , 'and here' .
- (12) Why all this unusual procedure?
- (13) I.e., in Temple times, v. supra 70a.
- (14) So the text as emended, and it is thus quoted in the Gemara; v. O.H. 473. 7 and ו"ל 9 a.l.
- (15) The answer must be intelligible to the child.
- (16) Deut. XXVI, 5.
- (17) If he has no wife.
- (18) 'Obliged' (hayyabin) connotes a religious precept, whereas as stated supra 114b the first dipping is merely to stimulate the children's wonder.
- (19) The modern liturgy combines both, commencing however with the latter.
- (20) Perhaps better: 'explain.' as R. Gamaliel's main point is that their purpose must be explained; v. Kaplan, Redaction of the Talmud, p. 203.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 116b

THESE THREE THINGS ON PASSOVER DOES NOT DISCHARGE HIS DUTY, AND THESE ARE THEY: THE PASSOVER-OFFERING. UNLEAVENED BREAD, AND BITTER HERBS. THE PASSOVER-OFFERING IS [SACRIFICED] BECAUSE THE OMNIPRESENT PASSED OVER THE HOUSES OF OUR FATHERS IN EGYPT, AS IT IS SAID, THEN YE SHALL SAY: IT IS THE SACRIFICE OF THE LORD'S PASSOVER, FOR THAT HE PASSED OVER etc.¹ THE UNLEAVENED BREAD IS [EATEN] BECAUSE OUR FATHERS WERE REDEEMED FROM EGYPT, AS IT IS SAID, AND THEY BAKED UNLEAVENED CAKES OF THE DOUGH WHICH THEY BROUGHT FORTH OUT OF EGYPT etc.² THE BITTER HERB IS [EATEN] BECAUSE THE EGYPTIANS EMBITTERED THE LIVES OF OUR FATHERS IN EGYPT, AS IT IS SAID, AND THEY MADE THEIR LIVES BITTER etc.³ IN EVERY GENERATION A MAN IS BOUND TO REGARD HIMSELF AS THOUGH HE PERSONALLY HAD GONE FORTH FROM EGYPT, BECAUSE IT IS SAID, AND THOU SHALT TELL THY SON IN THAT DAY, SAYING: IT IS BECAUSE OF THAT WHICH THE LORD DID FOR ME WHEN I CAME FORTH OUT OF EGYPT.⁴ THEREFORE IT IS OUR DUTY TO THANK, PRAISE, LAUD, GLORIFY, EXALT, HONOUR, BLESS, EXTOL, AND ADORE HIM WHO WROUGHT ALL THESE MIRACLES FOR OUR FATHERS AND OURSELVES; HE BROUGHT US FORTH FROM BONDAGE INTO FREEDOM, FROM SORROW INTO JOY, FROM MOURNING INTO FESTIVITY, FROM DARKNESS INTO GREAT LIGHT, AND FROM SERVITUDE INTO REDEMPTION. THEREFORE LET US SAY BEFORE HIM, HALLELUJAH!⁵ HOW FAR DOES ONE RECITE IT? BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: UNTIL 'AS A JOYOUS MOTHER OF CHILDREN,'⁶ WHILE BETH HILLEL SAY: UNTIL 'THE FLINT INTO A FOUNTAIN OF WATERS,'⁷ AND HE CONCLUDES WITH [A FORMULA OF] REDEMPTION. R. TARFON USED TO SAY WHO REDEEMED US AND REDEEMED OUR FATHERS FROM EGYPT, BUT HE DID NOT CONCLUDE [WITH A BLESSING].⁸ R. AKIBA SAID: 'SO MAY THE LORD OUR GOD AND THE GOD OF OUR FATHER SUFFER US TO REACH OTHER SEASONS AND FESTIVALS WHICH COME TOWARDS US FOR PEACE, REJOICING IN THE REBUILDING OF THY CITY AND GLAD IN THY SERVICE, AND THERE WE WILL PARTAKE OF THE SACRIFICES AND THE PASSOVER-OFFERINGS⁹ etc. AS FAR AS BLESSED ART THOU, O LORD, WHO HAST REDEEMED ISRAEL.'

GEMARA. Raba said: He must say 'and us did he bring forth from there.'

Raba said: He must lift up the unleavened bread, and he must lift up the bitter herb,¹⁰ but he need not lift up the meat;¹¹ moreover, it would appear as though he ate sacrifices without [the Temple].¹² R. Aha b. Jacob said: A blind person is exempt from reciting the Haggadah. [For] here it is written, it is because of that [zeh],¹³ while elsewhere it is written, This our son [zeh]:¹⁴ just as there the blind are excluded,¹⁵ so here to the blind are excluded. But that is not so, for Meremar said: I asked the scholars of the School of R. Joseph, who recites the Aggadah¹⁶ at R. Joseph's? And they told me, R. Joseph; Who recites the Aggadah at R. Shesheth's? And they told me, R. Shesheth.¹⁷ — These Rabbis held that un-leavened bread nowadays is a Rabbinical obligation.¹⁸ Hence it follows that R. Aha b. Jacob holds that unleavened bread nowadays is a Scriptural obligation?¹⁹ But Surely it was R. Aha b. Jacob himself who said: [The obligation of eating] unleavened bread nowadays is Rabbinical! — He holds, Whatever our Rabbis enacted, they enacted it similar to the Scriptural Jaw.²⁰ But according to R. Shesheth and R. Joseph too, surely it is certain that whatever our Rabbis enacted, they enacted similar to a Scriptural law? — How compare!²¹ As for there, it is we: since it should have been written, 'He is our son,' whereas it is written, 'This our son,'²² you may infer that it comes to exclude blind persons. But here, if not 'for the sake of this' what should be written? Hence it comes [to intimate], 'for the sake of the unleavened bread and bitter herbs.'²³

THEREFORE IT IS OUR DUTY.

-
- (1) Ex. XII, 27.
 - (2) Ibid. 39.
 - (3) Ex. I, 14.
 - (4) Ibid. XIII, 8.
 - (5) 'Praise ye the Lord,' with which Hallel commences.
 - (6) Ps. CXIII, 9.
 - (7) Ibid. CXIV, 8.
 - (8) Hatham is the technical term meaning to round off a liturgical passage with a blessing formula, 'Blessed art Thou, O Lord.'
 - (9) So the text as emended, 'sacrifices' referring to the hagigah of the fourteenth, which was eaten before the Passover-offering (v. supra 70a); hence it is mentioned before too.
 - (10) When saying, 'This unleavened bread' ' . . 'this bitter herb.'
 - (11) Which is set in memory of the Passover-offering; v. R. Joseph's dictum supra 114b.
 - (12) If he lifted up the meat as he said 'This Passover-offering,' it would look as if he had actually consecrated it as a sacrifice, which is forbid den, Since sacrifices may not be offered without the Temple (Raba refers to post-Temple times). Hence he must not lift up the meat.
 - (13) Lit., 'this'.
 - (14) Deut. XXI, 20.
 - (15) For 'this our son' implies that his parents see and point at him.
 - (16) Haggadah.
 - (17) R. Joseph and R. Shesheth were both blind.
 - (18) Sc. that unleavened bread must be eaten on the first night of Passover (the interdict of leavened bread of course is Biblical). Hence the reciting of the Haggadah is likewise Rabbinical, and therefore 'unaffected by R. Aha b. Jacob's deduction.
 - (19) For he states his law generally, and therefore meant it for post-Temple times too.
 - (20) On which it is based. Hence since the blind were exempt from reciting the Haggadah when it was a Scriptural obligation, they are still exempt now that it is only Rabbinical.
 - (21) They reject the law entirely, together with the analogy on which it is based.
 - (22) v. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 486, n. 2 and 3.
 - (23) I.e., it does not intimate that he who recites must see it, but simply means: it is for this reason that I eat unleavened bread and bitter herbs viz., because of what the Lord did for me etc.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 117a

R. Hisda said in R. Johanan's name: Hallelujah, Kesjah¹ and Jedidjah² are single words.³ Rab said: Kesjah and merhabjah⁴ are single words. Rabbah⁵ said merhabjah alone [is a single word]. The scholars asked: What about merhab Jah in R. Hisda's view?⁶ The question stands. The scholars asked: What about Jedidjah in Rab's view? — Come and hear: Jedidjah is divisible into two, therefore Jedid is non-sacred while Jah [the Lord] is sacred.⁷ The scholars asked: What about Hallelujah in Rab's view? Come and hear, for Rab said: I saw [a copy of] the Psalms in my friend's college,⁸ wherein 'Hallalu' was written on one line and 'jah' on the following.⁹ Now he disagrees with R. Joshua b. Levi, for R. Joshua b. Levi said: What is the meaning of 'Hallelujah? Praise him with many praises.¹⁰ Further, he [R. Joshua b. Levi] is self-contradictory. For R. Joshua b. Levi said: The Book of Psalms was uttered with ten synonyms of praise, viz.: nizzuah [victory], niggun [melody], maskil,¹¹ mizmor [psalm], shir [song], ashre [happy], tehillah [praise], tefillah [prayer], hodayah [thanksgiving] [and] hallelujah. The greatest of all is 'hallelujah,' because it embraces the [Divine] Name and praise simultaneously.¹²

Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: The Song in the Torah¹³ was uttered by Moses and Israel when they ascended from the [Red] Sea. And who recited this Hallel?¹⁴ The prophets among them ordained that Israel should recite it at every important epoch and at every misfortune — may it not come upon them! and when they are redeemed they recite [in gratitude] for their redemption.

It was taught, R. Meir used to say: All the praises which are stated in the Book of psalms, David uttered all of them, for it is said, The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended [kallu]:¹⁵ read not kallu but kol ellu [all these].¹⁶ Who recited this Hallel? R. Jose said: My son Eleazar maintains [that] Moses and Israel said it when they ascended from the [Red] Sea, but his college disagree with him, averring that David said it. But his view is preferable to theirs: Is it possible that Israel slaughtered their Passover-offerings or took their palm-branches without uttering song!¹⁷ Another argument: Micah's image¹⁸ stands at Beki¹⁹ and Israel recites the Hallel!²⁰

Our Rabbis taught: As for all the songs and praises to which David gave utterance in the Book of Psalms, R. Joshua said: He spoke them in reference to himself; R. Joshua said: He spoke them with reference to the [Jewish] community; while the Sages maintain: Some of them refer to the community, while others refer to himself. [Thus:] those which are couched in the singular bear upon himself, while those which are couched in the plural allude to the community. Nizzuah and niggun²¹ [introduce psalms] relating to the future; maskil [indicates that it was spoken] through a meturgeman [interpreter]; [the superscription] To David, a psalm' intimates that the Shechinah rested upon him and then he uttered [that] song; 'a psalm of david' intimates that he [first] uttered [that particular] psalm and then the Shechinah rested upon him. This teaches you that the Shechinah rests [upon man] neither in indolence nor in gloom nor in frivolity nor in levity, nor in vain pursuits,²² but only in rejoicing connected with a religious act, for it is said, 'but now bring me a minstrel.' And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the hand of the lord came upon him.²³ Rab Judah said in Rab's name: And it is likewise so in a matter of halachah.²⁴ R. Nahman said: And it is likewise so for a good dream.²⁵ But that is not so, for R. Giddal said in Rab's name: If a scholar sits before his teacher and his lips do not drip anxiety.²⁶ they shall be burnt, for it is said, His lips are as lilies [shoshanim], dropping with flowing myrrh [mor 'ober]:²⁷ read not shoshanim but sheshonim [that study]; read not mor'ober but mar 'ober [dropping anxiety]? — There is no difficulty: One applies to the teacher, the other to the disciple. Alternatively, both refer to the teacher, yet there is no difficulty: the one holds good before he commences; the other, after he commences. Even as Rabbah used to say something humorous to his scholars before he commenced [his discourse], in order to amuse them;²⁸ after that he sat in awe and commenced the lecture.

Our Rabbis taught: Who uttered this Hallel? R. Eleazar said: Moses and Israel uttered it when they stood by the [Red] Sea. They exclaimed, ‘Not unto us, not unto us,’²⁹ and the Holy Spirit responded. ‘For mine own sake, for mine own sake, will I do it.’³⁰ R. Judah said: Joshua and Israel uttered it when the kings of Canaan attacked them. They exclaimed, ‘Not unto us [etc.]’ and the Holy Spirit responded etc. R. Eleazar the Modiite said: Deborah and Barak uttered it when Sisera attacked them. They exclaimed, ‘Not unto us [etc.]’ and the Holy Spirit responded. ‘For Mine own sake, for Mine own sake, will I do it.’ R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah said: Hezekiah and his companions uttered it when Sennacherib attacked them. They exclaimed, ‘Not unto us [etc.]’ and the Holy Spirit responded etc. R. Akiba said: Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah uttered it when the wicked Nebuchadnezzar rose against them. They exclaimed, ‘Not unto us etc.,’ and the Holy Spirit responded etc. R. Jose the Galilean said: Mordecai and Esther uttered it when the wicked Haman rose against them. They supplicated, ‘Not unto us etc.’, and the Holy Spirit responded etc. But the Sages maintain: The prophets among them enacted that the Israelites should recite at every epoch and at every trouble — may it not come to them! — and when they are redeemed, they recite it [in thankfulness] for their delivery.

R. Hisda Said: Hallelujah marks the end of a chapter; Rabbah b. R. Huna said: Hallelujah marks the beginning of a chapter.³¹ R. Hisda observed: I saw that in the copies of the Psalms used in the college of R. Hanin b. Rab, ‘Hallelujah’ was written in the middle of the chapter,³² which proves that he was in doubt.

R. Hanin b. Raba said: A agree that in the case of, ‘My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord, and let all flesh bless His holy name for ever and ever.’³³ ‘Hallelujah which follows it is the beginning of the [next] psalm. In the wicked shall see, and be vexed; he shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away, the desire of the wicked shall perish:³⁴ the ‘Hallelujah’ which follows it commences the [next] psalm. Again, in the passage. ‘that stated in the house of the lord in the night seasons,³⁵ the following ‘Hallelujah commences the [next] psalm.³⁶ Bible scholars³⁷ add the following: He will drink of the brook by the way, therefore will he lift up the head:³⁸ Hallelujah which follows it is the beginning of the next psalm. The fear of the lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have a they that do thereafter; His praise endureth for ever.³⁹ ‘Hallelujah which follows it is the beginning of the [next] psalm.

Shall we say that this is dependent on Tannaim? [For we learned:] HOW FAR DOES HE RECITE IT? BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: UNTIL AS A JOYOUS MOTHER OF CHILDREN, WHILE BETH HILLEL. SAY: UNTIL THE FLINT INTO A FOUNTAIN OF WATERS.’ But another [Baraitha] taught: How far does he recite it? Beth Shammai maintain: Until ‘when Israel came forth out of Egypt.’⁴⁰ while Beth Hillel say: Until, ‘Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us.’⁴¹

(1) In Ex. XVII, 16: The hand upon kesjah (E.V.: the throne of the Lord).

(2) II Sam. XII, 25: and he called his name jedidjah (E.V. Jedidiah).

(3) Though Jah means the ‘Lord,’ it combines to form a single word.

(4) Ps CXVIII, 5: He answered me ba-merhabjah (E.V.: with great enlargement); lit., ‘with the Lord’s enlargement.

(5) Rashal reads: Raba:

(6) Is it one word or two?

(7) This would affect e.g., the manner of its writing. If ‘Jedid’ is written incorrectly, it can be erased and rewritten. But Jah, being sacred (i.e., God’s name), must not be erased and would have to be cut out entirely, together with its parchment.

(8) I.e., at the college of R. Hiyya.

(9) Thus he evidently regards it as two words.

(10) Since he interprets the whole word thus, he evidently regards it as one.

(11) V. e.g., superscriptions to Ps. XLII, XLIV, and XLV; perhaps lit., ‘a psalm giving instruction.’

(12) Thus he interprets ‘Jah’ separately.

(13) ‘Torah’ bears here its narrower connotation of Pentateuch. The ‘Song’ referred to is that contained in Ex. XV.

- (14) Ps. CXIII-CXVIII. [MS.M. (gloss) inserts: Moses and Israel recited it].
- (15) Ps. LXXII, 20.
- (16) The verse thus reads: All these are prayers etc.
- (17) Until the time of David — surely not.
- (18) V. Judg. XVII.
- (19) [Probably a variant of Bochin, v. judg. II, 1].
- (20) Rashbam: Hallel, which contains a sweeping condemnation of idolatry (v. Ps. CXV, 5-8), could not have been composed in the days of David while Micah's idolatrous image was still in existence; hence it must have been composed at the Red Sea.
- (21) V. supra.
- (22) Lit., 'idle words' or chatter.
- (23) II Kings III, 15. Maharsha in Shab. 30a observes that the verse is quoted to show that the Shechinah does not rest on a man who is plunged in gloom, Elisha requiring the minstrel to dissipate the gloom occasioned by Jehoram's visit.
- (24) Serious study should be preceded by light-hearted conversation.
- (25) Going to sleep in good spirits promotes happy dreams.
- (26) Lit., 'bitterness'. To show due reverence.
- (27) Cant. V, 13.
- (28) Lit., 'and the scholars rejoiced'.
- (29) Ps. CXV, 1.
- (30) Isa. XLVIII, 11.
- (31) Where a single 'Hallelujah' separates two psalms (e.g., Ps. CXXXIV and CXXXV), R. Hisda maintains that it ends the first, while Rabbah b. R. Huna places it at the beginning of the second.
- (32) I.e., the two men were into one with 'Hallelujah' in the middle.
- (33) Ps. CXLV, 21.
- (34) Ps. CXII, 10.
- (35) Ibid. CXXXIV, 1.
- (36) This is somewhat difficult as 'Hallelujah' does not immediately follow. Possibly the phrase is quoted loosely to indicate which psalm is meant, viz., CXXXIV, 'Hallelujah,' the commencing the next. Tosaf. however quotes 'Ye that stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God'. In our edd. this is Ps. CXXXV, 2, and does not end the psalm; but according to Tosaf. it does, while v. 3, which begins with 'Hallelujah,' (E.V. praise ye the lord) is the beginning of another psalm.
- (37) Presumably scholars who specialized in the study of the Bible.
- (38) Ps. CX, 7.
- (39) Ps. CXI, 10.
- (40) Ibid. CXIV, 1.
- (41) Ibid. CXV, 1. In each case whereas the Mishnah quotes the ending of the chapters according to our edd., the Baraita quotes the beginning of the following chapters.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 117b

Surely then they differ in this: he who says, until 'as a joyous mother of children', holds that [the following] 'Hallelujah' [praise ye lord] is the beginning of the [next] psalm; while he who says until, 'when Israel came forth out of Egypt', holds that 'Hallelujah' is the end of the [previous] psalm!¹ — R. Hisda reconciles it with his view. All agree that 'Hallelujah' is the end of the psalm. Hence the statement, until 'when Israel came forth out of Egypt' is well. While he who says, until 'a joyous mother of children' is meant inclusively. Then let him say, 'up to "hallelujah"'? And should you answer, because we would not know which 'Hallelujah,' then let him say, 'up to the "Hallelujah" of "as a joyous mother of children"'? This is a difficulty. Rabbah b. R. Huna reconciles it with his view. All agree that 'Hallelujah' is the beginning of the psalm. Hence the statement, until 'as a joyous mother of children' is well. While he who says, until 'when Israel came forth' does not mean it inclusively. Then let him say, 'until the Hallelujah? And should you answer, because we would not know which 'Hallelujah' is meant, then let him say, 'until the Hallelujah of "when Israel came forth"? This is a difficulty.

AND HE CONCLUDES WITH [A FORMULA OF] REDEMPTION. Raba said: [The ending of the benediction following] the reciting of the shema² and Hallel is 'who redeemed Israel';³ that of prayer⁴ is 'the redeemer of Israel'.⁵ What is the reason? Because it is a petition.⁶ R. Zera said: [The formula] in kiddush is 'who did sanctify us with His commandments and did command us'; that of prayer is 'sanctify us with Thy Commandments.' What is the reason? Because it is supplication. R. Aha b. Jacob said: And he must refer to the Egyptian exodus in the kiddush of the day. [For] here it is written, that thou mayest remember the day [when thou camest forth out of the land of Egypt],⁷ while there it is written, Remember the sabbath day, to hallow it [by reciting kiddush].⁸

Rabbah b. Shila said: [The formula] in Prayer is 'who causeth the horn of Salvation to spring forth,'⁹ while that of the haftarah¹⁰ is 'the shield of David.' And I will make thee a great man, like unto the name of the great ones [that are in the earth the earth].¹¹ R. Joseph taught: that alludes to the fact that we say 'the shield of David.'¹²

R. Simeon b. Lakish said: And I will make thee a great nation:¹³ that means that we say, 'the God of Abraham'; and I will bless thee — that we say, 'the God of Isaac'; and make thy name great, — that we say, 'the God of Jacob.' You might think that we conclude with [a reference to] all of them: therefore it is said, and be thou a blessing: with thee do we conclude, but we do not conclude with all of them.

Raba said: I found the elders of Pumbeditha¹⁴ sitting and stating: On the Sabbath, both in Prayer¹⁵ and in kiddush [we conclude the benediction with] 'who sanctifiest the Sabbath.' On a festival, both in Prayer and in kiddush [we conclude with] 'who sanctifiest Israel and the [festive] seasons.' Said I to them, On the contrary, [the formula] of Prayer both on the Sabbath and on a festival is 'who sanctifiest Israel.' In the kiddush of the Sabbath [the formula is] 'who sanctifiest the Sabbath'; On a festival, 'who sanctifiest Israel and the seasons.' Now I will state my reason and your reason. Your reason is: the Sabbath is permanently fixed, hence both in Prayer and in kiddush 'who sanctifiest the Sabbath' [is said].¹⁶ On festivals, which are fixed by Israel, for they intercalate the months¹⁷ and fix [the beginnings of] the years,¹⁸ 'who sanctifiest Israel and the seasons' [is said].¹⁹ My reason: Prayer, which is [carried on] in public, [requires] 'who sanctifiest Israel';²⁰ as for kiddush, which is [recited] privately [at home], on the Sabbath [the formula is] 'who sanctifiest the Sabbath,' while on festivals it is 'who sanctifiest Israel and the seasons'²¹ That [argument] however is Incorrect: is not prayer [recited] privately [too], and is not kiddush recited publicly?—Raba however, holds: Follow the main [practice].²²

'Ulla b. Rab visited Raba. he recited [kiddush] in accordance with the elders of Pumbeditha, and he said nothing to him [in protest]. This proves that Raba retracted. R. Nathan the father of R. Hune the son of R. Nathan²³ visited R. Papa. He recited it in accordance with the elders of Pumbeditha, whereupon R. Papa praised him. Rabina said: I visited Meremar at Sura, when the reader²⁴ went down [to the reading desk]²⁵ and recited it as the elders of Pumbeditha. Everybody made to silence him, but he said to them, 'Leave him alone: the law is as the elders of Pumbeditha.' Then they did not silence him.²⁶

MISHNAH. THEY FILLED THE THIRD CUP FOR HIM. HE THEN RECITES GRACE AFTER MEALS. OVER THE FOURTH [CUP] HE CONCLUDES THE HALLEL, AND RECITES THE GRACE OF SONG.²⁷ BETWEEN THESE CUPS²⁸ HE MAY DRINK IF HE WISHES; BETWEEN THE THIRD AND THE FOURTH HE MAY NOT DRINK.

GEMARA. R. Hanan said to Raba: This proves that Grace after meals requires a cup [of wine]. Said he to him: Our Rabbis instituted four cups as symbolizing freedom:²⁹ let us perform a religious act with each.³⁰

OVER THE FOURTH [CUP] HE CONCLUDES THE HALLEL, AND RECITES THE GRACE OF SONG.

-
- (1) This of course is on the view of Beth Shammai. The differences in the view of Beth Hillel are then stated for the sake of parallelism (Rashbam).
 - (2) This is followed by one benediction in the morning and two in the evening, before the 'Prayer,' i.e. the Eighteen benedictions.
 - (3) In the past tense.
 - (4) The Amidah on weekdays. It consists of the Eighteen Benedictions, the fifth of which is a prayer for redemption.
 - (5) In the present tense.
 - (6) For the future. Hence the past tense would be inappropriate.
 - (7) Deut. XVI, 3.
 - (8) Ex. XX, 8. 'Remember' in the second verse, i.e., the reciting of kiddush (and the Sabbath is an example of a holy days, including Festivals). must include the 'remember,' of the first verse, vi., the Egyptian exodus.
 - (9) That is the ending of the fifteenth benediction.
 - (10) V. Glos. It is followed by four benedictions. The reference here is to the third, whose subject-matter is the same as the fifteenth benediction mentioned in the preceding note.
 - (11) II Sam. VII, 9.
 - (12) it is a great honour to David that God is designated 'the shield of David' in the conclusion of a benediction.
 - (13) Ex. XII, 2.
 - (14) Rab Judah and R. 'Ena, v. Sanh. 17b.
 - (15) The 'Amidah on Sabbath and Festivals consists of seven benedictions.
 - (16) Because its sanctification depends entirely on God.
 - (17) The Jewish month consists of either 29 or 30 days, the length of each month being fixed by the Jewish authorities.
 - (18) Thereby fixing the dates of festivals too.
 - (19) Thus Israel must be mentioned, because through Israel the festivals are sanctified.
 - (20) I.e., a reference to the whole community.
 - (21) The emphasis being on the sacred nature of the day, 'Israel' must be mentioned in the latter case because the sanctification (If the seasons is dependant thereon (supra).
 - (22) Prayer is essentially intended for the community, not withstanding that private prayer too is possible. Again, kiddush is chiefly intended for the home ('in the place of the meal'), though it is also recited in the synagogue on account of the wayfarers.
 - (23) 'The son of R. Nathan' should probably be deleted.
 - (24) Lit., 'the deputy of the congregation.' In the Talmud this is the name of the reader who leads the congregation in prayer; the modern title 'hazzan' dates from the post-Talmudic period.
 - (25) In Talmudic times this was on a lower level than the rest of the synagogue building, in accordance with Ps. CXXX, 1: out of the depths have I called Thee O Lord.
 - (26) Omitted in MS. M. var. lec. add: And the law is as the elders of Pumbeditha.
 - (27) The phrase is explained in the Gemara.
 - (28) Viz., first, second and third.
 - (29) This is omitted in Rashbam.
 - (30) Hence Grace is recited over the third. But on other occasions a cup may not be required for Grace after meals.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 118a

What is 'THE GRACE OF SONG'? Rab Judah said: 'They shall praise Thee, O Lord our God'; while R. Johanan said: 'The breath of a living [etc.]'¹

Our Rabbis taught: At the fourth he concludes the Hallel and recites the great Hallel this is the view of R. Tarfon. Others say: The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.'² What comprises the great Hallel? Rab³ Judah said: From 'O give thanks' until 'the rivers of Babylon.'⁴ While R. Johanan said: From 'A song of ascents' until 'the rivers of Babylon.'⁵ R. Aha b. Jacob said: From 'for the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto himself'⁶ until 'the rivers of Babylon.' And why is it called the great Hallel? — Said R. Johanan: Because the Holy One, blessed be He, sits in the heights of the universe and distributes food to all creatures.⁷

R. Joshua b. Levi said: To what do these twenty-six [verses of] 'Give thanks'⁸ correspond? To the twenty-six generations which the Holy One, blessed be He, created in His world; though He did not give them the Torah, He sustained them by His love.⁹

R. Hisda said:¹⁰ What is meant by the verse, O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good?¹¹ Give thanks unto the Lord who exacts man's debts by means of His goodness:¹² the wealthy man through his ox and the poor man through his sheep,¹³ the fatherless through his egg and the widow through her fowl.

R. Johanan said: Man's sustenance involves twice as much suffering as [that of] a woman in childbirth. For of a woman in childbirth it is written, in pain [be-'ezeb — thou shalt bring forth children],¹⁴ whereas of sustenance it is written, in toil [be-'izzabon — shalt thou eat].¹⁵ R. Johanan also said: Man's sustenance is more difficult [to come by] than the redemption, for of redemption it is written, the angel who hath redeemed me from all evil,¹⁶ thus a mere angel [sufficed], whereas of sustenance it is written, the God who hath fed [shepherded] me.¹⁷ R. Joshua b. Levi said: When the Holy One, blessed be He, said to Adam, 'Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee,'¹⁸ tears flowed from his eyes, and he pleaded before Him, 'Sovereign of the Universe! Shall I and my ass eat out of the same crib!' But as soon as He said to him, 'In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread,'¹⁹ his mind was set at rest. R. Simeon b. Lakish said: Happy are we that we did not remain subject to the first! Abaye observed: Yet we have still not [altogether] escaped from it, for we eat herbs of the field.²⁰

R. Shizbi said in the name of R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah: A man's sustenance is as difficult [to provide] as the dividing of the Red Sea, for it is written, Who giveth food to a flesh,²¹ and near it, To Him who divided the Red Sea in sunder.²²

R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah said: A man's excretory organs [when blocked up] are as painful as the day of death and [as difficult to overcome]²³ as the dividing of the Red Sea, for it is said, The prisoner hasteneth to be loosed; [and he shall not go down dying into the pit, neither shall his bread fail];²⁴ and that is followed by [For I am the Lord thy God,] who stirreth tip the sea, that the waves thereof roar.²⁵

Again. R. Shesheth said on the authority of R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah: He who despises the Festivals²⁶ is as though he engaged in idolatry, for it is said, Thou shalt make thee no molten gods,²⁷ which is followed by, The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep.²⁸

R. Shesheth also said on the authority of R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah: Whoever relates slander, and whoever accepts slander, and whoever gives false testimony against his neighbour, deserve to be cast to dogs, for it is said, ye shall cast to the dogs,²⁹ which is followed by, Thou shalt not take up a false report,³⁰ which may be read tashshi.³¹

Now since there is the great Hallel, why do we recite this one?³² Because it includes [a mention of] the following five things: The exodus from Egypt, the dividing of the Red Sea, the giving of the Torah [Revelation], the resurrection of the dead, and the pangs of Messiah.³³ The exodus from Egypt, as it is written, When Israel came forth out of Egypt;³⁴ as the dividing of the Red Sea: The sea saw it, and fled;³⁵ the giving of the Torah: The mountains skipped like rams;³⁶ resurrection of the dead: I shall walk before the Lord [in the land of the living];³⁷ the pangs of Messiah: Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us.³⁸

R. Johanan also said: 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us' refers to the servitude to [foreign] powers. Others state, R. Johanan said: 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us' refers to the war of Gog and Magog.³⁹ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [Hallel is recited] because it contains [an allusion to] the deliverance of the souls of the righteous from the Gehenna, as it is said, I beseech Thee, O Lord, deliver my soul.⁴⁰ Hezekiah said: Because it alludes to the descent of the righteous⁴¹ into the fiery furnace and their ascent from it. 'Their descent,' for it is written, Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us: [this] Hananiah said; 'But unto Thy name give glory' was said by Mishael; For Thy mercy, a rid for Thy truth's sake, by Azariah; Wherefore should the nations say?⁴² by all of them. 'Their ascent from the fiery furnace,' for it is written, O praise the Lord, all ye nations;⁴³ [this] Hananiah said; Laud Him, all ye peoples, was said by Mishael; For His mercy is great toward us,⁴⁴ by Azariah; 'And the truth of the Lord endureth for ever,' by all of them. Others maintain [that] it was Gabriel who said, 'And the truth of the Lord endureth for ever.' [For] when the wicked Nimrod cast our father Abraham into the fiery furnace, Gabriel said to the Holy One, blessed be He: 'Sovereign of the Universe! Let me go down, cool [it], and deliver that righteous man from the fiery furnace.' Said the Holy One, blessed be He, to him: 'I am unique in My world, and he is unique in his world: it is fitting for Him who is unique to deliver him who is unique. But because the Holy One, blessed be He, does not withhold the [merited] reward of any creature, he said to him, 'Thou shalt be privileged to deliver three of his descendants.'⁴⁵

R. Simeon the Shilonite lectured: When the wicked Nebuchadnezzar cast Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah into the fiery furnace, Yurkami, Prince of hail,⁴⁶ rose before the Holy One, blessed be He, and said to Him: 'Sovereign of the Universe! Let me go down and cool the furnace and save these righteous men from the fiery furnace.' Said Gabriel to him, 'The might of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not thus [manifested], for thou art the Prince of hail, and all know that water extinguishes fire. But I, the Prince of fire, will go down and cool it within

(1) V. P. B. p. 125.

(2) Ps. XXIII.

(3) Text as read by Asheri.

(4) I.e., Ps. CXXXVII.

(5) Ps. CXX-CXXXIV all bear the superscription 'A song of ascents.' Hence he probably means Ps. CXX-CXXXVI.

(6) Ps. CXXXV. 4

(7) The subject matter of Ps. CXXXVI, 25-26. Which is a great thing indeed, and for that He is praised by the reciting of the great Hallel.

(8) Ps. CXXXVI contains twenty-six verses, each of which expresses gratitude to God.

(9) There were twenty-six generations from Adam until Moses. These, lacking the Torah, could not be sustained through their own merit but only through God's love.

(10) Var. lec.: R. Joshua b. Levi also said.

(11) Ps. CXXXVI, 1 .

(12) I.e., from what He has granted to man.

(13) When people must suffer loss in expiation of wrong, the loss is regulated according to their means.

(14) Gen. III, 16.

(15) Ibid. 17 'Izzabon is more emphatic than 'ezeb (both belong to the same root), and therefore denotes greater suffering.

(16) Gen. XLVIII, 16.

(17) Ibid. 15.

(18) Gen. III, 18.

(19) Ibid. 19.

(20) Wild herbs. The translation is that of the amended text given in the margin. [Cur. edd.: 'Happy were we had we remained subject to the first,' that is, and thus been spared the sweat of the brow in search for a livelihood. Thereupon Abaye observes — we still retain part of this advantage in that there are wild herbs which provide food without toil.]

(21) Ps. CXXXVI, 25.

(22) Ibid. 13.

(23) The Heb. קשה has both meanings.

(24) Isa. LI, 14.

(25) Ibid. 15. This is understood as an allusion to the dividing of the Red Sea.

(26) The Intermediate Days of the Festival, doing unnecessary work thereon (Rashi).

(27) Ex. XXXIV, 17.

(28) Ibid. 18.

(29) Ex. XXII, 30.

(30) Ex. XXIII, 1.

(31) [תשיא from rt. meaning 'to entice', 'induce', 'mislead', hence attempting to influence the judge to one side by bearing false testimony against another person. v. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 31 n. 10]. Rashbam deletes this phrase, holding that the whole follows from the verse as it stands.

(32) Viz., Ps. CXIII-CXVIII.

(33) I.e., the suffering which must precede his coming.

(34) Ibid. CXIV, 1.

(35) Ibid. 3.

(36) Ibid. 4; cf. Judg. V. 4f.

(37) Ps. CXVI, 9.

(38) Ibid. CXV, 1. This is now interpreted as a prayer to be spared the great distress of that time; cf. Sanh. 97a.

(39) V. Ezek. XXXVIII and Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 630. n. 7.

(40) Ps. CXVI, 4.

(41) Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah.

(42) Ps. CXV, 2.

(43) Ps. CXVII, 1.

(44) Ibid. 2.

(45) And when that promise was fulfilled, Gabriel said 'and the truth' etc.

(46) The presiding genius over hail-storms.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 118b

and heat it without,¹ and will thus perform a double miracle.² Said the Holy One, blessed be He, to him, 'Go down.' It was then that Gabriel commenced [with praise] and said, 'And the truth of the Lord endureth for ever.'

R. Nathan said: it was the fish in the sea who said, 'and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever,' this being in accordance with R. Huna. For R. Huna said: The Israelites of that generation [sc. of the Egyptian exodus] were men of little faith, and as Rabbah b. Mari expounded: What is taught by the verse, But they were rebellious at the sea, even at the Red Sea?³ This teaches that in that moment the Israelites were rebellious and said: Just as we ascend at one side [of the sea] so do the Egyptians ascend from another. Whereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, ordered the Prince of the Sea,⁴ 'Spue them forth on to the dry land.' Said he to Him, 'Sovereign of the Universe! Does a master make a gift to his servant and then take it back from him!' 'I will give you one and a half times their number,' He replied. 'Sovereign of the Universe, he pleaded, 'can a servant claim [a debt] from his Master!' 'Let the brook of Kishon be surety for Me,' He answered. Straightway he spewed them forth on to the dry land, and Israel came and saw them, as it is said, and Israel saw the Egyptians dead on the sea-shore.⁵

What is [this allusion to] 'one and a half times their number'? For in the case of Pharaoh it is written, [and he took] six hundred chosen chariots,⁶ whereas in the case of Sisera it is written, [And Sisera gathered . . .] nine hundred chariots of iron.⁷ When Sisera came [to fight Israel] he advanced against them with iron staves. Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, brought forth the stars out of their orbits against them, as it is written, The stars in their courses fought against Sisera.⁸ As soon as the stars of heaven descended upon them they heated those iron staves . So they went down to cool them and to refresh themselves in the brook of Kishon. Said the Holy One, blessed be He, to the brook of Kishon, ‘Go and deliver your pledge.’ Straightway the brook of Kishon swept them out and cast them into the sea, as it is said, The brook Kishon swept them away, that ancient brook.⁹ What does ‘that ancient brook’ mean? The brook that became a surety in ancient times. In that hour the fish in the sea opened [their mouths] and exclaimed, ‘and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever.’

R. Simeon b. Lakish said, What means ‘Who maketh the barren woman [‘akereth] to dwell in her house’?¹⁰ The congregation of Israel said before the Holy One, blessed be He, ‘Sovereign of the Universe! Thy sons have made me like a weasel that dwells in the vaults [‘ikare]¹¹ of houses.’¹²

Raba lectured, What means, I love that the Lord should hear [my voice and my supplications]?¹³ The congregation of Israel said: Sovereign of the Universe! When am I loved by Thee? When Thou hearest the voice of my supplications. I was brought low [dallothi], and He saved me.¹⁴ The congregation of Israel spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He, Sovereign of the Universe! Though I am poor [dallah] in religious deeds, yet I am Thine, and it is fitting that I should be saved.

R. Kahana said: When R. Ishmael son of R. Jose fell sick, Rabbi sent to him: Tell us two or three things which you have said to us in your father's name. He sent back to him, Thus did my father say: What is meant by the verse, O praise the Lord, all ye nations:¹⁵ What business have the nations of the world here?¹⁶ This is its meaning: ‘O praise the Lord, all ye nations’ for the mighty and wondrous deeds which He wrought for them; all the more we, since ‘His mercy is great toward us.’ Furthermore [he sent word to him]: Egypt is destined to bring a gift to the Messiah. He will think not to accept it from them, but the Holy One, blessed be He, will instruct him, ‘Accept it from them: they furnished hospitality to My children in Egypt.’ Immediately, ‘Nobles shall come out of Egypt [bringing gifts].¹⁷ Then Ethiopia shall argue with herself: If those [the Egyptians] who enslaved them are thus [treated], how much the more we, who did not enslave them! At that the Holy One, blessed be He, shall bid him: ‘Accept it from them.’ Straightway, ‘Ethiopia shall hasten to stretch out her hands unto God.’¹⁸ Then shall the wicked Roman State argue with herself: If those who are not their brethren are thus [accepted], how much the more we, their brethren.¹⁹ But the Holy One, blessed be He, will say to Gabriel: Rebuke the wild beast of the reeds [kaneh]; the multitude of [‘adath] the bulls:²⁰ rebuke the wild beast [Rome] and take thee possession [keneh] of the congregation [‘edah].²¹ Another interpretation: rebuke the wild beast of the reeds, i.e.. that dwells among the reeds, as it is written, The boar out of the wood doth ravage it, that which moveth in the field feedeth on it.²² R. Hiyya b. Abba interpreted it in R. Johanan's name: Rebuke the wild beast all of whose actions may be recorded with the same pen.²³ ‘The multitude of the bulls [abbirim], with the calves of the people’:²⁴ that means that they slaughtered the valiant [abbirim] like calves which have no owners.²⁵ ‘Everyone opening his hand with the desire of money’:²⁶ they stretch out their hand to accept the money, but do not carry out its owners’ wishes. ‘He hath scattered the people that delight in approaches’: what caused Israel to be scattered among the nations? The approaches [to the nations] which they desired.²⁷

He also sent to him: There are three hundred and sixty five thoroughfares in the great city of Rome, and in each there were three hundred and sixty five palaces; and in each palace there were three hundred and sixty five storeys,²⁸ and each storey contained sufficient to provide the whole world with food.²⁹ R. Simeon b. Rabbi asked Rabbi — others say, R. Ishmael son of R. Jose asked Rabbi — For whom are all these [other storeys]? — For you, your companions and acquaintances, as it is said, And her gain and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord,’ it shall not be stored nor treasured; for her gain shall be for them that dwell before the Lord.³⁰ What does ‘it shall not be stored’ mean?

— R. Joseph learned: 'It shall not be stored' refers to a storehouse [granary]; 'nor treasured,' to a treasure house.³¹ What means 'for them that dwell before the Lord'? — Said R. Eleazar:

-
- (1) To burn those who threw them into it; cf. Dan. III, 22.
(2) Lit., 'a miracle within a miracle.'
(3) Ps. CVI, 7.
(4) According to ancient beliefs the sea, like the elements in general, were in charge of particular angels.
(5) Ex. XIV, 30.
(6) Ibid. 7.
(7) Judg. IV, 13.
(8) Ibid. V, 20.
(9) Ibid. 21.
(10) Ps. CXIII, 9.
(11) Lit., 'root', 'foundations' hence 'vaults'.
(12) The congregation of Israel is personified here as a woman, as often, and she complains that through the sins of her less worthy children she is ashamed of the daylight but must hide like the weasels in the dark vaults of houses.
(13) Ps. CXVI, 1.
(14) Ibid. 6.
(15) Ibid. CXVII 1.
(16) Why should they praise God because 'His mercy is great toward us' (ibid. 2)?
(17) Ps. LXVIII, 32.
(18) Ibid.
(19) Rome was always identified with Edom, the state built by Esau's descendants; v. Gen. XXXV, 1.
(20) Ps. LXVIII, 31.
(21) I.e., Israel.
(22) Ps. LXXX, 14. Kaneh is now interpreted as the cane reeds of the forest, the boar (or, swine) being Rome. This interpretation is probably connected with the midrash that when Solomon married Pharaoh's daughter an angel planted a large reed in the sea whereon Rome was built (Midrash Rabbah on Cant. 1, 6).
(23) Kaneh is now connected with the same word meaning feather, quill. — All their activities are of the same nature — evil to Israel.
(24) Ps. LXVIII, 31.
(25) To protect them.
(26) Reading mithrapas as mattir pas — the letters are almost the same — opening the hand, and connecting raze with rason, desire; the money that is given to ensure the fulfilment of one's wishes. E.V.: Every one submitting himself with pieces of silver.
(27) Maharsha retains the natural translation 'war': had they submitted to Nebuchadnezzar and Titus at the first and second Temples respectively, instead of desiring war, they would not have gone into exile.
(28) מַעְלֵה means a stairway, and is probably to be understood as in the text.
(29) Maharsha: The number three hundred and sixty five is symbolic, because the Gentiles depend on the solar year of three hundred and sixty five days.
(30) Isa. XXIII, 18.
(31) I.e., of gold and silver.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 119a

They who recognize their colleagues' place in the academy. Others state, R. Eleazar said: They who welcome their colleagues in the academy.¹ What does 'and for stately clothing' [li-mekasseh 'athik]² mean? That refers to him who 'conceals' [mekasseh] the things which the Ancient ['athik] of days³ concealed. And what is that? The secrets of the Torah.⁴ Others explain: That refers to him who reveals the things which the Ancient of days concealed [kissah]. And what is it? The reasons of the Torah.⁵

R. Kahana said on the authority of R. Ishmael b. R. Jose: What is meant by, 'For the leader [la-menazzeah]: a Psalm of David?⁶ Sing praises to Him who rejoices when they conquer Him.⁷ Come and see how the character of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not like that of mortal man. The character of mortal man is such that when he is conquered he is unhappy, but when the Holy One is conquered He rejoices, for it is said, Therefore He said that He would destroy them, had not Moses His chosen stood before Him in the breach, [to turn back His wrath].⁸

R. Kahana said on the authority of R. Ishmael son of R. Jose, and our Rabbis said in the name of R. Judah Nisi'ah:⁹ What is implied by the verse, And they had the hands of a man under their wings?¹⁰ Yado [his hand] is written:¹¹ this refers to the Hand of the Holy One, blessed be He, which is spread out under the wings of the Hayyoth,¹² in order to accept penitents [and shield them] from¹³ the Attribute of Justice.¹⁴ Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: All the gold and silver in the world Joseph gathered in and brought to Egypt, for it is said, And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found [in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan].¹⁵ Now I know it only about that of Egypt and Canaan; whence do we know it about that of other countries? Because it is stated, And all the countries came unto Egypt [to Joseph to buy corn].¹⁶ And when the Israelites migrated from Egypt they carried it away with them, for it is said, and they despoiled the Egyptians.¹⁷ R. Assi said: They made it like a trap in which there is no corn;¹⁸ R. Simeon b. Lakish said: Like a pond without fish.¹⁹ Thus it [the treasure] lay until Rehoboam, when Shishak king of Egypt came and seized it from Rehoboam, for it is said, And it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem; and he took away the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house.²⁰ Then Zerah, king of Ethiopia, came and seized it from Shishak; then Assa came and seized it from Zerah king of Ethiopia and sent it to Hadrimon the son of Tabrimon. The Ammonites came and seized it from Hadrimon the son of Tabrimon. Jehoshaphat came and seized it from the Ammonites, and it remained so until Ahaz, when Sennacherib came and took it from Ahaz. Then Hezekiah came and took it from Sennacherib, and it remained thus until Zedekiah, when the Babylonians [Chaldeans] came and seized it from Zedekiah. The Persians came and took it from the Chaldeans; the Greeks came and took it from the Persians. The Romans came and took it from the Greeks, and it is still lying in Rome.

R. Hama son of R. Hanina said: Three treasures did Joseph hide in Egypt: one was revealed to Korah; one to Antoninus the son of Severus;²¹ and the third is stored up for the righteous for the future time.

Riches kept by the owner thereof to his hurt:²² R. Simeon b. Lakish said: This refers to Korah's wealth. And a the substance that was at their feet.²³ R. Eleazar said: This refers to a man's wealth, which puts him on his feet. R. Levi said: The keys of Korah's treasure-house were a load for three hundred white mules,²⁴ though all the keys and locks were of leather.²⁵ (Mnemonic: Diyash, ADYish, Kashdek, me-Odeka)²⁶ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in R. Jonathan's name: I will give thanks unto Thee, for Thou hast answered me²⁷ was said by David; The stone which the builders rejected is become the chief corner-stone;²⁸ by Yishai [Jesse]; This is the Lord's doing,²⁹ by his brothers; This is the day which the Lord hath made³⁰ by Samuel. We beseech 'Thee, O Lord, save now!³¹ was said by his brothers: We beseech Thee, O Lord, make us now to prosper! by David; Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord,³² by Jesse; We bless you out of the house of the Lord,³² by Samuel; The Lord is God, and hath given us light,³³ by all of them; Order the festival procession with boughs, by Samuel; Thou art my God, and I will give thanks unto Thee,³⁴ by David; Thou art my God, I will exalt Thee, by all of them.

We learned elsewhere: Where it is the practice

(1) I.e.. who treat them in a friendly fashion. Maharsha: who are among the earliest, so that they can greet their colleagues who arrive latter.

(2) This completes the verse.

(3) God; v. Dan. VII, 13.

(4) Esoteric teaching, which was to be confined to the few.

(5) It is meritorious to investigate the reasons of Scriptural laws.

(6) This is the superscription of a number of psalms; 'menazzeah is derived from nazzeah, to be victorious.

(7) I.e., prevail upon Him to rescind intended punishment. La-menazzeah is now understood in a causative sense: to Him who makes men victorious.

(8) Ps. CVI, 23.

(9) The Prince. I.e., R. Judah II, — The text is as emended in the margin.

(10) Ezek. I, 8.

(11) Instead of yede, the hands of.

(12) Lit., 'living creatures' — the angels that bore the Divine Chariot, as described in Ezek. I.

(13) Var. lec.: on account of.

(14) Justice, Mercy. etc., are often hypostasized.

(15) Gen. XLVII, 14.

(16) Ibid. XLI, 57.

(17) Ex. XII, 36.

(18) To attract the birds. Bird-traps were set with corn. [Aliter: Like a fortress without corn (pro. visions). Var. lec.: like a net without fish.]

(19) Var. lec. (v. D.S.): like husks without grain.

(20) I Kings XIV, 25f.

(21) On his identity v. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 610 n.7.

(22) Eccl. V, 12.

(23) Deut. XI, 6.

(24) This of course is not to be taken literally.

(25) Instead of metal, so as to be light in weight, yet they were such a load.

(26) D == David; Y == Yishay (Jesse); A == Ehaw (his brothers); Sh == Shemuel (Samuel), K == kulan (all of them); me-Odeka == on the passage commencing Odeka, 'I will give thanks unto Thee'.

(27) Ps. CXVIII, 21.

(28) Ibid. 22.

(29) Ibid. 23.

(30) Ibid. 24.

(31) Ibid. 25.

(32) Ibid. 26.

(33) Ibid. 27.

(34) Ibid. 28.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 119b

to repeat,¹ he must repeat; to recite it once only,² he must recite them once only; to pronounce a blessing after it [sc. the Hallel], he must pronounce a blessing upon it: it all depends on local custom. Abaye observed: This was taught only [about a blessing] after it, but a blessing before it is obligatory, for Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: A blessing must be recited for a religious duties before ['ober] they are performed. How is it implied that 'ober connotes priority? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Because it is written, Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the Plain, and overran [wa-ya'abor, i.e., ran before] the Cushite.³ Abaye said: [It follows] from this: And he himself passed over ['abar] before them.⁴ Others quote the following: And their king is passed on [wa-ya'abor] before them, and the Lord at the head of them.⁵

It was taught: Rabbi repeated [certain] verses of i⁶ [sc. Hallel]; R. Eleazar b. Perata added passages⁷ to it. What did he add? Said Abaye: He added [passages] for repetition from 'I will give thanks to thee' and onwards.

R. 'Awira lectured, Sometimes stating it in R. Ammi's, Sometimes in R. Assi's name: What is meant by. And the child grew, and was weaned [wa-yiggamel]?⁸ The Holy One, blessed be He, will make a great banquet for the righteous on the day He manifests [yigmol] His love to the seed of Isaac.⁹ After they have eaten and drunk, the cup of Grace¹⁰ will be offered to our father Abraham, that he should recite Grace, but he will answer them, 'I cannot say Grace, because Ishmael issued from me. Then Isaac will be asked, 'Take it and say Grace.' 'I cannot say Grace,' he will reply, 'because Esau issued from me.' Then Jacob will be asked: 'Take it and say Grace.' 'I cannot say Grace,' he will reply. 'because I married two sisters during [both] their lifetimes, whereas the Torah was destined to forbid them to me. Then Moses will be asked, 'Take it and say Grace.' 'I cannot say Grace, because I was not privileged to enter Eretz Yisrael either in life or in death.' Then Joshua will be asked: 'Take it and say Grace.' 'I cannot say Grace,' he will reply, 'because I was not privileged to have a son,' for it is written, Joshua the son of Nun;¹¹ Nun his son, Joshua his son.¹² Then David will be asked: 'Take it and say Grace.' 'I will say Grace, and it is fitting for me to say Grace,' he will reply, as it is said, I will lift up the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord.¹³ MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT CONCLUDE AFTER THE PASCHAL MEAL [BY SAYING]. 'NOW TO THE ENTERTAINMENT! [APIKOMAN].'¹⁴

GEMARA. What does APIKOMAN mean? Said Rab: That they must not remove from one company to another.¹⁵ Samuel said: E.g., mushrooms for myself and pigeons for Abba.¹⁶ R. Hanina b. Shila and R. Johanan said: E.g., dates, parched ears of corn, and nuts. It was taught as R. Johanan: You must not conclude after the Paschal meal with e.g., dates, parched ears, and nuts.

Rab Judah said: One may not conclude after the [last] unleavened bread [is eaten]¹⁷ by saying, 'Now to the entertainment!' We learned: YOU MAY NOT CONCLUDE AFTER THE PASCHAL MEAL [BY SAYING], 'NOW TO THE ENTERTAINMENT!' Thus it is forbidden only after the Paschal meal, but you may conclude [thus] after the unleavened bread? — He proceeds to a climax:¹⁸ After the unleavened bread it need not be stated, since its taste is not substantial;¹⁹ but [I might think] that there is no objection after the Paschal lamb, whose taste is substantial and cannot [easily] be wiped out. Hence he [the Tanna] informs us [otherwise].

Shall we say that this supports him: [As for] sponge cakes, honey-cakes and iskeritin,²⁰ a man may fill his stomach with them, providing that he eats as much as an olive of unleavened bread at the end. [This implies], only at the end,

(1) Certain verses at the end of Hallel, viz., Ps. CXVIII, 21-29. Every verse of the rest of the Psalm is repeated in the text, either actually or by parallelism, and therefore these four verses are repeated when they are recited.

(2) Lit., 'to (say it) straight off.'

(3) II Sam. XVIII, 23.

(4) Gen. XXXIII, 3.

(5) Mic. II, 13.

(6) [Rashi(Suk. 39a): 'from "We beseech thee, O Lord, etc." onwards.']

(7) [I.e., to those repeated by Rabbi (Rashi loc. cit.)].

(8) Gen. XXI, 8: the verse continues: And Abraham made a great feast on the day that Isaac was weaned.

(9) I.e., when Israel is vindicated and his glories restored.

(10) The cup of wine over which Grace after meals is recited.

(11) Num. XIV, 38 et passim.

(12) I Chron. VII, 27. This occurs in the genealogical lists, and since it is not carried beyond Joshua, we must assume that he was not blessed with a son.

(13) Ps. CXVI, 13.

(14) Gr. **.

(15) V. Supra 86a for notes.

(16) I.e., Rab. Rab and Samuel used to eat pigeons and mushrooms respectively after the meal, as desert, and Samuel says that this must not be done after the Paschal meal. Thus his interpretation (and R. Johanan's which follows) is stricter than Rab's. For Rab only forbids further eating elsewhere, whereas Samuel forbids it in the same place.

(17) I. e., nowadays at the end of the meal in memory of the Paschal lamb.

(18) Lit., 'he says, it is unnecessary'.

(19) He must finish the meal with the taste of the Paschal lamb and the unleavened bread predominant in his mouth. Now the taste of the latter is not substantial and enduring, and therefore it is superfluous to teach that nothing may be eaten after it.

(20) V. Supra 37a. These are regarded as 'rich mazzah' and therefore the duty of eating mazzah, which must be 'bread of affliction (poverty)' cannot be discharged with them.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 120a

but not at the beginning!¹ — [No:] He proceeds to a climax. [If he eats it] at the beginning it goes without saying [that his duty is discharged], since he eats it with an appetite; but at the end, [where] he may come to eat it as mere gorging, I might say that he does not [do his duty]. Hence he [the Tanna] informs us [otherwise].

Mar Zutra recited it thus: R. Joseph said in Rab Judah's name in Samuel's name: One may conclude after the unleavened bread [by saying] 'Now to the entertainment.' Shall we say that this supports him: ONE MAY NOT CONCLUDE AFTER THE PASCHAL MEAL. [BY SAYING], 'NOW TO THE ENTERTAINMENT'; hence one may not conclude thus [only] after the Paschal lamb, yet one may conclude thus after the unleavened bread? — [No:] — He proceeds to a climax. After the unleavened bread it need not be stated, seeing that its taste is not substantial; but I would say [that it is] not so after the Paschal lamb; hence [the Tanna] informs us [otherwise]. An objection is raised: [As for] sponge-cakes, honey-cakes, and iskeritin, a man may fill his stomach therewith, providing that he eats as much as an olive of unleavened bread at the end. Thus it is only at the end, but not at the beginning? He proceeds to a climax: at the beginning, when he eats with an appetite, it is unnecessary [to teach it]; but at the end, where he may merely gorge, I might say [that it is] not [permitted]; hence [the Tanna] informs us [that it is].

Raba said: [The eating of] unleavened bread nowadays is a Scriptural obligation, whereas [that of] bitter herbs is Rabbinical. Yet wherein do bitter herbs differ? Because it is written, they shall eat it [the Passover-offering] with unleavened bread and bitter herbs,² [which implies], when [the law of] the Passover-offering is in force, [that of] bitter herbs is in force, and when the Passover-offering is not in force, bitter herbs are not required either! Then in the case of unleavened bread too, surely it is written, 'they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs'? — Scripture indeed repeated [the precept] in the case of unleavened bread: at even ye shall eat unleavened bread.³ But R. Aha b. Jacob maintained: Both the one and the other are [only] Rabbinical. But surely it is written, 'at even ye shall eat unleavened bread'? — That is required in respect of an unclean person and one who was on a journey afar off.⁴ For you might argue: Since they cannot eat of the Passover-offering, they need not eat unleavened bread or bitter herbs either; hence [the verse] informs us [otherwise]. And Raba?⁵ — He can answer you: In respect of an unclean person and one who was on a journey afar off a verse is not required, for they are no worse than an uncircumcised person and an alien.⁶ For it was taught: No uncircumcised person shall eat thereof:⁷ 'thereof' he may not eat, but he must eat unleavened bread and bitter herbs. And the other?⁸ — It is written in the case of the one [the uncircumcised etc.] and it is written in the case of the other [the unclean etc.], and they are both necessary.⁹

It was taught in accordance with Raba: Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly to the Lord thy God:¹⁰ just as [on] the seventh day [the eating of unleavened bread] is voluntary,¹¹ so [on] the six days it is voluntary. What is the reason?¹² Because it is something which was included in the general law and then excluded from the general law, in order to illumine [other cases], [which means that] it was excluded not in order to throw light upon itself, but in order to throw light upon the entire general law.¹³ You might think that on the first night too it is [merely] voluntary; therefore it is stated, 'they shall eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.' I know this only when the Temple is in existence; whence do we know it when the Temple is not in existence? From the verse, 'at even ye shall eat unleavened bread': thus the Writ made it a permanent obligation.

MISHNAH. IF SOME OF THEM¹⁴ FELL ASLEEP, THEY MAY EAT [WHEN THEY AWAKE]; IF ALL OF THEM FELL ASLEEP THEY MUST NOT EAT.¹⁵

(1) And the presumed reason is because nothing may be eaten after the last unleavened bread.

(2) Num. IX, 11.

(3) Ex. XII, 18. Bah (on the basis of Tosaf. in Kid. 37b) suggests that the following verse should be quoted instead: in all your habitations shall ye eat unleavened bread (ibid. 20).

(4) But who will be fit by the evening.

(5) Does he not admit this? and if he does, on what grounds does he differentiate between unleavened bread and bitter herbs?

(6) I.e., one who does not observe Jewish law; v. supra, p. 131, n. 5.

(7) Ex. XII, 48.

(8) R. Aha b. Jacob: how does he answer this?

(9) An unclean person etc. cannot be deduced from an 'alien,' for since the former will observe the second Passover a month hence, I would argue that he can then discharge his obligation of eating unleavened bread and bitter herbs too. But an 'alien' will not have that opportunity, and therefore he is naturally bound to eat the unleavened bread and the bitter herbs now. By the same reasoning, if there were only one verse, I would apply it to the latter, but not to the former.

(10) Deut. XVI, 8.

(11) But not obligatory.

(12) Why do I interpret it thus, seemingly in contradiction to the literal meaning?

(13) This is a principle of exegesis. Now the general rule is stated: seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread (Ex. XII, 15); when the seventh is excluded by the verse, 'six days' etc, this throws light not on the seventh alone, but upon the whole period, teaching that the eating of unleavened bread therein is voluntary.

(14) Sc. of a company at a Passover meal.

(15) In the latter case they have ceased to think about the Paschal lamb; when they awake it is as though they would eat in two different places, sleep breaking the continuity of action and place, and thus it is forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 120b

R. JOSE SAID: IF THEY FELL, INTO A LIGHT SLEEP, THEY MAY EAT; IF THEY FELL FAST ASLEEP, THEY MUST NOT EAT.¹ THE PASSOVER-OFFERING DEFILES ONE'S HANDS AFTER MIDNIGHT;² PIGGUL AND NOTHAR DEFILE ONE'S HANDS.

GEMARA. R. JOSE SAID: IF THEY FELL INTO A LIGHT SLEEP, THEY MAY EAT; IF THEY FELL FAST ASLEEP, THEY MUST NOT EAT. What condition is meant by 'A LIGHT SLEEP'? Said R. Ashi: A sleep which is not sleep, a wakefulness which is not wakefulness. E.g., if he answers when called, cannot make a reasoned statement, yet recollects when reminded. Abaye was sitting [at the Passover meal] before Rabbah. Seeing him dozing he remarked to him, 'You, sir, are sleeping.'³ 'I was merely dozing,' replied he, 'and we have learnt: 'IF THEY FELL INTO A LIGHT SLEEP, THEY MAY EAT; IF THEY FELL, FAST ASLEEP', THEY MUST NOT EAT.'

THE PASSOVER-OFFERING DEFILES ONE'S HANDS AFTER MIDNIGHT etc. This proves that from midnight it is nothar. Which Tanna [holds thus]? — Said R. Joseph. It is R. Eleazar b.

‘Azariah. For it was taught: And they shall eat the flesh in that night.’⁴ R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah said: ‘In that night’ is stated here, while elsewhere it is stated, For I will go through the land of Egypt in that night;⁵ just as there it means midnight, so here too [they may eat the Passover-offering] until midnight.⁶ Said R. Akiba to him: Yet surely it is already stated, [and ye shall eat it] in haste,⁷ [implying] until the time of haste.⁸ If so, what is taught by ‘in [that] night?’ You might think that it can be eaten like [other] sacrifices, [viz.,] by day: therefore it is stated, ‘in [that] night’: it is eaten by night, but it may not be eaten by day. Now how does R. Akiba employ ‘that [night]’? He utilizes it as excluding a second night. For I might argue. Since the Passover-offering is a sacrifice of lesser sanctity,⁹ and the peace-offering is a sacrifice of lesser sanctity, the just as the peace-offering is to be eaten two days and one night, so in the case of the Passover-offering, I will substitute nights for days,¹⁰ and it may be eaten two nights and one day. Therefore the Divine Law wrote ‘that [night]’. And R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah?¹¹ — He can answer you: That is deduced from, and ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning.¹² And R. Akiba?¹³ — He can answer you: Had not the Divine Law written ‘that [night]’. I would have said, what does ‘morning’ mean? the second morning. Then what of R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah? — He can answer you: Wherever ‘morning’ is written, It means the first morning.¹⁴

Raba said: If a man eats unleavened bread after midnight nowadays, according to R. Eleazar b. ‘Azariah he does not discharge his duty.¹⁵ That is obvious, [for] since it is assimilated to the Passover-offering, it is like the Passover-offering? — You might say, surely the Writ¹⁶ excluded it from the analogy;¹⁷ hence he informs us that when the Writ restores it, it restores it to its original state.¹⁸

PIGGUL AND NOTHAR DEFILE ONE'S HANDS. R. Huna and R. Hisda — one maintains: It is on account of suspected priests; while the other said: It is on account of the lazy priests. One maintained: As much as an olive [defiles]; while the other said: [At least] as much as an egg.

(1) This distinction refers to the first clause, when only some of them fell asleep.

(2) Because it is then nothar, q.v. Glos.

(3) This happened while he was eating the unleavened bread at the end of the meal, and Abaye meant that he might not continue now.

(4) Ex. XII, 8.

(5) Ibid. 12.

(6) After which it is nothar.

(7) Ibid. 11.

(8) I.e., when they had to make haste to leave Egypt, which was in the morning.

(9) V. p. 108, n. 2.

(10) This is necessary, since its main eating is at night.

(11) How does he refute this argument?

(12) Ex. XII, 10.

(13) Does he not admit this?

(14) Cf. supra 71a and b.

(15) Since he holds that the Passover-offering may not be eaten after midnight, while as stated supra 120a unleavened bread is assimilated to the Passover-offering.

(16) I.e., the verse ‘at even ye shall eat unleavened bread’.

(17) In that unleavened bread is declared obligatory nowadays despite the absence of the paschal lamb, v. supra 120a.

(18) V. supra 120a. I.e., once the Writ teaches that unleavened bread nowadays is obligatory, notwithstanding the analogy, it becomes assimilated to the paschal-offering in respect of the hours during which the obligation can be discharged.

One taught in reference to piggul, while the other taught in reference to nothar. He who taught in reference to piggul [gave the reason as being] on account of the suspected priests. While he who taught in reference to nothar [gave the reason as being] on account of the lazy priests. One said: As much as an olive [defiles]; while the other said: [At least] as much as an egg. He who maintained, as much as an olive, [accepts the standard] as its prohibition; while he who rules, as much as an egg, [holds that the standard is the same as its uncleanness].¹

MISHNAH. IF HE RECITED THE BLESSING FOR THE PASSOVER-OFFERING, HE THEREBY EXEMPTS THE [FESTIVAL] SACRIFICE; [BUT] IF HE RECITED THE BLESSING FOR THE SACRIFICE, HE DOES NOT EXEMPT THE PASSOVER-OFFERING: THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. ISHMAEL. R. AKIBA SAID: THE FORMER DOES NOT EXEMPT THE LATTER, NOR DOES THE LATTER EXEMPT THE FORMER.²

GEMARA. When you examine the matter, [you must conclude] that in R. Ishmael's opinion sprinkling [zerikah] is included in pouring [shefikah], but pouring is not included in sprinkling. Whereas in R. Akiba's opinion pouring is not included in Sprinkling, nor is sprinkling included in pouring.³ [

(1) V. supra 85b for notes on the whole passage.

(2) The 'sacrifice' referred to is the hagigah of the fourteenth (v. supra 69b). An appropriate blessing was recited before each.

(3) Rashbam: both R. Ishmael and R. Akiba hold that the blood of the Passover-offering must be poured out, i.e., the priest must stand quite close to the altar and gently pour the blood on to its base. But the blood of the hagigah requires sprinkling, i.e., from a distance and with some force'. Now R. Ishmael holds that if the blood of the hagigah is poured out instead of sprinkled, the obligation of sprinkling has nevertheless been discharged. Consequently, the blessing for the Passover-offering includes that of the hagigah, since in both the blood may be poured on to the base of the altar. But if the blood of the Passover-offering is sprinkled, the obligation has not been discharged: consequently the blessing for the hagigah, whose blood is normally sprinkled, does not exempt the Passover-offering. By the same reasoning we infer that in R. Akiba's view neither includes the other.

Talmud - Mas. Pesachim 121b

R. Simlai was present at a Redemption of the Firstborn,¹ He was asked: It is obvious that for the redemption of the firstborn it is the father who must recite the blessing, 'who hast sanctified us with Thy commandments and hast given us command concerning the redemption of the first born.' But as for the blessing, 'Blessed . . . who hast kept us alive and preserved us and enabled us to reach this season,' does the priest² recite it or the child's father? Does the priest recite the blessing, since the benefit redounds to him; or does the child's father recite it, since it is he who carries out a religious duty?³ He could not answer it, so he went and asked it at the schoolhouse, and he was told: The child's father recites both blessings. And the law is that the child's father recites both blessings.⁴

(1) V. Ex. XIII, 13; Num. XVIII, 16.

(2) Who receives the five shekels of redemption.

(3) The religious duty is primarily his, since any priest could receive the redemption money.

(4) Rashbam: this story is quoted here because the Mishnah too treats of two blessings.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. SEVEN DAYS BEFORE THE DAY OF ATONEMENT THE HIGH PRIEST WAS REMOVED FROM HIS HOUSE TO THE CELL OF THE COUNSELLORS¹ AND ANOTHER PRIEST WAS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS PLACE IN CASE ANYTHING² HAPPENED TO HIM [THE HIGH PRIEST] THAT WOULD UNFIT HIM [FOR THE SERVICE]. R. JUDAH SAID: ALSO ANOTHER WIFE WAS PREPARED FOR HIM IN CASE HIS WIFE SHOULD DIE. FOR IT IS WRITTEN,³ AND HE SHALL MAKE ATONEMENT FOR HIMSELF AND FOR HIS HOUSE. 'HIS HOUSE THAT MEANS 'HIS WIFE'. THEY SAID TO HIM: IF SO THERE WOULD BE NO END TO THE MATTER.⁴

GEMARA. We learned elsewhere: Seven days before the burning of the [red] heifer⁵ the priest who was to burn the heifer was removed from his house to the cell in the north-eastern corner before the Birah.⁶ It was called the cell of the stone chamber.⁷ And why was it called the cell of the stone chamber? Because all its functions [in connection with the red heifer] had to be performed only in vessels made of either cobble-stones,⁸ stone or earthenware. What was the reason [for that restriction]? Since a tebul-yom⁹ was permitted to [perform the ceremony of] the heifer, as we have learnt:¹⁰ They [deliberately] rendered the priest ritually impure to remove [a false notion] from the minds of the Sadducees, who used to say: 'Only by those on whom the sun has set could it be performed', the Rabbis ordained that only vessels made of cobble-stones, stone, or earthenware which are immune to impurity — should be used in connection with the heifer, lest the ceremony thereof be treated slightly.¹¹

Why [was the ceremony performed] in the north-eastern corner? — Since the heifer was a sin-offering¹² and a sin-offering had to be sacrificed in the northern corner, whereas, on the other hand, it is written about the heifer,¹³ Towards the front of the tent of meeting,¹⁴ the Rabbis ordained [for the heifer] a cell in the northeastern corner, so that [the special importance of this ceremony] be clearly recognized.

What is Birah? — Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan said: There was a place on the Temple mount called Birah. Resh Lakish said: The whole sanctuary is called Birah, as it is written, And to build the Birah for which I have made provision.¹⁵

Whence is it proved¹⁶ that it is necessary to remove the priest [from his house]? — R. Minyumi b. Hilkiah in the name of R. Mahsiah b. Idi, in the name of R. Johanan said: The text reads:¹⁷ As hath been done this day, so the Lord hath commanded to do, to make atonement for you;¹⁸ the work la'asoth [to do] refers to the matter of the [red] heifer, the words lekapper 'alekem [to make atonement for you] refer to the work of the Day of Atonement. It is obvious that the whole of this text could not be taken as referring to the heifer, because of the words 'to atone' and the heifer has nothing to do with atonement. But let us assume that the whole text¹⁹ refers to the Day of Atonement? — They said [in answer to this suggestion]: One may infer from, the fact that the identical expression ziwvah [he commanded] is used.²⁰ Here²¹ it is written: The Lord ziwvah [commanded] to do,²² and there²³ it is written: This is the statute of the law which the Lord ziwvah [has commanded]:²⁴ just as in the latter [passage ziwvah] refers to the heifer, so does it in the former refer to the heifer, and just as the removal [of the priest is enjoined] in the one, so must the removal [of the priest apply] to the other.

(1) Parhedrin (Gr. ), assessors, counselors. V. infra 8b. [According to Abba Saul (Mid. V, 4 cf. Bertinoro a.l.) it was identical with the wood chamber on the south of the Temple Court. It has also been identified with the Chamber of Hewn Stones, the seat of the Sanhedrin. V. Buchler, Das Synedrion, p. 23ff]

- (2) Impurity.
- (3) Lev. XVI, 6.
- (4) His second wife too might die.
- (5) Num. XIX, 2.
- (6) The Temple. V. I Chron. XXIX, 1. J. Pes. 35a; Zeb. 119a.
- (7) [Mishnah Parah omits 'cell'.]
- (8) Or 'vessels made of dung'.
- (9) Lit., 'one who has bathed in the daytime (but must wait for sunset to be perfectly clean)'. The Sadducees would exclude him from service at either ceremony until after sunset.
- (10) Parah III, 7.
- (11) Due to the feeling that since a tebul-yom was admitted, its degree of sanctity may not be too high.
- (12) It is a 'hattath', this word meaning here purification, may also be translated as 'sin-offering'. Num. XIX, 9
- (13) Ibid. XIX, 4.
- (14) Lying east.
- (15) I Chron. XXIX, 19.
- (16) Both for the service of the Day of Atonement and the red heifer ceremony.
- (17) With reference to the seven days of the consecration of the Tabernacle in the wilderness.
- (18) Lev. VIII, 34.
- (19) Ibid.
- (20) On the Rabbinic inference from analogy, gezerah shawah, v. Glos.
- (21) In connection with the consecration ceremonies.
- (22) Lev. VIII, 34.
- (23) In connection with the red heifer.
- (24) Num. XIX, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 2b

But perhaps say that [the word] *ziwwah*¹ [he commanded] has reference to [the word] ziwwah which occurs in connection with the Day of Atonement,² since the verse reads,³ And he did as the Lord ziwwah [commanded] Moses?⁴ — One may infer from [the word] ziwwah used before conformity⁵ for another case in which ziwwah is used also before conformity,⁶ but one may not infer ziwwah is used before conformity⁵ for ziwwah used after conformity.⁷ Perhaps *ziwwah*¹ has reference to sacrifices,⁸ for it is written, On the day when the Lord *zawwotho*⁹ [commanded] the children of Israel?¹⁰ — One may fitly infer *ziwwah*⁶ from ziwwah,⁵ but one may not infer *zawwotho*¹¹ from ziwwah.¹² But what does it matter? Did not the school of R. Ishmael teach that [in the verse], The priest shall return or the priest shall come in,¹³ 'returning' and 'coming in' mean one and the same thing?¹⁴ — These words [of the school of R. Ishmael] apply only when there is no identical word,¹⁵ but where such a similar word is used, the inference may be made only on the basis of absolute identity of expression. — [We stated above that the word] 'lekapper' [to atone] has reference to the Day of Atonement. May it not refer [also]¹⁶ to the atonement resulting from a sacrifice?¹⁷ — How could we know which priest would happen to perform the sacrifice so that he would have to be removed [from his house]?¹⁸ But why should we not really have to postulate such separation for the whole priestly division?¹⁹ — It is proper to make inference from something for which a definite time is appointed²⁰ for something which similarly is fixed for a definite time.²¹ That excludes any inference [from the consecration of the priest, an annual event] to sacrifices which are offered up every day.²² Perhaps [the reference is to] the [three] festivals?²³ — One may infer something which takes place but once a year²⁴ from something else which took place but once a year, but inference for these festivals is excluded since they do not take place but once a year. Perhaps [the reference is] to one festival.²⁵ And if you would answer [by saying], We would not know to which [it has reference], [it would be] either the festival of Passover, which Scripture always mentions²⁶ [as the first of the three], or the feast of Sukkoth, because a great number of commandments apply to it!²⁷ -The point is, however, that you may infer the [law of the priest's] removal [from his house] for seven days before the service which he is to perform on one day²⁸ from [another case in which the priest is] removed also for seven days for the service of one day;²⁹ but one may not fitly infer that [a priest must be] removed for seven days for the service of seven³⁰ days from the fact that a law exists obliging [the priest's] removal for seven days for the service of one day.²⁹ Yet perhaps [the reference is to] the Eighth Day³¹ because there would be a service of only one day? — One may infer [laws concerning] a day which is not immediately preceded by another [festival] sanctity²⁸ from another day,²⁹ which similarly is not preceded by other [festival] sanctity,²⁹ but one may not infer for a day preceded by [festival] Sanctity³² from a day unpreceded by such.

But [even if the inference by analogy be unjustified] is there no legitimate conclusion a minori ad majus, viz., if a day unpreceded by another [festival] sanctity requires [for the officiating priest] a seven day removal [from his family], how much more should a day preceded by another [festival] sanctity require it!³³ — R. Mesharsheya answered: Scripture expressly states this day,³⁴ that means on a day like this.³⁵ R. Ashi said:³⁶ Could there be any festival the major³⁷ part of which would require no removal [of the priest], while its attachment³⁸ would require it. And even according to the one who holds that the eighth day is [not a mere attachment to Sukkoth, but] an independent festival day, that applies only to

-
- (1) Written in connection with the consecrations.
 - (2) So that the whole passage of Lev. VIII, 34 refers to that day.
 - (3) Lev. XVI, 34.
 - (4) To justify inference from identity of phrase or word, there must be in the two texts a certain identity of circumstance.
 - (5) As in Lev. VIII, 34 where the phrase is, 'He commanded to do'.
 - (6) As in the case of the red heifer where too it is, 'He commanded to do'.
 - (7) As in the case with the Day of Atonement, where the text is, 'and he did as the Lord commanded'.
 - (8) So that every priest should require separation before offering a public sacrifice.
 - (9) From the same root as ziwwah. Lit., 'His commanding'.
 - (10) Ibid. VII, 38.
 - (11) V. nn. 14 and 15.
 - (12) To justify inference by gezerah shawah there must be exact identity of expression.
 - (13) Ibid. Xlv, 39.
 - (14) For the purposes of inference v. Hor., Sonc. ed., p. 57, n. 11. So that such literalness as the insistence on differentiation between ziwwah and zawwotho is not justified.
 - (15) From the congruity of which an analogy may be inferred.
 - (16) V. Tosaf. Yesh.
 - (17) Offered by an individual for atonement (Rashi); so that every priest would need such removal before sacrificing.
 - (18) The priests were assigned their service by means of a lot. V. infra 22a.
 - (19) Because the task may come to anyone by the allotment. And thus the question remains, perhaps the word 'lekapper' applies also to the atonement of a sacrifice, cf. n. 3.
 - (20) The consecration of the priests.
 - (21) The Day of Atonement.
 - (22) There are many sacrifices offered up by the individuals.
 - (23) [Since the sacrifices offered on festivals serve for atonement, v. Shebu. 2a-b.]
 - (24) [The consecration of the priests 'once a year' is not to be taken literally; it means once in that particular year in which the consecration was held.]
 - (25) Which is an annual event.
 - (26) Ex. XXIII, 15; Lev. XXIII, 5; Num. XXVIII, 16; Deut. XVI, 1.
 - (27) The laws touching the booths, the citron, myrtle, palm-branch and willow of the brook; the ceremony of the libation, etc.
 - (28) The Day of Atonement.
 - (29) I.e., the eighth day of the Consecration, v. Lev. IX, 1ff.
 - (30) Passover or Sukkoth.

- (31) Shemini 'Azereth. The Eighth Day of the Solemn Assembly celebrated after the seventh day of the Festival of Booths (Sukkoth), in which case the inference would appear legitimate.
- (32) Shemini Azereth is preceded by the seven days of Sukkoth.
- (33) Shemini 'Azereth, which is preceded by the seven days of Sukkoth.
- (34) Lev. VIII, 34.
- (35) Confirming the earlier differentiation.
- (36) Countering the suggestion that the reference is to Shemini 'Azereth.
- (37) Sukkoth has seven days preceding the one day of 'Azereth.
- (38) Shemini 'Azereth.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 3a

Pe'Z'R'K'Sh'B,¹ but in matters of complementing the sacrifice of the festival, the eighth day is but a continuation of the first day, as we have learned: He who failed to offer up the festival sacrifice² on the first day of the feast [of Sukkoth], may do so during the entire festive season including the last day of the feast.³

[Perhaps] say [that the reference is to] Pentecost,⁴ because that would also mean removal of the priest for seven days preceding a one-day service?⁵ — R. Abba said: One may fitly infer a case⁶ in which one ox and one ram are offered from another⁷ case in which one ox and one ram are offered, this excludes, however, Pentecost, on which two⁸ rams are to be sacrificed. This would be right according to the opinion that on the Day of Atonement only one ram is being offered up,⁹ but what could be said according to the view that on the Day of Atonement too, two rams were to be offered up?¹⁰ For it has been taught: Rabbi¹¹ said, The ram mentioned here [in Leviticus] is the same as the one mentioned in the Book of Numbers;¹² R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon said: Two rams are here [involved], the one mentioned here and the other mentioned in the Book of Numbers!¹³ — It may be in accord even with the opinion of R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon. Because there¹⁴ one [of the rams] is offered up in fulfilment of the regular sacrifices for that day, and the other as one of the additional sacrifices, whereas in the case of Pentecost both are the regular sacrifices of that day.¹⁵ [Perhaps] say that [the reference is to] New Year¹⁶ which should also imply the removal of the priest for seven days preceding a one-day service? — R. Abbahu said, One may infer a case in which the priest offers up an ox and a ram from his own means¹⁷ from another case in which he offers up an ox and a ram from¹⁸ his own means, that excludes Pentecost¹⁹ and Rosh hashanah²⁰ on which both are offered up from public [congregational] funds. This would be right according to the opinion which holds that the words kah leka²¹ ['take thee'] mean 'take from thy own means' and

(1) This is a mnemonical acrostic for: P (payyis allotment, by counting, of the work to be done by the priests in the sanctuary. No such counting took place during the Sukkoth festival, but it was the rule on Shemini 'Azereth); Z (zeman — the blessing on the entrance of a festival referring to the return of the festive season. This benediction was repeated on the eve of Shemini 'Azereth, thus constituting it an independent holy day); R (regel-festival with its own name); K (korban — having its own number of sacrifices); Sh (shir — song — Shemini 'Azereth having its own psalm in the liturgy); B (berakah-blessing — on Shemini 'Azereth a special prayer was offered up for the life of the king.) V. R.H. 4b. In all these respects Shemini 'Azereth might be considered an independent festival.

(2)  means (Jastrow): To turn, to celebrate an anniversary, to observe a festival, to make a periodical pilgrimage, to offer the pilgrim's festive sacrifice.

(3) The conclusion, i.e., Shemini 'Azereth, v. Hag. 17a.

(4) 'Azereth means detention, gathering, concluding feast. 'Azereth in general designates 'Azereth Pesah', i.e., Shabuoth (the Feast of Weeks, Pentecost) to be distinguished from Shemini 'Azereth, the concluding festival of Sukkoth.

(5) The biblical Pentecost has one day only.

(6) The Day of Atonement, Lev. XVI, 5.

(7) The eighth day of the priest's consecration, Lev. IX, 2.

(8) Lev. XXIII, 18.

- (9) The question being whether the ram demanded in Lev. XVI, 5 is identical with the one mentioned in Num. XXIX, 8, or whether two different sacrifices are implied.
- (10) That would put the Day of Atonement into the same class as Pentecost and would thus preclude inference from the eighth day of the consecration of the priest for the former.
- (11) R. Judah ha-Nasi, the Prince, redactor of the Mishnah.
- (12) Lit., 'one fifth of (dealing with) Numbers'. Homesh applies to one of the five books of the Torah, as well as to one of the five books of the Psalms. 'Hamisha Homshe Torah' — the five books of the Torah.
- (13) V. infra 75b.
- (14) On the Day of Atonement, Lev. XVI,3 does not call the ram a 'musaf' or 'additional' sacrifice, as in all other cases, where the phrase 'apart from the morning burnt-offering' occurs, to indicate that the sacrifice in question is 'apart' or 'additional' as throughout Num. XXVIII and XXIX.
- (15) So that Pentecost, having different laws, may not fitly be inferred from the eighth day of the priest's consecration.
- (16) Rosh ha-Shanah, the Jewish New Year, originally one day only, v. Bez. 5a.
- (17) Lev. XVI, 3, Herewith shall Aaron come into the holy place, i.e., he shall bring it along from his own.
- (18) At the consecration, Lev. IX, 2, Take thee, i.e, from thy own means.
- (19) Lev. XXIII, 18, And ye shall present, i.e., the community.
- (20) 'And ye shall present' also occurs in connection with the Rosh ha-Shanah sacrifices, ibid. XXIII, 25.
- (21) Lev. IX, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 3b

'aseh leka¹ ['make thee'] mean 'make from thy own means', but what could be said [in the argument above] according to the opinion [that kah leka² means 'take for thyself] from the community funds', for we have been taught:³ The expression 'kah leka' means 'mi-sheleka [from thy own] and 'aseh leka means mi-sheleka [taken from thy own funds], but we-yikehu eleka⁴ means [they shall take for them] from community funds; these are the words of R. Josiah; R. Jonathan said, Both 'kah leka' and 'we-yikehu eleka' mean from community funds, and what is intimated by saying 'kah leka' [take thee]? As it were,⁵ 'I prefer your own [private means expended on this work] to the community's [expenditure]'. (Abba Hanan said in the name of R. Eleazar: One verse reads, Make thee an ark of wood,⁶ and another,⁷ And they shall make an ark of acacia-wood,⁸ how is that?⁹ Here it refers to a time when Israel act in accordance with His will,¹⁰ there it deals with a time when they do not act in accordance with His will) — They¹¹ are disputing only as to the general meaning [of the word 'leka'] in connection with the command to 'take' or to 'do', as e.g., Take thou also unto thee the chief spices,¹² or Make thee two trumpets of silver,¹³ but in the above cases¹⁴ it is clearly indicated in the text that it is from thine own.¹⁵ For consider in [the portion of the Bible dealing with the] consecration of the priests, it is written: And unto the children of Israel thou shalt speak, saying: Take ye a he-goat for a sin-offering,¹⁶ why then the passage: And he said to Aaron: Take thee a bull-calf for a sin-offering?¹⁷ Conclude from this 'kah leka' means 'mi-sheleka', from your own. [Similarly] in connection with the Day of Atonement it reads: Herewith shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a young bullock for a sin-offering,¹⁸ etc. Why then the passage, And he shall take of the congregation of the children of Israel¹⁹ and And Aaron shall present the bullock of the sin-offering which is lo [for himself]?²⁰ Conclude from this that the word 'lo' implies it is to be brought from his own means.

R. Ashi²¹ said: It is legitimate to infer a case in which an ox is offered up as sin-offering and a ram as burnt-offering²² from another case in which an ox is offered up as sin-offering and a ram as a burnt-offering;²³ this excludes from analogy New Year²⁴ and Pentecost,²⁵ [as] in both cases both animals are offered up as burnt-offerings only.

Rabina said: One may infer a service performed by the high priests²⁶ from another service performed by the high priest²⁷ that excludes [the occasions mentioned] in all the questions [raised], because the services mentioned therein are not performed by the high priest.²⁸ Others have this version of Rabina's reply: One may infer [certain rules for] a service held for the first time from a service held for the first time. This excludes all the other cases [referred to above], because none of them took place for the first time. What does this 'first time' mean? — Does it mean that the high priest had first performed service there?²⁹ That would be [the argument of Rabina's in] the first version. No, it means the first service of its kind held in its place, which may fitly be inferred from another service³⁰ held for the first time in its place. When R. Dimi came³¹ [from Palestine], he said: R. Johanan taught one thing, R. Joshua b. Levi two. R. Johanan taught one thing the words 'la'asoth', 'lekapper'³² refer to the service of the Day of Atonement. R. Joshua b. Levi taught two things: 'la'asoth' means the ceremony of the [red] heifer, 'lekapper' refers to the service of the Day of Atonement. How could [you say that] R. Johanan taught [only] one thing? Have we not learnt in our Mishnah: SEVEN DAYS BEFORE THE DAY OF ATONEMENT, and in another Seven days before the burning of the heifer?³³ — That³⁴ is only a special provision.³⁵ But did not R. Minyumi b. Hilkiyah in the name of R. Mahsiah b. Idi, [and the latter] in the name of R. Johanan report the [interpretation of the text], 'As hath been done this day, so hath the Lord commanded la'asoth [to do] lekapper 'alekem [to make atonement for you]'. 'La'asoth' refers to the ceremony of the heifer and 'lekapper' to the service of the Day of Atonement?³⁶ This interpretation was that of his teacher.³⁷ For when Rabina came [from Palestine]³⁸ he said: R. Johanan reported in the name of R. Ishmael that 'la'asoth' referred to the ceremony of the heifer, and 'lekapper' to the work of the Day of Atonement.

Said Resh Lakish to R. Johanan: Whence do you infer this interpretation? From the Consecration Service?³⁹ Hence, just as with the Consecration Service, the omission of any prescribed form would render the service invalid [would you say that] here too⁴⁰ the omission of anything prescribed [by inference from congruity of text] for that service, would render it invalid? And if you said: Yes, indeed, surely we learnt: ANOTHER PRIEST IS PREPARED TO TAKE HIS PLACE, not another priest is removed from his house!⁴¹ And if you would say MATHKININ [one prepares] and MAFRISHIN [one removes] mean the same thing, then the Mishnah ought to use in both passages either mathkinin or mafrishin!⁴² — [R. Johanan] said to him: And whence do you, Sir, infer it?⁴³ — He answered: From [the account concerning] Sinai. For the Scriptural text reads, And the glory of the Lord abode upon Mount Sinai, and the cloud covered him⁴⁴ six days, and He called unto Moses on the seventh day.⁴⁵ Now consider: Since it is written 'and He called unto Moses on the seventh day', what do the 'six days' mean? They establish a rule⁴⁶ for anyone who enters the camp of the Shechinah⁴⁷ that he must remove himself from his house for six days. But we have learnt SEVEN?⁴⁸ — Our Mishnah conforms to the opinion of R. Judah b. Bathyra who considers the possibility of the high priest's

(1) Num. X, 2.

(2) Must not be taken literally.

(3) Men. 28b.

(4) Ex. XXVII, 20.

(5) If it were possible to assume such intimation from God.

(6) Deut. X, 1.

(7) Ex. XXV, 10.

(8) In one verse the making is demanded of Moses, in the other of the children of Israel.

(9) Contradiction to be explained.

(10) When Israel fulfil God's will, it is they who get the credit for enabling Moses to perform His will. Otherwise all the credit is given to Moses.

(11) I.e., R. Josiah and R. Jonathan. Here follows the reply to the question, how meet the above argument in the view of R. Jonathan who holds that 'kah leka' means 'take for them from community funds'.

(12) Ex. XXX 34.

(13) Num. X, 2.

(14) In connection with the offerings of the high priest on the Day of Atonement and the eighth day of the Consecration.

- (15) The private means of the high priest.
- (16) Lev. IX, 3.
- (17) Ibid. IX, 2.
- (18) Lev. XVI, 3.
- (19) Ibid. XVI, 5.
- (20) Ibid. XVI, 6.
- (21) He and Rabina deal with the questions raised as to why the analogy may not include other festivals besides the Day of Atonement.
- (22) On the Day of Atonement the high priest offers up as his private sacrifice an ox for the sin-offering and a ram for a burnt-offering.
- (23) On the eighth day of the consecration a young ox is offered up as sin-offering and a ram as burnt-offering.
- (24) On Rosh ha-Shanah no ox is offered up as sin-offering, Num. XXIX, 1-6.
- (25) On 'Azereth (Shabuoth) no ox is offered up as sin-offering, ibid. XXVIII, 26-31.
- (26) The Day of Atonement.
- (27) The Consecration.
- (28) That answers all the questions raised.
- (29) The first service ever performed by a high priest was that on the eighth day of the Consecration, hence it would be right to infer therefrom the service on the Day of Atonement, when the high priest for the first time offered up the community's sacrifice, on the first Day of Atonement.
- (30) The service of the Day of Atonement took place in the Holy of Holies, which had never been entered before the first service on the first Day of Atonement, just as the Consecration Service included the first sacrifice on the outer altar, in priestly garments.
- (31) Atha 'came' is the technical term for the return of scholars from Babylonia to Palestine and vice versa.
- (32) Lekapper being the explanation of la'asoth.
- (33) The priest in question was removed from his house, v. supra 2a.
- (34) The rule in connection with the burning of the red heifer.
- (35) Because in some other respects there is latitude in connection with the heifer service (v. supra p. 1, n. 7), some more stringent ordinances were decided upon, not, however as a matter of traditional law, but rather as an ad hoc regulation.
- (36) This tradition in the name of R. Johanan is in evident conflict with the statement reported by R. Dimi.
- (37) He reported only his teacher's decision, but did not surrender his own opinion.
- (38) V. p. 9, n. 10.
- (39) V. supra 2a and notes.
- (40) With regard to the ceremony of the red heifer.
- (41) So that, if the high priest were prevented from officiating the substitute priest would perform the service without the necessary previous separation, which would render his service invalid and the ceremony unprovided with a priest.
- (42) Since the Mishnah deliberately uses two terms, their meaning must be different, hence Resh Lakish's question remains.
- (43) The obligation to remove the priest from his house.
- (44) I.e., Moses, R.V. 'it' referring to the mountain; v. infra 4a.
- (45) Ex. XXIV, 16.
- (46) Lit., 'build a father', a precedent, i.e., justify the conclusion from this specifically stated law to other cases.
- (47) Lit., 'royal residence', then Divine Presence, here the Divine Camp, the Sanctuary.
- (48) The Mishnah here speaks of a removal for seven days.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 4a

becoming ritually impure through family contact.¹ R. Johanan said to Resh Lakish: It is right according to me who infer² from the Consecration; for this agrees with what we are taught: 'On both of them [the Priests]³ we sprinkle throughout the seven days [water] from all the sin-offerings⁴ that were there';⁵ but according to you who infer from Sinai, was there any sprinkling done on Sinai? — But⁶ according to your own reasoning, it would not be right either, for in the consecration [ceremony the sprinkling was done with] blood, whereas here with water? — That⁷ is no difficulty. For R.

Hiyya taught: 'The water takes the place of blood', but according to you, was there any sprinkling on Sinai? — He answered: It was a mere additional provision.⁸

We have a teaching in accord with R. Johanan,⁹ and we have a teaching in accord with Resh Lakish.¹⁰ 'In accord with R. Johanan we have a teaching'; Scripture reads: Herewith [bezoth] shall Aaron come into the holy place,¹¹ i.e., with that mentioned in that section, the section of the Consecration. And what is mentioned in the section about the Consecration? Aaron was removed for seven days and then officiated for one day, and Moses handed over to him¹² throughout the seven days to train him in this service. Also for the future the high priest is to be removed for seven days and to officiate for one day, and two scholars of the disciples of Moses¹³ [this excludes Sadducees]¹⁴ transmitted to him throughout the seven days to train him in the service. Hence [the Rabbis] ruled that seven days before the Day of Atonement the high priest was removed from his house to the cell of the counsellors. And just as the high priest was removed, so was the priest burning the heifer removed to the cell lying in the north-eastern corner before the Temple and each of them was throughout the seven days sprinkled [with water] from all the sin-offerings that were there. And if you should ask: But during the Consecration the sprinkling was done with blood and here water, [remember] that the water takes the place of the blood. And it further says: 'As hath been done this day so the Lord hath commanded la'asoth [to do], lekapper [to make atonement] for you'.¹⁵ 'La'asoth' refers to the ceremony of the heifer, 'lekapper' means the service of the Day of Atonement.¹⁶ But the word 'be-zoth' is required for the verse itself,¹⁷ i.e., with a young bullock for a sin-offering and a ram for a burnt-offering? — Answer:¹⁸ If 'be-zoth' were meant to refer only to the sacrifices, the text should have said ba-zeh [with this] or ba-eleh [with these], why [was] 'be-zoth' [chosen]? So that you may learn both things from it.¹⁹ Why was it necessary to cite the other verse?²⁰ — You might have said only the first Day of Atonement requires that the high priest be removed at the Consecration, but on all future Days of Atonement no such removal is necessary; or [you might say] only the first²¹ high priest needed such removal but all future high priests do not require it; come and hear:²² 'As hath been done this day etc.'²³

'We have a teaching in accord with Resh Lakish': Moses went up in a cloud, was covered by the cloud, and was sanctified by the cloud in order that he might receive the Torah for Israel in sanctity, as it is written: And the glory of the Lord abode upon Mount Sinai,²⁴ this took place after the Ten Commandments, which were at the beginning of the forty days,²⁵ this is the view of R. Jose the Galilean. R. Akiba said [with reference to] 'And the glory of the Lord abode' from the beginning of the [third] month, and the cloud wa-yekasehu [covered it],²⁶ i.e., the mountain,²⁷

(1) Lit., 'the uncleanness of his house'. His wife might become menstruant during congress, he as one having had congress with a menstruant would be levitically impure for seven days, thus prevented from officiating on the Day of Atonement.

(2) The obligation to remove the priest.

(3) The one officiating on the Day of Atonement and the one engaged with the red heifer.

(4) Name by which the red heifer ashes are known, v. Num. XIX, 9.

(5) V. infra 8a. A reserve of ashes was kept in the sanctuary for sprinklings. V. Parah 111, 11.

(6) This is Resh Lakish's rejoinder.

(7) This is R. Johanan's reply.

(8) To emphasize the importance of the ceremony of the heifer, and to signify the entrance upon the sanctuary on the Day of Atonement.

(9) Who inferred the removal from consecration. A Baraita — a tradition or opinion of a Tanna not reported in the Mishnah.

(10) Who inferred it from Sinai.

(11) Lev. XVI, 3.

(12) The eighth day of the Consecration was ministered to by Aaron, Lev. IX, 2.

(13) The detailed laws for the service.

- (14) Who held divergent views as to the service and changed its order from the prescribed form.
- (15) Lev. VIII, 34.
- (16) This cited Baraita is thus in support of R. Johanan.
- (17) It cannot be torn from the text, where it has obvious and important meaning, to be used for ad hoc interpretation.
- (18) Lit., 'they say', or 'I will say'.
- (19) Zoth is feminine, the words for bullock and ram are masc., hence ba-zeh or ba-eleh would have been more correct. The choice of be-zoth indicates that something else is implied.
- (20) The citing of an additional verse, where the first or first ones seemed to convey sufficient information, is an indication that erroneous inference might be made, which the additional verse, through its information, prevents.
- (21) Aaron, Lev. VIII.
- (22) 'Come and hear', a technical term for refuting a wrong opinion or repelling an attack.
- (23) 'So the Lord commanded you', i.e., for all the future.
- (24) Ex. XXIV, 16.
- (25) Ex. XXIV, 18. Cf. ibid. XIX, 3,9,25.
- (26) Wa-yekasehu may be translated 'covered him' or 'covered it', Moses or the mountain, the Hebrew word har (mountain) being also masculine.
- (27) Moses came down to speak to Israel (Ex. XIX, 3f), hence it would be wrong to say that the cloud covered him six days before the Revelation.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 4b

then 'He called unto Moses on the seventh day'. Moses and all Israel were standing there,¹ but the purpose of Scripture was to honour Moses.² R. Nathan says: The purpose of Scripture was that he [Moses] might be purged of all food and drink in his bowels so as to make him equal to the ministering angels.³ R. Mattiah b. Heresh⁴ says, The purpose of Scripture here was to inspire him with awe, so that the Torah be given⁵ with awe, with dread, with trembling, as it is said: Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling.⁶ What is the meaning of 'And rejoice with trembling'?⁷ — R. Adda b. Mattena says in the name of Rab: Where there will be joy, there shall be trembling.⁸

In what do R. Jose the Galilean and R. Akiba differ? — In the controversy of these Tannaim. For we have been taught:⁹ On the sixth day of the month¹⁰ was the Torah given to Israel. R. Jose says on the seventh. He who says that the Torah was given on the sixth day holds that on the sixth it was given and on the seventh Moses ascended the mountain;¹¹ he who holds that the Torah was given on the seventh assumes that on the seventh both the Torah was given and Moses ascended, as it is written, And He called unto Moses on the seventh day.¹² Now R. Jose the Galilean is of the same opinion as the first Tanna,¹³ who held that the Torah was given on the sixth of the month, therefore this¹⁴ happened after the giving of the Ten Commandments: 'The glory of the Lord abode on mount Sinai and the cloud covered him six days' 'him' meaning Moses- 'And He called unto Moses on the seventh day' to receive the remainder of the Torah.¹⁵ For if the thought should come to you that 'And the glory of the Lord abode' from the New Moon [of Sivan], so that 'And the cloud covered him' referred to the mountain, and 'The Lord called unto Moses on the seventh day' to receive the Ten Commandments, surely they had received the Torah on the sixth day already and also the cloud had departed on the sixth day! — R. Akiba, however, held with R. Jose that the Torah was given to Israel on the seventh.¹⁶ Quite in accord with R. Akiba's teaching is the statement¹⁷ that the Tablets were broken on the seventeenth of Tammuz, for the twenty-four days of Sivan¹⁸ and the sixteen of Tammuz make up the forty days he was on the mountain, and on the seventeenth of Tammuz he went down and came¹⁹ to break the Tablets. But according to R. Jose the Galilean who holds that there were six days of the separation²⁰ in addition to forty days [spent] on the mountain, the Tablets could not have been broken before the twenty-third of Tammuz? — R. Jose the Galilean will answer you: The six days of the separation are included in the forty days on the mountain.

The Master said: "'And He called Moses", whilst Moses and all Israel were standing' there'. This interpretation supports the view of R. Eleazar, for R. Eleazar said: ‘And He called unto Moses’ whilst Moses and all Israel were standing there; the only purpose of Scripture is to do honour to Moses. They²¹ raised the following objection: [He heard the voice speaking] elaw [unto him] not lo [to him];²² hence we know that Moses heard, but all Israel did not hear?²³ - This is no difficulty. The one passage speaks of Sinai, the other of the tent of meeting.²⁴ Or, you might say, the one statement refers to the call, the other to the speech.²⁵ R. Zerika asked a question concerning the contradiction of scriptural passages in the presence of R. Eleazar, or, according to another version, he asked the question in the name of R. Eleazar. One passage reads: And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of meeting because the cloud abode thereon,²⁶ whereas another verse says: And Moses entered into the midst of the cloud?²⁷ It teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, took hold of Moses and brought him into the cloud. The school of R. Ishmael taught: Here²⁸ the word be-thok [in the midst] appears and it also appears elsewhere: And the children of Israel went into the midst of the sea,²⁹ just as there [the word be-thok] implies a path, as it is written: And the waters were a wall³⁰ unto them,²⁹ so here too there was a path, [for Moses through the cloud].

And the Lord called unto Moses, and spoke unto him,³¹ why does Scripture mention the call before the speech? — The Torah teaches us good manners: a man should not address his neighbour without having first called him. This supports the view of R. Hanina, for R. Hanina said: No man shall speak to his neighbour unless he calls him first to speak to him. Rabbah said: Whence do we know that if a man had said something to his neighbour the latter must not spread the news without the informant's telling him ‘Go and say it’? From the scriptural text: The Lord spoke to him out of the tent of meeting, lemor [saying] .³² At any rate it is to be inferred³³ that both hold that the omission of any detail mentioned in connection with the priest's Consecration renders the ceremony invalid, for it was said: With regard to the ceremony of Consecration R. Johanan and R. Hanina are disputing; one says: The omission of any form prescribed in connection with the ceremony renders it invalid, whilst the other holds only such matter as is indispensable on any future occasion is indispensable now, whereas such detail as is dispensable in future generations, is dispensable even the first time. One may conclude that it is R. Johanan who holds that the omission of any detail whatsoever that is mentioned in connection with the Consecration ceremony renders such ceremony invalid, because R. Simeon b. Lakish said to R. Johanan³⁴ [in the course of the argument]: ‘And just as with the ceremony of Consecration the omission of any prescribed detail renders the ceremony invalid. And R. Johanan did not retort at all’. That proof is conclusive.³⁵

What is the [practical] difference between the opinions?

-
- (1) Moses did not ascend the mountain nor did he separate from his circle till after the Revelation.
 - (2) All Israel were present, why then does Scripture report that the word of God came to Moses alone? — The answer is: To show him special regard.
 - (3) R. Nathan is of the opinion of R. Jose the Galilean that the call to Moses referred to in the verses was for separation after the Revelation, yet this offers no basis for necessitating separation before entering into the Sanctuary, as the object of Moses' separation was that he might be like the ministering angels.
 - (4) He too shares the opinion of R. Jose the Galilean.
 - (5) To Moses and through him to Israel.
 - (6) Ps. II, 11.
 - (7) The terms seem contradictory.
 - (8) The Torah is a source of joy. The precepts of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart, Ps. XIX, 9, cited by Rashi. But there shall also be awe, reverence for the numen, the Lord, the Lawgiver. Tosaf. cites I Chron. XVI, 27 Strength and gladness are in His Place.
 - (9) Shah. 86b.
 - (10) Of Sivan, the first day of Shabuoth.
 - (11) Sinai.
 - (12) Ex. XXIV, 16.

- (13) The anonymous Tanna of the Baraita
- (14) Moses' ascent on the mount.
- (15) The other laws (beside the Ten Commandments) and the Oral Law.
- (16) So that the 'Seventh day' refers to the seventh day on which the Torah was given.
- (17) V. Ta'an. 26a.
- (18) From the seventh to the thirtieth.
- (19) Either 'came to the camp of Israel, saw the dances and broke' or paraphrastic for 'broke'.
- (20) After the Revelation.
- (21) The teachers (students) in the academy.
- (22) The passage, Num. VII, 89 reads: Moses . . . heard the voice speaking elaw (to him, which is the longer form, lo being the normal one) from above the ark-cover etc. The use, in this passage, of the longer form, seemed to suggest a closer or exclusive communication. According to Hayyug, quoted Otzar ha-Geonim VI, 1, n. 4, there is a difference of meaning derivable in accord with grammatical principles, in 'lo' and 'elaw' respectively.
- (23) So that all Israel, indeed, did not hear God's message. If so, then the only purpose of the statement '. . . Scripture is to honour Moses' is unjustified. For Scripture does not change the fact. It was Moses alone whom the message reached.
- (24) In the tent of meeting only Moses could hear the voice. On Mount Sinai all Israel heard it, but to honour Moses, Scripture mentions him only as having done so.
- (25) The call proper, the honour of the individual call, was vouchsafed to Moses alone, the speech following was heard by all.
- (26) Ex. XL, 35.
- (27) Ibid. XXIV, 18.
- (28) The apparent contradiction is removed by the suggestion that he entered the cloud on this occasion with divine help.
- (29) Ex. XIV, 22.
- (30) The water being piled up like a wall, Israel walked along a path. The inference is from similarity of expression.
- (31) Lev. I, 1.
- (32) Lemor here is taken to mean 'to say it (to others)', or else the next few words are illustratively, not logically implied: Speak (unto the children of Israel).
- (33) From Resh Lakish's question to R. Johanan: '... just as with the Consecration service the omission of any prescribed form would render the service invalid' and R. Johanan's tacit acceptance of this view, supra 3b.
- (34) Supra 3b.
- (35) Had he held a different view, he would surely not have permitted his opponent's statement to go unchallenged.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 5a

R. Joseph says the putting¹ of the hands [upon the head of the sacrifice] is the difference. According to the one who holds that the omission of any detail renders the ceremony invalid, [failure] to lay the hand upon the head of the sacrifice would render the ceremony invalid. According to him who holds that only the omission of what is indispensable in the future renders the ceremony invalid, [omission of] the putting of the hand on the animal's head did not render the ceremony invalid. Whence do we know that in the future [the omission of] the putting of the hands [on the animal's head] is not indispensable?— For it has been taught: And he shall lay his hand . . . and it shall be accepted for him [to make atonement for him].² Does the laying on of the hand make atonement for one? Does not atonement come through the blood, as it is said: For it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life!³ Why, then, is it written: 'And he shall lay his hand on . . . and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him'? To say that if he performed the laying on of the hands as an unimportant part⁴ of the commandment, Scripture would account it to him as if he had not obtained proper atonement.⁵ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: The waving⁶ is the difference. According to him who holds whatever detail is prescribed for the ceremony is indispensable, the waving is indispensable; according to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all the future is indispensable now, the waving is not indispensable. Whence do we know that for all time to come the waving is not indispensable? — For we have been taught:⁷ To be waved, to make atonement for him.⁸ Does the waving make atonement? Is it not the blood which makes atonement, as it is written, 'For it is the blood that maketh atonement by reason of the life'? Then why does Scripture say, 'To be waved, to make atonement for him'? To say that if he treats the waving as an unimportant part of the ceremony, Scripture accounts it to him as if he had not obtained proper atonement.

R. Papa said: The separation for seven days is the [practical] difference between the two opinions. According to the opinion that whatsoever is prescribed for the ceremony is indispensable, the separation, too, is indispensable; according to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all time to come is indispensable now, the separation is not indispensable. Whence do we know that the separation is not indispensable for all time to come? Because the Mishnah reads, [another priest] IS MADE READY FOR HIM, instead of is 'separated for him'.⁹ Rabina said: The difference lies in the increase [in the number of garments]¹⁰ and of the anointments¹¹ necessary during the seven days. According to the opinion that whatever is prescribed in connection therewith is indispensable, the increase [in the number of garments] and anointments during the seven days, too, is indispensable. According to him who holds that only what is indispensable for all time to come, is indispensable now, these things too are not indispensable. Whence do we know that they are not indispensable for all time to come? — For it was taught: And the priest who shall be anointed and who shall be consecrated to be priest in his father's stead, shall make the atonement.¹² What does the passage come to teach?¹³ From the text: Seven days shall the son that is priest in his stead put them on [etc.],¹⁴ I would know that a priest who had put on the required larger number of garments and who had been anointed on each of the seven days¹⁵ was permitted to ['minister in the holy place']¹⁶ at the Consecration. Whence would I know that if he had put on the larger number of garments for but one day, and had been anointed on each of the seven days; or, if he had been anointed but one day, but has put on the larger number of garments for seven days, [he would also be permitted]? To convey that teaching, Scripture says, 'Who shall be anointed and who shall be consecrated', that means anointed and consecrated in whatever way.¹⁷ We have now found evidence that the larger number of garments is necessary in the first instance for the seven days. Whence do we know that anointment on each of the seven days is in the first instance required? You may infer that either from the fact that a special statement of the Torah was necessary to exclude it; or, if you wish, from the scriptural text itself, And the holy garments of Aaron shall be for his sons after him, to be anointed in them, and to be consecrated in them.¹⁸ In this passage the anointing and the donning of the larger number of garments are put on the same level. Hence, just as the donning of the larger number of garments is required for the seven days, so is the anointing obligatory for the seven days.

What is the reason of the man who holds that the forms prescribed for the ceremonies are indispensable?— R. Isaac b. Bisna said: Scripture reads And kaka [thus] shalt thou do to Aaron and his sons, — 'thus means indispensableness.'¹⁹

You may be right with regard to any

(1) Lev. I, 4; VIII, 18.

(2) Lev. I, 4.

(3) Lev. XVII, 11.

(4) Lit., 'a remnant'.

(5) Lit., 'as it did not atone for him and it did'. Technically the ceremony had achieved its purpose, because essentially it is the blood which makes atonement, but since laying the hands on the animal's head is part of the ceremony (although not essential to it) and he has been negligent about it, he has obtained atonement for himself, but has not attained re-atonement with his creator, whose command he has treated slightly.

(6) Of part of the sacrifice, Lev. VIII, 27.

(7) Men. 93b.

(8) Lev. XIV, 21.

(9) If the separation of the priest were an indispensable part of the ceremony, the proposed substitute for the high priest would have to be separated too, so that in case of any mishap to the high priest he would enter upon the service properly prepared by separation. Since the Mishnah reads 'prepared' only, the separation obviously is not deemed indispensable.

(10) The eight garments of the high priest as against the four of the ordinary priest.

(11) Every one of the seven days the head and the eye-lids of the high priest were anointed with oil.

(12) Lev. XVI, 32.

(13) Obviously the service was to be performed by the high priest, why then this apparently superfluous passage?

(14) Ex. XXIX, 30.

(15) Of his consecration as high priest, v. infra.

(16) That is on the Day of Atonement.

(17) As long as he has been consecrated, even if some detail of the ceremony has been omitted.

(18) Ex. XXIX, 29.

(19) The emphatic expression 'thus' intimates the indispensableness of the prescribed forms, 'thus' and 'not otherwise'.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 5b

form prescribed in this context. Whence do we know that forms not prescribed¹ here in this context are also indispensable? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We infer that from [the fact that in both contexts the same word] petah [is used].² R. Mesharsheya said: And keep the charge of the Lord³ indicates the indispensableness [of the prescribed forms]. R. Ashi said: For so am I commanded⁴ indicates indispensableness.

Our Rabbis taught:⁵ For so am I commanded,⁶ As I commanded,⁷ As the Lord commanded.⁸ [Of these passages], 'For so am I commanded' that they eat⁹ it whilst in mourning; 'As I commanded' [this] he said to them at the time¹⁰ of the occurrence;¹¹ 'As the Lord commanded', and not on my own authority.

R. Jose b. Hanina said: Breeches are not mentioned in the section.¹² But when it says, And this is the thing that thou shalt do unto them to hallow them, to minister,¹³ it includes the breeches and the tenth part of an ephah.¹⁴ It may rightly be said that breeches are included in the general term 'garments',¹⁵ but whence do we know about the tenth of an ephah? — [This we know] by inferring [the meaning of the word] zeh [used here]¹⁶ from zeh [in the verse], Zeh [this] is the offering of Aaron and his sons which they shall offer unto the Lord . . . the tenth part of an ephah.¹⁷

R. Johanan in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai said: Whence do we know that also the reading of the portion¹⁸ was indispensable? To teach us that it is said, This is the dabar [thing] which the Lord has commanded to be done,¹⁹ i.e., the speaking²⁰ thereof is indispensable. — In what order did he put the garments on them? — What is past, is past!²¹ Rather, [the question is] in what order will he put the garments on them in the future?²² — In the future, too,²³ when Aaron and his sons will come, Moses will come with them. But [the question is] how did he put the clothes on them [if we are] to understand the scriptural account?²⁴ -The sons of R. Hiyya and R. Johanan held different opinions about it. One said: Aaron was first clothed and afterwards his sons; whilst the other said: Aaron and his sons were clothed simultaneously. Said Abaye: With regard to the tunic and the mitre none disputes the fact that Aaron came first and his sons afterwards,²⁵ for both in the [text containing] the command and [the account of the] actual performance Aaron is mentioned first. What they are disputing is [the order of] the girdle.²⁶ He who says Aaron [came first] and then his sons [is of this opinion] because it is written, And he girded him with the girdle,²⁷ and only after this is it written, And he girded them with a girdle,²⁸ whereas he who holds that the girding took place without any interruption, [is of this opinion] because It is written, And thou shalt gird them with girdles, Aaron and his sons.²⁹ According to the opinion that Aaron and his sons were girded at the same time, does not Scripture first say, 'And he girded him with a girdle' and then only later is it written, 'And he girded them with a girdle'?³⁰ —

(1) In Ex. XXIX, 5, there are Instructions relative to the Consecration, such as putting on Aaron the tunic, the robe of the ephod and the ephod, the breastplate, the mitre on his head, the holy crown on the mitre. These are not mentioned in the ceremony described in Lev. VIII.

(2) Ex. XXIX, 4 and Lev. VIII, 33.

(3) Lev. VIII, 35.

(4) Ibid. VIII, 35.

(5) Zeb. 101b.

(6) Lev. X, 13.

(7) Ibid. X, 18.

(8) Lev. X, 15

(9) Lev. X, 13: Take the meal-offering and eat it, this command contradicts Deut. XXVI, 14, I have not eaten thereof in my mourning. The answer is, 'So am I commanded', i.e., a special decision from God.

(10) The death of Nadab and Abihu, Lev. X, 2.

(11) When he found that the goat of the sin-offering had been burnt, he said to them, You should have eaten it 'as I commanded you' in regard to the meal-offering.

(12) Chapters VIII and IX of Lev. which deal with the Consecration.

(13) Ex. XXIX, 1.

(14) Which the priests are obliged to offer up on the day of their Consecration. V. Men. 51b.

(15) Ex. XXIX, 5: And thou shalt take the garments and put upon Aaron.

(16) Ex. XXIX, 1.

(17) Lev. VI, 13. The inference from similarity of expression is never used 'for the purpose of deducing a new law from Scripture, but merely as an attempt to find a scriptural support for an opinion expressed by one of the authorities in the Mishnah'. Mielziner, Intro. 148.

(18) The section on the Consecration. It was to be read as part of the ceremony.

(19) Lev. VIII, 5' Dabar may mean both 'word' and 'thing'. No further reference to the ceremony being necessary, the suggestion is made that dabar, the word, the reading of the word is commanded. Support may be found in the fact that the preceding verse speaks of The congregation assembled at the door of the tent of meeting, such 'assembly' for the purpose of hearing scriptural reading being expressly enjoined in Deut. XXXI, 28 and esp. at the Sukkoth festival in the year of release.

(20) The word, i.e., the section read.

(21) There is no relevance in archaeological research.

(22) I.e., in the Messianic future.

(23) There is no need for speculation. Moses will be in charge and he knows the law.

(24) There are apparent contradictions between the command as given in Ex. XXIX and the account of the ceremony in Lev. VIII respectively. In Ex. XXIX, 9: And thou shalt gird them with a girdle, Aaron and his sons intimates that this girding of father and sons took place in close succession to one another. I.e., he girded Aaron only after he had first clothed the sons with the other garments apart from the girdle, so that the girding of Aaron and his sons were, so to speak, at the same time (v. infra); whereas in Lev. VIII, 7: And girded him with the girdle and clothed him with the robe . . . and placed the breastplate upon him and set the mitre upon his head to be followed by ibid. v. 13: And Moses brought Aaron's sons and clothed them with tunics and girded them with girdles shows the girding of Aaron took place before the clothing of the sons had even begun.

(25) [Moses clothed Aaron with the tunic and the mitre before he began to clothe the sons with these garments. These would also include the breeches, as these were always to come first, v. infra 23b.]

(26) Whether Aaron was girded before or after the sons were clothed with the tunic and mitre.

(27) Lev. VIII, 7.

(28) Ibid. 13. I.e., after having first clothed them with the other garments.

(29) Ex. XXIX, 9.

(30) Cf. n. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 6a

He will tell you: This is to teach you that the girdle of the high priest was not the same [material] as that of the average priest.¹ According to the opinion that Aaron was girded and afterwards his sons,² does not Scripture say, ‘And thou shalt gird them with a girdle’?— He will tell you this³ informs us that the girdle of the high priest was of the same [material] as the average priest. Was it then necessary to state: ‘And he girded him with a girdle’ and [then] ‘And he girded them’? From that we infer that Aaron came first and then his sons. But how could it have been possible simultaneously?⁴ — This only means to indicate that [Aaron] came first.⁵

THE HIGH PRIEST WAS REMOVED. Why was he removed?[You ask] why was he removed!⁶ [Is it not] as you have said, either according to the derivation of R. Johanan, or to that of Resh Lakish? — No, this is⁷ the question: Why was he separated from his house? — It was taught: R. Judah b. Bathyra said: Let his wife be found under doubt of being a menstruant and he have congress with her.⁸ Do we speak of wicked people?⁹ — Rather, perhaps he will have congress with his wife and she will then be found to be doubtfully a menstruant.¹⁰ [The Rabbis] were discussing the decision before R. Hisda: According to whom was it made?-Obviously according to R. Akiba, who said: A menstruant makes him who had congress with her impure [retrospectively].¹¹ For, according to the Rabbis, behold they say: A menstruant does not render impure him who had congress with her [retrospectively]. R. Hisda said to them: It may be in accord even with the Rabbis. For they conflict with R. Akiba only in the case in which [the blood stains are found] much later¹² [than the congress], but, [if they be found] very soon afterwards,¹³ they agree with him. R. Zera said: Hence it is evident that to one who had congress with a menstruant do not apply the same restrictions as do to the menstruant herself and he may bathe [for purification] in day time.¹⁴ For, if you were to say that to one who had congress with a menstruant applied the same laws that apply to her, when could he bathe? Only at night. How could he, then, officiate on the morrow,¹⁵ since he would have to await sunset for becoming ritually pure? Hence it must be [clear] that one who had intercourse with a menstruant is not subject to the same restrictions as the menstruant herself. Said R. Shimi of Nehardea: You might even say [that the above decision is in accord with the view] that one who has intercourse with a menstruant is like the menstruant, yet [would the high priest be able to officiate at the service] for we would separate him from his house an hour before sunset.¹⁶ An objection was raised: All those who are obliged to take the ritual bath must take the bath at night.¹⁷ A menstruant and a woman after confinement immerse during the day. A menstruant, then, only, but not one who had intercourse with her?¹⁸ — [No, it means], A menstruant and all whom one may include in that term.¹⁹ Another objection was raised: One to whom pollution has happened is like one who touched an unclean [dead] reptile. One who had intercourse with a menstruating woman is like one who was made unclean through a corpse.²⁰ Is it not concerning the bath?²¹ — No, it is concerning [the conditions of] their uncleanness.²² But [surely] concerning their uncleanness²³ there are direct statements in Scripture! In the first case it is written that it lasts for seven days,²⁴ and in the second case also the seven days’ duration is prescribed.²⁵

(1) The girdle as described in Ex. XXXIX, 29 was to be made of fine twined linen, and blue and purple and scarlet, the work of the weaver in colours. The separate mention made of Aaron's girdle and that of his sons serves to indicate that they were not alike and that this description referred to the girdle of the high priest alone: the girdle of other priests was made of lesser material.

(2) From which one may infer that they are to be girded simultaneously, ‘them’, i.e., together.

(3) The answer is: The emphasis is not on the time or interval, but on the fact that father and son shall be girded with the same girdle, no distinction being allowed between the girdles worn by high priest and ordinary priest respectively.

(4) Taking the word simultaneously literally (cf. p. 21, n. 13), the question is, How could Moses have girded five men simultaneously?

(5) The Torah does not command any simultaneity. Aaron is mentioned in one passage and his sons in another, in order to emphasize that he must come first-whether in the clothing of the garments or in the girding.

(6) The first question was misunderstood. The answer implies that the source of the commandment to remove the priest was being sought.

(7) What was really intended was the practical motive of the enactment.

(8) Tosef. Yoma I.

(9) No good Jew (v. Sheb. 18b; Shulhan Aruk, Yoreh Deah 184, 2) would approach his wife unless her ritual purity were beyond doubt, how much less a high priest. Hence such contingency is unthinkable. Dealing with high priests, are we dealing with wicked men?

(10) Bloodstains may be found on the bed after congress and the doubt would arise, whether the discharge occurred before or after congress. Such a doubt would render her husband impure for seven days and ritually unfit to enter the sanctuary.

(11) [For twenty-four hours, so that should the stain be found after congress, the husband would be considered unclean for seven days, v. Nid. 14a.]

(12) Lit., 'after after', v. next note.

(13) [Lit., 'one after' this interval is defined in Nid. 12b as time enough to get down from the bed and rinse her face (euphemistically).]

(14) A menstruant is not permitted to bathe during the seventh day of her menstrual impurity, but only at night, after sunset, the beginning of the eighth day. But he who had congress with her would be permitted to bathe during the seventh day, without having to await the sunset of the seventh day. Hence he needs to be separated for but seven days. And if on the day of the separation he had congress and the doubt of her being a menstruant arose, he would count from the day of the separation until the day before the Day of Atonement, when he would take the bath during the day, await the sunset, and then be fit to enter the sanctuary on the Day of Atonement (Rashi).

(15) He would ritually be impure at the night of the Day of Atonement, hence there would have been no sunset before the Day of Atonement when he was pure and he would be unfit to officiate on the following day; thus the whole separation would be futile.

(16) That is, on the even before the eighth day before the Day of Atonement. One hour is a very short period and unimportant, hence the separation would still be called 'one of seven days'. He could bathe on the evening before the eve of the Day of Atonement (the seventh day after having become ritually impure) and be fit to officiate on the Day of Atonement, having awaited the sunset on the day before his bath.

(17) Meg. 20a, based on Num. XIX, 19, for the law that all may bathe during the day: And on the seventh day he shall purify him and bathe himself in water and be clean at even. — That a menstruant must not bathe before the night of the seventh day is inferred from Lev. XV,19: And if a woman have an issue, she shall be in her impurity seven days. A woman after confinement is compared to a menstruant in Lev. XII, 2: If a woman be delivered . . . , then she shall be unclean for seven days; as in the days of the impurity of her sickness shall she be unclean.; v. infra 88a (18) Here would be a Tannaitic text invalidating an Amora's inference.

(19) Since the menstruant by contact communicates her impurity, it is logical to assume that the conditions of purification would be identical. Hence the implicit statement is sufficient.

(20) Zab. V, 11.

(21) That the bath could be taken in day-time.

(22) One to whom defilement has happened is like one who touched a dead reptile in that both become clean in the evening, and are unclean in the first degree of uncleanness; and he who had intercourse with a menstruant is afflicted with uncleanness for seven days and is one of the original causes of uncleanness like him who was made unclean through a corpse.

(23) I.e., that of one who has intercourse with a menstruant.

(24) Lev. XV, 24. Her impurity be upon him, he shall be unclean seven days.

(25) Num. XIX, 11: He that toucheth the dead, even any man's dead body, shall be unclean seven days.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 6b

Must one not hence assume that the comparison concerns their bath?¹ No, indeed it refers only to [the conditions of] their uncleanness, and it was necessary to mention that only because of the latter clause [of that Mishnah, viz.,] that one who had intercourse with a menstruant is afflicted with a graver form of impurity than he [who has become unclean through a corpse] in that he causes uncleanness of couch and seat² [such uncleanness being of a lighter nature] so as to affect only foods and liquids.³

Come and hear:⁴ For R. Hiyya taught: A man or a woman afflicted with gonorrhoea or with leprosy, one who had intercourse with a menstruant, and one made unclean through a corpse, may take the bath during the day; a menstruant and a woman after confinement take their bath at night.⁵ This is [indeed] a refutation.⁶ Now whilst removing him from the [possible] impurity due to his house,⁷ remove him from the [possibility of] uncleanness through a corpse!⁸ R. Tahlifa, father of R. Huna, said in the name of Raba: This teaches that in the case of a community [the law of] corpse uncleanness is inoperative.⁹ Rabina said: You might also say that [the law of] corpse uncleanness is only suspended in case of a community,¹⁰ yet uncleanness due to contact with a corpse is infrequent,¹¹ whereas uncleanness due to marital life happens often. It has been said: As [to the law of] corpse-uncleanness R. Nahman said: It is inoperative in case of a community. R. Shesheth said: It is only suspended in case of an entire community. Whenever there are in the same priestly family-division¹² men, both clean and unclean ones, nobody disputes the fact that the clean ones do the service and the unclean ones forego it. The dispute concerns only the question as to whether one is obliged to make an endeavour to obtain, clean ones from another family-division. R. Nahman said: [The law of] corpse-uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, hence we need make no such effort. R. Shesheth says: That law is only suspended in case of a community and hence we must endeavour [to find clean priests for the service].

Some hold that even in a case in which there are both clean and unclean priests in the same family-division, R. Nahman insists that even the unclean ones may officiate

(1) Since a statement as to the duration of their uncleanness, from its express form in the Torah, seems superfluous. But such repetition is illogical and hence the interpretation that it applies to the bathing is justified which proves that he who has intercourse with the menstruant may immerse by day.

(2) [As many couches as are under him become unclean although they had not been in direct contact with him, which is not the case with one who suffers corpse-uncleanness. He defiles only those couches which his body actually touches.]

(3) All original causes of uncleanness (אבות הטומאה) render, by touch, man and vessels unclean, whereas the derived first and second and third causes affect only foods and liquids, but neither human beings nor 'vessels' (apparel, etc.).

(4) This phrase in our case introduces a refutation.

(5) Infra 88a.

(6) This Tannaitic tradition is beyond the argument of any Amora. The refutation is complete.

(7) i.e., his wife.

(8) Keep away from him every company, lest someone die whilst in the same room with the high priest and render him unclean for seven days.

(9) Lit., 'permissible'.

(10) It is only suspended as by emergency and every effort is due to effect a proper service in its stead.

(11) Hence no precautionary measures, such as, so to speak, quarantining the priest, are necessary.

(12) Beth-Ab. V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 7a

because the Torah has rendered all levitical impurity caused through a corpse inoperative in case of a community.¹

R. Shesheth said: Whence do I know that?² Because it has been taught: If the priest was standing and offering up the sheaf of the 'Omer³ and it became unclean in his hands⁴ let him tell and another one is brought in its place. And if there be none but this, one would say to him: 'Be clever and keep quiet'.⁵ At all events he teaches, He should tell about it and another one is brought in its place!⁶ — R. Nahman said: I admit⁷ that where there is a remnant to be eaten [one would have to make an effort to procure a substitute sacrifice].⁸ Another objection was raised: If he was offering up the meal-offering of the bullocks or rams or sheep, and it became unclean in his hand, he should say so and one brings another one in its place; but if there be none [available] but the first, one tells him,

‘Be wise and keep quiet’.⁹ Does this not refer to the bullocks, rams and sheep offered up on the feast [of Sukkoth]?¹⁰ — R. Nahman will answer you: No, the word ‘bullock’ refers to the bullock offered up in expiation of idolatry,¹¹ and although it is a community sacrifice, since there is no definite time fixed for it, one endeavours [to find a substitute offering]; the word ‘rams’ refers to the ram of Aaron¹² and although it is appointed to be sacrificed at a definite time, yet, since it is the offering of an individual, one endeavours [to procure a substitute]; the word ‘lambs’ refers to the lamb offered up together with the ‘Omer-sheaf, of which¹³ there are remnants to be eaten. — Another objection was raised:¹⁴ If [sacrificial] blood became unclean and one sprinkled it, if by mistake, it is accepted;¹⁵ if wilfully, it is not accepted!¹⁶ — This teaching refers to the sacrifice of an individual. Come and hear: For what [mistake at sacrifice] does the priest's plate¹⁷ effect pardon?¹⁸ Concerning blood, flesh, fat, which become unclean, whether by mistake or wilfully, whether by accident or voluntarily,¹⁹ whether [the sacrifice] was offered up by an individual or by the entire community.²⁰ Now if it enter your mind that the law of uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, what need is there for [the priest's plate] to effect pardon?— R. Nahman will answer you: What has been taught about the plate's effecting pardon, refers only to the sacrifice of an individual. Or, if you like, one might say, it refers also to such community sacrifices for which no definite time has been set. — Another objection was raised:²⁰ [Touching on] And Aaron shall bear the iniquity committed in the holy things. Does he bear any kind of iniquity? If you mean the iniquity of piggul [— a sacrifice rejectable²¹ because of the intended disposal beyond the legal limits of space], concerning this Scripture has said already, It will not be accepted.²² If you mean the iniquity of nothar,²³ concerning that Scripture has said already, It shall not be imputed!²⁴

(1) The source is Num. IX, 10: If any person . . . shall be unclean by reason of a dead body or be in a journey afar off, he could postpone the offering up of his paschal lamb until the fourteenth of the month of Iyar. From this R. Shesheth infers that a person (an individual) is suspended (postpones the celebration of Passover), but not a community. Pes. 66b.

(2) That the law is only suspended, not inoperative.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) The rendering in our text seems defective. In Men. 72a it reads: If he was standing and offering up the flour-offering of the ‘Omer and it became unclean, if there is another (available), he may say to him, — bring the other’ in its place. And if not he says to him — ‘Be clever and keep quiet’. The Tosef. reads: If he offered up the ‘Omer and it became unclean he tells it and one brings another one in its place. If there be none besides the first, one says to him, ‘Be clever and keep quiet about it’.

(5) Since no substitute is available, silence is wisdom, for the priest's frontplate procures forgiveness for such mishap. V. infra.

(6) Hence it is clear that even in the case of a community the law concerning corpse-uncleanness is but suspended, not rendered inoperative, which contradicts R. Nahman.

(7) Although a communal sacrifice may indeed be offered up also in a state of congregational impurity, it may not be eaten in a state of impurity. V. Pes. 77b.

(8) In the case of an ‘Omer offering, where the priest takes a fistful, I admit that remnants to be consumed must be consumed in cleanliness.

(9) This text is apparently taken from the Tosef. Men. II, yet in that text the word for ‘rams’ is omitted.

(10) V. Num. XXIX, 12ff. These are community sacrifices, with a definite time appointed for them, yet the law of impurity is only suspended, for ‘one brings another one in its place’.

(11) The passage in Num. XV, 22f: And when ye shall err and not observe all these commandments, then it shall be, if done in error by the congregation . . . that all the congregation shall offer up one bullock for a burnt-offering, is assumed to refer to the main and most potent error: idolatry.

(12) Offered up on the Day of Atonement.

(13) The meal-offering brought with the ‘Omer lamb, of which a fistful was taken by the priest and the remnants eaten.

(14) V. Pes. 16b.

(15) And the flesh thereof may be eaten.

(16) [In so far that the flesh may not be eaten, though pardon is effected by means of the priest's plate (v. infra). This proves that the law of uncleanness does operate in the case of a community (which is apparently included in the general terms of this teaching).]

(17) The source is Ex. XXVIII, 36-38: And thou shalt make a plate of pure gold and engrave upon it, like the engravings of a signet: HOLY OF THE LORD. And thou shalt put it on a thread of blue, and it shall be upon the mitre: upon the forefront of the mitre it shall be. And it shall be upon Aaron's forehead and Aaron shall bear the iniquity committed in the holy things which the children of Israel hallow.

(18) Lit., 'Make (the sacrifice) acceptable.'

(19) The word רצון (free-will) after מזיד (wilfully) is tautologous, but it is a matter of Talmudic style, since אונם (accident) is mentioned, its opposite is also included, illustratively rather than logically.

(20) Men. 25b.

(21) Lev. VII, 18: And if any of the flesh of the sacrifice of his peace-offerings (which according to the preceding verse may be eaten only in the day that it is offered on and on the morrow) be at all eaten on the third day, it shall not be accepted, neither shall it be imputed unto him that offereth it: it shall be an abhorred thing (piggul) and the soul that eateth of it shall bear his iniquity. The term piggul although generally denoting the intention in the mind of the officiating priest to dispose of the sacrifice beyond the proper time (חוי' לזמנה) signifies here according to Rashi the intended disposal thereof beyond the legal limits of space, (חוי' למקומו). V. Zeb. 28a. Tosaf. explains differently.

(22) V. note 5.

(23) [Lit., 'left over', generally portions of sacrifice left over beyond the legal time and here with the special meaning of the intended disposal of the sacrifice beyond the legal time, so Rashi.]

(24) Lev. VII, 18.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 7b

Is it not hence that there is no iniquity which he bears except that concerning levitical uncleanness which has been declared inoperative in its general rule whenever a community sacrifice is involved, and the difficulty remains for R. Shesheth?¹ Concerning this matter the Tannaim differ,² for it has been taught:³ The front plate effects pardon⁴ whether it be on the high priest's forehead or not; these are the words of R. Simeon. R. Judah said: As long as it is on his forehead it effects pardon, if it is not on his forehead, it does not effect pardon. R. Simeon said to him: The case of the high priest on the Day of Atonement proves [your contention wrong], for the plate⁵ is then not on his forehead and yet it effects pardon — R. Judah answered him: Leave the case of the high priest on the Day of Atonement alone, for to him, because the community is concerned,⁶ the law of uncleanness has been rendered inoperative. Hence it is to be inferred that according to R. Simeon⁷ the law of uncleanness is only suspended in case of a community.⁸

Abaye said: If the front plate was broken there is no conflicting opinion, all agreeing that it effects no pardon. The dispute concerns only the case when it is hung up on a peg, R. Judah holding, And it shall be upon the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear,⁹ whilst R. Simeon bases his opinion on, And it shall be continually upon his forehead, that they may be accepted before the Lord.¹⁰ Now what does 'continually' mean? Shall I say that it shall indeed be continually on his forehead? How is that possible? Must he not enter the privy¹¹ occasionally, must he not sleep at times?¹¹ Rather must it all imply that [the front plate] 'continually'¹² effects pardon. According to R. Judah,¹³ does not Scripture say 'continually'?¹⁴ — That word implies that he should never dismiss it from his mind;¹⁵ this is in agreement with Rabbah son of Huna, for Rabbah son of Huna said: A man is obliged to touch his tefillin¹⁶ every hour. This may be learned by inference ad majus from the front plate.

(1) Who holds that that law is only suspended, not abrogated, where a community sacrifice is involved.

(2) So that R. Shesheth may have the benefit of the support of the Tanna whose opinion he held.

(3) Pes. 77a.

(4) For uncleanness of a sacrifice.

(5) On that day, when the high priest enters the Holy of Holies, he doffs his golden garments, including the front plate, and wears simple linen.

- (6) He offers up the sacrifice to make atonement for the whole congregation.
- (7) Who opposes the view of R. Judah.
- (8) And it is the front plate that effects the pardon. This is the dispute of the Tannaim.
- (9) Ex. XXVII, 38.
- (10) Ibid., the pardon dependent upon the high priest's bearing the plate.
- (11) Respect for the holy garment would necessitate its removal at that time.
- (12) The evidence of the text seems to favour R. Simeon's interpretation.
- (13) Not only does his own interpretation appear wrong when confronted with R. Simeon's argument.
- (14) The word 'continually', which cannot be referred to the wearing of the plate, needs must be applied to its efficacy.
- (15) Not the outward efficacy of the plate; the attitude of the high priest towards its function is what the Torah prescribes here.
- (16) Originally the tefillin were worn all day. V. Shab. 130a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 8a

If touching the front plate, on which the mention [of God] is but inscribed once,¹ the Torah prescribes 'And it shall be continually upon his forehead,' i.e., he shall not dismiss it from his mind, how much more does this apply to the tefillin which contain the mention [of God] many a time!² But according to R. Simeon who says the front plate effects pardon always, does not Scripture intimate [in the passage], 'On the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear' [that the effecting of pardon depends on his bearing the plate]?- No, that passage merely serves to indicate the place of the plate. Whence does R. Judah know that there is a definite place prescribed for the front plate?³ He infers that from 'On his forehead'. Why should not R. Simeon infer it from the passage too?⁴ -Indeed he does. Then how does he interpret 'On the forehead [of Aaron] and he shall bear'?- He will tell you: [It means to say that] whatsoever is fit to rest 'on the forehead', can effect pardon, whatsoever is not fit to rest on the forehead cannot effect it. This excludes a broken plate, which, indeed, cannot effect a pardon. Whence now does R. Judah infer the law concerning a broken plate? — He derives it from the [fact that instead of] 'the forehead' the text has 'his forehead'.⁵ R. Simeon, however, does not attach any significance to [the words] 'the forehead', [and] 'his forehead'.⁶

Are the above Tannaim disputing the principle of the following Tannaim? For it has been taught: On both of them⁷ throughout the seven days they would sprinkle from all the sin-offerings⁸ that were there;⁹ these are the words of R. Meir. R. Jose said: They sprinkled him only on the third and seventh days. R. Hanina, the deputy high priest¹⁰ said: The priest that was to burn the red heifer they sprinkled on each of the seven days, but the high priest that was to officiate on the Day of Atonement was sprinkled only on the third and seventh day.¹¹ Is it not that their difference rests on this principle: R. Meir holds the law concerning ritual uncleanness to be only suspended in the case of community, whilst R. Jose considers it inoperative in that case.¹² But how can you understand the case of a community?¹³ If R. Jose holds that the law concerning ritual uncleanness is inoperative in case of a community, why is any sprinkling necessary? — Rather, you must assume that all agree that these Tannaim hold that law to be only suspended in case of a community and the point of issue here between them is this: R. Meir holds that we say that it is obligatory¹⁴ for the ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time,¹⁵ and R. Jose holds we do not say that it is obligatory for the ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time.¹⁵ But does R. Jose hold that we do not maintain that it is obligatory for the ritual immersion to take place in its proper time? Surely, it has been taught: One who has the name [of God] inscribed on his flesh must not bathe¹⁶ nor anoint himself nor stand at a place of filth. If he happens to have an obligatory ritual bath, he should place reed grass on that part and thus bathe.¹⁷ R. Jose says: He may go down to bathe as usual, provided he does not rub that part.¹⁸ And it is established that they are disputing the question as to whether it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to take place in its proper time; the first Tanna holding we do not say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time, and R. Jose affirming that we do say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper place.¹⁹ — Rather: Everybody agrees that those two Tannaim²⁰ both hold we do say that it is obligatory for a ritual immersion to be taken in its proper time, and their dispute above concerns the following principle: R. Meir is of the opinion that we compare²¹ the [law concerning] ‘sprinkling’ to [that concerning] the immersion²² and R. Jose holds we do not compare ‘sprinkling’ to immersion’. What about R. Hanina, the deputy high priest? If he compares ‘sprinkling’ to ‘immersion’, the high priest on the Day of Atonement too [should be sprinkled on every day]. And if he does not compare ‘sprinkling’ to ‘immersion’ the priest who burns the heifer [should] neither [be sprinkled on every day]? — In truth he does not make that comparison, the enactment²³ touching the priest who burns the heifer being a mere special stringency.²⁴

According to whose opinion is the following teaching: There is no difference between the priest who burns the heifer and the high priest on the Day of Atonement except

-
- (1) In the inscription ‘HOLY UNTO THE LORD’.
 - (2) In the four excerpts from the Torah, which they contain. Hence the obligation to touch tefillin all the time, as a reminder of the lessons they convey.
 - (3) Since he interprets ‘On the forehead and he shall bear’ as indicating interdependence of pardon and plate, whence does he know the place of the plate?— Perhaps it may be worn elsewhere too.
 - (4) The passage is simple and direct enough and untouched by the controversy.
 - (5) In the phrase ‘On his forehead continually’, R. Judah derives the law of the broken plate from the use of the possessive.
 - (6) There is nothing abnormal calling for special attention in the use of the possessive.
 - (7) V. supra p. 12 notes.
 - (8) With water from the ashes.
 - (9) Which remained from red heifers from the time of Moses until that period (Bertinoro). V. also Parah III, 5. From the ashes of every heifer some part was kept for future use.
 - (10) Segan. V. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 91, n. 1.
 - (11) Cf. Num. XIX, 19.
 - (12) Which shows that R. Jose and R. Meir differ on the same principle as R. Judah and R. Simeon.
 - (13) Lit., ‘Can you hold that opinion?’
 - (14) Mizwah may mean ‘commandment’, ‘good deed’, ‘ought’, ‘is obligatory’.
 - (15) [On the day prescribed by the law, and the same applies to the sprinkling which for the reason explained infra must take place every day.]
 - (16) Lest he blot out the name of God.
 - (17) Lest he blot out ‘the name of God.’
 - (18) V. Shab. 120b.
 - (19) From here it would appear that R. Jose held the ritual bath should be taken as soon as it is due.
 - (20) R. Meir and R. Jose.
 - (21) Lit., ‘analogy’, ‘comparison’, usually based on the close connection of two subjects in one and the same passage of the Torah. Arguments from Hekkesch are, in general, regarded as being more conclusive than those from Gezerah Shawah, the former not admitting of refutation. Both could be applied only for the purpose of supporting a traditional law. Mielziner, l.c.
 - (22) Cf. supra p. 12.
 - (23) That he be sprinkled on the third and fifth days.
 - (24) As to the stringency v. p. 10, n. 2, but even so the sprinkling was not indispensable on any definite day; all that was prohibited was too long an interval between the first and the second sprinkling (Rashi).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 8b

that the latter is removed for the purpose of sanctity,¹ and his fellow priests were permitted to touch him, whilst the former is removed for purposes of ritual and his colleagues forbidden to touch him. According to whom [is this teaching]? According to the opinion either of R. Meir or of R. Jose. For if it were in accord with the opinion of R. Hanina, deputy high priest, there would be one more point of difference.²

R. Jose, the son of R. Hanina demurred to this: It is quite right that we sprinkle him on the first day,³ because that may be the third of his impurity; similarly on the second, because that may be the third day of his impurity; on the third, because that may be the third day of his impurity; on the fifth, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity; on the sixth, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity; on the seventh, because that may be the seventh day of his impurity. But on the fourth day why should there be any sprinkling at all? That day could not be in doubt as being either the third day⁴ or the seventh day⁵ of his impurity? — But, according to your own point of view, how can there be sprinkling throughout the seven days? For have we not an established rule that the sprinkling is forbidden as shebuth⁶ and as such cannot override the Sabbath?⁷ — But you must then needs say: ‘Seven days with the exception of the Sabbath’, similarly here, ‘Seven⁸ with the exception of the fourth day.’ Rabah said: For that reason since the matter of the high priest on the Day of Atonement does not depend on us but on the fixing of the calendar,⁹ he ought to be separated on the third of Tishri, and on whatever day the third of Tishri falls, we would remove him; but as to the priest who burns the heifer, since the matter depends on us,¹⁰ we should remove him on the fourth of the week, so that his fourth day would fall on the Sabbath.

TO THE CELL OF THE COUNSELLORS etc. R. Judah said, Was it the ‘cell of the parhedrin [counsellors], was it not rather the ‘cell of the buleute¹¹ [senators]’? Originally, indeed, it was called the ‘cell of the buleute’ but because money¹² was being paid¹³ for the purpose of obtaining the position of high priest and the [high priests] were changed every twelve¹⁴ months, like those counsellors, who are changed every twelve months,¹⁵ therefore it came to be called ‘the cell of the counsellors’.

We learnt elsewhere: upon the bakers¹⁶ the Sages imposed only the duty of setting apart¹⁷ enough for the heave-offering of tithes¹⁸ and hallah.¹⁹ Now, it is quite right [that they did not impose] the great heave-offering, because it has been taught:

(1) As the high priest was about to enter the sanctuary, he was removed from all, in order that he may, in solitude, take upon himself the holiness of the day, shed all pride of office and concentrate on his great responsibility viz., to obtain forgiveness of sin for Israel. As for the priest of the heifer, v. p. 2, n. 2.

(2) For according to R. Hanina, there is this additional difference that the high priest is sprinkled on the third and seventh day only, whereas the priest who is to burn the heifer is sprinkled on each of the seven days.

(3) Of the priest's separation, Num. XIX, 19: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean person on the third day, and on the seventh day; and on the seventh day shall he purify him. Ibid. 12: But if he purify himself not on the third day and on the seventh day, he shall not be clean.

(4) For, since he became separated he did not touch a corpse.

(5) For if the fourth day of his separation were the seventh day of his impurity, then the day before his separation would needs have been the third day of his impurity, and not having been sprinkled on that day, he could not be sprinkled on the seventh day of his impurity (the fourth day of his separation) for a first sprinkling on the third day of the impurity is indispensable for the second sprinkling on the seventh day.

(6) Lit., ‘rest’, work forbidden by the Rabbis on the Sabbath and festivals as being out of spirit with the ceremony of the day.

(7) I.e., the prohibition of work on the Sabbath. Pes. 65a.

(8) ‘Seven’ must be understood to mean exceptis excipiendis, with the exception of those days on which the sprinkling is not lawful or not necessary.

(9) Lit., ‘month’. His entering the sanctuary on the Day of Atonement on the tenth of Tishri depends only on the fixing of the new moon by the Sanhedrin (Cf. Sanh. 2a), from which the tenth would be counted.

(10) There is no definite time prescribed for the burning of the red heifer.

(11) [, the members of the , the administrative body of the city of Jerusalem. V. Buchler, Synedrion p. 232.]

(12) To the Hasmonean kings and their satellites.

(13) [So Rashi cur. ed. (lit.) 'they gave money for it' etc. The phrase 'for it' (לִּי) is obscure.]

(14) This is not to be taken literally. On an average, as the Talmud tells later on, these high priests lasted twelve months, no longer. [MS.M. reads: 'They were changed by Heaven'. I.e., they did not survive the twelve months. Others: 'They were removed by the king when a higher price was offered him for the priesthood.' Rashi reads: 'They changed it,' 'it' referring to the chamber. Each new priest on his accession would set up a new chamber for himself.]

(15) Rashi: The king removed his counsellors annually.

(16) Bakers who were 'Fellows' of the pharisaic order. As such they had to undertake scrupulous observance especially of the laws of levitical purity. The haberim (fellows) were distinguished from the great mass of the 'ame ha-arez, the untrained multitude, who were suspects as to levitical purity and also as to the payment of tithe. V. infra.

(17) From the doubtfully tithed fruit which they had brought of the 'amme ha-aretz.

(18) Terumath Ma'aser. V. Glos. s.v. terumah. Terumah Gedolah. V. Glos. s.v. terumah.

(19) The priest's share of the dough. V. Demai II, 4.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 9a

Because he¹ sent into all the districts of Israel and he found that they² were separating only the great heave-offering;³ [it is also right that the Sages did not impose upon these bakers] the first tithe and the poor man's tithe,⁴ because [of the principle that] the claimant must produce evidence;⁵ but the second tithe, let then [the baker] separate, take it up to Jerusalem and eat it there! 'Ulla said: Because these parhedrin⁶ were beating them all the twelve months⁷ and telling them 'sell cheap, sell cheap,' the Sages did not burden them [to set apart the second tithe and take it up to Jerusalem].⁸ What does parhedrin mean? — Porase [managers].⁹ Rabbah b. Bar Hana said: What is the meaning of the passage, The fear of the Lord prolongeth days,' but the years of the wicked shall be shortened?¹⁰ 'The fear of the Lord prolongeth days' refers to the first Sanctuary, which remained standing for four hundred and ten years and in which there served only eighteen¹¹ high priests. 'But the years of the wicked shall be shortened'¹⁰ refers to the second Sanctuary, which abided for four hundred and twenty years and at which more than three hundred [high] priests served. Take off therefrom the forty years which Simeon the Righteous served,¹² eighty years which Johanan the high priest served,¹³ ten, which Ishmael b. Fabi¹⁴ served, or, as some say, the eleven years of R. Eleazar b. Harsum.¹⁵ Count [the number of high priests] from then on and you will find that none of them completed his year [in office].¹⁶ R. Johanan b. Torta¹⁷ said: Why was Shiloh¹⁸ destroyed? Because of two [evil] things that prevailed there, immorality and contemptuous treatment of sanctified objects. [Proof that] immorality prevailed because it is written, Now Eli was very old, and he heard all that his sons did unto Israel, and how that they lay with the women that did service at the door of the tent of meeting. Notwithstanding R. Samuel b. Nahmani who said in the name of R. Johanan: Whosoever says, The sons of Eli sinned¹⁹ is but mistaken; it is

(1) Johanan, the high priest.

(2) The great mass of the people, exclusive of the Haberim. V. Glos. s.v. haber.

(3) V. Sot. 48a.

(4) The first tithe belonged to the Levite and was due annually; the second tithe was to be consumed by the owner in Jerusalem, annually; the third tithe was due every third year—it was the poor man's tithe.

(5) The heave-offering of the tithe, like the terumah (v. Glos.) itself, was, on penalty of death through divine action, forbidden to be eaten by a non-priest. With regard to the poor man's tithe, the baker could say: If you want to assert legal claim thereto, you will have to prove that the 'am ha-arez, from whom I bought it, has failed to give tithe thereof before he sold it to me. Unless such proof was forthcoming, there was no legal claim on the part of the Levite on the non-Levite poor to its possession.

(6) Paredroi-assessors, counsellors. The Mishnah J. reads paledroi. The Tosef. paredroi. These assessors had a bad reputation from their oppressive measures at the market places, over which, as commissioners, they had jurisdiction. So that, apart from the fact that the high priests, during the second Temple, were changed as often as these officials, the fact that they were dubbed paredroi indicates that there must have been more than one point of contact between these officials and the priests.

(7) Usually their office was of twelve months' duration. As the next line shows, these officials made full use of their twelve months' opportunity for abuse of power.

(8) The Sages preferred to give the baker haberim the benefit of the doubt that the 'amme ha-arez, as a rule, do give the tithe.

(9) Cf. ", supervisor, purser, collector, which is logical rather than etymological.

(10) Prov. X, 27.

(11) [Var. lec., eight priests. Cf. I Chron. V, 36ff. Jehozadak who was taken to exile not being counted. V. Tosaf. s.v. סז] and Rashi I Chron. V, 36.]

(12) Simeon the Just, High Priest Simon I, c. 300 b.c.e. ' v. Aboth, Sonc. ed., p. 2.

(13) John Hyrcanus, the Hasmonean high priest (Jastrow). V. Ber. He succeeded Simeon the Righteous as high priest (Bertinoro, Ma'as. Sh., 5, end). After eighty years serving as high priest he became a Sadducee (Ber. 29a). That makes it difficult to identify him with John Hyrcanus.

(14) V. Tosef. cf. Yoma 1. [High priest in the days of Agrippa II. He is not to be confused with the high priest of the same name who is reported by Josephus (Wars VI 2, 2) to have been executed in Cyrene after the destruction of the Temple. V. Buchler. op. cit. p. 98.]

(15) V. ibid. I. The Tosef. reads Harsoth. In Yoma 35b he is described as a model rich man who forsook his financial interests to devote himself to the Torah.

(16) Bah, in his marginal notes, inserts on the basis of text on parallel passages the following interpolation here: R, Johanan b. Torta said: 'And why all that? Because they bought the priestly office for money, for R. Assi reported that Martha, the daughter of Boethus, brought King Jannai two kabful of denars to nominate Joshua b. Gamala as one of the high priests. And R. Johanan b. Torta said (further). The same statement is made, infra 18a, in the name of R. Assi.

(17) An interesting account of Torta is given in the Pesik. Rab. XIV: (tortah being taken as the feminine of tora, hence cow. It occurs in this form in the Targum Num. XIX, 2.) He said: If a cow that has no speech and no mind, recognized her Creator, should I, whom my Maker created in His image, not go and acknowledge Him. He became a Jew, studied, grew efficient in the Torah and they named him Johanan b. Torta.

(18) The seat of the Tabernacle after the conquest.

(19) As the text indicates. The same apologetics are elsewhere used to defend Reuben, the sons of Samuel, David, Solomon. (Shab. 55b).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 9b

because they delayed offering up their sacrificial¹ birds Scripture accounts it to them as if they had lain with them. The [sacred] offerings were treated contemptuously, as it is written,² Yea, before the fat was made to smoke, the priest's servant came and said to the man that sacrificed: 'Give flesh to roast for the priest,' for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.' And if the man said unto him: 'Let the fat be made to smoke first of all, and then take as much as thy soul desireth': then he would say: 'Nay, but thou shalt give it me now, and if not, I will take it by force. 'And the sin of the young men was very great before the Lord, — for the men dealt contemptuously with the offering of the Lord.

Why was the first Sanctuary destroyed? Because of three [evil] things which prevailed there: idolatry, immorality, bloodshed. Idolatry, as it is written: For the bed is too short for a man to stretch himself and the covering too narrow when he gathereth himself up.³ What is the meaning of 'For the bed is too short for a man to stretch himself'? R. Jonathan said: It is: This bed⁴ is too short for two neighbours to stretch themselves. And [what is the meaning of] 'the covering too narrow when he gathereth himself up'? — R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: When R. Jonathan [in his reading] came to this passage, he would cry and say: To Him, concerning Whom it is written, He gathereth the waters of the sea together like a heap,⁵ the cover became too narrow! Immorality [prevailed] as it is written: Moreover the Lord said: Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and make a tinkling with their feet.⁶ 'Because the daughters of Zion are haughty', i.e., they used to walk with proud carriage. 'And wanton eyes' i.e., they filled their eyes with kohl.⁷ 'Walking and mincing as they go', i.e. , they used to walk with the heel touching the toe. 'And make a tinkling with their feet', R. Isaac said: They would take myrrh and balsam and place it in their shoes⁸ and when they came near the young men of Israel they would kick, causing the balsam to squirt at them and would thus cause the evil desire to enter them like an adder's poison.

Bloodshed [prevailed] as it is written: Moreover Manaseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another.⁹ They were wicked, but they placed their trust in the Holy One, blessed be He.¹⁰ For it is written, The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money; yet will they lean upon the Lord and say 'Is not the Lord in the midst of us? No evil shall come upon us'.¹¹ Therefore the Holy One, blessed be He, brought them three evil decrees as against the three evils which were their own:¹² Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest. But why was the second Sanctuary destroyed, seeing that in its time they were occupying themselves with Torah, [observance of] precepts, and the practice of charity? Because therein prevailed hatred without cause. That teaches you that groundless hatred is considered as of even gravity with the three sins of idolatry, immorality, and bloodshed together . And [during the time of] the first Sanctuary did no groundless hatred prevail? Surely it is written: They are thrust down to the sword with my people; smite therefore upon my thigh,¹³ and R. Eleazar said: This refers to people who eat and drink together and then thrust each other through with the daggers of their tongue! — That [passage] speaks of the princes in Israel, for it is written , Cry and wail, son of man; for it is upon my people,¹³ etc. [The text reads] 'Cry and wail, son of man'. One might have assumed [it is upon] all [Israel], therefore it goes on, Upon all the princes of Israel.

R. Johanan and R. Eleazar both say: The former ones whose iniquity was revealed¹⁴ had their end¹⁵ revealed, the latter ones whose iniquity was not revealed have their end still unrevealed.

R. Johanan said: The fingernail of the earlier generations¹⁶ is better than the whole¹⁷ body of the later generations. Said Resh Lakish to him: On the contrary, the latter generations are better,¹⁸ although they are oppressed by the governments, they are occupying themselves with the Torah .- He [R. Johanan] replied: The Sanctuary will prove [my point] for it came back to the former generations, but not to the latter ones.

The question was put to R. Eleazar: Were the earlier generations better, or the later ones? — He answered: Look upon the Sanctuary! Some say he answered: The Sanctuary is your witness [in this matter].¹⁹

Resh Lakish was swimming in the Jordan. Thereupon Rabbah b. Bar Hana came and gave him the hand:²⁰ Said [Resh Lakish] to him: By God! I hate you. For it is written: If she be a wall, we will build upon her a turret of silver; if she be a door, we will enclose her with boards of cedar.²¹ Had you made yourself like a wall and had all come up in the days of Ezra, you would have been compared to silver, which no rottenness can ever affect. Now that you have come up like doors,²² you are like cedarwood, which rottenness prevails over. What is erez ['cedar']?- 'Ulla said: It is sasmagor.²³ What is 'sasmagor'?-R. Abba says it is the divine²⁴ voice as it has been taught: After the later prophets Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi had died, the Holy Spirit²⁵ departed from Israel, but they still availed themselves of the Bath Kol.²⁶ — But did Resh Lakish talk with Rabbah b. Bar Hana?²⁷ Even with R. Eleazar, who was the master of the land of Israel, Resh Lakish did not converse²⁸ [for anyone with whom Resh Lakish conversed in the street could get merchandise without witnesses]²⁹ would he engage in conversation with Rabbah b. Bar Hana?-R. Papa said: 'Throw a man between them'.³⁰ It was either Resh Lakish and Ze'iri or Rabbah b. Bar Hana and R. Eleazar.³¹ When he [Resh Lakish] came before R. Johanan , he said to him: This is not the reason.³² Even if they had all come up in the time of Ezra, the Divine Presence would not have rested over the second Sanctuary, for it is written:³³ God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the tents of Shem, [that means],

-
- (1) Lev. XII, 8.
 - (2) I Sam. li, 15-17.
 - (3) Isa. XXVIII, 20.
 - (4) Manasseh the faithless king, introduced idols into the very Sanctuary. There was no room for the God of Israel, together with an idol, in his one Sanctuary.
 - (5) Ps. XXXIII, 7. The ad hoc exposition here is either: 'On his cover (the idol) became His rival,' or 'The cover itself, used for idolatrous purposes, thus became His rival,' the cover here standing for the Sanctuary.
 - (6) Isa. III, 16.
 - (7) A powder used for painting the eyelids, stibium (Jastrow).
 - (8) Bah interpolates here: and walking around in the streets of Jerusalem and when they came near etc., v. D.S.
 - (9) II Kings XXI, 16.
 - (10) The text as it stands is in need of correction. The present rearrangement based on text in parallel passages (v. D.S.) is adopted by Bah. [Cur. edd. insert: 'This refers to the first Sanctuary'. This, on the rearrangement of the text adopted (v. n. 5), is evidently superfluous. V. D.S.]
 - (11) Micah III, 11.
 - (12) Ibid. 12.
 - (13) Ezek. XXI, 17.
 - (14) 'Who did not hide their misdeeds' (Rashi).
 - (15) I.e., the end of their captivity. Jer. XXIX, 10: For thus saith the Lord: After seventy years are accomplished in Babylon, I will remember you and perform My good word to you, in causing you to return to this place.
 - (16) The earlier generations are, of course, those of the first Temple, the later ones Israel since the second destruction.
 - (17) Lit. , 'the belly'.
 - (18) Or 'better off'. There is a slight shift in the argument. R. Johanan had referred to their value, Resh Lakish to their political and moral condition.
 - (19) It came back to them after the first destruction, it has not come back to us as yet. There is only a slight difference in Hebrew between the two versions עיניכם and עידיכם.
 - (20) [To help Resh Lakish out of the water. V. D.S. a.l. n. 100.]
 - (21) Cant. VIII, 9.
 - (22) A wall is of one piece, a door, a gate at least of two. Had Israel come from Babylon, not in parts, but at once, Jewry in Palestine may have been found worthy of a restoration of the Sanctuary.
 - (23) Perhaps a comp. of sass and magor-magerah i.e. , a sawing worm. Bah reads: The worm destroys and saws it off from within.
 - (24) Bath Kol (v. Glos.). Just as some part of the cedar is unaffected by the worm, surviving the ruin, so was the gift of the divine voice a remnant of God's grace, even after the destruction. V., however, Cant. Rab. VIII, 11
 - (25) Of prophecy.
 - (26) V. Sot. 48b.
 - (27) [In the street, v. infra.]
 - (28) Tosaf. a.I. suggests that he would not address R. Eleazar, but would, of course, offer him the courtesy of a reply, when addressed by him; an example is cited from Zeb. 5a.
 - (29) One would trust the honesty of a man whom Resh Lakish honoured by engaging him in public conversation.
 - (30) Change the account by substituting one other man for one of the persons mentioned in the original account.
 - (31) 'If Resh Lakish was the swimmer, make Ze'iri the other man; or Rabbah b. Bar Hana offered the hand and R. Eleazar was the swimmer' (Rashi). [Aliter: Or Rabbah b. Bar Hana (who was a Palestinian) was the swimmer, and R. Eleazar (who was a Babylonian) offered the hand, v. Hyman, Toledoth, p.3 1076.]
 - (32) Your complaint was unjustified.
 - (33) Gen. IX, 27.

although God has enlarged Japheth,¹ the Divine Presence rests only in the tents of Shem.² Whence do we know that the Persians are derived from Japheth? — Because It is written: The sons of Japheth: Gomer, and Magog, and Madai and Javan, and Tubal, and Meshek, and Tiras.³ ‘Gomer’, i.e. Germania;⁴ ‘Magog’, i.e. Kandia;⁵ ‘Madai’, i.e. Macedonia; ‘Javan’,⁶ in its literal sense; ‘Tubal’, i.e. Beth-Unyaki;⁷ ‘Meshek’, i.e. Mysia;⁸ ‘Tiras’ — its identification is a matter of dispute between R. Simai and the Rabbis, or, according to another report, between R. Simon and the Rabbis, one holding that it is to be identified with Beth Tiryaka,⁹ and the other [authorities] declaring it is Persia. R. Joseph learnt: ‘Tiras’ is Persia, Sabtah and Raamah, and Sabteca.¹⁰ R. Joseph learnt: I.e. the inner Sakistan and the outer Sakistan.¹¹ Between the two there is [a distance] of one hundred parasangs and its circumference one thousand parasangs.¹² And the beginning of his kingdom was Babel and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh in the land of Shinar.¹³ ‘Babel’ in its usual sense; ‘Erech’ ‘i.e. Urikath;¹⁴ ‘Accad’, i.e. Baskar;¹⁵ ‘Calneh’, i.e. Nupar —¹⁶ Ninpi. Out of that land went Ashur.¹⁷ R. Joseph learnt: ‘Ashur’, i.e. Silok.¹⁸ And builded Nineveh and Rehoboth-ir, and Calah.¹⁹ ‘Nineveh in its usual sense; ‘Rehoboth-ir’, i.e. Perath of Meshan.²⁰ ‘Calah’ i.e., Perath de Borsif.²¹ And Resen between Nineveh and Calah — the same is the great city.²² ‘Resen’, i.e., Ctesiphon.²³ ‘The same is the great city’. [From here] I do not know yet whether by ‘the great city’ Nineveh or Resen is meant. But, as Scripture says, Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city unto God, of three days’ journey,²⁴ say that by ‘the great city’ Nineveh is meant.

An²⁵ Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmai the children of Anak, were there.²⁶ A Tanna taught: ‘Ahiman’, i.e., the most skilful²⁷ of the brethren; ‘Sheshai’,²⁸ i.e., he made the ground [he stepped on] like pits; ‘Talmai’, i.e., he made the ground full of ridges. Another comment:²⁹ Ahiman built Anath, Sheshai built Alush; Talmai built Talbush.³⁰ [They were called] ‘the children of Anak’, because they lorded it over the sun by reason of their height.³¹

R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of Rabbi said: Rome is designed to fall into the hand of Persia, as it was said: Therefore hear ye the counsel of the Lord, that He hath taken against Edom; and His purposes that He hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman: surely the least of the flock shall drag them away, surely their habitation shall be appalled to them.³² Rabbah b. ‘Ullah demurred to this: What intimation is there that ‘the last of the flock’ refers to Persia? [Presumably] because Scripture reads: The ram which thou sawest having two horns, they are the kings of Media and Persia.³³ But say [perhaps] it is Greece, for it is written, And the rough he-goat is the king of Greece?³⁴ — When R. Habiba b. Surmaki came up,³⁵ he reported this interpretation before a certain scholar. The latter said: One who does not understand the meaning of the passage asks a question against Rabbi. What does, indeed, ‘the least of the flock’ mean? The youngest of his brethren, for R. Joseph learnt that Tiras is Persia.³⁶

Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan, on the authority of R. Judah b. Ila'i, said: Rome is designed to fall into the hands of Persia, that may be concluded by inference a minori ad majus: If in the case of the first Sanctuary, which the sons of Shem [Solomon] built and the Chaldeans destroyed, the Chaldeans fell into the hands of the Persians,³⁷ then how much more should this be so with the second Sanctuary, which the Persians built and the Romans destroyed, that the Romans should fall into the hands of the Persians.³⁸ Rab said: Persia will fall into the hands of Rome. Thereupon R. Kahana and R. Assi asked of Rab: [Shall] the builders fall into the hands of the destroyers? — He said to them: Yes, it is the decree of the King.³⁹ Others say: He replied to them: They too are guilty for they destroyed the synagogues. It has also been taught in accord with the above, Persia will fall into the hands of Rome, first because they destroyed the synagogues, and then because it is the King's decree that the builders fall into the hands of the destroyers. Rab also said: The son of David will not come until the wicked kingdom of Rome will have spread [its sway] over the whole world for nine months, as it is said: Therefore will He give them up, until the time that she who travaileth hath brought forth; then the residue of his brethren shall return with the children of Israel.⁴⁰

Our Rabbis taught: All the cells in the Sanctuary were without a mezuzah⁴¹ with the exception of the cell of the counsellors, for therein there was a residence for the high priest. R. Judah said: Were there not a number of cells in the Sanctuary which had a compartment for a dwelling, yet had no mezuzah? Rather, the [reason for the] mezuzah on the cell of the counsellors was due to a preventive measure, What was the reason for R. Judah's statement? — Rabbah said, R. Judah is of the opinion, any house which is not made to serve both as a summer-home and a winter-home, is not a house.⁴² Abaye raised an objection: But it is written: And I will smite the winter-house with the summer-house!⁴³ — He answered: They are called summer-house or winter-house, but not by the general name house. Abaye raised the following objection: ‘The sukkah⁴⁴ used at the Feast [of Tabernacles] according to R. Judah renders [the fruit brought during the Feast] liable to tithe, whereas the Sages exempt it [from such duty]’;⁴⁵ and it has been learnt in connection with it: R. Judah considers [a sukkah] liable to ‘erub,⁴⁶ a mezuzah to tithe.⁴⁷ And if you should say he considers it liable to these duties only on rabbinic enactment, that could apply to ‘erub and mezuzah, but as regards tithe, can one say that it is but a rabbinic enactment, [should we not fear]

(1) Japheth here stands for Persia, as the following account endeavours to show.

(2) [I.e. , the Divine Presence rests only in the Temple built by Solomon, a descendant of Shem and not in that built by the Persians, the descendants of Japheth.]

(3) Gen. X, 2.

(4) Germania, the land of the Cimmerii. [Rieger, P. (MGWJ, 1936 p. 455) identifies it with the modern Kerman in South Persia.]

(5) Usually identified with Crete. [J. Meg. I, 11 reads: Gothia, the land of the Goths.]

(6) [J.T.loc. cit. reads, ‘Madai in its literal sense, Javan is Ephesus’. Golds. accordingly reads Madai in its literal sense, Javan is Macedonia.]

(7) Bithynia in Asia Minor.

(8) Mysia, a district in Asia Minor.

(9) Thrace.

(10) Gen. X,7.

(11) Drangania, a district in Persia (Jast.). [Golds. Scythia.]

(12) Rashi: They are a district surrounded by mountains. The outer S. includes the inner S., the inner which is one hundred parasangs’ distance from the outer, while the circumference of the outer one is one thousand parasangs.

(13) Gen.X, 10.

(14) Warka, S.E. of Babylon (Jast.).

(15) Jast. reads כשכר Cashkar, Cascara in Babylonia (v. Payne-Smith 1843).

(16) Ass. Nippur, modern Niffer. [Ninpi was probably an additional name by which Nippur was known and which is probably derived from the planet-god Ninib, Obermeyer p. 336.]

(17) Gen. X, 11.

(18) In Keth. 10b the reading is סליקא Selucia, on the border of Babylonia and Assyria.

(19) Gen. X, 11 .

(20) Perath, according to Jastrow seems to be the general name of certain districts, thus in connection with Meshan, Messene, the island formed by the Euphrates, the Tigris and the royal canal. Berliner, Beitr. z. Geogr. 44.

(21) A city near the site of Babel, Borsippa.

(22) Gen. X,12.

(23) A town on the eastern bank of the Tigris.

(24) Jonah III, 3.

(25) The Talmud continues with aggadic interpretation of other names.

(26) Num. XIII, 22.

(27) Root מן (denominative of מן ‘right’). ‘To endow with skill’, ‘distinguish’.

(28) According to Rashi the name is to be connected with the root meaning ‘desolation’, Lam. III, 47.

(29) Rashi omits, ‘Another comment’, and just adds the information as to the building activity of the giant en passant.

(30) [Identified by Obermeyer with ‘Anah, Alusa and Telbeth, three fortified island-towns on the Northern Euphrates.]

(31) So Jast. Rashi: "With their height reaching up to the sun it surrounded their neck as a necklace does the neck.

- (32) Jer. XLIX, 20.
 (33) Dan. VIII, 20.
 (34) Dan. VIII, 21.
 (35) From Babylon to Palestine.
 (36) Tiras is mentioned last in Gen. X, 2, hence the 'youngest of the brethren'.
 (37) The destroyers fell into the hands of their enemies. Belshazzar into the hands of Darius (Rashi).
 (38) It seems logical that the destroyers fall into the hands of the builders.
 (39) The Supreme King of Kings.
 (40) Micah V, 2, interpreting the verse that the duration of the people's abandonment will be 'until the time etc.', i.e. nine months, the period of pregnancy.
 (41) The inscription of Deut. VI, 4-9, XI, 13-21 on a slip of parchment.
 (42) Only a 'house' (cf. Deut. VI, 9) requires a mezuzah, not a temporary residence.
 (43) Amos III, 15.
 (44) The booth covered with twigs for the seven days of Sukkoth (Tabernacles). Lev. XXIII, 33-44.
 (45) V. Ma'as. VII, 3. The liability to tithes begins only from the moment the produce is brought into the house, v. Ma'as. I, 3 and the point at issue between R. Judah and the Sages is whether a sukkah is considered a house in what concerns tithes.
 (46) For the purpose of regulating Sabbath limits of movement a legal community or continuity is symbolically established for the inhabitants of a city, a court etc. If the sukkah opens out into a court in which there are other dwellings too, the inhabitants of all these dwellings will contribute their share towards a dish to be deposited in one of the dwellings, by which act the dwellings are considered as common to all, and the carrying of objects across the court and from one dwelling to another will be permitted.
 (47) Only a house needs 'erub and mezuzah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 10b

that he may come to set aside tithe from where it is obligatory for where it is exempt and from where it is exempt for where it is obligatory?¹ -Rather, said Abaye, there is no dispute concerning the seven days [of the separation], all agreeing that [the cell] is liable [to have a mezuzah];² what the dispute is concerned with is the other days of the year; the Rabbis would institute it as a precautionary measure on account of the seven days, whilst R. Judah does not see the need for such a measure. Raba said to him: But the teaching [of the Mishnah]³ reads, 'The sukkah of the Feast during the Feast'! Therefore says Raba: On all other days of the year they all agree that there is no obligation [for a mezuzah at the sukkah and cell], the dispute touches only the seven days, and there is a special ground in the case of the sukkah and there is a special reason in the case of the cell. There is a special reason in the case of the sukkah: R. Judah, holding in accordance with his own principle, that the sukkah must have the character of a permanent residence, hence considers [the sukkah] is liable to a mezuzah, whilst the Rabbis, following their own principle, hold that the sukkah must have the character of an incidental residence, and hence requires no mezuzah. There is also a special reason for the dispute in the case of the cell [of the counsellors]; the Rabbis hold that a dwelling not freely chosen is called a dwelling whilst R. Judah is of the opinion that such dwelling is not included in the term dwelling; only rabbinically it was arranged that a mezuzah be affixed at the cell lest the people say the high priest is being kept in prison.⁴

Who has taught the following which our Rabbis have taught:

-
- (1) He might take off the tithe from something that is liable to tithe only by rabbinic enactment for some other heap (of produce), which is liable by the law of the Torah, and vice versa, thus invalidating the former and the latter.
 (2) Even as at the sukkah.
 (3) V. supra p. 45, n. 5. And yet it is said: 'The Sages exempt it from tithe', hence even during the seven days, according to one view, there would be exemption from the duty.
 (4) Since only a dwelling not freely chosen does not need a mezuzah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 11a

All the gates that were there¹ had no mezuzah, with the exception of the gate of Nicanor,² within which the cell of the counsellors was situated. Apparently this teaching is in agreement with the Rabbis³ and not with R. Judah. For, if it were to be R. Judah's opinion [surely] he holds that [the mezuzah at the cell] itself is only a rabbinical enactment, shall we enact a preventive measure⁴ to guard another preventive measure?⁵ — You might even say it is in accord with R. Judah. [They are not two separate enactments, rather] the whole is but one measure.⁶

Our Rabbis taught: And upon thy gates:⁷ alike upon the gates of houses, upon the gates of courts, upon the gates of provinces, upon the gates of cities rests the dutiful obligation⁸ to the Omnipresent, as it is said, 'Upon the doorposts of thy house and upon thy gates'. Said Abaye to R. Safra: Why did the Rabbis not affix a mezuzah on the city gateways of Mahoza?⁹ — He answered: They serve only as supports for the Fort of Turrets [of that city].¹⁰ But the Fort of Turrets itself should have a mezuzah, for it contains a residence-compartment for the keeper of the prison! For it has been taught: A synagogue, which contains a dwelling-place for the synagogue attendant¹¹ must have a mezuzah! Rather, said Abaye, it¹² is due to a fear of danger.¹³ For it has been taught: The mezuzah of an individual's [house] should be examined¹⁴ twice every seven years, and of public buildings twice every fifty years. It happened to an Artaban¹⁵ who was examining mezuzoth in the upper market of Sepphoris¹⁶ that a quaestor found him and took from him a thousand zuz.¹⁷ But R. Eleazar said: Messengers engaged in a mizwah do not come to harm? — Where danger is to be expected, it is different, for it is written: And Samuel said: How can I go? If Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the Lord said: Take a heifer with thee, and say: I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord.¹⁸ R. Kahana recited before Rab Judah: The straw-magazine, the stable, the wood-shed, and the store-house are exempt from the mezuzah, because the women make use of them.¹⁹ What does 'they make use [of them]' mean? — They bathe [therein].²⁰ Rab Judah said to him: The reason for the exemption is that they bathe [therein], but [had they been restricted to their] ordinary use, these places are liable to a mezuzah. But has it not been taught that an ox-stable is exempt from a mezuzah? Rather we must say that 'they make use [of them]' means they adorn themselves therein and this is what it teaches: Although the women adorn themselves therein, they are exempt from mezuzah.²¹ Said R. Kahana to him: But are the [places] wherein women adorn themselves exempt [from a mezuzah]? Surely it has been taught: An ox-stable is exempt from mezuzah, and [places] where women adorn themselves are liable to a mezuzah — What then remains now for you to say [is that] the case of [dwellings] wherein women adorn themselves is being disputed by Tannaim,²² and so on my view too²³ concerning these places [when limited to their] ordinary use, there is a dispute of Tannaim — For it has been taught: 'Thy house'²⁴ means 'a house appointed for thee', thus excluding the straw-magazine, the ox-stable, the wood-shed, and the store-house which are exempt from the mezuzah. Some however declare them liable [to have a mezuzah]. In truth, they said, the privy, the tannery, the bathhouse, the house for ritual immersion are exempt from a mezuzah. Now R. Kahana explains [this teaching] according to his view, and Rab Judah explains it according to his view. 'R. Kahana explains it according to his view' thus: 'Thy house' means 'the house appointed for thee', thus excluding a straw-magazine, ox-stable, woodshed and store-house which are exempt from a mezuzah. Some however declare them liable. In truth, they said, the privy, the tannery, the bath-house, the house for ritual immersion and the rooms which the women make use of to adorn themselves are exempt from the mezuzah. But if this is so, it is the same as merhaz? — We are informed about public and about private bath-houses. For the thought may have occurred that only public bath-houses are exempt because they are full of uncleanness, but private bathhouses, where there is less thereof, are liable to a mezuzah, therefore he lets us know [that even private bath-houses are exempt]. 'Rab Judah explains it in accord with his view': This is how it is taught: 'Thy house' means 'a house appointed for thee', that excludes the straw-magazine, ox-stable, wood-shed, and store-house as exempt from mezuzah, even though women adorn themselves [therein].²⁵ Some consider houses wherein the women adorn themselves obliged to have a mezuzah. But [when restricted to their] ordinary use, all agree that they are exempt. In truth they said: The privy, the tannery, the private or public bathhouse, even though the women adorn themselves therein, are exempt from mezuzah, because they contain a great deal of uncleanness. But would, according to Rab Judah, all agree that [these places when restricted to their] ordinary use are exempt? Surely it has been taught: ‘In your gates’,²⁶ that implies alike the gates of houses, of courts, of provinces, of cities, cattle-sheds, hen-roosts, shed for straw, store-house for wine, store-house for oil — they all are liable to a mezuzah — One might assume this includes also

-
- (1) All the gates in the eastern part of the Temple Court.
 - (2) Nicanor imported Corinthian bronze doors for the Temple gate called after him.
 - (3) I.e., the opponents of R. Judah in the Baraitha supra 10a.
 - (4) Making the Nicanor Gate liable to a mezuzah.
 - (5) V. Bez. 2b.
 - (6) Result of one enactment.
 - (7) Deut. VI, 9.
 - (8) Of affixing a mezuzah.
 - (9) A large Jewish trading town on the Tigris.
 - (10) [So Jast. Obermeyer p. 168: The fort of Be Koke, a fortress adjoining Mahoza.]
 - (11) Hazzan, v. Ta'an., Sonc. ed., p. 77, n. 2.
 - (12) The absence of a mezuzah at the Fort of Turrets.
 - (13) Rashi: Lest the king say: You are engaging in some witchcraft at the gate of my city. Perhaps because in examining the mezuzah from time to time one may find such an unpleasant quaestor as the Artaban did.
 - (14) It may have deteriorated by rotting or through worms, or it may have been stolen.
 - (15) A corruption or Judaization of ‘tribune’.
 - (16) In Upper Galilee.
 - (17) A silver coin, one fourth of a shekel, one denar.
 - (18) I Sam. XVI, 2.
 - (19) Lit., ‘are deriving benefit therein’.
 - (20) In the nude, hence it would be disrespectful to affix a mezuzah.
 - (21) [Rab Judah does not correct the Baraitha in stating that these places are exempt because the women make use of them. The Baraitha, in his view, means that although they make use of them, since, however, it is only for the purpose of adorning themselves and not as permanent dwellings, these places are exempt. Tosaf. s.v. פס]
 - (22) Whether they are liable to a mezuzah.
 - (23) Explaining the phrase as meaning ‘they bathe’.
 - (24) Deut. VI, 9.
 - (25) And which therefore might be considered dwellings.
 - (26) Deut. VI, 9.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 11b

the porter's lodge,¹ a veranda² and a balcony, therefore the text reads, ‘house’ — [meaning] just as ‘house’ means a building appointed for a dwelling it thus excludes all other buildings not appointed for a dwelling. One might have wanted to include also the privy, the tannery, the bath-house and the house for ritual immersion, therefore the text says, ‘house’: just as a ‘house is made for dignity, so only all such are implied, which also are made for dignity, to the exclusion of these, which are not made for dignity. One might have wanted to include the mountain of the Sanctuary,³ the cells and the courts.⁴ Therefore the text says ‘house’: just as a ‘house’ is for common use so are only such [houses] as are for common use [liable] to a mezuzah — to the exclusion of these which are sacred!⁵ This is a refutation.

R. Samuel son of Rab Judah recited before Raba: Six gates are exempt from the mezuzah.- [the gates of] the straw-shed, the stable, the wood-house, the store-house, the Median⁶ gate, a gate without beams and a gate that is not ten handbreadths high. He [Raba] said to him: You started by saying six and you ended up with seven?—He replied: There is Tannaitic division of opinion concerning the Median gate, for it has been taught: An arched doorway⁷ — R. Meir declares it liable to the mezuzah, while the Sages exempt it.⁸ All agree, however, that, if the posts are ten handbreadths⁹ [high], it is liable to the mezuzah.¹⁰ Said Abaye: All agree that if the [whole] doorway is ten handbreadths in height, but the post is not even three¹¹ it is considered nothing;¹² again, if the post is three handbreadths in height, but the [whole] doorway not even ten, it is also considered nothing.¹² They are disputing only concerning doorways the [whole] height of which is ten, with the posts three in height, but with a width less than four handbreadths, space however being left to extend it to four handbreadths.¹³ R. Meir holds one may extend¹⁴ it by digging [to the required minimum of four handbreadths], whilst the Sages hold that we do not extend it by digging it. Our Rabbis taught: The synagogue, the women's apartment, and the house belonging to partners are liable to mezuzah — Is that not self-evident? — You might have said [the scriptural] ‘Thy house’¹⁵ [means] her — but not [the woman's] house; ‘thy house’ but not their [partners’] house, hence we are taught [that they are included in the law of mezuzah]. But would you expound similarly: That your days may be multiplied and the days of your sons?¹⁶ Do only their [sons] need life, not the others [women and their daughters]? What then is the significance of ‘Thy house’? — It is as Raba said: For Raba said: The way thou enterest [thy house], and when a man moves, he moves with the right foot first.¹⁷

Another [Baraita] taught:¹⁸ The synagogue, the house belonging to partners, and the women's compartment are subject to uncleanness from house plagues. Is that not self-evident? You might have said: Then shall come he who has the house to him;¹⁹ to him’ [implies] but not ‘to her’ [woman], ‘to him’ but not ‘to them’ [partners], therefore we are told [that this is not so]. Perhaps it is really so? — Scripture says, In a house of the land of your possession,²⁰ [which includes both] — Why then ‘to him’? [That means to say that] if one devotes his house to himself exclusively, refusing to lend his belongings by pretending he did not own them, the Holy One, blessed be He, exposes him as he removes his belongings.²¹ Thus ‘to him’ excludes [from the infliction of the house plague] him who lends his belongings to others.²²

But is a synagogue subject to uncleanness from house plagues? Has it not been taught: One might assume that synagogues and houses of learning are subject to uncleanness from house plagues, therefore Scripture says: ‘He who has the house to him’, i.e., he to whom alone the house belongs, that excludes those [houses] which do not belong to him alone? — This is no difficulty: The first teaching is in accord with R. Meir, the second with Rabba, for it has been taught: A synagogue which contains a dwelling for the synagogue attendant²³ is liable to a mezuzah, but one which has no dwelling apartment, R. Meir declares it liable but the Sages exempt it. Or, if you wish, you might say: Both teachings are in accord with the Rabbis. In the one case the synagogue referred to has a dwelling [apartment], in the other it has no dwelling apartment. Or, if you wish, you might say [in accounting for the discrepancy] that in both cases the synagogue has no dwelling apartment

(1) Lit., ‘a gate-house’.

(2) Exedra.

(3) The Temple mount.

(4) In the singular: The Temple court. In the plural the various compartments there, as the men's compartment, the women's compartment.

(5) [This proves that the places enumerated in the teaching of R. Kahana, even when restricted to their ordinary use, are also subject to a difference of opinion of Tannaim whether or not they are liable to a mezuzah, which contradicts Rab Judah.]

(6) The Median gate was usually made with an arched doorway, hence gates with such doorways came to be called Median.

- (7) Which is the same as a Median gate.
- (8) [Since it narrows down at the arch to less than four handbreadths, the required minimum of a gate, v. n. 10.]
- (9) Before the entrance began to narrow down at the arch.
- (10) 'Er. 11b.
- (11) It began to narrow down at less than three handbreadths from the ground.
- (12) And requires no mezuzah, for the minimum for any doorway is ten in height for the whole doorway, four in width, three for the posts; below it is but 'solid' earth.
- (13) Within the ten handbreadths, the minimum required height of the doorway.
- (14) By legal fiction. As long as the doorway starts on a breadth of four by three, allowing space for continued dimension up to ten, we look upon it as continuing in the same size, hence as entitled to the designation 'door', with the implication of being subject to the law of mezuzah
- (15) The possessive suffix in the Hebrew is masc. sing.
- (16) Deut. XI, 21. If you press the text so hard, excluding woman because the possessive is in the masculine form, then you should consistently expound: In order that your days, may be, where the possessive suffix, too, is masculine, that God holds out no promise for the prolongation of women's life. Perhaps benekem, which literally means 'your sons', although it is understood to include 'daughters', being usually translated as 'children' might render the consequence of such pedantic interpretation more absurd still.
- (17) Read ad hoc: instead of betheka, bi'atheka, i.e., 'thy coming in' instead of 'Thy house', to infer thence that the mezuzah should be affixed on the door-post at the right hand of him who enters. In this manner, indeed, the mezuzah is affixed, in the upper third of the post.
- (18) Men. 34a.
- (19) Lev. XIV, 35. So lit., E.V. 'he that owneth the house shall come',
- (20) Ibid. 34.
- (21) In accord with the priest's command, as prescribed: And the priest shall command that they empty the house before the priest go in to see the plague. Lev. XIV, 36.
- (22) The plague is thus seen as a punishment for niggardliness.
- (23) V. supra p. 47 n. 8.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 12a

, the first teaching referring to big cities, the second to villages.¹ But are synagogues in big cities really not subject to uncleanness from house plagues? Has it not been taught: 'In the house of the land of your possession,'² i.e., the house of the land of your possession could become defiled through leprosy, but Jerusalem³ could not become defiled through leprosy. R. Judah said: I have heard that only the place of the Sanctuary is unaffected by the law of leprosy?⁴ Now does not that imply that synagogues and houses of learning are subject to the law of leprosy even though they be in large cities? — Read R. Judah said: I have heard that only sacred places⁵ are not subject to the law of leprosy. What principle are they disputing? — The first Tanna holds Jerusalem was not divided amongst the tribes⁶ and R. Judah holds Jerusalem was divided among the tribes, the basis of their difference being the principle on which these Tannaim differ, for it has been taught: What lay in the lot of Judah? The Temple mount, the cells, the courts. And what lay in the lot of Benjamin? The Hall,⁷ the Temple⁸ and the Holy of Holies. And a strip of land went forth from Judah's lot and went into Benjamin's territory, and on this the Temple was built — Benjamin the Righteous was longing to swallow it every day as it is written: He coveteth him all day,⁹ therefore he obtained the privilege of becoming the host of the Omnipotent,¹⁰ as it is said: And He dwelleth between his shoulders¹¹ .

The following Tanna holds that Jerusalem was not divided amongst the tribes, for it has been taught: One does not rent houses in Jerusalem, because it [the city] does not belong to them, [the inhabitants]. R. Eleazar son of R. Zadok said: Nor any beds. Therefore the innkeepers take the skin of the sacrificial animals by force.¹² Abaye said: We may learn from this that it is usual for a man to leave to his host the empty wine pitcher and the hide.¹³

But are the synagogues of the villages subject to the laws of leprosy? Has it not been taught: As a possession,¹⁴ i.e., until they conquer it. If they have conquered but not yet divided it among the tribes, or even divided it among the tribes but not divided it among the families, or even divided it among the families but before each man knows where his lot is, whence do we know [that the laws of leprosy do not apply yet]? To teach us that Scripture says: 'Then he who has the house to him' i.e., he to whom alone the house is belonging, excluding these [houses] which do not belong to him [the owner] alone.¹⁵ — It is more correct as we have answered at first.¹⁶

AND ANOTHER PRIEST IS PREPARED FOR HIM: It is obvious that if any disqualifying mishap occurred to the high priest before the morning [daily] offering, that one¹⁷ initiates the other priest with the morning burnt-offering. But if the mishap should have occurred after the morning sacrifice, how could he be initiated?¹⁸ — R. Adda b. Ahabah said: With the girdle.¹⁹ That will be in accord with him who holds that the girdle of the high priest is identical with that of the common priest,²⁰ but according to the opinion that the girdle of the high priest was not the same as that of the common priest,²¹ what can be said?²² — Abaye said: He would put on the eight garments and turn²³ with the hook, in accordance with what R. Huna said. For R. Huna said: If a non-priest turns with the hook, he incurs penalty of death.²⁴ R. Papa said:

(1) In the metropolis people from many cities assemble in the synagogue, it therefore seems to belong to everybody, i.e., to nobody, whilst in the villages those who attend are known to all, being like partners in the synagogue (Rashi).

(2) Lev. XIV, 34.

(3) Jerusalem was not divided among the tribes, but was kept in trust for all Israel and could therefore not be subject to a law applying to privately owned houses only.

(4) Meg. 26a.

(5) Instead of 'Sanctuary'. 'Sacred places' include synagogues and houses of learning.

(6) V. supra p. 52, n. 6.

(7) Ulam, leading to the interior of the Temple.

(8) The Hall containing the golden altar, Mid. IV, 1.

(9) Deut. XXXIII, 12. The ad hoc translation, lit., 'to bend over', thus to be anxious, hence (Rashi): he scratched himself in despair, was anxious to conquer it.

(10) The Ark stood in his lot.

(11) Ibid.

(12) I Tosef. Ma'as. Sh. I.

(13) Of the animal which he slaughters and consumes in the house of his host (Rashi).

(14) Lev. XIV, 34.

(15) Obviously then the synagogues in the villages are not subject to levitical uncleanness, hence the alternate answer above, 'One speaks of' synagogues in metropolises, the other of synagogues in villages', is unsatisfactory.

(16) The distinction is rather between synagogues with a dwelling for the synagogue attendant and those without it.

(17) He should officiate at the morning burnt-offering in the eight garments of the high priest.

(18) The rest of the service of the Day of Atonement is performed in four garments, how will his office of high priestly function be indicated?

(19) The high priest's girdle, which on the Day of Atonement is of fine linen (Lev. XVI, 4).

(20) [I.e. the material for the girdle prescribed for the high priest in Ex. XXXIX, 29 was also intended to be used for the girdle of the common priests, so that the girding of a linen girdle by the priest on the Day of Atonement would serve to indicate his high priestly function.]

(21) [I.e., the girdle of the common priest was of linen, the material of the girdle described in Ex. XXXIX, 29 being restricted to the high priest, so that the girding by the priest of a linen girdle on the Day of Atonement would indicate no particular high priestly function.]

(22) How would it be recognizable that he is initiated into performing the high priest's service?

(23) Rashi: Before starting on the service of the day, he puts on the eight garments, and turns on the outer altar one of the limbs of the daily burnt-offering with an iron hook. By reason of such turning that limb is more speedily consumed. He has thus done the initiative work for the office of high priest which he is to assume anon.

(24) This is only preparatory work, but since a non-priest, performing it in accord with R. Huna's opinion incurs the penalty of death, it is obviously considered as of even importance with the service proper, hence serving to initiate the newcomer into the high priest's office.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 12b

His service¹ initiates him — Has it not been taught: All the vessels which Moses made became sanctified through being anointed. From then on they become sanctified through being used at a service.² Similarly here his service initiates him.

When R. Dimi came [from Palestine] he reported: Concerning the girdle of the common priest there is a dispute between Rabbi and R. Eleazar b. Simeon, one said it was of kil'ayim [wool and linen in the same web],³ the other said it was of fine linen.⁴ It may be ascertained that it was Rabbi who said the girdle was made of kil'ayim, for it has been taught: There is no difference between the high priest and the common priest except in the girdle, this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon said: Not even in the girdle is there any distinction. Of what time [does this teaching speak]? If during the rest of the year, there are many points of difference, [as e.g.] the high priest [officiates] in eight garments, the common priest in four; you must say, then, that [the time discussed is] the Day of Atonement.⁵ We can tell you: In fact the discussion deals with the other days of the year, and it refers to such garments which both wear alike⁶ [the only difference being the girdle].

When Rabin came [from Palestine] he reported: Everybody agrees that the girdle of the high priest on the Day of Atonement was made of fine linen, and during the rest of the year of kil'ayim. The discussion concerned only the common priest's girdle, both on the Day of Atonement and during the rest of the year; concerning that Rabbi said it was made of kil'ayim and R. Eleazar b. Simeon of fine linen. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We also have: Upon his flesh.⁷ Why the repetition of 'he shall put on'? To include the mitre and the girdle for the removal of the ashes, this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Dosa said: It is to include the provision that the [four] garments of the high priest on the Day of Atonement may be used by the common priest [during the rest of the year]. Rabbi says: There are two valid objections to this: First, that the girdle of the high priest on the Day of Atonement is different from that of the common priest; secondly, shall the garments worn for the service of most solemn sanctity be worn for ministration of lesser holiness? Rather 'he shall put on' [was repeated] to include worn-out garments.⁸ R. Dosa adheres to his principle, for it has been taught: And shall leave them there,⁹ that teaches that they must be hidden.¹⁰ R. Dosa said: [It means that] he [the high priest] shall not use them on another Day of Atonement.¹¹ Our Rabbis have taught: If a disqualifying accident occurred to him, and another was appointed in his place then the former returns [afterwards] to his office, whilst the latter has upon himself all the obligations touching the high priesthood,¹² this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Jose says: The first returns to his office, the second becomes unfit for the office of either high priest or common priest.¹³ R. Jose said: It happened to Joseph b. Elam¹⁴ of Sepphoris that after a disqualifying accident had happened to the high priest, he was appointed in the former's place, and the Sages said: The former returns to his office, the latter is unfit to be either common priest or high priest. He cannot be high priest for the sake of preventing ill-feeling,¹⁵ nor can he any more be a common priest, for 'we may promote in [a matter] of sanctity, but not degrade'.¹⁶ Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan:

(1) His officiating, without other initiation, in itself is initiating.

(2) Sanh. 16b.

(3) V. Ex. XXXIX, 29, cf. supra p. 54, n. 6.

(4) Byssus.

(5) [When the high priest too has only four garments like a common priest, the difference between them being only as regards the girdle. Whereas the high priest's girdle was on that day of linen, that of the common priests was of kil'ayim, the same as during the whole year.]

- (6) The tunic, the breeches, mitre and girdle, the only difference being in the girdle.
- (7) Lev. VI, 3: And the priest shall put on his linen garment, and his breeches shall he put upon his flesh.
- (8) These may be used for the removal of the altar ashes. V. infra 23b.
- (9) Lev. XVI, 23: And Aaron shall come into the tent of meeting, and shall put off the linen garments, which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there.
- (10) To prevent their being used again, or their being used for any less sacred purpose.
- (11) But they may be used by a common priest.
- (12) Rashi: He must not let his hair grow long nor rend the clothes, nor contract ritual impurity because of a near relative's death; nor marry a widow; but he must officiate in eight garments.
- (13) V. infra.
- (14) Tosef. Yoma I, 4. The reading there is corrupt, and to be corrected in accord with the reading in Tosef. s.v. כהן and in J.Yoma 38a: It happened to Joseph ben Ulam of Sepphoris (not 'in Sepphoris', for it could have happened only in Jerusalem) who served for an hour (or: little while) as high priest and as he went out he said to the King: My lord and King: Whose were the bullock and the goat which were offered up to-day, did they come from me or from the high priest? The King understood (the trend) of his question and he replied: What is this, ben Ulam? Are you not satisfied with having served in the high priest's place for one hour before Him Who spoke and the world was created, so that you seek to obtain the high priest's office for yourself? In that moment ben Ulam understood that he was deposed from the high priesthood. V. Hor., Sonc., ed. p. 89 notes, and Meg. p. 59, n. 2.
- (15) Acc. to Tosef. ibid. the ill-feeling may also attack the King and the other priests.
- (16) V. infra 20b.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 13a

The halachah is in accord with R. Jose, but R. Jose admits that if [the substitute high priest] transgressed that injunction and officiated, his service is valid. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: The halachah is in accord with R. Jose, but R. Jose admits that if the first [high priest] dies, the second [the substitute] returns to his service. Is that not self-evident?¹ — You might have said: This would involve for him a rivalry in his lifetime,² hence he informs us³ [that this is not so].

R. JUDAH SAYS: ONE PROVIDES FOR HIM ALSO ANOTHER WIFE. But the Rabbis, too, are considering a possibility!⁴ — The Rabbis will tell you: Levitical impurity is frequent,⁵ death is infrequent.

THEY SAID TO HIM: IF SO THERE IS NO END TO THE MATTER. They gave a good answer to R. Judah! What then about R. Judah? — He will tell you: One may consider the possibility of one death, but one would not [go so far as to] consider the possibility of two [successive wives'] deaths. And the Rabbis? — [They hold that] if enactment [on the basis of consideration of the possibility] of death is justified, such [possibility] should be considered to include also two.⁶ But the Rabbis ought to apply that consideration to themselves!⁷ The Rabbis will answer you: The high priest is careful. If he be careful, why was another priest prepared [to take his place in case of accidental impurity]? — Since 'ye make the latter his rival, he will be all the more careful.

But is this arrangement⁸ sufficient? The Divine Law said: His house⁹ and that [substitute wife] is not 'his house'.¹⁰ -He betroths her [unto himself]. — But [still] as long as he does not marry her,¹¹ she is not 'his house'? — He marries her. — But then he has 'two houses' and the Divine Law said: And make atonement for himself and for his house,¹² but not for 'two houses'? — He divorces her again. If he divorces her, our question reverts to its place?¹³ — No, the provision applies to the case that he divorces her on condition; [namely], he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce¹⁴ [to be valid] in case thou diest.¹⁵ But perhaps she dies and he will have 'two houses'? — Rather, the case is that he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thou diest. If she does not die, then she is divorced;¹⁶ and if she does die, there is [still] the other one alive. But perhaps she will not die, so that her letter of divorce is valid and the other [the first] one die, and he will stay without a ‘house’? Say rather: He says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if one of you die, so that if the one dies there is [still] the other one alive, and if the other one dies there is [still] this one alive. But perhaps neither of them will die and he will have ‘two houses’? Furthermore on such a condition¹⁷ it, [the divorce,] is really not valid; has not Raba said: If he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce to be valid if thou drinkest no wine all the days of my life and thy life, it is not valid;¹⁸ but if he said: ‘All the days of the life of So-and-so’, then it is valid?¹⁹ — Rather say that he said to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thy fellow [wife] does not die. If her fellow does not die, she [the second wife] is divorced, and if she does die, then there is still the other [the second wife] alive [to be his house’]. — But perhaps her fellow wife will die in the middle of the service and it will become

(1) Since the only reason for his disqualification was the ill-will engendered in the heart of the original high priest.

(2) Lit., ‘from life’. When the substitute might be said to have awaited jealously the death of his predecessor.

(3) We do not go so far in endeavour to prevent ill-feeling.

(4) Since they agree to the provision of a substitute high priest.

(5) It may be due to pollution, to unexpected contact with the saliva of an ‘am ha-arez, (Rashi).

(6) The death of one within a day is a rather infrequent occurrence. The only reason for considering it would be a principle, according to which we must consider possibilities, even remote. On such basis the death of two successive wives may not be said to be outside the sphere of possibility, hence: ‘IF SO, THERE IS NO END.

(7) With even logic the Sages ought to admit that, since we are considering the possibility of accidental impurity disqualifying the incumbent high priest, it is perfectly within the sphere of possibility that the substitute, too, may suffer such accidental disqualification, hence, here too there is no end to it!

(8) Of preparing a substitute wife.

(9) Lev. XVI, 6.

(10) If the first wife dies, whilst the second is not yet married to him, he has no ‘house’ to obtain atonement for.

(11) Lit., ‘takes her (to his home)’.

(12) Ibid. The Mishnah interprets ‘his house’ as his wife, v. supra 2a.

(13) In its original force. V. supra.

(14) Get. v. Glos.

(15) On the Day of Atonement. If she die on that day, her letter of divorce is retroactively valid, there is one ‘house’ only: and if she does not die but her fellow die, then she remains as the ‘house’, her letter of divorce being invalid. Rashi makes this significant observation: These arguments are not valid, they are answers to hypothetical questions preparing the ground for the last, satisfactory answer.

(16) And the first woman is his only ‘house’,

(17) Where the condition attached refers to her life.

(18) The purpose of the divorce is complete divorcement, whereas by the term of this letter she would remain ‘connected’ with him all her life.

(19) Git. 83b.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 13b

retrospectively revealed that the letter of divorce of the other one was not valid and he would then have been officiating¹ at the service with ‘two houses’? — Rather assume, then, that he says to her: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thy fellow dies. — But perhaps the fellow wife will die and the letter of divorce of the first wife will be valid and he will stand there without a ‘house’? — Rather [say that] we speak of the case that he divorced them both, to the one he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] in case thy fellow wife does not die; and to the other one he said: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if thou dost not enter the synagogue.² But perhaps her fellow will not die and she will not enter the synagogue, and the letter of divorce of both will be valid and he will stand without a ‘house’? — Rather: To the one he says: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] in case thy fellow does not die; and to the other one: Behold this thy letter of divorce [to be valid] if I enter the Synagogue, so that if the one die, the second be available, and if the second die the first be available. What will you say in the case that her fellow wife dies in the midst of the service and retrospectively he will have officiated at the service with two 'houses'? If he saw that she was about to die, he would at once enter the synagogue and would render the divorce retroactively valid. — R. Assi or, as some say, R. 'Awira, demurred to this: Consequently, if this be so, two widows of one brother should not be married by the brother-in-law?³ — Scripture repeats 'his sister-in-law' twice, to intimate [that even in the case of] two sisters-in-law the law of levirate marriage applies. But then a woman betrothed⁴ should not be married to her levir?⁵ — [By emphasizing] 'abroad'⁶ the betrothed woman is meant to be included.

Our Rabbis taught: The high priest may offer up a sacrifice as a mourner,⁷ but may not eat thereof. R. Judah said: Throughout the day.⁸ What does 'throughout the day' signify? — Said Raba: It means to indicate that he should be brought from his house.⁹ Abaye said to him: But now, according to R. Judah we even remove him¹⁰ [from the Sanctuary], for it has been taught: If he was standing and offering up a sacrifice on the altar, and he hears that one [of his close relatives]¹¹ died, he should leave the service and go out. This is the opinion of R. Judah; R. Jose says: He should complete his service.¹² How can you then say that we bring him from his house?¹³ — Rather, says Raba, 'throughout the day'

(1) I.e., the first part of the service.

(2) On the Day of Atonement.

(3) So shall it be done unto the man that doth not build up his brother's house. Deut. XXV, 9. Here also the word 'house' is used for 'wife' and since 'house' is taken to mean but one wife, no brother would be able to perform the levirate marriage where his dead brother had left two wives.

(4) 'Arusah', betrothed, engaged, but not 'brought home'. The betrothal carries with it almost all the legal consequences of marriage. V. Glos. s.v. Erusin.

(5) If 'house' is to be taken to refer to wife, why should a betrothed sister-in-law be subject to levirate marriage?

(6) If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not be married abroad unto one not of his kin. The word 'abroad' here is superfluous and is taken to indicate that even one who was 'still outside', not having been married properly, but only betrothed, is included in the law of the levirate marriage, v. Yeb. 13b.

(7) 'Onen' is a mourner before the burial of his kinsman, to be distinguished from 'abel', a mourner during the seven days after burial. With regard to the high priest, Lev. XXI, 11 reads: Neither shall he go into any dead body, nor defile himself for his father or for his mother; neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, nor profane the sanctuary of his God. Scripture thus permits his officiating but he is forbidden to eat of any sacred meat whilst in mourning. This is inferred ad majus from Deut. XXVI, 14 which, referring to tithe, is of lesser sanctity than the meat of sacrifices, as the Israelites say: I have not eaten thereof in my mourning.

(8) V. Hor. 12b.

(9) He should be deliberately brought to the Sanctuary from his house, so that his pre-occupation with the sacrifices may help to lessen his grief.

(10) This refers to the common priest.

(11) Father or mother or son or daughter or brother or unmarried sister. Rabbinical enactment includes the married sister.

(12) V. Hor. loc. cit.

(13) If in the case of the common priest R. Judah would have him removed if he became a mourner, would he in the case of the high priest consider it a good deed to bring him to the Sanctuary?

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 14a

means to say that he does not officiate all that day,¹ as a preventive measure lest he eat.² Said R. Adda b. Ahabah to Raba: But did R. Judah enact a preventive measure lest he eat? Have we not learnt, R. Judah said: WE ALSO PROVIDE ANOTHER WIFE FOR HIM, LEST HIS WIFE DIE? Now when his wife dies he may perform the service [on the same day] without R. Judah becoming apprehensive lest he eat?—He replied: Now is this so?³ There, because it is the Day of Atonement, on which all the world does not eat, he, too, would not be likely to eat, but here [on any day] when all the world is eating, he would also be ready to eat — But under such conditions⁴ what mourning would be coming upon him because of her, since she is divorced from him? — Granted that no mourning would be obligatory, but he would surely be distracted.⁵ MISHNAH. THROUGHOUT THE SEVEN DAYS HE SPRINKLES THE BLOOD⁶ AND BURNS THE INCENSE⁷ AND TRIMS THE LAMPS⁸ AND OFFERS THE HEAD AND THE HIND LEG;⁹ ON ALL OTHER DAYS HE OFFERS ONLY IF HE SO DESIRES; FOR THE HIGH PRIEST IS FIRST IN OFFERING A PORTION¹⁰ AND HAS FIRST PLACE IN TAKING A PORTION.¹¹

GEMARA. Who is the authority [for our Mishnah]? — R. Hisda said: It is not in accord with R. Akiba, for if it were, R. Akiba Surely holds that if some of the sprinkling¹² fell upon a clean person, it rendered him unclean! How could he then officiate at the service?¹³ — For it has been taught: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean,¹⁴ i.e., [if sprinkled] ‘upon the unclean’, [he becomes] clean, [if sprinkled] upon the clean [he becomes] unclean, this is the opinion of R. Akiba. But the Sages hold that these matters [concerning sprinkling]¹⁵ apply only to such things as are susceptible to uncleanness. I What is it about? — As we have learnt: If he intended sprinkling an animal and [happened to] sprinkle a man, then, if there be sufficient water on the hyssop, he may repeat [the sprinkling].¹⁶ If he intended sprinkling a man and he [happened to] sprinkle an animal, then, if there be enough water on the hyssop, he may not repeat [the sprinkling].¹⁷ What is the reason for R. Akiba's view? — Let the Divine Law write ‘And the clean person shall sprinkle upon him’, what is the meaning of ‘upon the unclean,’? Infer from this that [if sprinkled] the unclean becomes clean, and [if sprinkled] the clean becomes unclean. And [what is the reason for the view of] the Rabbis? — These words emphasize that [sprinkling is right] only upon matter susceptible to uncleanness. But this¹⁸ case can be deduced a minori ad majus: If sprinkling upon an unclean makes clean, how much more shall sprinkling upon a clean [keep or make more] clean! And R. Akiba? — It is with reference to this that Solomon said: I said, I will get wisdom,, but it is far from me.¹⁹ — And the Sages? [They explain] this [passage to refer] to [the fact that] he who sprinkles and he who is sprinkled are clean, whereas he who touches them [the waters of purification] is rendered unclean.²⁰ — But is he who sprinkles clean? Surely it is written, And he that sprinkleth the water of sprinkling shall wash his clothes?²¹ — ‘Sprinkleth’ here means ‘toucheth’. — But the text reads ‘sprinkleth’ and also mentions ‘toucheth’;²¹ furthermore, he who ‘sprinkleth’ must wash his clothes, whereas he who ‘toucheth’ need not wash his clothes? — Rather ‘sprinkleth’ here means ‘carrieth’ — Then let the Divine Law write ‘carrieth’, why is ‘sprinkleth’ written? — That [is meant] to let us know that there must be a quantity sufficient for the sprinkling.²² That will be right according to him who holds that a definite minimum is necessary in the sprinkling,²³ but according to him who holds there is no required minimum in the sprinkling,²³ what is there to be said? Even according to him who holds there is no required minimum [it will be right], for that refers only to the back of the man,²⁴ but in the vessels there must be a definite quantity, as we have learnt: How much water is necessary to be sufficient for the sprinkling? Enough for dipping

(1) Until the evening.

(2) During the day he is forbidden by the Torah to eat, in the evening after burial the prohibition is only Rabbinical (Rashi).

(3) This analogy is incorrect.

(4) Since he would rush to the synagogue during her coma so that she would be divorced from him as soon as he entered it (v. infra), hence how could he be considered a mourner for his divorced wife. It is interesting to observe that sudden death does not enter among the many possibilities considered in this discussion. It would invalidate the suggestion of his leaving for the synagogue as soon as his wife was near death.

(5) upset by reminiscent tenderness, unable, as Rashi says, to be in the prescribed happy mood for eating sacrificial meat. [V. Hul. 132b, so that but for the fact that the apprehension lest he may eat does not arise on the Day of Atonement, he would not have been allowed to perform under such conditions the Temple service lest he eat of the sacrifices, Tosaf. Yesh.]

- (6) Of the daily morning and evening sacrifices on the outer altar. Ex. XXIX, 38-42.
- (7) Mornings and evenings on the golden inner altar, ibid. XXX, 1-8.
- (8) Of the seven-branched candlestick, ibid. XXVII, 20-21; also XXX, 7-8. The trimming consisted of the following: Every evening the lamps were kindled by a priest, every morning cleaned, filled with oil, and provided with fresh wick. All this work during the seven days was performed by the high priest.
- (9) According to Tam. IV, 2-3, the sacrificial lamb, after being slaughtered, was divided into certain parts, which, as a rule, were brought on the altar by the priests chosen by the count. Head and hind leg always were offered up first.
- (10) The high priest had the prerogative to offer up at any time any portion of any sacrifice he desires, other priests could do so only during their particular week of service, v. Glos. s.v. Mishmar.
- (11) Of the flesh of the sacrifice which was distributed among the priests: he could choose any part he preferred.
- (12) Of the ashes of the red heifer mixed with running water. Num. XIX, 17.
- (13) During the seven days of his separation, since he was to be sprinkled each day.
- (14) Num. XIX, 19: And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean, the words 'upon the unclean' seem superfluous, 'upon him' would have been clear enough. From this R. Akiba infers that only upon the unclean has the sprinkling a cleaning effect, with opposite effect on the clean.
- (15) The Sages also consider the words superfluous, but they find in them the intimation that sprinkling has its effect only upon things susceptible to uncleanness, hence, if sprinkled upon things unsusceptible to uncleanness it has been misused, and whatever is left of the water is invalid and may no more be used for sprinkling and cleansing.
- (16) (I.e., he can use the water left on the hyssop for a second sprinkling without necessarily dipping it again (Rash).]
- (17) V. Par. XIII, 3. [The hyssop must be dipped anew if the priest desires to perform with it another sprinkling. In having been sprinkled on the animal the water on the hyssop became disqualified as water of purification with which work has been done, and can no longer be used for ritual sprinkling. Thus the Sages infer from the superfluous words 'upon the unclean' that the water of purification may be used only for such things as are susceptible to uncleanness, and by being sprinkled on things not so susceptible it becomes invalid (Rashi). R. Hananel on the basis of another reading explains differently.]
- (18) The contention of the Sages that sprinkling could never have the effect of rendering unclean.
- (19) Eccl. VII, 23. This matter is beyond logic, it is a law which has puzzled others already.
- (20) Num. XIX, 21.
- (21) Num. XIX, 21.
- (22) For rendering the one who carries the water unclean; that is indicated by expressing 'carrying' in terms of 'sprinkling'.
- (23) V. Nid. 9a.
- (24) However small the quantity of the water that reaches him from the hyssop bundle, the cleansing is achieved.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 14b

the buds therein and for the water to be sprinkled.¹ Abaye said: [The Mishnah] may be in accord even with R. Akiba: He [the high priest] officiates all day, [and] in the evening is he sprinkled, then he takes the immersion and awaits the sunset.²

AND BURNS THE INCENSE AND TRIMS THE LAMPS. Hence [you may infer that] the incense came first and the lamps afterwards. A contradiction is raised against this:³ He to whom it fell to clear the inner altar of ashes . . . he to whom it fell to clean the candlesticks . . . he to whom it fell to burn the incense?⁴ R. Huna said: Who is the Tanna of [the Tractate] Tamid?⁵ R. Simeon of Mizpah.⁶ But surely we have learnt exactly the opposite.⁷ For we have learnt:⁸ As he⁹ came to the north-eastern corner [of the altar], he sprinkled to the east and north;¹⁰ then he came to the south-western corner and sprinkled it to the west and south. And with reference to this [Mishnaic statement] it was taught: Rabbi Simeon of Mizpah has this change in Tamid.¹¹ As he came to the north-eastern corner he sprinkled it to the east and to the north; then he came to the south-western corner, and sprinkled it to the west and afterwards to the south.¹² — Rather, said R. Johanan: Who is the authority for the order [given] in [the Tractate] Yoma? R. Simeon of Mizpah. But here is a contradiction between the order [given] in [the Tractate] Yoma and the order [given] in another passage therein: The second count decided who should slaughter, who should sprinkle [the blood], who should remove the ashes from the inner altar, who should remove the ashes from the candlestick, who should take up the limbs [of the burnt-offering] to the ramp [of the altar]. The third count: 'Fresh ones, come and be counted for the incense!'¹³ -Abaye said: This is no difficulty. The one case speaks of the trimming of the five lamps, the other of the trimming of the two lamps.¹⁴ Shall we say that the incense interrupted the trimming of the lamps? But Abaye was recounting the order [of the daily Temple service] in the name of a tradition¹⁵ and he has the trimming of the lamps interrupted by the blood of the regular daily offering?¹⁶ — I will tell you: This is no difficulty, the one refers to the [order of the daily Temple service] in accord with Abba Saul, the other in accord with the Sages, for it has been taught: He should not trim the lamps and after that burn the incense, but he should offer the incense first and then trim the lamps. Abba Saul says: He should first trim and then offer [the incense] — What is the reason for Abba Saul's view? — For it is written: Every morning, when he dresseth the lamps,¹⁷ and afterwards [it says], he shall burn it?¹⁸ — And the Sages?¹⁹ What the Divine Law intends here is

(1) Par. XIII, 5.

(2) Thus he would be clean at night and able to officiate again on the morrow. Next day exactly the same procedure will follow. V. infra 19a.

(3) The quotation is from two Mishnahs, Tam. III, 9 and ibid. V, 4.

(4) Here the trimming of lamps is mentioned as coming before the incense.

(5) [Ginzberg, Journal of Jewish Lore and Philosophy 1, p. 200 takes this phrase to denote that the Tractate Tamid did not go through the hands of Rabbi as Redactor, but that it has comedown to us in the original form with R. Simeon of Mizpah, a contemporary of R. Gamaliel II, as its compiler.]

(6) V. Pe'ah II. He was either of Mizpah or 'Governor of the Watch-tower of the Temple' (Jastrow).

(7) R. Simeon of Mizpah opposes the teaching reported in Tamid.

(8) Tam. IV, 1.

(9) The priest who sprinkled the blood.

(10) The sprinkling had to be made in such a manner that one constituted two, it was done in form of a Greek 'gamma', from the two corners. '.

(11) משנה בתמיד a difficult phrase. Rashi: 'To change the order in connection with the Tamid, the daily regular offerings'. R. Hananel: He differs with the view laid down in Tamid. Ginzberg, op. cit., p. 285 n. 1 takes it as corresponding to תמני, 'teaches', used in introducing 'variants': R. Simeon's version of Tamid is . . .]

(12) R. Simeon insists that two separate applications had to be made from the south-western corner, one to the west and another to the south, and thus opposes the order given in Tamid, v. infra 15a, hence he could not be an authority for the Tractate.

(13) From here it is seen that incense was offered after the lamps, which contradicts our Mishnah here.

(14) There were seven lamps, the trimming of which, according to this answer, was interrupted by the offering of the incense, so that five lamps were trimmed, then the incense offered, after which the last two lamps of the seven-branched candlestick were trimmed, v. infra 33a.

(15) משמיה דגמרא. This expression seems to mean that Abaye could not give the precise source of his authority but referred it to 'tradition' in general, v. Bacher HUCA, 1924, p. 31.]

(16) His account thus varies from the statement he makes here.

(17) Ex. XXX, 7.

(18) Ibid. in the same passage.

(19) How do they explain this verse?

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 15a

that at the time the lamps are being trimmed there shall — [still] be a burning of the incense. For, if you would not interpret thus, [how will you account for 'at dusk'], as it is written: And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at dusk, he shall burn it.¹ Would you say here too that he shall first light the lamps and afterwards offer up the incense due at dusk? And if you will say, 'Indeed, so it is,' but has it not been taught:² From evening to morning,³ i.e., provide a sufficient quantity [of oil] that it may burn all night from evening to morning; or, according to another interpretation: ‘From evening to morning’, i.e., there is no service which is proper [to be performed] ‘from evening to morning’ except this.⁴ What then the Divine Law intends is that at the time of the lighting there shall [still] be a burning of the incense. Here also: at the time of the trimming there shall [still] be a burning of the incense. And Abba Saul?⁵ It is different there, because Scripture Says: otho [it].⁶ R. Papa said: This⁷ is no difficulty. The one account agrees with the Sages, the other with Abba Saul⁸ How do you place the matter now: Our Mishnah in accord with the Sages, and [the Mishnah of] the count in accord with Abba Saul? Then consider the second part:⁹ They brought to him the daily sacrifice. He made the incision and another finished the slaughtering for him. He entered to burn the incense and to trim the lamps.¹⁰ That is in accord with the Sages. The beginning and the end [is then] in accord with the Sages and the middle in accord with Abba Saul?¹¹ — R. Papa will tell you: Yes, the beginning and end are in accord with the Sages and the middle with Abba Saul.¹² It is clear why Abaye does not agree with [the interpretation of] R. Papa: because he will not explain the first and last part [of the Mishnah] as being in accord with the Sages, whilst the middle with Abba Saul. But why does not R. Papa take Abaye's point of view? He will tell you: Would he [the Tanna] teach first¹³ of the trimming of two lamps and only afterwards¹⁴ of the trimming of five lamps? And Abaye? — He will tell you: First he teaches in a general fashion [of the obligation of the high priest to be occupied during the seven days],¹⁵ and afterwards he describes the order [of the service].¹⁶

The text [above states]: He came to the north-eastern corner, and sprinkled the east and the north; then [as he came to] the south-western corner, he sprinkled the west and south, and in connection with that it was taught that R. Simeon of Mizpah had this changed in Tamid. As he came to the north-eastern corner he sprinkled the east and north; then as he came to the south-western corner he sprinkled the west and afterwards the south.¹⁷ What is the reason of R. Simeon of Mizpah? — R. Johanan in the name of one of the school of R. Jannai said: Scripture said, And one he-goat for a sin-offering unto the Lord: it shall be offered beside the continual burnt-offering, and the drink-offering thereof.¹⁸ It¹⁹ is a burnt-offering and the Divine Law²⁰ says, Deal with it as with a sin-offering — How is that to be done? He sprinkles one in such a manner as to constitute two [sprinklings], as is prescribed for a burnt-offering and he sprinkles two separate ones as is prescribed for the sin-offering. But let him make two sprinklings in such a manner as to constitute four, as is prescribed for a burnt-offering, and four full sprinklings as is prescribed for a sin-offering? — We do not find anywhere that blood brings atonement and then brings atonement again. But we do find blood, half of which is sprinkled after the manner of a sin-offering, and the other half after the manner of a burnt-offering? What you must of needs [say is] that Scripture has brought them under the same category! Here too one might say ‘of needs Scripture has brought them under one category’? — Here it is a case of merely ‘splitting’ the sprinkling.²¹ But let him sprinkle one so as to constitute two below, as is prescribed for a burnt-offering and two separate sprinklings above as is prescribed for sin-offerings?²² — We do not find that any blood is sprinkled, half above, and half below. Not indeed? Have we not learnt: He sprinkled thereof once upwards, and seven times downwards? That was done ke-mazlif [like the movement of swinging a whip]. What does ‘ke-mazlif’ mean? Rab Judah showed it by [imitating the movements of] a lasher.²³ But [do we] not [find any blood sprinkled half above and half below]? surely we have learnt: He sprinkled thereof upon the tohar of the altar seven times.²⁴ Don't you think it means upon the middle [of the front] of the altar, as people say ‘the noon-light’ shines, meaning by ‘tihara’ the middle of the day? — Rabbah b. Shila said: No, it refers

(1) Ibid. 8.

(2) Pes. 59a.

(3) Ex. XXVII, 21.

(4) The lighting of the lamps. There is no other service that is proper from the time they have been lit in the evening till the following morning (Rashi).

(5) How does he meet this argument?

(6) Ex. XXVII, 21. Only this ('it') may be done from evening to morning and no other work, so that you are compelled to give this interpretation to the text, but with regard to the verse dealing with the trimming, no such necessity arises.

(7) He refers to the question from the apparent contradiction of the two Mishnahs in Yoma — our Mishnah and the one infra 25a.

(8) Where incense is mentioned as coming first, the teaching is in accord with the Sages, the other passage where the lamps are first in order is in agreement with Abba Saul.

(9) Of the Mishnah of the count, infra.

(10) V. infra 31b. [This must refer to the two lamps as there is general agreement that the trimming of the five lamps must precede the incense.]

(11) That is unlikely.

(12) This is not impossible.

(13) In our Mishnah.

(14) [In the Mishnah infra 25a. Surely the trimming of the five lamps was before that of the two!]

(15) Without being concerned as to the order.

(16) [And thus infra 25a speaks of the trimming of the five lamps and infra 31b of the trimming of the two.]

(17) V. supra p. 65 notes.

(18) Num. XXVIII, 15.

(19) [The continual burnt-offering.]

(20) [By placing it in juxtaposition to a sin-offering, v. infra.]

(21) Without any evidence that this is made after the manner of a sin-offering, since both are made in one corner.

(22) The blood of the burnt-offering was sprinkled below the red line, round the middle of the altar, that of the sin-offering above the red line. V. Mid. III, 1.

(23) Above and below is not said here with regard to some line in the middle of the thickness, but it means that of the mercy seat was upwards, the seven all downwards, as one who swings a whip will make similar movements, v. Tosaf. s.v. כּמַצְרִיף.

(24) [The Aramaic tohar is taken to mean 'shining' like the Hebrew zohar, infra].

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 15b

to the top of the altar itself,¹ for it is written: And the like of the very heaven for clearness.² Why does he just sprinkle first as due with the burnt-offering, and afterwards as due with the sin-offering? Let him first sprinkle as due in case of a sin-offering and after that as due with a burnt-offering! — Because it³ is a burnt-offering, it comes first.⁴ And why does he just sprinkle north-east and south-west. Let him sprinkle south-east and then north-west? — I will tell you: The burnt-offering requires the [projecting] base⁵ [of the altar], and the south-eastern corner has no [projecting] base. — Why does he sprinkle first north-east and then south-west, let him sprinkle south-west and then northeast? — Since a master said:⁶ All the turns you make in the Temple must be to the right, the east, he comes first to that [north-east].⁷ Whence do you know that it is with the burnt-offering that the Divine Law states that it should be offered up in the manner due to a sin-offering? May it not be that it is with regard to the sin-offering⁸ that the Torah says: Offer it up after the manner of the burnt-offerings? — Let not that thought arise in you. For it is written: Beside the continual burnt-offering and the drink-offering thereof.⁹ What does the Divine Law mean by this? Apply the measures [forms] of the sin-offering to the burnt-offering.

We have learnt there: The memuneh¹⁰ said to them: Go and bring a lamb from the Cell of the Lambs.¹¹ Now the Cell of the Lambs was in the north-western corner. Four cells were there: one was the Cell of the Lambs; one the Cell of the Seals;¹² one the Cell of the Fireplace,¹³ and one cell, in which the shewbread was made.¹⁴

They raised an objection: There were four rooms in the Cell of the Fireplace, like small rooms opening into a reception room; two on holy ground, two outside of holy ground; and the ends of the flagstones [in the pavement] indicated the mark between the sacred and the secular grounds. What was their use? The south-western was the Cell of the Lambs for offerings;

- (1) The word tohar may mean 'pure', 'clear', and thus here the ashes on the top of the altar were shoved aside and the clear place in the middle sprinkled.
- (2) Ex. XXIV, 10.
- (3) The continual daily offering.
- (4) Mid. III, 1.
- (5) Zeb. 51a, based on Lev. IV, 18: the blood must be sprinkled to a place on the altar below which there is a projecting base.
- (6) V. infra 45a.
- (7) In the case of a sin-offering (the blood of which is applied to the corner of the altar), as he goes up to the ramp of the altar and turns right, he comes to the south-eastern corner first, but he may not sprinkle the blood there, because that corner has no projecting base. He therefore goes on to the north-eastern corner, where he sprinkles. The same order is also followed with a burnt-offering, although there is no ascent of the ramp since the blood thereof was sprinkled below the line round the middle of the altar. He approaches the front of the altar from the south, then turns to the right. [The words 'the east' do not apply here, as the first sprinkling is made, as stated, in the north-east. They are mentioned as a current phraseology arising from the context in which the phrase 'all the turns you make etc.' is first used. V. infra 58b.]
- (8) [The he-goat of the New Moon.]
- (9) Translate ad hoc: 'upon the burnt-offering', instead of 'beside the burnt-offering', cf. supra p. 68.
- (10) Temple Superintendent, v. infra p. 97' n. 4.
- (11) In which lambs were kept, which had been passed as fit for sacrifices, in accord with Lev. I, 11.
- (12) Shek. V, 3, 5. There were four seals in the Temple and on them was inscribed 'Calf', 'Ram', 'Kid', 'Sinner'; 'Calf' signifying drink-offerings for (sacrifices from) the herd... 'Kid' signifying drink-offerings for (sacrifices from) the flocks . . . 'Ram' signifying drink-offerings for rams, 'Sinner' signifying drink-offerings for the three beasts offered up by the lepers. Anyone who wished to obtain drink-offerings would go to Johanan who was in charge of the seals, give him money and receive from him a seal, go from him to Ahiyah who was in charge of the drink-offerings, give him the seal and receive from him the drink-offering. V. Num. XV, 1-12.
- (13) In which the fire was perpetually maintained, v. Tam. I, 1.
- (14) Tam. 30a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 16a

the south-eastern was the cell wherein they made shewbread; in the north-eastern the Hasmoneans hid the stones of the altar, which the Greek kings had defiled;¹ through the north-western they went down to the chamber of immersion!² — R. Huna said: Who is the authority for [the anonymous Mishnahs in] Middoth? R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for we have learnt: The court of the women was one hundred and thirty-five cubits long and one hundred and thirty-five cubits wide. At its four corners there were four cells. What was their use? The south-eastern was the Cell of the Nazirites, where the Nazirites cooked their peace-offerings, and cut off their hair and cast it under the pot;³ the north-eastern was the Cell of the Wood-shed, wherein priests afflicted with a blemish were standing to examine the wood for worms-for any wood wherein a worm was found is unfit for the altar; the north-western was the Cell of the Lepers; as to the south-western, R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: I forget what its use was, whilst Abba Saul said: There they put wine and oil and it used to be called the Cell of the House of Oils.⁴ It may also be proved by reasoning that the authority for [the anonymous Mishnahs in] Middoth is R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for we have learnt: All the walls that were there [in the Temple] were high with the exception of the eastern wall, because the priest who burns the heifer stands on the Mount of Olives and looks towards the entrance of the Temple at the time the blood [of the heifer] is sprinkled.⁵

And we have learnt: All the entrances that were there; were twenty cubits high and ten cubits wide.⁶ And we have learnt: Inside this⁷ was the Soreg [a railing of lattice work].⁸ And we have learnt: Inside this was the Hel [rampart],⁹ ten cubits broad. There were twelve steps there,¹⁰ the height of each step was half a cubit and the depth of each step was half a cubit. [Furthermore]: Fifteen steps which led from the Court of the Israelites to the Court of the Women, the height and depth of each step being half a cubit.¹¹ [Furthermore we learnt]: Between the Hall¹² and the altar there were twenty-two cubits, there were twelve steps, the height and depth of each half a cubit;¹³ and we have learnt: R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: There¹⁴ was a step one cubit high and the platform¹⁵ was set thereon and on it were three steps half a cubit high each.¹⁶ Now, if you can say that the authority for the anonymous¹⁷ [Mishnahs in Tamid] is R. Eliezer b. Jacob then it will be quite right, because according to him the door is concealed;¹⁸ but if you should say that it is in accord with [the other] Rabbis, there would be left half a cubit through which the door would be visible!¹⁹ — R. Adda b. Ahaba said: It is R. Judah, for it has been taught:²⁰ R. Judah said: The altar was placed exactly in the centre of the Temple Court, measuring thirty-two cubits;

(1) The Hellenized Syrians under Antiochus Epiphanes, I Macc. IV, 44f.

(2) Mid. I, 6. An obvious contradiction of the first account above.

(3) Num. VI, 18: And the Nazirite shall shave his consecrated head at the door of the tent of meeting, and shall take the hair of his consecrated head, and put it on the fire which is under the sacrifice of peace-offerings.

(4) Mid. II, 5. R. Eliezer b. Jacob's statement, 'I forget what its use was indicates that he was the authority of the anonymous Mishnah.

(5) V. Mid. II, 4. (5) The following statement should make what follows clear. All the entrances of the buildings on the Temple mount were twenty cubits high. Inside the Hel were twelve steps, each half a cubit high. From the Court of the Women to the Court of Israel led fifteen steps, and twelve from the Hall to the Temple. Together thirty-nine steps, each half a cubit high, making nineteen and one half cubits in toto. According to this Tanna one need not assume that the eastern wall was lower, for since the height of the entrance is twenty cubits, there would still remain one half cubit of the door, which the steps (being only nineteen and one half cubits high) could not hide, so that the priest burning the heifer could look directly from the top of the Mount of Olives into the entrance to the Temple through the various entrances which were all exactly one against the other. But since we learnt that the eastern wall was lower, the Mishnah must be in accord with Eliezer b. Jacob, according to whom two and one half cubits were added to the height of the steps, for we have learnt in his name: There was a step, one cubit high, on which stood the platform with three steps of half a cubit height each. If we add that to the nineteen and a half cubits of the combined heights of the steps, we get twenty-two cubits (v. Tosaf. Jesh.) and that height would hide from view the entrance which was only twenty cubits high. The high priest burning the heifer looked westwards from the Mount of Olives, i.e. towards the eastern wall of the Temple, that is why, according to R. Eliezer b. Jacob, the eastern wall had to be lower, and that is the conclusive evidence that the anonymous Mishnah of Tamid is in accord with R. Eliezer.

(6) Mid. II, 3.

(7) Inside the entrance of the Temple Mount around the inner parts containing the Court of the Women and the Court of the Temple.

(8) [Or 'a stone wall', Mid. II, 3. The Soreg was the barrier beyond which heathens were not permitted to approach the Temple area, cf. Josephus, Wars, v. 5, 2.]

(9) [A raised platform going around the inner precincts.]

(10) In those ten cubits of the Hel leading up to the Court of the Women.

(11) Ibid.

(12) Ulam, leading to the interior of the Temple.

(13) Mid. III, 6.

(14) Between the Court of the Israelites and the Court of the Priests.

(15) It is the platform of the Levites, on which they stood, when singing or teaching, and from which the priests pronounced the benediction, V. Mid. II, 6.

(16) Mid. II, 2.

(17) Whenever no teacher is mentioned in the Mishnah of Middoth it is R. Eliezer b. Jacob, or whenever a Tanna is mentioned as opposing the anonymous Mishnah, he opposes R. Eliezer b. Jacob.

(18) By the height of the steps.

(19) To the priest looking across from the Mount of Olives; what necessity then was there for the eastern wall to be lower?

(20) The Tanna who said that the eastern Temple wall was lower.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 16b

ten cubits opposite the door of the Temple, eleven cubits toward the north, and eleven cubits toward the south. With the result that the altar was exactly opposite the Temple and its walls.¹ But, if you should consider that the authority for Middoth is in accord with R. Judah, how could the altar possibly have stood in the centre of the Temple? Surely we have learnt: The Temple Court in all had a length of a hundred and eighty-seven cubits and a width of a hundred and thirty-five cubits. From east to west it extended over a hundred and eighty-seven cubits; the space which [lay] Israelites trod was eleven cubits; eleven cubits was the space which the priests trod; the altar occupied thirty-two; between Hall and altar were twenty-two cubits; the Sanctuary a hundred cubits and eleven cubits behind the place of the mercy seat.² From north to south was a hundred and thirty-five cubits; the ramp and the altar occupying sixty-two cubits, from the altar to the rings³ eight cubits; the place of the rings twenty-four; from the rings to the tables four; from the tables to the columns four;⁴ from the columns to the walls of the Temple Court eight cubits and the remainder lay between the ramp and the wall and the place of the columns.⁵ Now if you were to consider that the authority for Middoth is R. Judah, how is it possible that the altar be in the centre of the Temple, since the bigger part of the altar lies towards the south?⁶

(1) The inside of the Temple was twenty cubits, the walls were six cubits in depth, and the height of the altar was nine cubits to which must be added the thirteen and a half cubits rise in the level of the Court of the Israelites where the altar stood making a total of twenty-two and a half cubits; thus the altar would hide the Temple door, hence the lower eastern wall. V. Zeb. 58b.

(2) [An empty space beyond the Holy of Holies, the purpose of which is not stated anywhere.]

(3) They were set in the ground in the slaughter-house, north of the altar, and the necks of the animals were placed in them. The most holy sacrifices were slain on the north side of the altar, Zeb. 47a.

(4) Low columns placed in the ground, to which iron hooks were attached, on which the animals were hung for flaying.

(5) Mid. V, 1, 2.

(6) [The figures given here as from south to north make a total of a hundred and ten cubits. To this must be added the space of four cubits occupied by the table, which is not mentioned here, then leaving a remainder of twenty-one cubits which lay equally between the ramp and the wall and the place of columns. This allows for ten and a half cubits for the space between the ramp (which was on the south of the altar) and the southern wall of the court. Deducting this from sixty-seven and a half cubits which was half the breadth of the court from south to north, we are left with fifty-seven cubits within which lay the ramp, thirty cubits in length, and twenty-seven out of the thirty-cubits of the altar proper, with the result that the larger part of the altar lay in the southern half of the court. V. Rashi.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 17a

Must one not rather infer that the authority [for Middoth] is R. Eliezer b. Jacob?¹ That is the right inference.

R. Adda,² the son of R. Isaac said: That cell³ was removed [from both] corners;⁴ to him that came from the north it appeared to be in the south and to him who came from the south it appeared to be in the north — It is to be proved by inference that it lay more in the south-west. Whence [can this be proved]? From a contradiction from [one statement about the] Cell of the Shewbread to [another statement about the] Cell of the Shewbread and the answer given by R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua: 'One teacher considers it as lying to the right, and the other as lying to the left'.⁵

(1) [And the entrance of the Sanctuary was covered from the sight of the priest, who burnt the heifer on the Mount of Olives, by the extra step and not by the altar, for according to him the whole altar lay in the southern half of the court. V. infra 37b.]

(2) R. Adda wishes to reconcile the two contradictory Mishnahs in regard to the position of the Cell of the Lambs.

(3) The Cell of the Lambs.

(4) [Situated on the west side it extended from north to south, though removed from both extremities.]

(5) The Tanna in Tamid (supra 15b) mentions the Cell of the Lambs in the north-west, and assuming that he is counting towards the right, the Cell of the Seals would be in the south-west, the Cell of the Fireplace in the south-east, and the Cell of the Shewbread in the north-east. Against that the objection was raised, viz., the Mishnah in Middoth places the Cell of the Shewbread in the south-east. Whereupon R. Huna said: The Tanna of Middoth counts from the right, whereas the Tanna of Tamid counts from the left. Now, if we say that the Tanna of Tamid, who says that the Cell of the Lambs lay in the north-western corner, admits that it lay more to the south-west, but that it appeared (as the Gemara above has it) to the north-west, and he started in reality counting from the south-west, that will explain the contradictory statements in Tamid and Middoth; but if you say that his statement, the Cell of Lambs lay in the north-western corner, is to be taken literally, there is no sense in the answer, for even if one counted towards the left, that cell would be lying in the south-western corner.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 17b

Now, if you say that it lay in the south-western corner, it will be right that he answers the objection raised from [one statement about] shewbread to [another statement about] shewbread; but if you say it lay in the north-western corner, what sense is there in the answer about the shewbread? Must one not hence infer that it lay in the south-western corner? That is the right inference. But the Master has said: All the turns you make must be to the right, i.e., towards the east?¹ — That [rule] applies to the Temple service, but here it is merely on account of measurement.

FOR THE HIGH PRIEST IS FIRST IN OFFERING A PORTION AND FIRST IN TAKING A PORTION [OF THE SACRIFICES]. Our Rabbis taught: How is he first in offering a portion? He can say: This burnt-offering I shall offer up, this meal-offering I shall offer up. How has he first right in taking a portion? He can say: This sin-offering I am eating, this guilt-offering I am eating. He can take one of the two loaves,² four or five of the shewbread loaves. Rabbi says: Always five, for it is written: And it shall be for Aaron and his sons³ i.e., half for Aaron and half for his sons. This [statement in] itself is difficult. You have said: 'He takes one of the two loaves'. That is in accord with Rabbi, who says: He can take one half. Now say the middle portion: 'Four or five of the shewbread loaves', that is in accord with the Sages who say that he does not take one half. Now say the last portion: Rabbi says: 'Always [he takes] five'. Does, then, the first and last part agree with Rabbi and the middle with the Sages?—Abaye said: The first and the second parts agree with the Sages, and the Sages admit that it is not a proper thing to give the high priest a piece of bread.⁴

(1) V. supra p. 69.

(2) Of Pentecost, v. Lev. XXIII, 17.

(3) Lev. XXIV, 9.

(4) Hence he may take one of the two loaves of Pentecost.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 18a

How is 'four or five' to be taken? — According to the Sages who say:¹ The incoming Mishmar² took six and the outgoing group took six, and there is no fee for the locking of the Temple gates,³ the division is in respect of the twelve loaves. Deduct one from a half, that makes five. Whereas according to R. Judah who says: The incoming Mishmar takes seven, of which two are the fee for locking the Temple gates, and the outgoing division takes five; the division is in respect of ten⁴ loaves, take one off the half, thus he takes four. Raba said: The whole teaching is in accord with Rabbi, but he is of the opinion of R. Judah.⁵ How then does 'four' come in? He should take five? That is no difficulty: In the one case there is a Mishmar which⁶ delayed in the Sanctuary, in the other there is no such Mishmar. If there be a Mishmar which delayed,⁷ so that he would take four of them, the division is in respect of eight loaves; if there is no Mishmar which had delayed, one ought to divide ten, so that the division is in respect of ten loaves, he would take five loaves. If so, then, can Rabbi say: Always five? — That is, indeed, a difficulty. MISHNAH. THEY DELIVERED TO HIM ELDERS FROM THE ELDERS OF THE COURT AND THEY READ BEFORE HIM [THROUGHOUT THE SEVEN DAYS] OUT OF THE ORDER OF THE DAY.⁸ THEY SAID TO HIM, SIR HIGH PRIEST, READ YOU YOURSELF WITH YOUR OWN MOUTH, PERCHANCE YOU HAVE FORGOTTEN OR PERCHANCE YOU HAVE NEVER LEARNT. ON THE EVE OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT IN THE MORNING THEY PLACE HIM AT THE EASTERN GATE AND PASS BEFORE HIM OXEN, RAMS AND SHEEP, THAT HE MAY LEARN TO KNOW AND BECOME FAMILIAR WITH THE SERVICE. THROUGHOUT THE SEVEN DAYS THEY DID NOT WITHHOLD FOOD OR DRINK FROM HIM. BUT ON THE EVE OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT NEAR NIGHTFALL THEY WOULD NOT LET HIM EAT MUCH BECAUSE FOOD BRINGS ABOUT SLEEP.

GEMARA. It is quite right that [they assume] perchance he has forgotten, but that he never learnt, do we ever appoint men of that type? Surely it has been taught: And the priest that is highest among his brethren,⁹ that means he should be highest among his brethren in strength, in beauty, in wisdom, and in riches. Others¹⁰ say: Whence do we know that if he does not possess [any wealth], his brethren, the priests, endow him?¹¹ To teach us that it says: 'And the priest who is great by reason of his brethren',¹² i.e., make him great from what his brethren have?¹³ -R. Joseph said: That is no difficulty. One refers to the first Temple, the other to the second, for R. Assi said: A tarkabful¹⁴ of denars did Martha,¹⁵ the daughter of Boethus give to King Jannai¹⁶ to nominate¹⁷ Joshua ben Gamala as one of the high priests.¹⁸

ON THE EVE OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT IN THE MORNING: A Tanna taught: Also the he-goats. Why has our Tanna not taught he-goats? — Since they are meant for sin[-offerings], he might feel discouraged. If it be so: does not a bullock,¹⁹ too, come for a sin[-offering]? — Since that comes for himself and his brethren the priests, [there is this advantage] that if there be one among his brethren the priests with whom there is something the matter, he would know it and bring him back to repentance, but would he know that with all Israel? Rabina said: This is what the popular proverb means: If your sister's son has been appointed a constable, look out that you pass not before him in the street.²⁰

THROUGHOUT THE SEVEN DAYS THEY DID NOT WITHHOLD etc. It has been taught: R. Judah b. Nakussa said: One fed him [cakes] of fine flour and eggs in order to produce [speedy] elimination. They answered him: Thus you will induce the more excitement.²¹

It has been taught: Symmachus said in the name of R. Meir: One does not feed him either A'B'Y,²² and some say, neither A'B'B'Y,²² and some say neither white wine. Neither A'B'Y, i.e., neither Ethrog [citron], nor Bezim [eggs], nor Yayin yashan [old wine]. And, according to others, no A'B'B'Y, i.e., neither Ethrog, nor Bezim, nor Bassar shamen [fat meat], nor Yayin yashan, some say neither white wine because white wine induces levitical impurity in man.²³ — Our Rabbis taught: To one afflicted with gonorrhoea one assigns food or too many kinds of food as the cause²⁴ of an attack of gonorrhoea. Eleazar b. Phinehas says in the name of R. Judah b. Bathyra: One does not feed him²⁵ either H'G'B'Y or G'B'M, or any other thing that induces impurity. Neither H'G'B'Y, i.e., neither Halab [milk], nor Gebinah [cheese], nor Bezah, nor Yayin: nor G'B'M, i.e., neither megrisen shel pul [soup of pounded beans] , nor Basar shamen,, nor Muries²⁶ . ‘Nor any other matters [foods] that induce impurity’ — What is that meant to include? — It is meant to include what our Rabbis taught: Five things induce impurity in man, they are as follows: garlic,

(1) Suk. 56a.

(2) A division of priests, v. Glos. s.v. These divisions changed every Sabbath.

(3) [On Saturday evening, though the gates had been opened on that day by the outgoing division.]

(4) Not the half, as Rabbi would have it.

(5) That the two loaves are never divided.

(6) On festivals all priests irrespective of division came up for service in the Temple and shared in the shewbread. If the festival starts on a Sunday, the guest priests would have to arrive in Jerusalem on the Friday before, since travel on the Sabbath is forbidden. Similarly, if the festival closes on Friday, the priests would have to stay over the Sabbath in Jerusalem. Hence, in either case, they share equally in the shewbread with the priests of the division in service in that particular week. If however, the festival started on a Monday, so that the guest priests might have arrived on Sunday, but instead came on Friday already; or, if the festival closed on Thursday, so that the priests might have returned on Friday, but stayed in Jerusalem until Sunday, such ‘delaying’ divisions (or guest divisions) were allotted only two loaves whilst the remaining ten loaves were divided between the incoming and outgoing weekly divisions.

(7) And which obtained two loaves, Only eight remain for division — two having paid for the locking of the doors-and the high priest would receive but four.

(8) As prescribed in Lev. XVI.

(9) Lev. XXI, 10.

(10) Either: anonymous authorities, differing with the first Tanna of the Mishnah; or R. Meir, v. Hor. 13b.

(11) Raise him to independence by a collection taken up by all the priests.

(12) This is an ad hoc translation: (a) who is highest among his brethren (b) who is high because (of what) his brethren (do for him).

(13) V. Hul. 134b.

(14) [(a) קב = תרי קב two kabs; (b)  = 2 1/2 kabs.]

(15) [His wife, v. Yeb. 61a.]

(16) [Jannai is often employed in the Talmud as a general patronymic for Hasmonean and Herodian rulers. Here it stands for Agrippa II, v. Josephus Ant. XX, 9, 4, and Derenbourg, Essai, 248ff.]

(17) The text has על ‘because (he had nominated him)’. D.S. reads, correctly, עד ‘so that’.

(18) To be, ‘the elected by the electors’.

(19) Lev. XVI, 6, 11.

(20) Because he knows all your affairs and he may blackmail you.

(21) With the danger of pollution, which would unfit him for the service on the Day of Atonement, on the morrow.

(22) Mnemonic signs, explained below.

(23) Causing sex excitement and thus possible pollution.

(24) That benefit of the doubt will have this advantage for him: If it were due to his usual illness, he would have to count seven days from the day it happened before he would be pure again, but now he can continue his original count.

(25) During the time when he examines himself to make sure there has been no recurrent attack of gonorrhoea.

(26) A brine or pickle containing fish-hash and sometimes wine (Jast.).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 18b

pepperwort, purslane, eggs, and garden-rocket.

And one went out into the field to gather oroth [herbs]¹ — A Tanna taught in the name of R. Meir: That refers to garden-rocket. R. Johanan said: Why are they called 'oroth'? because they enlighten the eyes.² R. Huna said: If one finds a garden-rocket he should eat it, if he can, and if not he should pass it over his eyes. R. Papa said: That refers to rocket growing on the balk. R. Giddal said in the name of Rab: A guest should not eat eggs nor sleep in the garment of his host.³ Whenever Rab came to Darshis,⁴ he would announce: Who would be mine for a day?⁵ Whenever R. Nahman would come to Shekunzib⁶ he would have it announced: Who will be mine for a day? But has it not been taught:⁷ No man should marry a woman in one country and then go and marry a woman in another country lest they [their children]⁸ might marry one another with the result that a brother would marry his sister or a father his daughter, and one fill all the world with bastardy to which the scriptural passage refers: And the land become full of lewdness?⁹ — I will tell you: [The affairs of] the Rabbis are well-known.¹⁰ But did not Raba say: If one has proposed marriage to a woman and she has consented then she must await seven clean¹¹ days? — The Rabbis informed them before by sending their messenger earlier. Or, if you like, say: They only arranged for private meetings with them, because 'You cannot compare one who has bread in his basket with one who has no bread in his basket'.¹²

MISHNAH. THE ELDERS OF THE COURT HANDED HIM OVER TO THE ELDERS OF THE PRIESTHOOD AND THEY TOOK HIM UP TO THE UPPER CHAMBER TO THE HOUSE OF ABTINAS.¹³ THEY ADJURED HIM, TOOK THEIR LEAVE, AS THEY SAID TO HIM: SIR HIGH PRIEST, WE ARE MESSENGERS OF THE BETH DIN AND YOU ARE OUR MESSENGER AND THE MESSENGER OF THE COURT. WE ADJURE YOU BY HIM THAT MADE HIS NAME TO DWELL IN THIS HOUSE THAT YOU DO NOT CHANGE ANYTHING OF WHAT WE SAID TO YOU.¹⁴ HE TURNED ASIDE AND WEPT AND THEY TURNED ASIDE AND WEPT.¹⁵ IF HE WAS A SAGE HE WOULD EXPOUND, AND IF NOT, THE DISCIPLES OF THE SAGES WOULD EXPOUND BEFORE HIM. IF HE WAS FAMILIAR WITH READING [THE SCRIPTURES] HE WOULD READ. IF NOT THEY WOULD READ BEFORE HIM. FROM WHAT WOULD THEY READ BEFORE HIM? FROM JOB, EZRA AND CHRONICLES.¹⁶ ZECHARIAH BEN KUBETAL SAID: OFTEN HAVE I READ BEFORE HIM FROM DANIEL.

(1) II Kings, IV, 39.

(2) This is a play on 'oroth', as if it were derived from the root 'or', light, thus 'enlightening'.

(3) Eggs might induce pollution. He might suffer pollution in the host's garment, which would be a doubly unpleasant occurrence.

(4) Be-Ardashir near Mahuza.

(5) Who would marry me for one day. 'This strange statement, completely contradicted by the saintly character of both Rab (v. 'Er. 100a, Hag. 5a, Keth. 48b, Sanh. 76a) and R. Nahman, has been explained through an account in Babli 76b. King Shapur entertained two guests, Bati b. Toba and Mar Judah. In accordance with Persian custom, he "honoured" them by sending to each a concubine. This gift was rejected by Mar Judah, but accepted by Bar Toba. Rab and R. Nahman, as leaders of their people would find themselves similarly embarrassed by such attention, on the occasion of their official visits to Persian cities. Some princes are known to have taken the refusal of their "gift" as a serious affront. In order to avoid complications, these Rabbis hit upon the device of declaring themselves married, i.e., provided with a wife in the city they visited, going to the length of marrying "for a day" the local wife, thus helping them to escape the royal "gift".' For another explanation v. Yeb., Sonc. ed., p. 235 n. 7.

(6) On the eastern bank of the Tigris.

(7) Yeb. 37b

(8) 'They' may mean either the children of that man, son and daughter, may meet as strangers; or he might meet his own daughter. The assumption being that he divorces his wife and so loses interest in her child.

(9) Lev. XIX, 29.

(10) Their children, their wives. They would boast of their descent, or of having once been married to a Sage.

(11) The assumption being that because of the excitement involved she has become a menstruant.

(12) The craving of him who lacks the opportunity of gratifying it is much more intense than that of him who has the opportunity.

(13) There the family of Abtinas prepared the incense, there the high priest was taught the skillful manipulation that would enable him to take up the incense without spilling one grain.

(14) That he would not act in the manner of the Sadducees. V. Gemara.

(15) The elders, because they had to utter such suspicion, he, because they had done so.

(16) These books, less known, might arouse his interest and keep him awake. Sleep was to be prevented, because of the risk of pollution.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 19a

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: To teach him¹ the manipulation of hafinah.² R. Papa said: The high priest had two cells. One, the Cell of the Counsellors,³ the other, the Cell of the House of Abtinas;⁴ one to the north, the other to the south. 'One to the north', as we have learnt: Six cells were in the Temple Court, three to the north, three to the south.⁵ Those to the north were the Cell of the Salt, the Cell of Parwah,⁶ the Rinsing Cell. Into the Cell of the Salt the salt for the sacrifice was put; 'The Cell of Parwah', there the hides of the animal-offerings were salted and on its roof was the place of immersion for the high priest on the Day of Atonement; 'The Rinsing Cell': there the inwards of the animal-offerings were rinsed and an incline led from it to the roof of the Parwah Cell. The three to the north were: The Wood-Cell, the Exile Cell,⁷ and the Cell of Hewn Stone. Concerning the Wood-Cell R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: I have forgotten what it was used for, but Abba Saul said: It was the Cell of the high priest and it lay behind the two and the roof of all the three was of the same height. 'The Exile Cell'; there was the Exile cistern, and a wheel was placed above it and from there they drew water for the whole Temple Court. 'The Cell of Hewn Stone'; there the Sanhedrin of Israel was sitting and judging the priests and whosoever was found unfit would put on a black dress and wrap himself in black, go out and go his way. And one in whom no blemish was found would put on a white garment, wrap himself in white, enter the Sanctuary and officiate with his brethren. 'One cell was to the south', as we have learnt.⁸ There were seven gates in the Temple Court, three to the north, three to the south and one to the east. To the south: The Gate of Kindling, next to it the Gate of the Firstlings, the third being the Gate of the Water.⁹ To the east the Nicanor Gate,¹⁰ beside which were two cells, one to the right and the other to the left; the former the Cell of Phinehas, the keeper of the garments and the latter the Cell of the Makers of the Griddle Cakes. To the north: The Gate of the Spark:¹¹ it was a kind of portico with an upper chamber built on top of it, and the priests kept watch above and the Levites below. It had a doorway to the Hel;¹² next to it was the Gate of the offering¹³ and the third was the Gate of the Cell of the Fireplace. And it was further taught: The high priest immersed himself five times and performed ten sanctifications¹⁴ on that day, all of them on holy ground on the roof of the Parwah house, with the exception of this one,¹⁵ which was on profane ground, on top of the Gate¹⁶ which latter was beside his own cell. But, [continues R. Papa], I do not know whether the Cell of the Counsellors was to the north and the Cell of the house of Abtinas to the south, or the Cell of the house of Abtinas to the north and the Cell of the Counsellors to the south. But it could be proven that the Counsellors' Cell was to the south. How? He would get up,¹⁷ relieve nature, immerse himself,¹⁸ turn northward to learn his hafinah practice,¹⁹ enter the Sanctuary and officiate all day at the service; towards evening he would be sprinkled,²⁰ return southward, immerse himself²¹ and rest. But if you were to say that the Counsellors' Cell is to the north, he would then get up, relieve nature,²² turn to the south, immerse himself and learn the hafinah, enter the Sanctuary, perform the service all day, be sprinkled towards evening, return to the south and immerse himself, and then he would have to turn and go to the north to rest. Would we trouble him so much?²³ Why should we not put him to much trouble so that if he be a Sadducee, he will give up; or in order that he become not too overbearing; for if you do not say so, let us place the two [cells] next to each other; or, let one be enough for him.

THEY SAID TO HIM: SIR HIGH PRIEST etc. Shall we say that this²⁴ will be a refutation of R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua, for R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua said: These priests are messengers of the All Merciful God. For if you were to say they are our own messengers,

-
- (1) The high priest, in that chamber.
 - (2) The taking of handfuls of incense.
 - (3) Where he slept.
 - (4) Where he would learn hafinah.
 - (5) Mid. V, 3.
 - (6) Named after a Persian builder of that name.
 - (7) [So called because it was constructed by the returned exiles from Babylon.]
 - (8) Mid. I, 4.
 - (9) Into which a bottle of water was brought for the water libation on the Sukkoth festival, v. Shek. 9a.
 - (10) Named after its designer or donor.
 - (11) A perpetual flame was kept up in its upper chamber to rekindle the fire in the Cell of the Fire-place.
 - (12) V. supra p. 72, n. 4.
 - (13) Animals destined for most holy sacrifices were brought there, because they had to be slaughtered on the north side of the altar.
 - (14) Washing his hands and feet; that is the traditional interpretation of Lev. XVI, 24.
 - (15) The first immersion, obligatory on any day, to anyone desiring to enter the Temple, v. infra 30b.
 - (16) V. infra 30a. This proves R. Papa's statement that the high priest had a private cell on the south side where the Water Gate was situated.
 - (17) Every morning of the seven days.
 - (18) [Assuming that the Counsellor's Cell where he slept was in the south, all this would take place in the south. The place for the first immersion was as first stated on top of the Water Gate which was no the south.]
 - (19) [That is in the cell of Abtinah.]
 - (20) The sprinkling made the clean unclean, hence the necessity of immediate immersion so as to fit him for to-morrow's service.
 - (21) V. supra 4b.
 - (22) [This would, on this assumption, take place in the north.]
 - (23) Hence it seemed reasonable to assume that the Counsellors' Cell lay to the south.
 - (24) Our Mishnah, according to which he is addressed as 'Our Messenger'.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 19b

is there anything that we ourselves are unable to perform¹ and our messengers can perform?² — Rather this is what they said to him: We adjure you according to our mind and in the mind of the Beth din.³

HE TURNED ASIDE AND WEPT AND THEY TURNED ASIDE AND WEPT. He turned aside and wept because they suspected him of being a Sadducee,⁴ and they turned aside and wept, for R. Joshua b. Levi said: Whosoever suspects good folks will suffer [for it] on his own body.⁵ Why was all this [solemn adjuration] necessary? Lest he arrange the incense outside and thus bring it in, in the manner of the Sadducees.⁶

Our Rabbis taught: There was a Sadducee who had arranged the incense without, and then brought it inside.⁷ As he left he was exceedingly glad. On his coming out his father met him and said to him: My son, although we are Sadducees, we are afraid of the Pharisees. He replied: All my life was I aggrieved because of this scriptural verse: For I appear in the cloud upon the ark-cover.⁸ I would say: When shall the opportunity come to my hand so that I might fulfil it.⁹ Now that such opportunity has come to my hand, should I not have fulfilled it? It is reported that it took only a few days until he died and was thrown on the dunghheap and worms came forth from his nose. Some say: He was smitten as he came out [of the Holy of Holies]. For R. Hiyya taught: Some sort of a noise was heard in the Temple Court, for an angel had come and struck him down on his face [to the ground] and his brethren the priests came in and they found the trace as of a calf's foot on his shoulder,¹⁰ as it is written: And their feet were straight feet, and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot.¹¹

R. ZECHARIAH, THE SON OF KEBUTAL, SAID etc.: R. Hanan, the son of Raba, repeated to Hiyya, the son of Rab in the presence of Rab: R. Zechariah the son of Kefutal, whereupon Rab indicated to him with [a gesture of] the hand: [that it should be] Kebutal. Why did he not speak to him? — He was reading the Shema'.¹² But is such [interruption] permitted, has not R. Isaac b. Samuel b. Martha said: He who reads the Shema' may neither blink with his eyes, nor gesticulate with his lips, nor point with his fingers; and it has also been taught: R. Eleazar Hisma said concerning him who whilst reading the Shema' blinks with his eyes, gesticulates with his lips or points with his fingers, Scripture has said: Thou hast not called upon me, O Jacob?¹³ — There is no difficulty; one view refers to the first portion of the Shema', the other to the second portion.¹⁴

Our Rabbis have taught: And thou shalt speak of them,¹⁵ 'of them', but not during prayer;¹⁶ of them thou mayest speak, but not of other things.¹⁷ R. Aha said: 'And thou shalt speak of them', i.e. make them a regular programme, and not a casual topic. Raba said: One who engages in profane talk transgresses a positive command, for it is written: 'And thou shalt speak of them', 'of them', but not of other matters. R. Aha b. Jacob said: He transgresses against a prohibition, for it is said: All things toil to weariness; man cannot utter it.¹⁸

MISHNAH. IF HE SOUGHT TO SLUMBER, YOUNG¹⁹ PRIESTS WOULD SNAP THEIR MIDDLE FINGER²⁰ BEFORE HIM AND SAY: SIR HIGH PRIEST, ARISE AND DRIVE THE SLEEP AWAY²¹ THIS ONCE ON THE PAVEMENT. THEY WOULD KEEP HIM AMUSED UNTIL THE TIME FOR THE SLAUGHTERING [OF THE DAILY MORNING OFFERING] WOULD APPROACH.

GEMARA. What is 'zeredah?' — Rab Judah said: The rival of this one, which is it? the thumb.²² R. Huna demonstrated it and its sound could be heard in the whole academy.

AND THEY WOULD SAY: SIR HIGH PRIEST, ARISE AND DRIVE THE SLEEP AWAY THIS ONCE. R. Isaac said: [Show us] something new.²³ What was that? — They said to him: Show us the kidah.²⁴

AND THEY WOULD KEEP HIM AMUSED UNTIL THE TIME FOR THE SLAUGHTERING WOULD APPROACH. A Tanna taught: They kept him amused neither with the harp nor with the lyre, but with the mouth. What were they singing? Except the Lord build a house, they labour in vain that build it.²⁵ Some of the worthiest of Jerusalem²⁶ did not go to sleep all the night in order that the high priest might hear the reverberating noise,²⁷ so that sleep should not overcome him suddenly. It has been taught: Abba Saul said: Also in the country²⁸ they used to do so²⁹ in memory of the Temple, but they used to commit sin.³⁰ Abaye, or, as some say, R. Nahman b. Isaac, interpreted that to refer to Nehardea. For Elijah said to Rab Judah, the brother of R. Sila the Pious: You have said: Why has not Messiah come? Now to-day is the Day of Atonement and yet how many virgins were embraced in Nehardea! He answered: What did the Holy One, blessed be He, say? — He answered:

(1) V. Ned. 35a. Prohibiting the making of gestures whilst reading the Shema'.

(2) Permitting the making of gestures.

(3) [He is addressed as 'Our Messenger' only in respect of this adjuration, i.e., to impress on him that he must take the oath in the sense as understood by them. (V. Ned. 24b-25a).]

(4) The Sadducees held that the high priest should prepare the incense on the fire pan before entering the Holy of Holies so that he would enter it with the pan as smoke. Many priests were suspected of adhering to that sect, hence the necessity of that solemn adjuration that the high priest would make no change.

(5) The text for this teaching is Ex. IV, I and 6. Moses had 'suspected' Israel of disbelieving the message of the Lord, when he would bring it to them, hence he was smitten with leprosy. But the leprosy there was neither meant as punishment, nor abiding, the verses are used illustratively rather than logically for the present purpose.

(6) V. infra 53a.

(7) Into the Holy 'of Holies.

(8) Lev. XVI, 2.

(9) The Sadducees interpreted the passage: For I appear in the cloud, as if it said: For I am to be seen only with the cloud (of the incense) upon the ark-cover. The whole verse, according to them is to mean: Let him not come into the holy place except with the cloud (of incense), for only thus, with the cloud, am I to be seen on the ark-cover. Hence the Sadducees' effort to enter the Holy of Holies with the fire pan as smoke, prepared and lit outside.

(10) [The high priest, in coming out of the Holy of Holies, walked backward so as not to turn his back on the Holy of Holies (v. infra 52b). When he reached the threshold and his back first emerged behind the curtain, the angel who was outside the curtain struck him on his back between the shoulders and threw him down, making him fall forward into the Holy of Holies with his face to the ground. There he lay till his brother priests came and threw him out. Cf. J. Yoma, I, 5. Lauterbach J.Z. HUCA IV, p. 193.]

(11) Ezek. I, 7. That trace is the 'evidence' that an angel had struck him, kicked him with his foot. The 'four living creatures' are identified with angels.

(12) V. Glos.

(13) Isa. XLIII, 22.

(14) In the first portion occur the words 'And these words shall be on thy heart', indicating that special devotion is necessary for such prayer to be properly read. Deut. VI, 6. The second portion, ibid XI, 13-22, contains no such special emphasis, hence no such restriction applies.

(15) Deut. VI, 7.

(16) Prayer should be silent.

(17) Loose talk, prattle.

(18) Eccl. I, 8. 'Cannot', i.e., 'ought not', i.e., 'must not',

(19) Lit., 'flowers' then 'young men' fig., in Job XXX, 12 the word is used contemptuously: Upon my right hand rises the brood.

(20) Zeredah is the middle finger, Tosef. Men, 35b as against Rashi a.l. Jastrow would derive it from zarad (be rough, in sound), thus 'the snapping finger'. Baneth (Mo'ed, a.l.) would connect it with 'strideo' (Engl. a 'strident' note). But since 'makkeh' is used for playing on a musical instrument, it may be that 'they played before him with the snapping finger', to keep him amused: or, cf. the Roman 'crepitus digitorum', it may have been a sign of command: Arise!

(21) 'Pug' means to stop. Lam. II, 18 thus 'remove', thus 'remove sleep'. The pavement was cool for his naked feet.

(22) Phonetic play: the match to this (the middle finger) or the nearest to this (the index finger), what is it? The thumb, i.e., the sound is produced with these two fingers (Jast.).

(23) על חדת lit., 'for something new explaining אַחַת' this once' in the Mishnah.

(24) Pressing both big toes against the floor, bowing and kissing the pavement, and rising without moving the feet — this difficult performance was called the kidah-the bowing to the ground.

(25) Ps. CXXXVII, 1. By implication: Except your service will be motivated by reverence for God, it will be in vain.

(26) יְקִירֵי יְרוּשָׁלַיִם 'the nobility of Jerusalem' designated also נְקִי־הַדְּעָת שְׁבִירוּשָׁלַיִם v. Klein מדעי היהדות I (1926) p. 74ff.]

(27) Of the people awake around him, singing and amusing him.

(28) Lit., 'border-towns', then: the country outside Jerusalem.

(29) Stay up all night before the Day of Atonement.

(30) Intimacy developed between men and women.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 20a

Sin coucheth at the door.¹ — What about Satan? — He answered: Satan has no permission to act as accuser on the Day of Atonement. Whence [is that derived]? — Rama b. Hama said: Hasatan² in numerical value is three hundred and sixty-four, that means: on three hundred and sixty-four days he has permission to act as accuser, but on the Day of Atonement he has no permission to act as accuser.

MISHNAH. EVERY DAY ONE WOULD REMOVE³ [THE ASHES FROM] THE ALTAR AT KERI'ATH HA-GEBER OR ABOUT THAT TIME, EITHER BEFORE OR AFTER. BUT ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT AT MIDNIGHT,⁴ AND ON THE FEASTS AT THE FIRST WATCH,⁵ AND BEFORE THE COCKCROW APPROACHED THE TEMPLE COURT WAS FULL OF ISRAELITES. GEMARA. We have learnt elsewhere: If limbs [of animal offerings] burst off from upon the altar before midnight, they must be put back and the law of Me'ilah⁶ applies to them; if they sprang off the altar after midnight, they need not be put back and the law of Me'ilah does not apply to them.⁷ Whence do we know that?⁸ — Rab said: One scriptural verse says: All night and . . . he shall make smoke⁹ and another passage says: All night . . . and he shall take up [the ashes],¹⁰ how is that? Divide [the night] half of it for smoking and the other half for taking up [of the ashes].¹¹

R. Kahana raised an objection: EVERY DAY ONE WOULD REMOVE THE ASHES FROM THE ALTAR AT COCKCROW OR ABOUT THAT TIME, EITHER BEFORE OR AFTER. BUT ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT AT MIDNIGHT AND ON THE FEASTS AT THE FIRST WATCH: Now

(1) Gen. IV, 7. Overcoming people against their better intentions.

(2) The Satan.

(3) Lev. VI, 3: And the priest . . . shall take up the ashes whereto the fire hath consumed the burnt-offering on the altar, and he shall put them beside the altar. In reality one did not remove all the ashes, but a handful. The rest was swept together on top of the altar and formed gradually a cone or 'apple', (tapuah ha-mizbeah) which was considered an ornament. It was removed only when it occupied too much room: And he . . . shall carry forth the ashes without the camp unto a clean place (ibid. 4).

(4) To keep the high priest busy. This part of the work need not have been done by him, as Tosaf. Zeb. 86b proves.

(5) As to the watch, there is a diversity of opinion in Ber. 3a, some dividing the night into three, others into four such watches.

(6) Me'ilah is the law concerning the unlawful use of sacred property; ma'al means 'commit a trespass' and refers to the use or appropriation of anything that belongs to the altar, to the Sanctuary, to God. If me'ilah has been committed by error, there is reparation and a guilt-offering: If one commit a trespass and sin through error, then he shall bring his forfeit to the Lord, a ram without blemish . . . for a guilt-offering, and he shall make restitution for that which he hath done amiss . . . and shall add the fifth part thereto (Lev. V, 15-16).

(7) Zeb. 86a.

(8) That by midnight the limbs are considered consumed and treated as ashes.

(9) Lev. VI, 2-5. It is a loose combination of passages.

(10) In reality the smoking, mentioned at the end, might be assumed to take place at the end. The argument here is from the facts back to some support in the text.

(11) Any limb bursting off after midnight is regarded as consumed and can be removed as ashes.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 20b

if the thought should arise in you that midnight is a time fixed by the Torah, how could it be anticipated [or postponed]?¹ — Rather said R. Johanan: By mere logical conclusion from the text 'All the night' would I not know that it means until the morning, why then the teaching 'until the morning'? Add another morning to the 'morning of the night',² Hence every day one would remove the ashes at cockcrow, either before or after being ample [time]. On the Day of Atonement, when the high priest is weak, we do it about midnight and on the Feasts when many Israelites are present and many sacrifices³ are offered we do it from the first watch, as indeed the reason therefore is indicated: BEFORE THE COCKCROW APPROACHED, THE TEMPLE COURT WAS FULL OF ISRAELITES. What does 'keri'ath ha-geber'⁴ mean? — Rab said: The call of a man,⁵ R. Shila: The call of the cock. Rab came to the place of R. Shila, when there happened to be no interpreter⁶ to stand next to R. Shila, so Rab took the stand next to him and interpreted 'keriath hageber' as 'the call of the man'. R. Shila said to him: Would you, Sir, interpret it as: Cockcrow! Rab replied: 'A flute is musical to nobles, but give it to weavers, they will not accept it'.⁷ When I stood before R. Hiyya and interpreted 'keriath ha-geber' as the 'call of the man' he did not object to it and you say to me: Say, perhaps, the cock's crow! He said: Sir, you are Rab, would you sit down, Sir!⁸ He replied: People say: If you have hired yourself away [to someone] pull his wool!⁹ Some say: Thus did he reply to him: One may promote a man in holy things, but not demote¹⁰ him. There is a teaching in accordance with Rab, and there is also a teaching in accord with R. Shila. There is a teaching in accord with Rab: What does Gebini the Temple crier call out: Arise, ye priests for your service, Levites for your platform, Israel for your post! And his voice was audible for three parasangs. It happened that King Agrippa who came along travelling, heard his voice from three parasangs, and as he came home, he sent gifts to him. Nevertheless, the high priest is more excellent than even he, for the Master said:¹¹ It has happened already that when he prayed 'Oh Lord' that his voice was heard in Jericho, and Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: From Jerusalem to Jericho is a distance of ten parasangs:¹² and although here there is weakness,¹³ and there none, and here it is day and there night;¹⁴ for R. Levi said: Why is the voice of man not heard by day as it is heard by night? Because of the revolution¹⁵ of the sun which saws in the sky like a carpenter sawing cedars. Those sunmotes are called 'la',¹⁶ and with reference to them Nebuchadnezzar said:¹⁷ And all the inhabitants of the world are considered as 'la'. Our Rabbis taught: Were it not for the revolution of the sun, the sound of the tumult of Rome would be heard: and were it not for the sound of the tumult of Rome, the sound of the revolution of the sun would be heard.

Our Rabbis taught : There are three voices¹⁸ going from one end of the world to the other: The sound of the revolution of the sun; the sound of the tumult of Rome, and the sound of the soul as it leaves the body. Some say also the sound of childbirth

-
- (1) [Since before midnight it is not considered consumed. Rashi omits 'or postponed' which is bracketed in cur. edd. Tosaf. retains it explaining it on the principle that 'the zealous perform a religious duty as early as possible'.]
 - (2) The morning of the night' is the dawn. The additional morning is the margin of before and after the cockcrow.
 - (3) Since there were many ashes and they had all to be removed for the 'apple' to be imposing, they started earlier on these days.
 - (4) The call of 'geber'. That word means in Hebrew both 'man' and 'cock'. Hence it may mean that the work started at cockcrow or as soon as the man (officer) called them in the morning.
 - (5) The officer summoned all, priests, Levites, and Israelites, to their respective duties.
 - (6) Amora (v. Glos.). The Rabbi taught in Hebrew, which he spoke to the interpreter. The latter translated the lecture into Aramaic, the language of the people, as against Hebrew, more and more the language of the scholars (Rashi).
 - (7) I.e., fools would criticize, where men of taste admire.
 - (8) Do not continue as my interpreter. You are too big to serve me.
 - (9) Having undertaken the task, I will complete it, unconcerned about questions of dignity.
 - (10) The next interpreter may know very little and it would be a sort of disgrace for you to have to put up with an ignoramus after my service, The emphasis is on the ignoramus, not on any implied self-praise.
 - (11) Infra 39b.
 - (12) V. Glos.
 - (13) The weakness due to the Fast.
 - (14) The high priest prayed during the day, when his voice would be less audible because of the revolution of the sun.
 - (15) Lit., 'the wheel', V. Otzar ha-Geonim, a.l.: 'There is a voice heard now in Babylon, sounding from pools, and connected trenches, a harsh voice, which is ascribed to Ridya. Thus also do the Ishmaelites (Muslim Arabs) call it. It sounds from the month of Iyar through the harvest'. V. Ginzberg, Geonica, I, 345

(16) Nothing, to which is equal a mere mote, a particle.

(17) Ran. IV, 32. And 'in the inhabitants of the world are reputed as nothing is ad hoc translated 'as sun-motes'.

(18) Aliter: reputation.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 21a

and some say also the sound of Ridya.¹ The Sages prayed for the soul as it leaves the body and achieved the stopping [of that cry].

We have learnt in accord with R. Shila: If one starts out on a journey before kerith ha-geber, his blood comes upon his own head!² R. Josiah says: [He should wait] until he has crowed twice, some say: Until he has crowed thrice. What kind of cock? The average type.³

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: When the Israelites come up to the festivals, they stand pressed together,⁴ but they prostrate themselves, with wide spaces [between them], and they extend eleven cubits behind the back wall of the Holy of Holies.⁵ What does that mean? — It means that although they extended eleven cubits behind the back wall of the Holy of Holies, standing pressed together, yet when they prostrated themselves, they prostrated themselves with wide spaces [between them]. This is one of the ten miracles which were wrought in the Temple, for we have learnt: Ten miracles were wrought in the Temple:⁶ no woman miscarried from the scent of the holy flesh; the holy flesh never became putrid; no fly was seen in the slaughter house; no pollution ever befell the high priest on the Day of Atonement; no rain ever quenched the fire of the wood-pile on the altar; neither did the wind overcome the column of smoke that arose therefrom; nor was there ever found any disqualifying defect in the 'Omer⁷ or in the two loaves,⁸ or in the shewbread; though the people stood closely pressed together, they still found wide spaces between them to prostrate themselves; never did serpent or scorpion injure anyone in Jerusalem, nor did any man ever say to his fellow: The place is too narrow for me to stay overnight in Jerusalem.⁹ — He started with [miracles in] the Temple and concludes with [those wrought] in Jerusalem! — There are two more [miracles wrought] in the Temple. For it has been taught: Never did rains quench the fire of the pile of wood on the altar; and as for the smoke arising from the pile of wood, even if all the winds of the world came blowing, they could not divert it from its wonted place. But are there no more? Has not R. Shemaya of Kalnebo¹⁰ taught that the fragments of earthenware¹¹ were swallowed up in the very place [where they were broken];¹² and Abaye said: The crop, the feathers, the ashes removed from the inner altar and from the candlestick were swallowed up in the very place [where they were taken off]? — The three¹³ [referring to] disqualifications were included under one head, hence take off two and add two! But then all [cases of] things swallowed up ought also to be included under one¹⁴ head, so that the count would be one short? — There are also other [miracles], for R. Joshua b. Levi said:¹⁵ A great miracle was wrought with the shewbread, viz., when it was removed it was as fresh as when it was put on, as it was said: To put hot bread in the day it was taken away.¹⁶ But are there no more? Has not R. Levi said: This matter has been handed down as a tradition to us from our forefathers: The place on which the ark stands is not included in the measurement;¹⁷ and has not Rabbanai in the name of Samuel said: The Cherubs¹⁴ were standing by sheer miracle? — The count refers to miracles wrought outside [the Temple], miracles wrought inside are not mentioned. If that be so, what of the shewbread which is also a miracle that happened inside the Temple? — No, that miracle happened outside, for Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the passage: Upon the pure table before the Lord;¹⁸ the statement that it is pure implies that it was susceptible to uncleanness.

(1) אֵלֶּיךָ: name of the angel of rain. In Ta'an. 25b his figure is said to be that of a calf, and according to Rashi it is from this fact that it derives its name, אֵלֶּיךָ being the Aramaic equivalent of חֹרֶשׁ a ploughing (ox).

(2) Which proves the phrase to mean, cockcrow.

(3) One that crows neither too early nor too late.

(4) Pressed, squeezed together in the Temple. Rashi would have it as a simile of a 'floating mass', immovable in a swaying mob.

(5) Lit., 'House of the Mercy Seat', v. supra p. 73, n. 5.

(6) Another reading has 'unto our forefathers in etc.'

(7) Of new barley offered on the second day of Passover, Lev. XXIII, 10f.

(8) The first fruits of the wheat harvest offered on Pentecost, ibid. 17.

(9) V. Aboth, Sonc. ed., p. 62 notes,

(10) [Kar-nebo, the city of Nebo. Probably Borsippa, v. Funk, Monumenta I p. 299.]

(11) In which flesh of sin-offerings was boiled, and which according to Lev. had to be broken, v. Lev. VI, 21.

(12) Zeb. 96a.

(13) Of the 'Omer, the two loaves and the shewbread.

(14) Broken earthenware, crop, feathers, ashes. Broken earthenware was counted as one and all the other things swallowed up came as under one head, so that if they were all to be placed on one count, there would be one miracle short of the number.

(15) Hag. 26b.

(16) I Sam. XXI, 7

(17) The Cherubim which Solomon made stood on the floor next to the ark, on the right and left, The spread of their wings was twenty cubits, Since the whole room had no more than twenty cubits, the body of the Cherubs, as separate from the wings, was in the room by miraculous provision. The same applies to the ark.

(18) Lev. XXIV, 6.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 21b

[But surely] it was a wooden vessel, intended for resting, and every wooden vessel intended for resting is not susceptible to uncleanness and sets up a barrier¹ against uncleanness?² Rather does this teach us that the table would be lifted³ up for the gaze of those who came up to the Festivals, with the mark: Behold how beloved you are of God, for it is as fresh when it is taken off as it was when put on, as it was said: 'To put hot bread in the day it was taken away'.⁴

But were there no more [miracles]? Did not R. Oshaia say?⁵ When King Solomon built the Sanctuary, he planted therein all kinds of [trees of] golden delights, which were bringing forth their fruits in their season and as the winds blew at them, they would fall off, as it is written: May his fruits rustle like Lebanon,⁶ and when the foreigners entered the Temple they withered, as it is written: And the flower of Lebanon languishes;⁷ and the Holy One, blessed be He, will in the future restore them, as it is said: It shall blossom abundantly and rejoice, even with joy and singing; the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it?⁸ -Permanent miracles he does not include in his count. And now that we have come to this [conclusion], the ark and the Cherubim are also permanent miracles.⁹

The Master said: 'And the [smoke arising from the] pile of wood on the altar'. But was there smoke arising from the pile of wood? Has it not been taught: Five things were reported about the fire of the pile of wood: It¹⁰ was lying like a lion, it was as clear as sunlight, its flame was of solid substance, it devoured wet wood like dry wood, and it caused no smoke to arise from it? — What we said [about the smoke] referred to the wood from outside [of the Sanctuary].¹¹ For it has been taught: And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar¹² — although the fire comes down from heaven, it is a proper thing to bring fire from outside too.¹³

'Lying like a lion'. But has it not been taught: R. Hanina, deputy high priest, said: I myself have seen it and it was lying like a dog? — This is no contradiction: The first statement refers to the first Temple, the second to the second Temple.¹⁴ But was the fire present at the second Temple?-Surely R. Samuel b. Inia said: What is the meaning of the scriptural verse: And I will take pleasure in it [we-ikabed] and I will be glorified?¹⁵ The traditional reading is 'we-ikabedah', then why is the [letter] 'he' omitted [in the text]? To indicate that in five¹⁶ things the first Sanctuary differed from the second: in the ark, the ark-cover, the Cherubim,¹⁷ the fire, the Shechinah, the Holy Spirit [of Prophecy], and the Urim-we-Thummim [the Oracle Plate]? — I will tell you, They were present, but they were not as helpful [as before].

Our Rabbis taught: There are six different kinds of fire: Fire which eats but does not drink; fire which drinks but does not eat; fire which eats and drinks; fire which consumes dry matter as well as moist matter; and fire which pushes fire away; fire which eats fire. ‘Fire which eats but does not drink’: that is our fire [water quenches it]; ‘which drinks but does not eat’: the fever of the sick; ‘eats and drinks’: that of Elijah, for it is written: And licked up the water that was in the trench;¹⁸ ‘eats both dry and moist matter’: the fire of the pile of wood; ‘fire which pushes other fire away’: that of Gabriel;¹⁹ and ‘fire which eats fire’: that of the Shechinah, for a Master said: He put forth His finger among them and burned them.²⁰ [It is stated above], ‘But the smoke arising from the pile of wood, even all the winds of the world could not move it from its place’. But [did not] R. Isaac b. Abdimi Say: ‘On the night following²¹ the last day of the [Sukkoth] Festival all were gazing upon the smoke arising from the pile of wood. If it inclined northward, the poor rejoiced and the people of means were sad, because the rains of the coming year would be abundant and their fruits would rot.²² If it inclined southward, the poor were depressed and the men of means rejoiced, for there would be little rain that year and the fruit could be preserved. If it inclined eastwards, all rejoiced;²³ if westwards all were depressed’?²⁴ — It merely means that it swayed hither and thither like a tree, but it was not scattered. The Master said: [If it inclined] eastward all rejoiced: westward — all were depressed. There is a contradiction against it: The east wind is always good ‘ the west wind always bad, the north wind benefits wheat when it has grown to one third [of its usual height], and is bad for olives when they are budding; the south wind is bad for wheat which has grown one third [of its normal size] and good for olives when they are budding and R. Joseph or Mar Zutra said, in connection therewith, as a sign: The table was in the north, and the candlestick in the south,²⁵ i.e., the one [north wind] grows what is good for the table,²⁶ and the other [south wind] what is good for the candlestick?²⁷ — This is no contradiction: the former statement refers to us,²⁸ the latter to them.²⁹ [

(1) חוּצֵי. The root ‘hazaz’ means to cut off, to divide, to serve as an intervening object.

(2) Wooden utensils which are not intended to be moved (as e.g., a table) are not only not susceptible to uncleanness, but they form a barrier against uncleanness, effectively preventing its spread. This is inferred from the passage: And upon whatsoever any of them, when they are dead, doth fall, it shall be unclean; whether it be any vessel of wood, or raiment, or skin, or sack (Lev. XI, 32). In this passage sack and vessel of wood are cited together, hence our Sages infer that just as a sack is movable and moved, so uncleanness can befall only such wooden vessels as are movable and moved; whereas a wooden vessel meant to rest (or have things placed thereon) is different and hence unsusceptible.

(3) The table being taken out periodically to be shown to the pilgrims was no longer considered an immovable object and became susceptible to uncleanness, and the miracle consisted in the fact that nevertheless it never actually became unclean,

(4) I Sam. XXI, 7.

(5) Infra 39b.

(6) Ps. LXXII, 16. Hence there are fruits in Lebanon. But Lebanon was identified with the Sanctuary (Git. 56b), thus the paraphrase of the trees and the winds to create the rustling.

(7) Nahum I, 4.

(8) Isa, XXXV, 2.

(9) And therefore not included.

(10) Either as the simple text suggests, the fire, majestically, quietly; or, as Rashi has it: ‘It’ refers to a great lump of coal which fell from heaven in the days of Solomon and stayed there until the time of Manasseh; that lump having the form of a lion.

(11) Lit., ‘private (man)’ — not part of the altar wood, but wood which was brought in addition and unaffected by the special property of the holy fire.

(12) Lev, I, 7.

(13) Infra 53a.

(14) The first Sanctuary was held in great reverence, itself, its priests, its influence. The second came to be held in disrespect. The above tradition may well reflect the attitude towards both, as crystallized in the Aggada. Therefore the very pile of wood 'was lying like a lion' in David's Temple, and appeared 'lying like a dog' in the second.

(15) Hag. I, 8: Go up to the hill-country and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it and I will be glorified, saith the Lord.

(16) The numerical value of ה is five.

(17) The first three form one unit.

(18) I Kings XVIII, 38: Then the fire of the Lord fell and consumed . . . and licked up.

(19) Pes. 118a, ref. to Dan.III, 27.

(20) The angels objecting to the creation of man. The angels are of fire, v. Sanh. 38b.

(21) V. R. H. 16a: At the Feast of Tabernacles the World is judged through water. V. Ta'an. 2a. Hence the anxiety to watch for the decision from the direction of the wind.

(22) Hence they would have to sell them fast, i.e., cheaply.

(23) Because it meant average rain, plenty of fruit, without danger of rotting so that the merchants could charge moderate prices.

(24) Because it dries up the seeds, and causes famine, v. B.B. 147a. At any rate the smoke moved, which contradicts the statement above.

(25) Sc. in the Sanctuary.

(26) Wheat for the shewbread.

(27) Oil of the olive.

(28) For Babylonia, which is always full of moisture, the east wind is good.

(29) For Palestine, which is dry, full of mountains and hills, it is bad.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 22a

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. ORIGINALLY WHOSOEVER¹ DESIRED TO REMOVE [THE ASHES FROM] THE ALTAR DID SO. IF THEY WERE MANY, THEY WOULD RUN AND MOUNT THE RAMP² [OF THE ALTAR] AND HE THAT CAME FIRST WITHIN FOUR CUBITS³ OBTAINED THE PRIVILEGE. IF TWO WERE EVEN, THE OFFICER⁴ WOULD SAY TO THEM [ALL:]⁵ RAISE THE FINGER!⁶ AND HOW MANY DID THEY PUT FORTH? ONE OR⁷ TWO BUT ONE DID NOT PUT FORTH THE THUMB IN THE TEMPLE.⁸ IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT TWO WERE EVEN AS THEY RAN TO MOUNT THE RAMP. ONE OF THEM PUSHED HIS FELLOW WHO FELL AND BROKE HIS LEG. WHEN THE COURT SAW THAT THEY INCURRED DANGER, THEY ORDAINED THAT THE ALTAR BE CLEARED ONLY BY COUNT. THERE WERE FOUR COUNTS. THIS IS THE FIRST COUNT.

GEMARA. But why did our Rabbis not establish the count for this service from the beginning? They thought, Since it was a night service, it would not be considered so precious and they [many priests] would not come. But when they saw that [many] were coming and incurred danger,⁹ they arranged the count. But the burning on the altar of the limbs and fat-pieces is also a night service, and yet our Rabbis arranged a count for it? — It is rather the end of the service of the day.¹⁰ But the other¹¹ too is the beginning of the service of the day, for R. Johanan said: If he sanctified his hands [by washing]¹² for clearing the ashes off the altar he need not in the morning sanctify them again,¹³ because he has sanctified them already from the beginning of the service?¹⁴ — Say: Because he has from the beginning¹⁵ sanctified his hands for the service. Some say:¹⁶ First they [the Rabbis] believed that since [many of them] are overcome by sleep, they would not come [to this night service], but when they saw they were coming and incurring danger, our Rabbis arranged for the count. But with the burning of the limbs and fat-pieces, [taking also place at a time when] they are also overcome by sleep and yet our Rabbis arranged for a count? There is a difference between going to sleep and rising from sleep.¹⁷

But was the arrangement due to that consideration, was it not rather due to another consideration, for it has been taught:¹⁸ He who obtained the task of clearing the altar of the ashes thereby also obtained the ordering of the pile of wood on the altar and of the two pieces of wood?¹⁹ — R. Ashi said: There were two arrangements. First they [the Rabbis] opined that they would not come [at night], but when they saw that the priests did come and incurred danger, they arranged for the count. When the count had been arranged, they did not come, for they said: ‘Who can tell whether the lot will fall on me’ [therefore] they [the Rabbis] arranged that he who had obtained the task of clearing the ashes off the altar, should thereby also obtain the task of arranging the piles of wood and the two pieces of wood, in order that they might come and submit to the count.

IF THEY WERE MANY etc.: R. Papa said: It is obvious to me [that within four cubits does] not [refer to] the four cubits on the floor,²⁰ because we learnt: THEY WOULD RUN AND MOUNT THE RAMP; neither does it mean the first²¹ [four cubits], because we learnt: THEY WOULD RUN AND MOUNT THE RAMP, and after that: HE THAT CAME FIRST WITHIN FOUR CUBITS; neither does it mean [four cubits] in the middle because this is not clearly indicated; hence it is self-evident that it means [four cubits] off the altar. But R. Papa asked: Do these four cubits, of which we have spoken, include the one cubit of the [projecting] base and the one cubit of the gallery,²²

-
- (1) There were twenty-four divisions (Mishmaroth) of the priests, each division (Mishmar, v. Glos.) consisting of four to nine families (Bate Aboth). Every week another division did service in the Sanctuary, being relieved on the Sabbath. During the week they distributed the service among the families. (V. Tosef. Ta'an. II.) Any one among the family (Beth-Ab, v. Glos.) whose turn came on that day, could originally, if he so desired, remove the ashes from the altar.
 - (2) The ramp, at the south of the altar, led up to it. Its length was thirty-two cubits.
 - (3) Off the altar.
 - (4) Memuneh. Lit., ‘the appointed one’ general term for temple official of high rank. Here the officer in charge of the count; v. Shek. V, 1.
 - (5) Not to the two alone, but to all that were present.
 - (6) So that the decision would be reached by the count. The officer would place them in a (circular) queue, take the mitre off one of them, and after having named a number, would start counting from that man by the fingers put forth. The priest with whom the number was reached, secured the task.
 - (7) There may be some older, weaker, or sick priests for whom it was inconvenient to put one finger forth and hold it aloft until the count was over. Whenever one such handicapped priest was present, the officer would require all to put forth two fingers, which is less of an effort.
 - (8) A trickster foreseeing where the count would end, might place his index-finger at some distance from the thumb, so that the officer would count his two fingers as belonging to two people, with the result that the count would be wrong and designed to serve the trickster's end.
 - (9) By racing together, they might push one another down.
 - (10) And so considered important by the priests.
 - (11) The removal of the ashes.
 - (12) V. Ex. XXX, 19.
 - (13) Unless he should leave the Temple, when another sanctification by washing would be due.
 - (14) Hence it is the beginning of the service, and the argument is void.
 - (15) Interpret R. Johanan's word to mean: He sanctified himself from the beginning (during the night) for the service.
 - (16) In answer to the question: why was this count not arranged from the very first?
 - (17) A man will find it easier to postpone the hour of sleep than to rise from sleep early in the morning (for the purpose of clearing the altar of the ashes).
 - (18) Infra 28a.
 - (19) Two logs of wood, placed above the pile of wood on the altar. V. infra 26b. These being considered an important service would require a count.
 - (20) Before reaching the ramp.
 - (21) At the foot of the ramp.

(22) Sobeb. Lit., 'a ring', or 'hoop'; here a gallery round the altar for the priest to walk on.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 22b

or does it mean exclusive of the one cubit base and one cubit gallery?¹ — [The question] stands.

IF TWO WERE EVEN, THE OFFICER WOULD SAY TO THEM: RAISE THE FINGER, etc.

A Tanna taught: Put forth your fingers for the count. But let him count them?² — That supports the statement of R. Isaac, for R. Isaac said: It is forbidden to count Israel even for [the purpose of fulfilling] a commandment, as it is written: And he numbered them be-bezek [with pebbles].³ R. Ashi demurred to this: Whence do you know that the word 'bezek' is here used in the sense of being broken [i.e., pebbles], perhaps it is the name of a place, as it is written: And they found Adoni-Bezek in Bezek?⁴ — Rather it is from here: And Saul summoned the people and numbered them with telaim⁵ [sheep].

R. Eleazar said: Whosoever counts Israel, transgresses a [biblical] prohibition, as it is said: Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured.⁶ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: He would transgress two prohibitions, for it is written: 'Which cannot be measured nor numbered'. R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: R. Jonathan raised an objection: It is written: 'Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea,' and it is also written: 'Which cannot be numbered?'⁷ This is no contradiction: Here⁸ it speaks of the time when Israel fulfils the will of the Lord, there of the time when they do not fulfil His will. Rabbi,⁹ on behalf of Abba Jose son of Dosthai, said: This is no contradiction: Here it speaks of [counting done] by human beings, there of counting by Heaven.¹⁰ R. Nehilai b. Idi said in the name of Samuel: As soon as a man is appointed administrator of a community, he becomes rich — First it was written: 'And he counted them by means of pebbles,' and, in the end, 'And he counted them by means of sheep'. But perhaps these sheep were of their own? — Then what is remarkable about it?¹¹

And he strove in the valley.¹² R. Mani said: Because of what happens 'in the valley': When the Holy One, blessed be He, said to Saul: Now go and smite Amalek,¹³ he said: If on account of one person the Torah said: Perform the ceremony of the heifer whose neck is to be broken,¹⁴ how much more [ought consideration to be given] to all these persons! And if human beings sinned, what has the cattle committed; and if the adults have sinned, what have the little ones done?¹⁵ A divine voice came forth and said: Be not righteous overmuch.¹⁶ And when Saul said to Doeg: Turn thou and fall upon the priests,¹⁷ a heavenly voice came forth to say: Be not overmuch wicked.¹⁸

R. Huna said: How little does he whom the Lord supports need to grieve or trouble himself! Saul sinned once and it brought [calamity] upon him, David sinned twice and it did not bring evil upon him — What was the one sin of Saul? The affair with Agag.¹⁹ But there was also the matter with Nob,²⁰ the city of the priests? — [Still] it was because of what happened with Agag that Scripture says: It repenteth Me that I have set up Saul to be king.²¹ What were the two sins of David? — The sin against Uriah²² and that [of counting the people to which] he was enticed.²³ But there was also the matter of Bathsheba?²⁴ — For that he was punished, as it is written, And he shall restore the lamb fourfold:²⁵ the child, Amnon, Tamar and Absalom.²⁶ But for the other sin he was also punished as it is written: So the Lord sent a pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed?²⁷ — There his own body was not punished — But in the former case, too, his own body was not punished either?²⁸ Not indeed? He was punished on his own body, for Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: For six months David was smitten with leprosy, the Sanhedrin removed from him, and the Shechinah departed from him, as it is written: Let those that fear Thee return unto me, and they that know Thy testimonies,²⁹ and it is also written: Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation.³⁰ But Rab said that David also listened to evil talk?³¹ — We hold like Samuel [who says] that David did not do so. And even according to Rab, who says that David listened to calumny, was he not punished for it? For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab. At the time when David said to Mephibosheth: I say: Thou and Ziba divide the land,³² a heavenly voice came forth to say to him: Rehoboam and Jeroboam will divide the Kingdom.

Saul³³ was a year old³⁴ when he began to reign. R. Huna said: Like an infant of one year, who had not tasted the taste of sin. R. Nahman b. Isaac demurred to this: Say perhaps: Like an infant of one year old that is filthy with mud and excrement?³⁵ R. Nahman thereupon was shown a frightening vision in his dream, whereupon he said: I beg your pardon,³⁶ bones of Saul, son of Kish. But he saw again a frightening vision in his dream, whereupon he said: I beg your pardon, bones of Saul, son of Kish,³⁷ King in Israel.

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: Why did the kingdom of Saul not endure? Because no reproach rested on him,³⁸ for R. Johanan had said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: One should not appoint any one administrator of a community, unless he carries a basket of reptiles on his back, so that if he became arrogant, one could tell him: Turn around!³⁹

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Why was Saul punished? Because he forewent the honour due to himself, as it is said: But certain base fellows said: 'How shall this man save us?' And they despised him and brought him no present. But he was as one that held his peace,⁴⁰ and it is written [immediately following that]: Then Nahash the Ammonite came up and encamped against Jabesh-gilead.⁴¹ R. Johanan further said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: Any scholar,

(1) [The altar was constructed with two rebatements of two cubits, one cubit at the base and another at the Sobeb; and R. Papa's query is whether these two cubits are to be included in the four cubits distance, so that the real distance measured in a straight line from the main structure of the altar would be six cubits.]

(2) By heads.

(3) I Sam. XI, 8.

(4) Judg. I, 5.

(5) I Sam. XV, 4.

(6) Hosea II, 1. 'Cannot be numbered' is interpreted-and grammatically there is no solid objection as 'should not, must not be numbered', thus a positive statement becomes a prohibition. The assumption is justified that here again the ultimate basis of the prohibition is not this passage, but the passage is a peg on which to hang the idea. There are more obvious sources of the prohibition known to the disputants.

(7) Ibid. The sand of the sea, however tremendous the number of grains, yet could be counted. Why then the second part of the passage which cannot be numbered'? It is true this verse is divested of its simple meaning, which does not permit this dichotomy. But again the major purpose of the questioner is to drive home a moral.

(8) When Israel fulfils the Lord's commands, it will become infinite, beyond the possibility of a count: if it does not live up to His law, it may, nevertheless, be great in number, but it will be countable.

(9) Another reading: R. Assi. There is no valid objection to the text here.

(10) Maharsha: Human beings would weary of counting, because of the great number.

(11) That Scripture mentions it especially. E.V. takes 'Telaim' to be the name of a place.

(12) I Sam. XV, 5. E.V.: 'And he lay in wait'. Saul was thus 'striving because of what happens in the valley', i.e., he argued from that ceremony against the slaying of the Amalekites. V. Gruenberg, s. Exeg. Beitrage, III, index.

(13) I Sam. XV, 3.

(14) Deut. XXI, 1-9.

(15) I Sam. XV, 3: Slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.

(16) Eccl. VII, 16.

(17) I Sam. XXII, 18.

(18) Eccl. VII, 17.

(19) I Sam. XV, 2ff

(20) Ibid. XXII, 19.

- (21) Ibid. XV, 11.
- (22) II Sam. XI, 2-27.
- (23) Ibid. XXIV, 1.
- (24) He had committed adultery in addition to having instigated murder.
- (25) II Sam. XII, 6. He had unconsciously prophesied his own punishment.
- (26) All of whom died during his lifetime; thus he paid four of his 'lambs' for the one he had unrighteously taken from its master.
- (27) II Sam. XXIV, 15.
- (28) Just as here the people died and not he, so was it his children, but not he, who were afflicted because of his sin.
- (29) Ps. CXIX, 79.
- (30) Ibid. LI, 14.
- (31) The evil reports of Ziba against Mephibosheth. So that he committed a third sin.
- (32) II Sam. XIX, 30.
- (33) I Sam. XIII, 1.
- (34) The literal interpretation being impossible because of earlier texts, the Rabbis endeavour to find therein homiletical suggestion.
- (35) R. Nahman was not actuated by any animus against Saul. He objected primarily to the too ready way of moralizing in advance of textual equivocality. With even justice one could illustrate an opposite aspect of infancy, and an analogy would thus throw evil light on King Saul.
- (36) His conscience smote him afterwards, for in his eagerness to demonstrate the error of hasty interpretation, he had offended the memory of Saul.
- (37) His conscience was not at rest, until he had fully realized that he had offended the King of Israel. His dreams reflected his thoughts by day, and only after his second apology did he feel relieved.
- (38) On Saul's descent. None could therefore prevent his arrogance by pointing to a family skeleton, saying: Turn around and your basket of reptiles (family ignominy) will stand revealed.
- (39) V. preceding note.
- (40) I Sam. X, 27.
- (41) Ibid. XI, 1, hence, because immediately following, viewed as consequence of his too great humility.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 23a

who does not avenge himself and retain anger like a serpent, is no [real] scholar.¹ But is it not written: Thou shalt not take vengeance nor bear any grudge?² — That refers to monetary affairs, for it has been taught: What is revenge and what is bearing a grudge? If one said to his fellow: 'Lend me your sickle', and he replied 'No', and to-morrow the second comes [to the first] and says: 'Lend me your axe'! and he replies: 'I will not lend it to you, just as you would not lend me your sickle' — that is revenge. And what is bearing a grudge? If one says to his fellow: 'Lend me your axe', he replies 'No', and on the morrow the second asks: 'Lend me your garment', and he answers: 'Here it is. I am not like you who would not lend me [what I asked for]' — that is bearing a grudge. But [does] not [this prohibition apply to] personal affliction? Has it not been taught: Concerning those who are insulted but do not insult others [in revenge], who hear themselves reproached without replying, who [perform good] work out of love of the Lord and rejoice in their sufferings,³ Scripture says: But they that love Him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might?⁴ — [That means,] indeed, that he keeps it in his heart [though without taking action]. Rut Raba said: He who passes over his retaliations has all his transgressions passed over?⁵ — [That speaks of the case] that an endeavour was made to obtain his reconciliation, and his consent is obtained.

AND HOW MANY DID THEY PUT FORTH? ONE OR TWO. If they may put forth two, why is it necessary to mention that they may put forth one? — R. Hisda said: This is no difficulty: The one speaks of healthy persons, the other of sick ones.⁶ Thus has it been taught: One finger is put forth, but not two. To whom does this rule apply? To a healthy person, but a sick one may put forth even two. But the 'Yehidim'⁷ put forward two and one counts only one thereof.⁸ But has it not been taught: One does not put forth either the third finger or the thumb because of tricksters, and if one had put forth the third finger, it would be counted,⁹ but if one had put forth the thumb it would not be counted, and not alone that but the officer strikes him with the pekia'?'¹⁰ — What does 'it would be counted' mean? Only one. What is pekia'?' — Rab said: A madra [chastising whip]. What is madra? R. Papa said: The whip of the Arabs, the head [sting] of which is taken off. — Abaye said: Originally I believed that which we have learnt: Ben Bibai was in charge of "pekia"¹¹ meant, in charge of the wicks, as we have learnt: From the outworn breeches and belts of the priests they used to make 'peki'in' and light them¹² Now that I hear that it was taught: Not that alone, but the officer would strike him with the 'pekia" I understand that 'pekia" means lash.¹³

IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT TWO WERE EVEN AS THEY RAN TO MOUNT THE RAMP. Our Rabbis taught: It once happened that two priests were equal as they ran to mount the ramp and when one of them came first within four cubits of the altar, the other took a knife and thrust it into his heart. R. Zadok stood on the steps of the Hall¹⁴ and said: Our brethren of the house of Israel, hear ye! Behold it says: If one be found slain in the land... then thy elders and judges shall come forth . . .¹⁵ On whose behalf shall we offer the heifer whose neck is to be broken, on behalf of the city or on behalf of the Temple Courts? All the people burst out weeping. The father of the young man came and found him still in convulsions. He said: 'May he be an atonement for you. My son is still in convulsions and the knife has not become unclean.' [His remark] comes to teach you that the cleanness of their vessels was of greater concern to them even than the shedding of blood. Thus is it also said: Moreover Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to the other.¹⁶

Which event took place first?¹⁷ Would you say that of the bloodshed took place first? Now, if in spite of the bloodshed they did not establish the count, would they have arranged it because of the [incident of the] broken leg? Rather, the [incident of the] broken leg came first — But since they had already arranged a count how was [the affair of the bloodshed] within the four cubits possible? — Rather, the incident of the bloodshed came first, but at first [the Rabbis] thought it was a mere accident; but when however they saw that even without [such unfortunate accidents] they incurred danger, they enacted the count.

'R. Zadok stood upon the steps of the Hall and called out: Our brethren of the House of Israel, hear ye! Behold it says: If one be found slain in the land.¹⁸ On whose behalf shall we bring the heifer whose neck is to be broken, on behalf of the city or of the Temple Courts?' But does [the community of] Jerusalem bring a heifer whose neck is to be broken? Surely it has been taught: Ten things were said concerning Jerusalem and this is one of them —

(1) Maharsha interprets this statement by reference to Gen. III, 15: And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; they shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise their heel. The man will endeavour to crush the serpent so as to deprive it of its life: whereas the serpent retaliates by bruising only the heel, a non-vital part of the human body. Thus, 'serpent-like' the scholar should retaliate most moderately even when great wrong was done to him. — This proverb may also be a reaction to too humble a scholar, who by reason of his extreme forbearance seemingly encourages impudent and cruel people in their nefarious conduct. — Another suggested interpretation: just as great serpents swallowing their prey, moisten it with so much saliva as to be deprived of a sense of what, subjectively, they are eating, knowing only, objectively, that they are eating something, so should the scholar, against whom a wrong was committed, not endeavour to avenge himself subjectively, but to avenge objectively the wrong that was perpetrated. [Bacher (ZDMG, 1874, p. 6) relates this dictum to the one preceding: Any scholar who does not avenge himself like Nahash (which is the Hebrew for serpent) is no scholar. The reference is to a tradition preserved in a fragment of the Jerusalem Targum on Isa. XI, 2 that the condition made by Nahash for the offered covenant was that the Gileadites remove the injunction from the Torah barring the Ammonites from the congregation of Israel — an injunction which he considered an affront.]

(2) Lev. XIX, 18.

- (3) Because imposed by the Lord, either to test their faith or to punish them in this world for their sins, rewarding their virtues in the world to come, cf. Git. 68b: 'In order that he may enjoy his world here whence the theory that the wicked who prosper are rewarded here for their good deeds and punished for their evil doings in the hereafter, with the opposite method applied to the virtuous.
- (4) Judg. V, 31.
- (5) He who forbears to retaliate will find forbearance for his own failings.
- (6) V. supra p. 97, n. 7.
- (7) Certain individuals, i.e., scholars, v. Ta'an 10a. They would, out of respect for their learning, be permitted a convenience, which sick persons are granted out of consideration for their health.
- (8) Tosef. Yoma I, 10.
- (9) No trickiness is involved here, because the distance between these fingers is too small to mislead the officer into assuming that he saw the fingers of two different persons in the count, but with the thumb a dishonest motive seems obvious, hence both, the disregard and the punishment.
- (10) Pekia' — may mean: strip, shreds of garments, hence either wick or whip.
- (11) Shek. V, 1.
- (12) Suk. 51a.
- (13) Abaye does not absolutely exclude two compatible meanings of the word.
- (14) Ulam, the hall leading to the interior of the Temple.
- (15) Deut. XXI, 1.
- (16) II Kings XXI, 16.
- (17) The bloodshed or the breaking of the leg.
- (18) Deut. XXI, 1.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 23b

it does not have to bring a heifer whose neck is to be broken.¹ Furthermore: And it be not known who hath smitten him but here it is known who has smitten him?—Rather [he put his question rhetorically] to increase the weeping.²

'The father of the young man came and found the boy in convulsions. He said: "May he be an atonement for you.³ My son is still in convulsions, etc." To teach you that they looked upon the purity of their vessels as a graver matter than bloodshed!' [The Scholars in the Academy] asked this question: Was it that bloodshed became a minor matter to them, whereas the purity of their vessels remained in its original importance, or did bloodshed concern them as before but the purity of the vessels became for them of a still graver concern? Come and hear: Because the Talmud adduces 'And also innocent blood did Manasseh shed' that indicates that bloodshed had become a matter of smaller concern to them whilst the purity of the vessels retained its original importance.

Our Rabbis taught: And he shall put off his garments and put on other garments and carry forth the ashes⁴ — from this I might learn even as on the Day of Atonement,⁵ [so] that he put off his holy garments and put on profane garments.⁶ To teach us [the true law] it says: 'And he shall put off his garments and put on other garments, thus comparing the garments he put on with the garments he put off; just as the former are holy garments, so are the latter holy garments. If so, what does [the word] 'other' teach?⁷ [They shall be] inferior to the former. R. Eliezer said: [The words] 'other' and 'he shall carry forth' indicate that priests afflicted with a blemish⁸ are permitted to carry forth the ashes.

The Master said: "'Other garments", i.e. inferior to the former', as the school of R. Ishmael taught: For the school of R. Ishmael taught: One should not offer a cup of wine to one's teacher while wearing the garment wherein one has cooked a dish⁹ for him.

Resh Lakish said: Just as there is diversity of opinion about the carrying forth of the ashes,¹⁰ so there is about clearing them off the altar.¹¹ R. Johanan said: The diversity of opinion applies only to the carrying forth, but as to clearing them off the altar, all agree that this is [regular] service.¹² What is the reason for Resh Lakish's view? He will tell you: If it should enter your mind that this [the clearing of the ashes off the altar] is considered a [regular] service — then you would have a service legitimate in two garments.¹³ And R. Johanan?¹⁴ — The Divine Law revealed the regulation for tunic and breeches, but it includes also mitre and girdle.¹⁵ Then why are these [two specially mentioned]? — ‘Middo bad’ [‘linen garments’] is written [here to indicate] proper measure,¹⁶ ‘miknese bad’ [‘linen breeches’] to teach us in accord with what has been taught:¹⁷ Whence is it known that nothing may be put on before the breeches? Because it is said: ‘And he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh.’ And Resh Lakish? — That the garment must have the proper measure [he infers] from the fact that the Divine Law employs [the word] ‘middo’ [garment, not tunic]; that nothing may be put on before the breeches, he infers from the words: ‘on his flesh’. Shall we say that the point at issue is the same as between the following Tannaim: ‘[And his linen breeches shall he put] on his flesh.’ Why does Scripture say: ‘Shall he put on?’¹⁸ That is meant to include the [obligation of wearing] mitre and girdle for the clearing off of the ashes — this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Dosa says: That means to include [the rule] that the [four white] garments worn by the high priest on the Day of Atonement may be worn by the common priest [during the remainder of the year].¹⁹ Rabbi said: There are two refutations to this matter. One: the girdle of the high priest²⁰ is different from that of the common priest.²¹ Two: shall garments used at a service of solemn holiness be worn at a service of lesser holiness? — But what, rather, is the significance of ‘yilbash’?

(1) Sot. 45a.

(2) To make them conscious of the horrible nature of the deed perpetrated.

(3) Maharsha explains that since Jerusalem is deprived of the heifer ceremony, which would normally obtain forgiveness for them, the generous father prayed for atonement by the grace of God.

(4) Lev. VI, 4.

(5) When the high priest changed his garments with every different service, cf. infra 70a.

(6) In the case of the high priest he changes from golden garments into linen garments and vice versa. With the ordinary priest however who has no alternate holy garments, the change would be from holy garments into profane ones.

(7) The word ‘other’ is connected with ‘and he shall carry forth’ to which it is placed in juxtaposition in the Hebrew text, thus referring to the priest.

(8) And thus designated ‘other’, i.e., than those who are usually fit for service.

(9) Similarly there should be different garments worn for the service proper and for the removal of the ashes respectively.

(10) As to whether blemished priests may remove them.

(11) That matter depends on the answer to the question, as to whether the removal of the ashes is considered a service or not.

(12) Requiring the putting on of four garments and the ministrations of unblemished priests.

(13) Scripture says: He shall put on his linen garments and his linen breeches shall he put upon his flesh. (Lev. VI, 3.) If the removal of the ashes, whereof this passage speaks, were a service, how could Scripture demand only ‘the linen garment’ and the ‘linen breeches i.e., two garments, when a service proper requires four? Since only two garments are required, evidently the removal of the ashes is not considered a service and hence may be performed even by blemished priests, who would not be admissible to service proper!

(14) R. Johanan who considers this a proper service, requiring unblemished priests, how will he account for the contradictory fact that Scripture insists on two garments only.

(15) He explains that in reality four garments are required here, as may be inferred from the parallel passage in Lev. XVI, 4, where as a matter of course ‘mitre and girdle’ are added, the one passage supplementing implicates the other.

(16) He connects ‘middo’ which comes from a root meaning garment, with ‘madad’, which means to measure, i.e., the garment must be of proper measure, for the priest's figure. Resh Lakish infers from the fact that ‘middo’ (garment) is used instead of the usual ‘kethoneth’ (tunic) that a properly fitting garment is required.

(17) Zeb. 35a.

(18) Lev. XVI, 4: The text could have stated ‘He shall put on the holy tunic and the linen breeches on his flesh’. The word ‘yilbash’ (‘he shall put on’) is superfluous. The word ‘yilbash’ is a sort of terminus technicus for complete dress, i.e., the four garments.

(19) [He utilizes yilbash, written here, for the purpose of a gezerah shawah with yilbash mentioned in connection with the four garments put on by the high priest on the Day of Atonement. V. Lev. XVI, 4 to teach this rule.]

(20) Included in the four garments worn by the high priest on the Day of Atonement.

(21) V. supra p. 55, n. 6. So that the ordinary priests could not wear the four garments of the high priests.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 24a

It includes worn-out garments.¹ And he shall leave them there,² that teaches that they must be hidden away. R. Dosa says: They are fit for use by a common priest. What does 'And he shall leave them there' intimate? That he [the high priest] must not use them on another Day of Atonement.³ Now would you not say that this is the subject of their dispute: that one⁴ holds it [the removal of the ashes] to be a service⁵ and the other⁶ does not consider it such?⁷ — No. Everybody agrees it is a service; the point of dispute here is this: One says another scriptural passage is necessary⁸ to include also for this service [the four garments]; the other: no such passage is necessary.⁹

R. Abin asked: How much of the ashes of the altar is to be removed? Shall we infer [the quantity] from the taking off of the tithes,¹⁰ or from what was taken off from the [spoil of] Midian?¹¹ — Come and hear: For R. Hiyya taught: Here¹² the word 'herim' ['he shall take up'] is used and there¹³ the expression 'we-herim' ['and he shall take up'] is used. Just as in the latter case it means taking a handful, so in the former case it means taking a handful.¹⁴

Rab said:¹⁵ There are four services for the performance of which a non-priest [stranger] incurs penalty of death:¹⁶ sprinkling, smoking [the fat],¹⁷ the water libation, and the libation of wine. Levi says: also the removal of the ashes. Thus did Levi also teach us in his Baraitha: Also the removal of the ashes. What is the reason for Rab's view? It is written: And thou and thy sons with thee shall keep the priesthood in everything that pertaineth to the altar, and to that within the veil; and ye shall serve; I give you the priesthood as a service of gift; and the common man that draweth nigh shall be put to death.¹⁸ 'A service of gift', but not a service of removal;¹⁹ 'and you shall serve, i.e., a complete service, not a service followed by another.'²⁰ And Levi?²¹ — The Divine Law included it²² in saying: 'In every thing that pertaineth to the altar.' And Rab?²³ — That is meant to include the seven sprinklings within,²⁴ and those concerning the leper.²⁵

And Levi?²⁶ — He infers [these] from [the fact that instead of] 'the thing', [is written] 'every thing', [that pertaineth]. And Rab?²⁷ — He does not infer aught from 'every thing'.²⁸ But say this: 'In everything that pertaineth to the altar' is a general proposition; 'service of gift' is a specification.²⁹ Now: if a general proposition is followed by a specification, the scope of the proposition is limited by the specification,³⁰ hence the 'service of gift' would be included, but a service of removal would be excluded? — The scriptural text reads:

(1) They may be worn for any service as long as they are wearable, i.e., whole.

(2) Lev. XVI, 23. With reference to the garments worn by the high priest on the Day of Atonement.

(3) This is the end of the Baraitha, 46a.

(4) R. Judah.

(5) And therefore it requires for it all the four garments.

(6) R. Dosa.

(7) And therefore holds that the linen tunic and breeches are sufficient without the mitre and girdle.

(8) Lest one assume that the verse is to be taken literally, that only two garments are required, hence that this is no service proper.

(9) Since Scripture insists on the tunic and breeches it is evidently considered a service, requiring all the four garments.

(10) Num. XVIII, 25, where about one per cent is taken off.

(11) Ibid. XXXI, 28-40, where it is but one-fifth of one per cent.

- (12) Lev. VI, 3.
- (13) Ibid. 8.
- (14) [It is not inferred either from tithe or from the spoil of Midian, but from the handful taken by the priest. This however applies only to the minimum, which may however be exceeded at will (Rashi).]
- (15) Zeb. 112b .
- (16) Although the common man is forbidden to perform any service in the sanctuary, he does not incur the penalty of death in any but the following cases.
- (17) Or 'the handful of the meal-offering'.
- (18) Num. XVIII, 7.
- (19) E.g., the removal of the ashes.
- (20) The Hebrew word עבודת תמה is divided into עבודת תמה so as to read: perfect service, i.e., one complete, without additional functions such as the four services mentioned by Rab. This excludes a service such as slaughtering which is not complete without the rites connected with the sprinkling of the blood that follow it.
- (21) Rab's inferences excluding the removal of the ashes seem to be right?
- (22) The removal of the ashes for the performance of which a non-priest incurs penalty of death.
- (23) Everything that pertaineth obviously includes something else. Unless some other service is intended, Levi proves his case.
- (24) Lev. IV, 6: And sprinkle of the blood seven times before the Lord; ibid. 17. also ibid. XVI, 14.
- (25) Lev. XIV, 51: And he shall take the cedar-wood . . . and sprinkle the house seven times, which may not be considered as part of 'the altar' service; the same applies to the functions referred to in the preceding note.
- (26) Whence does he infer these?
- (27) What does 'everything' suggest to him.
- (28) Lit., 'he does not expound the thing' as everything'.
- (29) Already comprehended in the general proposition.
- (30) This is one of the principles of hermeneutics (kelal u-ferat) according to R. Ishmael, v. Shebu., Sonc. ed., p. 12, n. 9.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 24b

'And to that within the veil . . . and you shall serve',¹ [i.e.] Only within the veil is 'the service of gift'² [included] but not the 'service of removal away',³ but outside [the Temple] even a 'service of removal'⁴ [is included].⁵ But [one could] similarly [argue with regard to the exposition of] 'you shall serve' only within the veil, is a complete service⁶ [included] but not one service which is followed by another service,⁷ but outside, even a service followed by another [is also included]?⁸ — [Scripture, by saying] 'And ye shall serve' has reconnected them.⁹

Raba asked: What is the law regarding [a service of] removal within the Temple?¹⁰ Do we compare it with [a service of removal] within¹¹ [the veil] or with [one] outside [the Temple]? Then he answered the question himself: It is to be compared to [a removal service] within [the veil]. [For Scripture instead of] 'within' [says:] 'And to that within [the veil]'.¹² But then¹³ should the common man who arranged the [shewbread] table be guilty? — There is the arrangement of the censer of frankincense.¹⁴ — Then if he arranges the censers let him incur the penalty!¹⁵ — There is the removal of the censers¹⁶ and the smoking of the incense. Let the common man who put the candlestick in order incur the penalty! — That is to be followed by the putting in of the wick. Then if he put the wick in let him incur that penalty! — There is the adding¹⁶ of the oil. Then if he puts the oil in let him incur that penalty? There is the lighting.¹⁶ Then if he lights it let him incur that penalty! — Lighting is not considered a service. Is it, indeed, not [considered a service]? But it has been taught:¹⁷ And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay wood in order upon the fire¹⁸ — this teaches that the kindling of the wood of the fig-tree¹⁹ must be performed by a priest who is fit [for service] and with garments of ministrations.²⁰ The kindling of the fig-wood is considered service, but not the lighting of the candlestick. Then let the common man who puts the pile of wood [on the altar] in order, incur that penalty! — There is the arrangement of the two logs of wood.²¹ — Then if he arranged the two logs of wood, let him incur that penalty? — It is followed by the arranging of the limbs.²² But R. Assi had said in the name of R. Johanan: A common man who arranged the two logs of wood incurred the penalty of death? — In this indeed there is division of opinion,²³ one holding [the arrangement of the two logs of wood] is a complete service, the other holding that it is not a complete service.

There is a teaching in accord with Rab, and there is a teaching in accord with Levi. ‘There is the teaching in accord with Rab’: These are the services for the performance of which a common man incurs penalty of death: the sprinkling of the blood, both within [the Temple] and within the Holy of Holies: and he who sprinkles the blood of a bird offered as a sin-offering;²⁴ and he who wrings out the blood, and who smokes the bird offered up as a burnt-offering;²⁵ and he who makes the libation of three logs of water or of wine.²⁶ ‘There is a teaching in accord with Levi’: The services for the performance of which a common man incurs penalty of death are: the removal of the ashes, the seven sprinklings within [the Holy of Holies] and he who offers up on the altar a sacrifice whether fit or unfit. THERE WERE FOUR COUNTS etc.²⁷ Why do they decide by count? [You ask,] ‘Why?’ As we have explained. Rather: Why did they decide by count once and again?²⁸ — R. Johanan said: To stir up the whole Temple Court, as it is said: We took sweet counsel together, in the house of God we walked be-ragesh [with tumult].²⁹

What garments do they wear when taking the count? R. Nahman said: Common garments, R. Shesheth said: Sacred garments. ‘R. Nahman said: Common garments’. For if you were to say these garments were sacred there would be violent men who would serve by force.³⁰ ‘R. Shesheth said: Sacred garments’. For if you were to say common garments, it would happen that, out of sheer love [of the service] they would perform it in common clothes.³¹ R. Nahman said: On what ground do I hold my view? Because we have learnt: They delivered them to the Temple sextons, who stripped them of their garments and left them with their breeches only.³²

-
- (1) These words separate the general proposition from the specification, and thus sever the connection with them and render any inference as from one to the other invalid.
 - (2) [E.g., the sprinkling of the blood and the burning of incense in the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement, v. Lev. XVI, 13-14.]
 - (3) E.g., the taking out of the censer on the Day of Atonement from the Holy of Holies.
 - (4) [E.g., the removal of the ashes.]
 - (5) In the services for his performance of which a non-priest incurs the penalty of death.
 - (6) [E.g., the putting of incense on the fire in the Holy of Holies.]
 - (7) E.g., the bringing in of the spoon and the censer in the Holy of Holies which must be followed by the burning of the incense.
 - (8) E.g., the removal of the ashes.
 - (9) [The waw of עבדתם connects the general statement and particularization as far as the deduction made from the word itself is concerned, but it does not affect the exposition based as ‘a service of gift’ which is still governed by the words ‘within the veil’.]
 - (10) E.g., the removal of the ashes of the golden altar and candlestick.
 - (11) According to Rab there is no difference between service within the veil or outside: a common man becomes guilty of death only if he performs a service of gift, not of removal. But according to Levi he becomes guilty also in case of a service of removal. Hence Raba's question addresses itself to Levi: Do we compare it to the service within the veil, so that the common man performing it would not incur penalty of death, or to service without, when he would incur it?
 - (12) The letter ‘waw is superfluous. It includes also the Temple, hence in case of a gift service, he would incur that penalty there too, and with a removal service he would be exempt as within the veil.
 - (13) If a common man who performs in the Temple a Service of gift incurs the penalty of death.
 - (14) After the shewbread is arranged. V. Lev. XXIV, 7. Hence the former is not a complete service, for the performance of which a commoner incurs the penalty of death.
 - (15) Assuming this to be a ‘complete’ service, not followed by anything else.
 - (16) On the following Sabbath, which forms a completion of this service. V. ibid, 8.

- (17) Infra 45a.
 (18) Lev. I, 7.
 (19) Used as kindling wood on the altar, V. Tam. II, 4.
 (20) Hence it is considered a proper service and the commoner performing it should incur the penalty.
 (21) v. infra, 33a.
 (22) Of the Daily continual offering.
 (23) Between Rab who limits the liability to the four he enumerates and R. Johanan who includes the arrangement of the two logs of wood.
 (24) V. Lev. V, 9.
 (25) V. Ibid. I, 15.
 (26) Suk. 48a.
 (27) The text here is corrected in accordance with Bah.
 (28) The Mishnah speaks of four counts.
 (29) Ps. LV, 15. The word, ברגש, usually translated as ‘multitude’ is here connected with רגש, meaning ‘to stir up’, thus, ‘enthusiasm’, ‘love’.
 (30) Even without having been chosen by count, his being fitly dressed encouraging such forwardness.
 (31) If the lot fell on them.
 (32) Tam. V, 3.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 25a

Don't [you agree] that this refers to those who had obtained part in the day's services by the count?¹ — R. Shesheth said: No, it refers to those who had not obtained part in the day's service by the count.² Thus also does it appear provable by logic. For, if it were to refer to those who were allotted part in the service by count, how could it be stated that they left them the breeches only; surely it has been taught: Whence do we know that nothing may be put on before the breeches? To teach us that it says:³ And breeches of linen shall be on his flesh.⁴ — And the other?⁵ — This is no difficulty: This is what it teaches: Whilst they still wore the common clothes, they put on the holy breeches, after that they removed the common clothes and left them with the [holy] breeches.

Said R. Shesheth: Whence do I hold my view? From what has been taught: The Cell of the Hewn Stone⁶ was [built] in the style of a large basilica. The count took place in the eastern side, with the elder⁷ sitting in the west, and the priests in the form of a spiral figure. The officer came and took the mitre from the head of one of them. One would know then that the count would start from him.⁸ Now, if the thought should arise that the priests [came to the count] in common garment — is there a mitre in common dress? — Yes, there is, as Rab Judah or, as some say, R. Samuel b. Judah reported: A priest for whom his mother made a tunic, could officiate therein at an individual [not community] service.⁹ Abaye said: We can infer from this the Cell of Hewn Stone was [situated] half on holy ground, half on non-holy ground; that the Cell had two doors, one opening on holy ground, the other opening on non — holy ground. For, if the thought should arise in you that the whole of it was on holy ground — how could the elder sit to the west; has not a Master¹⁰ said: Nobody could sit in the Temple Court except the kings of the House of David.¹¹ Furthermore, if you could think that the whole cell was outside holy ground, how could the count take place on its eastern side, is it not required: ‘In the house of God we walked with the throng’¹² and this would not be [the house of God]! Hence [the inference is valid]: It is half on holy ground, half on non-holy ground. And if the thought should arise in you that the Cell has but one door opening on holy ground, how could the elder sit to the west, and we have learnt: If the cells are built on non-holy ground and open on holy ground the space within them is holy.¹³ And if the thought should arise in you that it opened into unholy ground how could the count take place in the eastern part [of the Cell];¹⁴ have we not learnt: If they are built on holy ground and open out on non-holy ground, their space within is non-holy, hence you must needs say: the Cell had two doors, one opening on holy ground, the other on non-holy ground.

MISHNAH. THE SECOND COUNT¹⁵ WHO SHOULD SLAUGHTER [THE DAILY REGULAR OFFERING],¹⁶ WHO SHOULD SPRINKLE THE BLOOD, WHO SHOULD REMOVE THE ASHES FROM THE INNER ALTAR,¹⁷ WHO SHOULD REMOVE THE ASHES FROM THE CANDLESTICK,¹⁸ WHO SHOULD TAKE UP TO THE RAMP THE LIMBS [OF THE OFFERING], THE HEAD AND THE [RIGHT]¹⁹ HIND-LEG, THE TWO FORELEGS, THE TAIL AND THE [LEFT]¹⁹ HIND-LEG, THE BREAST AND THE THROAT,²⁰ THE TWO FLANKS,²¹ THE INWARDS, FINE FLOUR,²² THE CAKES²³ AND THE WINE.²⁴ ALTOGETHER THIRTEEN PRIESTS OBTAINED A TASK.²⁵ BEN AZZAI SAID BEFORE R. AKIBA IN THE NAME OF JOSHUA: IT [THE DAILY OFFERING] WAS OFFERED UP IN THE WAY IT WALKS.²⁶

GEMARA. The question was asked: When they take the count, do they do so for one service or for each individual task? — Come and hear: Four counts were there.²⁷ Now if the thought should arise in you that there was a separate count for each task, there would be need of many counts! — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: This is what [the Mishnah] means: Four times they went in for counting, and on each occasion there were many counts.

(1) And they were stripped of the common garments which they wore during the count.

(2) They were stripped of the sacred garments which they wore during the count.

(3) V. supra 23b.

(4) Lev. XVI, 4.

(5) R. Nahman.

(6) [The Hall wherein the great Sanhedrin used to sit. Schurer II, p. 264 identifies it with the chamber 'close to the xystus' on the western border of the Temple mount. For the refutation of this view, V. Krauss. J.E. XII, 576.]

(7) Of the Beth din supervising the count (Rashi).

(8) Tosef. Suk. IV, 6.

(9) V. infra 35b.

(10) Infra 69b.

(11) In Deut. XVIII, 5: The Lord hath chosen him out of all thy tribes to stand to minister in the name of the Lord, against which II Sam. VII, 18: Then David the king went in and sat before the Lord.

(12) And this enthusiasm, as explained before, was created by the count.

(13) Ma'as Sh. III, 8.

(14) The count had to take place on holy ground.

(15) V. Mishnah, supra 22a.

(16) The priest with whom the count ended slaughtered the daily regular sacrifice. His right hand neighbour had the next task, his neighbour's right hand neighbour the third, etc.

(17) On the inner altar, every morning and evening, the incense was offered. The glowing coals for that purpose were obtained from the outer altar. The ashes which remained were removed next day. They could be removed by a common priest even on the Day of Atonement.

(18) This too could be performed by any common priest, the high priest had but to do the lighting of the lamps.

(19) The right hindleg. V. Tamid IV, 3.

(20) Larynx with windpipe, lungs and heart.

(21) With milt and liver.

(22) For the meal-offering which accompanied the daily regular sacrifice. Num. XXVIII, 5.

(23) Made on the מַחֲבֵת (pan). V. Men.96a. It was the daily sacrifice of the high priest which accompanied the daily regular sacrifice. Lev. VI, 13; Shek. VII, 6.

(24) Num. XXVIII, 7.

(25) Two, that of slaughtering and sprinkling; two, clearing the golden altar and the candlestick; six, taking up the limbs and inwards, three, taking up the flour and wine-offerings.

(26) Lit., 'according to the manner of its gait', i.e., in order of the parts of the body active in the movements; first head and right hind-leg, then breast and neck, then the two fore-legs, then the two flanks, the tail and the left hind-leg.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 25b

Come and hear: R. Judah said: There was no count for the coal-pan, but the priest who had obtained the task of [smoking] the incense said to his assistant: Obtain with me the privilege of serving the coal-pan.¹ — It is different with incense and coal-pan, because they form together one service. Some argue thus: This is the case only with coal-pan and incense, because they form one service, but all other tasks require individual count!² — [No.] With regard to the coal-pan it is necessary to inform us [that no separate count is required] for the thought could have arisen that because it takes place rarely and enriches,³ therefore a special count should be arranged for it, hence we are taught [that it is not so].

Come and hear: R. Hiyya taught: There was no count for each individual task, the priest who secured the task of [the killing of] the daily burnt-offering drew twelve priests to himself [for the tasks involved]. This proves it.

THE SECOND COUNT: The question was asked: Who receives the blood?⁴ [Do we say that] he who killed? For if you were to say that the one who sprinkles the blood receives it, perhaps in his enthusiasm⁵ he may not receive the whole blood; or does the sprinkler receive it, for if you were to say that he who kills the animal receives the blood, occasionally a non-priest kills [the animal]?⁶ — Come and hear: Ben Katin made twelve spigots for the laver so that his twelve brethren, the priests, who are occupied with the daily regular sacrifice, may simultaneously wash their hands and feet.⁷ Now, if you were to think that he who kills [the animal] also receives its blood there would be thirteen.⁸ Must we not therefore infer therefrom that he who sprinkles receives the blood? This proves it.

R. Aha, the son of Raba said to R. Ashi: We have also learnt thus: He whose lot it was to slaughter it, slaughtered it; he whose lot it was to receive the blood, received it — and then he came to sprinkle it.⁹ This proves it.

BEN 'AZZAI SAID BEFORE R. AKIBA, etc.: Our Rabbis taught: What is 'THE WAY OF ITS WALKING'? The head, right hind-leg, breast and neck, the two fore-legs, the two flanks, the tail and the left hind-leg. R. Jose says: It was offered up in the order in which it is flayed. Which is the order of its being flayed? The head, the right hind-leg, the tail, the left hind-leg, the two flanks, the two fore-legs, the breast, and the neck. R. Akiba says: It was offered up in the order in which it was dissected. Which is the order of the dissection? The head, the right hind-leg, the two forelegs, the breast and the neck, the two flanks, the tail and the left hind-leg. R. Jose the Galilean says: It was offered up in the order of its best parts. Which is the order of its best parts? The head, the [right] hind-leg, the breast and neck, the two flanks, the tail and the [left] hind-leg and the two fore-legs. But is it not written: Even every good piece, the thigh and the shoulder?¹⁰ — That refers to a lean animal:¹¹ Raba said: Both our Tanna¹² and R. Jose the Galilean follow the order of quality of the meat, but one takes into consideration the size [of the limbs], the other the fatness.

Why does the head go together with the [right] hind-leg?¹³ Because the head has many bones; one attaches the [meaty] hindleg to it.

All¹⁴ agree at any rate that the head is offered up first. Whence do we derive this rule? Because it has been taught: Whence do we know that the head and the suet come before all other parts [of the animal]? To teach us that, it says: He shall lay it in order with its head and its suet.¹⁵ And as to the other 'suet',¹⁶

- (1) The incense required two priests: one who carried the incense into the Temple and smoked it, the other who took out the coals from the outer altar, brought them into the Temple, and put them on the inner altar to smoke the incense upon them. V. infra 26a. From here it appears that not every task required a count.
- (2) Which proves that every task requires a count.
- (3) V. infra 26a.
- (4) In a basin for sprinkling purposes.
- (5) Lit., 'his love (for the service)'.
 (6) As deduced from Lev. I, 5; a non-priest may kill the animal, as the priestly functions in connection with an animal-sacrifice begin with the receiving of the blood.
- (7) Infra 37a.
- (8) There were thirteen tasks according to the Mishnah. The slaughtering, however, since even a commoner might perform it, did not require washing of hands and feet even if performed by a priest. But if he who slaughtered it should also receive its blood, he would have to wash his hands too because of the subsequent receiving of the blood.
- (9) Tamid IV, 1.
- (10) Ezek. XXIV, 4. [This shows that the thigh (the hind-leg) and the shoulder (the foreleg) are among the best pieces whereas here they are mentioned last (תום ישנים); v. however p. 119, n. 2.]
- (11) [The verse speaks of the wicked in Israel who plunder the poor and consume the good pieces of their animals which at best could only be lean, whereas the daily sacrifices were offered from the best, Ibid.]
- (12) The Tanna of our Mishnah.
- (13) [Var. lec. transfer here both the question from Ezek. XXIV, 4 and the answer that follows. In this reading these refer to 'our Tanna' who mentions 'the fore-legs' before the hind-legs whereas in Ezekiel the thigh (hind-leg) is given preference, v. Bah.]
- (14) Ben 'Azzai, R. Jose, R. Akiba, R. Jose the Galilean, whilst basing their order on different considerations, all have the head offered up first.
- (15) Lev. I, 12. Infra 26a.
- (16) Ibid. I, 8: The pieces, and the head, and the suet. It was included in the other pieces.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 26a

what does it signify? [It has its meaning] in accordance with what has been taught: How did he do it? He placed the suet upon the open throat and offered it up thus, that being done as a sign of respect for heaven.¹

MISHNAH. THE THIRD COUNT: NOVICES² COME UP AND SUBMIT TO THE COUNT FOR THE INCENSE. THE FOURTH COUNT: NOVICES AND OLD PRIESTS, WHO WILL TAKE UP THE LIMBS³ FROM THE RAMP TO THE ALTAR.

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: Never did a man repeat that,⁴ What is the reason? — Because it enriches. R. Papa said to Abaye: Why [does the incense enrich]? Would one say because Scripture says: They shall put incense before Thee,⁵ and soon after: Bless, Lord, his substance?⁶ If so, then a burnt-offering should also enrich, for there it is written also: And whole burnt-offering upon Thine altar?⁷ He answered: The second is frequent,⁸ the first not. Raba said: You will not find any rabbinical scholar giving decision who is not a descendant from the tribe of Levi or Issachar. 'Of Levi', as it is written: They shall teach Jacob Thine ordinances,⁵ 'of Issachar', as it is written: And of the children of Issachar, men that had understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do.⁹ But mention Judah too, for it is written: Judah is my law-giver?¹⁰ — I am speaking [only] of those [who make conclusions] in accordance with the adopted practice.¹¹

R. Johanan said: No count is arranged for the daily continual evening¹² sacrifice, but the priest who secured the task of offering the continual morning sacrifice also obtains the task of the evening sacrifice. An objection was raised: Just as one arranges a count for it in the morning so is a count arranged for it in the evening? — That was taught in application to the incense.¹³ — But it has been taught: Just as one arranges a count for it¹⁴ [masc.], in the morning, so does one arrange for it, a count in the evening. Read:¹⁵ for it [fem.] — But it has been taught: Just as one arranges a count for it [masc.] in the morning, so is a count arranged for it [masc.] in the evening, and just as one arranges a count for it [fem.] in the morning, so is a count arranged for it¹⁶ [fem.] in the evening! — R. Samuel b. Isaac said: Here we refer to the Sabbath, on which the divisions of the priests are relieved.¹⁷ But on the original assumption¹⁸ there was a larger number of counts? — All came in the morning [for the count]; to some it was allotted for the morning to others, for the evening.

THE FOURTH COUNT: NOVICES AND OLDER PRIESTS etc.: Our Mishnah does not agree with the view of R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for we have learnt: He who brings the limbs up to the ramp also brings them up to the altar.¹⁹ What principle are they disputing? One holds: In the multitude of the people is the king's glory,²⁰ whereas the other is of the opinion that [the distribution of duties among too many] is not good form in the abode of the Shechinah.²¹ Raba said: R. Eliezer b. Jacob does not agree with the view of R. Judah, nor does the latter agree with the view of the former, for, if that were the case there would be too few counts.²² And if you find a teacher who teaches 'five [counts]',

(1) Because the throat is smeared with blood, it would not look respectful enough to offer it up in such condition. Hul. 27b.

(2) Nothing was more desired than the privilege of offering up incense. Hence priests who had already enjoyed that function were excluded from repetition until all their colleagues had the same task bestowed upon them. Hence the officer calls on novices to present themselves for the count.

(3) The limbs of the sacrifice were first placed on the lower part of the ramp, after having been dissected, (Tamid IV, 1, 2) then later carried thence to the altar and burnt there.

(4) The offering up of incense.

(5) Deut. XXXIII, 10.

(6) Ibid. 11.

(7) Ibid. 10.

(8) Sacrifices may be either private or public, hence very frequent. Incense was a community offering, hence limited by law.

(9) I Chron. XII, 33.

(10) E.V. 'sceptre'.

(11) i.e. of practical interpreters and scholars, not of law-makers.

(12) Strictly speaking 'afternoon'.

(13) Because nobody was permitted to repeat that function until all candidates had that privilege bestowed upon them once.

(14) Ketoreth (incense) is of fem. gender, hence the question asked from a text where the word 'lo' (masculine 'for him', 'to his') is used.

(15) Assume that the personal pronoun may be used loosely, or that the text misreported. 'lah' ('to her', 'to it', fem. instead of 'lo', the masculine) being intended.

(16) So that there is a special text for the incense.

(17) The division (Mishmar, v. Glos.) officiating at the continual offering of morning had left by the time the continual offering of dusk was to be attended to.

(18) That there was a special count for the evening sacrifice.

(19) Tamid V, 2.

(20) Prov. XIV, 28.

(21) It might appear as if the service was considered a burden, so that its function had to be distributed among many.

(22) R. Judah omits the count for the coal-pan; according to R. Eliezer there was no special count for the service of carrying the limbs up to the altar, hence, had both accepted each other's view, there would be only three counts. He who taught there were five counts, contradicted both of these Tannaim, each of whom omitted one, though not the same count.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 26b

he is in accord with neither R. Eliezer b. Jacob, nor with R. Judah.

MISHNAH. THE CONTInual¹ OFFERING WAS OFFERED UP BY NINE, TEN, ELEVEN OR TWELVE [PRIESTS], NEITHER BY MORE [THAN TWELVE], NOR BY LESS [THAN NINE]. HOW THAT? [THE OFFERING] ITSELF [WAS BROUGHT] UP BY NINE;² AT THE FEAST [OF SUKKOTH] WHEN ONE CARRIED A BOTTLE OF WATER,³ THERE WERE TEN. AT DUSK⁴ BY ELEVEN: [THE OFFERING] ITSELF BY NINE AND TWO MEN WHO CARRIED TWO LOGS⁵ OF WOOD. ON THE SABBATH BY ELEVEN: [THE OFFERING] ITSELF BY NINE WITH TWO MEN HOLDING IN THEIR HAND THE TWO CENSERS OF FRANKINCENSE FOR THE SHEWBREAD.⁶ AND ON THE SABBATH WHICH FELL DURING THE FEAST OF SUKKOTH ONE MAN CARRIED IN HIS HAND A BOTTLE OF WATER.

GEMARA. R. Abba, or as some say Rami b. Hama or again as some say R. Johanan, said:⁷ The water libation on the Feast of Sukkoth is offered up only at the continual sacrifice of the morning. Whence is this to be inferred? Because [the Mishnah] teaches: AND ON THE SABBATH WHICH FELL DURING THE FEAST OF SUKKOTH ONE MAN CARRIED IN HIS HAND A BOTTLE OF WATER. Now if the thought could arise in you that [also] at the continual offering at dusk is the water of libation offered up,⁸ then it would also happen during the weekday.⁹ R. Ashi said: We also have learned thus:¹⁰ One said to the priest offering the libation: Hold your hands up! For it happened once that he poured it upon his feet and all the people stoned him with their citrons.¹¹ This proves it. It was taught: R. Simeon b. Yohai said: Whence do we know that at the continual offering of dusk two logs of wood were to be brought up by two priests? Because it is said: And [the sons of Aaron the priest shall] lay wood in order upon the fire.¹² If it has no bearing on the morning sacrifice because it is written: And the priest shall kindle wood on it every morning, and he shall lay the burnt-offering in order upon it,¹³ make it bear on the dusk sacrifice! — But perhaps, say: Both refer to the morning sacrifice, the Divine Law enjoining: Do it! And do it! again.¹⁴ — If that [were intended] the Divine Law should have said: ‘And he shall kindle wood.’ ‘And he shall kindle wood.’¹⁵ But if the Divine Law had stated: ‘And he shall kindle [wood]’ I would have assumed it may be done by one only, not by two, therefore we are taught that both one and two shall do so?¹⁶ — If that were intended the Divine Law should have stated: ‘He shall kindle [wood]’¹⁷ . . . and ‘they shall kindle wood,’ or ‘He shall lay [wood] in order’ and ‘they shall lay [wood] in order.’¹⁸ Why the words ‘He shall kindle’ and ‘They shall lay in order’?¹⁹ That we infer from it as we have said above.

R. Hiyya taught: The [second] count at times [affects] thirteen²⁰ priests, at times fourteen,²¹ fifteen, or sixteen. But has it not been taught: [At times] seventeen?²² — That teaching is in accord not with R. Eliezer b. Jacob, but with R. Judah.²³ M I S H N A H. A RAM WAS OFFERED BY ELEVEN: THE FLESH BY FIVE, THE INWARDS,²⁴ THE FINE FLOUR,²⁵ AND THE WINE BY TWO EACH. A BULLOCK WAS OFFERED BY TWENTY-FOUR: THE HEAD AND [RIGHT] HIND-LEG²⁶ — THE HEAD BY ONE AND THE [RIGHT] HIND-LEG BY TWO [PRIESTS]. THE TAIL AND [LEFT] HIND-LEG — THE TAIL BY TWO AND THE [LEFT] HIND-LEG BY TWO. THE BREAST AND NECK — THE BREAST BY ONE AND THE NECK BY THREE. THE TWO FORE-LEGS BY TWO, THE TWO FLANKS BY TWO. THE INWARDS, THE FINE FLOUR,²⁷ AND THE WINE²⁸ BY THREE EACH. THIS APPLIES ONLY TO OFFERINGS OF THE COMMUNITY. IN PRIVATE OFFERINGS, HOWEVER, IF A SINGLE PRIEST²⁹ WANTS TO OFFER [ALL], HE MAY DO SO. BUT AS TO THE FLAYING AND DISMEMBERING OF BOTH COMMUNAL, AND PRIVATE OFFERINGS THE SAME REGULATIONS APPLY.³⁰ GEMARA. A Tanna taught: The law regarding the flaying and the dismembering is alike in both [communal and private sacrifices] in that they may be done by a non-priest. Hezekiah said: Whence do we know that the law regarding flaying and dismembering is alike [with all sacrifices] in that they may be done by a non-priest? Because it is written: And the sons of Aaron the high priest shall put fire upon the altar,³¹ i.e., priesthood is required for the putting of the fire upon the altar, but not for the flaying and dismembering.

- (1) Beginning with the taking up of the limbs to the ramp.
- (2) In the same manner in which the parts of the sacrificial animal were brought up to the ramp, so were they thence carried to the altar, thus six priests were required to carry the lamb's parts, and three to convey the flour and wine-offerings to the altar.
- (3) For the water libation, v. Suk. 48a.
- (4) Strictly speaking 'in the afternoon'.
- (5) They were added to the pile of wood on the altar.
- (6) Lev. XXIV, 7-8: And thou shalt put pure frankincense with each row, that it may be to the bread for a memorial-part, even all offering made by the fire unto the Lord. Every Sabbath day he shall set it before the Lord continually, it is from the children of Israel, an everlasting covenant.
- (7) The report came in the name of these three, without preponderance of evidence as to the real author.
- (8) The Mishnah states that only on the Sabbath of the Feast of Sukkoth was the continual offering offered up by twelve priests. But if the water libation were offered up in connection with the continual dusk offering too, twelve priests would then too be necessary: nine for the lamb itself, two for the logs of wood, one for the bottle of water.
- (9) So that on a week-day too, twelve priests would be required for the offering, which contradicts the Mishnah.
- (10) V. Suk. 48b.
- (11) The Sadducees rejected the water libation, hence, when in charge, they would invalidate the ceremony. The people observant of such sabotage, punished the hypocrite by pelting him with their citrons (ethrog). But these citrons were used only at the morning prayer. The Mishnah in Sukkoth mentions the citrons to indicate that the libation of the water took place only at the time citrons were part of the service, i.e., in the morning. The first proof was textual, the second factual.
- (12) Lev. I, 7.
- (13) Ibid. VI, 5.
- (14) Hence there would be no repetition and the inference as to the dusk sacrifice would be invalid.
- (15) In both instances why the change of expression? That has definite significance.
- (16) The double form, singular and plural, was thus necessary.
- (17) For the water libation, v. Suk. 48a.
- (18) In the same manner in which the parts of the sacrificial animal were brought up to the ramp, so were they thence carried to the altar, thus six priests were required to carry the lamb's parts, and three to convey the flour and wine-offerings, to the altar.
- (19) But what it is meant to convey, could have been conveyed without change of phrase.
- (20) V. Mishnah supra 25a.
- (21) On the Sukkoth Festival; on the Sabbath; and on the Sabbath of the Sukkoth Festival, respectively.
- (22) [On Sabbath of Sukkoth, cf. Rashi and MS. M. Tosaf. however refers this to ordinary days omitting the words 'at times'. The number 17 can only be arrived at by adding to the 13 priests an additional four: (1) for removal of ashes; (2) for bringing up the limbs from the ramp to the altar; (3) for smoking the incense; (4) for bringing the coal-pan. This would not be in accordance with R. Eliezer b. Jacob; v. R. Hananel's reacting in next note.]
- (23) Who as stated supra 26a requests an extra priest for carrying the limbs from the ramp to the altar. Rabbenu Hananel (v. p. 123, n. 11) reads: Neither with R. Eliezer b. Jacob, nor with R. Judah. For R. Judah holds there was no count for the coal-pan, the priest who had secured the task of the incense inviting his assistant to share the function of the coal-pan. Nor with R. Eliezer b. Jacob, who omits the count of the function of the limbs being brought to the altar from the ramp; according to him the priest who carried them up to the ramp, also brought them thence to the altar. V. Rashi, Tosaf. and סוֹת יְשָׁנִים.
- (24) The lamb for the continual offering must not be older than one year. The ram could be between one and two years of age, hence its inwards were much heavier.
- (25) The wine-offering with the ram was heavier by one fourth, the flour-offering was twice as heavy as that of the lamb.
- (26) Lit., 'as far as head and hind-leg are concerned', which usually were offered by one person here etc.
- (27) Num. XV, 9.
- (28) Ibid. 10.

(29) Of the division ministering that week, whom the owner of the sacrifice entrusted with the task.

(30) Non-priests, too, might either flay or dissect the sacrifices. Hence there were no counts for them. The sacrifices of the community, however, although even they could be slaughtered by non-priests, were welcome to, and sought after by priests, whence the necessity of a count in connection with them.

(31) Lev. I, 7.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 27a

But that passage is required for its own information?¹ — R. Shimi b. Ashi said: I found Abaye explaining it to his son: [It was taught]: ‘One shall kill,’² hence we infer that even a non-priest may kill [the sacrificial animal]. But whence are you coming?³ — Because Scripture says: And thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priesthood, [in everything that pertaineth to the altar].⁴ I might have learned that even the killing [must be done by priests alone], therefore it is written: And he shall kill the bullock before the Lord,⁵ and Aaron's sons, the priests, shall present the blood,⁵ i.e., the work of the priesthood is commanded only from the receiving [‘presenting’] of the blood and so on.⁶ And he shall lay his hand . . . and he shall kill,⁷ hence we are taught that the killing [of the sacrificial animal] is permissible even to a non-priest. Now, [Abaye went on explaining to his son] since the work obligatory on the priests starts only with the receiving of the blood, what is the purpose of: And the sons of Aaron . . . shall put the fire?⁸ To exclude flaying and dismembering.⁹ But still that was necessary. For one might have thought since [the putting on of the fire] is not a kind of service, the omission of which prevents atonement, it did not require priesthood, hence we are taught [from this passage] that it requires priesthood? — Rather do we infer it from here: And Aaron's sons, the priests, shall lay it, order the pieces, and the head, and the suet.¹⁰ Now, since the work obligatory upon priests starts with the receiving of the blood, why was the passage: ‘And they shall lay in order’ [etc.] necessary? It meant to exclude the flaying and the dismemberment.¹¹ But say perhaps that it means to exclude the arranging of the two logs of wood? — It seems logical that the passage excludes [a service relating to the sacrifice itself] which is of the type referred to. On the contrary: [it seems logical that] it excludes the ‘putting in order’ of [wood], which is analogous [to the ‘laying in order’ of the pieces referred to].¹² This thought should not arise in your mind, for a Master taught: ‘And the priest shall offer the whole . . . upon the altar.’ This refers to the bringing up of the limbs to the ramp. Now only the bringing of the limbs to the ramp requires a priest, but not the bringing of the logs of wood, implying that the putting in order of the two logs of wood requires a priest.¹³ Why, then, is it necessary to state ‘And they [the priests] shall lay [the pieces] in order’? to exclude flaying and dismembering.¹⁴ But say, perhaps, that this text is necessary for its own meaning?¹⁵ --[In reality so.] What then is the purpose of [the passage], ‘And the priest shall make the whole smoke upon the altar’?¹⁶ To exclude flaying and dismembering. [So that] ‘And the priest shall offer the whole’ refers to the bringing up of the limbs to the ramp; only the bringing up of the limbs to the ramp requires a priest, but not the bringing of the two logs of wood to the ramp. Implying that the putting in order of the two logs of wood that does require the services of a priest and the words: ‘And they shall put’¹⁷ have immediate text meaning;¹⁸ the words ‘And they shall lay in order [the pieces]’¹⁹ indicate it must be two; the words: ‘The sons of Aaron’¹⁹ also indicate two; the words: ‘The priests’¹⁹ also indicate two, together we learn from them that the [offering up of the] lamb requires the services of six priests. R. Hamnuna said: To R. Eleazar it seems difficult, for this passage¹⁹ refers to the young bullock, the service in connection with which required twenty-four priests! But he found it right again, for Scripture says: Upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar¹⁹; now what thing is it in connection with which ‘wood’, ‘fire’ and ‘altar’ are mentioned?

(1) That a priest is required for the putting on of the fire. An inference for other matter is justified only when the text itself, or part of it, appears superfluous.

(2) ‘We-shahat’ Lev. I, 5, may mean ‘and he shall kill’, the most obvious meaning in the context; or ‘one shall kill’, ‘one’ being a term general enough to include a commoner.

(3) On what are you basing your argument, that it is necessary to bring proof that a non-priest may kill the animal; what basis is there for the assumption that he may not do so?

(4) Num. XVIII, 7. The bracketed portion is interpolated by Bah. and rightly so, for upon it rests the argument.

(5) Lev. I, 5.

(6) [Since the priests are mentioned only in connection with the presenting of the blood and not with the killing.]

(7) Ibid. 4,5. ['He shall kill' has for the subject the same person as 'he shall lay his hand' — the owner of the sacrifice (a non-priest).]

(8) Since the putting on of the fire followed the presenting of the blood, the latter signifying the commencement of the priestly function, why was it necessary to mention that the 'Sons of Aaron' perform it?

(9) That these may be performed by non-priests.

(10) Lev. I, 8.

(11) I.e., flaying and dismembering.

(12) That the putting on of the two logs of wood did not require a priest.

(13) Since the fetching of the wood is especially stated to need no priest, the inference is — obvious that the putting in order of the two logs requires a priest's service.

(14) [V. supra, note 2. The passage that follows up, ' . . . text meaning' is difficult and is omitted by Wilna Gaon. The interpretation attempted here involves no change in the text of cur. edd.]

(15) [To show that the arrangement of the pieces required a priest, as it might have been assumed that 'even a non-priest may perform it since it is not a service' indispensable for effecting an atonement.]

(16) Lev. I, 9.

(17) Ibid. 7.

(18) That a priest is required for putting on the fire, v. supra p. 126.

(19) Lev. I, 8.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 27b

Say it is the lamb.¹

R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: A non-priest who laid the pile of wood in order [on the altar] incurs the penalty [of death]. What should he do [post facto]? — Let him break it up and then put it in order again. What is the good of that? — Rather: Let the non-priest break it up again and let a priest put it in order afterwards. R. Ze'ira demurred to this: But is there not a service which may be performed also at night and which a non-priest would render invalid? Surely, there is the smoking of the limbs and the fat-pieces.² That is but the conclusion of the service of the day. But there is the removing of the ashes? That is the beginning of the work of the day, as R. Assi has reported in the name of R. Johanan: If he has sanctified his hands [by washing] in the morning for the removal of the ashes, he need not sanctify [them] on the morrow, for he has already sanctified them from the beginning of the service.³ But the difficulty remains!⁴ If this statement was made, it was stated thus: R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: A non-priest who laid the two logs of wood in order incurs the penalty [of death] because this is a day service. Raba demurred to this: If so, a count should be required for it! — It escaped him what had been taught: He who secured the task of clearing the ashes off the altar, [thereby also] secured the task of putting in order the pile of wood and the two logs of wood.³ Shall we, then, say that only service performed during the day requires the count but service performed during the night does not require the count? Surely there is the [smoking of the] members and the fat-pieces?⁵ — That is the end of the service of the day. But there is the removal of the ashes? — That is due to a certain event.⁶ Shall we say that only for service performed during the day and for participation in which a non-priest incurs the penalty of death, a count is required, but that wherever a non-priest does not incur penalty of death for performance of a service, no count is required? But then what of the killing [of the animal]?⁷ — It is different with the killing because that is the beginning of the service.

Mar Zutra or R. Ashi said: But we have learned otherwise: The officer said to them: Go forth and see if the time for the killing [of the continual morning sacrifice] has arrived,⁸ but he is not teaching about the laying in order of the two logs of wood?⁹ It speaks only of such things as cannot be remedied¹⁰ again, but not such for which there is a remedy.¹¹ Some say¹² this is what R. Ze'ira asked: Is there any service followed by another service, which would be invalidated if performed by a non-priest?¹³

(1) The passage 'Upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar' is superfluous, for v. 7 contains that information already, hence the inference is right that the six priests are suggested here.

(2) V. supra 24a.

(3) V. supra 22a.

(4) Where do we find a service which may be performed at night and which a non-priest renders invalid?

(5) For which a count has been arranged.

(6) Mentioned in Mishnah supra.

(7) Which may be performed by a non-priest and yet requires a count.

(8) Infra 28a.

(9) Hence it took place during the night.

(10) The continual morning offering must not be offered before daybreak; de facto it was invalid, had to be replaced by another and be burnt in a place far from the altar like any invalidated sacrifice.

(11) If the logs of wood had been put in order before daybreak, one could break them up and put them back in order again after daybreak.

(12) [The text from this point to the end of the chapter is in disorder, consisting, according to Rashi and others, of several interpolations. The interpretation that follows is that of Tosaf. on the basis of curr. edd.]

(13) [R. Ze'ira's question has reference to R. Johanan's ruling, that a non-priest who arranges the wood pile on the altar is liable to death. Against this R. Ze'ira raises the objection that since it is followed by another service, i.e., the arranging of the two logs of wood, a non-priest should incur no penalty nor invalidate it by his performance of it. V. Tosaf. s.v. אֵיכָא.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 28a

Surely there is [the smoking of] the limbs and fat-pieces?¹ — That is the end of the service of the day.² But what of the removal of the ashes?³ — It is the beginning of the service of the day,⁴ for R. Johanan said: If he sanctified his hands by washing for the removal of the ashes, in the morning he need not sanctify [his hands] since he had already sanctified them at the beginning of the service. If so the difficulty⁵ remains? — Rather if this statement was made it was made thus: R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: If a non-priest arranged in order two logs of wood [on the altar] he incurs the penalty of death, because it is a complete service.⁶ To this Raba demurred: If this is so let it require a count. But it requires no count? Surely it was taught, He who secures the privilege in respect of the removal of the ashes, secures also the privilege in respect of the arranging of the two logs of wood? This is what he means. It should have a separate count for itself? The [reason is] as we have already stated.

Are we to say that for a service which is complete, and for the performance of which a non-priest incurs the penalty of death, a count is required, but for one, for performance of which a non-priest does not incur such penalty, no count is required — but there is the killing [of the sacrificial animal]? — It is different with that killing, because it is the beginning of the service of the day. Shall we say that only a complete service requires the count, but a service followed by another does not require it — but there is the smoking of the members and the fat-pieces? — That is the end of the service of the day. — But there is the removal of the ashes? — Here [the count is due] because of what happened.

Mar Zutra or R. Ashi said: We too have learnt thus:⁷ The officer said to them: GO FORTH AND SET WHETHER THE TIME FOR THE KILLING OF THE MORNING SACRIFICE HAS ARRIVED. But he does not teach anything about the time for the laying in order of the two logs of wood?⁸ — He teaches only concerning such things as cannot be remedied again, but not concerning such for which there is a remedy.⁹

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. THE¹⁰ OFFICER SAID TO THEM: GO FORTH AND SEE WHETHER THE TIME FOR KILLING [OF THE MORNING SACRIFICE] HAS ARRIVED. IF IT HAD ARRIVED THEN HE WHO SAW IT SAID: IT IS DAYLIGHT!¹¹ MATHIA B. SAMUEL SAID: THE WHOLE EAST IS ALIGHT.¹² EVEN UNTO HEBRON?¹³ AND HE ANSWERED ‘YES’. AND WHY WAS THAT [CONSIDERED] NECESSARY? BECAUSE ONCE WHEN THE LIGHT OF THE MOON¹⁴ ROSE THEY THOUGHT THAT THE EAST WAS ALIGHT¹⁵ AND SLAUGHTERED THE CONTINUAL OFFERING, WHICH AFTERWARDS THEY HAD TO TAKE AWAY INTO THE PLACE OF BURNING.¹⁶

THE HIGH PRIEST¹⁷ WAS LED DOWN TO THE PLACE OF IMMERSION. THIS WAS THE RULE IN THE TEMPLE: WHOSOEVER CROSSED HIS FEET¹⁸ REQUIRED AN IMMERSION, AND WHOSOEVER MADE WATER REQUIRED SANCTIFICATION BY WASHING¹⁹ HIS HANDS AND FEET.

GEMARA.

-
- (1) [This service, it is now assumed, receives its completion only with the removal of the ashes, and yet must not be performed by a non-priest under the penalty of death (Tosaf.).]
- (2) [The original assumption n. 3. is rejected. The smoking of the limbs is in itself regarded as the completion of the day service (Tosaf.).]
- (3) [Which must be followed by the taking of the ashes outside the camp, v. Lev. VI, 4' and yet is considered a complete service, v. supra 24a (Tosaf.).]
- (4) [Whereas the taking of the ashes outside the camp is not performed daily (v. Tamid II, 2) and consequently it cannot be regarded as completing the removal of the ashes (Tosaf.).]
- (5) Of R. Ze'ira.
- (6) [V. supra 22a. For the reason that no special count has been arranged for the two logs of wood. R. Hananel.]
- (7) That the laying of the two logs of wood is a complete service.
- (8) [Because it is considered a night service completing the arranging of the wood pile on the altar (Rashi), v. also Tosaf.]
- (9) V. supra, p. 128, nn. 8, 9.
- (10) The Mishnah continues the account of the procedure, where it had been interrupted, 26a. This Mishnah refers not only to the Day of Atonement, but to the continual sacrifice on every morning of the year.
- (11) The Mishnaic בַּרְקַאי 'barkai' may be a contraction of 'barka hi', i.e. there is a shining. Or: the shining one, i.e., the morning star.
- (12) [Rashi (Men. 100a) regards these words not as reporting the view of Mathia b. Samuel, but as a historical narrative. The passage is consequently to be translated: Mathia b. Samuel (who was a Temple officer v. infra), used to say (in announcing the time in question) The whole east is alight, תּוֹם יִשְׁנִים a.l.]
- (13) V. Gemara. For the choice of Hebron, which is too far from Jerusalem to permit one in Jerusalem to see its towers, the Yerushalmi has a plausible suggestion, viz., that that city was mentioned for its historical importance; because of the cave of Machpelah, in which the patriarchs and matriarchs of Israel are buried.
- (14) This could not have happened on a Day of Atonement, because on that day the moon has gone down long before dawn, but on one of the last days of a month, in which the moon, to the west of the sun, rises before dawn.
- (15) When the sky is clouded the light coming from the moon may be confused with that of the sun. But it never reaches as far as the latter, hence the question of the officer whether the horizon is alight even unto Hebron. The officer may have been Mathia. V. Shek. V, 1.
- (16) Possibly a room in the Temple, V. Baneth, Pes. IX, note 49.
- (17) The account of the service on the Day of Atonement is here continued, immediately interrupted again, and re-continued on 30a.

(18) A euphemism for: to ease oneself, to relieve nature.

(19) In the water of the holy laver. Ex. XXX, 18.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 28b

It was taught: R. Ishmael said: The morning [star] shines. R. Akiba said the morning [star] rose.¹ Nahuma b. Afkashion said: The morning [star] is already in Hebron. Mathia b. Samuel, the officer in charge of the counts, said: The whole east even unto Hebron is alight. R. Judah b. Bathyra said: The whole east even unto Hebron is alight and all the people have gone forth, each to his work. If that were the case, it would be [too much of the day] too late! — Rather: each to hire working men.²

R. Safra said: The [afternoon] prayer of Abraham³ is due when the walls begin to grow dark.⁴ R. Joseph said: Shall we indeed learn [our laws] from Abraham?⁵ — Raba answered: A Tanna learned from Abraham and we should not learn from him! For it has been taught: And in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised,⁶ this passage teaches that the whole of the [eighth] day is proper for the circumcision, but the zealots perform their religious duty as early as possible as it is said: And Abraham rose early in the morning and saddled his ass.⁷ — Rather, said Raba, is it this that appeared difficult to R. Joseph: For we have learnt: If the eve of Passover falls on the eve of Sabbath, the paschal lamb is to be slaughtered at one half after the sixth hour,⁸ and offered up at one half after the seventh hour.⁹ — But let it be slaughtered when the walls begin to grow dark!¹⁰ — What is the difficulty? Perhaps the walls of the Sanctuary begin to grow dark half an hour after the sixth hour because they were not exactly straight.¹¹ Or [one might say]: It was different with Abraham whose heart [mind] knew great astronomical speculation.¹² Or: Because he was an elder [zaken] who had a seat at the scholar's council,¹² for R. Hama b. Hanina said: Our ancestors were never left without the scholars' council. In Egypt they had the scholars' council, as it is said: Go and gather the elders of Israel together;¹³ in the wilderness they had the scholars' council, as it is said: Gather unto Me seventy men of the elders of Israel;¹⁴ our father Abraham was an elder and a member of the scholars' council, as it is said: And Abraham was [zaken] an elder well stricken in age;¹⁵ our father Isaac was an elder and a member of the scholars' council, as it is said: And it came to pass when Isaac was an elder [zaken];¹⁶ our father Jacob was an elder and a member of the scholars' council, as it is said: Now the eyes of Israel were dim with age [zoken];¹⁷ [even] Eliezer, the servant of Abraham was an elder and a member of the scholars' council, as it is said: And Abraham said unto his servant, the elder of his house, that ruled over all he had,¹⁸ which R. Eleazar explained to mean that he ruled over [knew, controlled] the Torah of his master.¹⁹ Eliezer of Damascus': R. Eleazar said, He was so called because he drew²⁰ and gave drink to others of his master's teachings.

Rab said: Our father Abraham kept the whole Torah, as it is said: Because that Abraham hearkened to My voice [kept My charge, My commandments, My statutes, and My laws].²¹ R. Shimi b. Hiyya said to Rab: Say, perhaps, that this refers to the seven laws?²² — Surely there was also that of circumcision!²³ Then say that it refers to the seven laws and circumcision [and not to the whole Torah]? — If that were so, why does Scripture say: 'My commandments and My laws'?

Raba or R. Ashi said: Abraham, our father, kept even the law concerning the 'erub of the dishes,'²⁴ as it is said: 'My Torahs':²⁵ one being the written Torah, the other the oral Torah.²⁶

MATHIA B. SAMUEL SAID etc. . . . AND HE ANSWERED 'YES'. Who was it that said 'yes'? the man standing on the roof! Is he the dreamer and the interpreter?²⁷ Should it, then, be he who is standing on the ground, whence would he know?²⁸ — If you like say it is he who stands on the roof, and if you like say it is he who stands on the ground. If you want to say it is he who stands on the roof; he says: THE WHOLE EAST IS ALIGHT, the one standing on the ground answering: EVEN

UNTO HEBRON? whereupon the former says: 'YES'. If you like say that it is he who stands on the ground: He says: THE WHOLE EAST IS ALIGHT? whereupon the other responds: EVEN UNTO HEBRON?²⁹ and the former answers: 'YES'.³⁰

AND WHY WAS THAT CONSIDERED NECESSARY etc. But can it be confused?³¹ Has it not been taught: Rabbi says: The rising column of the moon is different from that of the sun. The light column of the moon rises straight like a stick, the light column of the sun [the dawn] irradiates in all directions? — The school of Ishmael taught: It was a cloudy day and the light was scattered in all directions.³² R. Papa said: We can infer therefrom that on a cloudy day the sun is felt all over. What is the practical difference?³³ — In the spreading³⁴ of skins, or, as Raba expounded: A woman should not knead³⁵ either in the sun or in the heat of the sun. R. Nahman said: The sultry air of the sun³⁶ is more intense than that of direct sunlight, your analogy³⁷ being: a jar of vinegar,³⁸ the dazzling sun-light³⁹ is worse than the uncovered sun, your analogy being drippings [from the roof].⁴⁰

(1) A later time.

(2) All the people have gone forth, each to his work, refers not to the workingmen who leave for work at a later hour, but to the contractors, who early in the morning hire their men for the day's work.

(3) The afternoon prayer is by tradition ascribed to Isaac, but since he learned it from his father, Abraham receives here the credit for it. Or, as Tosaf. Ber. 26b s.v. יצחק has it, after Isaac had instituted the prayer, Abraham fixed the time for it.

(4) Are no longer shone upon by the sun, that is after the middle of the day.

(5) For Abraham lived before the Torah was given and Israelites should follow the conduct of the prophets, who knew and practised the Torah rather than that of Abraham who, whilst living in its spirit, could not have known all the laws thereof. There are, of course, also views according to which Abraham practised the oral and the written law, v. below. v. Tosaf. Moed Katon, 20a, s.v. מה חג.

(6) Lev. XII, 3.

(7) Gen. XXII, 3, the reference may also be ibid. XIX, 27, v. Meg. 20a.

(8) The day was divided into twelve hours of varying duration, in winter an hour may be as short as forty minutes, in summer as long as ninety.

(9) Pes. 58a.

(10) I.e., after the beginning of the seventh hour-after midday.

(11) It was narrower above than below and thus did not cast a shadow till later in the afternoon.

(12) And could hence foretell the exact hour; V. B.B., Sonc. ed., p. 83, n. II.

(13) Ex. III, 16.

(14) Num. XI, 16.

(15) Gen. XXIV, I. E.V. 'was old'.

(16) Ibid. XXVII, 1.

(17) Ibid. XLVIII, 10.

(18) Ibid. XXIV, 2.

(19) Ibid. XV, 2. In all these cases the word zaken (elder) is interpreted in accord with Sifra, Kedoshim. III, 7: (חכמה) קזן זה שקנה a zaken is he who has acquired wisdom (through study).

(20) This is a play on דמשק, as if it were a compositum of דולף (one who draws) and משקה, (one who gives drink).

(21) Gen. XXVI, 5.

(22) Obligatory upon 'The sons of Noah', i.e., upon all civilized nations and individuals. They include the commandment to promote justice, and the prohibitions of idolatry, immorality, blasphemy, murder, cruelty to animals, and theft.

(23) Which Abraham observed.

(24) Lit., 'mixing of dishes'. One may not prepare food on a holy day, which falls on Friday, for the Sabbath immediately following it. But one may start on the eve of the holy day to prepare such food for the Sabbath, the cooking on the holy day being but a continuation of this weekday work. This provision is not Biblical.

(25) Taking the word Torah in its sense as the sum-total of Jewish Law.

- (26) The written Law, i.e., the Five Books of Moses; the Oral Law, which Moses received on Sinai, handing it down to Joshua, the latter handing it down to the elders, the latter to the prophets, these to the Men of the Great Synod (Aboth I, 1).
- (27) It seems strange that one man should both ask the question and answer it.
- (28) He could not observe it from where he stood.
- (29) ['Is this what you want to know'.]
- (30) ['Indeed this is just what I ask'. The mention of Hebron is to recall the memory of the patriarchs who lie buried there. T. J. Yoma III, 1. V. Rashi. Var. lec.: He (who stands on the roof) says THE WHOLE EAST IS ALIGHT AS EAR AS HEBRON, and the other (who stands on the ground) says 'YES?' i.e., 'Indeed? are you sure it is so?' V. R. Hananel and D.S. a.l.]
- (31) Can the light of the moon be confused with that of the sun?
- (32) On a cloudy day the rising column of the sun is invisible because of the heavy clouds and it is only where the clouds are somewhat scattered that it is visible, hence the confusion is possible.
- (33) That this inference is mentioned here.
- (34) To be dried.
- (35) The dough on the Passover to prepare unleavened cakes. R. Papa's maxim would make the rule more stringent.
- (36) Produced by the passage of the sun-rays through a cloudy atmosphere.
- (37) Lit., 'your sign'.
- (38) Which emits a stronger smell through a small opening than when quite open.
- (39) Coming through cracks or breaks in the clouds.
- (40) It is more agreeable to enter completely (a bath or rainy place) than to get continual drippings on one's body.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 29a

Unchaste imagination is more injurious¹ than the sin itself, your analogy being the odour of meat.² The end of the summer is more trying than the summer itself, your analogy being a hot oven.³ A fever in winter is severer than in summer, your analogy being a cold oven.⁴ It is harder to remember well something old than to commit to memory a fresh thing, your analogy being a cement made out of old cement.⁵ R. Abbahu said: What is the reason of Rabbi's opinion?⁶ — It is written:⁷ For the Leader, upon Aijelet ha-Shahar⁸ — just as the antlers of the hind branch off this way and that way, so the light of the dawn is scattered in all directions. — R. Zera said: Why was Esther compared to a hind?⁹ To tell you that just as a hind has a narrow womb and is desirable to her mate at all times as at the first time, so was Esther precious to King Ahasuerus at all times as at the first time. R. Assi said: Why was Esther compared to the dawn?¹⁰ To tell you that just as the dawn is the end of the whole night, so is the story of Esther the end of all the miracles. But there is Hanukkah? — We refer to those included in Scripture. That will be right according to the opinion that Esther was meant to be written,¹¹ but what can be said according to him who held that it was not meant to be written? — He could bring it in accord with what R. Benjamin b. Japheth said, for R. Eleazar said in the name of R. Benjamin b. Japheth: Why is the prayer of the righteous compared to a hind? To tell you that just as with the hind, as long as it grows, its antlers form additional branches every year, so with the righteous, the longer they abide in prayer, the more will their prayer be heard.

THEY SLAUGHTERED THE CONTINUAL OFFERING: When?¹² Would you say on one of the remaining days of the year? Had it then to be offered up? Hence [you will say that it happened] on the Day of Atonement, but is there any moon-light visible then?¹³ — This is what it means: On the Day of Atonement, when the observer said: It is daylight, they would take the high priest down to the place of immersion.¹⁴ The father of R. Abin learnt:¹⁵ Not only concerning this¹⁶ was it said,¹⁷ but also concerning the pinching of a bird's head and the taking of a fistful of the meal-offering, [was it said] that if it was done during the night, it had to be burnt. That is quite right with regard to the bird designated for a burnt-offering, since the fact can no more be undone, but touching the fistful of the meal offering,

- (1) To health, physical and moral.
- (2) The odour of roast meat is more injurious to the digestive apparatus even than the eating thereof.
- (3) It is easy to kindle a fresh fire in a hot oven, the ground being dry. By the end of summer the atmosphere is very hot so that any additional hot weather makes it well nigh intolerable.
- (4) It requires a great deal of wood and effort to warm up the cold oven in the cold days of winter. Thus must a fever be very severe to afflict one on a cold day.
- (5) That has been used before. It is hard to dissolve it and re-make it.
- (6) Who says that the light column of the sun (dawn) is scattered.
- (7) Ps. XXII, 1.
- (8) Lit., 'The Hind of the Dawn. That may have been a well-known melody, according to which the psalm was to be sung, the direction being meant for the choir-leader. V. the comm. of Delitzsch, Cheyne and Koenig.
- (9) In Meg. 15b, Queen Esther is reported to have sung this psalm as she came before Ahasuerus, hence the comparison.
- (10) 'Er. 54b.
- (11) Meg. 7a. To protect the books of the Bible, they were declared unclean, so that after touching them, one had to wash one's hands. The question hence, as to whether any book defiled the hands, implies the question as to whether it was included in the Canon and has inspiration ascribed to its contents. About the Book of Esther there is a dispute in Meg. 7a, one of the Rabbis ascribing inspiration to it, whence it was to be written and included in the Canon, the other denying it inspiration, hence declaring its touch did not defile the hands. V. Yadaim III, 5.
- (12) Did this error happen, on the basis of which the high priest was taken down to the place of immersion. The questioner takes the second incident reported in the Mishnah as a sequel to the first.
- (13) At dawn.
- (14) The answer indicates that these two incidents are not to be connected. The error happened on an ordinary day. The second passage refers to the Day of Atonement and states that when the observer had said 'It is daylight', then, on a Day of Atonement, the high priest would be taken down, etc.
- (15) Men. 100a.
- (16) Not only a sacrifice that was offered up during the night (instead of in its proper time, after day-break).
- (17) That it is to be burnt.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 29b

let him put it back and take it again when it is day? — He learnt and explained it: The vessels of ministration render what is in them sacred even outside of the proper time.¹ An objection was raised: This is the rule: Whatsoever is offered² up during the day, becomes sanctified by day and whatsoever is offered up during the night becomes sanctified both by day and by night.³ At any rate it is taught that whatsoever is offered up during the day becomes sanctified by day only, and not by night?⁴ — It may not become sanctified [enough] to be offered up, but it may become sanctified enough to be invalidated.⁵

R. Zera raised an objection: If he put in order the shewbread and the [frankincense] clip after the Sabbath and smokes the [contents of] the cups on the [following] Sabbath it is invalid.⁶ What should he do? He should leave it for the coming Sabbath, for even if it stayed for many days on the table, that does not matter. But why? It should be sanctified and invalidated?⁷ — Raba said: He who raised the objection, raised a valid one, and the father of R. Abin is also quoting a Baraita,⁸ but it is of the opinion that the night is not considered a wanting⁹ time, the day however is so considered. But when the night of Sabbath approaches, let it then become at once sanctified and invalidated?¹⁰ — Rabina said: We assume that he removed it before then. Mar Zutra, or as some say, R. Ashi said: You may set the case even if he had not removed it before [Sabbath eve], since, however, he had put it in order at variance with the regulation¹¹ it is as if a monkey had laid it there.¹²

THIS WAS THE RULE IN THE TEMPLE etc.: It is quite right that the feet must be washed because of squirts,¹³ but why must the hands be washed? — R. Abba said: This teaches us that it is

-
- (1) Hence it can no more be put back. Since the vessel has sanctified it for the altar, it must not be put back among the remaining part of the meal-offering.
- (2) E.g., the meal-offerings, the incense.
- (3) The text here corrected in accord with Bah. V. Tem. 14a. [Cur. ed. inserts 'and whatsoever is offered up during the night becomes sanctified by night, and whatsoever is offered up both during the day and during the night becomes sanctified both by day and by night.' As the former can refer only to drink-offerings (V. Ta'an. 2b) which however are offered up also during the day, this passage is omitted and the text corrected accordingly.]
- (4) Which means that there is no sanctification but in the proper time.
- (5) [If it carries overnight without having been offered (V. Zeb. 87a). The fistful accordingly having been placed in the vessel of ministration at night becomes invalidated with daybreak, and can no longer be put back among the remaining part of the meal-offering.]
- (6) [Because it had not been left on the table for seven days as prescribed, v. Lev. XXIV, 5ff. Var. lec. rightly omit: it is invalid, V. Rashi.]
- (7) Through having been set on the table in its proper time.
- (8) It is not the case of all Amoraic opinion, which can be refuted by argument. It is an authoritative Tannaitic teaching and a way must be found to bring the present argument in accord with it.
- (9) The day goes after the night, hence it is part of the night, hence the fistful put into the vessel at night is regarded as having been put therein in the proper time and consequently is sanctified properly. Since, however, it is a day-offering it must be burned with the shewbread; however, where there is a whole day wanting, the bread does not become sanctified.
- (10) Since the night is not considered as 'wanting time', whereas everything that is due during the day and was placed into the sacred vessels in the preceding night, becomes sanctified and invalidated, then, when the eve of second Sabbath comes, let the table sanctify the bread and invalidate it?
- (11) When it was wanting time.
- (12) Without any intention, hence the table does not sanctify it, for we consider that since it was placed there without intention, it was technically not placed there at all, hence it becomes neither sanctified nor invalidated.
- (13) Of urine.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 30a

the right thing to wipe off [squirtings]. This supports the view of R. Ammi who says: A man must not go out with squirtings on his feet, because he may appear as one that has his privy member cut off and he may thus cause evil talk against his children that they are bastards.¹

R. Papa said: If there be excrement in its place,² he must not read the Shema'.³ How shall we imagine this case? If to say that it is invisible, that is self-evident; if to say that it is not seen surely⁴ 'The Torah was not given to the ministering angels!' This has but reference to a situation in which it is obvious when he sits and invisible when he stands. But what is the difference between this and one who has filth on his body, for it has been stated: Where one who has filth on his body, or whose hands are in a privy,⁵ R. Huna permits the reading of the Shema' and R. Hisda forbids it?⁶ — In its place filth is most execrable, away from it, it is less so. Our Rabbis taught: This is the halachah with regard to meal-time:⁷ If a man goes forth to make water, he washes his one⁸ hand and re-enters. If he conversed with his neighbour and waited [diverting himself], he washes both his hands [again] and re-enters. When he washes his hands, he should not wash them outside and enter, because of the suspicion,⁹ but he should enter, sit at his accustomed place and wash his two hands there, then pass the pitcher¹⁰ around the guests.¹¹ — R. Hisda said: What we said refers to drinking,¹² but as to eating he may wash his hands outside and re-enter, people know that he is fastidious of taste.¹³ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: I would do the same¹⁴ before drinking as people know me to be fastidious.

MISHNAH. NO MAN EVEN IF HE WERE CLEAN COULD ENTER THE TEMPLE COURT WITHOUT HAVING IMMERSSED HIMSELF. FIVE IMMERSIONS AND TEN SANCTIFICATIONS DID THE HIGH PRIEST UNDERGO ON THAT DAY. AND ALL ON HOLY GROUND IN THE PARWAH¹⁵ CELL WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THIS ONE¹⁶ ALONE.

— A LINEN SHEET WAS SPREAD BETWEEN HIM AND THE PEOPLE.

GEMARA. Ben Zoma was asked: What is the purpose of this immersion?¹⁷ He answered: If one¹⁸ who moves from one holy place to another and from one place [the entering of] which [in uncleanness] involves kareth¹⁹ to another place [the entering of] which [in uncleanness] involves kareth, requires immersion, how much more shall he require immersion who moves from profane ground into holy ground, and from a place [the entering of] which [in uncleanness] does not involve kareth, to a place [the entering of] which [in uncleanness] involves kareth! R. Judah said: It is only an immersion required for the sake of uniformity,²⁰ so that he may remember if there is any uncleanness on him and abstain.²¹ In what principle do they differ?

(1) Men afflicted with such blemish are incapable of reproduction, hence people, mistaking him for a man thus afflicted and hearing that he has children, will spread the rumour that they are begotten in adultery.

(2) In the anus.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) Ber. 25b.

(5) He happens to have his hands still in the space of the privy, between its door and the wall which separates it from the next room.

(6) Because the whole body ought to be attuned to prayer, as the psalmist has it: All my bones shall say: Lord, who is like unto Thee, Ps. XXXV, 10.

(7) Hands have to be washed before taking a meal.

(8) The one which may have been touched by the squirts of urine.

(9) That he failed to wash his hands outside.

(10) Which he had used for washing his hands.

(11) V. Tosef. Ber. IV.

(12) [That he does not intend eating any more, but drinking, in which case the washing of the hands a second time is but a matter of precaution in case he does partake of some bread (Rashi).]

(13) The average man is assumed to be fastidious enough not to eat without his fingers having been washed before, esp. since eating with the fingers (rather than with fork and knife) was the general custom. V.T.A. III, p. 43.

(14) And wash my hands outside.

(15) In the southern part of the Temple Court, v. Mid. V, 3.

(16) The first one (mentioned in preceding Mishnah 28a) which he performed on profane ground at the Water-Gate.

(17) For every man who wishes to enter the Temple Court.

(18) The high priest, in the course of his five services on the Day of Atonement, moved from the inner to the outer court, both being sacred and having the special restriction attached, viz., that one who entered them in uncleanness incurred divine penalty of death.

(19) V. Glos.

(20) Lit., 'an attached immersion'. There is no Biblical obligation, but a Rabbinic 'fence' to assure a consciousness of any uncleanness attaching to him who entered the Temple Court.

(21) From entering the Temple Court.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 30b

As to whether the service is profaned.¹ According to Ben Zoma² he profanes the service, according to R. Judah he does not. But does he, in accordance with Ben Zoma's view, profane the service? Has it not been taught: If a high priest did not immerse or sanctify himself between garment and garment or between service and service, his service remains valid.³ But if either a high priest or a common priest has not washed his hands and feet in the morning and then had officiated at a service, that service is invalidated? — Rather does the dispute concern the question as to whether he transgresses a positive command or not,¹ Ben Zoma holding he transgresses a positive command, R. Judah that he does not. But does R. Judah hold this view? Has it not been taught: A leper⁴ immerses himself and stands in the Nicanor Gate. R. Judah said: He does not need to immerse himself, for he has done so already on the evening before! This has its own reason, as it was taught: 'Because he had immersed himself on the eve before'.⁵ What does he ask who asks this?⁶ — Because he wants to raise another objection, viz., [why was it called] the cell of the lepers, because lepers immerse themselves therein.⁷ R. Judah says: Not only of the lepers did they say [this] but of every man [who enters the Temple Court]?⁸ — That is no difficulty. One statement refers to the case that he immersed himself, the other to the case that he did not. But, if he did not immerse himself, he must await the setting of the sun? — Rather: In both cases he is presumed to have immersed himself, but in the one case he is presumed to have ceased to have his mind [on the necessity of preventing defilement],⁹ in the other he is presumed to have had his mind thereon all the time. But if he ceased to have his mind on it, he would need to be sprinkled on the third and the seventh day, for R. Dosthai b. Mattun said in the name of R. Johanan: Wherever attention¹⁰ [from the need to prevent uncleanness] is diverted, sprinkling on the third and the seventh day is required?¹¹ — Rather: In both cases he is presumed not to have diverted the attention, yet there is no contradiction, for in the one case he is presumed to have immersed himself for the purpose of entering the Sanctuary, in the other he is assumed to have done so without that purpose in mind.¹² Or, if you like, say: Read not of lepers did they say [this]¹³ but of every man. Rabina said: R. Judah makes his statement only on behalf [of the view] of the Rabbis: As far as my view is concerned, no leper needs [another] immersion. But according to your opinion, admit at least that this was said not of lepers alone but of all people. And the Rabbis?¹⁴ — The leper is accustomed to [his] impurity, all others are unaccustomed to it.¹⁵

Shall we say that the Rabbis who dispute with R. Judah¹⁶ are of the opinion of Ben Zoma,¹⁷ notwithstanding which they make reference to the leper,¹⁸ to inform you of the far-reaching consequences of R. Judah's opinion; or perhaps the difference in the case of the leper lies in the fact that he is accustomed to the uncleanness?¹⁹ — He answered: It is different with the leper, because he is accustomed to his uncleanness.

Said Abaye to R. Joseph:²⁰ Would an intervening object

-
- (1) By officiating without immersing first.
 - (2) Who infers it from an argument a minori which has the force of Biblical law.
 - (3) Zeb. 19b. [Since a high priest does not profane the service by failing to take the intermediary immersions, there could be no profanation of the service in the absence of the first immersion, since on the view of Ben Zoma the latter is inferred from the former.]
 - (4) On the eighth day of his affliction, although he had immersed himself on the seventh, Lev. XIV, 9: And it shall be on the seventh...he shall bathe his flesh in water, and he shall be clean. Yet, when he offers up the prescribed sacrifices on the eighth day, he shall immerse himself again.
 - (5) R. Judah holds the purpose of the immersion of those who enter the Sanctuary in the morning is just to remind them of their former uncleanness, whereas the leper, who by reason of last night's immersion got rid of his uncleanness, is not in need of another reminder, in form of a second immersion.
 - (6) I.e., why ask an apparently unnecessary question? The answer is obvious. Mielziner (Introduction p. 238) cites Frankel MGWJ 1861 for a tradition according to which all passages in the Talmud introduced by this phrase belong to the additions made by the Saboraim.
 - (7) [Before they entered the Temple Court on the eighth day in the morning; when standing at the Nicanor Gate they thrust their thumb and toe into the Temple Court, there to receive an application of the blood of the guilt-offering and of oil; v. Lev. XIV, 14ff and supra 16a and infra p. 143, n. 10.]
 - (8) 'Not only of the lepers' implies the lepers at any rate, hence he would consider a re-immersion necessary, which contradicts his earlier statement.
 - (9) By consistent guarding of his body against touch by agents of ritual uncleanness.
 - (10) For he may have entered the tent in which a corpse lay.
 - (11) For entering the Temple.
 - (12) He therefore requires a second immersion in the morning.

(13) Requiring immersion on entering the Sanctuary.

(14) How would they meet R. Judah's argument?

(15) Hence he will no more pay attention to the dangers of defilement, whereas all others, unaccustomed to uncleanness and not reconciled to it, will be anxious to avoid such risk.

(16) And hold that a leper needs re-immersion on the eighth day.

(17) Who requires no morning immersion even in the case of a leper who is accustomed to uncleanness.

(18) Although they hold with Ben Zoma that every one entering the Sanctuary is by the law of the Torah obliged to immerse himself.

(19) That of leprosy, hence is accustomed to touch things unclean, whence the assumption that even after his immersion he may have done so; but other men require no morning immersion Biblically before entering the Sanctuary.

(20) Text in accord with Maharsha.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 31a

render this immersion¹ invalid or not? — He replied: 'Whatever the Rabbis ordained, they endowed with the authority of a law of the Torah'.²

Said Abaye to R. Joseph: Is a partial entrance of the Sanctuary considered an entrance or not? — He answered: The thumb³ and toe will prove that, for there but a partial entrance is involved, and it was taught: A leper immerses himself and stands in the Nicanor Gate! — The question was asked: What about making for himself a long knife for slaughtering?⁴ This question is asked in accord with the view of both Ben Zoma and the Rabbis who oppose R. Judah. This question is asked on the view of Ben Zoma: Perhaps Ben Zoma does not consider the immersion obligatory except in the case of one who actually enters, but not for one who stands outside; or perhaps even for the latter, because he might gradually enter. The question is also asked according to the view of the Rabbis who oppose R. Judah: Perhaps the Rabbis hold their view only there⁵ because he does not perform a service,⁶ but where he officiates at a service they would agree,⁷ or do they make no difference? — The question remains unanswered.

FIVE IMMERSIONS AND TEN SANCTIFICATIONS: Our Rabbis taught: The high priest underwent five immersions and ten sanctifications on that day, all of them on holy ground, in the Parwah Cell, with the exception of the first, which took place on profane ground, on top of the Water Gate, lying at the side of his [private] cell.⁸ Abaye said: We infer therefrom that the Etam well was [at least] twenty-three cubits above the ground of the Temple Court.⁹ For we have learnt: All the doorways there were twenty cubits in height, ten cubits in breadth, with the exception of that of the Hall¹⁰ and it was taught: And he shall bathe all his flesh in water,¹¹ I.e., in the waters of a mikweh,¹² in water which covers his whole body. What 'is its quantity? One cubit square, three cubits high, and the Sages have calculated that the required quantity for [the contents of] a mikweh is forty se'ah.¹³

(1) An immersion, to be valid, requires utterly undisturbed touch of the water on the body of the person immersing himself, any intervening object rendering the immersion invalid. This, however, in the questioner's mind applies only to such immersion as is commanded by the Torah. R. Judah, who considers it only an immersion for the sake of uniformity, might hence hold that in this case an intervening object might not be considered sufficiently disturbing to render the immersion invalid.

(2) Pes. 30b.

(3) Lev. XIV, 14: And the priest shall take the blood of the guilt-offering and... shall put it upon the thumb of his right hand, and upon the great toe of his right foot. Ibid. 17: And of the rest of the oil . . . the priest shall put . . . upon the thumb of his right hand and upon the great toe of his right foot. It is to receive of the blood and the oil that the leper stands at the Nicanor Gate and puts his hands and feet inside, v. 11 indicating that: And the priest that cleanseth him shall set the man that is to be cleansed . . . at the door of the tent of meeting.

(4) To escape the obligation of an immersion, which is due on entering. With a knife long enough he might slay the sacrificial animal from without.

- (5) In the case of an ordinary man entering the Sanctuary.
- (6) Hence they free him from the obligations of an immersion.
- (7) That such is necessary.
- (8) V. supra.
- (9) From the Etam well was the water supply for the pool on top of the Water Gate, v. Zeb. 55b.
- (10) V. supra 15a.
- (11) [The reference is to Lev. XV, 16 and the text is to be corrected accordingly. The verse in cur. edd. is from Lev. XV, 13.]
- (12) Lit., 'gathering (of water)' then the term. techn. for the pool for ritual immersion. The water therein must not be drawn, i.e., through a vessel, but must come directly from spring, river, sea or rain.
- (13) 'Er. 4b. Forty se'ah correspond roughly to two hundred and sixty-four quarts of water. [The water in the pool on top of the Water Gate had thus to rise to a height of twenty-three cubits above the level of the Temple Court twenty cubits for the height of the doorway and three cubits for the height of the pool, which would have been impossible unless the Etam well was situated on at least a corresponding height.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 31b

But there is also one cubit of the ceiling and one cubit of the flooring?¹ — Since the gates of the Sanctuary are made of marble these were made of a small [thickness]. But there is some [additional thickness] however small? — Since it is not even as much as a cubit, he does not count it.

A LINEN SHEET WAS SPREAD BETWEEN HIM AND THE PEOPLE. Why of linen? — As R. Kahana said [elsewhere]:² So that he may perceive that the service of the day is to be performed in garments of linen. Thus here too it is that he might perceive that the service of the day is to be performed in garments of linen.

MISHNAH. HE STRIPPED OFF [HIS GARMENTS]³ WENT DOWN AND IMMersed HIMSELF, CAME UP AND DRIED HIMSELF.⁴ THEY BROUGHT HIM THE GOLDEN⁵ GARMENTS, HE PUT THEM ON AND SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET. THEY BROUGHT HIM THE CONTINUAL OFFERING, HE MADE THE REQUIRED CUT AND SOME ONE ELSE FINISHED IT FOR HIM.⁶ HE RECEIVED THE BLOOD AND SPRINKLED IT. HE WENT INSIDE⁷ TO SMOKE THE INCENSE OF THE MORNING⁸ AND TO TRIM THE LAMPS;⁹ [AFTERWARDS] TO OFFER UP THE HEAD AND THE LIMBS AND THE PANCAKES AND THE WINE-OFFERING. THE MORNING INCENSE WAS OFFERED UP BETWEEN THE BLOOD AND THE LIMBS, THE AFTERNOON [INCENSE] BETWEEN THE LIMBS AND THE DRINK-OFFERINGS. IF THE HIGH PRIEST WAS EITHER OLD OR OF DELICATE HEALTH WARM WATER WOULD BE PREPARED FOR HIM AND Poured INTO THE COLD, TO MITIGATE ITS COLDNESS.

GEMARA. The scholars said in the presence of R. Papa:¹⁰ This [Mishnah]¹¹ is not in accord with R. Meir, for if it were in accord with him,¹² behold he said: There must be two sanctifications for the putting on of the garments, hence there ought to be here, too,¹³ two sanctifications for the putting on of the garments!¹⁴ R. Papa said unto then.: Whether on the view of the Sages or of R. Meir, one sanctification is for the stripping off of the holy garments,¹⁵ and one for the putting on¹⁵ and the reason of their dispute is [the interpretation of these words]: He shall put off, he shall bathe and he shall put on.¹⁶ R. Meir holds that Scripture compares the stripping to the putting on [of the garments], i.e., just as in the case of the putting on of the garments he first puts them on and only afterwards sanctifies himself, so also with the stripping off of the garments, he first strips off and then sanctifies himself; whereas the Rabbis hold that [Scripture] compares the stripping off to the putting on, i.e., just as with the putting on he sanctifies himself whilst dressed in the garments, so with the stripping off, he sanctifies himself whilst the garments are yet on him. Said the scholars to R. Papa: How can you say so, has it not been taught: A sheet of linen was spread between him and the people, he stripped off [his garments], went down, immersed himself, came up and dried himself. One brought the golden garments before him, he put them on, and sanctified his hands and his feet. R. Meir said: He stripped off [his garments] and sanctified his hands and his feet, went down and immersed himself, came up and dried himself. One brought the golden garments before him, he put them on and sanctified his hands and feet!¹⁷ — He answered them: If there is such teaching, it is a teaching [to be recognized]. According to R. Meir it is right, because we thus account for the

(1) [I.e., there must have been an additional cubit for the ceiling of the doorway and one for the flooring of the pool on top?]

(2) Infra 35a.

(3) His non-holy garments.

(4) Lit., 'sponged himself'.

(5) The eight garments, which the high priest puts on for service. They are: tunic, breeches, mitre, girdle, breast-plate, ephod, robe and plate. V. Ex. XXVIII, 2ff.

(6) To enable the high priest to put the knife aside and to take hold of the holy bowl in which he receives the blood. On other days one priest would slaughter, and another receive the blood. Both functions were to be performed by the high priest on the Day of Atonement.

(7) נָכַח Lit., 'entered'. The word 'entered', however, does not fit the whole of what follows, as Baneth remarks. For whereas he entered the Sanctuary (Hekal) to smoke the incense and trim the lamps, he cannot be said to have 'entered' to offer up the head etc. which took place outside. Baneth therefore suggests with considerable justification that, as elsewhere, 'נָכַח' be translated 'prepared to', 'went on to'. But this change is unnecessary as one could translate: He went in to . . . trim the lamps, (afterwards) to offer up the head . . .

(8) Ex. XXX, 7.

(9) I.e., clean them, provide them with wick and oil, according to Maimonides, also light them.

(10) V. Rashi.

(11) [Which prescribes only one sanctification in connection with the first immersion when he changes from his non-holy garments into the garments of gold.]

(12) [Who teaches infra 34b that in connection with the second immersion, when he changes from the garments of gold into linen garments, he disrobes himself first and then sanctifies himself, in contradistinction to the Rabbis who place the sanctification before the disrobing.]

(13) [It is assumed that the reason of R. Meir for prescribing the disrobing before the sanctification is that he holds that the two sanctifications required on the change of garments are for the putting on of holy vestments. Whereas the Rabbis ascribe one for the stripping of holy garments and the other for the putting on of holy garments.]

(14) [On the other hand, in the view of the Rabbis, there would be no need for more than one sanctification, since the garments of which he strips himself at the first immersion are non-holy.]

(15) So that our Mishnah can be also in accord with R. Meir.

(16) Lev. XVI, 23, 24.

(17) [This shows that R. Meir requires two sanctifications also in connection with the first immersion.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 32a

ten sanctifications, but according to the Rabbis, they are only nine? — The Rabbis will answer you: The last sanctification is made when he strips off the holy garments and puts on the profane¹ ones.

Our Rabbis taught: And Aaron shall come into the tent of meeting² For what purpose does he enter? For no other purpose than that of taking out the censer and the coal-pan, the whole portion being reported in right order with the exception of this passage.³ For what reason?⁴ — R. Hisda said: There is a tradition: Five immersions and ten sanctifications did the high priest undergo on that day. If he had performed them in the order mentioned in the scriptures there could have been no more than three immersions and six sanctifications.⁵

It was taught: R. Judah said: Whence do we know of the five immersions and ten sanctifications which the high priest had to undergo on that day? To teach us that it is said: And Aaron shall come into the tent of meeting, and shall put off the linen garments . . . and he shall wash his flesh in water in a holy place and put on his other vestments and come forth and offer [his burnt-offering].⁶ Thus you infer that whenever one changes from one service to another,⁷ an immersion is required. Rabbi said: Whence do we know that the high priest had to undergo five immersions and ten sanctifications on that day? Because it is said: He shall put on the holy linen tunic, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with the linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired; they are the holy garments; and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and put them on.⁸ Hence you learn that whosoever changes from service to service requires an immersion. Moreover, it says, 'They are the holy garments', thus putting all the garments on the same level. Now there are five services;⁹ The continual offering of dawn, [performed] in the golden garments: the service of the day [the Day of Atonement], in linen garments; of his [the high priest's] and the people's ram, in the golden garments; [the taking out] of the censer and coal-pan, in white garments; the continual evening offering in the golden garments — Whence do we know that every immersion required two sanctifications? For it is written: And he shall put off . . . and he shall wash; and he shall wash and he shall put on.¹⁰ — R. Eliezer b. Simeon said: This can be inferred a minori ad majus: If in a case where no immersion is required,¹¹ sanctification is yet required,¹² how much more, in a place in which immersion is required,¹³ is sanctification also required — But [perhaps let us also infer] that as there only one sanctification is required, here, too, one only would be necessary? Therefore Scripture says: And Aaron shall come into the tent of meeting, and shall put off the linen garments which he put on — what is the meaning of 'which he put on'? Does not a man put off but that which he did put on? Rather [are these superfluous words written] to put the putting off on the same level with the putting on of the garments; just as the putting on of the garments requires sanctification,¹⁴ so does the putting off of the garments require it.

[The master said].¹⁵ 'R. Judah said: Whence do we know of the five immersions and ten sanctifications which the high priest had to undergo on that Day? To teach us that Scripture says: "And Aaron shall come into the tent of meeting . . . and shall wash his flesh in water in a holy place." Thus you infer that whenever one changes from one service to another, an immersion is required.' We found [this rule] for the change from the white garments to the golden ones.¹⁶ Whence do we know [that it also applies] for the change from the golden to the linen ones?

(1) At the end of the service of the Day of Atonement, as he strips off the holy garments to don profane ones.

(2) Lev. XVI, 23.

(3) Infra 70b.

(4) Did Aaron, have to interrupt the service, interpolating the offering up of his and the people's ram, between the incense and the bringing out of censer and coal-pan?

(5) One immersion each for the continual offering of the morning, for the service of the day, which includes censer — and coal-pan — function, and one between that and the offering up of the rams, which includes the additional, and the continual afternoon offering. Thus there would be three immersions only as against the five traditionally reported. Hence the necessity of a change in the programme, hence the interpolation of the offering of the rams between the service within (the day's service) and the bringing out of censer and coal-pan. So that the censer — and coal-pan — function now interrupts between the offerings of the rams and the continual afternoon-offering, with the result that there are now five immersions necessary; one for the morning's continual offering, in the golden garments; one for the service of the day in white garments; one for the offering of the two rams on the outer altar in the golden garments; one for the taking out of censer and coal-pan in white garments; and the fifth for the additional, and the continual afternoon offering in the golden garments. Thus tradition and text are harmonized, the five immersions implying ten sanctifications, one each, before each putting off, and before each putting on, of the garments required for each service.

(6) Lev. XVI, 23, 24.

(7) I.e., from a service performed within the Tent of Meeting to one performed outside and vice versa.

(8) Ibid. 4.

(9) Whether on the view of Rabbi or of R. Judah.

(10) [This is the continuation of Rabbi's statement and the reference is to Lev. XVI, 23, 24. The words 'he shall wash', being placed between 'he shall put off' and 'he shall put on', are taken by Rabbi as referring both to stripping and the robing, each requiring a separate washing (sanctification), this in contradistinction to R. Judah who derives from it supra the need of all immersion between every change of service v. infra 32b.]

(11) During the rest of the days of the year (as against the Day of Atonement) the law of the Torah does not require immersion before each service, only by Rabbinic ordinance, the purpose of which is to keep the priest conscious of risks to his cleanliness, is such immersion necessary. (V. supra 30a.)

(12) V. Ex. XL, 32.

(13) On the Day of Atonement, at every change of garment.

(14) As is inferred a minori.

(15) [To be inserted with some MSS. V. D.S.]

(16) The verses in question (Lev. XVI, 23, 24) occurring in connection with the stripping of the white garments.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 32b

The school of R. Ishmael taught: That can be inferred a minori: If the golden garments in which the high priest does not enter the Holy of Holies require immersion, how much more do the linen garments, in which he enters the Holy of Holies, require it? But this argument can be demolished: The case of the golden garments is different, because much atonement is obtained in them.¹ Rather, he infers it from what Rabbi said.²

[The Master said]³ 'Rabbi said, Whence do we know of the five immersions and the ten sanctifications which the high priest had to undergo on that day? To teach us that it is said: "He shall put on the holy linen tunic . . ." Hence you learn that whosoever changes from service to service requires an immersion.' We have found that [required for a change] from the golden,⁴ to the white garments. Whence do we know that [the same rule obtains for a change] from the white to the golden garments? The school of R. Ishmael taught: That can be inferred a minori: If the white garments, in which but little atonement is obtained, require an immersion, how much more will the golden garments, in which much atonement is obtained, require it? This argument can be demolished: The case of the white garments is different, because the high priest, dressed in them, enters the Holy of Holies? It is for this reason that he [Rabbi, in his statement] teaches: And it also says: 'They are the holy garments, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and put them on'.⁵

'Now there are five services'. That of the continual afternoon offering [performed] in the golden garments; the service of the day in white garments; [the offering up of] his, and the people's ram in the golden garments; the [taking out of] the censer and coal-pan in white garments; and the continual offering at dusk, in the golden garments — And whence do we know that every immersion requires two sanctifications? To teach us that Scripture says: 'And he shall put off . . . and he shall wash . . . and he shall wash . . . and he shall put on'. But this [passage] refers to the immersions?⁶ — Since it has no reference to the immersion [the requirement of] which we infer from ‘They are the holy garments,⁷ apply it to the sanctifications . Then the Divine Law should have written the term of ‘sanctification’?⁸ — [Scripture chooses that term] to let us know that immersion is even as sanctification, i.e., just as immersion must take place on holy ground, so must sanctification take place on holy ground. Whence does R. Judah⁹ infer [that] the sanctification [must take place on holy ground]? — He infers it from the teaching of R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon.

R. Hisda said: Rabbi's view excludes that of R. Meir and that of the Rabbis.¹⁰ It excludes that of the Rabbis, for according to them he sanctifies himself [first] while he is still dressed, whereas Rabbi holds that he sanctifies himself after he is stripped; and it also excludes the view of R. Meir, for R. Meir holds that the second sanctification takes place when he is [already] dressed, whereas, according to Rabbi, he sanctifies himself whilst still stripped of the garments.¹¹ R. Aha b. Jacob said: All agree that at the second sanctification he first dons [the garments] and then sanctifies himself. What is the reason? Because Scripture said: Or when they come near to the altar,¹² i.e., only he who lacks nothing but the approach,¹³ that excludes him who lacks both dressing and approach. R. Aha, the son of Raba, said to R. Ashi: R. Hisda does not agree with R. Aha, nor does R. Aha agree with R. Hisda, for else there would be fifteen sanctifications required according to Rabbi.¹⁴

ONE BROUGHT HIM THE CONTINUAL OFFERING, HE MADE THE REQUIRED CUT etc. What does ‘KERAZO’¹⁵ mean? ‘Ulla said: It is a synonym for ‘slaying’ — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: What is the scriptural evidence? Egypt is a very fair heifer. But the kerez [gadfly] out of the north is come, it is come.¹⁶ What is the intimation?¹⁷ — As R. Joseph interpreted it: A fair kingdom is Egypt but murderous nations from the north will come upon it.¹⁸

How far shall he cut? — ‘Ulla said: The bigger part of both organs.¹⁹ Thus also said R. Johanan: The bigger part of the two organs. Resh Lakish also holds that he cuts through the bigger part of the two organs, for Resh Lakish said:²⁰ Since we have learned that the cutting through of the bigger part of an organ is as good as the cutting through the whole of it, why did we learn that ‘the bigger part of one organ [is required to be cut through] in case of a fowl ‘and the bigger part of the two organs [are required to be cut through] in case of an animal? Because we have learned: ONE BROUGHT HIM THE CONTINUAL OFFERING, HE MADE THE REQUIRED CUT AND SOMEONE ELSE FINISHED IT FOR HIM, HE RECEIVED THE BLOOD AND SPRINKLED IT—one might assume, if another one did not complete the killing for him, it would be invalid. — [You say that] ‘one could assume that if the other did not complete the killing for him, it would be invalid,’ then it would mean that the service is performed by someone²¹ else and we have learnt: All the services of the Day of Atonement are valid only if performed by him [the high priest]?²² — Rather: This is what he says: One might have assumed that it shall be considered invalidated by Rabbinic ordinance,²³

(1) They are used every day for services, whereas the white garments are used only for the service in the Holy of Holies on the Day of Atonement and obtain atonement for the Sanctuary and its sacred things, if defilement had occurred there; v. Shebu. 7b.

(2) From Lev. XVI, 4.

(3) [Inserted by one MS. cf. Rashi.]

(4) The verse in question occurring in connection with the changing from the gold garments into the linen ones.

(5) The additional passage adduced by Rabbi intimates that Scripture makes the fact that they are the holy garments the reason for the need of immersion, so that one shall infer that all changes of holy garments on the Day of Atonement require immersion, thus also the golden garments.

(6) Since it says ‘his flesh’.

(7) Cf. n. 1.

(8) [I.e., it should have been written ‘he shall wash his hands and feet’, R. Hananel.]

(9) Who interprets the above passage differently, who therefore lacks a source for this information.

(10) Mentioned supra p.146, n. 6.

- (11) [Rabbi holds that both sanctifications are performed whilst he is stripped, one before the immersion and the other after the immersion.]
- (12) Ex. XXX, 20.
- (13) May perform the sanctification.
- (14) According to R. Hisda, Rabbi requires two sanctifications between stripping and dressing; and according to R. Aha, Rabbi requires the sanctification after being dressed before the service, for if their views were not incompatible, Rabbi would be found to require fifteen sanctifications.
- (15) Why a change of the usual wording? 'Shehato' would have been the normal way of putting it.
- (16) Jer. XLVI, 20.
- (17) The word 'kerez' here, meaning 'gadfly', does not suggest explanation of the incision.
- (18) The question has the Hebrew text in mind, the answer the Aramaic paraphrase. Since 'kerez' is interpreted as 'murderous', 'karaz' may fitly be used for 'shahat', to kill.
- (19) The windpipe and the gullet.
- (20) Hul. 29b.
- (21) That would render the service of the other essential, hence would mean someone else's participation in the service of the Day of Atonement, which is against the law.
- (22) Infra 73a.
- (23) Making a distinction between profane slaughter, where the bigger part of an organ is on the same level as the whole organ, i.e., the cutting through of the bigger part completes the slaughtering effectively, as against sacred animals, which would have their organ (or organs) completely cut through.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 33a

therefore we have learnt: The bigger part of an organ with a fowl, the bigger part of two organs with an animal — But since, even by Rabbinic ordinance, it would be considered not invalidated,¹ why does he [the other one] have to finish it? — It is the proper thing [a command] to finish it.²

Abaye related the order of the [daily] priestly functions in the name of tradition and in accordance with Abba Saul:³ The large pile comes before the second pile for the incense; the second pile for the incense comes before the laying in order of the two logs of wood; the laying in order of the two logs of wood precedes the removing of the ashes from the inner altar; the removing of the ashes from the inner altar precedes the trimming of the five lamps; the trimming of the five lamps precedes the blood⁴ of the continual offering; the blood of the continual offering precedes the trimming of the two lamps; the trimming of the two lamps precedes the incense; the incense precedes the limbs;⁵ the limbs come before the meal-offering; the meal-offering precedes the pancakes; the pancakes come before the drink-offerings; the drink-offerings precede the additional offerings; the additional offerings come before the [frankincense] censers, and the [frankincense] censers precede the continual afternoon-offering, as it is said: And he shall make smoke thereon the fat of the peace-offerings,⁶ i.e., herewith all the offerings are completed —⁷ The Master said: 'The great pile precedes the second pile for the incense.' Whence do we know that? Because it has been taught:⁸ This is the law of the burnt-offering: it is that which goeth up on its fire-wood upon the altar all night⁹ — this passage refers to the great pile. And the fire of the altar shall be kept burning thereby¹⁰ — this refers to the second pile for the incense.¹¹ But perhaps I should reverse it?¹² — It seems more logical that the great pile have preference because it brings more¹³ atonement — On the contrary: the second pile is of greater value, for it is introduced within [the Sanctuary].¹⁴ — Nevertheless, the one which causes more atonement is of greater value. And, if you like, say: If there be no wood found for the second pile, would one not bring it into [the Sanctuary] from the great pile?¹⁵

'The second pile for the incense precedes the laying in order of the two logs of wood.' Whence do we know that? — Because it is written: And the priest shall kindle wood¹⁶ upon it every morning,¹⁷ i.e., 'upon it',¹⁸ but not upon the other pile,¹⁹ hence we can infer that the other pile is arranged already. But the word 'upon it' has its own text meaning? — 'Upon it' is written twice.²⁰ 'The laying in order of the two logs of wood precedes the removing of the ashes from the inner altar.’ Although touching the one it is written: ‘In the morning, in the morning’²¹ and touching the other it is also written: ‘In the morning, in the morning’²² nevertheless that which is preparatory [to the incense burning] has preference,²³ What would be preparatory [according to their reply], are the two logs of wood, but surely you said that the two logs of wood belong to the great pile!²⁴ — R. Jeremiah said: It is the laying in order of the wood.²⁵ — Rabina said:²⁶ Since he started with the laying in order [of the wood], he completes it also. R. Ashi said:²⁶ If he found no wood in the second pile, would he not bring it in from the great pile?

‘And the removal of the ashes from the inner altar precedes the trimming of the five lamps.’ Why? — Abaye said: I know it²⁷ by tradition, but I do not know the reason. Raba said: it is in accord with Resh Lakish, for Resh Lakish said: ‘One must not forego the occasion of performing a religious command’²⁸

-
- (1) If the other priest did not finish the cutting of the organs.
 - (2) In order to obtain a proper supply of blood for the services of the day.
 - (3) V. supra 14b.
 - (4) Actually: the slaying of the animal and the receiving of the blood.
 - (5) Smoking of the limbs of the continual morning-offering.
 - (6) Lev. VI, 5.
 - (7) Connecting ad hoc שלמים peace-offerings’ with the root שלם meaning to be complete, thus: And he shall make smoke thereon the fat of the peace-offerings is made to mean: And he shall . . . the complete sacrifice, the conclusion of the sacrifices.
 - (8) Infra 45a.
 - (9) Lev. VI, 2.
 - (10) Ibid.
 - (11) A special pile of wood, away from the main great pile, was kindled to provide embers for the daily burning of incense on the golden altar; v. Tam. 29a.
 - (12) So that the pile for the incense should come first.
 - (13) Because every smoking, with the exception of that of the incense, smoked on the inner altar, is performed thereon.
 - (14) For incense burning.
 - (15) So that some of the great pile, too, may be introduced within the Sanctuary.
 - (16) This is taken to refer to the two logs of wood.
 - (17) Lev. VI, 5.
 - (18) I.e., the large pile.
 - (19) The second pile for incense.
 - (20) Ibid. In this very same verse, once it has its text meaning, the surplus word intimates the inference.
 - (21) Ex. XXX, 7, E. V., ‘every morning’. [With reference to the smoking of incense, which also includes the removal of the ashes from the inner altar which must precede the incense offering.]
 - (22) Lev. VI, 5.
 - (23) The embers of the wood are essential, for without them no incense can be smoked.
 - (24) And are thus not preparatory to the incense.
 - (25) Lit., ‘the name of’ is wood, and wood is essential for the incense, even though not this wood.
 - (26) The reason why the laying of the two logs precedes the removal of the ashes from the inner altar.
 - (27) That this was the order according to Abba Saul.
 - (28) Infra 58b.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 33b

and as he [the priest] enters the Hekal [Sanctuary], he comes first upon the altar.¹ For it was taught: The table was to the north two and one half cubits away from the wall, the candlestick was to the south, two and one half cubits away from the wall, the altar stood in the exact middle, extending somewhat outward.² But let it stand with them?³ — Since it is written: And the candlestick over against the table,⁴ it is required that they⁵ see each other. Said Raba: From what Resh Lakish said we infer that it is forbidden to forego the arm in favour of the forehead.⁶ How shall he do it? From the arm [he shall] proceed to the forehead.⁷

‘And the trimming of the five lamps is to precede the blood of the continual offering, and the blood of the continual offering is to come before the trimming of the two lamps.’ What is the reason? — Abaye said: [The phrases] ‘In the morning, in the morning’, [written] in connection with the two logs of wood,⁸ which are not necessary [there]:⁹ one¹⁰ applies to the trimming of the five lamps which shall precede the blood of the continual offering; the other applies to the blood of the continual offering which is to come before the trimming of the two lamps.¹¹ ‘One applies to the trimming of the five lamps which should precede the blood of the continual offering’, for here¹² are three¹³ [words], there only two. ‘And the other applies to the blood of the continual offering which should come before the trimming of the two lamps’, for, although in each case there are two,¹⁴ yet, that which obtains atonement¹⁵ has preference.

R. Papa said to Abaye: But say, perhaps, that one is to be applied to the removing of the ashes of the inner altar, which is to precede the blood of the continual offering, for here are three words,¹⁶ there but two; and one applies to the blood of the continual offering that should come before the trimming of the five lamps, for, although in both cases there are but two, the one that obtains atonement is to have preference? — If so, what shall he interrupt it with?¹⁷ It would be quite right according to Resh Lakish who said: The lamps were trimmed and [after interruption] trimmed again.¹⁸ in order to keep the whole Temple Court animated, but according to R. Johanan who interprets ‘In the morning, in the morning’,¹⁹ i.e., divide it into two mornings,²⁰ what could be said?²¹ Said Rabina to R. Ashi: Are the words ‘In the morning, in the morning’ in connection with the wood at all superfluous? Surely they are really necessary for their text meaning, the Divine Law saying that they should precede the second pile for the incense? He replied: Have we not explained: ‘Upon it’ but not upon the other pile, which indicated that the other must have been there already!²²

Why does he trim the five lamps first, let him trim the two lamps first! — Having started already, let him do the bigger part. Then let him trim six? — Scripture says: When he dresseth the lamps, he shall burn it,¹⁹ and ‘lamps’ is no less than two. — ‘And the trimming of the lamps is to come before the incense’, for Scripture says: ‘When he dresseth the lamps’, and afterwards [it says]. ‘He shall burn it’ [the incense].¹⁹

‘And the incense [shall precede] the limbs’ — For it was taught: Let that, in connection with which it is said ‘In the morning, in the morning’, precede that, in connection with which Scripture said only, ‘In the morning’ [once].²³

‘And the limbs [come before] the meal-offering’, for it was taught:²⁴ Whence do we know that nothing may precede²⁵ the continual offering of the dawn?

(1) Before he reaches the candlestick.

(2) Men. 99a. Eastward towards the entrance into the Hekal,

(3) Between them, i.e., in the exact middle.

(4) Ex. XXVI, 35.

(5) The candlestick and table.

(6) To reverse the order of putting on the tefillin (v. Glos.).

(7) In Deut. VI, 8 it reads: And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thy hand, and they shall be for frontlets between thy eyes. Tosaf. s.v. עבורי would have Raba's remark apply to the obligation to touch the tefillin as a preventive of diversion from a prayerful mood.

(8) Lev. VI, 5, v. supra p. 156, n. 2.

- (9) For as preparatory they have preference and come every morning first; v. supra.
- (10) 'In the morning'.
- (11) On the principle that if a certain expression is superfluous in its own context it is applied for hermeneutical purposes to another (אם אינו ענין).
- (12) With reference to the trimming of the lamps.
- (13) I.e., three times 'in the morning': twice in Ex. XXX, 7, and one which we apply as above, whereas the continual offering has but once 'in the morning', Ex. XXIX, 39, to which the one applied from the two logs of wood is to be added.
- (14) Twice in Ex. XXX, 7, which apply to the two lamps equally as to the five, and twice in connection with the continual offering as explained in n. 8.
- (15) V. infra 36a.
- (16) The applied and the two in their own passage. Lev. VI, 5.
- (17) The trimming of the lamps, which according to Abba Saul had to take place before the incense-offering. Since the order would be: the blood of the continual offering, the trimming of the lamps, the incense.
- (18) First five lamps were trimmed and two after a break.
- (19) Ex. XXX, 7.
- (20) By interrupting it through the interpolation of another service in the midst of the original order.
- (21) Hence R. Papa's supposition cannot be admitted.
- (22) V. supra p. 154. nn. 13, 14.
- (23) Ex. XXIX, 39. [Although it has been stated supra that one 'in the morning' is applied to the continual offering from elsewhere, this is only as far as the blood rituals are concerned, but does not apply to the smoking of the limbs (Rashi).]
- (24) Tamid 28b.
- (25) I.e., may be burnt on the main pile of the altar.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 34a

To teach us that it said: And he shall lay the burnt-offering in order upon it,¹ and Raba said 'the burnt-offering' [means] this is the first burnt-offering.²

'And the meal-offering [shall precede] the pancakes' — [For Scripture reads]: Burnt-offering and meal-offering.³

'And the pancakes precede the drink-offerings', they, too, are considered a species of a meal-offering.

'And the drink-offerings [come before] the additional offerings as is written: A sacrifice and drink-offerings.⁴

'And the additional sacrifices [come before] the [frankincense] censers' — But has it not been taught: The [frankincense] censers come before the additional sacrifices? — This is a matter concerning which Tannaim are disputing.⁵ Abaye said: The view that the additional offerings precede the [frankincense] censers seems more logical, for did you not say that the words 'In the morning, in the morning' imply that it is to receive preference before all, thus do the words 'on the day . . . on the day'⁶ indicate that it is to be [offered up] last [in the day]. What is the reason of him who holds that the [frankincense] censers come before the additional offerings? — He infers it from the identical expression 'statute'⁷ which occurs with the pancakes. If he infers it hence, let him do so complete?⁸ — Here [the words] 'on the day . . . on the day' come in to intimate that they [the frankincense censers] are offered up last [in the day].

THE INCENSE OF THE MORNING WAS OFFERED UP BETWEEN THE LIMBS AND THE DRINK-OFFERINGS. According to whom [is this teaching]? If according to the Rabbis,⁹ it should come between the blood and the lamps;¹⁰ if according to Abba Saul, it should come between the lamps and the limbs?¹¹ — In truth it is in accord with the Rabbis, but he does not treat of the order here.¹²

THE INCENSE OF THE AFTERNOON WAS OFFERED UP BETWEEN THE [SMOKING OF THE] LIMBS AND THE DRINK-OFFERINGS. Whence do we know these things? — R. Johanan said: Because Scripture said: As the meal-offering of the morning, and as the drink-offering thereof, thou shalt present it,¹³ i.e., just as with the meal-offering of the morning the incense precedes the drink-offerings, so also here the incense shall come before the drink-offerings. But then, just as there the incense precedes the [smoking] of the limbs, here too the incense should come before the limbs? Is it written: ‘As the limbs of the morning’? It is written: ‘As the meal-offering of the morning’, which means: As the meal-offering of the morning, but not as the [smoking of the] limbs of the morning.

Our Rabbis taught: And the drink-offering thereof shall be the fourth part of a hin:¹⁴ let him infer [the need of a drink-offering] for the morning sacrifice from the evening sacrifice.

(1) Lev. VI, 5.

(2) Cf. Hor. 12a.

(3) Lev. XXIII, 37: These are the appointed seasons of the Lord, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to bring an offering made by fire unto the Lord, a burnt-offering, and a meal-offering, a sacrifice, and drink-offerings, each on its own day. This is the prescribed order, not to be interfered with.

(4) Ibid.

(5) Pes. 58a.

(6) Ibid. XXIV, 8: on the day of the Sabbath, on the day of the Sabbath, shall he set it in order before the Lord, continually. Just as In the morning, in the morning’ was accepted as an intimation that it shall be early in the morning, so ‘On the day, on the day’ may fitly be assumed to be an indication that it is to be offered last in the day.

(7) Concerning the pancakes, the word ‘statute’ is used in Lev. VI, 15, as in connection with the frankincense censers, ibid. XXIV, 9. Just as pancakes take precedence over additional offerings, so do the frankincense censers.

(8) That the frankincense censers should have precedence over the the drink-offerings too.

(9) [That the incense was offered between the trimming of the five lamps and the two lamps, v. supra 15a.]

(10) [I.e., before completing the trimming of the lamps.]

(11) V. supra 33a.

(12) [He was not too particular in regard to the details of the order (Rashi). On this view it could be also in accord with Abba Saul, but it is preferable to make the Mishnah in agreement with the majority of Rabbis (Rashi).]

(13) Num. XXVIII, 8.

(14) Ibid. 7.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 34b

Rabbi said: For the evening sacrifice from the morning sacrifice!¹ It is quite right according to the Rabbis, for that is written [specifically] in connection with the continual offering of the evening,² but what is the ground of Rabbi's statement? — Rabbah b. ‘Ulla said: Scripture said: ‘For the one lamb’.³ Now which is the lamb in connection with which the word ehad [one] is used? Say: It is the lamb of the continual offering of the morning.⁴ And what do the Rabbis [reply]? — ‘Ehad’, i.e., the unique, the best of the flock. And [what is] Rabbi's [answer]? — He infers that⁵ from: And all your choice vows.⁶ And the Rabbis? — One speaks of freewill-[offerings], the other of obligatory [offerings] and both need special mention.⁷

IF THE HIGH PRIEST WAS OLD OR OF DELICATE HEALTH etc. It was taught: R. Judah said: Lumps of wrought iron were heated on the eve of the Day of Atonement and were cast into the cold water to mitigate the coldness. But was [one] not thereby hardening them?⁸ — R. Bibi said: [The heat] did not reach the hardening point. Abaye said: Even assume it did reach the hardening point, [a forbidden] act⁹ which was produced without intent, is permitted. But did Abaye say that? Has it not been taught:¹⁰ The flesh of his foreskin¹¹ — even though a white spot¹² is there may he cut it off,¹³ these are the words of R. Josiah. And we asked investigatively concerning it: Why is a Scriptural statement necessary for that,¹⁴ and Abaye said: This was in accord with R. Judah who said: A forbidden act produced without intent, remains forbidden!¹⁵ That applies only to forbidden things in the whole Torah,¹⁶ but here¹⁷ hardening is [forbidden] only by Rabbinic ordination. MISHNAH. THEY BROUGHT HIM TO THE PARVAH CELL-WHICH WAS ON HOLY GROUND.¹⁸ THEY SPREAD A SHEET OF BYSSUS [LINEN] BETWEEN HIM AND THE PEOPLE. HE SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND HIS FEET AND STRIPPED. R. MEIR SAID: HE STRIPPED, SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND HIS FEET. HE WENT DOWN AND IMMERSSED HIMSELF, CAME UP AND DRIED HIMSELF. AFTERWARDS THEY BROUGHT HIM WHITE GARMENTS.¹⁹ HE PUT THEM ON AND SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND HIS FEET. IN THE MORNING HE PUT ON PELUSIUM LINEN WORTH TWELVE MINAS,²⁰ IN THE AFTERNOON INDIAN LINEN WORTH EIGHT HUNDRED ZUZ. THESE ARE THE WORDS OF R. MEIR. THE SAGES SAY: IN THE MORNING HE PUT ON [GARMENTS] WORTH EIGHTEEN MINAS AND IN THE AFTERNOON [GARMENTS] WORTH TWELVE MINAS, ALTOGETHER THIRTY MINAS.²¹ ALL THAT AT THE CHARGE OF THE COMMUNITY²² AND IF HE WANTED TO SPEND MORE OF HIS OWN HE COULD DO SO.

(1) Just as the one requires drink-offering, so does the other. The practical difference: The case of a community who had enough for only one drink-offering. According to the opinion that one must infer the regulation for the afternoon-offering from the morning-offering, the latter is more important and the drink-offering would have to be allotted to the morning-offering. (Tosaf. s.v. בְּרִי.) The basis of the discussion: To which of the two continual offerings does the phrase ‘for the one lamb’ (Num. XXVIII, 7) refer? The Sages hold it refers to the last named, the afternoon-offering, whereas Rabbi holds that it recalls the morning-offering, where the same phrase (‘one’) is used (verse 4).

(2) The last named of the two.

(3) Num. XXVIII, 7.

(4) V. Ibid. 4.

(5) That particular meaning of ‘ehad’, as applied to the continual offering.

(6) Deut. XII, 11.

(7) As arguments may be advanced in favour of each requiring to be of the best, to the exclusion of the other.

(8) Which is forbidden on any holy day, how much more on the solemn Day of Atonement.

(9) Shab. 41b.

(10) Shab. 133a.

(11) Lev. XII, 3.

(12) Of leprosy, which normally must not be removed by surgery.

(13) The word ‘flesh’ here is superfluous, hence we infer therefrom that no matter how the flesh be (even leprosy) he may circumcise it.

(14) Since it was a forbidden act produced without intent, it seems self-evident that it would be permitted. Why, then, was the Scriptural intimation necessary?

(15) Abaye, who held that this intimation supported the view of R. Judah, evidently agrees with him.

(16) By the Torah proper, the Five Books of Moses, as against the Torah in general, the sum total of the Jewish law and tradition. Prohibitions of the Torah are more serious, hence even unintended transgression remains forbidden.

(17) The prohibition dealt with here.

(18) The first immersion, on top of the Water Gate, took place on profane ground; this, however, had to be performed on holy ground, as part of the service of the Day of Atonement.

(19) The four garments prescribed for the special service of the Day of Atonement: the tunic, the breeches, the girdle and the mitre, Lev. XVI, 4.

(20) One mina is worth about £ 3.

(21) As long as one spends more for the morning garments than for the evening garments, there is no regulation to enforce the exact sum mentioned in the Mishnah. V. infra. The evening garment was put on by the high priest for the sole purpose of removing spoon and coal-pan from the Holy of Holies, whereas the rest of the special service of the Day of Atonement was performed by him in the morning garment, hence it has to be the better of the two.

(22) Var. lec.: So much he received from the Temple treasury. V. Bah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 35a

GEMARA. What does 'Parwah' mean? — R. Joseph said: Parwah is [the name of] a [Persian] Magus.¹

THEY SPREAD A SHEET OF BYSSUS [LINEN] BETWEEN HIM AND THE PEOPLE. Why was it of Byssus [linen]? R. Kahana said: That he may perceive that the service of the day was [to be performed] in garments of Byssus [linen].

IN THE MORNING HE PUT ON PELUSIUM LINEN WORTH EIGHTEEN MINAS: Does the Tanna wish to teach us summing up?² — This is what he teaches us: One should spend neither more nor less than the sum total, but it does not matter whether one spends less for the one or more for the other. Now everybody, at any rate, agrees that the garments for the morning are more important, whence do we know that? — R. Huna, the son of R. Elai said: Scripture said: Linen . . . linen . . . linen . . . linen,³ i.e., the choicest linen.

(1) Rabbenu Hananel reported that according to some scholars, Parwah had dug a cave under the ground of the Sanctuary, so that he might be able to watch the high priest at the service of the Day of Atonement. The Sages, noticing the digging, sought and found the cave, and hence called the cell after him.

(2) The summing up seems superfluous, it is too simple to warrant the statement by the Tanna.

(3) Lev. XVI, 4, in connection with the putting on of the garments in the morning. Four times, as if to indicate the best of all possible linen.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 35b

An objection was raised: And they shall put on other garments and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.¹ Would you not say that 'other' implies better garments? — No, 'other' implies inferior ones.

R. Huna b. Judah, or, as some say, R. Samuel b. Judah learnt: After the community service is over, a priest for whom his mother made a tunic, may put it on and perform therein private service,² provided he hands it over to the community. Is that not self-evident?³ You might have said: Let us fear he may not hand it over properly,⁴ therefore he teaches us that we have no such fear.

They told about R. Ishmael b. Phabi⁵ that his mother made him a tunic worth one hundred minas which he put on to officiate at a 'private' service and then handed it over to the community. They told about R. Eleazar b. Harsom⁶ that his mother made him a tunic worth twenty thousand minas and his brethren, the priests, would not suffer him to put it on because he looked like one naked. But how could it be transparent, did not a Master say the thread [of the priestly garments] was six times twisted? — Abaye said: [It was visible] even as wine shines through a [glass] cup.⁷

Our Rabbis taught: The poor, the rich, the sensual⁸ come before the [heavenly] court — They say to the poor: Why have you not occupied yourself with the Torah? If he says: I was poor and worried about my sustenance, they would say to him: Were you poorer than Hillel? It was reported about Hillel the Elder that every day he used to work and earn one tropaik,⁹ half of which he would give to the guard at the House of Learning, the other half being spent for his food and for that of his family. One day he found nothing to earn and the guard at the House of Learning would not permit him to enter. He climbed up and sat upon the window,¹⁰ to hear the words of the living God from the mouth of Shemayah and Abtalion — They say, that day was the eve of Sabbath in the winter solstice and snow fell down upon him from heaven. When the dawn rose,¹¹ Shemayah said to Abtalion: Brother Abtalion, on every day this house is light and to-day it is dark, is it perhaps a cloudy day. They looked up and saw the figure of a man in the window. They went up and found him covered by three cubits of snow. They removed him, bathed and anointed him and placed him opposite the fire and they said: This man deserves that the Sabbath be profaned on his behalf.

To the rich man they said: Why have you not occupied yourself with the Torah? If he said: I was rich and occupied with my possessions, they would say to him: Were you perchance richer than R. Eleazar? It was reported about R. Eleazar b. Harsom that his father left him a thousand cities on the continent and over against that one thousand boats on the sea. Every day he would take a sack of flour on his shoulder and go from city to city and from province to province to study the Torah. One day his servants found him¹² and seized him for public service. He said to them: I beg of you, let me go to study the Torah. They said: By the life of R. Eleazar b. Harsom, we shall not let you go. [He gave them much money so that they let him go].¹³ He had never seen them, for he was sitting all day and night, occupying himself with the Torah. To the sensual person they would say: Why have you not occupied yourself with the Torah? If he said: I was beautiful and upset by sensual passion, they would say to him: Were you perchance more beautiful than Joseph? It was told of Joseph the virtuous that the wife of Potiphar every day endeavoured to entice him with words — The garments she put on for him in the morning, she did not wear in the evening, those she had put on in the evening, she did not wear in the morning. She said to him: Yield to me! He said: No. She said: I shall have you imprisoned. He said: The Lord releases the bound.¹⁴ She said: I shall bend thy proud stature.¹⁵ He replied: The Lord raises those who are bowed down.¹⁶ She said: I shall blind your eyes. He replied: The Lord opens the eyes of the blind.¹⁶ She offered him a thousand talents of silver to make him yield to her, to lie with her, to be near her,¹⁷ but he would not listen to her; not to 'lie with her' in this world, not 'to be with her' in the world to come. — Thus [the example of] Hillel condemns the poor, [the example of] R. Eleazar b. Harsom condemns the rich, and Joseph the virtuous condemns the sensual.

MISHNAH. HE CAME TO HIS¹⁸ BULLOCK AND HIS BULLOCK WAS STANDING BETWEEN THE HALL¹⁹ AND THE ALTAR,²⁰ ITS HEAD TO THE SOUTH AND ITS FACE TO THE WEST.²¹ AND THE PRIEST STOOD IN THE EAST WITH HIS FACE TO THE WEST.²² AND HE PRESSED BOTH HIS HANDS UPON IT²³ AND MADE Confession. AND THUS HE WOULD SAY: O LORD!²⁴ I HAVE DONE WRONG, I HAVE TRANSGRESSED, I HAVE SINNED BEFORE THEE, I AND MY HOUSE. O LORD! FORGIVE THE WRONGDOINGS, THE TRANSGRESSIONS, THE SINS WHICH I HAVE COMMITTED AND TRANSGRESSED AND SINNED BEFORE THEE, I AND MY HOUSE, AS IT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH OF MOSES THY SERVANT: FOR ON THIS DAY SHALL ATONEMENT BE MADE FOR YOU [TO CLEANSE YOU; FROM ALL YOUR SINS SHALL YE BE CLEAN BEFORE THE LORD].²⁵ AND THEY²⁶ ANSWERED AFTER HIM: BLESSED BE THE NAME OF HIS GLORIOUS KINGDOM FOR EVER AND EVER!

(1) Ezek. XLIV, 19. [The prohibition of the use of woolen garments in verse 17 shows that the reference is to the Day of Atonement, as on other days some of the priestly garments were made of wool; further, the words 'and they shall put on other garments' are taken as applying to their return in the afternoon into the inner court after they had gone forth into the outer court to put off their garments with which they ministered in the morning, and the words 'they shall not sanctify the people with their garments' are taken as a separate command forbidding the use by the priests of the garments of ministry when not in actual service (Rashi).]

(2) The removal of the spoon and coal-pan, which may be done even when the community is absent, hence is called 'individual or private service.

(3) That he may perform therein a 'private' service once he hands it over to the community.

(4) I.e., without reservation.

- (5) V. supra p. 37, n. 5.
- (6) V. supra p. 37, n. 5.
- (7) Be it ever so thick. Thus was the flax of his garments transparent and his body visible.
- (8) Lit., 'wicked'.
- (9) Corresponding to  (Victoriatu) — Quinariu, half a denar, Jast.
- (10) An aperture in the roof looking down to the ground floor.
- (11) Lit., 'the pillar of the morning'.
- (12) Not knowing who he was.
- (13) This is a marginal addition.
- (14) Ps. CXLVI, 7.
- (15) I.e., humiliate you with a slave's labour.
- (16) Ibid. 8.
- (17) Gen. XXXIX, 10.
- (18) Two bullocks were offered up on that day, one from community funds at the additional sacrifice (Num. XXIX, 8), the other from the high priest's means; the latter, here dealt with, is therefore called 'his' bullock.
- (19) The Ulam leading to the interior of the Temple connecting the Hekal with the Temple court.
- (20) The outer altar in the Temple court.
- (21) The priest turned its head in the direction of the Hekal, so that the horns, between which the priest pressed his hands on its head, faced the Hekal, v. Gemara.
- (22) The priest thus stood at the side of his bullock, his back to the altar, his face towards the Holy of Holies.
- (23) I.e., upon its head, between the horns.
- (24) Lit., 'O, the Name'.
- (25) Lev. XVI, 30.
- (26) The priests and the people who stood in the Temple court and who, on hearing him pronounce the ineffable Name of God, prostrated themselves.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 36a

GEMARA. Whom did you hear saying that the place between Hall and altar was [considered] north?¹ R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon, for it was taught: What is [considered] north? From the northern wall of the altar up to the [northern] wall of the Temple court and opposite the whole altar on the north,² this is the opinion of R. Jose son of R. Judah. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon adds also the space between the Hall and the altar.³ Rabbi adds also the space for the treading of the priests and the place for the treading of the Israelites within,⁴ and all agree that from the inside of the knives' cell⁵ it was illegitimate.⁶ Shall we [then] say that the Mishnah is in accord with R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon, but not with Rabbi? — You can even say that it is in accord with Rabbi, for if he adds even⁷ to what R. Jose son of R. Judah says, will he not add to [the space defined by] R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon!⁸ This is what we mean: If it were in accord with Rabbi, it⁹ could be placed anywhere in the whole Temple court! What, then [would you maintain] that [the Mishnah] is in accord with R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon! But then it ought to be placed anywhere between altar and wall?¹⁰ You must consequently say that the reason¹¹ is to avoid the high priest getting tired;¹² thus also, on the view of Rabbi, the reason¹¹ is to avoid the high priest getting tired.

ITS HEAD TO THE SOUTH, AND ITS FACE TO THE WEST. How is that possible?— Rab answered: The priest turns its head — But let him place it straight?¹³ — Abaye said: We are afraid it might drop excrements. Our Rabbis taught:¹⁴ How does one press [the hands on the head of the sacrifice]?¹⁵ The sacrifice stands to the north,¹⁶ with its face to the west, and he who presses¹⁷ [the hands] stands to the east, with his face to the west, and lays his two hands between the two horns of the sacrifice, that nothing may intervene between him and the sacrifice¹⁸ — and he makes confession. With a sin-offering [he makes confession] of the sin [committed]; with a guilt-offering, of the guilt incurred; with a burnt-offering, of the transgressions in connection with gleanings,¹⁹ the forgotten sheaf,²⁰ the corner of the field,¹⁹ and the poor tithe²¹ — these are the words of R. Jose the Galilean. R. Akiba said: A burnt-offering is offered up exclusively for transgression of a positive command or of a prohibition transformed into a command.²² In what do they differ? R. Jeremiah said:

(1) [For the purposes of slaughtering the sacrifice of the high priest, which, as belonging to the highest grade of sanctity had to be slaughtered on the north side. Such must be the view of the Mishnah which states that the bullock was placed between the Hall and the altar for confession as well as for slaughtering purposes, v. infra 41b: 'At the place where the confession was made there it was slaughtered'.]

(2) Only the thirty-two cubits to the north and facing the altar are considered part of the north, where the slaughtering of sacrifices of the highest grade of sanctity is legitimate, but not the space east and west of the altar, although lying to the north of the Temple court, for the biblical command states: And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the Lord. (Lev. I, 11), for though these parts are to the north of the Temple court, they are not to the north of the altar.

(3) [He includes the space on the north side of the Temple court extending westwards, although not exactly facing the northern wall of the altar.]

(4) Eleven cubits each. He includes the whole north of the Temple court, even to the eastern wall.

(5) V. Mid. IV, 7, to the north and south of the Temple court. This cell, fifteen cubits to the north, fifteen to the south, ten from east to west, had twenty-four apertures where the twenty-four divisions of priests kept their knives.

(6) From the knives' cell within it was impossible to see the wall altar, hence it was forbidden to slaughter it there, Zeb. 20a.

(7) Surely when he declares that space which, is further away is legitimate he will not declare forbidden that which is nearer!

(8) [The text is difficult. MS. M. omits 'You can even say it is in accord with Rabbi'.]

(9) The high priest's bullock.

(10) On the north of the Temple court.

(11) For placing it between the Hall and the altar.

(12) To prevent his becoming over-tired by carrying the bowl with the blood a long distance.

(13) With its back to the altar and its face to the Hekal.

(14) Tosef. Men. X, 12.

(15) Of the highest grade of sanctity.

(16) The side on which it is to be slain.

(17) The owner of the sacrifice.

(18) Men. 93b, the text in the Tosef. differs somewhat.

(19) Lev. XIX, 9: Neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

(20) Deut. XXIV, 19.

(21) Ibid. XXVI, 12.

(22) I.e., a prohibition the transgression of which must be repaired by a succeeding act, as e.g., Ex. XII, 10: You shall let nothing of it remain until the morning (prohibition); But that which remaineth... you shall burn in fire (remedial action).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 36b

They differ concerning the prohibition of carrion,¹ R. Akiba holding it to be a proper prohibition,² whilst R. Jose the Galilean does not consider it a proper prohibition.³ Abaye said: Everybody agrees that the prohibition of carrion is a proper prohibition, what they differ in is the laws touching 'Thou shalt leave',⁴ R. Akiba holding 'Thou shalt leave' means from the very beginning,⁵ whilst R. Jose the Galilean holds it means 'now'.⁶ Our Rabbis taught:⁷ How does he make confession: I have done wrong, I have transgressed I have sinned — Similarly, in connection with the he-goat to be sent away Scripture says: And he shall confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions even in their sins.⁸ Similarly, with Moses, it says: Forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin⁹ — these are the words of R. Meir. The Sages, however, say: 'Wrongs' are deliberate misdeeds, thus also does Scripture say: That soul shall be utterly cut off, his wrong shall be upon him,¹⁰ 'transgressions' are rebellious deeds, as it is said: The King of Moab hath transgressed against me;¹¹ furthermore: Then did Libnah transgress at the same time; 'sins'¹² are inadvertent omissions, as it is said: If any one shall sin through error.¹³ — Should he then, after having confessed the deliberate misdeeds and the rebellious deeds, turn back and confess inadvertent omissions?¹⁴ Rather, thus did he make confession: I have sinned, I have done wrong, I have transgressed before Thee, I and my house etc. Thus also does Scripture say in connection with David: We have sinned with our fathers, we have done wrong, we have dealt wickedly.¹⁵ Thus also with Solomon: We have sinned, and have done wrong, we have dealt wickedly.¹⁶ Thus also with Daniel: We have sinned, and have dealt wrong, and have done wickedly.¹⁷ — What is the meaning, then, of Moses' saying: 'Forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin'?¹⁸ Moses said before the Holy One, blessed be He: Lord of the Universe, when Israel sin before Thee and then do penance, account their premeditated sins as errors! Rabbah b. Samuel said in the name of Rab: The halachah is in accord with the Sages. But [that is] self-evident, for 'Where the opinion of one individual is opposed to the opinion of a majority, the law follows the majority'?¹⁹ — You might have said: The reason of R. Meir appears more logical because the scriptural verse of Moses²⁰ supports it, therefore we are taught [as above].

Once a man went down²¹ before Rabbah and arranged his prayer in accord with R. Meir's view. He said to him: Do you forsake the Sages and act like R. Meir? — He answered: I hold as R. Meir, for thus it is written in the Torah of Moses.

Our Rabbis taught:²² And shall make atonement²³ — Scripture speaks of atonement through words.²⁴ You say it refers to atonement through words. But perhaps it refers to atonement [obtained] through [sacrificial] blood? I infer it thus: Here 'atonement is mentioned and there²⁵ 'atonement' is mentioned — Just as the atonement mentioned in connection with the he-goat is one through words, so the atonement mentioned with the bullock is one obtained through words. And if you wish to argue against it, then [learn from]: And Aaron shall present the bullock for the sin-offering, which is for himself and shall make atonement for himself and for his house,²³ yet the bullock has not been slaughtered!²⁶ What does 'And if you wish to argue against it' imply? — This: And if you would say: Let us infer from the he-goat prepared within the Temple, the atonement of which is obtained through blood, behold [against that argument] Scripture says: 'And he shall make atonement', and the bullock has not been slaughtered yet!

(1) Carrion-an animal that has died a natural death; also whatever has become unfit through faulty slaughtering.

(2) [For which lashes are inflicted, and for which a burnt-offering does not atone.]

(3) Because once one has eaten the carrion, it is no more possible to sell it to the stranger or give it to the sojourner as prescribed in Deut. XIV, 21, R. Akiba holding it a proper prohibition, for the transgression of which one would be punished with the prescribed thirty-nine lashes, the fact that one cannot repair the transgression notwithstanding. According to R. Jose no such punishment would here be inflicted, hence it is not a proper prohibition.

(4) Thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither gather the fallen fruit of thy vineyard. Thou shalt leave them for the poor and for the stranger. (Lev. XIX, 9.)

(5) V. next note.

(6) Here is another instance of a prohibition transformed into a command: Thou shalt not glean . . . thou shalt leave them. R. Akiba holds the positive commandment is enjoined from the very first, that is, thus: do not glean but leave; hence it is not a prohibition transformed into a command, but a command from the beginning; whilst R. Jose assumes that it is a de facto command: Don't glean, but having gleaned, undo your transgression by leaving it etc.

(7) Tosef. Yoma, II, 1.

(8) Lev. XVI, 21.

(9) Ex. XXXIV, 7.

(10) Num. XV, 31.

(11) II Kings III, 7.

(12) Ibid. VIII, 22.

(13) Lev. IV, 2.

(14) It is illogical to ask forgiveness for the gravest offences first and then for the lighter ones.

- (15) Ps. CVI, 6.
 (16) I Kings VIII, 47.
 (17) Dan. IX, 5. In all these cases the logical order is maintained, forgiveness being asked, first, for the sins due to inadvertence, then for those deliberate misdeeds, at last for rebellious acts.
 (18) Where the order appears reversed.
 (19) Ber. 9".
 (20) Which agrees, as to the order, with R. Meir.
 (21) To the prayer desk.
 (22) Meg. 20b.
 (23) Lev. XVI, 11.
 (24) I.e., confession.
 (25) In connection with the he-goat that is sent away. Lev. XVI, 10.
 (26) How then is atonement possible? It can be obtained through confession.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 37a

— Whence do we know that [the confession] starts with ‘O’? — Here the expression ‘atonement’ is used and there, in connection with Mount Horeb,¹ the expression ‘atonement’ is used, [hence the inference that] just as it started there with ‘O’² so must it start here with ‘O’ Whence do we know that the Name³ is to be pronounced here?—Here the word ‘atonement’ is used and in connection with the heifer whose neck is to be broken⁴ the word ‘atonement’ is used, [hence the inference that] just as there the Name is pronounced, so is it to be pronounced here. Abaye said: It is quite right that we cannot make inference for Horeb from the heifer whose neck is to be broken,⁵ because that is a past affair, but why should one not infer for the heifer whose neck is to be broken from what happened at [Mount] Horeb?⁶ — And if you will say ‘indeed so’, but have we not learned:⁷ ‘The priests say: Forgive Thy people Israel’,⁸ but they mention nothing about ‘O!’- This is a difficulty.

AND THEY ANSWERED AFTER HIM: It was taught: Rabbi said, [commenting on]: For I will proclaim the name of the Lord; Ascribe ye greatness unto our God:⁹ Moses said to Israel: When I mention the name of the Holy One, blessed be He, ascribe greatness [unto Him]; Hananyah, the son of the brother of R. Joshua said [commenting on]: The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing:¹⁰ The prophet said to Israel: When I make reference to the Righteous One of all the Worlds, say a blessing!

MISHNAH. HE THEN WENT BACK TO THE EAST OF THE TEMPLE COURT, TO THE NORTH OF THE ALTAR, THE DEPUTY HIGH PRIEST¹¹ AT HIS RIGHT AND THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY¹² [MINISTERING THAT WEEK] AT HIS LEFT. THERE WERE TWO HE-GOATS¹³ AND AN URN¹⁴ CONTAINING TWO LOTS. THEY WERE OF BOX-WOOD. BEN GAMALA MADE THEM OF GOLD AND THEREFORE HE WAS PRAISED. BEN KATIN MADE TWELVE SPIGOTS FOR THE LAVER,¹⁵ FOR THERE HAD BEEN BEFORE BUT TWO. HE ALSO MADE A MACHINE FOR THE LAVER, IN ORDER THAT ITS WATER SHOULD NOT BECOME UNFIT BY REMAINING OVERNIGHT.¹⁶ KING MONOBAZ¹⁷ HAD ALL THE HANDLES OF ALL THE VESSELS USED ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT MADE OF GOLD. HIS MOTHER HELENA¹⁸ HAD A GOLDEN CANDLESTICK MADE OVER THE DOOR OF THE HEKAL. SHE ALSO HAD A GOLDEN TABLET MADE, ON WHICH THE PORTION TOUCHING THE SUSPECTED ADULTERESS¹⁹ WAS INSCRIBED. NICANOR²⁰ EXPERIENCED MIRACLES WITH HIS GATES AND HIS MONEY WAS PRAISED.

GEMARA. Since [the Mishnah] reads: TO THE NORTH OF THE ALTAR, one infers that the altar was not standing in the north.²¹ Whose opinion represents our Mishnah? The opinion of R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for it was taught: Northward before the Lord,²² i.e., the north must be fully unoccupied — this is the opinion of R. Eliezer b. Jacob.²³ But the first part of the Mishnah is in accord with R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon? — The whole of the Mishnah is in accord with R. Eliezer b. Jacob,²⁴ but read there: In the space between Hall and altar.

THE DEPUTY HIGH PRIEST AT HIS RIGHT AND THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY AT HIS LEFT: Rab Judah said:²⁵ One who walks at his master's right hand is a boor. [But] we have learnt: THE DEPUTY HIGH PRIEST AT HIS RIGHT AND THE HEAD OF THE [MINISTERING] FAMILY AT HIS LEFT; and furthermore, it was taught:²⁶ Of three walking along, the teacher should walk in the middle, the greater of his disciples to his right, the smaller one at his left, and thus do we find that of the three angels who came to visit Abraham, Michael went in the middle, Gabriel at his right,²⁷ Raphael at his left? — R. Samuel b. Papa interpreted [the first saying] before R. Adda: [It is wrong only, if] he [the teacher] be hidden by him — But has it not been taught: One who walks in front of his teacher is a boor, one who walks behind him is arrogant? — [It is assumed here] that he turns sideways.

AND THERE WAS A CASKET WHEREIN THERE WERE TWO LOTS: Our Rabbis taught: [with reference to] And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats²⁸ — ‘lots’, i.e., made of any material. One might have assumed that he should cast two lots on the head of each,²⁹ therefore [Scripture repeats]: One lot for the Lord and the other lot for Azazel,²⁸ i.e., there is but one lot ‘for the Lord’, and there is but one lot ‘for Azazel’ — One might have assumed that he shall give upon the head of each²⁹ a lot each ‘for the Lord’ and ‘for Azazel’, therefore Scripture says: ‘One lot for the Lord’, i.e., there is but one lot ‘for the Lord’ and but one lot ‘for Azazel’ — Why then does Scripture say: [he shall cast] ‘lots’? [That means to say] that they must be alike: he must not make one of gold and the other of silver, one large, the other small; ‘lots’ [means they may be made] of any material. But that is self-evident? — No, it is necessary [to state that], as it was taught: Since we find that the [high priest's] front-plate had the name of the Lord inscribed thereon and was made of gold, I might have assumed that this too must be made of gold, hence it says [twice] ‘lot’ . . . ‘lot’, to include [permission to make it of] olive-wood, nut-wood or box-wood.³⁰ BEN KATIN MADE TWELVE SPIGOTS FOR THE LAVER: A Tanna taught: In order that his twelve brethren, the priests, who were occupied with the continual offering, may be able to sanctify their hands and feet simultaneously.³¹

A Tanna taught:³² In the morning, when the laver was full, he sanctified his hands and feet from the upper spigot; in the evening, when [the water] was low, he sanctified his hands and feet from the lower spigot.

HE ALSO MADE A MACHINE FOR THE LAVER: What machine was that? — Abaye said: A wheel which let it go down [to the pit].

KING MONOBAZ MADE ALL THE HANDLES FOR THE VESSELS etc.: He should have made [the vessels] them[selves] of gold?

(1) Ex. XXXII, 30. The similarity of expression indicates some similarity of procedure, hence the inference is legitimate. Thus also below.

(2) Ibid. v. 31.

(3) The ineffable name of God. ‘י’ may be ‘B essentiae’.

(4) Deut. XXI, 8.

(5) To pronounce the Name also here.

(6) To start with ‘O’.

(7) Sot. 47b.

(8) Deut. XXI, 8.

(9) Deut. XXXII, 3.

(10) Prov. X, 7.

- (11) Segan. V. Glos.
 (12) Beth Ab. V. Glos.
 (13) Lev. XVI, 5,7.
 (14) The Greek **.
 (15) The priests washed (sanctified) their hands and feet with the water of that laver, before entering the Sanctuary or preparing a service. They turned the spigots and the water came over their hands and feet.
 (16) The sacred vessels sanctify everything that comes in contact with them (Zeb. 86a), and whatever has thus been sanctified becomes invalid by remaining overnight. Ben Katin's machine () connected the laver with the well, thus retaining for it the undisturbable freshness of the well, hence, when drawn up in the morning, by means of the wheel, it remained valid for sacred use. The heavy laver, until then, had to be filled every morning afresh, after being emptied of last night's water — a laborious, time-wasting effort.
 (17) He was king of Adiabene in the last years before the destruction of the second Temple.
 (18) She was queen of Adiabene.
 (19) Num. V, 11-31. V. Git. 60a.
 (20) V. Tosef. II, 4, and with slight modifications, the account infra 38a.
 (21) [I.e., that no part of the altar extended to the north half of the Temple court, so that on retracing his steps from the Temple proper to the Temple court, and reaching the altar, he was on the north of it.]
 (22) Lev. I, 11.
 (23) Zeb. 59a.
 (24) Who said: Part of the altar extended to the north, whence he permitted the bullock to be slaughtered between Hall and altar. V. supra 36a and note. (10) In the preceding Mishnah: The bullock was standing near the place between Hall and altar, about the northern corner of the latter, not in the north exactly'.
 (25) Hul. 91a.
 (26) 'Er. 54b.
 (27) To the right, somewhat behind him, not next to him, because in the latter case he would cover him and that is unseemly.
 (28) Lev. XVI, 8.
 (29) Since Scripture says 'lots' instead of 'a lot each'.
 (30) [Since the repetition of 'lot' intimates that they can be made of any material, the word 'lots' must likewise mean of any material, Tosef. s.v. יָבֹלֵי
 (31) V. supra 25b.
 (32) [What follows gives the reason why formerly there had been, as stated in the Mishnah, two spigots; v. D.S. a.l.]

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 37b

— Abaye said: [Reference here is made to] the handles of the knives.

The following objection was raised: He also made of gold the base of the vessels, the rims of the vessels, the handles of the vessels and the handles of the knives [used on the Day of Atonement]? — Abaye explained: These are the helms of axes and adzes.

HIS MOTHER HELENA MADE A CANDLESTICK OF GOLD etc.: A Tanna taught:¹ When the sun was shining, sparkling rays proceeded from it and all knew then that the time had arrived for the reading of the [morning] Shema'.² An objection was raised: One who reads the Shema' in the morning together with the linen of the [priestly] Mishmar or the [laymen] Ma'amad,³ has not fulfilled his duty, because the men of the Mishmar read it early and the men of the Ma'amad read it too late.⁴ — Abaye said: It was for the rest of the people of Jerusalem.

SHE ALSO MADE A TABLET: Do you not conclude from this that one may write a scroll for a child for practising purposes?⁵ — Resh Lakish said in the name of R. Jannai: Alphabetically.⁶ An objection was raised: Whilst writing he⁷ looks unto the tablet and copies what is written on the tablet?⁸ — Say: He looks and writes as it is written on the tablet.⁹ He raised this objection: When he writes he looks and copies what is written on the tablet, and what is written thereon? And if some man have lain with thee . . . if no man have lain with thee; if thou hast gone aside . . . and if thou hast not gone aside!¹⁰ — There it was written

(1) Tosef. II, 3.

(2) V. Ber. 26a.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) They postponed the reading of the Shema' until their service in connection with the continual offering had been completed. How then did the sparks inform them when this information for practical purposes was useless?

(5) In Git. 60a there is a discussion on this matter, one view permitting the writing of individual portions, the other holding only the whole Torah may be written out. Our Mishnah might settle the dispute there.

(6) What is involved here is not the real copying of a chapter of the Torah, but a kind of mnemotechnic device, with the initial letters only written out, the complete text to be supplied by memory, with the guidance of these hints.

(7) The priest who writes the scroll which the suspected adulteress must drink up.

(8) Indicating that the complete text was contained thereon.

(9) I.e., the initial letters serve him as guide.

(10) Num. V, 19, 20.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 38a

by sections.¹

NICANOR EXPERIENCED MIRACLES WITH HIS DOORS: Our Rabbis taught: What miracles happened to his doors? It was reported that when Nicanor had gone to fetch doors² from Alexandria of Egypt, on his return a gale arose in the sea to drown him. Thereupon they took one of his doors and cast it into the sea and yet the sea would not stop its rage. When, thereupon, they prepared to cast the other into the sea, he rose and clung to it, saying: 'Cast me in with it!' [They did so, and] the sea stopped Immediately its raging. He was deeply grieved about the other [door]. As he arrived at the harbour of Acco, it broke through and came up from under the sides of the boat. — Others say: A monster of the sea swallowed it and spat it out on the dry land Touching this, Solomon said: The beams of our houses are cedars, and our panels are berothim [cypresses].³ Do not read 'berothim [cypresses] but 'brith yam',⁴ I.e., covenant of the sea'. — Therefore all the gates in the Sanctuary were changed for golden ones with the exception of the Nicanor gates because of the miracles wrought with them. But some say: Because the bronze of which they were made had a golden hue.⁵ R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: It was Corinthian bronze,⁶ which shone like gold.

MISHNAH. AND THESE WERE MENTIONED TO THEIR SHAME: THEY OF THE HOUSE OF GARMU WOULD NOT TEACH ANYTHING ABOUT THE PREPARATION OF THE SHEWBREAD;⁷ THEY OF THE HOUSE OF ABTINAS WOULD NOT TEACH ANYTHING ABOUT THE PREPARATION OF THE INCENSE; HYGROS, SON [OF THE TRIBE] OF LEVI KNEW A CADENCE⁸ IN SONG BUT WOULD NOT TEACH IT; BEN KAMZAR WOULD NOT TEACH ANYONE HIS ART OF WRITING.⁹ CONCERNING THE FORMER IT IS SAID: THE MEMORY OF THE RIGHTEOUS SHALL BE FOR A BLESSING;¹⁰ CONCERNING THE OTHERS IT IS SAID: BUT THE NAME OF THE WICKED SHALL ROT.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: The house of Garmu was expert in preparing the shewbread, but would not teach it — The Sages sent for specialists from Alexandria of Egypt, who knew how to bake as well as they, but they did not know how to take [the loaves] down [from the oven] as well as the former, for they were heating the oven from without and baked from within, whereas the latter heated the oven from within and baked from within [with the result] that the bread of the latter became mouldy, whereas the bread of the former did not grow mouldy. When the Sages heard that, they quoted: Everyone that is called by My name [and whom] I have created for My glory,¹¹ and said: Let the house of Garmu return to their office. The Sages sent for them, but they would not come. Then they doubled their hire and they came. [Until now] they used to get twelve minas for the day, [from] that day, twenty-four minas. R. Judah said: [Until then] they received twenty-four minas per day, [from] that day they received forty-eight minas. The Sages said to them: What ground did you see for refusing to teach [your art]? They said to them: In our father's house they knew that this House will be destroyed, and perhaps an unworthy man would learn it and then proceed to serve an idol with it. — For the following was their memory honoured: Never was fine bread to be found in their children's hand, lest people say: These feed from the [preparation of]¹² the shewbread — Thus [they endeavoured] to fulfil [the command]: Ye shall be clear before the Lord and before Israel.¹³

THEY OF THE HOUSE OF ABTINAS WOULD NOT TEACH ANYTHING ABOUT THE PREPARATION OF THE INCENSE. Our Rabbis taught: The house of Abtinias were expert in preparing the incense but would not teach [their art]. The Sages sent for specialists from Alexandria of Egypt, who knew how to compound incense as well as they, but did not know how to make the smoke ascend as well as they. The smoke of the former ascended [as straight] as a stick, whereas the smoke of the latter was scattered in every direction. When the Sages heard thereof, they quoted: 'Everyone that is called by My name, I have created for My glory',¹⁴ as it is said: The Lord hath made everything for His own purpose,¹⁵ and [said]: The house of Abtinias may return to their [wonted] place. The Sages sent for them, but they would not come. Then they doubled their hire and they came. Every day [thitherto] they would receive twelve minas, [from] that day twenty-four. The Sages said to them: What reason did you have for not teaching [your art]? They said: They knew in our father's house that this House is going to be destroyed and they said: Perhaps an unworthy man will learn [this art] and will serve an idol therewith. — And for the following reason was their memory kept in honour: Never did a bride of their house go forth perfumed and when they married a woman from elsewhere they expressly forbade her to do so lest people say: From [the preparation of] the incense they are perfuming themselves. [They did so] to fulfil the command: 'Ye shall be clear before the Lord and before Israel.'¹⁶

It was taught: R. Ishmael said: Once I was walking on the way and I came upon one of their children's children and I said to him: Your forefathers sought to increase their glory and to reduce the glory of the Creator, now the glory of the Creator is at its wonted place, and He has reduced their glory. R. Akiba said: R. Ishmael b. Luga related to me: One day I and one of their descendants went to the field to gather herbs and I saw him crying and laughing. I said to him: 'Why did you cry?' He answered: 'I recalled the glory of my ancestors' — 'And why did you laugh happily?' He replied: 'Because the Holy One, blessed be He, will restore it to us' — 'And what caused you to remember?' He said: 'There is smoke-raiser¹⁷ before me'. 'Show it to me!' He said to me: 'We are bound by oath not to show it to any person' — R. Johanan b. Nuri said: Once I came upon an old man, who had a scroll [containing prescriptions] for frankincense in his hand. I asked him: 'Whence are you [derived]?' He said: 'I come from the house of Abtinias' — 'What have you in your hand?' He replied: 'A scroll [containing prescriptions] for frankincense.' 'Show it to me!' He said: 'As long as my father's house was alive they would not surrender it to any one, but now here it is, but be very careful about it — When I came and told thereof to R. Akiba he said: 'Henceforth it is forbidden to speak of them in dispraise' — Referring to this¹⁸ Ben 'Azzai said: By your name you will be called, to your place you will be restored

(1) Not the initial letters of the words, but the initial words of the verses: The headings of sections were written out, the rest intimated by initial letters.

(2) The doors for the great eastern gate of the Temple Court.

(3) Cant. I, 17.

(4) Without any radical change of the text, except the division of the words, which in the original was hardly noticeable. V. Blau, Einleitung in die Schrift, p. 119f. [Aliter: Do not read 'berothim' (ברותים) but berithim (בריתים), 'covenants', the doors having made a covenant with each other to be together. V. Rashi and D.S. a.l.]

(5) Mid. II, 3.

(6) Corinthian bronze was refined, hence the light weight, hence the golden hue, as against the duller tone of the heavier bronze.

(7) The twelve shewbread loaves, resting in the Hekal on the golden table from Sabbath to Sabbath (Ex. XXV, 30 and Lev. XXIV, 5-9) were very thin and fragile. Made of some four quarts of flour, they were about one half inch in thickness, some twenty-eight inches in length, some twelve inches in breadth. There were some artistic devices at the corners, which made the preparation a highly difficult art. They would be baked on Friday, often on Wednesday, to be eaten on the Sabbath of the following week, and extraordinary skill was required to keep them fresh and well-tasting. The secret of the baking and removing them, from the oven without breaking them was kept by the house of Garmu, for failure to reveal which they are branded here. The Talmud, however, adduces some mitigating reasons for this apparent niggardliness.

(8) A somewhat difficult phrase. Evidently in connection with the Temple songs. It may have been a specially composed finale, allowing for individual margins of musical ingenuity (Baneth).

(9) V. Gemara.

(10) Prov. X, 17.

(11) Isa. XLIII, 7; hence the best should be available for the Sanctuary, even if cost is involved.

(12) Profits, remainders, at any rate not from their own. One must avoid giving the appearance of unrighteous action, even when acting rightly.

(13) Num. XXXII, 22.

(14) V. p. 176, n. 1.

(15) Prov. XVI, 4; thus that skill must not be allowed to remain unused.

(16) Num. XXXII, 22.

(17) The name of a plant whose identity had to be hidden from all but the members of the house of Abtinas.

(18) Their re-instatement into the original office.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 38b

and from what belongs¹ to you will you be given. No man can touch what is prepared for his fellow and 'One kingdom does not interfere with the other² even to the extent of one hair's breadth'.³

HYGROS OF THE TRIBE OF LEVI etc. It was taught: When he tuned his voice to a trill, he would put his thumb into his mouth and place his finger [on the division line] between the two parts of the moustache, so that his brethren, the priests, staggered backward with a sudden movement.⁴

Our Rabbis taught: Ben Kamzar would not teach anything about [his art of] writing. It was said about him that he would take four pens between his fingers and if there was a word of four letters⁵ he would write it at once. They said to him: 'What reason have you for refusing to teach it?' All found an answer for their matter [attitude]. Ben Kamzar could not find one. Concerning [all] former ones it is said: 'The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing', with regard to Ben Kamzar and his like it is said: 'But the name of the wicked shall rot' — What is the meaning of 'But the name of the wicked shall rot'? — R. Eleazar said: Rottenness enters their names, none name their children after them.

Rabina raised an objection: The story of Doeg b. Joseph whom his father left to his mother when he was a young child: Every day his mother would measure him by handbreadths⁶ and would give his [extra] weight in gold to the Sanctuary. And when the enemy prevailed, she slaughtered him and ate him, and concerning her Jeremiah lamented: Shall the women eat their fruit, their children that are handled in the hands?⁷ Whereupon the Holy Spirit replied: Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the Sanctuary of the Lord?⁸ — See what happened to him!⁹

R. Eleazar said: The righteous man is remembered by his own [good deeds], the wicked [also] by those of his fellow. [Proof that] the righteous [is remembered] by his own [good deeds], for it is written: 'The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing'. The wicked [is remembered also] by his associate['s wickedness], for it is written: 'But the name of the wicked [pl.] shall rot.' — Rabina said to one of the Rabbis who expounded Aggada before him: Whence is this statement, which the Rabbis mention: The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing? — He replied: It is a scriptural verse: 'The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing.' Whence, in the Torah, may that teaching be derived? — From what is written: Shall I hide from Abraham that which I am doing?¹⁰ And it is [there] also written: Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation.¹¹ [He asked further]: Whence do we know this matter, which the Rabbis mention: But the name of the wicked shall rot? — He replied: It is a scriptural verse: 'But the name of the wicked shall rot'. Whence, in the Torah, may this teaching be derived?—From what is written: And he moved his tent as far as Sodom,¹² and it is written: Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against the Lord exceedingly.¹³

R. Eleazar said: A righteous man once lived between two wicked men and did not learn from their deeds, a wicked man lived between two righteous men and did not learn from their ways — The righteous who lived between two wicked men and did not learn from their wicked ways was Obadiah.¹⁴ The wicked man living between two righteous men and not learning from their ways was Esau.

R. Eleazar [also] said: From the blessing of the righteous you can infer the curse for the wicked and from the curse of the wicked you may infer the blessing for the righteous — From the blessing of the righteous you can infer the curse for the wicked, as it is written: For I have known him, to the end that he may command,¹⁵ and [soon] after that it is written: And the Lord said: Verily the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great.¹⁶ From the curse of the wicked you can infer the blessing for the righteous, for it is written: Now the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners against the Lord exceedingly.¹⁷ And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him . . . [all the land, which thou seest, to thee will I give . . .]¹⁸

R. Eleazar further said: Even for the sake of a single righteous man would this world have been created for it is said: And God saw the light that it was [for one who is] good,¹⁹ and 'good' means but the righteous, as it is said: Say ye of the righteous that he is the good one.²⁰

R. Eleazar said also: Whoever forgets [through neglect] any part of his study, causes his children to go into exile, as it is said: Seeing that thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I also will forget thy children.²¹ R. Abbahu said: Such a one is deprived of his greatness, as it is said: Because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me.²²

R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan: No righteous man dies out of this world, before another, like himself, is created,²³ as it is said: The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down²⁴ , — before the sun of Eli set, the sun of Samuel of Ramathaim rose. R. Hiyya b. Abba also said in the name of R. Johanan: The Holy One, blessed be He, saw that the righteous are but few, therefore He planted them throughout all generations, as it is said: For the pillars of the earth are the Lord's, and He hath set the world upon them.²⁵

R. Hiyya b. Abba said also in the name of R. Johanan: Even for the sake of a single righteous man does the world endure, as it is said: But the righteous is the foundation of the world.²⁶ R. Hiyya himself infers this from here: He will keep the feet of His holy ones²⁷ 'Holy ones' means many? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: It is written: His holy' one.²⁷

R. Hiyya b. Abba said further in the name of R. Johanan: When the majority of a man's years have passed without sin, he will no more sin, as it is said: 'He will keep the feet of His holy ones'. In the school of Shila it was taught that if the opportunity for sin has come to a man the first and the second time and he resisted, he will never sin, as it is said: 'He will keep the feet of His holy ones'.²⁸

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of: If it concerneth the scorers He scorneth them, but unto the humble He giveth grace?²⁹ i.e., if a man comes to defile himself, the doors are opened to him, but if he comes to purify himself, he is helped. In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: It is as when a man sells naphtha and balm

(1) What is predestined as your lawful source of income.

(2) In either time or place.

(3) Ber. 48b.

(4) Enchanted with the beauty of the music, or startled by the power of his voice.

(5) [The Tetragrammaton. V. Rashi on the Mishnah.]

(6) With her handbreadth, on her hand, to know how much he had gained since yesterday.

(7) Lam. II, 20.

(8) The reference is to the Prophet Zechariah b. Jehoiadah, the priest. The text in Lam. may refer to that as well; its original meaning, not unknown to the answerer, lamented the destruction by the enemy, of priest and prophet alike. At any rate someone was called Doeg in spite of the first Doeg's bad reputation (I Sam. XXI, 8.)

(9) Normally, none would do that, because of a bad omen, or because one should help the name of the wicked to 'rot' by being forgotten. Look what this deviation from custom brought upon the child.

(10) Gen. XVIII, 17.

(11) Ibid. XVIII, 18.

(12) Ibid. XIII, 12.

(13) Ibid. 13.

(14) Who lived between Ahab and Jezebel. V. Sanh. 12b.

(15) Gen. XVIII, 19.

(16) Ibid. 20.

(17) Ibid. XIII, 13.

(18) Ibid. 15.

(19) Ibid. I, 4.

(20) Isa. III, 10. E.V., 'Say ye of the righteous, that it shall be well with him.' V. Hag. 12b.

(21) Hosea IV, 6.

(22) Ibid.

(23) Kid. 72b.

(24) Eccl. I, 5.

(25) I Sam. II, 8.

(26) Prov. X, 25. E.V., 'Is an everlasting foundation'.

(27) I Sam. II, 9. Although the kere (the traditional reading) is in the plural the kethib (הַסִּידִיּוֹ), (the written form) הַסִּידוֹ is in the singular.

(28) [Taking לְרַגְלֵי in the sense of רַגְלֵי, cf. Gen. XXX, 30, 'at the foot of', 'at the guidance of', 'on account of', he renders the verse, He preserves (the world) on account of His holy ones (Rashi).]

(29) Prov. III, 34.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 39a

: If [a purchaser] comes to measure naphtha, he [the shopkeeper] says to him: Measure it out for yourself; but to one who would measure out balm he says: Wait, till I measure together with you, so that both I and you, may become perfumed.

The school of R. Ishmael taught: Sin dulls the heart of man, as it is said: Neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.¹ Read not we-nitmethem [that you should be defiled], but u-netamothem [that you should become dullhearted].² Our Rabbis taught: 'Neither shall you make yourselves unclean that you should be defiled thereby.' If a man defiles himself a little, he becomes much defiled: [if he defile himself] below, he becomes defiled from above; if he defile himself in this world, he becomes defiled in the world to come. Our Rabbis taught: Sanctify yourselves, therefore, and be ye holy:³ If a man sanctify himself a little, he becomes much sanctified. [If he sanctify himself] below, he becomes sanctified from above; if he sanctify himself in this world, he becomes sanctified in the world to come.

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. HE SHOOK⁴ THE URN AND BROUGHT UP THE TWO LOTS. ON ONE WAS INSCRIBED: 'FOR THE LORD', AND ON THE OTHER: 'FOR AZAZEL'. THE DEPUTY HIGH PRIEST WAS AT HIS RIGHT HAND, THE HEAD OF THE [MINISTERING] FAMILY AT HIS LEFT. IF THE LOT [HAVING] 'FOR THE LORD' [INSCRIBED THEREON] CAME UP IN HIS RIGHT HAND, THE DEPUTY HIGH PRIEST WOULD SAY TO HIM: SIR HIGH PRIEST, RAISE THY RIGHT HAND! AND IF THE LOT [WITH THE INSCRIPTION] 'FOR THE LORD' CAME UP IN HIS LEFT HAND, THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY WOULD SAY: SIR HIGH PRIEST, RAISE THY LEFT HAND! THEN HE PLACED THEM ON THE TWO HE-GOATS AND SAID: A SIN-OFFERING 'UNTO THE LORD!' R. ISHMAEL SAID: HE DID NOT NEED TO SAY: A SIN-OFFERING, BUT 'UNTO THE LORD'. AND THEY ANSWERED AFTER HIM: BLESSED BE THE NAME OF HIS GLORIOUS KINGDOM FOR EVER AND EVER!⁵

GEMARA. Why was it necessary to shake the urn? — Lest he take one intentionally.⁶ Raba said: The urn was of wood and profane and could hold no more than the two hands [at its mouth]. — Rabina demurred to this: It is quite right that [its mouth] could contain no more than his two hands, i.e., to prevent his taking one intentionally [through manipulation] but why should it be profane? Let it be sanctified? — That would result in our having a ministering vessel of wood, and we do not make ministering vessels of wood. Then let it be made of silver, or of gold? — 'The Torah has consideration for the money of Israel'.⁷

Our Mishnah is not in accordance with the following Tanna, for it was taught: R. Judah said in the name of R. Eliezer: The deputy high priest and the high priest put their hand into the urn. If the lot ['For the Lord'] comes up in the hand of the high priest, the deputy high priest said to him: Sir high priest, raise thy hand! And if it came up in the right hand of the deputy high priest, the head of the [ministering] family says to him: Say your word!⁸ -Let the deputy high priest address him? — Since it did not come up in his hand, he might feel discouraged.⁹ In what [principle] do they¹⁰ differ? — One holds, the right hand of the deputy high priest is better than the left hand of the high priest, the other holding, they are of even importance. Who is the Tanna disputing R. Judah? — It is R. Hanina, deputy high priest. For it was taught: R. Hanina, deputy high priest, says: Why does the deputy high priest stand at the right? In order that if an invalidating accident should happen to the high priest, the deputy high priest may enter [the Sanctuary] and officiate in his stead.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: Throughout the forty years that Simeon the Righteous ministered, the lot ['For the Lord'] would always come up in the right hand; from that time on, it would come up now in the right hand, now in the left. And [during the same time] the crimson-coloured strap¹² would become white. From that time on it would at times become white, at others not. Also: Throughout those forty years the westernmost light¹³ was shining, from that time on, it was now shining, now failing; also the fire of the pile of wood kept burning strong,¹⁴ so that the priests did not have to bring to the pile any other wood besides the two logs,¹⁵ in order to fulfil the command about providing the wood unintermittently; from that time on, it would occasionally keep burning strongly, at other times not, so that the priests could not do without bringing throughout the day wood for the pile [on the altar]. [During the whole period] a blessing was bestowed upon the 'omer,¹⁶ the two breads,¹⁷ and the shewbread, so that every priest, who obtained a piece thereof as big as an olive, ate it and became satisfied with some eating thereof and even leaving something over. From that time on a curse was sent upon ‘omer, two breads, and shewbread, so that every priest received a piece as small as a bean: the well-bred¹⁸ ones withdrew their hands from it, whilst voracious folk took and devoured it. Once one [of the latter] grabbed his portion as well as that of his fellow, wherefore they would call him ‘ben

(1) Lev. XI, 43.

(2) ונטמתם for ונטמתם MS.M. cur. ed. ונטמתם.

(3) Lev. XVI, 44.

(4) Continuing the account of Mishnah (supra 37a); or ‘shook hastily’ (because of eagerness, anxiety).

(5) The J.T. states that when the high priest pronounced the Ineffable Name those near prostrated themselves, those afar responding with ‘Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever’.

(6) It was considered a happy omen when it came up in the right hand, and the temptation was as great as near to improve upon chance by dexterous manipulation.

(7) V. infra 44b.

(8) Viz., ‘A sin-offering unto the Lord’.

(9) If the deputy high priest, in whose hand it came up, gave him the command, he might easily read into his words the arrogance of the successful.

(10) R. Judah and the Tanna of our Mishnah.

(11) Nazir 47b, which implies that as long as the high priest is fit for service the deputy high priest performs no priestly service whatsoever, in opposition to R. Judah.

(12) Which was tied between the horns of the bullock. If that became white, it signified that the Holy One, blessed be He, had forgiven Israel's sin. Cf. Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow (Isa. I, 18, Rashi).

(13) The westernmost light on the candlestick in the Temple, into which as much oil was put as into the others. Although all the other lights were extinguished, that light buried oil, in spite of the fact that it had been kindled first. This miracle was taken as a sign that the Shechinah rested over Israel. V. Shab. 22b and Men. 86b.

(14) On the altar, on which it was kindled in the morning.

(15) V. supra 26b.

(16) V. Glos.

(17) V. Lev. XXIII, 17ff

(18) Lit., ‘modest’, ‘decorous’.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 39b

hamzan’ [grasper] until his dying day. Rabbah b. R. Shela said: What Scriptural basis [is there for this appellation]? — O my God, rescue me out of the hand of the wicked, out of the grasp of the unrighteous and homez [ruthless] man.¹ Raba said, From here [is the basis obtained]: Learn to do well, seek justice, strengthen hamoz [the oppressed]² i.e., strengthen him hamoz [who is oppressed], but strengthen not homez [the oppressor].³

Our Rabbis taught: In the year in which Simeon the Righteous died, he foretold them that he would die. They said: Whence do you know that? He replied: On every Day of Atonement an old man, dressed in white, wrapped in white, would join me, entering [the Holy of Holies] and leaving [it] with me, but today I was joined by an old man, dressed in black, wrapped in black, who entered, but did not leave, with me. After the festival [of Sukkoth] he was sick for seven days and [then] died. His brethren [that year] the priests forbore to mention the Ineffable Name in pronouncing the [priestly] blessing.⁴ Our Rabbis taught: During the last forty years before the destruction of the Temple the lot [‘For the Lord’] did not come up in the right hand; nor did the crimson-coloured strap become white; nor did the westernmost light shine; and the doors of the Hekal would open by themselves, until R. Johanan b. Zakkai rebuked them, saying: Hekal, Hekal, why wilt thou be the alarmer thyself?⁵ I know about thee that thou wilt be destroyed, for Zechariah ben Ido has already prophesied concerning thee:⁶ Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars.⁷

R. Isaac b. Tablai said: Why is its⁸ name called Lebanon? Because it makes white the sins of Israel. R. Zutra b. Tobiah said: Why is it called 'Forest', as it is written: The house of the forest of Lebanon?⁹ To tell you that just as a forest produces sprouts, so does the Temple. For R. Hosea said:¹⁰ When Solomon built the Sanctuary, he planted therein all sorts of precious golden trees, which brought forth fruit in their season. When the wind blew against them, their fruits would fall down, as it is said: May his fruit rustle like Lebanon.¹¹ They were a source of income for the priesthood. But as soon as the idolaters entered the Hekal, they dried up, as it is said: And the flower of Lebanon languisheth.¹² And the Holy One, blessed be He, will restore it to us, as it is said: It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice, even with joy and singing, the glory of Lebanon shall be given to it.¹³ Our Rabbis taught:¹⁴ Ten times did the high priest pronounce the [Ineffable] Name on that day: Three times at the first confession, thrice at the second confession, thrice in connection with the he-goat to be sent away, and once in connection with the lots. And it already happened that when he pronounced the Name, his voice was heard even unto Jericho.¹⁵ Rabbah b. Bar Hana said: From Jerusalem to Jericho it is a distance of ten parasangs. The turning hinges of the Temple doors were heard throughout eight Sabbath limits.¹⁶ The goats in Jericho used to sneeze because of the odour of the incense. The women in Jericho did not have to perfume themselves, because of the odour of the incense. The bride in Jerusalem did not have to perfume herself because of the odour of the incense. R. Jose b. Diglai said: My father had goats on the mountains of Mikwar¹⁷ and they used to sneeze because of the odour of the incense. R. Hiyya b. Abin said in the name of R. Joshua b. Karhah: An old man told me: Once I walked towards Shiloh¹⁸ and I could smell the odour of the incense [coming] from its walls.

R. Jannai said: To bring the lot up out of the casket is indispensable,¹⁹ but to place [it on the bullock's head] is not.²⁰ R. Johanan said: Even to bring up the lot is not indispensable.²¹ On the opinion of R. Judah who said that services performed in the white garments outside the Holy of Holies are not indispensable there is no dispute, [all agreeing] that [the bringing up of lots] is not indispensable; they dispute only the opinion of R. Nehemiah:²² He who says it is indispensable, holds even as R. Nehemiah [does]; whereas the other who holds it is dispensable, explains [R. Nehemiah to refer to] an actual service, whereas the casting of the lots is no service. — Others say: On the opinion of R. Nehemiah, who says it is indispensable, there is no dispute, [all agreeing that] it is indispensable; the dispute touches only the opinion of R. Judah: he who holds it is dispensable, agrees with R. Judah; whereas he who holds it is indispensable [explains] that it is different here because Scripture repeats twice: On which [the lot] fell.²³ — An objection: was raised 'It is a command to cast the lots but if he has failed to do so, [the service] is, nevertheless, valid. Now that will be quite right according to the version that none disputes that on R. Judah's view it is dispensable, so that this [teaching]²⁴ is in accordance with R. Judah

(1) Ps. LXXI, 4.

(2) Isa. 1, 17.

(3) V. Sanh. 35a.

(4) Men. 109b. Tosaf Sotah 38a suggests that the Ineffable Name could be pronounced only when there was some indication that the Shechinah rested on the Sanctuary. When Simeon the Righteous died, with many indications that such glory was no more enjoyed, his brethren no more dared utter the Ineffable Name.

(5) Predict thy own destruction.

(6) I.e., concerning this significant omen of the destruction of the Temple.

(7) Zech. XI, 1. Ido was his grandfather, but it occurs occasionally that a man is called 'the son after a distinguished ancestor.

(8) The Sanctuary. A play on לַבְנוֹת, connected with לֶבֶן.

(9) I Kings X, 21.

(10) V. supra 21b.

(11) Ps. LXXII, 16.

(12) Nahum I, 4.

(13) Isa. XXXV, 2.

(14) Tosef. Yoma II, 2.

(15) V. supra 20b.

(16) The marked-off area around a town or place within which it is permitted to move on the Sabbath. Sabbath limits i.e., two thousand cubits in every direction. The turning hinges, then, created a sound, according to this scholar, audible beyond sixteen thousand cubits.

(17) The name varies: Mikmar, Mikwar, Makvar (a district of Peraea). One version omits reference to a place, and reads 'on the mountains', which may have appropriated the מ from the next word and omitted it for want of clarity. It should be reasonably near Jerusalem to suit the context. See D.S., p. 110.

(18) The place of the tent of meeting. In the mind of the narrator the odour of incense must have been well-nigh imperishable.

(19) Without the casting of the lots no choice could be made as to the destination of the two he-goats, i.e., the service could not go on.

(20) This view considers the service of the high priest dependent on the decision of the lots, the decisive factor being the lots and not the formal putting of the lot on the animal's head.

(21) R. Johanan considers the action of the high priest the determining factor, independent of his having either had lots or having placed them on the head. His declaration as to which animal is for the Lord and for Azazel resp., validates the service.

(22) Infra 60a contains the dispute between R. Judah and R. Nehemiah as to whether any change in the prescribed order renders the service invalid. It hinges on the question as to whether the word 'hukkah' (statute) i.e., binding order, applies to the service in the Holy of Holies only, independent as to the garments wherein they are performed (R. Judah) or whether it applies to any service in the white garments, performed either in the Holy of Holies or elsewhere (R. Nehemiah). A sub-question would be whether anything in connection with the Day of Atonement, or only a service proper is covered by R. Nehemiah's view. If e.g., the casting of the lots is not considered a service, though an action in connection with it, it may not be indispensable since it is performed outside the Holy of Holies, although in white garments.

(23) Lev. XVI, 9,10 which repetition emphasizes the indispensable nature of this service.

(24) That it is a command to cast the lots, but that failure to do so does not invalidate the service.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 40a

. But according to the version that they are disputing on R. Judah's view it would again be quite right according to him who holds it is dispensable, for then [the authority for this teaching] would be R. Judah; but according to him who considers it indispensable [the question is asked]: Who [will be the authority] for this [teaching]? Read: It is a command to place [the lots on the bullock's head].¹

Come and hear: It is a command to cast the lots and to make confession. But if he had not cast the lots² or made confession, [the service is] valid.³ And should you reply that here, too' [you would read] 'to place [the lot on the bullock's head]', say then the second part: R. Simeon said: If he has not cast the lots, the service is still valid, but if he has failed to make confession, it is invalidated. Now what does 'If he has not cast the lots' mean? Would you say it means, 'He has not placed the lots',⁴ this would imply [would it not] that R. Simeon holds the casting of the lots is indispensable? But surely it was taught: If one of the two [bullocks] died, he brings the other without [new] casting of lots — these are the words of R. Simeon?⁵ — R. Simeon did not know what the Sages meant [with the Phrase 'lo higril']⁶ and thus he said to them: If by 'hagralah' you mean casting of the lots itself, I dispute with you on one matter, but if by 'hagralah' you mean the placing of the lots then I disagree with you on two counts.⁷

Come and hear: With regard to the sprinkling of the blood within the veil, [the regular service of] the bullock is indispensable for the service of the he-goat [to be valid]; but the regular service of the he-goat is not indispensable for the service of the bullock to be valid.⁸ Now, it is quite right that the regular service of the bullock is indispensable for the he-goat, e.g., if he performed the rites of the he-goat before those of the bullock, he has done nothing.⁹ But that [the regular service of] the he-goat is not indispensable to the bullock, what does it mean? Would you say [it means] that if he sprinkled the blood of the bullock in the Hekal before the sprinkling of the he-goat within [the veil]?¹⁰ But surely Scripture says 'statute'!¹¹ Rather must you say [it means that] if he sprinkled the blood of the bullock within, before the casting of the lots¹² [it is valid]. Now since the order is not indispensable [is it not to be inferred that] the casting of the lots itself is not indispensable!¹³ — No, [it means that] he made the sprinkling of the blood of the bullock on the altar before sprinkling the blood of the he-goat in the Hekal¹⁴ and this [teaching] is in accord with R. Judah, who says that anything done in the white garments outside [the Holy of Holies] is dispensable. But does it not state 'with regard to the sprinklings within'?¹⁵ Rather: It is in accord with R. Simeon who holds the casting of the lots is dispensable. Or, if you like, say: Still I say it is in accord with R. Judah,¹⁶ and although the order of the service is not indispensable, the casting of the lots is indispensable. And they follow their own principle.¹⁷ For it was taught:

(1) This ruling is generally accepted: Dejure the placing of the lots is obligatory. De facto failure to do so does not render the ceremony invalid, Scripture repeating twice 'on which the lot fell', thus creating a precedent for the casting of the lots, but it refers only once to the placing of the lots on the bullock's head.

(2) לֹא הִגְרִיל infra n. 6.

(3) Hence the casting of the lots is dispensable — a refutation of R. Jannai.

(4) Only the placing of the lots does R. Simeon consider dispensable, but the casting he considers indispensable.

(5) Infra 63b.

(6) Lit., 'He did not perform the hagrah' and rendered supra 'he has not cast lots' cf. n. 3. 'Hagrah', 'acting with lots' may mean causing lots 'to be cast' or 'to be placed', hence grammatically either application is justified: 'lo higril' he did not cause the lots 'to be cast' or 'to be placed' (on the head etc.). R. Simeon did not know which interpretation had been offered by the Sages. He knew however that both are possible.

(7) If you mean by 'hagrah' the casting of the lots, I dispute only your stand touching confession, agreeing with you that the casting of the lots is not indispensable, but if you mean by 'hagrah' the placing of the lots on the head etc. but the casting itself you consider indispensable, then I disagree with you on two counts: you hold casting indispensable, I do not; you hold confession not indispensable, I consider it indispensable.

(8) [The order of the service prescribed in Lev. XVI for the bullock and the he-goat which is offered within is as follows: (i) First confession over the bullock; (ii) Casting lots over the he-goats; (iii) second confession over the bullock; (iv) Slaughtering of the bullock; (v) Bringing the spoon and fire pan into the Holy of Holies; (vi) Burning of incense; (vii) Sprinkling of blood of the bullock on the mercy-seat; (viii) Confession over and slaughtering of the he-goat; (ix) Sprinkling of the he-goat's blood on the mercy-seat; (x) Sprinkling of the blood of the bullock on the Veil, separating the Holy, the Hekal, from the Holy of Holies; (xi) Sprinkling of the blood of the he-goat on the Veil; (xii) Mixing together the blood of the he-goat and the bullock and applying the mixture on the golden altar. Here the rule is laid down that if he performed any one of the rites in connection with the he-goat before such of the bullock as should have preceded it, that rite is invalid and must be performed again in its proper order. If, however, he performed any of the rites in connection with the bullock before such of the he-goat as should have preceded it, that rite is not invalid.]

(9) It has no validity.

(10) [I.e., he performed rite (x) before rite (ix), v. n. 1].

(11) Which has reference to the rites performed within the Veil, and which implies an inflexible rule invalidating the irregularity of the service.

(12) [I.e., he performed rite (vii) before (ii).]

(13) Hence there is one who holds that the casting of the lots is not indispensable. That contradicts the above statement that even R. Judah (and all the more R. Nehemiah) considers it indispensable.

(14) [I.e., he performed rite (xii) before rite (xi). The blood of the bullock here means that which he mixed with the blood of the he-goat.]

(15) Whereas this irregularity in connection with the bullock concerned a service performed outside the Holy of Holies.

(16) [And the irregularity consequently concerned rites (vii) and (ii), v. p. 190, n. 5.]

(17) This refers to the dispute of R. Judah and R. Simeon where he failed to make confession.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 40b

[With reference to] It shall be set alive before the Lord, to make atonement over him¹ — how long must it stay alive? Until the blood of its fellow-sacrifice is sprinkled, this is the opinion of R. Judah.² R. Simeon holds: Until the confession [of sin].³ Wherein do they differ? — As it was taught: ‘To make atonement over him’ — Scripture speaks of atonement through blood, thus does it also say: And when he hath made an end to atoning for the holy place,⁴ just as there it refers to atonement by blood, so does it refer here to atonement by blood this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Simeon says: ‘To make atonement over him’ — Scripture speaks of atonement by words [confession].

Come and hear:⁵ The disciples of R. Akiba asked him: If it [the lot ‘for the Lord’] came up in the left hand, may he turn it to the right? He replied: Do not give all occasion for the Sadducees to rebel!⁶ The reason, then, [of his negative answer] is so as not to give an occasion for the Sadducees to rebel, but, without that, we would turn it, yet you said that the casting of the lots is indispensable, and since the left hand has determined its destination,⁷ how can we turn it? — Raba answered: This is what they said: If the lot had come up in the left hand, may one change it and the he-goat to the right?⁸ Whereupon he answered: Give no occasion to the Sadducees to rebel.

Come and hear: If [Scripture] has said: The goat, ‘upon which it [the lot] is’⁹ I would have said he must place it thereon. Therefore it says: ‘[on which it] fell’, i.e., once it has fallen upon it, he no more need [place it on its head]. Now in respect of what [was this said]?¹⁰ Would you say: In respect of a command,¹¹ which would imply that the placing of the lots is not even a command!¹² Rather must you say it means that it is in respect of indispensability;¹³ hence we learn that the casting is indispensable, and the placing of the lot [upon the head] is dispensable.¹⁴ Raba said: This is what he means: If it had said: ‘Upon which it is’, I would have said: let him leave it there until the time for the slaughtering; therefore it says: [upon which it] fell, to intimate that once it had fallen upon it, it needs nothing else.¹⁵

Come and hear: And offer him for a sin-offering¹⁶ i.e., the lot designates it for the sin-offering, but the naming¹⁷ [alone] does not designate it a sin-offering. For I might have assumed, this could be inferred a minori: If in a case where the lot does not sanctify,¹⁸ the naming does sanctify, how much more will the naming sanctify where the lot also does so sanctify? Therefore [Scripture] says: ‘And offer him for a sin-offering’ [to intimate] it is the lot which designates it a sin-offering, but the naming does not make it a sin-offering.

(1) With reference to the he-goat that is to be sent away. Lev. XVI, 10.

(2) [In accordance with his view that confession is not indispensable so that if the he-goat died after the sprinkling of the blood of the bullock (rite vii) before the confession over the he-goat (rite viii) the service is valid.]

(3) Infra 65a.

(4) Ibid. 20.

(5) Tosef. III, 2, the version in the Talmud is somewhat modified.

(6) The substitution of Sadducees for ‘Minim’ (Judeo-Christian heretics) is undoubtedly due to the censors’ dislike of any word that may appear as even an implied attack on the Church. The heretics will claim this manipulation an ‘additional proof’ of the Pharisees’ doing with the law whatever pleased them. Thus they would be helped to rebel, arguing at once in favour of their heresy and against the Pharisees.

(7) For the Lord, even before the lot was actually placed on the he-goat.

(8) If the lot ‘For the Lord’ came up in the left hand so that the he-goat standing opposite the priest at his left hand was thereby designated a sin-offering for the Lord, that on the right being designated for Azazel, may he exchange the he-goats and the lots so that whereas the lot decided which is which, the manipulation will have afforded him the comfort of knowing that without formally changing the lots, the ‘right one’ will be designated for the Lord.

(9) Intimating that it lies there for a considerable time.

(10) That once the lots are cast nothing more is necessary.

(11) I.e., there is no longer any command to be fulfilled after the casting of the lots.

(12) Surely this is impossible!

(13) I.e., that once the lots are cast there is nothing else deemed indispensable for determining the destination of the he-goats.

(14) A refutation of R. Johanan.

(15) The verse serves to indicate that once it 'fell upon it' there is not even a command to be placed there, as a sign or assurance that it will be offered up for the purpose designated.

(16) Lev. XVI, 9: And Aaron shall present the goat upon which the lot fell for the Lord, and offer it for a sin-offering.

(17) By the high priest. The above verse, in which the offering-up follows immediately 'upon which the lot fell' indicates that the coming up of the lot decides the matter, not the naming by the priest.

(18) As with the sacrificial couples of birds, where either owner or priest by verbal statement makes the designation, where, however, the casting of lots would be useless.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 41a

Now whose is the anonymous opinion in the Sifra?¹ R. Judah's, and he teaches: The lot designates the sin-offering and the naming does not make it a sin-offering. Hence we see that the casting of the lots is indispensable. This will be a refutation of the opinion that it is not indispensable. It is a refutation.

R. Hisda said: The special designation of the couples² is made either by the owner³ or by the priest's action.⁴ R. Shimi b. Ashi said: What is the basis of R. Hisda's dictum? Because it is written: She shall take [. . . for a burnt-offering]⁵ and And the priest shall offer one [as a sin-offering]⁶ i.e., [the designation is made] either at the [owner's] taking [purchasing] or at the offering-up [by the priest].

They raised the following objection: 'And make it a sin-offering'⁷ -i.e., the lot makes it a sin-offering, but the naming [alone] does not make it a sin-offering. For I might have assumed, this could be inferred a minori: If in a case where a lot does not sanctify, the naming does, how much more should the naming sanctify, where the lot does? Therefore [Scripture] says: 'And make it for a sin-offering' [to intimate] it is the lot which makes it a sin-offering, but the naming does not make it a sin-offering. Here it is neither the time⁸ of its purchase, nor of its being offered, and yet he states that it should designate? — Raba said: This is what he said: If in a case where the lot does not sanctify even at the time of the purchase and even at the time of the offering, the naming does sanctify it at the time of either purchase or offering, how much more shall the naming, at either the time of purchase or of offering, sanctify it in a case where the lot sanctifies outside the time of either purchase or offering? Therefore [Scripture] says: 'And make it a sin-offering', i.e., the lot makes it a sin-offering but the naming does not make it a sin-offering.

Come and hear: If someone defiled the Sanctuary⁹ whilst poor and put aside money for his bird-couple-offering, and afterwards became rich,¹⁰ and said thereupon: This [money] be for the sin-offering and that for the burnt-offering he adds to the money for the sin-offering to bring his obligatory offering, but he may not add to his burnt¹¹ -offering to bring his obligatory offering. Now here¹² it is neither the time of the purchase, nor the time of the offering and yet he teaches that it is designated?¹³ — R. Shesheth said: How do you reason?¹⁴ Surely R.. Eleazar said in the name of R. Hoshai: If someone defiled the Sanctuary whilst rich, and brought the offering of a poor person, he has not done his duty. Now, since he has not done his duty, how could he have designated¹⁵ it? Must you not, rather, say that he had designated it when already poor? Thus here,¹⁶ too, the case is that he said it from the time when he set [the money] aside.¹⁷ But according to R. Hagga in the name of R. Josiah who said: He has done his duty¹⁸ —

(1) A Tannaitic commentary (Midrash) on Leviticus.

- (2) Of sacrificial birds (Lev. XII, 8 and XV, 30), as to which is to be the burnt-offering and which the sin-offering.
- (3) At the purchase the owner can decide which is to serve for either sacrifice.
- (4) If not designated by the owner, the priest has the right to name each bird for the sacrifice he chooses, i.e., either sin- or burnt-offering.
- (5) Lev. XII, 8.
- (6) Ibid. XV, 30.
- (7) Lev. XVI, 9. So literally. E.V. 'offer it for a sin-offering'.
- (8) The designation by naming, which now is assumed to take place at the time of the sanctification by the lot, i.e., neither at the time of the purchase, nor at that of the offering.
- (9) By entering it in uncleanness, Lev. V, 2.
- (10) With the consequence that he must offer the contingent sacrifice of a rich person: a lamb as a sin-offering, whereas a poor person had to offer up two turtledoves or two young pigeons as sin- and burnt-offering resp. (Lev. V, 6 and 11.)
- (11) Ker. 28a. He may add to the original money designated for the poor man's sin-offering for his new sin-offering, but he may not use the money designated for the poor man's burnt-offering to add thereto the sum necessary for the purchase of the rich man's sin-offering (his lamb). The latter is forbidden, because once he had designated, the money for the burnt-offering, it may no more be changed for any other offering.
- (12) After the designation.
- (13) And that he may no more change it.
- (14) Do you consider the Baraitha to be in order?
- (15) The poor man's sin-offering no more applies to him, how could he have designated it a burnt-offering after becoming rich, since he does not have to bring a burnt-offering at all (only the poor man brings a burnt- and sin-offering, one pigeon each, the rich man's lamb serving as sin-offering only).
- (16) In reply to the objection raised against R. Hisda.
- (17) Correct the Baraitha to read: If someone defiled the Sanctuary whilst poor and put aside money for his couple and said at the time when he set the money aside 'This be etc.' and afterwards became rich.
- (18) So that the Baraitha as it stands need not be corrected.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 41b

what is there to be said?¹ — Do not read: 'And said thereupon', but 'And thereupon he bought and said'.²

But if 'thereupon he bought' [then it states] 'he may add and bring his obligatory sacrifice', it must mean³ that he redeems⁴ [the bird-offering]? But surely a bird-offering may not be redeemed?⁵ — R. Papa said: For instance, if he bought one single pigeon. If he bought it as the burnt-offering, then he adds to the money for his sin-offering the money for his [new] obligatory sacrifice, the burnt-offering [of the bird] becoming a freewill-offering; if he bought it as the sin-offering he may not add to the money for the burnt-offering for the purchase of his [new] obligatory sacrifice and that sin-offering is left to perish.

The text [above] states: R. Eleazar said in the name of R. Hoshai: 'If one defiled the Sanctuary whilst being rich and brought the offering prescribed for a poor person, he has not done his duty, R. Haggai in the name of R. Josiah says: He did perform it.' The following objection was raised: If a poor leper brought the offering prescribed for a rich person, he has performed his duty; if a rich person brought the offering prescribed for a poor one, he has not performed his duty?⁶ — There it is different because it is written: This [shall be the law of the leper].⁷ If that is so, then [let it apply] in the first part [of the Mishnah] too? — Surely the Divine Law includes that case through the word Torath ['law']!⁸ As it was taught: the word Torath ['the law']⁷ includes a poor leper, who brought a rich [leper's] sacrifice. One might have assumed that even a rich leper who brought a poor leper's sacrifice [might be included so as to have performed his duty], therefore it says: 'This'. Let us infer from it [for one who defiled the Sanctuary]? — The Divine Law [by saying]: And if he be poor,⁹ excludes [all but the leper].¹⁰

MISHNAH. HE BOUND¹¹ A THREAD OF CRIMSON WOOL ON THE HEAD OF THE HE-GOAT WHICH WAS TO BE SENT AWAY,¹² AND [MEANTIME] HE PLACED IT [AT THE GATE] WHENCE IT WAS TO BE SENT AWAY; AND THE HE-GOAT THAT WAS TO BE SLAUGHTERED, AT THE PLACE OF THE SLAUGHTERING.¹³ HE CAME TO HIS BULLOCK A SECOND¹⁴ TIME, PRESSED HIS TWO HANDS UPON IT AND MADE CONFESSION. AND THUS HE WOULD SAY: O LORD, I HAVE DEALT WRONGFULLY, I HAVE TRANSGRESSED, I HAVE SINNED BEFORE THEE, I AND MY HOUSE, AND THE CHILDREN OF AARON, THY HOLY PEOPLE, O LORD, PRAY FORGIVE THE WRONGDOINGS, THE TRANSGRESSION, AND THE SINS, WHICH I HAVE COMMITTED, TRANSGRESSED, AND SINNED BEFORE THEE, I AND MY HOUSE, AND THE CHILDREN OF AARON, THY HOLY PEOPLE. AS IT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH OF MOSES, THY SERVANT: FOR ON THIS DAY ATONEMENT BE MADE FOR YOU, TO CLEANSE YOU; FROM ALL THE SINS SHALL YE BE CLEAN BEFORE THE LORD. AND THEY RESPONDED: BLESSED BE THE NAME OF HIS GLORIOUS KINGDOM FOR EVER AND EVER.

GEMARA. They raised the question: AND THE HE-GOAT THAT WAS TO BE SLAUGHTERED AT THE PLACE OF THE SLAUGHTERING — does this refer to the tying [of the strap]¹⁵ or to the placing [of the animal]?¹⁶ Come and hear: For R. Joseph learned: He bound a crimson-coloured strap on the head of the he-goat which was to be sent away and placed it against the gate whence it was to be sent away; and the he-goat which was to be slaughtered at the place where it was to be slaughtered, lest they become mixed up one with the other, or with others. It will be quite right if you say it refers to the binding [of the strap], but If you say it refers to the placing [of the animal], granted that it would not be mixed up with its fellow [he-goat] because the one had a strap, whilst the other had none, but it could surely be mixed up with other he-goats?¹⁷ Hence we learn from here that It refers to the tying [of the strap]. This proves it. R. Isaac said: I have heard of two straps, one in connection with the [red] heifer,¹⁸ the other with the he-goat-to-be-sent-away, one requiring a definite size, the other not requiring it, but I do not know which [requires the size]. R. Joseph said: Let us see: The strap of the he-goat which required division,¹⁹ hence also required a definite size, whereas that of the heifer which does not need to be divided, does not require a definite size, either. Rami b. Hama demurred to this: That of the heifer also requires weight?²⁰ — Raba said: The matter of this weight is disputed by Tannaim.²¹ But does the strap of the heifer not have to be divided? [Against this] Abaye raised the following objection: How does he do it?²² He wraps them²³ together with the remnants²⁴ of the strips [of scarlet wool]! Say: with the tail²⁵ of the strip.

R. Hanin said in the name of Rab: If the cedar-wood and the scarlet thread were [merely] caught by the flame,²⁶ they are usable [for the ceremony]. — They raised the following objection: If the strap caught fire, another strap is brought and the water of lustration prepared.²⁷ Abaye said: This is no contradiction; one speaks of a flame which blazes²⁸ up, the other of one which is subdued.²⁹

Raba said: Concerning the weight of [the heifer's strap] there is a division of opinion among Tannaim, for it was taught: Why does he wrap them³⁰ together? In order that they form together one bunch — this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon says: In order that they have [sufficient] weight to fall into the midst of the burning heifer. — When R. Dimi came [from Palestine] he said in the name of R. Johanan: I heard of: three [different] straps, one, that of the [red] heifer, the other, that of the he-goat-to-be-sent-away, the third of the leper; one having a weight of ten zuz,³¹ the other a weight of two sela's,³¹ the third a weight of one shekel,³¹ and I do not know how to specify it. When Rabin came, he specified it in the name of R. Jonathan:

(1) How will R. Hisda meet the objection raised against him from the Baraita?

(2) The change implies only that one word had been omitted. Thus the question against R. Hisda is answered.

- (3) Lit., 'what is it?'
- (4) Divesting it of its sacred character by changing its purpose and adding thereto the money required for the lamb.
- (5) Tem. 23b.
- (6) Neg. XIV, 12. An objection against R. Hagga.
- (7) Lev. XIV, 2 indicating there must be no duration.
- (8) Indicating that there is ultimately one Torah, one law governing all lepers.
- (9) Ibid. 21.
- (10) 'If he be poor'; the 'he' is emphatic, indicating that this law applies only to a leper; but any other person, obliged to bring an offering of higher or lesser value, according to pecuniary condition, may bring the 'poor man's offering' and yet have its duty performed although he be rich himself.
- (11) To prevent any confusion between the he-goats, or between them and the third he-goat, to be offered up at the additional service (Num. XXIX, 11).
- (12) Destined for Azazel, in the wilderness, whence it was hurled to its death from a rock. The word Azazel has been variously interpreted, but it seems to be the name of a place (a rough rock) rather than that of a demon.
- (13) To be explained in the Gemara.
- (14) V. supra 35b: HE CAME TO HIS BULLOCK, that was the first time.
- (15) I.e., he tied the strap about its neck, the place of the slaughtering.
- (16) I.e., he placed it where it had to be slaughtered.
- (17) At the place where sacrifices were slaughtered, since it had no distinguishing mark.
- (18) v. Num. XIX, 1ff
- (19) Infra 67a: What did he (who sent the he-goat away) do. He divided the strap of crimson wool, tying one half to the rock, the other half between his horns.
- (20) To fall right into the midst of the burning heifer' as Scripture (Num. XIX, 6) requires it.
- (21) V. infra.
- (22) With reference to the red heifer v. Parah III, 13.
- (23) The hyssop and cedar-wood.
- (24) There are, then, remnants of strips, hence there must have been division here, too.
- (25) Simply the end of the strap, thinned out like a tail, hence no evidence of a division.
- (26) Cf. supra n. 1.
- (27) Lit., 'and he sanctifies'.
- (28) A fire which unexpectedly rises and spreads; a fire diverted from its course. Or: a fire which unexpectedly rises and spreads;
- (29) In the former case another strap is to be brought since it did not come in contact with the fire itself; but not in the latter case.
- (30) Cedar-wood, hyssop and scarlet, Num. XIX, 6.
- (31) Zuz — the smallest silver coin corresponds to either one quarter or one half of a shekel. Sela' — is either five or ten zuzim. The shekel weighs about twelve grams. V. Krauss, T.A. II, 404.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 42a

That of the heifer had the weight of ten zuz, that of the he-goat-to-be-sent-away had the weight of two sela's, and that of the leper weighed one shekel. R. Johanan said: About the [strap used in connection with] the heifer R. Simeon b. Halafta and the Sages are disputing, one saying it weighed ten shekels, the other it weighed but one shekel. As a mnemotechnic [sign use]:¹ 'Whether one gives much, or one gives little'.² — R. Jeremiah of Difti said to Rabina: They are not disputing in regard to [the strap of] the heifer, but in regard [to that of] the he-goat-to-be-sent-away; and on the day [of their dispute] died Rabia b. Kisi, and as a sign to remember this coincidence they uttered: [The death of the righteous], Rabia b. Kisi, obtains atonement, even as the he-goat-to-be-sent-away. — R. Isaac said: I heard of two slaughterings, one of the [red] heifer, the other of his bullock,³ one being permissible to a lay Israelite,⁴ the other being invalidated if performed by a lay Israelite, and I do not know which is which. It is reported: Concerning the slaughtering of the heifer and of his bullock [there is a dispute between] Rab and Samuel, one holding the heifer to be invalidated [if killed by a lay Israelite], but that his bullock [so slaughtered] is fit, while the other holds that his bullock is invalidated [if a commoner killed], but [so killed] the heifer is fit. It may be ascertained that it is Rab who holds that [the slaughtering of] the heifer [by a lay Israelite] renders it invalid. For R. Zei'ra⁵ said: The slaughtering of the heifer by a lay Israelite is invalid and Rab said thereupon: 'Eleazar' and 'Statute'⁶ we learned in connection therewith. — But as for Rab, wherefore the difference between [the law] in the case of the heifer, because 'Eleazar' and 'Statute' is written in connection therewith, when also in connection with 'his' bullock 'Aaron'⁷ and 'Statute' is written? The slaughtering is not [regarded as a Temple] service.⁸ Then this ought to apply to the heifer as well? — It is different with the heifer, because it is [in the category of] offerings for Temple repair.⁹ — So much the more then!¹⁰ -R. Shisha son of R. Idi said: It is the same as with the [inspection of] appearances of leprosy,¹¹ which is not a service, yet requires a priest's service. Now according to Samuel, who holds the killing of 'his' bullock by a lay Israelite is invalid, wherefore the difference [in law] in the case of 'his' bullock, in connection with which 'Aaron' and 'Statute' are written, when also in connection with the heifer 'Eleazar' and 'Statute' are written? — It is different there, because it is written: And he shall slay it before him,¹² which means that a lay Israelite may slaughter and Eleazar should watch it.¹³ And [how does] Rab [explain this]? — [It means] he¹⁴ must not divert his attention from it. Whence does Samuel know that he must not divert his attention from it? — He infers that from And the heifer shall be burnt in his sight.¹⁵ And [why the repetition according to] Rab? — One refers to the slaughtering, the other to the burning;¹⁶ and it was necessary to mention both. For if the Divine Law had written it concerning the slaughtering [alone, I would have said]: There [attention is necessary] because it is the beginning of the service, but with the burning [one could] say: 'No [attention is necessary]' therefore it was necessary [for the Divine Law] to mention [it also touching burning]. And if the Divine Law had written it [only] touching the burning, one would have said [attention is necessary there], because just now the heifer is being made ready,¹⁷ but [during] slaughtering no [attention is necessary]. Therefore it was necessary [for the Divine Law] to mention [that too]. — What does this exclude?¹⁸ Is it to say to exclude the gathering of its ashes and the drawing of the water for the putting in of the ashes?

(1) Ber. 5b.

(2) The usual meaning: Whether one gives much or little, the main matter is that he direct his heart to our Father who is in heaven, is irrelevant here, the accent being put, for mnemotechnic reasons, on: the one (stands for) much, the other for little, i.e., one of the disputants ascribes the maximum, the other the minimum weight.

(3) The bullock which the high priest had to bring for himself on the Day of Atonement.

(4) I.e., a non-priest.

(5) Var. lec. 'Rab'.

(6) Num. XIX, 3: And ye shall give her to Eleazar the priest i.e., it requires a priest's service; ibid. 21: And it shall be a perpetual statute i.e., it is indispensable that the priest do so, as prescribed.

(7) Lev. XVI, 3: Herewith shall Aaron come . . . with a young bullock; and ibid. 34: And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you.

(8) Since a lay Israelite may perform it, the word 'statute', mentioned in connection with his bullock, does not refer to the slaughtering.

(9) The heifer is not offered up on the altar, as any other sacrifice, hence there is no distinction as to the services to be performed in connection with it, and all alike require a priest.

(10) On the contrary, how much more ought a lay Israelite to be permitted to slay the red heifer.

(11) Lev. XIII, 2.

(12) Num. XIX, 3.

(13) 'He' referring to a lay Israelite; 'before him' (lit., 'before his face'), to Eleazar.

(14) 'He' refers to Eleazar i.e., he shall slaughter it and keep his mind on this important ceremony.

(15) Num. XIX, 5.

(16) That is that both rites require attention.

(17) The burning for the purposes of the ashes is the central part of the ceremony, to 'prepare' the heifer for her cleansing purpose.

(18) I.e., with regard to what function is no attention essential.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 42b

Surely Scripture says: [And it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel] for a water of sprinkling?¹ — Rather it excludes the casting in of cedarwood, hyssop, and scarlet, because they are not part of the heifer itself.

It was reported: If the heifer was slaughtered by a lay Israelite, R. Ammi said it is valid. R. Isaac, the Smith, said it was invalid. ‘Ulla said it is valid, whilst some there are who say [that he said] it was invalid.

R. Joshua b. Abba raised an objection in support of Rab: I know only that the sprinkling of its water is not valid if performed by a woman, as [when done] by a man; and that it is valid only [if done] by day.² Whence do I know that the slaughtering of the heifer, the reception of its blood, the sprinkling of its blood, the burning of the heifer, and the casting into the burning heifer of cedar-wood, hyssop, and scarlet [may not be done by night]?³ To teach us that Scripture said: [This is the statute of] the law.⁴ I might have assumed that this should include also the gathering of its ashes and the drawing of the water for the putting-in of the ashes, to teach us that Scripture said: ‘This’.⁵ — What causes you to include those, and to exclude these? — Since Scripture both extends and limits, say, we shall infer everything from the [regulations touching] the sprinkling of its water: Just as the sprinkling of its water is not proper if done by a woman, as it is [if performed] by a man, and not valid except if done by day, thus⁶ include also the slaughtering of the heifer, the reception of its blood, the sprinkling of its blood, the burning of the heifer, and the casting into the burning heifer of cedar-wood, hyssop, and scarlet. Since these [functions] may not be performed by a woman, so may they be performed only by day; but I exclude the gathering of its ashes and the drawing of the water for the putting-in of its ashes, which, since they may be performed by either man or woman, hence may also be performed by night. But how is this a refutation?⁶ Will you say that because [the slaughtering is stated to be] invalid [if performed] by a woman, it must be invalid, also, if performed by a lay Israelite,⁷ there would be as counterproof the sprinkling of its waters, which, whilst invalid [if performed] by a woman, yet may be done by a lay Israelite! Said Abaye: This is the refutation: Why is the woman excluded [from the slaughtering], because [Scripture said]: ‘Eleazar’, [implying] but not a woman; that [must be applied to] the lay Israelite also, for [the analogue inference]: ‘Eleazar’ [the priest], [implies] but not a lay Israelite.

‘Ulla said: In that whole section [of the red heifer] there are [texts] implying an exception from a preceding implication, and [texts] independent [of preceding or following] implications: And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest⁸ [implies] only this one to Eleazar, but not [the heifers] in later generations to Eleazar;⁹ some say: In later generations [you shall give it] to the high priest, others: In later generations to a common priest. It is quite right according to him who holds that in later generations [the heifer is to be handed over] to a common priest,¹⁰ but whence does he infer who holds that in later generations [it is to be given] to the high priest? — He infers it from [the identical word] ‘Statute’, ‘Statute’, used [also]¹¹ in connection with the Day of Atonement.¹²

And he shall bring it forth¹³ [implies] that he must not bring forth another one with her, as we have learnt:¹⁴ If the heifer refused to go forth, one may not send a black one with her, lest people say: They slaughtered a black [heifer], nor may another red heifer be brought forth with her, lest people say: They slaughtered two. — R. Jose said: This comes not under this title,¹⁵ but because it is written: [And he shall¹⁶ bring it forth]; ‘it’, [implies] by itself. And the [anonymous] first Tanna [surely wrote] ‘it’.¹⁷ — Who is this first Tanna? It is R. Simeon who ‘interprets¹⁸ the reason of biblical law’. What is the difference between them? — There is a difference

- (1) Num. XIX,9 which implies that special watch must be kept with these till the sprinkling.
- (2) Because day is stated specifically, Num. XIX, 12.
- (3) No special verse is required that these may not be performed by a woman since 'Eleazar' or 'priest' is written throughout the section (Rashi).
- (4) Ibid 2, 'law' implying uniform regulations for the whole ceremony.
- (5) I.e., 'Do what is written here, but do not add to these regulations' (Rashi).
- (6) Of Samuel, 42a, who holds that a lay Israelite may slaughter the heifer, for since the objection was raised in support of Rab, it must needs be an attack on Samuel's view.
- (7) Whereas Samuel is said supra to declare it valid.
- (8) Num. XIX, 3.
- (9) Eleazar at that time was deputy high priest, and that heifer, by express statement of Scripture, was entrusted to him. In future, however, it would be given either to the high priest, or to a common priest (R. Hananel).
- (10) For, since Scripture did not expressly state that it be handed over to the high priest, or his deputy, but merely by implication, the assumption seems justified that any priest could officiate at the ceremony.
- (11) Lev. XVI, 29 and Num. XIX, 21, on which this analogy is based.
- (12) Where the service is to be performed by the high priest.
- (13) Num. XIX, 3.
- (14) Parah III, 7.
- (15) I.e., this is not the real reason, rather etc.
- (16) The bracketed portion is omitted in the Talmud and supplied from the Mishnah, Parah III, 7.
- (17) Which seemingly justified the excluding interpretation.
- (18) Kid. 68b: Such interpretation will accordingly modify the law, extending or limiting it.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 43a

if one should bring forth an ass with her.¹

And he shall slay it [implies] that one must not slaughter any other [heifer] with it. Before him¹ [implies] according to Rab that he must not divert his attention from her; according to Samuel, that a lay Israelite may slaughter, and Eleazar look on.² And Eleazar the priest shall take of its blood with his finger³ [is written] according to Samuel in order to refer it [the rite] back to Eleazar;⁴ according to Rab:⁵ this is a limitation following a limitation and a double limitation serves to widen the scope, viz., that even a common priest may do it. And the priest shall take cedar-wood, and hyssop, and scarlet,⁶ [is written] according to Samuel, that even a common priest [may take and cast it] according to Rab:⁷ it is necessary [to mention it], for you might have thought and said: Since these things do not belong to the heifer itself, they do not require any priest's service, therefore Scripture informs us [that they do]. Then the priest shall wash his clothes,⁸ [implies] in his priestly⁹ garments. And the priest shall be unclean until the even,⁸ [implies] that he shall be in his priestly garments¹⁰ even in future generations. That will be quite right according to him who holds that [the heifer ceremony] will in future generations be performed by a common priest,¹¹ but according to him who holds that in future generations [the heifer ceremony will be performed by] the high priest, now, since a high priest is required, is it necessary to state that he must be in his priestly garments? — Yes, Scripture does [occasionally] take the trouble to mention things which might have been inferred a minori.

And a man that is clean shall gather up the ashes of the heifer and lay them up¹² — 'a man,' [is written] to declare fit a lay Israelite;¹³ 'that is clean' — to declare fit a woman; and 'lay them up' [implies] one who has understanding how to lay them up, that excludes one deaf and dumb, an idiot, and a minor, who have not the understanding of how to lay them up. We learned elsewhere:¹⁴ All are fit to prepare [the waters of lustration]¹⁵ with the exception of the deaf and dumb, the idiot, and the minor. R. Judah declares fit a minor and disqualifies a woman and an hermaphrodite. What is the reason for the Rabbis' view? — Because it is written: And for the unclean they shall take of the ashes of the burning of the purification from sin [and put upon them running water in a vessel],¹⁶ i.e., they¹⁷ whom I declared unto thee unfit for the gathering [of the ashes] I also declared unto thee unfit for the preparation [of the waters of lustration], but they whom I declared fit to thee for the gathering, I have also declared unto thee fit for the preparation. And [what does] R. Judah [say]? — If that were so,¹⁸ Scripture should have said: ‘He shall take [we-lakah]’;¹⁹ what is the meaning of they shall take?’ To intimate that even a minor whom I declared unto thee unfit there, is fit to act here.²⁰ — Whence does he know that a woman is unfit? — Because Scripture says: [‘he shall put’] i.e., he, but not she, shall put. — And the Rabbis? — If the Divine Law had written ‘He shall take’, ‘he shall put’, one might have assumed the same man must both give and put, therefore Scripture wrote ‘and they shall take’. And if the Divine Law had stated ‘they shall take’ and [also] ‘they shall put’, one might have assumed that there must be two to take and put, therefore Scripture wrote: ‘they shall take’ and ‘he shall put’, to indicate that even if [it is right] two take [the ashes] and one puts [the running water in a vessel]. — And a clean man shall take hyssop, and cup it in the water [and sprinkle],²¹ according to the Rabbis:²² ‘A man’ [implies] but not a woman; ‘clean’ is [written] to declare fit²³ even a minor; according to R. Judah:²⁴ ‘a man’ [implies] but not a minor; ‘clean’ to declare fit a woman.

An objection²⁵ was raised: ‘All are qualified to sprinkle except one whose sex is unknown, an hermaphrodite and a woman; but a child that is without²⁶ understanding, a woman may aid in sprinkling’

(1) According to the first Tanna that would be permitted, because the presence of the ass could not mislead people into the assumption that it was he who is sacrificed; according to Rabbi, it would be forbidden, for ‘it’ excludes permission for any other animal to be brought forth together with her.

(2) V. supra 42a.

(3) Ibid. 4.

(4) Since ‘he shall slay’ refers, according to Samuel, to the lay Israelite, it was necessary to emphasize that the sprinkling had to be done by ‘Eleazar’, otherwise it might have been assumed that it could be performed by the lay Israelite who did the slaughtering.

(5) Who refers ‘he shall slay’ to the priest, the repetition of ‘Eleazar’ here is apparently superfluous.

(6) The repetition indicating that no limitation is intended, but only exemplification.

(7) Who permits a common priest to receive the blood, this passage being independent of the preceding implication.

(8) Lev. XIX, 7.

(9) It was superfluous to state ‘the priest’ again, since we are dealing but with him, the implication therefore is that he must do it in his priestly garments.

(10) When performing the red heifer ritual.

(11) Who does not draw an analogy from the identical words ‘statute’, occurring both in connection with the Day of Atonement and with the heifer; hence it is necessary to state that in the future, nonetheless, he must then wear his official garb.

(12) Num. XIX, 9.

(13) For gathering up the ashes.

(14) Parah V, 4.

(15) I.e., to put water over the ashes.

(16) Num. XIX, 17.

(17) ‘They’ referring to such as were declared fit for the immediately preceding rite of gathering the ashes mentioned in verse 9.

(18) That ‘they’ refers to such as are mentioned in verse 9.

(19) Just as in verse 9 the singular is used.

(20) A minor is not permitted to gather the ashes, but he may put the water in the ashes.

(21) Num. XIX, 18.

(22) Who hold that the mixing of the ashes and water may be done only by such as are fit to gather the ashes, thus excluding a minor.

(23) Had the same regulation implied in verse 9 applied also to sprinkling, the phrase ‘a clean man’ would have been superfluous here.

(24) Who disqualifies a woman and declares fit a minor for the mixing of the ashes with the water.

(25) Parah XII, 10.

(26) Corrected according to the Mishnah. The Talmud here reads: a child that has understanding.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 43b

and here R. Judah does not dispute?¹ — Abaye said: Since the Master said that this chapter contains [texts] implying an exception from a preceding implication, and [texts] independent of preceding or following implications he surely disputes.

And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean,² ‘clean’ implies that he was unclean before,³ that informs us that a tebul-yom is qualified [to officiate] at the heifer [ceremony]. R. Assi said: When R. Johanan and Resh Lakish engaged in investigating questions about the heifer, they were unable to produce more than what a fox can bring up from a ploughed field, but they said this chapter contains [texts] implying an exception from a preceding implication, and [texts] independent of preceding or following implications.⁴

A tanna⁵ recited before R. Johanan: All the slaughterings may be performed by a lay Israelite with the exception of that of the [red] heifer. R. Johanan said to him: Go out and teach it in the street!⁶ We do not find that slaughtering is disqualified [if performed] by a lay Israelite. Nor would R. Johanan not listen only to a tanna [in this matter] he would not even listen to his own master, for, whereas R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: The slaughtering of the heifer by a lay Israelite is invalid [he added]: But I say, it is valid, for we do not find that slaughtering [of sacrifices] by a lay Israelite is invalid.

HE CAME TO HIS SECOND BULLOCK: Why is it that in the first confession he does not say ‘And the children of Aaron, Thy holy people’ and in the second confession he mentions: ‘The children of Aaron, Thy holy people’? — The school of R. Ishmael taught: Common sense dictates⁷ this: It is better that one innocent⁸ obtain atonement for the guilty, than that one guilty obtain atonement for the guilty.

MISHNAH. HE KILLED IT [THE BULLOCK] AND RECEIVED ITS BLOOD IN A BOWL. AND HE GAVE IT TO THE ONE WHO SHOULD STIR IT UP ON THE FOURTH TERRACE WITHIN THE SANCTUARY⁹ LEST IT CONGEAL.¹⁰ HE TOOK THE COAL-PAN AND WENT UP TO THE TOP OF THE ALTAR, CLEARING THE COALS TO BOTH SIDES, TOOK A PANFUL OF THE GLOWING CINDERS FROM BELOW, CAME DOWN AND PLACED THE COAL-PAN ON THE FOURTH TERRACE IN THE TEMPLE COURT.¹¹ ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD TAKE OUT [THE CINDERS] WITH A SILVER COAL-PAN, AND EMPTY IT INTO ONE OF GOLD, BUT THIS DAY HE TOOK THEM OUT WITH A GOLDEN [COAL-PAN] IN WHICH HE WAS TO BRING THEM. IN [THE INNER SANCTUARY] ON OTHER DAYS¹² HE WOULD TAKE THEM UP WITH A COAL-PAN CONTAINING FOUR KABS, AND EMPTY IT INTO ONE CONTAINING THREE KABS,¹³ THIS DAY HE TOOK THEM OUT WITH ONE CONTAINING THREE KABS, IN WHICH HE BRINGS OUGHT [THE CINDERS] IN, TOO. R. JOSE SAID: ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD TAKE THEM OUT WITH ONE CONTAINING ONE SE'AH, AND EMPTY IT INTO ONE CONTAINING THREE KABS, THIS DAY HE TOOK THEM OUT WITH ONE CONTAINING THREE KABS, IN WHICH HE ALSO BRINGS IN [THE CINDERS]. ON OTHER DAYS THE PAN WAS HEAVY, TODAY IT WAS LIGHT.¹⁴ ON OTHER DAYS ITS HANDLE WAS SHORT, TODAY IT WAS LONG.¹⁴ ON OTHER DAYS IT WAS OF YELLOWISH GOLD, TODAY OF RED GOLD. THIS IS THE STATEMENT OF R. MENAHEM. ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD OFFER HALF A MINA [OF INCENSE] IN THE MORNING AND HALF A MINA IN THE AFTERNOON, TODAY HE ADDS ALSO HIS TWO

HANDS FULL.¹⁵ EVERY DAY IT WAS FINE, BUT TODAY THE FINEST POSSIBLE.¹⁶ ON OTHER DAYS THE PRIESTS WOULD GO UP ON THE EAST SIDE OF THE RAMP¹⁷ AND COME DOWN ON THE WEST SIDE, TODAY THE HIGH PRIEST GOES¹⁸ UP IN THE MIDDLE AND COMES DOWN IN THE MIDDLE. R. JUDAH SAYS: THE HIGH PRIEST ALWAYS GOES UP IN THE MIDDLE AND COMES DOWN IN THE MIDDLE. ON OTHER DAYS THE HIGH PRIEST SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET FROM THE LAVER, THIS DAY FROM A GOLDEN LADLE. R. JUDAH SAYS: THE HIGH PRIEST ALWAYS SANCTIFIES HIS HANDS AND FEET FROM A GOLDEN LADLE. ON OTHER DAYS THERE WERE FOUR WOOD-PILES THERE,¹⁹ TODAY FIVE, THUS SAYS R. MEIR. R. JOSE SAYS: ON OTHER DAYS THREE, TODAY FOUR. R. JUDAH SAYS: ON OTHER DAYS TWO, TODAY THREE. GEMARA. But it is written: And there shall be no man in the tent of meeting?²⁰ R. Judah said: Read: Of the Hekal.²¹

Our Rabbis taught: ‘And there shall be no man in the tent of meeting’²²

(1) Tosaf s.v. Velo expresses amazement at the fact that the questioner overlooks the Tosefta, in which R. Judah actually does dispute the anonymous Mishnah. It is to be found in Parah XII, 8, which, as Tosaf suggests, the questioner may not have known the Mishnah containing no such dispute of R. Judah's.

(2) Num. XIX, 19.

(3) The word ‘tahir’ (a clean person) is superfluous, since Scripture just speaks of him, hence it must mean one who is clean again, hence was unclean before. The inference for a tebul-yom (v. Glos.) thus appears justified.

(4) Hence it is impossible to explain them on one schema, because of the particular condition of this chapter, but for the tradition, the inferences would appear incompatible.

(5) V. Glos. s.v. (b).

(6) I.e., it is not fit for the Academy, we cannot accept your report.

(7) Lit., ‘the norm of justice’.

(8) The high priest is adjudged innocent, after having besought and obtained forgiveness for himself.

(9) V. Gemara, loc. cit.

(10) Through being kept there until the time of the smoking of the incense.

(11) Now he would take the incense with his hands and place it in the golden pan.

(12) Tamid V, 5.

(13) This list will prove’ helpful: 1 log=6 eggs; 1 kab =4 logs; 1 se'ah =6 kabs.

(14) The lighter pan and the longer handle were to assist the high priest in his heavy labour on the Day of Atonement.

(15) Both the daily incense on the golden altar in the inner Sanctuary. and the special incense for the day — the latter on a golden pan — were on the Day of Atonement, offered up by the high priest alone.

(16) I.e., ground very thin, thus of finest quality. Ex. XXX, 36.

(17) To the outer altar there were no steps, but the ramp, built ‘In the south of the altar, covering nine cubits of height. The priests went up to the right and down to the left.

(18) Var. lec., ‘Today they went up etc.’ V. Gemara.

(19) Explanation in the Gemara.

(20) Lev. XVI, 17. How then could the priest stir the blood on the fourth terrace in the Sanctuary?

(21) I.e., the fourth terrace leading from the Sanctuary to the Court. v. Mid. III, 6.

(22) Lev. XVI, 17.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 44a

— one could assume, not even in the Temple Court, therefore it says: ‘in the tent of meeting’. I know [this prohibition] only for the tent of meeting in the wilderness. Whence do we know thereof for Shiloh and the everlasting Sanctuary? To teach us that [Scripture] says in the holy place. I know [the prohibition] only during the time of [the smoking of] the incense, whence [do I know that it applies also] during the time of the sprinkling of the blood? To teach us that, Scripture says: until he come out and have made atonement for himself. — I know it only at the [time of] his entering.

Whence do I learn at his coming forth? To teach us that it says: until he come out. And he shall have made atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the assembly of the house of Israel, i.e., the atonement for himself precedes that for his household, and the atonement for his household precedes that for his brethren, the priests and the atonement for his brethren, the priests, precedes that for all the assembly of Israel.

The Master said: I know [of the prohibition] only for the time of [the smoking of] the incense. How is this implied? — Raba, and thus also R. Isaac b. Abdimi, and thus also R. Eleazar said: Scripture says: ‘And he shall have made atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the assembly of the house of Israel’. What atonement is there which obtains evenly for himself, his household, his brethren, the priests, and the whole assembly of the house of Israel? It is the smoking of the incense. But does the incense obtain atonement? — Indeed, for R. Hananiah cited:¹ We learn that the incense obtains atonement for what was said: And he put on the incense and made atonement for the people.² And the School of R. Ishmael taught: Why does incense obtain atonement for [the sin] of the evil tongue [evil speech]? Let that which is [performed] in secret³ come and obtain atonement for what is committed in secret!

We have learnt elsewhere:⁴ People must keep away from the place between Ulam⁵ and altar at the time of the smoking of the incense. R. Eleazar said: This was taught only during the time of the smoking of the incense in the Sanctuary, but during the time the incense was smoked in the Holy of Holies, people had to keep away from the Hekal, but not from the place between the Ulam and the altar.

A. Adda b. Ahabah, or as some say, Kadi,⁶ raised the following objection: R. Jose says: ‘Just as they keep away from the place between Ulam and altar during the [smoking of] the incense, so do they keep away at the time of the sprinkling of the blood of the anointed priest's bullock,⁷ and of the bullock offered up because of an error of the congregation,⁸ and of the he-goats [offered up] because of idolatry.⁹ What gradation of sanctity is there, then, between the Hekal and the space between Ulam and altar? [None] except that from the Hekal men keep away both during the time of the smoking of the incense, and outside of the time of the smoking of the incense, but from the space between Ulam and altar people keep away only in the time of the incense. At any rate, at the time of the smoking of the incense, they do keep away.¹⁰ Would you not say [it means] during the time of the smoking [of the incense] in the Holy of Holies?¹¹ — No, [the reference is to the time of smoking] in the Hekal.¹² If so, [how explain] ‘what then is the gradation between the two places’ etc.? Is the above the only difference in gradation?¹³ Is there not also this difference: that from the Hekal they keep away during the time both of the smoking of the incense in the Hekal itself, and of the smoking of the incense in the Holy of Holies, whereas from the place between Ulam and altar they keep away only during the time of the smoking of the incense in the Hekal itself? — This [exactly] is what he teaches: ‘Except that from the Hekal men keep away, both during the time of the smoking of incense [in the Hekal] and outside of the time of the smoking of the incense [in the Hekal],¹⁴ but from the place between Ulam and altar they keep away

(1) ‘Ar. 16a.

(2) Num. XVII, 12.

(3) In the Holy of Holies, hence — since none but the high priest could enter it — ‘in secret’.

(4) Kel. I, 9.

(5) The hall leading to the interior of the Temple.

(6) Either the name of an otherwise unknown Amora, or ‘As the case may be’; or an anonymous Amora; or ‘a fictitious one’, cf. B.M. 2a.

(7) V. Lev. IV, 3ff.

(8) Lev. IV, 13ff.

(9) Num. XV, 24; traditionally interpreted as the sin of idolatry.

(10) Even from the space between the [Ulam and the altar.

(11) Which refutes R. Eleazar.

(12) But at the time of the incense smoking in the Holy of Holies they separate only from the Hekal but not from the space between Ulam and the altar.

(13) Lit., 'and no more'.

(14) I.e., when incense is offered in the Holy of Holies.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 44b

only in the time of the smoking of the incense [in the Hekal]. — But there is also this gradations that they keep away from the Hekal both during its own sanctification¹ and that of the Holy of Holies, whereas from the space between Ulam and altar they do not keep away except when the Hekal is being sanctified? — Raba said: The term 'keep away' includes it all in one.²

The Master said: So do they keep away at the time of the sprinkling of the blood of the anointed priest's bullock, and of the bullock offered up because of an error of the congregation, and of the he-goats offered up because of idolatry. Whence do we know that? — R. Pedath said: We infer that from the identity of the word 'atonement' [occurring also] with reference to the Day of Atonement.

R. Aha b. Ahabah said: Conclude from this that the gradations of sanctity³ are Biblical, and thus they have learnt them by tradition, for if it should enter your mind that they are only Rabbinical enactment, then what [in law] is the difference in the space between Ulam and altar [from which they must keep away] for fear that they might enter by accident, they should [analogically] keep away from the whole Temple Court out of fear that they might accidentally enter? — The space between Ulam and altar, since it is not marked off in any fashion, is not recognizable sufficiently, whereas the Temple Court, since there is the outer altar to mark it off, is sufficiently recognizable.⁴ Raba said: Conclude from this that the holiness of Ulam and Hekal is the same. For if it should enter your mind that they are of two different degrees of sanctity, then the sanctity of the Ulam itself is due only to rabbinic enactment; shall we then enact a preventive measure to prevent the violation of another preventive measure?⁵ — No, the Ulam and the space between Ulam and altar are of one degree of sanctity, the Hekal and the Ulam, however, are of two degrees of sanctity.

ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD TAKE THEM OUT WITH A SILVER COAL-PAN: What is the reason? The Torah has consideration for the money of Israel.⁶

TODAY HE TOOK THEM OUT WITH A GOLDEN PAN IN WHICH HE WAS TO BRING THEM IN: Why? [To prevent] weakness of the high priest.⁷

ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD TAKE THEM UP WITH A COAL-PAN CONTAINING FOUR KABS: A Tanna taught:⁸ One kab of the embers became scattered,⁹ and he swept it into the channel.¹⁰ One [Baraita] teaches one kab, and another two kabs? It is quite right according to the one which teaches 'one kab', for it is in accord with what the Rabbis said, but the one that taught 'two kabs' is in accord neither with the Rabbis nor with R. Jose?¹¹ — R. Hisda said: It is R. Ishmael, the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka, for it was taught: R. Ishmael, son of R. Johanan b. Beroka said: He brought [the cinders] in a pan containing two kabs. — R. Ashi said: You can also say that it is in accord with R. Jose and he said it thus: On other days he would take them up with a pan containing a se'ah of the wilderness,¹² and pour it into one containing three Jerusalem kabs.

ON OTHER DAYS THE PAN WAS HEAVY, TODAY IT WAS LIGHT: A Tanna taught: On other days it was of thick size, but this day it was thin.

ON OTHER DAYS ITS HANDLE WAS SHORT, TODAY LONG: Why that? So that the arm of the high priest may support it. A Tanna taught: On other days it had no covering,¹³ today it had one — this is the statement of the son of the Segan.¹⁴

ON OTHER DAYS ITS GOLD WAS YELLOWISH: R. Hisda said: There are seven kinds of gold:¹⁵ gold; good gold; gold of Ophir;¹⁶ fine¹⁷ gold; spun¹⁸ gold; locked¹⁹ gold; Parwayim²⁰ gold. Gold and good gold, as it is written:²¹ And the gold of that land is good. Ophir gold: [so called] because it derives from Ophir. Fine [mupaz] gold

(1) I.e., which would include also the sprinkling of blood.

(2) They both come under one head, independent of the particular rite which is the cause for the keeping away.

(3) Enumerated in Mishnah Kelim 1, 6 — 9.

(4) So as to prevent their entering by mistake, or accident.

(5) In Bez. 3a.

(6) Supra 39a.

(7) That is why he did not have to pour it into another pan. Having the whole heavy programme of the Day of Atonement on his shoulders, all legitimate relief is provided.

(8) V. Tamid 33a.

(9) When he emptied the coal-pan containing four kabs into one containing only three.

(10) V. Shek. IV, 2.

(11) According to whom three kabs would be scattered.

(12) Corresponding to six 'desert' or five Jerusalem kabs, the difference between the two being one sixth. The desert se'ah has five Jerusalem kabs and when the priest pours out three, two remain.

(13) A difficult word, obscure in etymology: variously translated as case, covering. v. Otzar ha-Geonim, ed. B.M. Lewin VI, 21: 'attachment', a contrivance to prevent the handle of the coal-pan from getting too hot. J.T. נרתיק, 'case', 'casket'.

(14) Perhaps the son of R. Hanina the Segan; perhaps also the last to hold this title, v. Bacher. Agada I, 55.

(15) Mentioned in the Bible.

(16) I Kings X, 11.

(17) Ibid. 18. Tosaf cites the J.T. explaining it to be gold without dross or alloy.

(18) Ibid. 16.

(19) Ibid. 21. The AJP Bible translates it 'pure' gold. 'Closed' to all dross, hence 'solid' would suit it as well.

(20) II Chron. III, 6, obviously the name of a place. The explanation here is homiletical.

(21) Gen. II, 12.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 45a

, because it resembles [the shining jewel] paz. Spun gold, because it is spun like a thread. Locked [rare] gold, because when its sale is opened, all other shops are being locked up.¹ Gold of Parwayim, because it looked like the blood of a bullock [par]. R. Ashi said: There are but five [varieties], each having gold and good gold. Thus was it also taught:² 'On other days the gold was yellowish, this day it was red and that was the Parwayim gold, which looks like the blood of a bullock.'

ON OTHER DAYS HE WOULD OFFER UP HALF [A MINA] ETC., ON OTHER DAYS IT WAS FINE, TODAY MOST FINE: Our Rabbis taught: Why was it necessary to state 'beaten small'³ since it is written already: And thou shalt beat some of it very small?⁴ It is but to intimate that it must be most fine. ON OTHER DAYS THE PRIESTS WOULD COME UP ON THE EASTERN SIDE OF THE RAMP: Because a master said: Any turn you make shall be but to the right, i.e., toward the east.⁵

BUT TODAY HE COMES UP IN THE MIDDLE, AND GOES DOWN IN THE MIDDLE: Why? To honour the high priest.⁶

ON ALL DAYS THE HIGH PRIEST SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET FROM THE LAVER etc.: Why? To honour the high priest.

ON OTHER DAYS THERE WERE FOUR WOOD-PILES THERE: Our Rabbis taught:⁷ On other days there were two wood-piles, today three; one for the big wood-pile; one for the second pile for the incense, and one which is added for this day;⁸ this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Jose said: On other days three, today four: one for the big wood-pile, one for the second pile of the incense, one to keep up the fire,⁹ and one which was added for this day. R. Meir said: On all days four and today five; one for the big wood-pile, one for the second pile for the incense, one to keep up the fire, and one for [the burning of] limbs and fat-pieces which had not been consumed on the eve, and one which was added on this day. At any rate all are agreed about two, whence do they know it? — Scripture says: It is that which goeth up on its firewood upon the altar all night,¹⁰ i.e., the big pile. And the fire of the altar shall be kept burning thereby,¹⁰ i.e., the second pile for the incense. Whence does R. Jose infer the [pile for] keeping up the fire? He infers that from: And the fire of the altar shall be kept burning thereby.¹⁰ And R. Judah? This [verse] refers to the kindling of the [splinters of] fig-wood,¹¹ for it was taught: R. Judah used to say: Whence do we know that the kindling of the fig-tree splinters must take place only on the top of the altar? To teach us that, it says: ‘And the fire of the altar shall be kept burning thereby’. R. Jose said: Whence do we know that a [special] pile is made up to keep the fire burning? To teach us that it says: ‘And the fire of the altar shall be kept burning thereby.’ But whence does R. Jose infer that the fig-tree splinters must be kindled [on the top of the altar]? — He infers it from whence R. Simeon infers it. For it was taught:¹² And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire on the altar¹³ — that teaches that the kindling of the fig-tree wood must be done by a priest and in a ministering vessel;¹⁴ thus, R. Judah. R. Simeon said to him: How could it enter your mind that a lay Israelite could come up to the altar? Rather does [this passage] teach that the kindling of the fig-wood must take place on the top of the altar. And R. Judah? If we had to infer it from there, we might assume he may stay on the ground and kindle it with bellows, therefore he informs us [as above]. Whence does R. Meir know about limbs and fat-pieces unconsumed from the eve before [requiring a special pile]?¹⁵ — He infers it from ‘And the fire’. And the Rabbis? — They do not interpret the ‘And’ [waw]. But, what, according to the Rabbis, does he do with the limbs and fat-pieces unconsumed from the eve before? — He returns them to the big pile, for it was taught: Whence do we know of limbs and fat-pieces unconsumed from the eve before

(1) For as long as such gold was obtainable in one shop, none would go to buy in any other.

(2) In support of the explanation of ‘Parwayim’.

(3) Lev. XVI, 12.

(4) Ex. XXX, 36, for all days of the year, therefore a minori for the Day of Atonement.

(5) [The ramp being on the southern side of the altar, by ascending on the eastern side of the ramp, the east of the altar, towards which he has turned is immediately on his right, thus obviating unnecessary movement in the Temple.]

(6) [As a mark of distinction he has the privilege of walking about freely in the Temple without restricting his movements to the minimum. Var. lec.: ‘They’ i.e., the high priest and those who accompany him as a mark of honour].

(7) V. Tosef. Yoma III.

(8) To take thence embers for the incense to be smoked in the Holy of Holies.

(9) In case the fire of the great pile did not keep up strong, one added fire from here.

(10) Lev. VI, 2.

(11) Whereby the big pile was lit,

(12) Supra 24b.

(13) Lev. I, 7.

(14) I.e., the priest must perform this in his priestly vestments.

(15) Since he uses the above passage for his own interpretation.

that he lays them in order on the altar, and if the latter cannot hold them, that he lays them on the ramp, or on the gallery,¹ until the great pile is made? To teach us that, Scripture says: Whereto the fire hath consumed the burnt-offering on the altar.² And R. Meir?³ — [This is to teach] you may place back [there] unconsumed parts of the ‘burnt-offering’, but you may not place there unconsumed parts of the incense, for R. Hanania b. Minumai, of the school of R. Eliezer b. Jacob, said [with reference to]: ‘whereto the fire hath consumed the burnt-offering on the altar’ — you place back unconsumed parts of the burnt-offering, but you do not place back unconsumed parts of the incense. At any rate all agree that one adds [an additional pile] on that day; whence do they infer that? — They infer that from: ‘And the fire’, for even he who does not expound a ‘waw’, expounds ‘waw he’ [and the].⁴ What does ‘Fire shall be kept burning upon the altar continually’⁵ mean? — It is required as it was taught: ‘Fire shall be kept burning on the altar continually’; it shall not go out — that teaches concerning the second pile for the incense that it shall be laid in order only on the outer altar.⁶ Whence do we know that about fire, for the coal-pan, [on the Day of Atonement] and for the candlestick?⁷ That can be inferred as follows: The word esh [fire] is mentioned in connection with the incense,⁸ and the same word is mentioned in connection with coal-pan and candlestick; hence just as the former comes upon the outer altar, so do the latter come upon the outer altar. Or turn this way⁹ [perhaps]: the word esh [fire] is mentioned in connection with incense and is also mentioned in connection with coal-pan and candlestick; just as for the former it comes [for the altar] ‘near to it’,¹⁰ so for the latter it comes [from the altar] near to it.¹¹ To teach us [the right law] Scripture says: ‘Fire shall be kept burning on the altar,’ it shall not go out i.e., the continual fire whereof I spoke¹² to you must be nowhere else but on the top of the outer altar. We thus learned it for the fire of the candlestick, whence do we know it for the fire of the coal-pan? This can be inferred: [The word] ‘esh’ [fire] is stated in connection with the coal-pan, and ‘esh’ is used in connection with the candlestick, hence just as the former comes from the outer altar, so does the latter come from the outer altar. But, perhaps turn this way: [the word] ‘esh’ is mentioned in reference to the incense, and ‘esh’ is used in connection with the coal-pan; hence just as the former comes from [the altar] near to it, so the latter too comes from [the altar] near to it. Therefore it says: And he shall take a censer full of coals of fire from off the altar before the Lord¹³ Now which altar is [only] partly before the Lord, but not wholly before the Lord? You must say it is the outer altar.¹⁴

Now it was necessary [for Scripture] to mention both ‘from off the altar’ and from ‘before the Lord’. For if the Divine Law had written only ‘from off the altar’ I might have said: That ‘altar’ means the inner altar, hence the Divine Law said: ‘from before the Lord.’¹⁵ And if the Divine Law had written: ‘From before the Lord’ [alone], I might have said it must be exactly before the Lord,¹⁶

(1) The sobeb v. Glos.

(2) Lev. VI, 3. This is superfluous in view of the preceding ‘it is that which goeth up on its firewood’, hence the derivation.

(3) How does he explain this verse.

(4) As in this case where it is written ‘and the fire’ a superfluous letter may have some intimation, two unnecessary ones must have it.

(5) Lev. VI, 6.

(6) ‘The altar’ in the cited verse referring to the outer altar.

(7) I.e., that they are to be fetched from the other altar.

(8) According to Rashi the word ‘esh’ is not really mentioned, but implied: he shall smoke it ‘and there can be no smoke without fire’; but Tosaf. cites Num. XVI, 18, where the word fire is actually explicit in connection with incense.

(9) I.e., argue thus; a suggestion opposed to the preceding one is occasionally introduced by this composite word.

(10) The inner altar is in the neighbourhood of the outer altar.

(11) I.e., the inner altar which is nearest to the candlestick and the Holy of Holies.

(12) I.e., the perpetual light of the candlestick, v. Ex. XXVII, 20.

(13) Lev. XVI, 12.

(14) Since the inner altar is entirely facing the inner Sanctuary.

(15) 'Mi-lifne' — 'from before' is taken to mean 'only part of the altar is before the Lord.'

(16) I.e., just opposite the entrance of the Sanctuary.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 46a

but not to one side or to the other,¹ therefore it was necessary [to have both phrases].

R. Eleazar said in the name of Bar Kappara: R. Meir used to say: For any of the limbs of the [daily] burnt-offering which remained over,² a special pile is to be arranged, even on the Sabbath. What is he teaching us? Have we not learnt: Every day there were four piles of wood there?³ — R. Abin said: It was necessary [to state it] for those which became [somewhat] invalidated.⁴ [This however] is only when the fire has already touched them, but not when the fire has not taken hold of them. Some there are who say: Whether they were valid or invalid⁴ [the same rule applies]: If the fire had touched them, a special pile is needed but if not, not. [You say] 'Even on the Sabbath'. [Surely] we have learnt thus: AND TODAY FIVE [PILES OF WOOD]!⁵ — R. Aha b. Jacob said: It was necessary [to mention that]. The thought might have arisen in you that this applied only when the Day of Atonement fell [immediately] after Sabbath, because the fat-pieces of the Sabbath may be offered up on the Day of Atonement, but not [if it fell] in the middle of the week, therefore he informs us [that it applies then too].

Raba said: Who is it that does not care what flour he grinds?⁶ Have we not learnt: On all other days?⁷ [These were four]-This is a real difficulty. Now he [Bar Kappara] disputes with R. Huna who holds: The continual offering suspends the Sabbath only at its beginning, but not at its end.⁸

[To turn to] the main text: The continual offering suspends the Sabbath only at its beginnings not at its end. What does it not suspend? — R. Hisda says: It suspends the Sabbath, but not the law of levitical impurity. Rabbah said: It suspends the law of levitical impurity,⁹ but not the Sabbath. Said Abaye to Rabbah: There is a difficulty on your view as well as on the view of R. Hisda. According to you, there is a difficulty: Why does it suspend the law of levitical impurity? Because Scripture said: In its due season¹⁰ i.e., even in levitical uncleanness, [it should suspend also] the Sabbath, [since] 'in its due season' [implies] even on the Sabbath? — And according to R. Hisda there is a difficulty. Wherefore the difference [in law in the case of] Sabbath touching which it is written: 'In its due season' [i.e.] even on the Sabbath; the same should apply to levitical impurity, since 'In its due season' [implies] even in levitical uncleanness.¹¹ He answered: There is no difficulty according to my view, nor is there any difficulty according to R. Hisda. There is no difficulty on my view; for the beginning is like the end

(1) Though it is on the western side of the altar.

(2) I.e., the limbs had been only partly consumed.

(3) One of which was meant for the limbs of the burnt-offering of the Temple, which remained over.

(4) I.e., Only in so far that they were not to be offered at the altar at the outset, though once they had been brought upon the altar they could be allowed to remain there to be consumed.

(5) And the same regulation governs both the Sabbath and the Day of Atonement, and it was taught that for the limbs of the continual dusk-offering a special pile was established on the Day of Atonement.

(6) I.e., does not care what argument he offers. Just as one who does not care what flour he grinds, will hurt his body through indigestible food, so will one who is not sensitive to careless thinking in his study, hurt his mind. V. Lewin, Otzar VI, 55, 170.-D.S. adduces a reading from the Aruk, 'he does not care what comes before him', i.e., he ignores texts in theorizing.

(7) Which includes the Sabbath.

(8) This offering is sacrificed on the Sabbath day, notwithstanding the fact that the labour involved many kinds of work expressly forbidden on that day. But only at the beginning. i.e., if the beginning of that sacrifice has to be made on the Sabbath. Of the Friday dusk-offering, however, the limbs must be smoked before the Sabbath. Since it belongs to Friday it would be desecration to continue it on the Sabbath.

(9) Cf. supra 6b.

(10) Num. XXVIII, 2.

(11) For if no clean priest is present to sprinkle the blood, even one in the state of levitical uncleanness is permitted to do so.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 46b

[consequently] in the case of the law of levitical impurity, since it is suspended at the beginning it is also suspended at the end, but with regard to the Sabbath, since it is not suspended at the beginning¹ it is also not suspended at the end. Nor is there any difficulty according to R. Hisda: He does not hold that the end is like the beginning: [consequently] with regard to the Sabbath, since it is inoperative when a community sacrifice is concerned, it is suspended also at the end of the sacrifice, whereas as regards the law of levitical uncleanness, since in the face of a community sacrifice it is only suspended,² it is suspended only at the beginning which is essential for [the obtainment of] atonement, but not at the end, which is not essential for atonement.

It was stated: If one puts out the fire of the coal-pan or of the candlestick, Abaye holds him guilty,³ Raba holds him not guilty. If he put it out on the top of the altar, all agree that he is guilty, they dispute it only if he brought it down to the ground and put it out there. Abaye holds him guilty 'because it is fire of the altar'; whereas Raba holds him guilty, 'since he snatched it away, he has snatched it'.⁴ According to whose opinion will be, then, what R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: 'One who takes an ember down from the altar and puts it out is guilty' shall we say it will be in accord with Abaye?⁵ — You may also say that it is in accord with Raba, for in the one case it was not snatched away' for its ordained use,⁶ in the other case it was snatched away' from the altar for its ordained use.

Some there are who say: None disputes the case where he took it down to the floor and put it out there, [all agreeing] that he is not guilty, the dispute concerns but the case where he put it out on the top of the altar. Abaye holds he is guilty 'because it is the top of the altar', whereas Raba holds him guilty, 'since he snatched it away, he has snatched it'. According to whose opinion, then, will be the teaching of R. Nahman in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha viz.: 'One who brings an ember down from the altar and puts it out is guilty', — will you not say it will be in accord with neither Abaye nor Raba? — [No], there it was not snatched away for its ordained use, here it was snatched away' for its ordained use. [

(1) The Friday dusk-offering must be offered before Sabbath since the blood of the offering would become useless, invalidated, if not sprinkled before sunset.

(2) Only 'with difficulty' but never imperative, every attempt must be made to prepare the sacrifice in levitical cleanness. V. Supra 7b.

(3) Of having transgressed the prohibition: 'It shall not go out' i.e., it must not be put out, Lev. VI, 6.

(4) And it has lost its sacred character, hence what he put out on the floor was no more a coal sanctified on the altar whence he does not become guilty of transgressing the prohibition.

(5) The adopted opinion in disputes between Abaye and Raba is in the overwhelming majority in accord with Raba, whence the question as to the meaning of his teaching an invalid opinion. V. B.M. 22b.

(6) To place it in the coal-pan.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 47a

CHAPTER V

MISHNAH. THEY BROUGHT OUT TO HIM THE LADLE AND THE PAN. [FROM THE LATTER] HE TOOK HIS TWO HANDS FULL [OF INCENSE] AND PUT IT INTO THE LADLE, A TALL [HIGH PRIEST] ACCORDING TO HIS SIZE, A SHORT ONE ACCORDING TO HIS SIZE AND THUS WAS ITS MEASURE. HE TOOK THE PAN¹ IN HIS RIGHT [HAND] AND THE LADLE IN HIS LEFT [HAND].

GEMARA. THE PAN? But was it not taught:² He took the pan and went up to the top of the altar, took out the burning coals, and went down? — There the reference is to the pan of burning coals, here to the pan of the incense. For it was taught:³ One brought out for him the empty ladle from the Cell of Vessels, and the heaped pan of incense from the Cell of the House of Abtinah.⁴

HE TOOK HIS TWO HANDS FULL AND PUT IT INTO THE LADLE, A TALL [HIGH PRIEST] ACCORDING TO HIS SIZE, A SHORT ONE ACCORDING TO HIS SIZE AND THUS WAS ITS MEASURE: For what purpose was the ladle on the Day of Atonement necessary? Surely the Divine Law said: [And he shall take] his hands full and bring it⁵ — Because [otherwise] it is impossible.⁶ For how shall he do it? Shall he bring in [the pan of burning coals] and then again bring in [the incense]?⁷ The Divine Law refers to one 'bringing in', not to two 'bringings in'. — Shall he take the incense in his handfuls and place the pan⁸ [of burning coals] on top of it, entering thus? Then when he comes [within the veil] how shall he act? Shall he take it between his teeth and set the pan [of burning coals] down? Now, if such procedure is unseemly in the presence of a mortal king, how much less seemly is it before the Supreme King of Kings, the Holy One, blessed be He? — Thus it is impossible and since it is impossible, we do it as we find it in connection with the [offerings of the] princes.⁹

He took the pan¹⁰ in his right hand and the censer into his left hand.¹¹ 'The native below and the alien in the heavens above?' This one [the ladle] is small, the other [coal-pan] large,¹² and even where both are alike, as with R. Ishmael b. Kimhith, the one is hot and the other cold. It was reported about R. Ishmael b. Kimhith that he was able to take four kabs in his two handfuls, saying: All women are valiant but the valour of my mother exceeded them all.¹³ Some interpret it¹⁴ as referring to the crumb-dough,¹⁵ in accord with Rabbah b. Jonathan who said in the name of R. Yehiel that crumb-dough is very helpful to a sick person. Others say it refers to the [healthy] semen [she received], in accordance with what R. Abbuha asked. For he raised a contradiction: It is written: For thou hast sifted¹⁶ me with strength unto the battle¹⁷ but it is also written, Who has girded me with valour [for the battle]¹⁸ [to interpret the divergence thus]: David said before the Holy One, blessed be He: Lord of the Universe, Thou hast [first] 'carefully sifted' and then strengthened me. It was told of R. Ishmael b. Kimhith¹⁹ that one day he talked in the street to an Arab, and spittle from his mouth flew on his garments,²⁰ whereupon his brother Jeshebab entered and ministered in his stead. Thus their mother saw²¹ two high priests on one day. Furthermore, it is told of R. Ishmael b. Kimhith that he went out and talked with a certain lord²² in the street, and spittle from his mouth squirted on his garments, whereupon Joseph his brother entered and ministered in his stead so that their mother saw two high priests²¹ on one day. The Sages said unto her: What hast thou done to merit such [glory]? She said: Throughout the days of my life the beams of my house have not seen the plaits of my hair.²³ They said to her: There were many who did likewise and yet did not succeed.²⁴

Our Rabbis taught: with his fists²⁵, that means that he must not make a measure for his fistful.²⁶ The question was: How about making a measure for his handfuls? Is it only there²⁵ since it is written, 'With his fist',²⁷ whereas here²⁸ where it is not written 'With his handfuls' but 'his hand full of fine incense,' [it matters] not,²⁹ or does he derive [the meaning of] 'full' from [the word], full'

[occurring in connection with] his fist?³⁰ — Come and hear: AND THUS WAS ITS MEASURE'. Would you not say that it means: If he wishes to make a measure he may do so?³¹ — No, this is what it means: In the same manner would he take the hands full within the Holy of Holies.³² May not you then conclude from this that he takes the handfuls [outside] and repeats it inside again! — [No], perhaps it means that if he wants to have a measure made, he may do so;³³ or, that he must take neither less nor more.³⁴

Our Rabbis taught: His fistfull.³⁵ One might have assumed that it may come forth on both sides, therefore Scripture says: 'With his fist'.³⁶ From 'With his fist' I might have inferred that he should just take some with his finger-tips hence Scripture says: His fistful', i.e., in the manner in which people take a fistful. How so? He bends three of his fingers³⁷ up to his wrist and takes a fistful.

-
- (1) V. Gemara.
 - (2) Infra 48b.
 - (3) Ibid.
 - (4) V. supra.
 - (5) Lev. XVI, 12.
 - (6) To perform the rite without the ladle.
 - (7) In his handfuls.
 - (8) Shall he put the pan on the incense and enter.
 - (9) Num. VII, 14; One ladle . . . full of incense.
 - (10) This refers to the pan of burning coal.
 - (11) This is illogical for the ladle with the incense should be in his right hand and the less important pan in the left.
 - (12) Hence the heavier of the two, and therefore carried in the right hand.
 - (13) Lit., 'has ascended to the roof'. She has taken exceedingly good care of her children. The phrase is reminiscent of Prov. XXXI, 29. הַרְרָה may be interpreted as valour (Jast.); as vine (Aruch) or bundles of green (R. Han.) i.e., children.
 - (14) The mother's valour or the children's power.
 - (15) Which she ate during her pregnancy or on which she fed her children.
 - (16) With reference to his inner constitution. E.V. 'girded me'.
 - (17) II Sam. XXII, 40.
 - (18) Ps. XVIII, 33. The texts of II Sam. XXII and Ps. XVIII are almost identical, hence changes or deviations must have a definite idea underlying each. 'Sifted' is an ad hoc interpretation. The words 'for the battle' are not found in Ps. XVIII, 33.
 - (19) Tosaf. Yoma III.
 - (20) It was on the day of Atonement, he was to minister as high priest and the spittle defiled and thus prevented him from officiating.
 - (21) Both her sons.
 - (22) In the Tosaf. the reading is 'a king' and the incident reported to have occurred on the eve of the Day of Atonement.
 - (23) Especially a married woman would always cover her hair, as a sign of modesty. [Buchler (JQR. 1926) p. 8 identifies this high priest with Simeon (Ishmael) the son of Kamithos who was appointed by Gratus in the year 17-18.] The sight of a married woman's hair is an impropriety. Git. 90a.
 - (24) In obtaining such distinction. Your suggestion is insufficient.
 - (25) Lev. VI, 8.
 - (26) I.e., he must not use a measure instead of his fist.
 - (27) I.e., with his fist only, not with a measure.
 - (28) Lev. XVI, 12.
 - (29) Does the prohibition of using a measure not apply here.
 - (30) V. Lev. II, 2; the word 'full' written thus implies prohibition of an artificial measure. By inference from the identity of phrase the same may be assumed to apply here.
 - (31) This may be explained to refer to the ladle, to mean that one could have a measure made in accord with the high priest's size of hand.
 - (32) The Mishnah here means: And this was the method of measurement within; i.e., the priest would empty incense from the ladle into his hands and then put it over the burning coals in the pan.

(33) I.e., one cannot conclude from the Mishnah either way.

(34) Thus was the measure-two exact hands full-rigidly so.

(35) Lev. II, 2.

(36) Lev. VI, 8. No more, just as much as the closed fist will contain.

(37) Grasping with them.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 47b

In the case of the [meal-offering baked in a] griddle and the [meal-offering of the] stewing-pan¹ he makes it even with his thumb from above and with his small finger from below. And this was the most difficult service in the Sanctuary. [You say] 'this is'; and nothing else? Was there not the pinching of the bird's head² and was there not the taking of the fistfuls?³ - But say, rather, this was one of the difficult priestly functions in the Sanctuary. — R. Johanan said: R. Joshua b. Uza'ah asked: How about that which is between [the fingers of the fist]?⁴ -R. Papa answered: That which is inside needs no question for it surely belongs to the fistful. Concerning that which is on the outside, too, there is no doubt, it surely is considered a remainder.⁵ The question attaches only to such portions as are in between [the fingers]. How about these? — Said R. Johanan: R. Joshua b. Uza'ah had subsequently solved [the question] viz., concerning [the portion] in between, uncertainty prevails.⁶ How then shall he act?-R. Hanina said: He shall burn [as an offering] first the fistful and then the portions in between [the fingers]. For, if we were to burn up [the 'in between' portions] first, perhaps they are considered remainders, and it would thus be a case where the remainders became reduced between the taking of the fistful and the burning [of it on the altar], whereas the Master has said⁷ that if remainders became reduced between the taking of the fistful and the burning thereof no more fistfuls may be burnt up on their account! If that be so, then even now apply thereto the rule:⁸ Whatever had partly been used in fire offering must no more be burnt [as an offering]?⁹ Said R. Judah, son of R. Simeon b. Pazzi: He burns them [the remainders] up as wood, in accord with R. Eliezer, for it was taught:¹⁰ R. Eliezer said: For a sweet savour,¹¹ for this you must not bring them up but you may bring them up as fuel. This will be in accord with R. Eliezer, but what is there to be said in accord with the Sages?¹² R. Mari said: Fat priests¹³ take the fistful. Now that you have come to this answer, according to R. Eliezer, too, [there is a procedure which may be adopted] at the outset,¹⁴ viz., fat priests should take the fistful. R. Papa inquired: How about the middle [portions] 'in between' connection with the [two] hands full?¹⁵ — What is he inquiring about? If he derives [the meaning of the word] 'full' from 'full' [occurring] there¹⁶ it is the same [as the first question].¹⁷ — This is what R. Papa asks: [Should we say that] we require that 'he shall bring it his hands full',¹⁸ which is the case here, or is it required that he take...bring in, which is not the case here?¹⁹ — The question remains unanswered.

R. Papa said: It is obvious to me that 'his fistful' means: In the manner in which people usually take a fistful, but R. Papa asked: If he had taken the 'fistful' with his finger-tips, what is the law then, or [if he took it] from below upward, or from the sides, what then? — The questions remain unanswered.

R. Papa said: It is obvious to me that the 'handfuls' are to be taken as men usually take them, but he asked: If he took the 'handfuls' with his finger-tips, what then? or from below upward, or from the side; or if he swept it with one hand and with the other and then brought the hands together? — The questions remain unanswered.

(1) V. Lev. II, 5 and 7.

(2) Zeb. 64b, based on Lev. V, 8.

(3) The priest's taking of the handfuls of incense, Lev. XVI, 12, v. infra 49b.

(4) Is it considered part of the fistful to be offered on the altar, or the remnant which went to the priests?

- (5) Belonging to the priests.
- (6) As to where they are to belong.
- (7) Men. 9a.
- (8) Men. 58a.
- (9) An interpretation of Lev. II, 12. And since he first burns up the fistful he should not be permitted to burn up after that the remainders as an offering.
- (10) Zeb. 77b.
- (11) Lev. II, 12, on which the rule cited last is based.
- (12) Who extend the prohibition even against burning them as fuel (v. Zeb. 77b). What is one therefore to do with the portions 'in between'.
- (13) Whose fingers are fat without any space between them for any quantity to get in.
- (14) The proposal to burn it as fuel is even according to R. Eliezer not one which is to be adopted at the outset, v. Zeb. ibid.
- (15) Sc. of incense offered on the Day of Atonement.
- (16) I.e., in connection with the fistful; just as with the fistful any heaping is not burnt up as offering, the same would apply to heapings of the two hands full. The analogy based on the use of the word 'full' in both Lev. II, 2, which refers to the first, as in ibid. XVI, 12, which deals with the two hands full.
- (17) Asked supra, whether a measure may be made for the hands full.
- (18) Lit., 'his hands full... and he shall bring' v. Lev. XVI, 12.
- (19) For he has not placed it between his fingers, it having entered there by itself, hence the required personal effort-and he shall take it-was absent.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 48a

R. Papa asked: If he stuck the fistful on to the side of the vessel, what then? Does the law require that it be put into the middle of the vessel, which is the case here, or must it be placed inside the vessel properly, and this was not done in our case? — The question remains unanswered.

Mar, the son of R. Ashi asked: If he overturned the vessel and placed the fistful on the bottom of the vessel, how then? Does the law require placing it in the vessel, which was done here, or is it to be placed properly, which has not been done? The question remains unanswered.

R. Papa asked: With regard to the 'handfuls' are they to be heaped or levelled?-R. Abba said to R. Ashi: Come and hear: The 'handfuls' whereof they spoke are to be neither levelled, nor heaped, but liberally measured. — We learned elsewhere:¹ If the blood was poured out on the pavement² and he gathered it up, it is invalidated. But if it was poured out of the vessel on the pavement and he gathered it up, it is usable. Whence do we know this?³ — For the Rabbis taught: And [the anointed priest] shall take of the blood of the bullock,⁴ i.e., from the blood of life⁵ and not from the blood of the skin, nor from the last blood oozing out.⁶ 'From the blood of the bullock' i.e., the blood from the bullock shall he receive [straight]. For if you were to interpret from the blood of the bullock' [as meaning] 'from the blood⁷ i.e.' even if only part of the blood, has not Rab Judah said: He who receives the blood must receive the whole of the bullock's blood, as it is said: And all the remaining blood of the bullock shall he pour out at the base of the altar,⁸ hence it is evident from here that from the blood of the bullock' must be interpreted as 'blood from the bullock [straight]';⁹ he¹⁰ holding the view: One may remove [a letter] and add [one] and thus interpret.¹¹

R. Papa asked: If the incense was scattered from his handfuls, how then? Is his hand to be compared to the neck of the animal¹² so that the incense would be invalidated, or is it to be compared to a ministering vessel and thus is not invalidated? — The question remains unanswered.

R. Papa asked further: If, in taking the handfuls of the incense, he had an [unlawful] intention,¹³ what then? Do we say that we infer [the meaning] of 'full' [by analogy of] 'full' occurring with the meal-offering,¹⁴ [viz.,] as in that case an [unlawful] intention effects an invalidation, so here too, an unlawful intention will effect an invalidation, or is it not so?-R. Shimi b. Ashi said to R. Papa: Come and hear: R. Akiba added [the cases of]¹⁵ the fine flour, the incense, the balm, and the embers [of the sanctuary]. that if a tebul yom¹⁶ had touched part of them, he invalidated all of them.¹⁷ Now the assumption is that since a tebul yom invalidates them¹⁸ so does their being kept overnight,¹⁹ and since their being kept overnight invalidates them, so does unlawful intention.²⁰

R. Papa asked:

-
- (1) Zeb. 25a.
 - (2) Before having been received into a vessel, as prescribed.
 - (3) That it is necessary for the blood to flow from the neck of the animal straight into a vessel.
 - (4) Lev. IV, 5.
 - (5) The blood coming forth in a jet, with which life leaves the body of the animal.
 - (6) Of the vein which was cut.
 - (7) The Hebrew words are Mi-dam ha-par, 'From the blood of the bullock'. The 'mi' has partitive meaning-'from the blood', part of it, not all of it.
 - (8) Lev. IV, 7.
 - (9) Meaning not from the skin, the vein, but that which is the bullock's life, with the jetting away of which his life too is gone.
 - (10) The Tanna of the cited Baraitha.
 - (11) In order to remove a contradiction. This interpretation involves a change in the Hebrew text. Instead of מִדָּם הַפָּר the ad hoc reading is: דָּם מֵהַפָּר Involving a removal of one letter from the first word and its addition to the second word.
 - (12) When the blood flows from the neck of the animal to the pavement, instead of being received in a vessel, it is invalidated. Does the same law apply when the incense is scattered?
 - (13) An intention at the moment of slaying to eat of the flesh beyond the allotted time renders the animal in question 'a vile thing' (Zeb. 25a). If the priest has similar intention, i.e., to offer up the incense tomorrow instead of today, would the same consequence ensue for the incense?
 - (14) V. supra p. 223.
 - (15) V. Hag. 23b, Sonc. ed., for notes.
 - (16) One who has bathed in daytime but must await the sunset to be perfectly clean. V. Lev. XXII, 7.
 - (17) The vessel of ministry combining the various constituent parts of the flour etc., as one. V. Hag., Sonc. ed., 23b for notes.
 - (18) Through the union effected by the vessel of ministry.
 - (19) In virtue of the fact that they were contained in a vessel of ministry. V Me'il. 10a.
 - (20) I.e., since the incense by being placed in a vessel of ministry received a holy character in respect of contact with a tebul yom, and being kept overnight, it becomes invalidated through unlawful intention.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 48b

If he, in removing the coals [for the incense], had an unlawful intention — what then? Are preliminary¹ means of a religious act to be considered as the act itself or not? — The question remains unsolved.

The question was asked of R. Shesheth: If the blood was carried [to the altar] in the left hand, what is the law?² R. Shesheth answered: You have learnt it: He took the pan of burning coals in his right hand and the ladle in his left.³ But he could have settled that point to them from what we have learnt:⁴ [He carried] the right hind-leg in the left hand with the inside of the skin outward?⁵ — If the argument were based on that I might have assumed this applies only to a carrying [of such things] which are not indispensable to atonement,⁵ but in the case of a carrying [of things] which are indispensable to atonement,⁶ [it would] not [apply], therefore he has to bring [the above reference].⁷

-
- (1) So that his unlawful thought in connection with the preliminary act would have the same effect as such thought in connection with the religious act in itself and so the incense is rendered invalidated. Another interpretation would limit the effects of his unlawful intention to the preliminary act, here to the embers.
- (2) All the other rites in connection with the blood sprinkling must be performed with the right. V. Zeb. 16b and 24a.
- (3) Whence we may infer that even in this case he is within the law.
- (4) Tam. IV, 3.
- (5) I.e., the carrying of the limbs.
- (6) E.g., the carrying of the blood to the place of sprinkling.
- (7) Referring to the incense which is indispensable to atonement.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 49a

They raised the following objection:¹ A lay Israelite, an onen,² one inebriate or one with a blemish are invalidated for the receiving, the carrying, and the sprinkling of the blood, and so is one seated, and the left hand. This is a refutation. — But R. Shesheth himself has asked this question in refutation!³ For R. Shesheth said to the Amora⁴ of R. Hisda who asked of R. Hisda: May the blood be carried by a lay Israelite? He answered: It is proper and a scriptural verse supports me: And they killed the passover lamb, and the priests dashed⁵ of their hand, and the Levites flayed them.⁶ And R. Shesheth raised this question: A lay Israelite, a mourner, an inebriate, or one blemished are invalidated for the receiving, the carrying, or the sprinkling of the blood, and so is one seated and the left hand!⁷ -After having heard it, he raised it in objection [against R. Hisda]. But R. Hisda had cited a scriptural passage [in support]? — They served only the purpose of a portico.⁸

R. Papa asked: If another⁹ [priest] took his hands full and put it into his [the high priest's] hands — how then? Is what we require that it be 'his hands full' which we have here, or is it required that he both 'take [his hands full] and bring it in', which was not the case here? — The question remains unsolved. R. Joshua b. Levi asked: If he had taken his hands full and then died, what about someone else entering [within the Holy of Holies] with his [the first one's] handfuls? — Said R. Hanina: This is a question of the older generation!¹⁰ Shall we say that R. Joshua b. Levi was older?¹¹ But R. Joshua b. Levi had said: R. Hanina permitted me to drink a cress-dish¹² on the Sabbath? [You say] to drink? That is self-evident, for we have learnt:¹³ One may eat all kinds of food for a remedy, and one may drink every kind of drink as a medicine? — Rather to grind and to drink cress-dish on the Sabbath. What case do you mean? If it be a case of danger, surely it is allowed;¹⁴ and if the case be without danger, it surely is forbidden?¹⁵ -In truth the case referred to is one dangerous and this is how the question ran: Does it cure so that one may for this purpose desecrate the Sabbath, or does it not effect a cure so that one may not desecrate the Sabbath in connection with it? And why was it R. Hanina?¹⁶ — Because he was familiar with medicine, for R. Hanina said:¹⁷ Never did a man consult me concerning a wound inflicted by a white mule and recover. But we see that people recover?-Say: And it was cured.¹⁸ -But we see them cured?-The reference here is to red mules, the end of whose feet is white. — At any rate we learn from here that R. Hanina was the older one?¹⁹ -Rather, this is what he said: Our question is like one of the former generation.²⁰ But did R. Hanina express such a view?²¹ Did not R. Hanina say: With a bullock,²² i.e., but not with the blood of a bullock;²³ and, furthermore, was it not R. Hanina who said: If he took the hands full of the incense before the slaying of the of the bullock, he has done nothing?²⁴ — This is what he [R. Hanina] said: Since he²⁵ asks the question, the inference is justified that he holds 'With a bullock' includes also 'with the bullock's blood'; now, according to [this] his view, his question is like the question of an older generation. — What about that?²⁶ — R. Papa said: If [we say that] he takes the handful first and then must take it again,²⁷ then his fellow may enter with his hafinah,²⁸ because the hafinah is still the same; but if [we say] that he takes the handfuls once but does not take them again, then your question arises. Said R. Huna son of R. Joshua to R. Papa: On the contrary! If [we say that he] performs the hafinah twice, none else should enter with his hafinah, because it is impossible that the second take not either a bit less [than the handfuls of the first]²⁹ or a bit more; but [if we say that] he performs only one hafinah, does your question arise. For the question had been raised: Must he perform the hafinah twice?- Come and hear: AND SUCH WAS ITS MEASURE. Now does not that mean that as the measure in the outside hafinah, so was it in the hafinah within the Holy of Holies? — No, perhaps the meaning here is that if he wanted to make a measure he could do so, or, that he must not take either more or less in the one case than in the other.³⁰ Come and hear:

(1) Zeb. 16a.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) Hence he obviously knew the Mishnah, how then could he have given the wrong answer!

(4) V. Glos. s.v. (b).

(5) II Chron. XXXV, 11.

(6) I.e., the blood which they received at the altar side from those who killed the passover, namely, lay Israelites who are fit for slaughtering sacrifices, v. Supra 43a.

(7) Which shows that R. Shesheth knew of the Mishnah disqualifying the carrying with the left hand, how then did he solve the question put to him contrariwise.

(8) The laymen served only the purpose of a portico, holding the bowls up to view, but not handing them to the altar.

(9) Lit., 'his fellow'.

(10) The fact that this question asked by a teacher of the older generation has been also put by myself is an implicit compliment to our learning; R. Joshua b. Levi being of the older generation.

(11) The older of the two scholars. Hence Hanina's remark about the 'older generation'.

(12) 'Drink' because usually mixed with wine or oil.

(13) Shab. 109b.

(14) And is not in need of any special argument for dispensation.

(15) And no effort to permit it would be legitimate.

(16) Of whom the question was asked.

(17) Hul. 7a.

(18) The first interpretation referred to the person injured by the mule,' the second to the wound.

(19) Since R. Joshua refers to Hanina as 'R. Hanina', one must assume that the former cannot have been older, for in that case he would have called him by his first name, Instead of saying 'R. Hanina etc.'

(20) He said to his pupils: This question of yours has been already asked by older scholars than you, viz., R. Joshua b. Levi, and it remained unsolved.

(21) Did he himself doubt as to whether the high priest may enter the Holy of Holies with the handfuls of incense that had been taken by someone else.

(22) Lev. XVI, 3.

(23) I.e., one priest must both slay the bullock and enter the Holy of Holies with its blood. This interpretation excludes the possibility of one's entering with the blood of a bullock slain by someone else.

(24) The ministration is invalid and must be repeated in proper form and order, infra 60b. As the taking of the hands full must not be performed before, but after the slaying of the bullock, the first high priest must have slain his bullock and the one who takes his place must slay another bullock, it is evident that he cannot use the handfuls taken by the first high priest, which took place before the slaying of the second bullock. Hence it seems impossible that R. Hanina could have asked the question attributed to him here.

(25) Since R. Joshua asked the question, he must hold that the second priest need not bring another bullock, for if that were his view, the taking of the handful of the incense before the slaying of the bullock would have been invalidated. Hence the apposite remark that others of an earlier generation who, in opposition to him hold that 'with a bullock' includes even 'with the blood of his bullock' have already asked the question.

(26) The original question: If a priest had taken the hands full of incense and thereupon had died, may another enter with his 'handfuls'?

(27) Within the Holy of Holies, v. infra and supra 47a.

(28) The handfuls taken by the high priest. V. Glos.

(29) As not all handfuls of people are of the same capacity.

(30) v. supra 47a and notes.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 49b

How does he do it?¹ He takes hold of the dish² with his finger-tips according to some with his teeth — and pulls it with his thumb until it reaches his elbows, then he turns it over in his hands and heaps up the incense in order that its smoke may come up slowly; some say he scatters it in order that its smoke may come up fast; and this is the most difficult ministration in the Sanctuary. This alone? None other? But is there not the pinching of the bird's head? And the taking of [an exact] fistful of the incense? — Rather [say] this is one of the more difficult ministrations in the Sanctuary.³ [At any rate] infer from here that he had to perform the hafinah twice. — The inference is right.

The question was raised: If the priest slew [the animal] and died, may someone else enter with its blood? Do we say 'With a bullock' [includes] even 'with the blood of the bullock', or 'With a bullock' only but not with its blood?⁴ — R. Hanina said: 'With a bullock', but not with its blood. R. Lakish said: 'With a bullock', and even with its blood. R. Ammi said: 'With a bullock', but not with the blood of the bullock. R. Isaac the Smith said: 'With a bullock' and even with its blood. R. Ammi raised the following objection: One⁵ may be counted in⁶ for the paschal lamb, or one may withdraw from being counted in it until it be slaughtered. Now, if that view were correct,⁷ this should read: Until he sprinkles [the blood]. — There [is a special situation], because It is written: miheyoth misseh, i.e., as long as the lamb is alive.⁸

Mar Zutra raised the following objection: One must not redeem⁹ with a calf or with a beast of chase, or with what had been slaughtered or with a cross-bred, or with a koy,¹⁰ only with a lamb?¹¹ There is a different case, because [the meaning of] lamb [here] is inferred from 'lamb'¹² [mentioned in connection] with the paschal lamb. Then just as that must be male, without blemish, and one year old,¹³ this too ought to be male, without blemish, and one year old? — [To prevent such interpretation], Scripture states: Thou shalt redeem . . . thou shalt redeem,¹⁴ to include both. If [repetition of] 'Thou shalt redeem' means to include, then all ought to be included? — What value would the word 'lamb' have in that case!

(1) The second hafinah, in the Holy of Holies.

(2) I.e., the ladle when containing the handfuls.

(3) Supra 47b and notes.

(4) V. supra 49a and notes.

(5) Pes. 60b.

(6) V. Ex. Xli, 4.

(7) That the blood, in the service, takes the place of the bullock itself.

(8) E.V. And if (the household) be too little for a lamb', here the ad hoc interpretation is: as long as it is itself — read מֵהַיּוֹת i.e., as long as the animal is whole, before it is slaughtered, as long as it is alive.

(9) A firstling of an ass, Ex. XIII, 12, 13.

(10) A kind of bearded deer or antelope (Jastrow), which belongs either to the genus of cattle or of beast of chase.

(11) V. Bek. 12a. Since the emphasis is on 'lamb' (Ex. XIII, 13) and a slaughtered lamb is excluded, the inference appears justified, that a slaughtered lamb is no more considered to be a lamb. Hence a refutation of the view that blood can be considered as of equal ritual value with the animal itself.

(12) Ex. XII, 3ff

(13) Ibid. 5.

(14) Ibid. XIII, 13.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 50a

R. Isaac the Smith raised the following objection to R. Ammi's view: 'Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth'.¹ — [It means]: he shall take it out in its completeness.² And the bullock of the sin-offering and the he-goat of the sin-offering?³ — R. Papa answered: Nobody disputes with regard to skin, flesh, and excrement, the dispute applies only to the blood,⁴ one holding blood to be designated ‘bullock’, the other holding that blood is not designated ‘bullock’. R. Ashi said: It seems reasonable to hold with the view that blood is designated ‘bullock’, for it is written: Herewith shall Aaron come into the holy place; with a young bullock.⁵ Now does he bring it in with its horns? [Is it not] rather, with its blood, and yet it is called ‘bullock’. And the other?⁶ [It means this:] ‘How⁷ is Aaron legally permitted to enter the Sanctuary? With a young bullock for a sin-offering’. — But derive it⁸ from the fact that it is a sin-offering whose owners have died and ‘a⁹ sin-offering whose owners have died is left to die’?¹⁰ -Said Rabin the son of R. Ada to Raba: Your own disciples said in the name of R. Amram: This¹¹ is a community sin-offering and the sin-offering of the community is not left. For we learned:¹² R. Meir said: ‘Are not the bullock of ‘the Day of Atonement and the pancakes of the high priest and the paschal lamb¹³ each offerings of an individual and yet they suspend the law of Sabbath and the laws touching levitical impurity?’ Would you not infer therefrom that there must be a view according to which these are considered offerings of the congregation?¹⁴ But according to your own arguments when it states:¹⁵ R. Jacob said to him:¹⁶ But are there not the bullock to be offered for an error of the congregation, and the he-goats to be offered up for idolatry and the festive offering,¹⁷ all of which are community-offerings, and yet they suspend neither the laws of the Sabbath, nor those of levitical impurity? Would you infer from this that there must be a view that they are sacrifices of an individual?¹⁸ Rather [what you must therefore say is] he answered the first Tanna whom he heard saying that a community-sacrifice suspends the laws both of the Sabbath and those touching levitical impurity, whilst the sacrifice of an individual suspends neither the laws of the Sabbath nor those affecting levitical uncleanness, whereupon R. Meir said: ‘Is [the law concerning] the offering of an individual a general rule, is there not the bullock of the Day of Atonement? Are there not the pancakes of the high priest and the paschal lamb, all of which are private offerings, and yet they suspend both the Sabbath and the impurity laws?’ And also R. Jacob said: ‘Is the law concerning the offering of the community a rule, are there not the bullock for an error of the community, and the he-goats for idolatry, and the festive offering, all of which are community-offerings yet suspend neither the laws of the Sabbath, nor those touching levitical impurity?’ Rather accept this principle: Whatsoever has a fixed time,¹⁹ suspends both the laws of the Sabbath and those touching levitical impurity, even [though the sacrifice concerned be that] of an individual; and whatsoever has no definite time fixed suspends neither the Sabbath laws nor those affecting levitical uncleanness even if a community-offering [were involved].²⁰

Abaye raised the following objection:²¹ If the bullock and the he-goat of the Day of Atonement had been lost and other [animals] had been set aside in their stead,²² then they must all be left to die; similarly, if the he-goats [offered in expiation] for idolatry had been lost and others had been set aside in their stead,²² they must all be left to die; this is the view of R. Judah. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon hold: They should be left to go to pasture until they become unfit for sacrifice,²³ whereupon they should be sold and the money realized should go to the fund for [providing] freewill-offerings. because ‘a community-sacrifice is not left to die’.²⁴ Bullock here refers to the bullock offered up for an error of the community. — But the text reads ‘of the Day of Atonement’? — This refers to the he-goat. But it was stated: If the bullock of the Day of Atonement and the he-goat of the Day of Atonement had been lost and others were set aside in their stead,²² they must all be left to die, this is the view of R. Judah. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon hold: They should be left to go to pasture until they become unfit for sacrifice, whereupon they should be sold and the money realized for them should go to the fund for providing freewill-offerings. because a community-offering is not left to die’? — Do not read:²⁵ ‘For a community-sacrifice is not left to die’, read rather, for ‘a sacrifice belonging to partners is not left to die’.²⁶ What is the practical difference?²⁷ — That the priests will not have to bring a sacrifice for an error in a legal decision.²⁸ — Come and hear: For R. Eleazar asked:

(1) Lev. IV, 12. The animal is slain already and yet Scripture calls it a ‘bullock’.

(2) I.e., all that is left of it the emphasis being on ‘the whole’.

- (3) Ibid. XVI, 27. This shows that the body of the bullock itself after it is slain is still designated 'bullock'.
- (4) Whether blood by itself is equivalent to the whole animal so that the terms may be used indiscriminately or not?
- (5) Lev. XVI, 3.
- (6) How will he explain this verse?
- (7) with such ministrations in view is Aaron permitted to enter the sanctuary, to perform all details in connection with the bullock.
- (8) That another priest may not enter with the blood of a bullock slain by the first priest who died.
- (9) Tem. 15a.
- (10) Hence no further ministration is possible with it.
- (11) Bullock of the Day of Atonement.
- (12) V. Tem. 14a (Mishnah); v. next note.
- (13) This is omitted in Mishnah Tem. hence var. lec. 'it has been taught' instead of 'we have learnt', v. note 2.
- (14) In accord with the view of the first Tanna, whom R. Meir opposes, that only community-offerings can suspend these laws.
- (15) Tosef. Tem. I.
- (16) To the same first Tanna whom R. Meir opposes.
- (17) Brought by the pilgrims to the Temple on the occasion of a festival (Ex. XXIII, 14).
- (18) The assumption being that only thus could they fail to suspend either of the laws.
- (19) The Pancakes of the high priest are to be offered at a definite time every day, whereas the festive offering may be brought for seven days following the festival, hence having no definite time.
- (20) Hence we have no proof that any Tanna is of the opinion that the bullock of the Day of Atonement is a community-sacrifice.
- (21) Infra 65a.
- (22) When they are found again, they are deprived of food until they die.
- (23) Because of a blemish or their repulsive appearance.
- (24) Hence we see that these Tannaim consider the bullock of the Day of Atonement a community-offering, in clear contradiction of the statement above.
- (25) In the cited Baraithas.
- (26) The bullock brought by the high priest on the Day of Atonement being considered a sacrifice belonging to partners because all the priests share in the atonement effected by it.
- (27) Since in either case the animal is not left to die, whether we call it a community sacrifice or one belonging to partners?
- (28) If the Beth din by error had wrongly advised the priests, such error would not be considered 'error of the community', as when a whole tribe by mistake transgresses the law, but would be considered a sacrifice of partners, which is not left to die. Herein lies the practical difference, hence the justification of the distinction.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 50b

According to him who holds that the bullock of the Day of Atonement is a private sacrifice, is a substitute made for it valid¹ or not? Does not this imply that there is one who considers it a community-offering?² - No, the inference is that there is one who considered it an offering of partners.³

[To turn to] the main text: R. Eleazar asked: According to him who holds that the bullock of the Day of Atonement is an offering of an individual, is a substitute made for it valid or not?¹ What is his question? [Shall we say, as to] whether [the validity of a substitute] is dependent on him who consecrated it, or on him who attains atonement thereby?⁴ Obviously [it may be objected] we make it dependent on him who obtains atonement thereby.⁴ for R. Abbuha said in the name of R. Johanan: He who consecrates must add the fifth to and he who obtains atonement thereby can render valid a substitute,¹ and one who separates the priestly gift from his own produce for that of his neighbour has the benefit of the pleasure!⁵ In truth it is obvious that the matter depends on him who obtains atonement, and this is what he asked: Have his fellow-priests a definite share in the atonement⁶ or do they receive their forgiveness merely by implication?⁷ Come and hear: There are some aspects of the original sacrificial animal severer than those of a substitute animal, there are some aspects in which the substitute animal has more rigid rules than the original sacrificial animal. More severe are the regulations touching the original inasmuch as it applies both to an individual and to a community, suspends the Sabbath law, and the law concerning levitical impurity, and renders a substitute [valid,] all these things not applying to the substitute animal.⁸ More severe are the regulations touching a substitute animal than those of the original sacrificial animal, inasmuch as a substitute is effected⁹ even if it have a permanent blemish, and it cannot be made available [on redemption] for profane use, either to be shorn, or put to work,¹⁰ all these things not applying to the original animal.¹¹ Now what kind of sacrifice is meant here? If we are to assume an individual's sacrifice [is meant]. how could it suspend the laws of either Sabbath or those touching levitical impurity; if, again, the reference be to a community sacrifice, how could it be replaced? Hence the reference here must be to the [high priest's] bullock, and [it is stated that] 'it suspends both Sabbath and impurity laws' because it has a definite time; and 'renders its substitute [valid]' — because It is the offering of an individual!¹² -Said R. Shesheth: No, the reference here is to the ram of Aaron.¹³ Thus, indeed, does it also appear logical. For if we were to assume the reference is to the bullock, [the question would arise, Is it] that the substitute of the bullock does not suspend the Sabbath or the laws of impurity, but on a week-day it can be offered; surely is it not the substitute of a sin-offering,¹⁴ and 'the substitute of a sin-offering is left to die'?-No! in truth, [the reference here is to] his bullock, and what does substitute mean here? [That which goes by] the name of substitute.¹⁵ — But, if so, sacrifice here, too, should mean [that which goes by the name of] an original sacrifice?¹⁶ — No, he does not deal with [whatever goes by the name of] an original sacrifice. Whence that?-Since it states: 'There are restrictions In the law regarding substitute animals, in that even a permanently blemished animal is affected, and it cannot be made available for profane use either to be shorn or put to work'. Now if the thought should arise in you that the word 'sacrifice' here meant [whatever goes by] the name of an original sacrificial animal, surely there is

(1) V. Lev. XXVII, 10.

(2) A substitute for a congregational sacrifice is not valid. V. Tem. 13a.

(3) A substitute for a sacrifice of partners is not valid, 13a.

(4) This is the problem: If it is determined by the one who consecrated then in his case the substitute would be valid, since it is the high priest, from whose possession it comes, who consecrated it. If, however, it depends on those who obtain forgiveness, then no such substitution would be possible. There are many. i.e., his fellow-priests, who obtain forgiveness with the bullock, and no substitute can be made in the case of a sacrifice of partners. (9) If someone consecrates an animal for his fellow, whose duty is thereby to be fulfilled, and it suffers a blemish and he wishes to redeem it, the one who consecrated it is considered its owner and must add a fifth to its value (v. Lev. XXVII, 19). whereas he who is to obtain atonement thereby, would not have to add the fifth, because Scripture insists (ibid.): And he that sanctified...will redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the valuation.

(5) He has the privilege of bestowing it upon whatever priest he chooses. This shows that there is no question that the validity of a substitute is determined by the one who consecrated the original sacrifice. What point then was there in R. Eleazar's question?

(6) Through the bullock of the high priest, i.e., are they to be considered partners in the sacrifice from the time of its dedication.

(7) Jast.: circuit, transference in direction. Rashi: floating, unsettled condition. Goldschmidt: from Syriac: the bearer (of atonement). i.e., the high priest.

(8) No substitute for a substitute is valid.

(9) The animal itself, even though it be blemished, partakes of sacrificial holiness, although unfit for the altar.

(10) I.e., even after redemption the substitute may neither be shorn nor put to work, though its flesh may be consumed as non-holy meat.

(11) If the original sacrificial animal had been blemished the owner who consecrated it could consecrate only its value, hence the animal on redemption was made available for profane use without any reservation.

(12) Which solves the question of R. Eleazar.

(13) I.e., the ram brought by the high priest for his own atonement on the Day of Atonement, v. Lev. XVI, 3.

(14) V. Lev. ibid.

(15) The teaching speaks here of a substitute in general, not of a substitute of any particular original sacrificial animal. The restriction concerning substitutes lies in the fact that no substitute ever suspends the law of the Sabbath, even though the substitute be offered up.

(16) Without referring to any original sacrifice in particular; why then refer the term either to his bullock or the ram of Aaron?

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 51a

the first-born and the tithe of cattle, the laws of which affect even a permanently blemished animal, and which are not available [on redemption] for profane use to be subjected to shearing or work. Hence [you must say] he does not deal with [whatever goes by] the name of an original sacrifice.¹ Why is it different with substitute animals? — The substitutes all have uniform rules, whereas the original sacrificial animal includes first-born and tithe for cattle. Now, as to R. Shesheth, why does he refer the teaching to the ram of Aaron, let him rather refer to the paschal lamb, which suspends the laws of the Sabbath and of levitical uncleanness and can have a substitute because it is an individual's sacrifice?—He holds that a paschal lamb is never offered for one individual.² Then let him put the case as dealing with the second paschal lamb? — Is that able to suspend the laws of levitical impurity?

Said R. Huna the son of R. Joshua to Raba: Why does the Tanna³ designate the paschal lamb an individual's sacrifice and the festal offering a community sacrifice? Would you say because the latter is offered up by large crowds?⁴ So is the paschal lamb offered up by large crowds. — There is the second paschal lamb, which is not offered up by large crowds. Said he to him: If so, it ought to suspend the laws of Sabbath and those of levitical impurity.⁵ — He answered: Yes, he holds in accord with him who says that it suspends [them]. For it was taught: The second paschal lamb suspends the Sabbath, but not the laws of levitical impurity.⁶ R. Judah says: It suspends also the laws of levitical impurity. What is the reason for the view of the first Tanna? He will tell you: 'You have postponed it⁷ only because of levitical impurity, how then shall it suspend the laws of levitical impurity!' And R. Judah?—He will tell you: Scripture says: According to all the statute of the passover shall they keep it,⁸ i.e., even in levitical impurity. The Torah gave him an opportunity to do it in levitical purity, but if he was not privileged to do so, let him do it even in impurity. [

(1) But with one particular type of original sacrifice.

(2) This is the view of R. Judah (Pes. 91a), there being always more than one to subscribe to the cost of the paschal lamb, which must be eaten up within its prescribed limited time, Ex. XII, 10.

(3) Supra 50a.

(4) I.e., on festivals when there are many pilgrims in the Temple.

(5) Since the reference is to the second paschal lamb. MS.M.: '(how state that) it suspends the law of Sabbath!'

(6) Pes. 95b.

(7) The offering of the paschal lamb, v. Num. IX, 11.

(8) Ibid. IX, 12.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 51b

But let him infer it¹ from the words of the Divine Law: 'which is of himself',² i.e., he shall bring it from what belongs to him, for it was taught 'which is of himself', that means he must bring it of his own possession, not from community funds. One might have assumed he must not bring it from community funds, because the congregation obtains no atonement therefrom, but he may bring it from the funds of his fellow-priests, because they do obtain atonement therefrom, therefore Scripture says: 'which is of himself'. One might have assumed he must [de jure] not bring it from funds beside his own, but that if he [de facto] had done so, it would be valid, therefore Scripture says again: 'which is of himself', repeating the condition in order to render conformity with it indispensable.³ — But according to your own view: If his fellow-priests have no part in it, how can they obtain atonement, [even by implication]?⁴ Rather must you say it is different with regard to the private treasury of Aaron⁵ for the Divine Law has declared it free to his fellow-priests, thus also with regard to the [question of a] substitute sacrifice [we say] the private treasury of Aaron is different since the Divine Law has made it free for his fellow-priests.

MISHNAH. HE WENT THROUGH THE HEKAL⁶ UNTIL HE CAME TO THE PLACE BETWEEN THE TWO CURTAINS WHICH SEPARATED THE HOLY FROM THE HOLY OF HOLIES AND BETWEEN WHICH THERE WAS [A SPACE OF] ONE CUBIT. R. JOSE SAID: THERE WAS BUT ONE CURTAIN, AS IT IS SAID: AND THE VEIL SHALL DIVIDE UNTO YOU BETWEEN THE HOLY PLACE AND THE MOST HOLY.⁷ GEMARA. R. Jose gave a proper rejoinder to the Rabbis. What about the Rabbis? — They will tell you: Those things⁸ applied at the Mishkan,⁹ but in the Second Temple, because there was lacking the partition wall¹⁰ which had been in the first Temple — and the Sages were doubtful as to whether its sacredness partook of the character of the Holy or the Holy of Holies, they made two curtains.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: He was walking between altar and candlestick.¹² This is the view of R. Judah. R. Meir says: Between the table¹³ and the altar. Some there are who say: Between the table and the wall.¹⁴ Who are the 'some'? — R. Hisda said: It is R. Jose. who said: The entrance was to the north.¹⁵ And R. Judah? — He will tell you that the entrance was to the south. According to whose view was that of R. Meir? If it agreed with R. Judah's, let him enter as R. Judah states,¹⁶ if it agreed with R. Jose, let him enter as R. Jose states! In truth he agrees with R. Jose, but he will tell you the tables¹⁷ were placed between north and south, hence they would interrupt his walk, preventing him from getting himself in.¹⁸ Or, if you like you might say: In truth, the tables were placed from east to west, but it does not seem proper

(1) The answer to the question above of R. Eleazar concerning the relation of the fellow-priests to the high priest's Day of Atonement bullock.

(2) Lev. XVI, 6 with reference to his bullock.

(3) Lev. XVI, 11 surely indicates that they have no share in the bullock, but receive atonement only by implication through the high priest's atonement, although the bullock is his own private property.

(4) So Bah.

(5) I.e., in respect of the bullock of the Day of Atonement.

(6) V. Glos.

(7) Ex. XXVI, 33.

(8) The one curtain referred to in Exodus.

(9) The Sanctuary in the wilderness.

(10) I Kings VI, 16 refers to the two cedar-covered partitions, with a vacant space between them, which separated the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies, occupying the space of one cubit, but the text: And he built twenty cubits on the hinder part of the house with boards of cedar from the floor unto the joists, leaves it undecided from which of the two holy areas the space of one cubit was to be deducted.

(11) In the second Temple that partition was replaced by two curtains with a space between them.

(12) As he entered, he moved southward between the inner altar and candlestick, which was to the south, walking toward the curtain.

(13) The table was placed next to the northern wall, the candlestick next to the southern wall, the golden altar between them. According to R. Judah the high priest walked toward the Holy of Holies between altar and candlestick, that is on the southern side. According to R. Meir between table and altar, i.e., on the northern side.

(14) According to R. Jose between table and wall, on the northern side.

(15) R. Jose held that there was but one curtain, clasped on the north side, and since the entrance was on the north side, the high priest of necessity was walking along the northern wall.

(16) R. Judah also agreed that the immediate entrance into the Holy of Holies had to be on the northern side but he held that there were two curtains, with the outer one clasped to the southern side, through which he first entered, hence the high priest was walking along the southern wall till he reached the outer entrance, then walking along between the two curtains towards the north till he reached the second entrance leading immediately into the Holy of Holies.

(17) Solomon had made ten tables arranged in two rows of five tables, to the left and right of the table of shewbread. The Sages discuss if these tables were placed lengthwise from south to north or from east to west. R. Meir held the former view, so that all the tables were placed in the northern half of the Sanctuary (Ex. XXVI, 35): And thou shalt put the table on the north side. Now the breadth of the Sanctuary was twenty cubits, its northern half ten cubits; the length of a table two cubits, so that each row of five tables filled the northern half of the Temple hall, without any free space between tables and wall. If any space were left free, then the row of the tables would to that extent encroach upon the southern half. Thus the tables would block the high priest on his walk between the table and the wall.

(18) Between the table and the wall.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 52a

to go straight ahead [towards the seat of the Divine Presence].¹ And R. Jose? — Israel is so beloved that Scripture does not wish to burden their messenger.² As to R. Judah, let him enter between the candlestick and the wall! — His garments would become blackened.³ R. Nathan said: Concerning the 'cubit of partition'. the Sages did not decide as to whether its sanctity was that of the Holy of Holies or of the Holy Place outside of it. To this Rabina demurred: What was their reason? Shall we say because it is written: And the house which King Solomon built for the Lord, the length thereof was three score cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.⁴ [Also] it is written: And the house, that is, the Temple before [the Sanctuary]. was forty cubits long⁵ and it is further written: And before the Sanctuary which was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof⁶ — so that we do not know whether the [space of] a cubit of the partition was to be deducted from the twenty or the forty, — perhaps it is to be deducted from neither the twenty nor the forty, the account referring only to the free spaces, not to the walls. As a proof [is the fact] that whenever the walls are mentioned, they are mentioned separately, for we have learnt: The Sanctuary was a hundred cubits square and a hundred cubits in height. The wall of the Ulam⁷ was five [cubits thick] and the Ulam eleven. The wall of the Sanctuary six, and its interior forty cubits, the partition one cubit and the Holy of Holies twenty cubits, the wall of the Sanctuary six, the cell six and the wall of the cell five!⁸ — Rather, the question is whether the sanctity of the partition is as that of the inner part [the Holy of Holies], or the outer part, and this is as R. Johanan reported: Joseph of Huzal asked: [It is written], And a debir⁹ in the midst of the house from within he prepared to set there the ark of the covenant of the Lord.¹⁰ The question was asked [in the Academy]: What does Scripture mean to say? [Does it mean] 'a debir in the midst of the house; from within he prepared to place the ark there'; or 'a debir in the midst of the house from within'?¹¹ — But could they have any doubt? Surely it was taught: Issi b. Judah said: There are five verses in the Torah [the grammatical construction of] which is undecided:

(1) on the assumption that they were placed between east and west, so that he could walk unhandicapped along the north wall towards the Holy of Holies, the suggestion is offered that it would not be in accord with the reverence due to that sacred place for the high priest to walk straight towards it, 'feasting his eyes all the time on that most awe-inspiring place, through the opening through which he was to enter, hence R. Meir's view.

(2) The high priest, as representative of Israel, is permitted to avoid the weary detour between table and altar and to proceed straight along the north wall towards the Holy of Holies.

(3) From the smoke (soot) of the candlestick on the wall.

(4) I Kings VI, 2.

(5) Ibid. 17.

(6) I Kings VI, 20.

(7) The hall leading into the interior of the Temple.

(8) V. Mid. IV. 6 and 7. Hence the question above is answered.

(9) E.V. 'Sanctuary:' here taken to denote the space between the partition dividing the Holy from the Holy of Holies.

(10) I Kings VI, 19.

(11) According to the first interpretation the cubit partition would be excluded then from the Holy of Holies. Does the 'from within' belong to the first part of the verse, referring to the debir or to the second interpretation and refer to the Holy of Holies?

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 52b

'lifted up',¹ 'like almond-blossoms';² 'tomorrow',³ 'cursed'⁴ and 'rise up'.⁵ It was also taught:⁶ Joseph of Huzal is the same as Joseph the Babylonian, and is identical⁷ with Issi b. Judah, also with Issi b. Gur Aryeh,⁸ also with Issi b. Gamliel, also with Issi b. Mahalalel. What was his real name? Issi b. Akiba!⁹ — In the Torah there is no other,¹⁰ but in the Prophets there is. But is there in the Torah no other; surely there is for R. Hisda asked:¹¹ [It is written], And he sent the young men of the children of Israel, who offered burnt-offerings,¹² [does it mean] of lambs; and sacrificed peace-offerings unto the Lord [namely of oxen]; or [does the word] 'oxen' refer to all [sacrifices]?¹³ — R. Hisda had indeed his doubts about it, but to Issi b. Judah it was obvious.

MISHNAH. THE OUTER CURTAIN WAS HELD BACK BY A CLASP ON THE SOUTH SIDE AND THE INNER CURTAIN ON THE NORTH SIDE. HE WALKED ALONG BETWEEN THEM UNTIL HE REACHED THE NORTH SIDE. WHEN HE REACHED THE NORTH SIDE HE TURNED ROUND TO THE SOUTH AND WENT ON ALONG THE CURTAIN, TO HIS LEFT, UNTIL HE REACHED THE ARK. WHEN HE REACHED THE ARK HE PUT THE PAN OF BURNING COALS BETWEEN THE TWO BARS.¹⁴ HE HEAPED UP THE INCENSE UPON THE COALS AND THE WHOLE HOUSE BECAME FULL WITH SMOKE. HE CAME OUT BY THE WAY HE ENTERED¹⁵ AND IN THE OUTER HOUSE¹⁶ HE UTTERED A SHORT PRAYER. HE DID NOT MAKE THE PRAYER LONG SO AS NOT TO FRIGHTEN ISRAEL.

GEMARA. To what are we referring here? If it be the first Sanctuary, was there then a curtain?¹⁷ Again, if it is to the second Sanctuary, was there then an Ark? Surely it has been taught: When the Ark was hidden, there was hidden with it the bottle containing the Manna,¹⁸ and that containing the sprinkling water,¹⁹ the staff of Aaron,²⁰ with its almonds and blossoms, and the chest which the Philistines had sent as a gift to the God of Israel, as it is said: And put the jewels of gold which you return to Him for a guilt-offering in a coffer by the side thereof and send it away that it may go.²¹ Who hid it? — Josiah hid it. What was his reason for hiding it? — He saw the Scriptural passage: The Lord will bring thee and thy King whom thou shalt set over thee,²² therefore he hid it, as it is said: And he said to the Levites, that taught all Israel, that were holy unto the Lord: Put the holy ark into the house which Solomon, the son of David, King of Israel did build. There shall no more be a burden upon your shoulders now. Serve now the Lord your God and His people Israel.²³ And R. Eleazar said: We derive by analogy²⁴ between the words 'there', 'generations' and 'to be kept' occurring in these passages!²⁵ In truth we refer to the second Sanctuary and what does 'He came to the Ark' mean? I.e., he came to the place of the Ark. But the text reads: HE PLACED THE PAN OF BURNING COALS BETWEEN THE TWO BARS?²⁶ — Read [it to mean]: 'as if it were between the two bars'.

HE HEAPED THE INCENSE UPON THE COALS. We learn here in accordance with the view that he heaped it [the incense]²⁷ up. One [Baraita] taught: He begins to heap it up on the inner side, which is to him the outer side,²⁸ whereas another taught: he begins to heap it up on the outer side which is to him the inner side. Abaye said: It is a matter of dispute among Tannaim. Further said Abaye: The view of him who holds he begins to heap it on the inner side, which is to him the outer side, seems logical, for we have learnt:²⁹ One teaches him: Be careful

(1) Gen. IV, 7: The meaning could be: If thou doest well (good!) — but thou must bear the sin, if thou doest not well; or the usual interpretation: If thou doest well, there will be forgiving (or lifting up of face); and if thou doest not well, sin coucheth at the door.

(2) Ex. XXV, 33: Three cups, made like almond-blossoms in one branch, a knop and a flower, or: Three cups, like almond-blossoms . . . a knop and a flower.

(3) Ex. XVII, 9: Go out and fight with Amalek tomorrow; I will stand on the top of the hill, etc.

(4) Gen. XLIX, 6, 7: And in their self-will they houghed oxen. Cursed be their anger, for it was fierce. Or: And in their self-will they houghed the cursed oxen. Their anger was fierce. (The cursed oxen would thus be an uncomplimentary reference to Shechem, a descendant of Canaan cursed in Gen. IX, 25).

(5) Deut. XXXI, 16: Behold thou art about to sleep with thy fathers; and (this people) will rise up. Or: Behold thou art about to sleep with thy fathers and (wilt in future) rise up. This people will go astray after the foreign gods. — Tosaf. s.v. endeavours to account for the curious order of the sentences quoted.

(6) Pes. 113b.

(7) Issi as an abbreviation of Joseph is perfectly possible. Tosaf.

(8) Judah is called Gur Aryeh (a lion's whelp) in the blessing of Jacob, hence the substitution here, v. Gen. XLIX, 9.

(9) V. Pes., Sonc. ed., p. 585. n. 6.

(10) Now Joseph of Huzal is here identified with Issi b. Judah and yet among the ambiguous passages here enumerated, the passage which aroused his question (I Kings VI, 20) is not mentioned!

(11) Hag. 6b.

(12) Ex. XXIV, 5.

(13) I.e., also to burnt-offerings, the meaning depending on the pause: If we pronounce 'oloth' (burnt-offerings) at the end of the middle pause, or read on without such pause in the middle.

(14) V. Ex. XXV, 13f.

(15) Just as, on entering, he turned southwards until he reached the Ark, thus as he left, he did not turn his face, but went backwards, with his face toward the Ark (Rashi).

(16) In the Sanctuary.

(17) V. supra 51b.

(18) Ex. XVI, 33.

(19) Num. XIX, 9.

(20) Num. XVII, 25.

(21) I Sam. VI, 8. Hence it is evident that it was placed together with the Ark and the fear was justified that together with the latter these things might be exiled and lost.

(22) Deut. XXVIII, 36.

(23) II Chron. XXXV, 3.

(24) That the other objects enumerated were hidden at the same time as the Ark.

(25) Ex. XXX, 6 and ibid. XVI, 33, the word 'there' occurs, justifying the inference that something must occur in both the Ark and the manna; in the passage referring to the latter, Ex. XVI, 33, as well as in the passage referring to the oil for anointing (ibid. XXX, 31) the priests the word 'generations' occurs, again indicating some justified inference of something in common; finally, in connection with the manna as well as in the passage about the staff of Aaron the word 'to be kept' occurs (Ex. XVI, 33 and Num. XVII, 25). From all these word analogies the inference is drawn that what manna, bottle, oil, staff of Aaron and Ark had in common is that having been placed in or near the Ark, they also were hidden together. Hence the reference in the Mishnah could not be to the second Sanctuary either.

(26) He placed it just where the two staves had been in the first Sanctuary.

(27) V. supra 49b.

(28) I.e., he commences to heap up the incense from the inside part of the coal-pan in relation to the Holy of Holies, working outwardly towards his arm. I.e., he commenced to heap up the incense on the outer side of the pan in relation to the Holy of Holies, working towards the inside, away from his arm, with the precaution suggested below.

(29) Tamid 33a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 53a

not to start in front of thee lest thou be burnt.¹

Our Rabbis taught: And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the Lord:² i.e., he must not put it in order outside and thus bring it in. [This is] to remove the error from the minds of the Sadducees who said: He must prepare it without, and bring it in. What is their interpretation? — For I appear in the cloud upon the ark-cover³ 'that teaches us that he prepares it outside and brings it in'. The Sages said to them: But it is said already 'And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the Lord'.⁴ If so for what purpose then is it stated 'For I appear in the cloud upon the ark-cover'? It comes to teach us that he puts into it a smoke-raiser.⁵ — Whence do we know that he must put a smoke-raiser into it? — Because it is said: So that the cloud of the incense may cover the ark-cover.⁶ But if he did not put a smoke-raiser into it, or that he omitted one of its spices he is liable to death. But [why not] infer this⁷ from the fact that he effected an entrance for no purpose.⁸ R. Shesheth said: We speak here of the case that he was in error about the entrance,⁹ but deliberate in omitting the spice. R. Ashi said: You might even set the case when he was deliberate with regard to both but [here we deal with the case] where he brought in two incenses, one incomplete, the other defective, so that he is not guilty because of the purposeless entrance because he had offered up a perfect incense, but he is guilty in regard to the incense because he had offered up one defective incense.

The Master had said: 'Whence is it known that he must place a smoke-raiser into it? To teach us that, it is said: "So that [the cloud] may cover etc."¹⁰ [What need of] one scriptural verse added to another?¹¹ — Said R. Joseph: This is what is meant: From here I know only about the leaf of the smoke-raiser, whence do I know about the root?¹² To teach us that Scripture said: 'So that it may cover [etc.]'¹³ Said Abaye to him: But the opposite has been taught; for it was taught: If when he put in the root of the smoke-raiser, it would rise up straight like a stick until it reached the ceiling beams; as soon as it reached the beams of the ceiling it would come slowly down the walls until the house became full of smoke, as it is said: And the house was filled with smoke?¹⁴ — Rather, said Abaye, this is what it means: Now I know only about the root of the smoke-raiser, whence do I know also about its leaf? To teach us that Scripture said: 'So that it may cover [etc.]'.

R. Shesheth said: I know only about the Tent of Meeting in the wilderness; whence do I know about Shiloh and the eternal Sanctuary? To teach us that Scripture said: 'So that it may cover [etc.]' But that we infer from, And so shall he do for the Tent of Meeting, that dwelleth with them?¹⁵ — Rather is this meant: Now I know about the Day of Atonement,¹⁶ whence do I know about the other days of the year? To teach us that, Scripture said: 'So that it may cover [etc.]'. R. Ashi said: One [passage] refers to the commandment, the other to its indispensableness.¹⁷ Raba said: One refers to the penalty incurred, the other to the prohibition.¹⁸ It was taught: R. Eliezer said: That he die not,¹⁹ i.e., the penalty, For I appear in the cloud, i.e., the prohibition. I might have assumed that both were stated before the death of the sons of Aaron,²⁰ to teach us [the true fact] it is written: After the death of the two sons of Aaron.²¹ One might assume that both were said after the death of the two sons of Aaron; to teach us [the true fact] it is written: 'For I will appear in the cloud upon the ark-cover.'²² How is that [to be explained]? The prohibition [was stated] before the death, the penalty after the death. — How is this inference made? Raba said: 'For I will appear in the cloud' — but He had not appeared²³ yet. Then why were they punished? — As it was taught: R. Eliezer said: The sons of Aaron died only because they decided a question of law in the presence of Moses their Master. What was it they decided? — And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar²⁴ [means] although the fire was coming down from heaven²⁵ yet was it obligatory to bring private²⁶ fire.

HE CAME OUT BY THE WAY HE ENTERED: Whence is this known? — Said R. Samuel b. Nahmani in the name of R. Jonathan: Scripture said: So Solomon came to the high place that was at Gibeon, [unto] Jerusalem.²⁷ What has Gibeon to do with Jerusalem?²⁸ Rather, [Scripture] compares his departure from Gibeon towards Jerusalem with his entrance from Jerusalem into Gibeon, i.e., just as when he entered Gibeon from Jerusalem his face was directed towards the high place, in the same way as he had come in; in the same manner as he left Gibeon for Jerusalem his face was turned toward the high place even in the same way as when he had come in.²⁹ In similar manner the priests as they ministered, the Levites on their service, the Israelites on their posts³⁰ — as they left they would not turn their face back, to go out, but would turn their face sideways to leave. Thus also a disciple taking leave of his master, must not turn his face back to go away, but must turn sideways to depart. As was the case with R. Eleazar, whenever he took leave of R. Johanan: if R. Johanan wanted to leave, R. Eleazar would stand on his place, the head bowed, until R. Johanan disappeared from his sight but when R. Eleazar wished to take leave he would walk backwards until he disappeared from the sight of R. Johanan. When Raba was about to take leave of R. Joseph he would go backwards, so that his feet were bruised and the threshold of the house of R. Joseph was stained with blood.

(1) The incense which he had heaped up towards his end and which burns continually may touch his arm and burn it whilst he is working it towards the other side.

(2) Lev. XVI, 13.

(3) The Sadduceans in literal translation have this interpretation: 'I, the Lord, am to be visited', i.e., seen, in the Holy of Holies, in the cloud of the smoke of incense, which must be a cloud, i.e., prepared outside, so that when, in the Holy of Holies I am seen, it is in the cloud of incense, all ready and rising up, as the high priest enters.

(4) Which clearly shows that the incense is put in the fire inside.

(5) The name of a plant used as an ingredient of the incense and whose effect lay in achieving a straight rising smoke.

(6) Lev. XVI, 13.

(7) That he is culpable if he omitted one of its ingredients.

(8) That is indicated already by the passage in Lev. XVI,2: That he come not at all times ... lest he die, which indicates that a fruitless entrance incurs such penalty, hence no additional source of that law is necessary.

(9) To which no penalty of death is attached.

(10) The incense without the smoke-raiser could not possibly effect such 'covering'.

(11) From the passage 'For in the cloud, etc.' we inferred the necessity of the smokeraiser, why then an additional verse?

(12) Whether the roots or the leaf achieved the straight smoke. R. Joseph holds that the leaves had such property, Abaye attributed that quality to the root.

(13) 'Cover' may refer to the capacity to just cover the ark-cover, but not to rise above it.

(14) Isa. VI, 4. This proves that the root is more effective for producing the straight smoke.

(15) Lev. XVI, 16, i.e., wherever he shall dwell with them, shall they do this.

(16) The portion of the Torah refers to the Day of Atonement.

(17) 'So that it may cover' is the command. He shall not come at all times ... for in a cloud shall I appear — and not otherwise is the prohibition that the incense is indispensable.

(18) Lit., 'warning'.

(19) Lev. XVI, 13.

(20) Who died in expiation of their sin; and thus assumed it was their neglect to put the smoke-raiser into the incense.

(21) Lev. XVI, 1.

(22) This is the literal rendering.

(23) I.e., when this scriptural verse was uttered the Lord had not appeared yet. But if the reference were to a time after the death of the two sons of Aaron, He would have appeared already, namely on exactly that day, as it is said: And the glory of the Lord appeared unto all the people. (Lev. IX, 23).

(24) Lev. I, 7.

(25) V. supra 21b.

(26) Although their decision was correct, they incurred penalty for their presumptuousness in rendering a decision before their master, instead of requesting him to render it for them.

(27) II Chron. I, 13.

(28) The indeterminate 'Jerusalem' in the text is ambiguous and therefore invites ad hoc interpretation.

(29) So that the text means: In the same manner as Solomon journeyed to Gibeon, so did he proceed on his return journey from Gibeon to Jerusalem.

(30) V. Ta'an. 24a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 53b

The people told R. Joseph that Raba did that, whereupon he said to him: May it be the will [of God] that you raise your head above the whole city.¹ R. Alexandri said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: One who prays [the 'Amidah]² should go three steps backwards, and then recite 'peace'.³ R. Mordecai said to him: Having taken the three steps backwards, he ought to remain standing, as should a disciple who takes leave of his master; for if he returns at once, it is as with a dog who goes back to his vomit. It has also been taught thus: One who prays shall take three steps backwards and then pronounce 'peace'. And if he did not do so, it would have been better for him not to have prayed at all. In the name of R. Shemaya they said: He should pronounce 'peace' towards the right, then towards the left, as it is said: At His right hand was a fiery law unto them,⁴ and it is also said: A thousand may fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand.⁵ For what reason 'and it is also said'? — You might have said it is the usual thing to take a thing with the right hand,⁶ come therefore and hear: 'A thousand may fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand'.⁷

Raba saw Abaye pronouncing 'peace' first towards the right and he said to him: Do you mean that your right hand is meant? It is your left hand, which is the right of the Holy One, blessed be He. R. Hiyya the son of R. Huna said: I saw Abaye and Raba who were taking all three steps with one genuflexion.

AND HE UTTERED A SHORT PRAYER IN THE OUTER HOUSE: What did he pray? Raba son of R. Adda and Rabin son of R. Adda both reported in the name of Rab: 'May it be Thy will, O Lord our God, that this year be full of heavy rains and hot'. But is a hot year an advantage? — Rather: If it be a hot one, let it be rich in rain. — R. Aha the son of Raba concluded the prayer in the name of R. Judah [thus]: May there not depart a ruler from the house of Judah, and may the house of Israel not require that they sustain one another, and permit not the prayers of travellers⁸ to find entrance before you. R. Hanina b. Dosa was walking along a road when rain came down upon him. He said: 'Lord of the Universe! All the world is comfortable and Hanina is afflicted!' The rain stopped. As he came home, he said: 'Lord of the Universe! All the world is afflicted and Hanina is comfortable!'⁹ The rain came again. R. Joseph said: Of what use is the prayer of the high priest against R. Hanina b. Dosa!

Our Rabbis taught:¹⁰ It happened with one high priest that he prolonged his prayer. His fellow priests undertook to enter after him. As they began to enter he came forth. They said to him: Why did you prolong your prayer? — He said: Is it disagreeable to you that I prayed for you, for the Sanctuary, that it be not destroyed? — They said to him: Do not make a habit of doing so, for thus have we learnt: He would not pray long lest he terrify Israel.¹¹

MISHNAH. AFTER THE ARK HAD BEEN TAKEN AWAY, THERE WAS A STONE FROM THE DAYS OF THE EARLIER PROPHETS,¹² CALLED THE SHETHIYAH,¹³ THREE FINGERS ABOVE THE GROUND, ON WHICH HE WOULD PLACE [THE PAN OF BURNING COALS]. HE WOULD TAKE THE BLOOD FROM HIM WHO WAS STIRRING IT, AND ENTER [AGAIN] INTO THE PLACE WHERE HE HAD ENTERED,¹⁴ AND STAND [AGAIN] ON THE PLACE ON WHICH HE HAD STOOD,¹⁵ AND SPRINKLE THEREOF ONCE UPWARDS¹⁶ AND SEVEN TIMES DOWNWARDS, AIMING TO SPRINKLE NEITHER UPWARDS NOR DOWNWARDS BUT KEMAZLIF [MAKING THE MOVEMENT OF SWINGING A WHIP]. AND THUS WOULD HE COUNT: ONE, ONE AND ONE, ONE AND TWO, ONE AND THREE, ONE AND FOUR, ONE AND FIVE, ONE AND SIX, ONE AND SEVEN. THEN HE WOULD GO OUT AND PUT IT ON THE GOLDEN STAND IN THE SANCTUARY. ONE WOULD BRING HIM THE HE-GOAT, HE WOULD SLAY IT, RECEIVE ITS BLOOD IN A BASIN, ENTER [AGAIN] THE PLACE HE HAD ENTERED BEFORE, STAND [AGAIN] ON THE PLACE HE HAD STOOD ON BEFORE AND WOULD SPRINKLE THEREFROM ONCE UPWARDS AND SEVEN TIMES DOWNWARDS. THUS WOULD HE COUNT; ONE, ONE AND TWO, ETC. THEN HE WOULD GO OUT AND PLACE IT ON THE SECOND GOLDEN STAND IN THE

SANCTUARY. R. JUDAH SAID: THERE WAS NO MORE THAN ONE GOLDEN STAND. HE WOULD¹⁷ TAKE THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK AND PUT DOWN THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT, SPRINKLE THEREOF UPON THE CURTAINS FACING THE ARK OUTSIDE, ONCE UPWARDS, SEVEN TIMES DOWNWARD, AIMING TO SPRINKLE NEITHER UPWARDS NOR DOWNWARDS, BUT KE-MAZLIF [MAKING THE MOVEMENT OF SWINGING A WHIP]. THUS WOULD HE COUNT [AS ABOVE]. THEN HE WOULD TAKE THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT, DEPOSITING THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK, AND SPRINKLE THEREOF UPON THE CURTAIN FACING THE ARK OUTSIDE ONCE UPWARDS, SEVEN TIMES DOWNWARDS [AS ABOVE]. THEN HE WOULD POUR THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK INTO THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT EMPTYING THE FULL VESSEL INTO THE EMPTY ONE. GEMARA. [The Mishnah] does not teach ‘After the Ark has been hidden away’, but ‘After the Ark had been taken away’, this is in accord with him who holds that the Ark went into exile to Babylonia, for it was taught: R. Eliezer said: The Ark went into exile to Babylonia, as it was said: In the following year King Nebuchadnezzar sent and had him brought to Babel together with the precious vessels of the house of the Lord.¹⁸ R. Simeon b. Yohai said: The Ark went into exile to Babylonia, as it was said: Nothing shall be left, saith the Lord,¹⁹ i.e., the Ten Commandments contained therein R. Judah b. Ilai²⁰ said: The Ark was hidden [buried] in its own place, as it was said: And the staves were so long that the ends of the staves were seen from the holy place, even before the Sanctuary; but they could not be seen without; and there they are unto this day.²¹ Now he²² disputes ‘Ulla for ‘Ulla said: R. Matthiah b. Heresh asked R. Simeon b. Yohai in Rome.²³ Now since R. Eliezer had taught us on the first and second occasion that the Ark went into exile to Babylonia (the first was the one which we said just now: ‘And he had him brought to Babel together with the precious vessels of the house of the Lord’, but what is the second one? — Because it is written: And gone is from the daughter of Zion

(1) R. Joseph being blind would not have noticed this reverent conduct of his pupil. On learning it he pronounced a prayerful hope, which was fulfilled. For Raba did become head of the Academies of both Sura and Pumbeditha.

(2) Lit., ‘(prayer read) standing’. The prayer par excellence, v. P.B. p. 44ff.

(3) At the end of that prayer one says: May He who maketh peace in His high places, make peace for us and for all Israel. This is the pronouncement of ‘peace’.

(4) Deut. XXXIII, 2.

(5) Ps. XCI, 7.

(6) People would usually use their right hand, but there is no particular importance attached to it to bestow ceremonial preference upon it.

(7) Which suggests that the right hand is granted greater victory, hence is more significant than the left.

(8) Who would pray for dry weather, as better for their comfort on the road.

(9) As he had no fields and thus no need of rain.

(10) Tosef. Yoma II.

(11) By his delay, attributable either to his failure to obtain forgiveness or to personal mishap.

(12) According to Sot. 48b this term includes Samuel, David and Solomon.

(13) Root: shatha — to lay a foundation, thus foundation stone. From it, as the Gemara says, the world was founded or started.

(14) Into the Holy of Holies.

(15) Between the two staves.

(16) In the direction of the ‘ark-cover’.

(17) This continues R. Judah’s account. (5) V. Gemara. (6) Lev. XVI, 18: And he shall take the blood of the bullock and the blood of the goat and put it upon the horns of the altar round about. The inference is that since but one act of ‘putting’ is mentioned the two were mixed, by pouring the first into the second.

(18) II Chron. XXXVI, 10.

(19) Isa. XXXIX, 6, dabar, ‘thing’, here taken as ‘word’, i.e., the word(s) i.e., the ten commandments.

(20) Corrected according to Jer. Shek. VI; cur. edd. b. Lakish.

(21) I Kings VIII, 8.

(22) The one who reports in this Baraita the view of R. Simeon b. Yohai.

(23) Who had gone there to plead with the Emperor on behalf of the people of Israel afflicted by emergency decrees of the Governor, see Graetz II, 443 (Engl. ed.).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 54a

all her splendour.¹ What does 'all her splendour' mean? All that is enclosed within her.²) What do you say now? — He answered: I say that the Ark was hidden in its place, as it is said: 'And the staves were so long, etc.' Rabbah said to 'Ulla: How does it follow from this?³ — Because it is written: 'Unto this day'. But does the term 'Unto this day' mean everywhere 'forever'? Is it not written: And they [the children of Benjamin] did not drive out the Jebusites that inhabited Jerusalem; but the Israelites dwelt with the children of Benjamin in Jerusalem, unto this day.⁴ Would you say here too that they did not go into exile? Surely it was taught:⁵ R. Judah said: For fifty-two years no human being passed as it is said: For the mountains will I take up a weeping and wailing, and for the pastures of the wilderness a lamentation; because they are burned up, so that none passeth through, and they hear not the voice of the cattle; both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled and gone,⁶ and the numerical⁷ value of Behemah is fifty-two. Furthermore, R. Jose said: For seven years sulphur and salt prevailed in the land of Israel, and R. Johanan said: What is the basis of R. Jose's view? He infers it from the analogy of the words 'covenant', 'covenant'. Here Scripture reads: And he shall make a firm covenant with many for one week;⁸ and in another place it is written: Then men shall say: Because they forsook the covenant of the Lord, the God of their fathers.⁹ — He answered: Here the word 'there' is used, there this expression¹⁰ is not used. — Would you say that wherever the word 'there' is used, it implies 'forever', but the following objection can be raised: And some of them, even of the sons of Simeon, five hundred men, went to Mount Seir, having for their captains Pelatiah, and Neariah, and Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the sons of Ishi. And they smote the remnants of the Amalekites that escaped, and dwelt there unto this day.¹¹ But Sennacherib, King of Assyria, had come up already and confused all the lands as it is said: I have removed the bounds of the peoples, and have robbed their treasures?¹² This is a refutation.

R. Nahman said: It was taught that the Ark was hidden away in the Chamber of the wood-shed. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Thus were we also taught.¹³ It happened to a certain priest who was whiling away his time that he saw a block of pavement that was different from the others. He came and informed his fellow, but before he could complete his account, his soul departed. Thus they knew definitely that the Ark was hidden there. What had he been doing?¹⁴ R. Helbo said: He was playing with his axe. The school of R. Ishmael taught: Two priests, afflicted with a blemish, were sorting the woods when the axe of one of them slipped from his hand and fell on that place, whereupon a flame burst forth and consumed him.¹⁵

R. Judah contrasted the following passages: And the ends of the staves were seen,¹⁶ and it is written but they could not be seen without¹⁶ — how is that possible? — They could be observed, but not actually seen. Thus was it also taught: 'And the ends of the staves were seen One might have assumed that they did not protrude from their place. To teach us [the fact] Scripture says: 'And the staves were so long'. One might assume that they tore the curtain and showed forth; to teach us [the fact] Scripture says: 'They could not be seen without'. How then? They pressed forth and protruded as the two breasts of a woman, as it is said: My beloved is unto me as a bag of myrrh, that lieth betwixt my breasts.¹⁷

R. Kattina said: Whenever Israel came up to the Festival, the curtain would be removed for them and the Cherubim were shown to them, whose bodies were intertwined with one another, and they would be thus addressed: Look! You are beloved before God as the love between man and woman.

R. Hisda raised the following objection: But they shall not go in to see the holy things as they are being covered,¹⁸ in connection with which Rab Judah in the name of Rab said: It means at the time when the vessels are being put into their cases?¹⁹ — R. Nahman answered: That may be compared to a bride: As long as she is in her father's house, she is reserved in regard to her husband, but when she comes to her father-in-law's house, she is no more so reserved in regard to him.²⁰

R. Hana son of R. Kattina raised the following objection: It happened with a priest who was whiling away his time²¹ etc. — He was answered: You speak of a woman, who has been divorced. When she is divorced, she goes back to her earlier love.²²

Of what circumstances are we treating here?²³ If we were to say the reference is to the first Sanctuary — but there was no curtain!²⁴ If, again, the reference be to the second Sanctuary, but there were no Cherubim? — In truth the reference is to the first Sanctuary and as to ‘curtain’ the reference here means the curtain at the entrances, for R. Zera said in the name of Rab: There were thirteen curtains in the Sanctuary, seven facing the seven gates, two [more], one of which was at the entrance to the Hekal,²⁵ the other at the entrance to the Ulam;²⁶ two to the debir; two, corresponding to them, in the loft.²⁷ R. Aha b. Jacob said: In truth the reference here is to the second Sanctuary, but it had painted Cherubim, as it is written: And he carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of Cherubim and palm-trees and open flowers, within and without,²⁸ and he overlaid them with gold fitted upon the graven work.²⁹ And it is written also: According to the space of each, with loyoth [wreaths round about].³⁰ What does ‘according to the space of each with loyoth’ mean? Rabbah son of R. Shilah said:

(1) Lam. I, 6.

(2) Hadarah (her inner chamber); i.e., all that is enclosed within Zion, in its Sanctuary, the Ark, etc.

(3) The inference that the Ark etc. was hidden in its place.

(4) Judg. I, 21.

(5) Shab. 145b.

(6) Jer. IX, 9.

(7) The numerical value serves only as ‘asmakta’ or intimation. Rashi goes through a closely reasoned argument to account for the fifty-two years.

(8) Dan. IX, 27.

(9) Deut. XXIX, 24; before that statement there is the reference to brimstone and salt: And that the whole land is brimstone and salt (v. 22). Thus the severe punishment for the forsaking of the covenant is that sulphur and salt cover the land. ‘One week’ in Dan. IX means a week of years.

(10) In the case of the Ark Scripture reads: ‘There unto this day’, implying for ever, whilst in the absence of ‘there’ in Judges I, 21, no such claim is made.

(11) I Chron. IV, 42-3.

(12) Isa. X, 13. The King of Babylon boasts of his achievements. Hence the sons of Simeon could not have dwelt there ‘forever.’

(13) Mish. Shek. VI, 2.

(14) To incur such punishment. The answer being that, unmindful of the reverence due to the Sanctuary, he had been playing around with his axe.

(15) or ‘it.’

(16) I Kings VIII, 8.

(17) Cant. I, 13.

(18) Num. IV, 20.

(19) This is said of the Levites in the wilderness, who, whilst carrying the vessels on their shoulders, were not permitted to look at them before they were covered. How much less would the Holy of Holies be profaned by being shown to the masses who had come to celebrate the Festival; the Cherubim being above the mercy-seat in the Holy of Holies.

(20) Before marriage there is reserve, which is given up in marriage, to be assumed again when divorce has taken place. Israel in the wilderness is comparable to the bride in her father's home; in the Temple to the bride in her husband's care.

(21) Which shews that the same reserve still obtains in the Temple.

- (22) I.e., to the reserve of original prenuptial state.
 (23) Of what time speaks this account of the curtain being unrolled and the Cherubim shown to the pilgrims.
 (24) I.e., between the Holy and the Holy of Holies, but a partition; v. supra 52b.
 (25) V. Glos.
 (26) I.e., in the cubit space of partition between the Holy and the Holy of Holies.
 (27) Just above the entrance to the Holy of Holies.
 (28) I Kings VI, 29.
 (29) Ibid. 35.
 (30) Ibid. VII, 36.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 54b

Even as a man embracing his companion.¹ Resh Lakish said: When the heathens entered the Temple and saw the Cherubim whose bodies were intertwined with one another, they carried them out and said: These Israelites, whose blessing is a blessing, and whose curse is a curse, occupy themselves with such things! And immediately they despised them, as it is said: All that honored her, despised her, because they have seen her nakedness.²

AND IT WAS CALLED SHETHIYAH: A Tanna taught: [It was so called] because from it the world was founded.³ We were taught in accord with the view that the world was started [created] from Zion on. For it was taught: R. Eliezer says: The world was created from its centre, as it is said: When the dust runneth into a mass, and the clods keep fast together.⁴ R. Joshua said: The world was created from its sides on, as it is said: For He saith to the snow: 'Fall thou on the earth'; likewise to the shower of rain, and to the showers of His mighty rain.⁵ R. Isaac the Smith said: The Holy One, blessed be He, cast a stone into the ocean, from which the world then was founded as it is said: Whereupon were the foundations thereof fastened, or who laid the corner-stone thereof?⁶ But the Sages said: The world was [started] created from Zion, as it is said: A Psalm of Asaph, God, God, the Lord [hath spoken],⁷ whereupon it reads on: Out of Zion, the perfection of the world,⁸ that means from Zion was the beauty of the world perfected.

It was taught: R. Eliezer the Great said: These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth, in the day that the Lord God made earth and heaven.⁹ The generations [the creations] of heaven¹⁰ were made from the heaven and the generations of the earth were made from the earth. But the Sages said: Both were created from Zion, as it is said: 'A Psalm of Asaph: God, God, the Lord, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof.' And Scripture further says: 'Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined forth', that means from it the beauty of the world was perfected.

HE TOOK THE BLOOD FROM HIM THAT WAS STIRRING IT: etc. What does 'KE-MAZLIF' mean? — R. Judah showed it to mean

-
- (1) 'Loyoth' is connected with the root signifying 'attach', hence 'companions'.
 (2) Lam. I, 8.
 (3) Tosef. II. The suggestion is that Zion was created first, and around it other clods, rocks, formations, continents, were formed until the earth was completed.
 (4) Job XXXVIII, 38.
 (5) Ibid. XXXVII, 6. The picture here (Rashi) is that of a skeleton or frame, which filled in, gradually solidifying from all sides towards the centre, which is last in foundation. All Scriptural verses here are used as intimation not logically but illustratively. Here is an amazing anticipation of the modern theory that the world was founded by the solidification of vapours, the Talmudic account ascribing this gradual creation to the will of God.
 (6) Job XXXVIII, 6.
 (7) Ps. L, 1.

(8) Ibid. v. 2.

(9) Gen. 11, 4.

(10) All things of heaven, the stars, sun and moon.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 55a

‘as one swinging a whip’. — A Tanna taught: As he sprinkled, he did so not upon the ark-cover,¹ but against its thickness. And when he is to sprinkle upwards he first turns his hand down, and when he is to sprinkle downwards he first turns his hand up. — Whence do we infer this?² R. Aha b. Jacob said in the name of R. Zera: Scripture says: And sprinkle it upon the ark-cover and before the ark-cover.³ Now with regard to the he-goat it need not be said [that he should sprinkle] downwards,⁴ for that can be inferred from [the procedure with] the bullock where [the sprinkling] downwards⁵ [is made], when then is it mentioned here too? To compare [the sprinkling] ‘upon’ [the ark-cover with the sprinkling] ‘before’ [it]: Just as [the sprinkling] ‘before’ does not mean ‘before’ actually,⁶ so does sprinkling ‘upon’ [here] not mean really ‘upon’.⁷ On the contrary! It was not necessary to state with regard to the bullock [that the sprinkling should be done] ‘upon’ [the ark-cover], for that could be inferred from the fact that the he-goat's blood was sprinkled upon [it], why then was it mentioned to compare the sprinkling ‘before’ [it], to the sprinkling ‘upon’ [it], viz. just as ‘upon’ means exactly, so shall ‘before’ here mean ‘upon exactly’?⁸ How can you say this? Granted, if you say that the ‘downward’ sprinkling in the case of the he-goat is mentioned for the purpose of comparison,⁹ then [sprinkling] ‘upward’ written in connection with the bullock is necessary in accord with the school of R. Eliezer b. Jacob; for the school of R. Eliezer b. Jacob taught: Upon the face of the ark-cover on the east,¹⁰ this [special case] establishes a general rule viz., that wherever Scripture says ‘before’ [‘face’] it means ‘on the east’; but if you say that the ‘upwards’ in connection with the bullock is mentioned for the purpose of comparison, then for what purpose is the ‘downward’ in connection with the he-goat mentioned?

Our Rabbis taught: ‘And he shall sprinkle it upon the ark-cover and before the ark-cover’. From this we know how often the he-goat's blood is to be sprinkled upwards, viz., once; I do not know, though, how often ‘downwards’, so that I infer that thus: The word ‘blood’ is used in connection with the downward [sprinkling] of the bullock's blood, and the same word ‘blood’ is used about the downward [sprinkling] of the goat's blood: hence just as ‘downwards’ with the bullock means seven times, so does ‘downwards’ with the goat mean ‘seven times’. Or argue it this way: The word ‘blood’ is used in connection with the ‘upward’ [sprinkling] of the goat's blood, and the word ‘blood’ is used in connection with the downward [sprinkling] of the he-goat's blood; hence just as ‘upwards’ with the he-goat means once, thus also shall ‘downwards’ with the he-goat mean ‘once’? Let us see what comparison is legitimate: One may infer ‘downwards’ from ‘downwards’; but one may not infer ‘downwards’ from ‘upwards’. On the contrary: It is legitimate to infer [one aspect of] one matter from [another aspect of] the same matter, but one may not infer one matter from an extraneous one!¹¹ To teach [the true facts] Scripture says: And [he shall] do with its blood¹² as he did with the blood of the bullock.¹³ Now it was not necessary¹⁴ to say ‘as he did’, why then was it said? To show that all the ‘doings’ of them should be alike; as there were seven sprinklings downward with the bullock, so shall there be seven sprinklings downward with the goat. We learn thus how many [sprinklings] downwards there are to be both with bullock and he-goat. But I do not know how many [sprinklings] upwards are to be made with the bullock's blood. And so I infer: The word ‘blood’ is used for the upward [sprinkling] in the case of the he-goat, and the word ‘blood’ is used for the upward [sprinkling] in the case of the bullock. Hence, [the inference that] just as the upward sprinkling in the case of the he-goat has to be made once,¹⁵ so shall the upward [sprinkling] in the case of the bullock be made once. Or argue it this way: The word ‘blood’ is used for the downward [sprinkling] in the case of the bullock, and the word ‘blood’ is used in the case of the upward [sprinkling] of the bullock: hence just as seven downward sprinklings have to be made with the bullock's blood, so must seven upward sprinklings be made with the bullock's blood! Let us see what comparison is legitimate: One may fitly infer [something about] upward [sprinklings] from [other] upward [sprinklings], but one may not infer [something about] upward [sprinklings] from downward [sprinklings]. On the contrary: It is legitimate to infer one [aspect of one] matter from [another aspect of the same] matter, but one may not fitly infer one matter from an extraneous one.¹⁶ Scripture therefore teaches: ‘And he shall do with his blood as he did with the blood of the bullock’! It was not necessary to say ‘with his blood’, why then was it said? To intimate that all the ‘doings’ of them should be alike: just as seven sprinklings downward were made in the case of the bullock, so shall seven sprinklings downward be made in the case of the goat; and just as only one upward sprinkling was made with the he-goat, so only one sprinkling upward had to be made in the case of the bullock.

ONE, ONE AND ONE, ONE AND TWO: Our Rabbis taught: [He counted] One, one and one, one and two, one and three, one and four, one and five, one and six, one and seven¹⁷ — this is the view of R. Meir. R. Judah says: One, one and one, two and one, three and one, four and one, five and one, six and one, seven and one. Yet they are not conflicting,¹⁸ each counting as is customary in his place. At any rate, both agree that the first sprinklings must be counted with each of the following. What is the reason thereof? — R. Eleazar said: In order that he make no mistake in the count.¹⁹ — R. Johanan said: Scripture said: ‘And before the ark-cover shall he sprinkle’. Now it was not necessary to say ‘shall he sprinkle’. [For what teaching purpose] why then was it said, ‘He shall sprinkle’? — To indicate that the first sprinkling shall be counted with each subsequent one. — What is the [practical] difference between the two? — In case he had not counted, but also had made no mistake.²⁰ HE WENT OUT AND PLACED IT ON THE GOLDEN STAND IN THE SANCTUARY: We have learned there:²¹ There were no money chests²² [provided] for obligatory bird-offerings, to prevent confusion. What does ‘to prevent confusion’ mean? — R. Joseph said: To prevent confusion between freewill and obligatory offerings.²³ — Abaye said to him: Let him make two and inscribe on them: This is a freewill-offering, the other obligatory. — R. Judah

(1) I.e., not on the top surface thereof.

(2) That the two upward sprinklings are not made actually upon the ark-cover.

(3) Lev. XVI, 15, with reference to the he-goat.

(4) I.e., ‘before the ark-cover’.

(5) V. infra.

(6) The blood in the downward sprinkling fell on the ground not on the ark-cover. V. Rashi. Cur. edd.: ‘does not mean upon’.

(7) Not only not exactly upwards, but really downwards.

(8) So that in his downward sprinkling the blood is to touch the thickness of the ark-cover, whilst in his upward sprinkling it should touch its upper surface.

(9) As is stated at first.

(10) So lit., Lev. XVI, 14.

(11) I.e., the he-goat from the bullock.

(12) Sc. of the he-goat.

(13) Lev. XVI, 15.

(14) Since the sprinkling ‘upon’ or ‘before’ has been expressly mentioned in connection with the he-goat. Any apparently superfluous word or words were chosen for intimation or indication.

(15) As the Scriptural text indicates.

(16) The assumption that different parts of the same procedure are governed by similar rules seems more justified than that similar aspects of altogether different matters have such regulations.

(17) Tosef. II.

(18) In the place of R. Meir the tens were counted first, the singles following, whilst the opposite way of counting prevailed in the city of R. Judah.

(19) And include the one sprinkled upward among the seven which he has to sprinkle downwards (Bertinoro).

(20) If counting is obligatory, he had failed to do it properly. If the only purpose is the prevention of error and he has managed to avoid it, then de facto all is right.

(21) J. Shek. VI, 6.

(22) These were special money chests into which persons who had a freewill-offering of a bird to offer would put in money in payment of the offerings which the priests would make on their behalf. No such chests were however available for obligatory offerings of a bird.

(23) There were different regulations governing the ritual of the freewill and obligatory offerings respectively, for of the obligatory birds one was offered up as a burnt-offering, the other as a sin-offering, whereas all freewill-offerings were burnt-offerings, these differences implying distinctions in the ritual. Now if one of the money chests were confused with another, so that the priest would offer a freewill-offering from the money meant for obligatory offerings and vice versa, the offering would be rendered invalid.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 55b

does not consider such inscriptions [of any value]. For we have learnt: R. JUDAH SAID: THERE WAS NO MORE THAN ONE STAND. Now why not two? Evidently because they might be mixed up! But then let him provide two and write upon them: This is for the bullock and this for the he-goat? Hence you must¹ assume that R. Judah does not consider such inscriptions [of any value]. An objection was raised in the Academy: There were thirteen money chests in the Temple, on which were inscribed: 'new shekels', 'old shekels', 'bird-offerings', 'young birds for the whole offering', 'wood', 'frankincense', 'gold for the mercy-seat', and on six of them: 'freewill-offerings'. 'New shekels': [i.e.] those shekels due each year; 'old shekels': [i.e.] one who had not paid his shekel last year must pay it the next year. 'Bird-offerings', these are turtle-doves. 'Young birds for the whole offerings', these are young pigeons; and both of these are for whole offerings. This is the view of R. Judah.² — When R. Dimi came [from Palestine] he said: In the West³ they said: It is a preventive measure against the case of a sin-offering whose owner has died.⁴ But do we indeed take that into consideration? Have we not learnt: If someone sends his sin-offering from a far-away province,⁵ it is offered up in the assumption that he is alive?⁶ — Rather [the preventive measure is] against the case of a sin-offering whose owner has assuredly died.⁷ But in that case let us separate four zuz⁸ and cast them into the sea,⁹ so that the rest will be available for use! R. Judah rejects the principle of Bererah.¹⁰ Whence do we know this? Would you say from what we have learnt:¹¹ If a man buys wine from the Cutheans¹² on the eve of Sabbath, as it is getting dark,¹³ he may say: Let the two logs¹⁴ which I am about to set apart¹⁵ be heave-offering

(1) Because the priest might overlook them.

(2) Shek VI, 6; for notes v. Sonc. ed. a.l. Hence R. Judah apparently did consider inscriptions of value.

(3) Palestine.

(4) A sin-offering, the owner of which died, must not be sacrificed but must be left to die, v. supra 50a. Now if the owner died, then the money for the value of the sin-offering which he may have put in one of the chests must be thrown into the sea. That money, being unusable and confused with other monies in the chest, would render them all useless. This is the confusion referred to above, hence the non-provision of money chests for obligatory offerings of a bird.

(5) Lit., 'province of the sea'.

(6) V. Git. 28a.

(7) It is known that he died after having deposited his money in the chest for the bird-offerings before having offered it up.

(8) The usual price of one dove.

(9) And thus free the rest of the monies for their designated purposes, on the assumption that these four zuz represented the money for the sin-offering of a bird and was that deposited by the deceased.

(10) Lit., 'choosing', 'choice', then subsequent selection, retrospective designation, i.e. , the legal effect resulting from an actual selection or disposal of things previously undefined as to their purpose (Jast.).

(11) Demai VI, 4.

(12) Before the prohibition against their wines had been decreed. As the Cutheans (Samaritans) were suspected of neglecting the laws of terumah and tithe the buyer must himself set these aside before he can be permitted to drink any of the wine.

(13) If the purchase took place on the Sabbath eve immediately before dusk (when there is no time to remove these priestly and levitical dues from the wine) and he requires the wine for the Sabbath. It is prohibited to separate priestly or levitical dues on the Sabbath, v. Bez. 36b.

(14) A log (v. Glos.) is c. 549 cubic centimetres.

(15) For the hundred logs contained in the cask he bought.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 56a

ten¹ tithe-offering, and nine second tithe, and after he sets aside the redemption² money for the second tithe he may drink it at once. These are the words of R. Meir.

(1) 'Logs which I am about to set aside'.

(2) Lit., 'to profane'. 'to desecrate'; to cause the loss of priestly status or of sacred use, to make available for private use. With money (cf. Deut. XIV, 25) that he has at home or anywhere else.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 56b

R. Judah, R. Jose and R. Simeon prohibit it. Hence we see that he rejects the principle of Bererah! — How does that follow? Perhaps the matter is different there, as the motive is taught there: They said to R. Meir: Don't you admit that if the bottle burst he would be found retrospectively to have drunk untithed wine? He said to them: If it bursts.¹ — Rather is it to be derived from what Ayo taught: for he taught: R. Judah said: No man may stipulate two possibilities at the same time. But if the Sage comes from the east, his 'Erub² applies eastwards alone; if he comes from the west, his 'Erub applies westwards alone, but never in both directions. And we asked concerning it: What is the difference touching both directions that it cannot apply, it is only because the principle of Bererah is rejected,³ the same ought to apply even [where the condition was 'if the Sage comes] from the east or west'? Thereupon R. Johanan said: In this case the Sage has arrived already.⁴ But now that we maintain that R. Judah rejects the principle of Bererah whilst upholding the value of inscriptions [notices],⁵ also for the Day of Atonement let there be prepared two stands with such inscriptions! Because the high priest is fatigued, he would not pay attention to them. For should you not agree to this consideration, he could really do without any such inscriptions, for one [contains] more [blood], and the other less.⁶ And if you were to say, he does not receive the whole of it,⁷ but R. Judah said: He who slays the animal, must receive the whole blood, as it is said: The whole blood of the bullock he shall pour upon the base of the altar.⁸ And if you were to say some thereof might be spilled; — still, one [blood] is lighter [in colour], the other darker. Hence you must needs explain that the high priest, because of his fatigue, could not pay sufficient attention [to the difference in the blood]; thus is it here: because of his fatigue the high priest could not pay sufficient attention [to the inscriptions].

Once a man went down [to the praying desk] in the presence of Raba⁹ and read: Then he came forth, and placed it upon the second stand in the Temple. He took the blood of the bullock and deposited the blood of the he-goat. He said to him: In one point in accord with the Sages,¹⁰ in another with R. Judah?¹¹ Rather say: He deposited the blood of the he-goat and took the blood of the bullock.

AND HE SPRINKLED THEREOF UPON THE CURTAIN OUTSIDE OPPOSITE THE ARK: Our Rabbis taught: And so shall he do for the tent of meeting.¹² What does that come to teach? That as he sprinkles in the Holy of Holies, thus must he sprinkle in the Hekal, i.e., just as in the Holy of Holies he sprinkles once upward and seven times downward, from the blood of the bullock, thus shall he sprinkle in the Hekal. That dwelleth with them in the midst of their uncleanness¹³ i.e., even when they are unclean, the Divine Presence is among them.

A certain Sadducee¹⁴ said to R. Hanina:

- (1) This is a contingency that need not be reckoned with, since a guard may be appointed to watch out for such theoretical situations.
- (2) The word 'erub' means interweaving, mixture, confusion, conjunction. It signifies also a symbolical act, by which the legal fiction of community or continuity is established. With reference to the Sabbath limits: a person deposits, before the Sabbath (or the Holy Day), certain eatables to remain in their place over the next day, by which act he transfers his abode to that place and his movements on the Sabbath are measured from it as the centre. On the Sabbath in the area around a town or place the limits are two thousand cubits in every direction. The case here discussed is that of one who expects a scholar outside his city and is desirous of meeting him. He deposits the 'erub for this purpose. V. 'Er., Sonc. ed., pp. 252f. notes.
- (3) It being held that the choice the man made between the two Sages on the following day may not have been his choice at twilight on the previous day when the validity of the 'erub must take effect.
- (4) Sc. at twilight of the Sabbath eve he was already within the permitted Sabbath limit of that man's town though the latter was unaware of the fact. As the validity of the 'erub was made dependent on an event that, though unknown to the speaker, had actually taken place before twilight of the Sabbath eve there can be no question as to the 'erub's effectiveness. It is not the speaker's subsequent knowledge of the fact that renders the 'erub valid retrospectively, but the presence of the Sage at the crucial moment. The question of bererah, therefore, does not at all arise.
- (5) As so proved from Shek. VI, 5.
- (6) One contains the blood of the bullock which is of a larger quantity than that of the he-goat.
- (7) Sc. the blood of the bullock.
- (8) Lev. IV, 7.
- (9) He acted as deputy of the congregation (public reader) and read the order of the service of the Day of Atonement.
- (10) The reference to the second stand.
- (11) Stating that he took first the blood of the bullock and then deposited the blood of the he-goat.
- (12) Lev. XVI, 16.
- (13) Ibid.
- (14) A censorial corruption of Min (v. Glos.). A Sadducean would not have spoken of Israel as 'you'.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 57a

Now you are surely unclean, for it is written: Her filthiness was in her skirts.¹ -He answered: Come and see what is written concerning them: 'That dwelleth with them in the midst of their uncleanness', i.e., even at the time when they are unclean, the Divine Presence is among them. — But may something inferred by analogy be used as basis of another by analogy?² — The inference here came from the subject itself for which inference was made, together with another, thus cannot be considered inference by analogy.³ This will be well in accord with the view that such inference is not inference by analogy, but what can be said according to the view that even that is inference by analogy? — Only the localities are inferred here from one another.⁴ Or, if you like, say: He infers the outside [sprinklings] from the inside ones simultaneously.⁵ It was taught: When he sprinkled, he did not sprinkle directly upon the curtain, but towards it. R. Eliezer b. Jose said: I saw it⁶ in Rome and there were upon it many drops of blood both of the bullock and the he-goat of the Day of Atonement. — Perhaps these stains were those from the [blood of] the bullock [offered up] for an error of the community,⁷ or of the goats [offered in expiation] for idolatry? — He saw that they were in their regular order.⁸ It has also been taught⁹ in connection with the bullock offered up for an error of the community: When he sprinkled the drops were not to reach the curtain, but if they did, they just did.¹⁰ And R. Eleazar b. Jose said: I saw it in Rome and there were upon it many drops of blood from the bullock offered up for an error of the congregation and from the he-goats offered up for idolatry. But perhaps they came from the bullock and he-goat of the Day of Atonement? — He saw that they were not in their regular order.

If the blood [of the one] was mixed up with the blood [of the other],¹¹ — Raba holds, he sprinkles once upwards and seven times downwards, and it serves for both. When this was reported before R. Jeremiah, he said: Those foolish Babylonians, because they live in a dark country, they utter dark teachings.¹² Surely he would be giving the upward sprinkling [of the blood] of the he-goat before the downward sprinkling [of the blood] of the bullock, whereas the Torah said: And when he hath made an end of atoning for the holy place,¹³ [implying] he must complete [the sprinkling of] the blood of the bullock, then complete [the sprinkling of] the blood of the he-goat. Rather, said R. Jeremiah: He sprinkles once upward and seven times downward in the name of the bullock, and then he sprinkles once upward and seven times downward in the name of the he-goat.

If the blood of one was mixed up with the blood of the other in the midst¹⁴ of the last sprinklings, then R. Papa wanted to say before Raba, he makes seven downward sprinklings in the name of the bullock and he-goat, then makes one upward in the name of the he-goat. Said Raba to him: Now they had just called us foolish, now they might call us the most foolish of the foolish for we teach them but they learn not. Surely now he would be making the downward sprinkling [of the blood] of the he-goat before the upward sprinkling [of the blood] of the he-goat, whereas the Torah said: Sprinkle first upward, then downward.

(1) Lam. I, 9.

(2) Above (55a) we inferred the number of upward and downward sprinklings with the blood of the bullock and the he-goat respectively. Here again an attempt is made to infer through analogy the number of upward and downward sprinklings in the Sanctuary from the sprinklings in the Holy of Holies. The rule is that in the laws appertaining to sacrifices something obtained by analogy may not become the basis or source of new inference by analogy; such inference is legitimate only when based upon the Biblical text itself.

(3) In the primary analogy the main law prescribing upward and downward sprinklings is definitely taught in the Biblical text, both in the case of the bullock and the he-goat, it is only their number that is inferred from one another. In such a case the primary analogy may be made the basis for a further analogy. It is only when the very law itself is mentioned in one case only and then inferred through analogy for the other that no further inference by analogy may be made. If e.g., no reference had been made in the Biblical text to any upward or downward sprinkling, such regulation being based on inference from one to the other, it would then be wrong to endeavour to derive another law by analogy from the first law inferred by analogy.

(4) I.e., whereas in the first analogy the inference was made from one animal for the other, the second is concerned in the localities — i.e., the Holy of Holies and the Temple, extending the sprinkling regulations from the former to the latter.

(5) The second inference is not made via the animals but directly from the sprinklings within the Holy of Holies to those outside, in the Temple Proper.

(6) V. Me'il. 17b: R. Eliezer was in Rome and had occasion to see the holy vessels in the royal treasury, among them the curtain of the Holy of Holies.

(7) Lev. IV, 13 and Num. XV, 24.

(8) One on top of the other, as the result of the motion of the priest, in the manner of one swinging a whip.

(9) V. D.S. Cur. edd. 'We also learnt'.

(10) De facto it did not matter: even if the drops reached the curtain there was no cancellation of the service.

(11) The blood of the bullock with the blood of the he-goat.

(12) V. Pes., Sonc. ed., 60b.

(13) Lev. XVI, 20.

(14) I.e., after he had made the upward sprinkling with the blood of the bullock.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 57b

Rather, said Raba, he makes seven downward sprinklings in the name of the bullock, then makes one upward and seven downward sprinklings in the name of the he-goat.

If the cups [of blood] have become confused,¹ then he sprinkles, and sprinkles again, and sprinkles once more, three times.² If part³ of the blood became mixed up and part not, then obviously when he makes the sprinklings he makes them from that part which is definitely known [to be unmixed]; but as for the other,⁴ is it to be considered a remainder and must thus be poured out at the base⁵ of the altar, or is it to be considered 'rejected' [from sacred use] and must be poured into the canal?⁶ — R. Papa said: Even according to the view that one cup renders the other a remainder,⁷ that applies only where he could make the sprinklings if he wanted to do so but in this case,⁸ even if he so desired, he would be unable to make the sprinkling. R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said to R. Papa: On the contrary! Even according to the view that one cup renders the other 'rejected', that applies only if he rejected it with his hands [deliberately], but where he had not rejected it with his hands it would not apply? For it has been taught: Above it is said: And the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out,⁹ and below: And all the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out.¹⁰ Whence do we know that, in the case of a sin-offering, if he had received the blood in four cups and sprinkled from each one cup thereof¹¹ one sprinkling, all the remaining blood must be poured out at the base? To teach us that Scripture said: 'And all the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out'. One might have assumed that even if he made the four sprinklings from one of the [cups], to teach us correctly, Scripture said: 'And the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out' i.e., only this is to be poured out at the base but they [the rest] are to be poured into the canal. R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon said: Whence do we know that if he received the blood of a sin-offering in four cups and made the four sprinklings from one of them, that they must all be poured out at the base? To teach us that Scripture said: 'And all the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out'.¹² But according to R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon is it not written: 'And the remaining blood thereof shall he pour out'? — R. Ashi said: This is meant to exclude the [blood that] remains in the neck of the animal.

HE Poured the blood of the bullock into the blood of the he-goat: We were taught in accordance with the view that one mixed [the blood] to sprinkle upon the horns [of the inner altar], for it has been said: R. Josaia and R. Jonathan [were disputing], one said: One mixed [the bloods], the other one did not do so. It may be ascertained that it is R. Josaia who held that one mixed [the bloods]; for he said: Although Scripture does not state: 'together',¹³ is it not written: it is as if 'together' were written. You might also say that it is R. Jonathan, but here it is different, because Scripture states 'once'.¹⁴ It has been taught contrary to this, our reply: 'And he shall take of the blood of the bullock and of the blood of the goat'¹⁵ i.e., that they are to be mixed. This is the view of R. Josaia.

(1) The priest not knowing which of the cups contained the blood of the bullock and which the blood of the he-goat.

(2) In each case he makes one sprinkling upward and seven downward from one cup then again from the second cup, finally again from the first cup, so that in any case the blood of the bullock would have been sprinkled before that of the he-goat. For, if the first cup was actually that containing the bullock's blood, and the second that containing the he-goat's blood, he has fulfilled his duty properly, with the first and second series of sprinklings. If, however, the first cup happened to be that of the he-goat, then such sprinkling was of no avail, and the second cup being that containing the bullock's blood and the third again the one containing the he-goat's blood, are in order and the service is performed in accord with the regulations which postulate that the sprinklings made with the bullock's blood came first.

(3) As e.g., when the blood contained in two cups was poured into a third, so that each of the two cups contained a quantity of blood.

(4) The mixed blood in the third cup.

(5) V. Zeb. 47a: the remaining blood was poured over the western base of the outer altar.

(6) I.e., since the sprinklings did not come from it, shall the blood be relegated, together with all waste of the Temple Court, through the canal, to the brook of Kidron.

(7) Whenever the priest has received the blood in two cups but has sprinkled from one only, the blood in the other cup is poured out over the base of the altar.

(8) Where part of the blood of the two cups was poured into a third.

(9) Lev. IV, 25.

(10) Ibid. v, 34.

(11) The blood of the sin-offering was sprinkled upon the four corners of the altar.

(12) Thus we see that the first Tanna treats the blood in the cup or cups from which no sprinkling has been made as rejected, to be poured out in the canal, whereas R. Eliezer b. R. Simeon treats it as the remainder, to be poured out over the base.

(13) In Sanh. 66a these two Sages debate the question as to whether literal direction is necessary to indicate that a prohibition does not refer to two persons together where the contrary might be assumed, R. Judah holding that such direction is necessary while R. Jonathan holds it is not. Thus, on the view of R. Josaia, even though no definite instruction is to be found in the text, the inference that the blood of the bullock and he-goat be sprinkled together, appears legitimate according to the analogous consistence of the view.

(14) Ex. XXX, 10. And Aaron shall make atonement upon the horns of it once (a year). The word is here interpreted to mean that one sprinkling is to be made of the blood of both animals.

(15) Lev. XVI, 18.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 58a

R. Jonathan said: [He sprinkled] separately from the one and from the other. Said R. Josaia to him: But was it not said already: 'Once'? To this R. Jonathan replied: But was it not said already: 'From the blood of the bullock and the blood of the he-goat'? Why then was the word 'once' stated? To tell you, [sprinkle] once, but not twice from the blood of the bullock; once and not twice from the blood of the he-goat. Another [Baraitha] taught: 'And he shall take from the blood of the bullock and from the blood of the he-goat' i.e., that the two shall be mixed together. You say that they shall be mixed together! but perhaps he should sprinkle separately from the one and from the other? To teach us the right thing, Scripture says: 'once' and the anonymous [Baraitha] is in agreement with the view of R. Joshua.

HE Poured THE [CONTENTS OF] THE FULL VESSEL INTO THE EMPTY ONE: Rami b. Hama asked of R. Hisda: If he placed one bowl into another and this received the blood, what then? Is homogeneous matter considered an interposition or not?¹ He answered: You have learnt that already: HE Poured [THE CONTENTS OF] THE FULL VESSEL INTO THE EMPTY ONE. Does this mean that he placed the full bowl into the empty one?² — No, it means that he poured the full vessel into the empty one.³ But the first part states already: HE Poured THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK INTO THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT? — [It is repeated] in order [to make sure] that he will mix it very well indeed.

Come and hear: If he stood upon any vessel, or upon his fellow's foot, it is invalid!⁴ — It is different with his neighbour's foot, because he [his fellow] does not abandon it.⁵ Some there are who say: This is how he asked of him: Is such the manner of ministration or not? Come and hear: For the school of R. Ishmael taught:[And they shall take] all the vessels of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary,⁶ i.e., two⁷ vessels, but one ministry [service].

Rami b. Hama asked of R. Hisda: If he deposited bast in the bowl and he received the blood therewith, what then? Is heterogeneous matter considered an interposition⁸ or not? Is it not considered an interposition, since it penetrates [the blood], or is there no difference? — He replied to him: We have learnt that: He empties out the water until the sponge is reached.⁹ — It is different with water because it is very weak. Some there are who say: This is how he answered him: In the case of the blood¹⁰ it is permitted, but in the case of the fistful it is invalid.¹¹

(1) The priest is to receive the blood. If one bowl is considered an interposition, then the priest, whose hand does not hold the bowl containing the blood, is not really receiving the blood, the ministration then should be cancelled as invalid. (This discussion refers, as Rashi explains, not just to the Day of Atonement, but to the service on any day of the year). The two bowls are homogeneous and if they be considered as interposition, then the above question follows. With regard to heterogeneous matter, there is no doubt; it surely is considered an interposition, v. Tosaf. s.v. ג'י.

(2) That would indicate that homogeneous matter is not considered an interposition and would thus settle the above question in the affirmative.

(3) So that the situation is entirely different and no inference as to the interposition of homogeneous matter is possible.

(4) If the priest, in receiving the blood, stood upon a vessel, then that vessel was interposing between the floor of the Sanctuary and the priest, therefore invalidating the service. (Zeb. 24a). Similarly, if he stood upon his fellow's foot. The foot, however, is homogeneous and the fact that the service is cancelled, would seem to indicate that homogeneous matter is considered an interposition, so that the question above would appear to be answered.

(5) Homogeneous matter is not considered an interposition, but a human foot is an undeniable entity.

(6) Num. IV, 12.

(7) I.e., vessels in the plural means at least two (although the plural is indefinite as to the maximum, there is the undeniable minimum of two); whereas the word ministry refers to one ministration only.

(8) The bast is heterogeneous to the bowl, hence should be considered an interposition. But since the blood penetrates the bast and reaches the bowl, does it cancel the interposing bast, so that, as it were, the priest had received the blood in the bowl proper, as viewed retroactively, or not?

(9) Parah VI, 3: If someone was mixing the ashes (of the red heifer) in the water of a trough of stone, and there was a sponge in the trough then the water in the sponge is invalid, as a sponge is not a vessel. What should he do? The water in the trough should be poured out until the sponge is reached and the water is valid. Hence we see that a sponge is not considered interposing so as to invalidate the whole water, and similarly here, the bast should not be considered as interposing between the bowl and the blood.

(10) Because it is thin.

(11) For the fistful of the flour-offering was required to be received in the vessel after having first been taken, analogous to the receiving of the blood, hence any interposing object would render the ministration invalid.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 58b

MISHNAH. AND HE SHALL GO OUT UNTO THE ALTAR THAT IS BEFORE THE LORD,¹ — THAT IS THE GOLDEN ALTAR.² THEN HE BEGINS TO SPRINKLE³ DOWNWARD.⁴ WHENCE DOES HE COMMENCE? FROM THE NORTH-EAST HORN [OF THE ALTAR], THEN THE NORTH-WEST, THEN THE SOUTH-WEST, THEN THE SOUTH-EAST. WHERE HE COMMENCES [SPRINKLING] ON THE OUTER ALTAR,⁵ THERE HE COMPLETES [SPRINKLING] ON THE INNER ALTAR. R. ELIEZER SAID: HE REMAINED IN HIS PLACE AND SPRINKLED. AND HE WOULD SPRINKLE EVERY HORN FROM BELOW UPWARDS, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE HORN AT WHICH HE WAS STANDING, WHICH HE WOULD SPRINKLE FROM ABOVE DOWNWARDS. THEN HE SPRINKLED THE TOP⁶ OF THE ALTAR SEVEN TIMES AND Poured OUT THE REMAINDER OF THE BLOOD AT THE WESTERN BASE OF THE OUTER ALTAR. AND [THE REMAINDER OF THE BLOOD SPRINKLED] ON THE OUTER ALTAR HE Poured OUT AT THE SOUTHERN BASE. BOTH MINGLED IN THE CANAL⁷ AND FLOWED INTO THE BROOK KIDRON AND THEY WERE SOLD TO GARDENERS AS MANURE AND BY USING THEM ONE TRANSGRESSES THE LAW OF TRESPASS.⁸ GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: 'And he shall go out unto the altar', what does that mean to teach? R. Nehemiah said: Since we find that, in connection with the bullock offered up for [the transgression in error of] 'any of the commandments',⁹ the priest stands outside the altar and sprinkles towards the curtain,¹⁰ one might have assumed that here the same would take place, therefore Scripture said: 'And he shall go out unto the altar', hence he must have been found before on the inner side of the altar.¹¹ — Another [Baraitha] taught: 'Before the Lord'. What does that mean to teach? R. Nehemiah said: Since we find with the bullock and he-goat of the Day of Atonement that the priest stands on the inner side of the altar and sprinkles upon the curtain, as he sprinkles one might have assumed here the same would be the case, therefore Scripture has come to teach us: The altar of sweet incense before the Lord, which is in the tent of meeting,¹² that implies: the altar before the Lord, but not the priest before the Lord. How that? He stands outside the altar and sprinkles.

HE BEGAN TO SPRINKLE DOWNWARD: Our Rabbis taught: He began to sprinkle downward.

Whence did he commence? From the south-eastern horn, [proceeding to] the south-western, north-western and north-eastern horns respectively. This is the view of R. Akiba, — R. Jose the Galilean says: [He started from] the north-eastern, [proceeding to] the north-western, southwestern and south-eastern horns respectively.¹³ At the place where, according to R. Jose the Galilean, he commenced, there according to R. Akiba, he stopped. At the place where R. Akiba would have him start, there R. Jose the Galilean would have him stop. All agree at any rate that he does not start at the point he first comes to.¹⁴ What is the reason? Said Samuel: Scripture said: And he shall go out unto the altar, i.e., only after he has gone over the whole altar. But according to R. Akiba he ought to go around it to the right.¹⁵ Shall we say [then] that they are disputing a teaching of Rami b. Ezekiel? For Rami b. Ezekiel said: Concerning the sea¹⁶ which Solomon made, [Scripture states]: It stood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east; and the sea was set upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.¹⁷ Hence you are taught that all the turns you make [in the Temple] must be to the right, i.e., eastward;¹⁸ one Master [R. Jose the Galilean] agreeing with Rami b. Ezekiel, the other Master [R. Akiba] disagreeing? — No, all agree with the view of Rami b. Ezekiel and the matter of dispute here is, rather, this: One Master holds that [the regulations] within¹⁹ are inferred from [those] without,²⁰ the other Master holding we do not infer [the regulations] ‘within’ from [those] ‘without’. But according to R. Akiba, granted that he does not infer ‘within’ from ‘without’, let him be permitted to do it one way if he so chooses, or the other way if he so chooses?²¹ — R. Akiba will tell you: As far as de jure regulation is concerned he ought to start at the horn to which he had come first, for Resh Lakish has said: One must not forego the occasion for performing a religious act;²² and the reason why he does not do so is because Scripture said: ‘And he shall go out unto the altar,’ i.e., until he has gone outside the whole altar. Therefore as soon as he has sprinkled the blood on this horn, he returns to the horn with which he should have started from the beginning.²³

(1) Lev. XVI, 18.

(2) Ex. XXX, I.

(3) Lit., ‘to cleanse from sin’.

(4) Lit., ‘he goes down’ i.e., he applies the blood to the horn of the altar beginning at the top and leading his finger downward.

(5) Zeb. 53a.

(6) This word is variously interpreted in the Gemara. It may mean ‘back’, i.e., top; it has been claimed as ‘the pure, real surface’ (of gold) i.e., free from coals or ashes; as the centre of the altar front.

(7) V. Shek. IV, 2.

(8) Lev. V, 15.

(9) Lev. IV, 1ff.

(10) V. infra.

(11) The text should have read: ‘He shall make atonement on the altar that is before the Lord’. ‘And he shall go out unto the altar’ has no special significance. But since we find that on the occasion of other sacrifices he was standing outside, the words ‘and he shall go out’ here indicate that in this case he was on the inner side.

(12) Lev. IV, 7. The words ‘before the Lord’ are in themselves superfluous — for obviously the altar was ‘before the Lord’ — but are to indicate that only the altar was ‘before the Lord’ but not the priest. The latter stood outside and did not interpose between the altar and the curtain either when he sprinkled the blood on the corners or against the curtains.

(13) The dispute hinges on the question as to whether there were one or two curtains before the Holy of Holies. R. Akiba holds there were two, the outer one clasped on the south side. As the priest came from the Holy of Holies from the south in order to proceed with the sprinkling against the curtain, the first horn of the altar he meets is the south-western, however, he did not sprinkle, because of the interpretation of ‘And he shall go out unto the altar’ (v. infra) so that he begins the sprinkling on the south-eastern side and then turning to the left continues with the outer corners. R. Jose the Galilean holds, in accord with R. Jose, that there was but one curtain, clasped on the north side, so that as the priest came forth from the north he reached first the north-western horn of the altar, where, however, he did not sprinkle but at the north-eastern horn, and then turning to the right he returned to the north-western horn to continue his sprinkling.

- (14) Coming from the west, he first reaches one of the western horns of the altar (v. previous note), yet does not commence with it.
- (15) V. p. 273, n. 5.
- (16) The water reservoir in the Temple of Solomon.
- (17) I Kings VII, 25.
- (18) This is derived from the order in which the sides are enumerated; the phrase 'eastward' does not apply here but is taken from the passage where this principle is originally quoted in connection with the ramp. v. supra 45a and Zeb. 62b.
- (19) The inner altar.
- (20) The Sea of Solomon.
- (21) Either to the right or to the left.
- (22) V. supra 33a.
- (23) V. p. 273. n. 5.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 59a

Or if you like, say: If we hold that the sprinkling [on the inner altar] was done in walking around,¹ there would be general agreement that we infer 'within' from 'without', but the dispute here rests on this: one Master holds the sprinkling was done by circular movements of the hand, the other Master holding the sprinkling was done in walking around. Or if you like, say: All agree that the sprinkling [on the inner altar] was done by circular movements of the hand, the point of dispute here is: one Master holds, we may infer [the regulations touching] the hand from [those governing] the foot, the other Master holding that we do not infer the 'hand' from the 'foot'. But does R. Jose the Galilean hold that the sprinkling was done by circular movement of the hand? Surely, since the second part reads: R. Eliezer said: HE REMAINED IN HIS PLACE AND SPRINKLED,² it follows that the first Tanna did not hold so?³ Hence it is obvious, as we have answered before: One Master holds the sprinkling was done by circular movement of the hand, whereas the other Master holds it was done by walking around. And if you like to say: The dispute lies therein: that one Master holds that the [phrase] 'round about' [mentioned in connection] with the inner altar signifies the same as 'round about' [mentioned in connection] with the outer altar,⁴ whereas the other Master holds that the whole of the inner altar occupied as much space as one horn of the outer altar.⁵

It was taught: R. Ishmael said: Two high priests had survived the First Sanctuary. One said: I had done the sprinkling [in the inner altar] by circular movement of my hand; the other said: I had done the sprinkling by walking around the altar. The first advanced a reason for his procedure, so did the second. The first said: The 'round about' of the inner altar had to be as the round about' of the outer altar; the other stating: The whole of the inner altar occupied as much space as one horn of the outer altar.

R. ELIEZER SAID: HE REMAINED IN HIS PLACE AND SPRINKLED. With whom does our Mishnah agree? — With R. Judah. For it was taught: R. Meir said, R. Eliezer said: He remained in his place and sprinkled. And all the sprinklings he made from above downward with the exception of the one athwart, which he made from below upward. R. Judah said, R. Eliezer said: He remained in his place and sprinkled. All the sprinklings he made from below upward with the exception of this one right before him which he made from above downward, to prevent his garments from becoming sullied.⁶

THEN HE SPRINKLED THE TOP [TIHARO] OF THE ALTAR: What does 'TIHARO' mean? — Rabbah son of R. Shila said: The centre of the altar-front, as people say: 'The moon-light [tiharo] shines,' meaning thereby the middle of the day. An objection was raised: As he sprinkles, he sprinkles neither upon the ashes, nor upon the embers, but he removes the coal to both sides and sprinkles?⁷ — Rather, said Rabbah son of R. Shila: [It means] the cleared surface⁸ of the altar, as it is written: And the like of the very heaven for [tohar] clearness.⁹

It was taught: Hanania said: He would sprinkle¹⁰ standing on the north side.¹¹ — R. Jose said: He would sprinkle standing on the south side.¹¹ Wherein are they disputing? — One [Hanania] holds the entrance was through the curtain on the south, whereas the other [R. Jose] holds it was on the north side.¹² At any rate all agree that on the place where he completed the sprinkling on the horns there he would sprinkle on the top thereof. What is the reason? — Scripture says: And he shall cleanse it...and hallow it,¹³ i.e., where he hallows it,¹⁴ there shall he cleanse it [we-tiharo].¹⁵

AND THE REMAINDER OF THE BLOOD HE SPRINKLED UPON THE WESTERN BASE OF THE OUTER ALTAR: For Scripture said: And all the remaining blood of the bullock shall he pour out [etc.],¹⁶ and as he comes forth [from the Sanctuary] he meets this [side of the altar base] first.

AND THAT OF THE OUTER ALTAR HE Poured ON THE SOUTHERN BASE: Our Rabbis taught: ‘The base of the altar’¹⁷ i.e., the southern base. You say it is the southern base. But perhaps it is not so, but rather the western base? I will tell you: Let his coming down from the ramp be inferred from his going out of the Sanctuary: Just as when he goes out of the Sanctuary [he pours out the remainder of the blood] at [the point] nearest to him, and which is it? — the western base, so when he comes down from the ramp [he pours out the remainder of the blood] at the point nearest to him, and which is it? — the southern base.

It was taught: R. Ishmael said: Both times [blood was poured out] at the western base. — R. Simeon b. Yohai: No, [it was] at the southern base. — It is quite right, according to R. Ishmael: He holds that one may infer that concerning which no details are given from that which is thus described,¹⁸ but what is the reason of R. Simeon b. Yohai? — R. Ashi said: He holds the entrance [to the Sanctuary] was at the south.¹⁹ The teaching of the school of R. Ishmael was taught in the school of R. Simeon b. Yohai:²⁰ In both cases it was the southern base. As a mnemotechnic sign remember: The men won over the man.²¹

BOTH MINGLED IN THE CANAL AND FLOWED etc.: Our Rabbis taught: One transgresses the law of trespass with [sacrificial] blood. These are the words of R. Meir. R. Simeon and the Sages hold: One does not commit such trespass.

(1) As was the case with the sprinkling on the outer altar.

(2) So that the sprinkling was done by the circular movement of his hand.

(3) The first Tanna (anonymous) of our Mishnah is R. Jose the Galilean, in accordance with his view in the Baraita cited. Now since R. Eliezer, in disputing, states that the sprinkling was made by circular movements of the hand, it is obvious that R. Jose did not think so. Hence the statement ‘All agree that the sprinkling was done by circular movement of the hand’ is wrong.

(4) V. Lev. XVI, 18. And...he shall put it upon the horns of the altar round about. In the case of the outer altar, the sprinkling was done by walking around, the analogy would render the same procedure proper with the inner altar.

(5) One cubit square.

(6) The purpose of this procedure was practical, beyond any ritualistic significance: he sprinkled upon the horn before him from above downward, lest some blood drip into his sleeve.

(7) The first interpretation of the word ‘tiharo’ would identify it with the middle of the side of the altar. But the passage just adduced indicates it must be the top. Cf. supra, p. 69, n. 2.

(8) Lit., ‘exposed (part)’.

(9) Ex. XXIV, 10.

(10) The seven sprinklings on the top of the altar, as explained supra.

(11) I.e., on the side where he completed the round of sprinkling on the altar.

(12) V. supra p. 274, n. 1, 5.

(13) Lev. XVI, 19.

(14) On the horns, i.e., on the horn where he completes the hallowing.

(15) By means of the seven sprinklings.

(16) Lev. IV, 7.

(17) Lev. IV, 30 with reference to an individual sin-offering.

(18) With regard to blood-offerings which are sprinkled on the inner altar there is the Biblical statement: Upon the base of the altar . . . which is at the entrance to the tent of meeting (Lev. IV, 7 and 18), this being the western base; there being no such statement concerning those offerings of which the blood is on the outer altar, the inference is legitimate.

(19) [The whole of the outer altar being on the northern half of the court so that when the priest came out of the Sanctuary the first base he met was the southern, v. supra 16b.]

(20) [I.e., R. Ishmael had retracted his view so that the disciples of R. Simeon b. Yohai could report the teaching in the name of R. Ishmael (Rashi).]

(21) 'The men drew nigh', i.e., won over the man, viz., the disciples of R. Simeon prevailed upon R. Ishmael to agree with them.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 59b

Now the dispute touches only the question as to whether [there is a trespass] Rabbinically;¹ according to Biblical law, however, there is no trespass.² When [do we know] these things? — 'Ulla said: Scripture said: 'To you'³ i.e., it belongs to you. The school of R. Simeon taught: To make atonement⁴ i.e., I have given it for atonement, but not for [the law of] trespass [to apply]. R. Johanan said: Scripture said: 'It' i.e., [implying that] it is before atonement: just as after atonement one cannot be guilty of trespass concerning it,⁵ thus can one before atonement not be guilty of trespass concerning it. But perhaps say: It is after the atonement as before the atonement: just as before the atonement one may become guilty of trespass concerning it, so also after atonement may one become guilty of trespass concerning it? — There is nothing concerning which one can become guilty of trespass, once the atonement touching it has been fulfilled.⁶ But there is the removal of the ashes [from the altar]?⁷

(1) Making the offender liable to pay the capital value of the blood.

(2) And the offender is exempt from the extra payment of the fifth, v. Lev. V, 16.

(3) Lev. XVII, 11 . I have given it (the blood) to you.

(4) Ibid. 'To make atonement', implies but for no other ritual purpose, such as the application of the law of trespass.

(5) Once atonement has been effected with any sacrifice the law of trespass does not apply to it, v. infra.

(6) Once it has served its purpose it is no longer considered the property of the Sanctuary for laws of trespass to apply to it.

(7) V. Lev. VI, 3. The Biblical regulation And he shall put them (the ashes) beside the altar, (ibid.), indicates that they must be hid away, are not available for private use, and are hence still the property of the Sanctuary, to which the laws of trespass apply though the commandment concerning it has already been fulfilled.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 60a

— That is because referring to the removal of the ashes and the priestly garments¹ there are two verses [written] for the same purpose² and wherever two verses have the same purpose no deduction can be made from them [for other precepts].³ That will be right according to the Rabbis who hold: 'And he shall put them there'⁴ signifies that they must be hidden away but what can be said according to R. Dosa who holds that the garments of the [high] priest may be used for a common priest? — That is because concerning the removal of the ashes and the heifer⁵ whose neck is to be broken are two verses written for the same purpose, and wherever two verses are written for the same purpose no deduction can be made from them. That will be right according to the view that holds from two identical Scriptural statements no deduction can be made; but what can be said in accordance with the view that such deduction is permissible? — There are two limiting qualifications: And he shall put them⁶ and the one whose neck was broken.⁷ For what purpose are three Scriptural verses necessary in connection with the blood?⁸ — One is to exclude [blood] from [the rule touching] left-overs,⁹ one to exclude it from the rule touching trespass,¹⁰ and one to exclude it from the rule touching ritual uncleanness.¹¹ But no verse is necessary to exclude it from the rule touching piggul¹² for we have learnt: Whatever has that which renders [the offering] permissible, whether for human beings¹³ or for service on the altar¹⁴ can make one liable on its account for piggul. And blood itself is a thing which renders the offering permissible.¹⁵

MISHNAH. CONCERNING EVERY MINISTRATION OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT MENTIONED¹⁶ IN THE PRESCRIBED ORDER IF ONE SERVICE WAS DONE OUT OF ORDER BEFORE ANOTHER ONE, IT IS AS IF IT HAD NOT BEEN DONE AT ALL. IF HE SPRINKLED THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT BEFORE THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK, HE MUST START OVER AGAIN, SPRINKLING THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT AFTER THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK. IF BEFORE HE HAD FINISHED THE SPRINKLINGS WITHIN [THE HOLY OF HOLIES] THE BLOOD WAS Poured AWAY, HE MUST BRING OTHER BLOOD, STARTING OVER AGAIN AND SPRINKLING AGAIN WITHIN [THE HOLY OF HOLIES]. LIKEWISE, IN MATTERS OF THE SANCTUARY AND THE GOLDEN ALTAR, SINCE THEY ARE EACH A SEPARATE ACT OF ATONEMENT.¹⁷ R. ELEAZAR AND R. SIMEON SAY: WHEREVER HE STOPPED, THERE HE MUST BEGIN AGAIN.¹⁸

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: Concerning every ministration of the Day of Atonement mentioned in the prescribed order, if one service was done [out of order] before another one, it is as if one had not done it at all. R. Judah said: When does this apply? Only with regard to service performed in white garments, within [the Holy of Holies], but any service performed in white garments without, if in connection with them he performed one out of order before the other one, then what he has done is done [valid]. R. Nehemiah said: These things apply only to service performed in white garments, whether performed within [the Holy of Holies] or without, but in case of services performed in golden garments outside, what has been done, is done. Said R. Johanan: And both expounded it on the basis of one Scriptural passage: And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you . . . once in the year.¹⁹

(1) I.e., the garments with which the high priest performed the service of the Day of Atonement, v. Lev. XVI, 23.

(2) Lit., 'that come as one', i.e., in both there is a special verse stating that the same law applies.

(3) In both cases the Biblical law stipulates that they must not be used; Lev. XVI, 23 and VI, 3 (v.infra). The Torah should have stated the law in one case, for the other to be inferred in the usual manner. The identical statement in both cases — thus ruling out the usual analogy — indicates that both deal with unusual cases, from which no deduction would be legitimate.

(4) Lev. XVI, 23.

(5) Deut. XXI, 1f. 'There' (in the valley) indicates that it shall be buried there.

(6) Lev. VI, 3.

(7) Deut. XXI, 6. The definite article (ha-'arufah) is interpreted as implying limitation. The limitation excludes other things from the operation of this law.

(8) On 59b three Amoraim had inferred that the law of trespass does not apply to blood from three special, otherwise superfluous phrases. The Gemara now suggests that since three such special phrases appear, with but one of them necessary according to each Amora, they must each serve a limiting purpose.

(9) Portions of sacrifices left over beyond the legal time must be burnt. But blood of such left-overs is not included in the principle of left-overs, and, therefore, if one ate such blood, the penalty incurred derives only from the fact that he ate blood, not any additional penalty because he has eaten of left-overs.

(10) The law of trespass does not apply to blood.

(11) If someone ate of holy sacrifices in a state of levitical impurity, the penalty, if unwittingly, is a sin-offering, as it is for eating blood. The law does not apply to the blood of sacrifices, which if eaten in a state of levitical impurity involves only one sin-offering, viz., for eating blood.

(12) Piggul i.e., vile (ness) is the term used for a sacrifice that is rejected because of an improper intention in the mind of the officiating priest at the time of the sacrificing. Such improper intention includes his intention to dispose of the same beyond its legal space or time. (Lev. VII, 18 and ibid. XIX, 7.)

(13) The priests or owners by whom portions of the offering are consumed.

(14) On which the prescribed sacrificial portions are burnt.

(15) Zeb. 43a. The sprinkling of the blood makes parts of sacrifices permissible to the owner or priests; just as it makes certain portions of the animal fit to be offered up on the altar.

(16) In our Mishnah.

(17) Therefore every act of atonement completed, even if out of order is valid, without any repetition necessary.

(18) Even if the individual act of atonement has not been completed. These Rabbis hold that one may continue, or start again, even in the midst of a service, even though this service had been started out of order.

(19) Lev. XVI, 34.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 60b

R. Judah holds: [This means] the place on which once a year atonement is obtained: whereas R. Nehemiah holds that it refers to the objects through which once a year atonement is obtained.¹ But according to R. Judah, is then 'place' written here?² — Rather is this the reason for R. Judah's view: It is written 'This', and it is written 'Once', one excludes [services performed in] white garments, the other [those performed in] golden garments.³ And R. Nehemiah?⁴ — One excludes the golden garments, the other the remaining blood,⁵ which [if done out of order] do not impair [the service]. And R. Judah? — If [an act performed in white garments out of order] impairs the service,⁶ it impairs it here too, and if it does not impair [the service] it does not impair it here either;⁷ as it was taught:⁸ And when he hath made an end of atoning for the holy place,⁹ i.e., if he has obtained atonement he has completed it, if not, not. This is the opinion of R. Akiba. R. Judah said to him: Why should we not interpret thus: If he has completed it, he has obtained atonement, if not, not, to say, that if one of the sprinklings is missing, he has done nothing? And we inquired: What is the difference between them and R. Johanan and R. Joshua b. Levi, each gave an answer: One said: They differ only as to the interpretation of the text, while the other said: The remaining blood¹⁰ is what they differ in. But did R. Johanan hold thus?¹¹ Surely R. Johanan said: R. Nehemiah taught in accordance with the view that the remaining blood [offered not as prescribed] impairs [the service].¹² This is a refutation.

R. Hanina said: If he took the handfuls of the incense before the slaying of the bullock, he has done nothing. According to whom is this? [Presumably] not according to the view of R. Judah. Surely he said that the word 'statute' was written only in connection with ministrations performed in white garments within [the Holy of Holies]! — [No], you may say that it is even in agreement with R. Judah's view, inasmuch as what is necessary for a service performed within is considered as a service within.

We learned: IF BEFORE HE HAD FINISHED THE SPRINKLINGS WITHIN [THE HOLY OF HOLIES] THE BLOOD WAS Poured AWAY, HE MUST BRING OTHER BLOOD, STARTING OVER AGAIN AND SPRINKLING WITHIN AGAIN. Now, if this view were right [it] should read: 'He should start again with the taking of the handfuls'?¹³ —

(1) The word 'statute' denotes that the order for this day is statutory, hence any disregard would render a service out of order invalid. R. Judah holds that this 'statute'- limitation has reference to the place whence once a year atonement is obtained, i.e., the Holy of Holies, whereas R. Nehemiah assumes it refers to the objects, by means of which, or in which, once a year atonement is obtained, i.e., both place and garments. Hence according to R. Judah the order is indispensable within the Holy of Holies, but not in the rest of the Sanctuary in which atonement is obtained frequently, and not but once in the course of the year. According to R. Nehemiah both place and garments, in which atonement must be obtained, have indispensable order of regulations.

(2) That the term 'statute' should refer to it?

- (3) 'This' and 'Once' being limitations.
- (4) How does he explain these two limitations?
- (5) Even if the pouring out had been delayed beyond the order, services performed meantime remain valid. The fact that this is done in white garments has no effect on the enforcement of the order in which it is to be done.
- (6) I.e., those parts of the service that were to follow it, but which were performed before it.
- (7) And there is no reason to exclude the remainder of the blood.
- (8) [That according to R. Judah the omission of the rite in connection with the remainder of the blood impairs the service, and consequently the term 'statute' should apply to it equally with the other acts performed in white garments.]
- (9) Lev. XVI, 20.
- (10) R. Akiba holds: the omission of the rite connected with it does not impair the atonement, as the main sprinklings had been made and the atonement is complete, even if the remaining blood has not been poured away; whereas R. Judah holds: If all is completed, then he has obtained atonement, if not (and failure to pour away the remaining blood would be included in this indispensable programme) not.
- (11) That according to R. Nehemiah the remaining blood presents no handicap. Since above R. Johanan said that both used one Scriptural passage as their text and R. Nehemiah was consequently held to infer that the disposal of the remaining blood according to order was not indispensable.
- (12) V. Zeb. 11a.
- (13) Since R. Hanina holds that taking the handfuls of the incense before the slaughtering of the bullock is invalid, he would have to take afresh a new handful before slaughtering the second bullock.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 61a

He does not treat of the incense.¹

'Ulla said: If he slew the he-goat before sprinkling the blood of the bullock, he has done nothing. We learned: IF HE SPRINKLED THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT BEFORE THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK, HE MUST START OVER AGAIN, SPRINKLING THE BLOOD OF THE HE-GOAT AFTER THE BLOOD OF THE BULLOCK. Now, if this view were right, [it] should read: 'He shall start over again' and slaughter?² — 'Ulla explained this to refer to the sprinklings in the Sanctuary;³ and thus also R. Afes explained it to refer to the sprinklings in the Sanctuary. LIKEWISE IN MATTERS OF THE SANCTUARY AND THE GOLDEN ALTAR: Our Rabbis taught: And he shall make atonement for the most holy place,⁴ i.e., the Holy of Holies [for] The tent of meeting, i.e., the Sanctuary;⁵ [for] the altar⁶ in the literal sense. 'He shall make atonement' — this [refers to] the courts; 'the priests' in the literal sense; 'the people', i.e., Israel; 'He shall make atonement', this refers to the Levites. Then they are all declared alike in respect of one atonement, for all other sins they⁷ obtain atonement through the he-goat-that-is-to-be-sent-away,⁸ this is the view of R. Judah. R. Simeon said: Just as the blood of the he-goat [the rites of which are] performed within obtains atonement for Israel in all matters of impurity touching the Sanctuary and its holy things,⁹ thus also does the blood of the bullock obtain atonement for the priests in all matters of impurity touching the Sanctuary and its holy things; and just as the confession over the he-goat-to-be-sent-away obtains atonement for Israel with regard to all other transgressions, so does the confession over the bullock obtain atonement for the priest for all other transgressions.¹⁰

Our Rabbis taught: 'And when he hath made an end of atoning for the holy place', this refers to the Holy of Holies; 'The tent of meeting', i.e., the Sanctuary; the altar, in its literal sense — this teaches that for all of these special [independent] atonements must be obtained. Hence they said: If he sprinkled some of the sprinklings made within, and the blood was poured away, he shall bring other blood and start again from the beginning with the sprinklings within. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon say: He shall start but from the place where he stopped. If he has completed the sprinkling due within and the blood was poured away, then he shall bring other blood and he shall start from the beginning with the sprinklings in the Sanctuary. If he had sprinkled some of the sprinklings due in the Sanctuary and the blood was poured away, he shall bring other blood and start again from the beginning with the sprinklings due in the Sanctuary. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon say: He need start but from the place where he had stopped. If he had completed the sprinklings due in the Sanctuary and the blood was poured away, he shall bring other blood and start again from the beginning with the sprinkling due on the altar. If he had made some of the sprinklings due on the altar and the blood was poured away, he shall bring other blood and he shall start again from the beginning with the sprinklings due on the altar. R. Eliezer and R. Simeon said: He shall not start except from the place where he had stopped. If he had completed the sprinklings due on the altar and the blood was poured all agree that this is no handicap. Said R. Johanan: Both¹¹ infer it from one scriptural passage: With the blood of the sin-offering of atonement . . . once a year.¹² R. Meir holds: I have spoken to thee of one sin-offering [whereby to obtain one atonement], not of two sin-offerings; R. Eleazar and R. Simeon holding, I have spoken of one sprinkling, not of two sprinklings.¹³

It was taught: Rabbi said: R. Jacob taught me a difference with regard to the logs.¹⁴ But is there no [dispute]? Surely it has been taught: If he made some of the sprinklings within [the Sanctuary],¹⁵ and the blood was poured away, he must bring another log [of oil] and start again from the beginning with the sprinklings due within. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon hold: He starts again from the place he had stopped at. If he had completed the sprinklings due within [the Sanctuary] and the log was spilt, he shall bring another log and start again from the beginning with the application on the thumbs¹⁶ and toes.¹⁶ If he had made some of the applications on the thumbs and toes and the log was spilt, he shall bring another log and start over again from the beginning with the applications on the thumbs and toes. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon hold: He shall start where he had stopped before. If he had completed the applications due on the thumbs and toes and the log was spilt, then all agree that the applications on the head are not a handicap.¹⁷ Say rather: R. Jacob taught me also [the difference of opinion] concerning the log.¹⁸

The Master had said: The applications on the head are no handicap. Why that? Shall I say because Scripture says: And what remaineth over of the oil,¹⁹ but then [when it says]: But that which is left of the meal-offering etc.,²⁰ would you say that there, too, it constitutes no handicap?²¹ — It is different there because it is written: ‘And the rest’²² and what remaineth over etc’²³

(1) He would certainly have to take anew the handfuls.

(2) [It is assumed that the reference is to the sprinklings within the Holy of Holies, with the result that the he-goat was slaughtered before the sprinkling of the blood of the bullock.]

(3) But the slaying of the he-goat took place in its proper place, after the blood of the bullock had been sprinkled within.

(4) Lev. XVI, 33.

(5) These sprinklings atone for any impurity that occurred in the Holy of Holies or the Sanctuary, if any person should have entered there unwittingly in a state of impurity. V. Shebu. 7b.

(6) If any impurity occurred to any person at the altar, he staying there for a period co-extensive with the time of one prostration.

(7) Priest, Levites and Israelites.

(8) Besides those of impurity. In the case of other transgressions the he-goat-to-be-sent-away obtains forgiveness for both priests and commoners. But for the sin implied in any impurity in the Temple, it is the bullock which obtains forgiveness for the priests, and the he-goat which brings it to Israel.

(9) Without confession. As there was no confession with that he-goat.

(10) V. Sheb. 13b.

(11) The anonymous authority who is R. Meir on the one hand, and R. Eleazar and R. Simeon on the other.

(12) Ex. XXX, 10.

(13) The word חטאת rendered ‘sin-offering’ means also ‘purge from sin’, hence sprinkle.

(14) With regard to the log of oil used for the purification of the leper (v. Lev. XIV, 21) R. Jacob had taught that unlike the sprinklings of the Day of Atonement, there was no dispute concerning the question here where one must start again after a service had been performed out of order.

(15) This refers to the purification rite of a leper, v. Lev. XIV, 16.

(16) Lev. XIV, verse 17.

(17) Hence the dispute between the Rabbis did affect the log of oil as well.

(18) The report had been originally misread. As R. Hananel suggests, it read: 'R. Jacob had not made any difference with regard to the log'. In its original interpretation it implied: There was no difference of opinion among the Rabbis touching the log. But, since that report was now refuted, the meaning must have been: R. Jacob taught me that there was no difference between the log and the other case; in both the Rabbis are of divergent opinion.

(19) Lev. XIV, 29 which indicates that the oil used for the head is but a remainder and not an essential part of the rite.

(20) Ibid. II, 10.

(21) In reality it does, v. Men. 9a.

(22) Ibid. XIV, 17 with reference to the oil applied to the thumbs and toes.

(23) The oil applied on the thumbs and toes is thus designated 'remainder' and that applied on the head 'remainder of remainder' and therefore constitutes no handicap.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 61b

R. Johanan said: If the guilt-offering of a leper had been slaughtered not for its own purpose,¹ — therein we find a dispute between [on the one hand] R. Meir, and R. Eleazar and R. Simeon [on the other]. R. Meir, who said he must bring another one and start all over from the beginning, would here consistently hold that he must bring another [animal as] guilt-offering and slay it, whereas R. Eleazar and R. Simeon, who say: He shall start at the place he had left off before, would hold that here there is no redress.²

R. Hisda demurred to them: Surely it is written: 'It³ — This is a refutation. It was taught in accord with R. Johanan: If the guilt-offering of a leper had been slaughtered not for its own purpose, or if one had not sprinkled of its blood upon the thumbs and toes, it is considered a burnt-offering in regard to the altar and requires the [prescribed]⁴ libations and he requires another guilt-offering to render him right again.⁵ — And R. Hisda? — He will answer you: What means, he requires? — He requires, but he has no remedy [to get it]. But would a Tanna teach: 'He requires' when he has no remedy [of getting it]? Indeed, as it was also taught: [Concerning] a baldheaded nazirite Beth Shammai taught he requires to pass through a razor [over his head],⁶ whereas Beth Hillel said: He need not pass through a razor [over his head]. And R. Abina said: When Beth Shammai say: It is necessary, [they mean] he requires to [do so] but he has no remedy.⁷ He thus contradicts R. Pedath, for R. Pedath said: Beth Shammai and R. Eleazar say one and the same thing. 'Beth Shammai', as we have stated above, and 'R. Eleazar' as we have learnt.⁸ If he⁹ have no thumb or toe, he⁹ can never obtain purity. R. Eleazar said: One should place it on the place due, and thereby the duty is done. R. Simeon said: If he placed it on [the thumb and toe of] the right, he has done his duty.

Our Rabbis taught: And the priest shall take [receive] of the blood of the guilt-offering¹⁰ — one might have assumed that is to be done with a vessel, therefore the text reads: 'And he shall put it' i.e., just as the 'putting' must be done by the priest himself, so must the 'taking' be by the priest himself. One might have assumed the same applied to the blood which is to be used for [sprinkling upon] the altar, therefore the text reads: For as the sin-offering . . . so is the guilt-offering.¹¹ Just as a vessel is necessary [for receiving the blood of a] sin-offering,¹² so is a vessel necessary [for the blood of] the guilt-offering. You thus find yourself stating that in the case of the guilt-offering of the leper two priests receive the blood thereof, one in his hand,¹³ the other in a vessel.¹⁴ The first who receives it in the vessel proceeds to the altar, whereas the other who receives it in his hand goes to the leper.

We have learnt there: All of them¹⁵ render the garments levitically impure and are to be burnt in the place where the ashes are deposited. This is the opinion of R. Eleazar and R. Simeon. The Sages say: They do not render the garments ritually unclean and they are not to be burnt in the place where the ashes are deposited, except the last one because with that he completed the atonement. — Raba asked the following question of R. Nahman: How many he-goats is he to send away?¹⁶ — He answered: Should he perhaps send his flock away?¹⁷ — He said to him:

(1) [I.e., he offered it in the name of some other sacrifice. In such a case the sacrifice is valid but is not accounted to the owner in fulfillment of his duty and the owner must consequently bring anew the offering which was due from him.]

(2) [R. Meir, who holds that part of a service that has not been completed is of no account, would similarly regard this incomplete guilt-offering as not offered and would require another guilt-offering; whereas R. Eleazar and R. Simeon, who do not disregard that part of the service which had been performed, would hold that he cannot bring a new guilt-offering as Scripture explicitly states 'One lamb for a guilt offering' (Lev. XIV, 12) and not two.]

(3) Lev. XIV, 12: 'And offer it as a guilt-offering', i.e., only the one which has been waved together with the oil. This unequivocal statement of the Torah R. Meir too must accept, hence the interpretation just offered is to be rejected.

(4) V. Num. XV, 1ff.

(5) I.e., the leper becomes pure, normal again, so that he may eat holy things (sacrificial meat). This shews that there is a view that he can bring a new guilt-offering, which supports R. Johanan.

(6) Num. VI, 5: All the days of his vow of the Naziriteship there shall no razor come upon his head, until the days be fulfilled, i.e., but when the days are fulfilled he shall have his hair cut.

(7) This bald-pate cannot do so. Yet it is stated 'he requires'.

(8) Naz. 46b.

(9) The leper.

(10) Lev. XIV, 14.

(11) Ibid. XIV, 13.

(12) V. Zeb. 97b.

(13) For sprinkling on the leper himself.

(14) For the sprinkling on the altar.

(15) All the bullocks and he-goats mentioned in our Mishnah, in connection with blood poured away before the completion of the individual atonement or the whole service in question, and for which substitutes are obligatory, must be burnt outside the three camps (that of the priests, the Levites, and of Israel) and they render the garments of those occupied with burning impure. Lev. XVI, 27-28.

(16) [Where, for instance, the blood of the he-goat was poured away after the sprinklings in the Holy of Holies in which case he has to bring anew two goats and cast lots afresh.]

(17) Obviously only one he-goat-to-be-sent-away is dealt with in Lev. XVI.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 62a

Does he not burn¹ his flock? — How compare these two? With regard to this, it is written 'it',² touching the other it is not written 'it'.

It was stated: R. Papi said in the name of Raba: He sends away the first. — R. Shimi said in the name of Raba: He sends away the last. It is quite right according to R. Shimi in the name of Raba, who said he sends the last away: that is because with him he completes the atonement, but what is the view of R. Papi in the name of Raba? — He holds with R. Jose who says: The commandment is properly fulfilled with the first one. Which view of R. Jose is referred to here? Shall I say it is R. Jose's view in the case of the baskets — for we learned: There were three baskets, each of three se'ahs, in which they took up terumah out of the [shekel] chamber³ and on them were inscribed [the letters] Alef, Beth, Gimel. And it was taught: R. Jose said: Why were Alef, Beth, Gimel inscribed upon them? So that one may know which of them was taken up first [out of the shekel chamber], so as to use it first, for the commandment properly applies to the first! But perhaps it is because at the time when the first is to be used, the others are not ready for use?⁴ Rather [do we refer to the view of] R. Jose touching the paschal sacrifice, for it has been taught:⁵ If one set aside his passover sacrifice and it was lost [went astray] and he set aside another one in his place and then the first was found again, so that both are before him, then he may offer up whichever he wants. This is the view of the Sages. R. Jose says: The commandment attaches properly to the first, but if the second be better than [the first] then he may offer it.

CHAPTER VI

MISHNAH. THE TWO HE-GOATS OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT ARE REQUIRED TO BE ALIKE IN APPEARANCE, IN SIZE, IN VALUE, TO HAVE BEEN BOUGHT AT THE SAME TIME. BUT EVEN IF THEY ARE NOT ALIKE THEY ARE VALID. IF ONE WAS BOUGHT ONE DAY AND THE OTHER THE FOLLOWING DAY, THEY ARE VALID. IF ONE OF THEM DIED BEFORE THE LOT WAS CAST ANOTHER ONE IS BOUGHT FOR THE SECOND ONE. BUT [IF IT DIED] AFTER THE LOT WAS CAST ANOTHER PAIR MUST BE BOUGHT AND THE LOTS CAST FOR THEM OVER AGAIN. AND IF THE ONE THAT WAS CAST FOR THE LORD DIED, HE [THE HIGH PRIEST] SHOULD SAY: LET THIS ON WHICH THE LOT FOR THE LORD HAS FALLEN STAND IN ITS STEAD. AND IF THE ONE THAT WAS CAST FOR AZAZEL DIED HE SHOULD SAY: 'LET THIS ON WHICH THE LOT FOR AZAZEL HAS FALLEN STAND IN ITS STEAD. THE OTHER ONE IS LEFT TO PASTURE UNTIL IT BECOMES BLEMISHED WHEN IT IS TO BE SOLD AND ITS VALUE GOES TO THE TEMPLE FUND. FOR THE SIN-OFFERING OF THE CONGREGATION MUST NOT BE LEFT TO DIE.⁶ R. JUDAH SAYS: IT IS LEFT TO DIE. FURTHERMORE SAID R. JUDAH: IF THE BLOOD WAS Poured AWAY, THE GOAT-TO-BE-SENT-AWAY WAS LEFT TO DIE. IF THE GOAT-TO-BE-SENT-AWAY DIED THE BLOOD IS Poured AWAY.

GEMARA.

(1) And yet it states that 'all of them are burnt on the place where the ashes are deposited'.

(2) Lev. XVI, 10, with reference to the he-goat-to-be-sent-away. 'It' implies only 'one'.

(3) Into which the shekels were thrown in the month of Adar, with which the priests filled the three baskets for the communal offerings. V. Shek. III, 2.

(4) When one basketful is taken up first one would obviously use that first, but the goat of the first pair could not be sent away before all the sprinklings of blood had been made, when the second is as fitting to be sent away as the first.

(5) Infra 64a.

(6) V. Tem. IV, 3.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 62b

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 62b

Our Rabbis taught: And he shall take. . . two he-goats,¹ now the minimum of he-goats is two; why then is 'two' mentioned? To indicate that the two be alike. Whence do we know that even if the two are not alike they are valid? Therefore the text reads: 'He-goat', 'he-goat',² which is inclusive [widens the scope]. Now the reason, then, is only that the Divine Law expressly includes it, but had the Divine Law not done so, one would have assumed that they are invalid. Whence do we derive this indispensability? — You might have thought that we say: 'Two' is written three times.³ But now that the Divine Law has twice written 'he-goat' what is the purpose of 'two' written three times? — One applies to appearance, the other to size, the third to value. It has been similarly taught in connection with the lambs of the leper: And he shall take two lambs.⁴ Now the minimum of lambs is two, then why does the text say: 'Two'? To indicate that the two be alike. Whence do we know that even if the two be not alike, they are valid? Therefore the text reads: 'Lamb', 'lamb',⁵ which is inclusive [widens the scope]. Now the reason is only that the Divine Law expressly includes it, but had the Divine Law not done so, one would have assumed that they are invalid, whence do we assume this indispensability? — You might have thought we say: It is written: [This] shall be [the law].⁶ But now that the Divine Law has said: 'Lamb', 'lamb', what purpose serves 'shall be'? — That refers to the rest of the status of the leper.⁷

It was similarly taught in connection with the [birds of] the leper: Birds;⁸ now the minimum of birds is two. Why then is 'two' mentioned? To indicate that the two be alike. Whence do we know that even if they be not alike, they are valid? Therefore the text reads: 'Birds', 'birds',⁹ which is inclusive. Now the reason then is that the Divine Law expressly includes it, but had the Divine Law not included it, one would have assumed that they are invalid. Whence do we derive this indispensability? — You might have thought that we say that it is written 'shall be'. But now that the Divine Law through 'birds', ['birds'] includes it, what purpose serves 'shall be'? — Because of the rest of the status of the leper.

If so, in the case of the daily burnt-offerings let us make a similar deduction: 'Lambs', 'lambs',¹⁰ since the minimum of lambs is two, why does the text read: 'Two'? To indicate that they shall be alike. And whence do we know that even if they are not alike they are valid? Therefore the text reads: 'Lamb', 'lamb',¹¹ which is inclusive.¹² But as far as proper performance of the precept is concerned is it indeed required¹³ [that the lambs shall be alike]? — Here we need it for what has been taught: Two for the day¹⁰ i.e., against the day.¹⁴ You say: Against the day, but perhaps it really means, the daily duty? When it says: The one lamb shalt thou offer in the morning, and the other lamb shalt thou offer at even,¹¹ behold the daily duty is already stated, hence how do I apply the words: 'Two for the day'? I.e., against the day. How is that? The continual morning offering was being slain on the north-western corner, on the second ring,¹⁵ whereas that of the even was slain on the north-eastern corner on the second ring.¹⁵ But the additional sacrifices of the Sabbath certainly must be alike.¹⁶

Our Rabbis taught: If he [the high priest] slew two he-goats of the Day of Atonement outside [the Temple court] before the lots were cast, then he is guilty in respect of both; if, however, after the lot was cast, then he is guilty¹⁷ in respect of the one cast 'for the Lord', but free in respect of the one cast 'for Azazel'.¹⁸ If before he has cast the lots, he is guilty in respect of both of them. But what [sacrifice] are they fit for?¹⁹ — Said R. Hisda: Since [each] is fit to be offered up as the he-goat [the rites of which are] performed without.²⁰ But why is it impossible to offer it up as the he-goat [of which rites are] performed within [the Holy of Holies]? presumably because it still lacks the casting of the lot? But then it ought to be unfit to be used as the he-goat [of which rites are performed] without, for the reason that it still lacks the other ministrations of the Day?²¹ — R. Hisda holds: One may not call the absence of any functions due on the same day a lack of time.²²

Said Rabina: Now that R. Hisda said that the absence of the casting of the lot has the same significance as the absence of a [direct] action,²³ then in view of what Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: 'Peace-offerings which have been slain before the doors of the Temple have been opened are invalid, as it is said: And he shall slay it at the gate of the tent of meeting,²⁴ i.e., at the time when it is open, but not when it is closed';

-
- (1) Lev. XVI, 5.
 - (2) Ibid. 9, 10.
 - (3) Lev. XVI, 5, 7, 8 and thus indicates indispensability.
 - (4) Ibid. XIV, 10.
 - (5) Ibid. 12, 13.
 - (6) Ibid. 2. 'Shall be' implies precise instructions from which there may be no deviation.
 - (7) I.e., to the other regulations relating to the purification of the leper.
 - (8) Lev. XIV, 4.
 - (9) Ibid. 5, 6.
 - (10) Num, XXVIII, 3.
 - (11) Ibid. 4.
 - (12) It is inclusive, i.e., as long as it is a lamb, even if not exactly like the other, it is included in the terms of the commandment.
 - (13) This, however, is nowhere stated.
 - (14) I.e., the morning sacrifice is to be offered up against (opposite) the sun-rise, viz., on the western side of the altar, and the evening sacrifice on the opposite, namely, the eastern side (R. Han.).
 - (15) To the north of the altar were rings, twenty four, six rows of four each, at which they slaughtered the animal offerings. (V. Mid. III, 5.). On these rings the animals were securely tied before slaying. When the morning sacrifice was slain on the western side the light of the sun poured freely in, just as in the eve, when the sacrifice was slain on the eastern side, the rays of the sinking sun were unimpeded. Always in the direction opposite to the light of the day. Tosaf. suggests that the second ring rather than the first was used to prevent the animal from polluting the altar with excrements.
 - (16) [Since in connection with this only 'two lambs' is stated (V. Num. XXVIII, 9) but not the inclusive 'one lamb'. V, Rashi and R. Han.]
 - (17) On the score of Lev. XVI, 3ff:
 - (18) The he-goat destined for Azazel would in any case be killed outside the Sanctuary hence nothing illegitimate took place, no change of place.
 - (19) That he should be liable for slaughtering them outside the Temple court.
 - (20) I.e., in the Sanctuary proper, without the Holy of Holies. The additional sacrifice for the Day of Atonement, a he-goat, is offered up, its blood sprinkled without (Num. XXIX, 11).
 - (21) i.e., the sprinkling of the blood of the bullock and he-goat and the taking and offering of the handfuls of incense, all of which must take place before the additional sacrifice is offered up.
 - (22) The absence of the ministrations of the day mentioned in n. 3 does not affect the validity of the he-goat offered as an additional offering, as these do not constitute a defect in the he-goat itself, but are absent because the time for them had not yet arrived. Whatsoever is bound to come within the day, may not be considered wanting on that day. [This distinguishes it from the casting of lots, the absence of which constitutes a lack in the very he-goat which consequently renders it unfit for use within].
 - (23) In the offering itself, rendering it unfit for Temple use.
 - (24) Lev. III, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 63a

if someone had slain them outside before the doors of the Temple had been open, he would be free, because the lack of opening is like the lack of a [direct] action.¹ But does R. Hisda adopt the principle of 'since'?² Surely R. Hisda said: If someone had slaughtered the Passover sacrifice outside on any of the other³ days of the year, then, if he did it in its own name, he is free, but if he did it not in its own name, he is culpable.⁴ The reason [that he is culpable] lies in his having slaughtered it not in its own name. But if he had slaughtered it without any indication it is [as if — slaughtered] in its name, and he would be free? Why that? Let us say: Since it would be fit for a sacrifice not in its own name, within the Temple⁵ [he should be liable]? Now, how compare? There a removal is necessary,⁶ whereas this needs no such removal. Rabbah b. Shimi taught these [two statements of R. Hisda] as [emanating] from Rabbah. He then raises a difficulty from [the one view of] Rabbah against [the other given by] Rabbah; but answers [the difficulty] as we have answered. When R. Dimi [came from Palestine] he said in the name of R. Jeremiah, who said it in the name of R. Johanan: If one slaughtered a Paschal sacrifice outside on any of the other days of the year, whether in its name or not in its name, he is exempt. Said R. Dimi: I have reported this statement in the presence of R. Jeremiah [and queried]: It is all correct [in the case where it was slaughtered] in its name, since it is not fit [for the Temple], but [where it was] not in its name [why should it be exempt]? Surely it would be fit as a sacrifice not in its own name within the Temple? And he said this [in reply]: The removal [of the name of a sacrifice] outside [the Temple] is not deemed [an effective] removal.⁷ — When Rabin came [from Palestine], [he said that] R. Jeremiah said in the name of R. Johanan: If one had slain a Passover sacrifice outside on any of the other days of the year, whether in its own name or not in its own name, he is culpable. Even ‘in its own name’? But have we not learnt: A sacrifice whose time has not yet come [may be such] either because of itself or because of its owner. Which is a sacrifice whose time has not yet come because of its owner? If the owner, either man or woman, was afflicted with gonorrhoea, or was a woman after child-birth or a leper and had offered up their sin-offering or their guilt-offering outside [before the appointed time], they are free.⁸ But if they offered up their whole-offerings or their peace-offerings outside, they are culpable.⁹ And R. Hilkiyah b. Tobi said: They did not teach thus only if they were offered up in their own name, but if they were not offered up in their own name, they were not culpable.¹⁰ Now at any rate, then, when offered up in their own name, the owners are culpable. But why that? Let us say, Since they are fit to be offered up in their own name within [they should be culpable]?- How compare? There a removal is necessary, but here Passover sacrifice during the rest of the days of the year is a peace-offering.¹¹

R. Ashi taught:¹² the owner is culpable, as we had stated above. R. Jeremiah of Difti taught he is not culpable, because he is of the opinion that the Passover sacrifice during the rest of the days of the year requires a removal,¹³ and the removal outside [the Temple] is not [effective]. Therein he disputes with R. Hilkiyah b. Tobi.¹⁴

The Master said: ‘When the lot has been cast, he is culpable in respect of the one [he-goat] cast ‘for the Lord’, and free with respect to the one cast ‘for Azazel’. Our Rabbis taught: What man soever there be of the house of Israel that killeth an ox or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it without the camp, and hath not brought it unto the entrance of the tent of meeting to present it as an offering unto the Lord.¹⁵

(1) So that the offerings were not fit for Temple use, and thus involve no guilt when offered outside.

(2) הוֹאִיל either derived from יֵעָל — ע and א interchange frequently — thus: it helps — and followed by — ‘because’ since; or הֵאָּ + אִילוֹ ‘look now, if’, i.e., once this is so, that also may be granted; or from the Biblical אָּאִ ‘accepted, agreed that this is so, that also ought to be accepted’, implying that because something is permitted in one case, the permission should be extended to all analogous cases.

(3) Besides the eve of Passover, the fourteenth of Nisan, which is the proper date for this sacrifice.

(4) Because in this case it is a peace-offering, which should have been slain within the Temple.

(5) It could be used within as a peace-offering.

(6) [It could not be used within as a peace-offering unless it had been expressly removed at the time of slaughtering from its original purpose as Passover sacrifice, and consequently as long as no such removal had been made it cannot be said to be fit for use within the Temple.] The he-goat offered within as well as the one without are sin-offerings in either situation.

(7) [Although a paschal lamb on any other days in the year can be removed from its original purpose and offered as a peace-offering, such a removal is effective only when it is offered within the Temple, but where it is offered outside, the paschal lamb retains its original name and purpose and consequently involves no guilt for having been slaughtered outside.]

(8) V. Lev. XV, 14, 29; XII, 6, XIV, 10.

(9) In the case of sin-offerings or guilt-offerings, which were offered up outside before they were due, no culpability is involved, because they are not acceptable within before their time has come, neither as obligatory nor as freewill-offerings. But burnt-offerings or/and peace-offerings, which are accepted even when not obligatory, are fit to be offered up within even before the appointed time, hence they involve culpability when offered up without. V. Zeb. 112b.

(10) This exemption applies only when the guilt-offering was offered up in its own name outside, in which case being before its appointed time it would be unfit for the Temple. But if it was offered up for another purpose than that originally designated, e.g., for a burnt — or peace-offering, where it would be acceptable within at any time, there is culpability when offered up without.

(11) Without the need of an express removal from its original purpose.

(12) With reference to the statement reported by Rabin.

(13) Before it can be offered as a peace-offering.

(14) Who holds that a removal outside the Temple is an effective removal.

(15) Lev. XVII, 3, 4.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 63b

From [the word] ‘offering’ I might have assumed that even offerings for the temple repair [are included], which are also called ‘offerings’, in accord with the Scriptural words: And we have brought the Lord's offering,¹ therefore the text reads: ‘And hath not brought it unto the entrance of the tent of meeting’, i.e., whatsoever is fit to be brought to the tent of meeting, if offered up outside, involves culpability; but whatsoever is fit to be brought to the entrance of the tent of meeting, if offered up outside, does not involve culpability. Thus I would exclude only those which are not fit to be offered up at the entrance of the tent of meeting, but I would not exclude [the cow for the sin-offering² and] the he-goat-to-be-sent-away, which are fit to be brought to the entrance of the tent of meeting, therefore the text reads: ‘Unto the Lord’ i.e., only those assigned to the Lord, to the exclusion of such as are not assigned to the Lord.

But do the words ‘Unto the Lord’ imply exclusion,? I shall raise a contradiction: It may be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the Lord,³ i.e., the fire-offerings.⁴ Whence do we know that one may not dedicate it before its time has come?⁵ Therefore the text reads: ‘As an offering’. ‘Unto the Lord’, includes the he-goat-to-be-sent-away!⁶ Said Raba: There [the meaning is determined] by the context, and here too [its meaning is determined] by the context: There ‘Unto the entrance implies inclusion, therefore ‘Unto the Lord’ implies exclusion; here ‘An offering made by fire’ implies exclusion, hence ‘Unto the Lord’ has inclusive⁷ meaning. Now the only reason then is that the Divine Law included it, but if it had not done so I would have assumed that the he-goat-to-be-sent-away could be dedicated before its time.⁸ But⁹ the lot does not determine except such [an animal] as is fit ‘for the Lord’?¹⁰ — Said R. Joseph: This is in accord with Hanan the Egyptian, for it was taught:¹¹ Hanan the Egyptian says: Even if the blood is in the cup, may he bring its mate and pair them.¹² But admitted that Hanan does not accept the opinion concerning ‘rejection’¹³ you surely did not hear that Hanan does not accept the opinion as to the necessity of casting the lots? Perhaps he [the high priest] would have to bring [two] and cast lots [afresh]?¹⁴ — Rather, said R. Joseph, this [Baraita]¹⁵ is in accord with R. Simeon, for it was taught: If one of them died, he brings another one without casting lots, this is the view of R. Simeon! Rabina said: The reference [in the Baraita] is to a case in which one of them became blemished and was redeemed with another one.¹⁶ But whence will you say that a blemish renders it [the scapegoat] invalid? As it was taught: Nor make an offering by fire of them,¹⁷ this refers to the pieces of fat. From here I could infer only as to all the pieces. Whence do we know that it applies also to parts thereof? Therefore the text reads: ‘Of them’. ‘The altar’¹⁷ i.e., the sprinkling of the blood. Unto the Lord,¹⁷ that includes the he-goat-to-be-sent-away.

Now it was necessary [for the Scripture] to write [disqualifying a scapegoat], the blemished animal and one whose time has not yet come. For if the Divine Law had written only about the animal whose time has not yet come, I would have assumed there [it is disqualified] applies because its time has not yet come, but in the case of one blemished whose time had come, I might have assumed that [the disqualification does] not [apply]. And if the Divine Law had written about the blemished animal alone, I might have assumed the reason [for its being disqualified] there lies in repulsiveness, but with the animal whose time has not yet come, and where there is no repulsive feature, one might have assumed [the law] does [not] apply, hence it was necessary [to write about both].

(1) Num. XXXI, 50.

(2) The red heifer. Tosaf. supports Rashi's elimination of this reference to the red heifer, because the latter was not brought to the entrance of the tent of meeting, hence is logically excluded from the present discussion.

(3) Lev. XXII, 27.

(4) Only from the eighth day are they acceptable as offerings.

(5) I.e., that an offering cannot be dedicated before the eighth day.

(6) This shows that 'Unto the Lord' implies inclusion.

(7) The he-goat-to-be-sent-away is not 'for the Lord', but fit to be brought unto the entrance of the tent of meeting. So 'Unto the Lord' excludes whatsoever is not assigned for the Lord. In the other passage 'An offering made by fire' excludes, of course, the goat, which is to be hurled from the precipice, whereas 'Unto the Lord' is complimentarily inclusive, hence the goat must not be offered up before it is eight days.

(8) I.e., before it is eight days old.

(9) V. Tem.6b.

(10) And that implies a minimum age, hence invalidation before its time.

(11) Zeb. 34b.

(12) Even if the blood of the he-goat to be sprinkled up within is in the cup, when the he goat-to-be-sent-away dies, no new casting of the lots is necessary according to Hanan, but, as is assumed at present, one may simply bring another he-goat from outside and pair it and appoint it for Azazel even without lots. Thus we see that Hanan does not hold the principle that the lot does not determine etc.; and consequently the he-goat-to-be-sent-away need not necessarily have reached its proper time hence a scriptural verse is necessary to teach that it must do so.

(13) He does not accept the view of R. Judah in our Mishnah that the scapegoat is to be rejected as unfit on account of the mishap to the other.

(14) Leaving the one, upon whom the lot 'for the Lord' now falls, to pasture until it acquires a blemish, whilst obtaining atonement through the blood of the first. At any rate, however, casting the lots is necessary, hence one whose time had not yet come would be invalidated, because the lot determines only what is 'fit for the Lord', i.e. whose time has come.

(15) Which requires a special text to teach that the he-goat-to-be-sent-away must be of minimum age.

(16) Where the he-goat-to-be-sent-away suddenly became blemished, its successor obtained by means of redemption needs no lot to determine its purpose, and, since no list was required, there is no implied obligation as to proper minimum age.

(17) With reference to blemished animals. Lev. XXII, 22.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 64a

Raba said: [It¹ was necessary] for the case that he² had a sick person in the house, for whom he killed the mother-animal on the Day of Atonement.³ But is it forbidden in such a case?⁴ Does not the Divine Law say: Ye shall not kill it⁵ and this is not killing?⁶ — In the West [Palestine] they said: Hurling it down from the [mountain] peak, that is its killing.

IF THAT 'FOR THE LORD' DIED, etc.: Rab said: The second of the first pair is to be offered up, the second of the second pair should be left to pasture.⁷ - R. Johanan said: The second of the first pair should be left to pasture, the second pair should be offered up. In what principle do they differ? — Rab holds: Living animals⁸ are not rejected [forever], whereas R. Johanan holds: Living animals are rejected [forever]. What is the reason for Rab's view? He infers it from those whose time has not yet come: An animal whose time has not yet come, although it is as yet unfit, when it later becomes fit again, will be quite in order. Thus also here. How can this be compared? There⁹ it was never fit at all. Here it was once fit and then rejected? — Rather is this the reason of Rab's view: He infers it from an animal afflicted with a passing blemish: An animal afflicted with a passing blemish surely although now unfit, yet when it is fit again, is quite in order. Thus also here. But whence do we know if touching the former? Because it is written: Because their corruption is in them, there is a blemish in them¹⁰ i.e., only as long as a blemish is in them are they not acceptable, but when their blemish passes they are acceptable. And R. Johanan? — The Divine Law stated 'in them'¹⁰ i.e., only these are acceptable after the blemish has passed, but all other animals rejected [through temporary unfitness] once they have been rejected, stay rejected. And Rab? — The words 'in them' signify that only as long as they are in their natural form are they not acceptable, but as soon as they are mixed up with others, they are acceptable; as we have learnt,¹¹ if the members of unblemished [whole-offerings] were mixed up with the members of blemished [animals], R. Eliezer says: If the head of one of them had been offered,¹² the heads of all may be offered; if the legs of one of them had been offered, the legs of all may be offered. The Sages, however, say: Even if all the members with exception of one have been offered, this one must go forth to the place of burning. And the other one [R. Johanan]? He infers that from [the fact that instead of] 'bam' [is written] 'bahem'.¹³ — And the other one [Rab]? — He does not expound from 'bahem' instead of 'bam'. But according to Rab, granted that animals cannot be rejected for ever, if he wishes let him offer this, and if he wishes let him offer the other?¹⁴ — Raba said: Rab holds to the view of R. Jose, who said: The command attaches properly to the first. — Which [view of] R. Jose are you referring to? Shall I say, You say [the view of] R. Jose concerning the baskets, for we have been taught:¹⁵ There were three baskets each of three se'ahs,¹⁶ in which they took up terumah out of the shekel-chamber, and on each of them was inscribed: Alef, Beth, Gimel. And we have been taught: R. Jose said: Why is Alef, Beth, Gimel inscribed upon them? So that one may know out of which of them the terumah was taken up [out of the shekel-chamber] first, to use it first, for the command properly applies to the first! — But perhaps it is different there because at the time when the first is to be used, the others are not ready for use yet?¹⁷ - Rather is it R. Jose['s view] concerning the Passover sacrifice, for it was taught: If someone has separated his Passover sacrifice and it is lost, and he thereupon puts aside another one in its place, and afterwards the first one is found again, so that both are standing [ready to be used], then he can offer up whichever he prefers; this is the view of the Sages. R. Jose holds the commandment attaches properly to the first,¹⁸

(1) The verse disqualifying a scapegoat that has not reached its proper time.

(2) Who was the purveyor to the community of these animals.

(3) In case of a dangerously ill person the slaying of an animal for food or remedial purpose is permitted. Raba suggests the case that the purveyor of the he-goat had, on the Day of Atonement, slain its mother for the patient. But in view of the prohibition (Lev. XXII, 28:) Whether it be cow or ewe, ye shall not kill it and its young both in one day, the he-goat would thus become an animal that was wanting in time all the Day of Atonement, after the lot had been cast.

(4) To use the young as scapegoat.

(5) Lev. XXII, 28.

(6) The prohibition is now interpreted to refer to the technical ritual slaying, whereas the scapegoat is being hurled down the precipice.

(7) Until it acquires a blemish.

(8) If they are temporarily invalidated, they can still be used by means of the substitution of another animal as pair.

(9) Because it was wanting in time and thus was never rejected.

(10) Lev. XXII, 25.

(11) Zeb. 77b.

(12) Before the confusion of the other members with the members of the whole-offerings had been noticed.

(13) From the fact that the Divine Law used the longer word 'bahem' instead of the shorter 'bam', which has the identical meaning, this inference is attempted. The rival view ignores this variation as not intended for additional inferences.

(14) Whereas the law here is stated to require only the first.

(15) V. supra 59b and notes.

(16) I.e., 144 eggs.

(17) But here although the lots had been cast, the goat could not be slain until after the blood of the bullock had been sprinkled. In the interim the he-goat with it had died, two others were brought in, and when the time for slaying the goat had come, the latter was already in readiness.

(18) For notes v. supra 59b.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 64b

but if the second one be very much better, he shall offer it up.

Raba said: Our Mishnah points to be in accord with Rab, whereas the Baraitha is in accord with R. Johanan. Our Mishnah is in accord with Rab for it reads: IF THE ONE THAT WAS CAST FOR THE LORD DIED, HE [THE HIGH PRIEST] SHOULD SAY: LET THIS ON WHICH THE LOT FOR THE LORD HAS FALLEN STAND IN ITS STEAD' [implying] that the other remains as it is.¹ The Baraitha is in accord with R. Johanan, for it reads: As to the second.² I do not know whether [it means] the second of the first pair, or the second of the second pair. But from the words 'shall be set alive'³ [I infer: only this one] but not one whose pair has died.⁴ How does that follow? — 'It shall now be set alive', [and] not the one that has been set [alive] before [but whose pair has died].

We learned: FURTHERMORE DOES R. JUDAH SAY: IF THE BLOOD WAS Poured AWAY, THE SCAPEGOAT IS LEFT TO DIE; IF THE SCAPEGOAT DIED, THE BLOOD IS Poured AWAY. Now that is quite right according to R. Johanan, who holds living animals are rejected [permanently], — therefore the scapegoat is left to die. But according to Rab, who holds that living animals are not rejected [permanently], why should the scapegoat be left to die? — Rab will answer you: What I say, I say in accordance with the view, not of R. Judah, but of the Sages.⁵ It is quite right according to Rab: Therein lies the difference between the Sages and R. Judah; but according to R. Johanan, wherein lies the difference?⁶ — Raba said: That is what we have said [above]: The Mishnah points to be in accord with Rab.

We learned: FOR A COMMUNITY SIN-OFFERING IS NOT LEFT TO DIE. This [implies] that one of an individual, in such a case, would be left to die. Now that will be right according to R. Johanan,⁷ following R. Abba in the name of Rab, for R. Abba said In the name of Rab:

(1) In the state of holiness, without being rejected.

(2) The second mentioned in the Mishnah, that it is left to pasture.

(3) Lev. XVI, 10. One that 'shall be set alive', not one which had been set alive again, a second time.

(4) Hence the second in the Mishnah must refer to the second of the first pair.

(5) [Who, as is to be inferred from the words of R. Judah, held that the second in the first pair is to be offered, because in their view living animals are not rejected permanently].

(6) R. Johanan holds that the Sages insist that the second of the first pair must not be offered. Wherein then does R. Judah, in his additional remark ('Furthermore') differ from the Sages.

(7) Who holds that the second of the first pair is left to pasture.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 65a

All agree that if he had obtained atonement through [the animal that] had not been lost, [the animal that] had been lost must be left to die;¹ but according to Rab it would be as if someone has set aside two sin-offerings as a guarantee [that one of them should be available if the other be lost],² and R. Oshaia said: If someone had set aside two sinofferings for the purpose of guarantee, he gains atonement through one of them and leaves the other to pasture? — Since Raba said that Rab followed the view of R. Jose,³ who holds the commandment properly attached to the first, it is as if it⁴ had from the very beginning been set aside [in substitution] for the one that was lost. We learned: R. JUDAH SAYS: IT SHALL BE LEFT TO DIE. It is quite right in the view of R. Johanan who said that the second of the first pair must be left to pasture [that is, according to the Rabbis]⁵ and [it is this one which] according to R. Judah be left to die,⁶ so that he obtains atonement through the second one of the second pair; but if the view of Rab who said that the second of the second pair must be left to pasture, and [it is this one which] according to R. Judah must be left to die, then according to R. Judah⁷ through which can he obtain atonement? — Do you understand that R. Judah refers to the second of the second pair? R. Judah refers to the second of the first pair.⁸ Others framed the [above] question [against Rab]⁹ in the following manner: Furthermore did R. Judah say: If the blood was poured away, the scapegoat is left to die; if the scapegoat died the blood is poured away.

Now it is in order according to Rab: In the first part [of the Mishnah] they are disputing about the sin-offering of the community, and in the latter part about [the rejection of] living animals,¹⁰ but according to R. Johanan: What does 'Furthermore signify?'¹¹ — This difficulty remains.¹²

FURTHERMORE SAID R. JUDAH: IF THE BLOOD WAS Poured AWAY, THE SCAPEGOAT IS LEFT TO DIE. It is quite right that when the blood was poured away the scapegoat must die, because the command with it had not been fulfilled, but when the scapegoat died, why should the blood be poured away; surely the commandment therewith had been fulfilled? — The School of R. Jannai said: Scripture said: [The goat] shall be set alive before the Lord, to make atonement,¹³ i.e., how long must he stay alive? Until the time that his fellow's blood is sprinkled.

We have learnt elsewhere: If the inhabitants of a town sent their shekels¹⁴ and they were stolen or lost, then, if terumah¹⁵ has been taken up already, they¹⁶ swear an oath before the Temple treasurers; and if not they swear an oath before the people of the town; and the people of the town must pay the shekels anew. If they were found again or the thieves restored them, then both are taken as shekels¹⁷ and they do not count as prepayment for the dues of the next year. R. Judah says: They count for the next year.¹⁸ What is the reason of R. Judah's view? — Raba said: R. Judah holds that obligatory offerings of one year may be brought up in the following year. Abaye raised the following objection against him:¹⁹ If the bullock or the he-goat of the Day of Atonement were lost and he had set aside others in their place, also, if the goats offered up for idolatry [were lost] and others were set aside for them, then they must all be left to die, this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Eliezer and R. Simeon hold: They shall be left to pasture until they become blemished, when they should be sold and the money realized for them should go for freewill-offerings, for the sin-offerings of the community must not be left to die.²⁰ — He [Raba] answered:

(1) [If one had set aside an animal as sin-offering and the animal got lost, and after setting aside another in its stead, the lost animal was found, then according to Rabbi he obtains atonement with whichever he chooses and the other is left to die. The Sages, however, hold that it is left to pasture, as the law which requires that a sin-offering, the owner of which has obtained atonement by another, is to be left to die applies only if it was found after the atonement rites had been performed, but not if found before the atonement (V. Tem. 23a). Now in connection with this R. Abba said that there is no disagreement between Rabbi and the Sages where the atonement was obtained through the one which had not been lost, i.e., through the second, all agreeing in such a case that the first one is left to die. (In accordance with the established old law that if a sin-offering had been lost and the owner obtained atonement through another, when it is found again it is left to die). The dispute concerns a case where atonement was obtained through the first, after it had been lost and found again, Rabbi holding that what is set aside in substitution for that which had been lost is subject to the same law as the lost animal itself and hence must be left to die, whereas the Sages do not share the view. Now in our

Mishnah on the view of R. Johanan, who holds that the second of the first pair is left to pasture, it rightly gives as reason 'For no community sin-offering is left to die'; for had it been of an individual it would be left to die, since the atonement is being obtained through the one which had suffered no mishap, and had never been rejected.]

(2) [According to Rab who rules that the atonement is being obtained through the second of the first pair which had been rejected, how could the Mishnah state by implication that if it had been the sin-offering of an individual it would under similar circumstances be left to die? Not only would this not be the case according to the Sages, who rule that whatever is set aside in substitution for that which had been lost is not subject to the same law as the lost animal itself (v. previous note), seeing that he has obtained atonement through the one that had been rejected; but even according to Rabbi (v. ibid) it would not have to be left to die, since the second of the second pair has never been set aside as substitution for the one that had been lost, seeing that its predecessor is still alive. It was merely set aside as a companion to the other which had to be brought in place of the one (the first goat cast for Azazel) that had died. But since living animals cannot be permanently rejected, he should in such a case be able to offer either, just as in the case where one sets aside two offerings as a guarantee for each other.]

(3) V. supra 64a.

(4) [I.e., the second of the second pair, and hence but for the fact that it was a public sacrifice it would have been left to die.]

(5) The authority of the first view reported anonymously in the Mishnah.

(6) [It is now assumed that R. Judah's rule that it must be left to die has reference to the one which, according to the Rabbis, is left to pasture, since R. Judah's view is of the opinion that living animals are permanently rejected as has been established, supra 64b.]

(7) [He surely cannot obtain atonement by means of the first, seeing that he holds that living animals are permanently rejected.]

(8) [For in the view of Rab, R. Judah differs from the Rabbis also on the question of the fitness of the second of the first pair for sacrifice; whilst the Rabbis hold that it is offered, R. Judah holds that it is left to die.]

(9) Raised supra 64b.

(10) The Rabbis holding that they are not permanently rejected, hence atonement is obtained through the second of the first pair, whereas R. Judah (as has just been explained) holds that the second in the first pair is left to die and the second in the second pair is offered up.

(11) The Rabbis, too, agree that the second in the first pair remains rejected.

(12) Even as stated supra 64b that the Mishnah is in support of Rab.

(13) Lev. XVI, 10.

(14) Through messengers to Jerusalem to pay their Temple dues.

(15) Lit., 'heave-offering', here denoting the contribution of Shekels taken up at stated times from out of the shekel-chamber in the Temple from which public sacrifices were bought, v. Shek. III, 1ff

(16) The messengers take the oath of bailees in accord with Ex. XXII, 10.

(17) For the current year.

(18) For notes v. Shek., Sonc. ed., II, 1.

(19) Shebu. 11a.

(20) Hence we see that R. Judah does not permit the obligation of one year to be kept in order to be brought up the following year, otherwise he would not have ruled that this should be left to die, which contradicts the view just expressed.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 65b

You speak about community sacrifices? It is different with community sacrifices, even as R. Tabi said, in the name of R. Josiah. For R. Tabi said in the name of R. Josiah: Scripture said: This is the burnt-offering of every new moon throughout the months of the year.¹ The Torah indicates: Renew and bring Me an offering of the new terumah.² That will be right concerning the he-goat.³ But can it be said in the case of the bullock? Preventive measure attaches to the bullock because of the he-goat. And because of preventive measure shall they be left to die?⁴ And, furthermore, the statement of R. Tabi in the name of R. Josiah characterizes the action as merely a meritorious deed, for R. Judah said in the name of Samuel: It is a meritorious deed to offer the community sacrifices, which are due in Nisan, from the new terumah. If he had offered them from the old, he has fulfilled his duty, but has omitted a meritorious deed! — Rather, said R. Zeira: [The reason why they cannot be offered in the following year is] because the lot of one year cannot determine for the following year. But let us cast lots again? — There is the fear that people might say the lots do determine from one year for the next. That will be reasonable as far as the he-goat is concerned, but what can be said about the bullock? — The prohibition attaches to the bullock because of the he-goat. And because of a preventive measure shall they be left to die? — The Rabbis before Abaye said that to be a preventive measure on account of a sin-offering whose owner had died.⁵ That will be right in the case of the he-goat, but what of the case of the bullock? — The restriction in the case of the bullock derives from the he-goat. And because of a preventive measure shall they be left to die? — Rather is it a restriction because of a sin-offering whose year is past.⁶ Is that [but] a preventive measure? This is itself a sin-offering whose year is past.⁷ This is no difficulty, in accord with the view of Rabbi. For it was taught:⁸ A full year,⁹ one counts three hundred and sixty-five days according to the year of the sun, this is the view of Rabbi. The Sages say: One counts twelve months from day to day.

(1) Num. XXVIII, 14.

(2) V. R.H., Sonc. ed., p. 25, nn. 8 — 9.

(3) Which was provided from the funds of the shekel-chamber.

(4) It would seem sufficient that they be left to pasture.

(5) If the priest should die that year.

(6) I.e., the fear that by the next Day of Atonement it may be more than a year old. All the he-goats offered up as sin-offerings are invalidated after they have reached the age of one year.

(7) Obviously this sin-offering will be past one year this time next year.

(8) R. H. 6b.

(9) Lev. XXV, 30. The reference here is to the time (one year) during which the seller of a dwelling house in a walled city may redeem the property sold by cancellation of contract.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 66a

And if the year be a prolonged year, the advantage belongs to the seller.¹ That is right as far as the he-goat is concerned. But what can be said in the case of the bullock? — The preventive measure attaches to the bullock because of the he-goat. And because of a preventive measure shall he be left to die? And, furthermore, a sin-offering, whose [first] year is past, is left to pasture,² for Resh Lakish³ said: As to a sin-offering which has passed its year, we look upon it as if it were standing on the cemetery⁴ and it is left to pasture? — Rather, said Raba, is the restriction due to the fear of an offence,⁵ for it was taught:⁶ One may neither consecrate anything, nor vow any 'valuation',⁷ nor declare anything as devoted⁸ nowadays.⁹ And if one had consecrated or vowed a 'valuation', or declared anything as devoted, if an animal, it should be uprooted,¹⁰ if fruits, vessels or covers, one should let them rot; if money or metal vessels, they are to be taken to the Salt [Dead] Sea.¹¹ And what does 'uprooting' mean? Locking the door before it, so that it die of itself. What kind of offence [is here contemplated]? If an offence in connection with the offering up, that ought then to apply to other cases of pasturing animals also?¹² If an offence in connection with shearing or working it, then that ought to apply to other pasturing animals too? In truth the offence contemplated is one in connection with the offering-up, but with those which are not to be offered up¹³ one is not pre-occupied, whereas with this one, since it is to be offered up, he would be pre-occupied. Now as to the question itself whether we fear the possibility of an offence, Tannas are disputing. For it was taught in one [Baraitha]: A Paschal lamb which was not offered up on the first Passover may be offered up on the second,¹⁴ and if not offered up on the second, may be offered up in the following year. And another [Baraitha] taught: It must not be offered up. Is it not then that they dispute touching [the fear of] an offence? — No, all agree we are not apprehensive as to a possible offence; but here they are disputing in the matter at issue between Rabbi and the Sages,¹⁵ and there is no contradiction [between the two Baraithas]; the one is in accord with Rabbi, the other with the Rabbis [Sages].¹⁶ — But was it not taught: The same applies to the money?¹⁷ Hence rather infer from here that they are disputing in regard to the fear of the offence. — That inference is accepted.

MISHNAH. HE THEN CAME TO THE SCAPEGOAT AND LAID HIS TWO HANDS UPON IT AND HE MADE CONFESSION. AND THUS WOULD HE SAY: I BESEECH THEE, O LORD, THY PEOPLE THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL HAVE FAILED, COMMITTED INIQUITY AND TRANSGRESSED BEFORE THEE. I BESEECH THEE, O LORD, ATONE¹⁸ THE FAILURES, THE INIQUITIES AND THE TRANSGRESSIONS WHICH THY PEOPLE, THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL, HAVE FAILED, COMMITTED AND TRANSGRESSED BEFORE THEE, AS IT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH OF MOSES, THY SERVANT, TO SAY: FOR ON THIS DAY SHALL ATONEMENT BE MADE FOR YOU, TO CLEANSE YOU; FROM ALL YOUR SINS SHALL YE BE CLEAN BEFORE THE LORD. AND WHEN THE PRIESTS AND THE PEOPLE STANDING IN THE TEMPLE COURT HEARD THE FULLY-PRONOUNCED NAME COME FORTH FROM THE MOUTH OF THE HIGH PRIEST, THEY BENT THEIR KNEES, BOWED DOWN, FELL ON THEIR FACES AND CALLED OUT: BLESSED BE THE NAME OF HIS GLORIOUS KINGDOM 'FOR EVER AND EVER. THEY HANDED IT OVER TO HIM WHO WAS TO LEAD IT AWAY. ALL WERE PERMITTED TO LEAD IT AWAY,¹⁹ BUT THE PRIESTS MADE IT A DEFINITE RULE NOT TO PERMIT AN ISRAELITE²⁰ TO LEAD IT AWAY. R. JOSE SAID: IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT ARSELA OF SEPPHORIS LED IT AWAY, ALTHOUGH HE WAS AN ISRAELITE. AND THEY MADE A CAUSEWAY FOR HIM BECAUSE OF THE BABYLONIANS, WHO WOULD PULL ITS HAIR, SHOUTING TO IT: 'TAKE²¹ AND GO FORTH, TAKE AND GO FORTH'.

GEMARA. But he did not say: 'The sons of Aaron, thy holy people'; which Tanna is of this opinion? — R. Jeremiah said: This is not in accord with R. Judah, for if it were in accord with R. Judah, surely he said: They, too, obtain atonement from the scapegoat?²² Abaye said: You might even say that it is in accord with R. Judah: Are the priests not included in 'Thy people Israel'? Our Rabbis taught: A man²³ [means] to declare a non-priest eligible;²⁴ appointed²³

(1) According to Rabbi, the count always goes according to the number of the days of the solar year, independent as to intercalation or non-intercalation of the extra month, so that the sin-offering need not necessarily have passed its first year by the next Day of Atonement.

(2) And not to die.

(3) Pes. 97a.

(4) Which no priest is permitted to enter, i.e., the animal must not be slaughtered.

(5) Lit., 'stumbling-block'.

(6) That the fear of an offence is taken into consideration.

(7) V. Lev. XXVII, 3.

(8) Ibid. 28.

(9) After the destruction of the Temple, things consecrated, valued or devoted in favour of it, since not available for the Sanctuary to which they are properly assigned, must be destroyed.

(10) This is soon explained.

(11) [So MS.M. Cur. edd.: he should take the value of the benefit derived from them to the Salt Sea.]

(12) If the offence lies in the possibility that it may be offered up instead of being left to pasture until it acquires a blemish, the same apprehension would be justified with regard to any other animal which is ruled to be left to pasture.

(13) In other cases where animals are ruled to be left to pasture, these animals themselves will never become fit for offering, since they are left to pasture till they become blemished, when they are sold and with the proceeds another animal is bought for offering. Hence he would not be preoccupied with the thought of offering them, as in the case of the animal which is to be offered up on the next Day of Atonement and which he might thus offer up before.

(14) The second Passover for those who were far away or ritually unclean on the fourteenth of Nisan. To some such person this lamb may be sold. V. Num. IX,9.

(15) As supra 65b, whether a complete year denotes a solar year or exactly twelve months.

(16) [According to Rabbi it would perforce be past its first year on the following Passover, when it would be disqualified for a Paschal lamb, hence it cannot be offered in the coming year; whereas, according to the Sages, it might still be under a year, hence it may be retained for the coming year.]

(17) [I.e., the same dispute which is found in connection with the Paschal lamb applies also to money which had been set aside for one year's Paschal lamb, whether it may be used for the next year. Now in the case of money, surely the point at issue between Rabbi and the Sages does not apply.]

(18) Lit., 'wipe off'.

(19) Var. lec., high priests.

(20) I.e., a non-priest.

(21) Sc. our sins.

(22) V. supra 61a.

(23) V. Lev. XVI, 21.

(24) For taking away the scapegoat into the wilderness.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 66b

[means] that he must be prepared [from the previous day]; 'appointed' [means] that [it is to send away]; even on the Sabbath 'appointed', even if in a state of uncleanness.¹ [You say]: 'Man [means] to declare a non-priest eligible', but that is obvious? — You might have thought that since [the term] Kapparah [atonement] is written in connection therewith,² therefore he informs us [as above]. — 'Appointed', i.e., even on the Sabbath. What does this teach?³ — R. Shesheth said: It is to say that if it is sick, he may make it ride on his shoulder. According to whose view is this? Not according to R. Nathan, for R. Nathan said: A living being carries itself!⁴ -You may even say that this is in accord with R. Nathan: when it is sick it is different,⁵ however.

Rafram said: This is to say that [the laws of] 'erub⁶ and carrying out⁷ apply on Sabbath, but do not apply on the Day of Atonement.⁸ 'Appointed', i.e., even in a state of uncleanness.⁹ What does that teach? — R. Shesheth said: It is to say that if he who is to carry it away became unclean, he may enter in impurity the Temple Court¹⁰ and carry it away.

R. Eliezer was asked: What about his carrying it on his shoulder? — He said: He could carry you and me.¹¹ If he who is to take it away became sick, may he send it away through someone else? — He said: I wish to keep well, I and you!¹² If he pushed it down and it did not die, must he go down after it and kill it? — He said to them: So perish all Thine enemies, O Lord.¹³ But the Sages say: If it became sick, he may load it on his shoulder; if he pushed it down and it did not die, he shall go down and kill it. They asked R. Eliezer: 'What about So-and-so¹⁴ in the world to come'? — He replied, 'Have you asked me only about this one'?¹⁵ 'May one save the lamb from the lion'? — He said to them: 'Have you asked me only about the lamb'?¹⁵ 'May one save the shepherd from the lion'? — He said to them: 'Have you asked me only about the shepherd'?¹⁶ 'May a mamzer¹⁷ inherit'? — [He replied]: 'May he marry the wife of his brother who died without issue'?¹⁸ 'May one whitewash his house'?¹⁹ — [He replied]: 'May one whitewash his grave'? — [His evasion was due] not to his desire to divert them with words [counter-questions], but because he never said anything that he had not heard from his teacher.²⁰

A wise woman asked R. Eliezer: Since with regard to the offence with the golden calf all were evenly associated, why was not the penalty of death the same?²¹ — He answered her: There is no wisdom in woman except with the distaff. Thus also does Scripture say: And all the women that were wise-hearted did spin with their hands.²² It is stated: Rab and Levi are disputing in the matter. One said: Whosoever sacrificed and burned incense died by the sword; whosoever embraced and kissed [the calf] died the death [at the hands of Heaven];²³ whosoever rejoiced in his heart died of dropsy. The other said: He who had sinned before witnesses and after receiving warning,²⁴ died by the sword; he who sinned before witnesses but without previous warning, by death; and he who sinned without witnesses and without previous warning, died of dropsy.

Rab Judah said: The tribe of Levi did not participate in the idolatry, as it is said: Then Moses stood in the gate of the camp.²⁵ Rabina was sitting and reporting this teaching, whereupon the sons of R. Papa b. Abba objected to Rabina: Who said of his father and of his mother: 'I have not seen him, etc.'?²⁶ — 'His father', that is the father of his mother, an Israelite; 'brother', the brother of his mother, an Israelite; 'sons', that means the sons of his daughter [which she had] from an Israelite.

AND THEY MADE A CAUSEWAY FOR HIM etc. Rabbah b. Bar Hana said: These were not Babylonians but Alexandrians, and because they [the Palestinians] hated the Babylonians,²⁷ they called them [the Alexandrians] by their [the Babylonians'] name. It was taught: R. Judah said, They were not Babylonians, but Alexandrians. — R. Jose said to him: May your mind be relieved even as you have relieved my mind!²⁸

MISHNAH. SOME OF THE NOBILITY OF JERUSALEM USED TO GO WITH HIM UP TO THE FIRST BOOTH. THERE WERE TEN BOOTHS FROM JERUSALEM TO THE ZOK²⁹

(1) This is soon explained.

(2) And this term as a rule occurs only in connection with a rite performed by priests.

(3) What Sabbath desecration could the taking of the scapegoat to the wilderness involve?

(4) V. Shab. 90a. Hence no transgression would be involved in carrying it.

(5) A sick being, unable to 'carry itself', might logically be assumed to be an exception to R. Nathan's rule.

(6) v. Glos.

(7) I.e., transferring an object from public to private grounds and vice versa, both of which were prohibited on the Sabbath.

(8) Since the word 'anointed' is here interpreted as referring to the suspension of the Sabbath law, the inference is justified that no such prohibition existed on the Day of Atonement, or else it would be illogical to say that a special statement permits the suspension of these laws on the Day of Atonement which fell on a Sabbath, since they would be operative on any Day of Atonement, even if it fell on a weekday. The laws of 'carrying out' and 'erub belong together, hence strictly speaking, the Gemara need not have mentioned both; when one is applied, the other automatically applies too.

(9) How should the laws on levitical uncleanness apply to the taking of the scapegoat to the wilderness?

(10) When he receives it from the high priest.

(11) R. Eliezer made a point of not answering any question concerning which he had not received a definite tradition or interpretation from his teachers.

(12) This, too, is an evasive answer: You and I are well, hope to keep well, why trouble about such hypothetical situations?

(13) Judg. V, 31.

(14) Pelsoni. It may have been a general question concerning 'John Doe', or it may refer to Solomon's (Rashi), or to Absalom's (R. Han.) regard for the Davidic Dynasty being responsible for the substitution of the vague Pelsoni. [Some see in Pelsoni a reference to Jesus, Finkelstein L. to Philo. Bokser, B.Z. Pharisaism in Transition pp. 18ff, rightly regards these identifications as hardly supported by any facts.]

(15) All his answers are evasive.

(16) Some see in the question about the shepherd a reference to David, who as lion (King) or as shepherd had taken the lamb (Bathsheba) from her husband. Others see the lamb in Uriah, Bathsheba's husband, whom the lion (David) sent to his death.

(17) May a bastard (the issue of a union forbidden under the penalty of extinction) inherit his father?

(18) Why don't you ask the whole question: How far does he participate in the rights and duties of normal Jews?

(19) May one whitewash one's house in spite of the fact that one ought to remain conscious all the time of the destruction of the Temple, etc.

(20) [V. Suk., Sonc. ed., p. 122. Bokser, op. cit. pp. 108f sees in these questions differences of opinion on important points of law. The question about sheep concerned the ban against cattle-raising which the Rabbis wished to enforce (v.

B.M. 84b) and which R. Eliezer opposed as having no precedent in tradition. The questions relating to the mamzer involved the imposition of certain discriminations against the mamzer of which R. Eliezer did not approve, and similarly he refused to accept the prohibition of the other Rabbis of plastering one's house in sad remembrance of the destruction of the Temple, not finding any support for it in tradition].

(21) Scripture mentions three forms of penalties: Some died by the sword (Ex. XXXII, 27), others by the plague (ibid. 35), the rest by dropsy as the result of their drinking the water containing the gold dust, which Moses had offered them in expiation (ibid. 20).

(22) Ex. XXXV, 25.

(23) I.e., died by the plague.

(24) Penalty could be imposed only when the offence had been committed in the presence of two witnesses who accuse the defendant, after he had been warned as to the consequences of his offence.

(25) Ex. XXXII, 26. (cont.) and said: 'Whoso is on the Lord's side, let him come unto me'. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

(26) Deut. XXXIII, 9. Here seems scriptural proof that the Levites, in punishing the guilty, ignored relationships, such as father or mother, but executed punishment on all. Thus their relatives, other Levites, must have been guilty.

(27) This hatred caused them to look down upon the Babylonians as remiss in their religious duties, and to father upon them other people's wrongs.

(28) R. Jose was a Babylonian. He welcomes the interpretation, which freed his fellow-countrymen from the charge of such boorish conduct.

(29) Lit., 'the peak', the mountain top from which the scapegoat was precipitated. Also used to denote the precipice itself.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 67a

[A DISTANCE OF] NINETY RIS, SEVEN AND A HALF OF WHICH MAKE A MIL.¹ AT EVERY BOOTH THEY WOULD SAY TO HIM: HERE IS FOOD AND HERE IS WATER. THEY WENT WITH HIM FROM BOOTH TO BOOTH, EXCEPT THE LAST ONE.² FOR HE WOULD NOT GO WITH HIM UP TO THE ZOK,³ BUT STAND FROM AFAR, AND BEHOLD WHAT HE WAS DOING.

WHAT DID HE DO? HE DIVIDED THE THREAD OF CRIMSON WOOL, AND TIED ONE HALF TO THE ROCK, THE OTHER HALF BETWEEN ITS HORNS, AND PUSHED IT FROM BEHIND. AND IT WENT ROLLING DOWN AND BEFORE IT HAD REACHED HALF ITS WAY DOWN HILL IT WAS DASHED TO PIECES. HE CAME BACK AND SAT DOWN UNDER THE LAST BOOTH UNTIL IT GREW DARK. AND FROM WHEN ON DOES IT RENDER HIS GARMENTS UNCLEAN?⁴ FROM THE MOMENT HE HAS GONE OUTSIDE THE WALL OF JERUSALEM. R. SIMEON SAYS: FROM THE MOMENT HE PUSHES IT INTO THE ZOK.⁵

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: There were ten booths and twelve mils⁶ [distance] — this is the view of R. Meir. R. Judah says Nine booths and ten mils; R. Jose says: Five booths and ten mils. And they are all available by means of an 'erub.⁷ R. Jose said: My son Eliezer suggested to me: As long as I have an 'erub, two booths would do even for ten mils.⁸ With whose view will agree what was taught: But not from the last booth, for nobody would go with him up to the Zok, but standing afar, would behold what he was doing? According to whom [is this]? According to R. Meir.⁹

AT EVERY BOOTH THEY WOULD SAY TO HIM: HERE IS FOOD AND WATER: A Tanna taught: Never did any one [who carried the goat away] find it necessary to use it, but¹⁰ [the reason of this provision is because] you cannot compare one who has bread in his basket with one who has no bread in his basket.¹¹

WHAT DID HE DO? HE DIVIDED THE THREAD OF CRIMSON WOOL: But let him tie the whole [thread] to the rock? — Since it is his duty [to complete his work with] the he-goat, perhaps the thread might become fast white, and he would be satisfied.¹² But let him tie the whole thread between its horns? — At times its head [in falling] is bent and he would not pay attention.¹³ Our Rabbis taught:¹⁴ In the beginning they would tie the thread of crimson wool on the entrance of the Ulam¹⁵ without: if it became white they rejoiced; if it did not become white, they were sad and ashamed. Thereupon they arranged to tie it to the entrance of the Ulam within. But they were still peeping through and if it became white, they rejoiced, whereas, if it did not become white, they grew sad and ashamed. Thereupon they arranged to tie one half to the rock and the other half between its horns. R. Nahum b. Papa said in the name of R. Eleazar ha-Kappar: Originally they used to tie the thread of crimson wool to the entrance of the Ulam within, and as soon as the he-goat reached the wilderness, it turned white. Then they knew that the commandment concerning it had been fulfilled, as it is said: If your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white wool.¹⁶

BEFORE IT HAD REACHED HALF ITS WAY DOWN HILL: The question was raised: As to those limbs [pieces] are they permitted for general use?¹⁷ Rab and Samuel are in dispute on this point, one saying: They are permitted, the other they are forbidden. The one who holds they are permitted [argues thus]:

(1) [So that ninety ris is the equivalent of twelve mils.]

(2) I.e., the one who accompanied him to the last booth, the one before the Zok.

(3) [Because according to calculation there was a distance of two mils between the last booth and the Zok which was beyond the walking limits of the Sabbath or Festivals.]

(4) V. Lev. XVI, 26.

(5) Cf. p. 312, n. 6.

(6) [V. n. 1. This allowed for one mil(=2000 cubits) the permissible walking distance between one booth and another and two mils from the last booth to the Zok].

(7) This 'erub signified the transferring of one's abode to the place where certain foods were deposited, with the consequence that his movements on the Sabbath would be assumed to start from that abode and were permitted within 2000 cubits in every direction.

(8) Suppose some Jerusalemites deposited on the eve of the Day of Atonement some eatables at the end of the 2000 cubits which are the legal maximum for walking out of the city on the Sabbath. Then they are permitted to accompany the man appointed to take away the scapegoat a distance of 2000 more cubits (the maximum as from the present fictitious abode). The guard of other booths eight and four mils off Jerusalem could do the same, in every direction. Now one may go 2000 cubits with him from Jerusalem, where guards from the first booth join him up to the second and so on, until his destination is reached.

(9) According to R. Jose and R. Judah even the last reaches the Zok.

(10) V. supra 18b.

(11) The craving of him who lacks the opportunity to gratify it is much more intense than the craving of him who has such opportunity.

(12) If the thread should turn white suddenly before the goat had yet been hurled down, the appointed man might be so happy with the sign of forgiveness obtained as to neglect going through with the prescribed ceremony of pushing the he-goat downward, thus leaving the command unfulfilled.

(13) To the change in colour, since the thread would be out of his sight.

(14) V. R.H. 31b.

(15) The Hall leading to the interior of the Temple.

(16) Isa. I, 18.

(17) I.e., may they e.g., be sold so that the profit therefrom be enjoyed. Hana'ah (general use) stands for any enjoyment except akilah, eating for human consumption, therefore using it for profit, as a gift, etc.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 67b

For it is written: 'in the wilderness';¹ the one who holds they are forbidden [argues]: Because Scripture says: cut off.² But as for him who considers them forbidden, for what purpose does he use the word 'wilderness'? He needs it in accord with what was taught: 'Into the wilderness', 'to the wilderness', 'in the wilderness',³ that means to include Nob, Gibeon, and Shiloh and the Permanent House.⁴ And what does the other [teacher] do with 'cut off'? — He needs it, in accord with what was taught: Gezerah,⁵ [the term] 'gezerah' means something that is 'cut off';⁶ another explanation: Gezerah means something that goes to pieces as it goes down; another interpretation: 'gezerah'⁷ — perhaps you might say this is a vain thing? Therefore the text reads: I am the Lord, I have decreed⁷ it and you are not permitted to criticize it.

Raba said: The view of him who says they are permitted is more reasonable, for the Torah did not say 'Send away'! to create [possibility of] offence.⁸ Our Rabbis taught: Azazel — it should be hard and rough.⁹ One might have assumed that it is to be in inhabited land, therefore the text reads: 'In the wilderness'. But whence do we know that it [is to be in] a Zok?¹⁰ — Therefore the text reads: 'Cut off'.¹¹ Another [Baraita] taught: Azazel, i.e., the hardest of mountains, thus also does it say: And the mighty [ele] of the land he took away.¹² The School of R. Ishmael taught: Azazel — [it was so called] because it obtains atonement for the affair of Uza and¹³ Aza'el.-

Our Rabbis taught: Mine ordinances shall ye do,¹⁴ i.e., such commandments which, if they were not written [in Scripture], they should by right have been written and these are they: [the laws concerning] idolatry [star-worship], immorality and bloodshed, robbery and blasphemy. And My statutes shall ye keep,¹⁴ i.e., such commandments to which Satan objects, they are [those relating to] the putting on of sha'atnez,¹⁵ the halizah¹⁶ [performed] by a sister-in-law, the purification of the leper, and the he-goat-to-be-sent-away. And perhaps you might think these are vain things, therefore Scripture says: I am the Lord,¹⁴ i.e., I, the Lord have made it a statute and you have no right to criticize it.

FROM WHEN ON DOES IT RENDER HIS GARMENTS UNCLEAN? Our Rabbis taught: Only he who is to take the goat away renders his garments unclean, but he who sends the appointed man away¹⁷ does not render his garments unclean. One might have assumed that [he does so] as soon as he goes forth outside from the wall of the Temple court, therefore the text reads: He that letteth go.¹⁸ If [you derive from] 'he that letteth go' [one might infer that] only when he reaches Zok, therefore the text reads: 'And he that letteth go'.¹⁹ How then is it? R. Judah says: As soon as he goes out of the walls of Jerusalem. R. Jose says: Azazel and wash [are written in close proximity] i.e., only when he reaches the Zok. R. Simeon says: And he that letteth go the goat for Azazel shall wash his clothes, i.e., he flings it down headlong and his garments become then unclean.

MISHNAH. HE [THE HIGH PRIEST] CAME TO THE BULLOCK AND THE HE-GOAT THAT WERE TO BE BURNT,²⁰ HE CUT THEM OPEN AND TOOK OUT THE SACRIFICIAL PORTIONS²¹ AND PUT THEM ON A TRAY, AND BURNT THEM UPON THE ALTAR. HE TWISTED THEM [THE BEASTS] AROUND CARRYING POLES AND BROUGHT THEM OUT TO THE PLACE OF BURNING. FROM WHAT TIME DO THEY RENDER GARMENTS UNCLEAN?²² AFTER THEY HAVE GONE OUTSIDE THE WALL OF THE TEMPLE COURT. R. SIMEON SAYS: FROM THE MOMENT THE FIRE HAS TAKEN HOLD OF MOST OF THEM.

GEMARA. And he burnt them up? How could that thought arise in you?²³ — Rather say: To burn them [later] on the altar.

HE TWISTED THEM AROUND CARRYING POLES: R. Johanan said: So in the form of a net-work. — A Tanna taught: He did not cut them up as one cuts up the flesh of a burnt-offering, but [he left] the skin on the flesh. Whence do we know this? Because It was taught:²⁴ Rabbi said: It is said here: skin . . . flesh . . . and dung²⁵ and it is said there: skin . . . flesh . . . and dung²⁶

-
- (1) Lev. XVI, 22. This phrase is superfluous and comes to teach that just as the wilderness belongs to all so are the broken limbs of the he-goat it contains free for the use of all.
- (2) Ibid. i.e., cut off from use, forbidden.
- (3) Ibid. vv. 10, 21, 22.
- (4) I.e., The Jerusalem Temple. The law applies to all these places.
- (5) The Hebrew for the 'cut off'.
- (6) I.e., something that rises steep, and not in a slope.
- (7) The root meaning of the word is: cut off, guard. Thus: to institute a preventive measure, to enact a prohibition, to decree. All these root-meanings are here brought into play: It is 'cut off', hence descending precipitately. — It is cut, 'split', hence dashed in pieces. — It is a decree, divine, hence no criticism is allowed.
- (8) It would be an offence for an unwary man who found them to make use of these animals, and the Torah would place no such stumbling-block in the way of the average person. Hence the assumption that the members of the goat's body are free to be used.
- (9) Az and el mean strong, irresistible, impudent.
- (10) Zok means a mountain peak; it may be the special name of the mountain whence the he-goat was flung down.
- (11) V. Supra p. 315, n. 7.
- (12) Ezek. XVII, 13.
- (13) This is a reference to the legend of fallen angels, based partly on Gen. VI, 4 and also on foreign lore. V. Jung, L. 'Fallen Angels in Jewish, Christian and Mohammedan literature'.
- (14) Lev. XVIII, 4.
- (15) A web of wool and linen, v. Deut. XXII, 11. All the laws mentioned in this group cannot be explained rationally; they are to be taken on faith, as the decree of God.
- (16) The ceremony of taking off the brother-in-law's shoe, v. Deut. XXV, 5ff.
- (17) I.e., those who accompany him.
- (18) Lev. XVI, 26.
- (19) [This argument is not clear. v. Rashi. Tosef. (Yoma III) reads: One might have assumed as soon as he goes forth outside the wall of the Temple court, therefore the text reads: 'For Azazel shall wash his clothes'. If 'for Azazel shall wash his clothes', I might [infer] only when he reaches Zok etc.]
- (20) Ibid. 27: And they shall burn in the fire their skin, and their flesh.
- (21) Lev. IV, 8-10.
- (22) V. Lev. XVI, 28.
- (23) That took place much later.
- (24) Zeb. 50a.
- (25) Lev. XVI, 27.
- (26) With reference to the bullock brought by an anointed priest for a sin-offering. Ibid. IV, 11.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 68a

just as above it is [carried forth] by means of cutting up and not by flaying, so here also it is by means of cutting up and not by flaying. Whence do we know it there? — For it was taught: 'And its inwards, and its dung, and he shall carry forth',¹ that teaches that he must carry it forth complete.² One might have assumed that he must also burn it complete, therefore it is said here: 'with its head and with its legs' and there also it is said: its head and its legs,³ hence just as there it is [offered] by means of cutting up, so here also it is [carried forth] by means of cutting up. One might assume that just as there it is by means of flaying, so here too, therefore the text reads: 'And its inwards and its dung'. How is this implied [in the Scriptural text]? — R. Papa answered: Just as the dung is enclosed in the inwards, so shall the flesh be enclosed in the skin.⁴

FROM WHAT TIME DO THEY RENDER GARMENTS UNCLEAN? [etc.] Our Rabbis taught:⁵ [And the bullock and . . . the he-goat] he shall carry forth without the camp and they shall burn. There⁶ you allot them three⁷ camps and here only one camp?⁸ Then, why does it read: 'without the camp'? To tell you: As soon as he goes outside the one camp, the garments are rendered unclean. Whence do we know it there?⁹ — For it was taught:¹⁰ Even the whole bullock shall he carry forth without the camp,¹¹ i.e., without the three camps. — You say: Without the three camps, but perhaps it means [only] 'without one camp'? When Scripture says, in connection with the bullock of the congregation: 'without the camp', whereas no such statement [of the text] is necessary, for it is said already: And he shall burn it as he burned the first bullock,¹² why then was 'without the camp' stated? To allot it another camp; and when Scripture says, Without the camp', in connection with the removal of the ashes whereas no such statement is necessary,¹³ since it is said already: Where the ashes are poured out,¹¹ this means to allot it a third camp. What does R. Simeon¹⁴ do 'Without the camp'?¹⁵ He needs it, as it was taught: R. Eliezer says: It is said here: 'Without the camp', and it is said there: Without the camp:¹⁶ Just as here it means outside the three camps, so does it mean there outside the three camps; and just as there it means to the east of Jerusalem,¹⁷ so does it mean here to the east of Jerusalem. But according to the view of the Sages where were they burnt? In accordance with what was taught: Where were they burnt?

(1) Lev. IV, 11-12.

(2) But the skin of the bullock, and all its flesh, with its head, and with its legs, and its inwards, and its dung, omitting no part of the animal's anatomy, hence justifies the statement that 'shall he carry forth', in the following verse, means he shall carry it forth complete.

(3) Lev. I, 8, 9. With reference to a burnt-offering of the flock.

(4) The skin of the bullock and all its flesh, occurring in the same passage with and its dung justifies the analogy: as the dung is enclosed, etc.

(5) Zeb. 105b.

(6) In connection with the bullock which the congregation or the anointed priest had to offer up as a sin-offering for an offence committed in error.

(7) Three camps, outside of which it is to be burnt, are 'allotted', designated in connection with it: the priestly camp, the camp of the Levites, the camp (the city) of Israel as shown infra.

(8) This bullock would apparently be burnt outside of the first camp (as 'without the camp' is mentioned only once). What difference justifies such discrimination? The difference would lie in the nature of the sacrifice, but there is practically no such difference, both being offered up inside and having the same regulation with regard to their burning and to their defiling of the garments.

(9) V. p. 318, n. 8.

(10) Sanh. 42b.

(11) Lev. IV, 12.

(12) Ibid. v. 21.

(13) V. ibid. VI, 4.

(14) Who, in our Mishnah, says: The garments are rendered unclean only from the moment the fire has taken hold of most parts of the sacrifice.

(15) Lev. XVI, 27.

(16) Num. XIX, 4. With reference to the red heifer.

(17) As indicated in the words towards the face of the tent of meeting, that is, he stands in the east facing the entrance of the Tabernacle to the west.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 68b

to the north¹ of Jerusalem, and without the three camps. R. Jose says: They were burnt in the place² where the ashes of the sacrifices were deposited.

Raba said: Who is the Tanna disputing with R. Jose. It is R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for it was taught: [The bullock shall he carry forth to] where the ashes are poured out, and burn it, i.e., there shall be ashes [from before].³ R. Eliezer b. Jacob says: It means that its place shall be sloping. Said Abaye: Perhaps they are disputing as to whether the place shall be sloping!⁴ — Our Rabbis taught: And he that burneth them⁵ i.e., he that burneth renders his garments unclean, but not he who kindles the fire, nor he who puts the wood in order. And who is 'He that burneth'? He who assists at the time of the burning. One might have assumed that even after they have become ashes, they shall still defile the garments, therefore Scripture says: 'them, i.e., only as long as they [are 'they'] do they defile the garments, but not once they have become ashes. R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon says: The bullock [itself] defiles the garments, but when the flesh is burnt to hard lumps it no more defiles the garments. What is the difference between the two views? — If it has been reduced to lumps of charred flesh.⁶

MISHNAH. THEY SAID TO THE HIGH PRIEST: THE HE-GOAT HAS REACHED THE WILDERNESS. AND WHENCE DID THEY KNOW THAT THE HE-GOAT HAD REACHED THE WILDERNESS? THEY USED TO SET UP GUARDS AT STATIONS⁷ AND FROM THESE TOWELS WOULD BE WAVED, THUS WOULD THEY KNOW THAT THE HE-GOAT HAD REACHED THE WILDERNESS. R. JUDAH SAID: BUT DID THEY NOT HAVE A GREAT SIGN? FROM JERUSALEM TO BETH HIDODO⁸ WAS THREE MILS. THEY COULD WALK A MIL, RETURN THE MIL, THEN TARRY THE TIME IT TAKES TO WALK A MIL, AND THUS KNOW THAT THE HE-GOAT HAD REACHED THE WILDERNESS. — R. ISHMAEL SAID: BUT THEY HAD ANOTHER SIGN TOO: A THREAD OF CRIMSON WOOL WAS TIED TO THE DOOR OF THE TEMPLE, AND WHEN THE HE-GOAT REACHED THE WILDERNESS THE THREAD TURNED WHITE, AS IT IS WRITTEN: THOUGH YOUR SINS BE AS SCARLET THEY SHALL BE AS WHITE AS SNOW.⁹

GEMARA. Abaye said: One may infer from here that Beth Hidodo is in the wilderness and this is what he [the Tanna of the Mishnah] informs us: that R. Judah holds: As soon as the he-goat has reached the wilderness the commandment concerning it is fulfilled.

CHAPTER VII

MISHNAH. THE HIGH PRIEST [THEN] CAME TO READ. IF HE WISHED TO READ IN LINEN GARMENTS HE COULD DO SO, OTHERWISE HE WOULD READ IN HIS OWN WHITE VESTMENTS. THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT¹⁰ WOULD TAKE A SCROLL OF THE LAW AND GIVE IT TO THE HEAD OF THE SYNAGOGUE,¹¹ AND THE HEAD OF THE SYNAGOGUE GAVE IT TO THE SEGAN,¹² AND THE SEGAN GAVE IT TO THE HIGH PRIEST, AND THE HIGH PRIEST STANDS AND RECEIVES IT, AND READS [THE SECTION] BEGINNING] 'AFTER THE DEATH . . .'¹³ AND 'HOWBEIT ON THE TENTH. . .'¹⁴ THEN HE WOULD ROLL UP THE SCROLL OF THE LAW AND PUT IT IN HIS BOSOM AND SAY, 'MORE THAN WHAT I HAVE READ OUT BEFORE YOU IS WRITTEN HERE. AND ON THE TENTH . . .'¹⁵ WHICH IS IN THE BOOK OF NUMBERS HE RECITES BY HEART. THEN HE RECITES IN CONNECTION THEREWITH EIGHT BENEDECTIONS: FOR THE LAW, FOR THE TEMPLE SERVICE, FOR THE THANKSGIVING, FOR THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS AND FOR THE TEMPLE SEPARATELY,¹⁶ AND FOR ISRAEL SEPARATELY AND FOR JERUSALEM SEPARATELY,¹⁷ FOR THE PRIESTS SEPARATELY AND FOR THE REST OF THE PRAYER.¹⁸ HE WHO SEES THE HIGH PRIEST WHEN HE READS DOES NOT SEE THE BULLOCK AND THE HE-GOAT THAT ARE BEING BURNT, AND HE THAT SEES THE BULLOCK AND THE HE-GOAT THAT ARE BEING BURNT DOES NOT SEE THE HIGH PRIEST WHEN HE READS: NOT THAT HE WAS NOT PERMITTED BUT BECAUSE THE DISTANCE APART WAS GREAT AND BOTH RITES WERE PERFORMED AT THE SAME TIME.

GEMARA. Since it states: IN HIS OWN WHITE VESTMENT,¹⁹ the inference is that reading is not a [Temple] service, and then it states: IF HE WISHED TO READ IN THE LINEN GARMENTS HE COULD DO SO, from which one may learn that priestly garments may be enjoyed for private use!²⁰ Perhaps it is different with reading, because it is a necessity for the [Temple] service. For the question was raised: Are the priestly garments allowed for private use or not allowed! — Come and hear: They would not sleep in the holy garments.²¹ Now they could not sleep in them, but they could eat in them!²² — Perhaps it is different with the eating, because it is necessary for the service, for it was taught: And they shall eat those things wherewith atonement was made;²³ this teaches that the priests eat and the owner obtains atonement. ‘They could not sleep in them’, but could they walk around in them? — In truth they might not walk around in them either

-
- (1) For all the ceremony in connection with the sin-offering took place in the north.
- (2) Before Beth ha-Deshen; when ashes have been deposited there it is Beth ha-Deshen. After they have been deposited it is Shefek ha-Deshen, the place where ashes have been poured out. (v. Rashi).
- (3) V. Lev. IV, 12.
- (4) I.e., the discussion may concern only the question as to whether the place must be sloping, and not whether ashes must have been deposited there first, R. Eliezer b. Jacob agreeing that ashes must have been deposited there before.
- (5) Lev. XVI, 28.
- (6) In this case the flesh has been dissolved without having become ashes. According to the first Tanna they render the garments unclean as long as they are not ashes, hence, in this case would still have this defiling effect. According to R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon it is only as long as they are bullocks, i.e., whole, that they render garments impure, whereas as charred flesh they are no more bullocks, hence do not affect the garments any more.
- (7) Jastr. from Grk. Diadoche — relays, guard at stations, corrupted into dirchaot.
- (8) Not definitely identified. J.T. Beth Horon, var. lec. Haroro, Beth Hadure.
- (9) Isa. I, 18.
- (10) [Hazzan. There is no certainty in regard either to the origin or rank of the Hazzan. Here he appears a second in rank to the Head of the Synagogue].
- (11) [ראש הכנסת Identified with the , the officer who administered the external affairs of the synagogue, v. Krauss, Synagogale Altertumer, p. 116ff. and J.E. II, 86.]
- (12) V. Glos.
- (13) Lev. XVI.
- (14) Lev. XXIII, 26-32.
- (15) Num. XXIX, 7-11.
- (16) What ‘separately’ means is not clear. Some texts including, J.T. omit. V. also Sotah 40b.
- (17) [J.T. and separate editions of the Mishnah omit ‘for Jerusalem’, which makes the number exactly eight].
- (18) V. Gemara.
- (19) Robe, garment; either the Greek stole, or a derivation of talal, cf. talith — Jast, and does not necessitate sacred priestly vestments.
- (20) For private clean use, as against the possibility of impurity in sleep.
- (21) Tamid 25b.
- (22) Although eating is not part of the service, it is permissible for priests to eat in their official garments.
- (23) Ex. XXIX, 23.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 69a

but it is necessary [to make special mention of sleep] on account of the last clause:¹ they may take them off, fold them, and put them under the head.

‘They may take them off, fold them, and put them under the head’! You may infer, then, hence that priestly garments may be enjoyed for private use? — R. Papa said: Do not say, ‘Under their heads’, but rather say, ‘Next to their heads’. R. Mesharsheya said: You may infer, thence, that one may keep the tefillin next to oneself whilst asleep. It is also logical that [the meaning here is] next to their heads’. For if the thought should arise in you that [it means] ‘under their heads’, surely you ought to derive [the prohibition of that] on account of the mixed texture [of wool and linen], for among [the garments which consisted of a mixed texture] is also the girdle, so that even if the private enjoyment [of priestly garments] is permitted, surely here he is deriving benefit from a mixed texture! — That will be right according to the view that the girdle of the high priest [on the Day of Atonement] is identical with the girdle of the common priest during the rest of the year; but what can be said according to the view that the girdle of the high priest is not identical with that of the commoner?² — And if you were to say mixed textures are forbidden only for wearing and putting on, but not for lying on, surely was it not taught: Neither shall there come upon thee,³ i.e., but you may spread it under you; but the Sages declare that this too is forbidden, because a fringe [of the mattress etc.] might wind itself round the flesh. And if you were to say: Something was placed in between, but did not R. Simeon b. Pazzi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi say on the authority of Rabbi, in the name of the Holy Community of Jerusalem: Even if there were ten mattress covers, one on top of the other, with mixed textures under them, it would still be forbidden to sleep on them. Rather, therefore, must you say [the meaning is]: ‘Next to their heads’. This is conclusive. R. Ashi said: In reality, read: ‘Under their heads’. [And as to the question]² But he would enjoy mixed textures? [the answer is], Priestly garments are stiff, for even so did R. Huna, son of R. Joshua say: The shrunk felt-cloth of Naresh⁴ is permitted.⁵

Come and hear: As to priestly garments, it is forbidden to go out in them in the province,⁶ but in the Sanctuary whether during or outside the time of the service, it is permitted to wear them, because priestly garments are permitted for private use. This is conclusive. But in the province [it is] not [permitted]? Surely it was taught: The twenty-fifth of Tebeth is the day of Mount Gerizim,⁷ on which no mourning is permitted. It is the day on which the Cutheans demanded the House of our God from Alexander the Macedonian so as to destroy it, and he had given them the permission, whereupon some people came and informed Simeon the Just.⁸ What did the latter do? He put on his priestly garments, robed himself in priestly garments, some of the noblemen of Israel went with him carrying fiery torches in their hands, they walked all the night, some walking on one side and others on the other side, until the dawn rose. When the dawn rose he [Alexander] said to them: Who are these [the Samaritans]? They answered: The Jews who rebelled against you. As he reached Antipatris,⁹ the sun having shone forth, they met. When he saw Simeon the Just, he descended from his carriage and bowed down before him. They said to him: A great king like yourself should bow down before this Jew? He answered: His image it is which wins for me in all my battles. He said to them: What have you come for? They said: Is it possible that star-worshippers should mislead you to destroy the House wherein prayers are said for you and your kingdom that it be never destroyed! He said to them: Who are these? They said to him: These are Cutheans who stand before you. He said: They are delivered into your hand. At once they perforated their heels, tied them to the tails of their horses and dragged them over thorns and thistles, until they came to Mount Gerizim, which they ploughed and planted with vetch, even as they had planned to do with the House of God. And that day they made a festive day.¹⁰ If you like say: They were fit to be priestly garments, or, if you like, say: It is time to work for the Lord: they have made void Thy law.¹¹

THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT WOULD TAKE A SCROLL OF THE LAW. One may infer from here that one may shew honour to the disciple in the presence of his master?¹² — Abaye said: It is all done for the sake of the high priest.¹³

AND THE HIGH PRIEST STANDS. From this you can infer that he was sitting before, but surely we have learnt:¹⁴

(1) Which permits the sleeping on them, independent of any fear that impurity may occur in the sleep, since the garments were taken off the body.

(2) According to the first view both are of linen, without any mixture, hence may be worn. But according to the second view, the commoner did wear a different kind of belt, made up of mixed texture, v. supra 6a notes, hence the difficulty.

(3) Lev. XIX, 19.

(4) Near Sura.

- (5) That felt-cloth was so hard that one could not have worn a garment of that material. The prohibition of mixed texture, however, applies only to such material as may be worn as garments and warm the body.
- (6) I.e., outside the Temple.
- (7) On which the Samaritans (Cutheans) had their Temple.
- (8) One of the surviving members of the Great Synod, v. Aboth, Sonc. ed., p. 2, n. 1.
- (9) Antipatris, in Judah, on the way from Jerusalem to Caesarea, was built by King Herod and called after his father, Antipater.
- (10) Prohibiting every public mourning. This shews that Simeon wore the priestly garments outside Jerusalem.
- (11) Ps. CXIX, 126. [In Megillath Ta'anith the day of the destruction of the Temple on Mount Gerizim is 21st Kislev. According to Josephus it was destroyed by Hyrcanus in the year 128 B.C.E. For the literature on the subject v. Lichtenstein, H., HUCA, vol. VIII-IX, p. 288].
- (12) The question is, shall we consider this an answer to the problem propounded elsewhere and not answered (B.B 119b; Sotah 40b) as to whether it is legitimate to shew honour to a subordinate in the presence of his superior, (disciple in presence of master). The solution, inferred from here, would be the affirmative.
- (13) I.e., what happens here serves but to indicate how many subordinates the high priest has, i.e., how exalted his position is. The problem is still unsolved as to a situation in which the honour would be intended exclusively for the benefit of the disciple or subordinate.
- (14) [Read with var. lec.: 'A Master said', as what follows is no Mishnah].

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 69b

Nobody may sit down in the [Temple] Court except the kings of the house of David alone, as it is said: Then David the king went in and sat before the Lord?¹ — It is as R. Hisda had explained [elsewhere]: In the women's court, so also here. 'In the women's court'. — Where was R. Hisda's statement made? — In connection with the following: An objection was raised, it was taught: Where did they read therein?² In the Temple. R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: On the Temple Mount, as it is said: And he read therein before the broad place that was before the water gate;³ and R. Hisda said: In the women's court.⁴ And Ezra blessed the Lord, the great God.⁵ What does 'great' imply? — R. Joseph said in the name of Rab: He magnified Him by [pronouncing] the Ineffable Name.⁶ R. Giddal said: [He recited], Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting even to everlasting.⁷ Said Abaye to R. Dimi: But perhaps it means that he magnified Him by [pronouncing] the Ineffable Name? — He answered: One does not pronounce the Ineffable Name outside [the limits of the Temple]. But may one not? Is it not written: And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose. [. . . and Ezra praised the great God].⁸ And R. Giddal [commenting thereupon] said: He magnified Him by [pronouncing] the Ineffable Name?—That was a decision in an emergency.⁹ And [they] cried with a great [loud] voice unto the Lord, their God.¹⁰ What did they cry? — Woe, woe, it is he¹¹ who has destroyed the Sanctuary, burnt the Temple, killed all the righteous, driven all Israel into exile, and is still dancing around among us! Thou hast surely given him to us so that we may receive reward through him.¹² We want neither him, nor reward through him! Thereupon a tablet fell down from heaven for them, whereupon the word 'truth'¹³ was inscribed. (R. Hanina said: One may learn therefrom that the seal of the Holy One, blessed be He, is truth). They ordered a fast of three days and three nights, whereupon he¹¹ was surrendered to them. He came forth from the Holy of Holies like a young fiery lion. Thereupon the Prophet said to Israel: This is the evil desire of idolatry, as it is said: And he said: This is wickedness.¹⁴ As they took hold of him a hair of his beard fell out, he raised his voice and it went [was audible] four hundred parasangs. Thereupon they said: How shall we act? Perhaps, God forbid, they might have mercy upon him from heaven! — The prophet said unto them: Cast him into a leaden pot, closing its opening with lead. Because lead absorbs the voice, as it is said: And he said: This is wickedness. And he cast her down into the midst of the measure, and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof.¹⁴ They said: Since this is a time of Grace, let us pray for mercy for the Tempter to evil.¹⁵ They prayed for mercy, and he was handed over to them. He said to them: Realize that if you kill him, the world goes down. They imprisoned him for three days, then looked in the whole land of Israel for a fresh egg and could not find it.¹⁶ Thereupon they said: What shall we do now? Shall we kill him? The world would then go down. Shall we beg for half-mercy?¹⁷ They do not grant ‘halves’ in heaven.¹⁷ They put out his eyes and let him go. It helped inasmuch as he no more entices men to commit incest.¹⁸ In the West [Palestine] they taught it thus: R. Giddal said: [And Ezra praised...the] great [God]:¹⁹ i.e., he magnified Him by pronouncing the Ineffable Name. R. Mattena said: He said: The great, the mighty, and the awful God.²⁰ The interpretation of R. Mattena seems to agree with what R. Joshua b. Levi said: For R. Joshua b. Levi said: Why were they called men of the Great Synod? Because they restored the crown of the divine attributes to its ancient completeness.²¹ [For] Moses had come and said: The great God, the mighty, and the awful.²² Then Jeremiah came and said: Aliens are destroying²³ His Temple. Where are, then, His awful deeds? Hence he omitted²⁴ [the attribute] the ‘awful’. Daniel came and said: Aliens are enslaving his sons. Where are His mighty deeds? Hence he omitted the word²⁵ ‘mighty’. But they came and said: On the contrary! Therein lie His mighty deeds that He suppresses His wrath,²⁶ that He extends long-suffering to the wicked. Therein lie His awful powers: For but for the fear of Him, how could one [single] nation persist among the [many] nations! But how could [the earlier] Rabbis²⁷ abolish something established by Moses? R. Eleazar said: Since they knew that the Holy One, blessed be He, insists on truth, they would not ascribe false [things] to Him.²⁸

AND HE READ: AFTER THE DEATH’ AND ‘HOWBEIT ON THE TENTH DAY’: A question was raised: One may skip in reading from the Prophets, but one may not skip in reading from the Torah!²⁹ — That is no difficulty: The one [prohibition] applies where [the passage skipped is] sufficiently long to interrupt the interpreter, the other where it is not sufficiently long to interrupt the interpreter.³⁰ — But surely it is in connection therewith that it was taught: One may skip in reading from the Prophets, but one may not skip in reading from the Torah; and how much may be skipped [in the Prophets]? So much as is not sufficiently long to interrupt the interpreter. This implies that in reading from the Torah one may not skip at all? — Said Abaye: There is no difficulty: [The permission applies] here, where one theme is concerned, [the prohibition] there, where two themes are concerned.³¹ Thus also it was taught: One may skip in the reading from the Torah, if the theme be one and same, in reading from the Prophets, even if two themes be involved; in each case, however, only when it is not sufficiently long to interrupt the interpreter. Nor may one skip from one Prophetic Book to another, but in case of one of the twelve Minor Prophets one may skip even [from one Book to another],

(1) I Chron. XVII, 16. Only the descendants of David who, through his son, built the Temple, are permitted to feel sufficiently at home there to be permitted to sit down in the Temple Court, as Scripture indicates.

(2) I.e., when any public reading took place in the Temple.

(3) Neh. VIII, 3. Ezra read the Law ‘in the presence of the men and the women’.

(4) [The text from ‘it is as R. Hisda explained’ to this point is in disorder. MS.M. reads: ‘Said R. Hisda, In the women’s court. An objection was raised: Where did they read therein? In the (Temple) Court . . . water-gate? — Said R. Hisda, In the women’s court’. Ronsburg (Glosses) deletes ‘An objection was raised’. In any case our present text seems to be a conflation of two readings].

(5) Neh. VIII, 6.

(6) [Shem ha-Meforash. Lit., ‘the Distinguished Name’ synonymous with the Shem ha-Meyuhad ‘the Unique Name’, and generally held identical with the Tetragrammaton uttered as written, v. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 408, n. I].

(7) I Chron. XVI, 36.

(8) Neh. VIII, 4-6.

(9) Not to be taken as precedent. Lit. ‘a decision for the moment’.

(10) Ibid. IX, 4. [Here too the text is in disorder as the verse has no connection with the preceding verse to which it is adduced in explanation of the emergency referred to, the incident in the first verse having taken place on the first of the seventh month, whilst that of the second verse on the twenty-fourth. Var. lec. accordingly omit the first quotations from ibid. VIII, 4 and substitute in its place the second verse ibid. IX, 4; v. Bah.]

(11) The evil desire, tempter of idolatry.

- (12) For resisting him successfully Israel would be rewarded.
- (13) I.e., I agree with you: you spoke the truth.
- (14) Zech. V, 8.
- (15) The evil desire, for idolatry is also the evil desire for immorality. The two were found to go hand in hand.
- (16) Whereas there is no good in idolatry there is at least some good in the desire for sex indulgence. Perpetuation of the race depends upon it. So does human food. The people who found themselves with the opportunity to destroy the temptation of flesh-love discovered that, when the genius of sex-love is cancelled, no eggs are available.
- (17) To ask that temptation or the tempter should live, but not tempt, is to ask a thing that Heaven will not grant. The tempter lives to tempt. But by depriving its flame of its major glare, by keeping it within lawful limits, one promotes domesticity and prevents depravity.
- (18) Lit., 'against relatives'.
- (19) [On the variant given supra p. 327. n. 6, the reference is to 'great' mentioned in Neh. IX, 4.]
- (20) Ibid. 32.
- (21) The crown, I.e., the praise of the Lord. By re-embodiment the attributes, which Jeremiah and Daniel had omitted.
- (22) Deut. X, 17.
- (23) Or, revel in.
- (24) In his prayer, Jer. XXXII, 17f.
- (25) In his prayer, Dan. IX, 4ff.
- (26) So MS.M. cur. edd. He subdues his inclination.
- (27) Jeremiah, Daniel.
- (28) Since to them the circumstances indicated that He desired to hide His mighty or awful deeds.
- (29) Meg. 24a.
- (30) The interpreter would follow immediately the reader. If the rolling did not involve so much time that, at the end of his interpretation of the passage just read, the interpreter would have to stop to await the reading of the new Hebrew passage, well and good. For to keep the congregation waiting for the continuation of the service is unseemly. But 'Howbeit on the tenth day' is so near Lev. XVI, that before the interpreter would have concluded his Aramaic interpretation of the last Hebrew passage, the new passage would have been started and read, for him to interpret without loss of time.
- (31) This distinction is not technical, but pedagogical. If both passages although near — so that the interpreter need not keep the congregation waiting — deal with two subjects, one shall not skip from one to another, because closer attention is necessary for an understanding of the laws of the Torah. But where one subject only is involved, as in the reading on the Day of Atonement, such skipping is permitted. Meg. 24a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 70a

provided one does not skip from the end of the Book to its beginning.

THEN HE WOULD ROLL UP THE SCROLL OF THE LAW etc.: Why all that?¹ — So as not to discredit the scroll of the Law.²

AND ON THE TENTH, WHICH IS IN THE BOOK OF NUMBERS, HE RECITED BY HEART: Why that? Let him roll up [the scroll] and read from it [again]? — R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said in the name of R. Shesheth: Because it is not proper to roll up a scroll of the Law before the community, because of respect for the community.³ Then one should bring another scroll and read therefrom? — R. Huna, son of R. Judah said: Because it would discredit the first [scroll]. Resh Lakish said: Because of an unnecessary blessing.⁴ But we do take into consideration [the reason that it would] discredit [the first scroll]? Has not R. Isaac, the Smith, said: If the beginning of the month of Tebeth falls on the Sabbath, one brings three scrolls of the Torah, and reads from one about the affairs of the day,⁵ in the second about the new moon, in the third about Hanukkah?⁶ — Three men [reading] from three scrolls do not imply a discredit [for the first and second scroll], one man reading from two scrolls does.⁷

THEREUPON HE PRONOUNCED EIGHT BLESSINGS: Our Rabbis taught: For the Torah, as one pronounces it in the Synagogue;⁸ for the Temple service; for the thanksgiving;⁹ for the forgiving of iniquity, as usual;¹⁰ for the Sanctuary separately; for the priest separately; for Israel separately; and for the rest of the prayer.

Our Rabbis taught: The rest of the prayer: [Accept my] song, petition, supplication before Thee for Thy people Israel, which are in need of salvation.' He would conclude with: '[Blessed art Thou, O Lord] who hearkenest unto prayer.' Thereupon each would bring a scroll of the Torah from his house and read therefrom, in order to shew the multitude its beauty.¹¹ HE WHO SEES THE HIGH PRIEST . . . NOT THAT IT WAS NOT PERMITTED etc.: That is self-evident? — You might have thought as Resh Lakish does: For Resh Lakish said: One must not permit a mizwah to pass by unnoticed; and what mizwah is there here? In the multitude of the people is the king's glory.¹² Therefore we are informed¹³ [that it was permitted].

MISHNAH. IF HE READ IN THE GARMENTS OF LINEN, HE WOULD THEN SANCTIFY HIS HANDS AND FEET, STRIP OFF HIS CLOTHES, GO DOWN AND IMMERSE HIMSELF, COME UP AND DRY HIMSELF. THE GOLDEN VESTMENTS WOULD BE BROUGHT TO HIM, HE PUT THEM ON, SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET, WENT OUT, OFFERED UP HIS OWN RAM AND THE RAM OF THE PEOPLE,¹⁴ AND THE SEVEN UNBLEMISHED, ONE-YEAR-OLD-LAMBS.¹⁵ THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. ELIEZER. R. AKIBA SAID: THESE WERE OFFERED UP TOGETHER WITH THE DAILY WHOLE-OFFERING OF THE MORNING, WHEREAS THE BULLOCK FOR THE WHOLE-OFFERING¹⁵ AND THE HE-GOAT WHICH IS OFFERED UP OUTSIDE¹⁶ WERE OFFERED UP TOGETHER WITH THE DAILY WHOLE-OFFERING OF THE AFTERNOON. HE THEN SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET, STRIPPED OFF HIS CLOTHES, WENT DOWN AND IMMERSSED HIMSELF, CAME UP AND DRIED HIMSELF. THE WHITE VESTMENTS WOULD BE BROUGHT TO HIM, HE PUT THEM ON AND SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND HIS FEET. THEN HE WOULD GO IN TO BRING OUT THE LADLE AND THE FIRE-PAN. HE WOULD SANCTIFY HIS HANDS AND FEET, STRIP OFF HIS CLOTHES, GO DOWN AND IMMERSE HIMSELF, COME UP AND DRY HIMSELF. THE GOLDEN GARMENTS WOULD BE BROUGHT TO HIM. HE PUT THEM ON, SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET, AND WENT IN TO BURN UP THE AFTERNOON INCENSE, AND TO TRIM THE LAMPS. HE SANCTIFIED HIS HANDS AND FEET AND STRIPPED. THEN HE WENT DOWN, IMMERSSED HIMSELF, CAME UP AND DRIED HIMSELF. THEY WOULD THEN BRING TO HIM HIS OWN GARMENTS, HE PUT THEM ON. THEY WOULD ACCOMPANY HIM TO HIS HOUSE. HE WOULD ARRANGE FOR A DAY OF FESTIVITY FOR HIS FRIENDS WHENEVER HE HAD COME FORTH FROM THE SANCTUARY IN PEACE.

GEMARA. The question was raised: How does he [R. Akiba] mean: They [the seven lambs] were offered up together with the daily whole-offering of the morning, whereas the bullock for the whole-offering and the he-goat which is offered up outside were offered up together with the daily whole-offering of the afternoon; or did he mean, perhaps, this: they were offered up together with the daily whole-offering of the morning and together also with them the bullock for the whole-offering, whereas the he-goat which is offered up outside is offered up together with the daily whole-offering of the afternoon?¹⁷ Furthermore, when, according to R. Eliezer who omits reference to him, is the bullock for the whole-offering being sacrificed? Furthermore, according to both R. Eliezer and R. Akiba, when are the sacrificial portions of the sin-offering¹⁸ smoked? — Raba said: You have no properly arranged order [of the service] except you adopt either the view of R. Eliezer, as taught in the School of Samuel, or the view of R. Akiba as reported in the Tosefta. For the School of Samuel taught: R. Eliezer said, He went forth, prepared his own ram, and the ram of the people and the sacrificial portions of the sin-offering, but the bullock for the whole-offering and the seven lambs, and the he-goat that was offered up outside were offered up together with the daily whole-offering of the afternoon. What is the teaching of R. Akiba as recorded in the Tosefta?¹⁹ — For it was taught: R. Akiba said, The bullock for the whole-offering, and the seven lambs were offered up together with the Daily whole-offering of the morning, as it is said: [Ye shall offer these] beside the burnt-offering of the morning which is for a continual burnt-offering.²⁰ After that the service of the day

-
- (1) Why was it necessary for him to say: More than I have read before you is written here?
 - (2) His reciting by heart may suggest to the congregation that the passage in question is missing from the scroll.
 - (3) Whom one should not keep waiting for the continuation of the service.
 - (4) Any unnecessary mention of His name is a transgression of the third command, wherefore in doubtful circumstances a blessing should rather be unpronounced than repeated. A new scroll would require a new blessing and is therefore to be avoided, as leading to an unnecessary, i.e., unlawful mention of His name.
 - (5) The portion of the Torah, due to be read on that Sabbath, one of the fifty-two Sabbaths of the year, to each of which is apportioned a Sidrah from the Pentateuch.
 - (6) V. Meg. 29b.
 - (7) The suggestion that one of the scrolls is defective is more reasonable in the case of one and the same person reading from two, than in the case of three different persons, each of whom reads his portion from one special scroll.
 - (8) V. P.B. p. 147.
 - (9) Op. cit. p. 50ff.
 - (10) As we have it in the Day of Atonement Liturgy.
 - (11) To 'adorn oneself' before Him in the performance of His commandments, i.e., to perform them in a manner aesthetically satisfactory is a duty which our Rabbis derived from Ex. XV, 2: He is my God and I will glorify Him. In pursuit of that ideal, a pious Jew would build his tabernacle in most careful and beautiful form, would have his scroll written by excellent scribes, would have his prayer shawl adorned, or made from costly wool or silk. To shew his scroll to the people would be an exhibition of his natural pride in that precious possession.
 - (12) Prov. XIV, 28. Consequently it might be thought that one must not depart from witnessing one rite in favour of the other.
 - (13) That it is permitted to pass by a mizwah unnoticed, if one is engaged in the performance of another. The prohibition to ignore the opportunity of performing a mizwah applies only when one is not engaged, or about to be engaged, in another good deed.
 - (14) Lev. XVI, 24.
 - (15) Num. XXIX, 8.
 - (16) I.e., its blood was sprinkled on the outer altar. Ibid. v. 11.
 - (17) R. Akiba's statement is not clear enough. Either of the two interpretations are possible, dependent on where the end of the clause is placed.
 - (18) Mentioned in the Mishnah Supra 67b.
 - (19) A collection of oral laws, outside of the Mishnah, but considered authoritative. Several such collections are mentioned and ascribed to various Sages.
 - (20) Num. XXVIII, 23.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 70b

and after that the he-goat which is to be offered outside, as it is said: One he-goat for a sin-offering, beside the sin-offering of atonement;¹ and after that his own ram and the ram of the people, after that the sacrificial portions of the sin-offering, and after that the Daily whole-offering of the afternoon.

What is the reason for R. Eliezer's view? — He [the high priest] performs [the service] in accord with the order written [in Scripture's text]: first he performs what Leviticus enjoins and then he performs what Numbers prescribes.² And R. Akiba? — It is in accord with the reason he himself states: Beside the burnt-offering of the morning, which is for a continual burnt-offering which shews that the additional sacrifices were offered up together with the Daily whole-offering of the morning. What does R. Eliezer do with the passage: Beside the sin-offering of atonement?³ He uses it [for the teaching]: Both⁴ atone for similar kinds of sins.⁵ R. Judah said in his [R. Akiba's] name: One⁶ is offered up together with the Daily whole-offering of the morning, and six⁶ with the Daily whole-offering of the afternoon. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon said in his name: Six were offered up with the Daily whole-offering of the morning and one together with the Daily whole-offering of the evening. What is [the reason] of the Rabbis? — There are two verses written: It is written: ‘Beside the burnt-offering of the morning’⁷ and it is written: ‘And he come forth and offer his burnt-offering’.⁸ He therefore prepares one part with the one, and the other with the other. Wherein are they disputing? — R. Judah holds: He offered one first, as it is written: ‘Beside the burnt-offering of the morning’, and then he performed the service of the day, because of a [possible] weakness of the high priest. R. Simeon b. Eleazar holds: Since he once started, he performs the service of the six, lest he be negligent [and will not offer them after the service of the day]. But as to the service due that day, he is zealous.⁹

All, at any rate, agree that it was but one ram;¹⁰ according to whose view is that? — In accord with Rabbi. For it was taught: Rabbi says:¹¹ [The] ‘one ram’¹² spoken of here is the same ram which is mentioned in the Book of Numbers.¹³ R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon says: Two rams are involved, one mentioned here, the other in the Book of Numbers. What is the ground of Rabbi's view? Because Scripture says: ‘One’. — And R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon: ‘One’ here means, the [unique] outstanding one of his flock. And Rabbi? — He infers that from, and all your choice vows.¹⁴ And R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon? — One refers to obligatory offerings, the other to voluntary ones and [a statement concerning both] is necessary.¹⁵

HE WOULD SANCTIFY HIS HANDS AND FEET. Our Rabbis taught: And Aaron shall come in to the tent of meeting.¹⁶ For what purpose does he enter? To fetch ladle and fire-pan

(1) Ibid. XXIX, 11.

(2) [Hence the additional offerings and the Daily afternoon whole-offering prescribed in Numbers are offered last].

(3) [Which implies that the he-goat offered outside is offered before his own ram and the ram of the people].

(4) [The he-goat whose blood is sprinkled outside and the he-goat, the sin-offering of the atonement, whose blood is sprinkled within].

(5) Sheb. 2a. Atonement is made by the he-goat whose blood is sprinkled outside, as well as by: Beside the sin-offering of atonement.

(6) Of the seven lambs.

(7) Which shews that the additional offerings were offered in conjunction with the Daily offering of the morning.

(8) Lev. XVI, 24. [How this implies that the additional offerings were to be offered in conjunction with the Daily offering of the evening is not clear. V. Strashun Glosses].

(9) His zeal for the service of the Day of Atonement will enable him to overcome any weakness that may supervene.

(10) Which is offered up on the Day of Atonement on behalf of the congregation.

(11) V. supra 3a.

(12) Lev. XVI, 5.

(13) Num. XXIX, 8.

(14) Deut. XII, 11.

(15) One could not have inferred the law that the choicest of animals have to be brought in the case of voluntary offerings from the obligatory ones, or vice versa, because to one view the former is preferable, more pleasing because spontaneous, whereas to the other the performance of one's duty takes preference. Hence two texts are necessary to include both kinds of offerings.

(16) Lev. XVI, 23.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 71a

for the whole portion here follows the order with the exception of this verse.¹ Why? — R. Hisda said: We have it on tradition² that the high priest underwent five immersions and ten sanctifications on that day. And if you were to say that they are recorded in their normal order, you would find but three immersions and six Sanctifications.³ To this R. Zera demurred: But perhaps⁴ he interrupted [the service of the day] with the he-goat that was to be offered up outside? — Abaye replied: Scripture said, ‘He come forth and offer his burnt-offering’⁵ i.e., on his first coming forth he is to offer his burnt-offering, and that of the people.⁵ Raba said: Scripture said, And shall put off the linen garments [etc.].⁶ . Now it was necessary [to add] ‘which he put on’, for can a man put off except what he had put on before? What then is the purpose of stating ‘which he put on’? I.e., which he had put on before.⁷ — To this Rabba son of R. Shila demurred: But perhaps he interrupted with the he-goat to be offered up outside? — Surely it is written: ‘He come forth and offer, etc.’ — But is the rest of the section written in accord with the actual order? Surely the verses say: And the fat of the sin-offering shall he make smoke on the altar,⁸ and then: And the bullock of the sin-offering and the goat of the sin-offering,⁹ whereas we learned: HE WHO SEES THE HIGH PRIEST WHEN HE READS DOES NOT SEE THE BULLOCK AND THE HE-GOAT THAT ARE BURNT,¹⁰ whereas the sacrificial portions of the sin-offering were smoked up afterwards?¹¹ — Read: From this passage on.¹² But what makes you find fault¹³ with the verses, why don't you find fault with the Mishnah rather? — Said Abaye: Scripture states: And he that letteth go... and he that burneth,¹⁴ i.e., just as the letting go takes place before, so does the burning.¹⁵ — On the contrary! [Say:] Just as the burning takes place now,¹⁶ so does the letting go take place now!¹⁷ — ‘And he that letteth go’ implies [to that which was referred to] before.¹⁸ Raba said, Scripture says: [But the goat . . . for Azazel] shall be set alive.¹⁹ How long must it needs be set alive? Until the time of Atonement — Now when is the time of Atonement? At the time when the blood is sprinkled, not beyond it.²⁰

When he who was to take [the he-goat] away came back and met the high priest in the street, he would say to him: Sir high priest, we have fulfilled your request. If he met him in his house, he would say to him: We have fulfilled the request of Him Who grants life to all who live.

Rabbah said: When Rabbis in Pumbeditha would take leave of each other, they would say: May He Who grants life to all who live, grant you a long, happy, and right life! — I shall walk before the Lord in the lands of the living.²¹ Rab Judah said: That means the place of markets [public thoroughfare].²² For length of days, and years of life, and peace, will they add to you.²³ But are there years, which are years of life, and years, which are not years of life? — R. Eleazar said: These are such years of man as have changed from evil to good.²⁴

Unto you, O men, I call.²⁵ R. Berekiah said: They are the disciples of the wise, who resemble women, and do mighty deeds like man.²⁶

R. Berekiah also said: If a man wishes to offer a libation upon the altar, let him fill the throat of the disciples of the wise with wine, as it is said: ‘Unto you, O men, [ishim]²⁷ I call’. Furthermore did R. Berekiah say: If a man sees that Torah ceases from his seed, let him marry the daughter of a disciple of the wise, as it is said: Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground

(1) The whole of chapter XVI of Leviticus describes the service of the Day of Atonement, as it actually took place, with the exception of v. 23 which, followed by the statement, And he shall bathe . . . and come forth, and offer his burnt-offering and the burnt-offering of his people (v. 24), would cause one to infer that the high priest had first entered to fetch the ladle and the fire-pan, and afterwards had offered up his burnt-offering and that of his people; whereas actually he fetched ladle and fire-pan after having offered up these burnt-offerings. V. Supra 32b notes.

(2) The Mishnah cites the traditional number of immersions and sanctifications, supra 19a, 30a and 31a. Every change of garments necessitated two sanctifications and one immersion.

(3) And if one were to assume that the order is exactly described also in vv. 23-24 i.e., that the offering of the two burnt-offerings did not interrupt the service of the Day of Atonement by taking place before the fetching of ladle and fire-pan, then only three changes of garments would be involved, viz., the offering of the continual sacrifice of the morning, performed in the golden garments, the service of the day including the fetching of ladle and fire-pan, in white garments, and the offering up of the two burnt-offerings and the rest of the service, in golden garments again, thus three changes involving but three immersions and six sanctifications. The Biblical account would thus contradict, or render impossible, the tradition as preserved in the Mishnah. To harmonize the two the interpretation is offered that in reality the offering of the burnt-offerings came between the service of the day and the fetching of censer and fire-pan, implying two more changes of garments; for the high priest would offer the two burnt-offerings in white garments, into which and from which he would change from and into the golden garments, so that the five traditional changes and immersions as well as the ten sanctifications traditionally reported are thus established: the continual offering of the morning, due in the golden garments, the service of the day in white ones, the offering up of the two burnt-offerings in the golden garments, the fetching of censer and fire-pan in the white ones, and finally, the additional sacrifices and the continual offering of the evening, in the golden ones.

(4) Since all that is required is harmony between the Mishnaic statement as to five immersions and six sanctifications, it is not necessarily the last suggestion that must be adopted. The he-goat to be offered up outside, prescribed in Num. XXIX, 11 ('the sin-offering of the atonement') too, required two immersions and four sanctifications, hence the number of sanctifications and immersions could be harmonized on this assumption too. The interruption of the service of the day with the he-goat of which no mention is made in the service of the day prescribed in Leviticus, would involve no rearrangement of the Biblical text, such as the first suggestion implied.

(5) Lev. XVI, 24 states that he offers up the two rams, his own and the people's, as soon as he has left the Holy of Holies. Whereas, if he were to have fetched the ladle and the coal-pan first, he would have offered them after his second coming forth from the Holy of Holies.

(6) Lev. XVI, 23. Raba does not endeavour to answer the question propounded by R. Zera, he endeavours to explain the Baraitha, which would emend the Scriptural account by having the order of the service interrupted as above.

(7) That was thus the second stripping off of the garments. Hence there must have been a change of garments between the service of the day and the fetching of the censer and coal-pan, whence it follows that this verse refers to the second stripping off of garments, and comes after the offering up of the two rams by the high priest.

(8) Lev. XVI, 25.

(9) Ibid. v. 27.

(10) Because the burning and the reading took place at the same time, which is when the priest is still wearing the white garments, in which as the Mishnah states he reads.

(11) I.e., at the third immersion when he offers the two rams, i.e., after changing into the golden garments (v. Mishnah supra 70a). This clearly contradicts the order of Biblical verses.

(12) Read, instead of 'except this verse', 'except from this verse on', when the Scriptural verses no more take into account the actual order.

(13) Why don't you rather emend the Mishnah and say that the burning of bullock and he-goat did not take place at the time the high priest read the portion from the Torah, but after the portions of the sin-offering had been smoked, as the Scriptural verses have it.

(14) Lev. XVI, 26 and 28.

(15) Scripture here uses the same participial form in referring to him that letteth go and to him that burneth. That implies a certain analogy. In both passages follows the statement: And the fat of the sin-offering shall he make smoke on the altar. (Ibid. v. 25.) Now the sending away of the he-goat for Azazel preceded that, as v. 21 reads: And he shall send him away by the hand of an appointed man into the wilderness. Of necessity 'He that letteth go' refers to previous passages, as to say: With reference to the letting go of which you were commanded before, i.e., before the smoking of the sacrificial portions of the sin-offering (he that letteth go defiles the garments). The above-mentioned analogy justifies the inference that 'he that burneth' similarly refers to the burning done before.

(16) I.e., after the smoking of his sacrificial portions.

(17) One could also argue just to the contrary, for the analogy could be made in either way: just as the burning takes place after the sacrificial pieces of the sin-offering have been smoked, thus is the reference to him that letteth go, for now. The statement in v. 21 'And he shall send it away' then means, now that the time for this has arrived.

(18) As explained in n. 3.

(19) Lev. XVI, 10: alive, to make atonement for him.

(20) Hence it could not be maintained that the he-goat was to be sent away after the portions of the sacrifice were smoked. That disposes of the last question.

(21) Ps, CXVI, 9.

(22) Markets may be lands of life, because there is much life in them, or because they furnish 'a living' to many.

(23) Prov. III, 2.

(24) When sunshine comes again, the memory of evil days is so obliterated that they do not seem to have been experienced, lived at all.

(25) Prov. VIII, 4.

(26) Study makes them weak, like women. But in the fields of halachah they are mighty heroes. This maxim is included here, because the word 'ish' (Sir high priest) recalls a homiletical interpretation of the same word elsewhere.

(27) Connecting ishim with ishe, fire-offerings.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 71b

yet through the scent of water it will bud, and put forth boughs like a plant.¹

AND A FESTIVE DAY HE WOULD ARRANGE FOR HIS FRIENDS: Our Rabbis taught: It happened with a high priest that as he came forth from the Sanctuary, all the people² followed him, but when they saw Shemayah³ and Abtalion, they forsook him and went after Shemayah and Abtalion. Eventually Shemayah and Abtalion visited him, to take their leave of the high priest. He said to them: May the descendants of the heathen come in peace!⁴ — They answered him: May the descendants of the heathen, who do the work of Aaron, arrive in peace, but the descendant of Aaron, who does not do the work of Aaron, he shall not come in peace!⁵

MISHNAH. THE HIGH PRIEST PERFORMS THE SERVICE IN EIGHT PIECES OF GARMENTS, AND THE COMMON PRIEST IN FOUR: IN TUNIC, DRAWERS, MITRE, AND GIRDLE. THE HIGH PRIEST ADDS THERETO THE BREASTPLATE, THE APRON, THE ROBE AND THE FRONTLET. IN THESE WERE THE URIM AND THUMMIM⁶ INQUIRED OF. BUT THEY WERE NOT INQUIRED OF EXCEPT FOR THE KING, FOR THE AB BETH DIN⁷ OR FOR ONE WHOM THE COMMUNITY NEEDS.⁸

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: [All] things, in connection with which the word shesh ['fine linen'] is said, had their threads sixfold: 'twined' [denotes] eightfold [threads]; the robe [had its threads] twelvefold; the curtain,⁹ twenty-four-fold; the breastplate and apron twenty-eight-fold. Whence do we know that they had their threads sixfold? — Scripture said: And they made the tunics of fine linen, the mitre of fine linen and the goodly headtires of fine linen, and the linen breeches of fine twined linen.¹⁰ Here are five Scriptural references: One is necessary for the subject itself, that they must be made of flax; one, that their thread shall be sixfold; one to indicate that they must be twisted; one, that this applies also to other garments in connection with which the term 'shesh' is not used, and once, that it is indispensable. What indicates that the word 'shesh' means flax? — R. Jose b. Hanina said: Scripture says: Bad [linen] i.e., whatever comes out of the soil singly.¹¹ But say, perhaps, it is wool? — Wool splits off.¹² But flax also splits? Flax splits into branches through beating.¹³ Rabina said: [I infer it] from this. They shall have linen tires upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins.¹⁴ Said R. Ashi to him: But whence did they know that before Ezekiel came? — But, according to your argument, what of R. Hisda's statement: This matter¹⁵ we have learnt not from the Torah of Moses, but from the words of Ezekiel b. Buzi: No alien, uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into My sanctuary?¹⁶ Who taught this before Ezekiel came? Rather must you say that it was traditionally handed down and when Ezekiel came he strengthened it by attaching it to Scripture; in our case [here] too it was a traditional teaching and Ezekiel strengthened it by attaching it to Scripture.

Whence do we know that 'twined' [denotes] eightfold [threads]? — Scripture says: And they made upon the skirts of the robe pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, twined.¹⁷ One may infer from the analogy of 'twined' used in connection with the curtain: just as there [each twined thread] was twenty-four-fold,¹⁸ so also here was it twenty-four-fold, the thread of each kind of material being eightfold.¹⁹ - But one should infer from breast-plate and apron: just as there it was twenty-eightfold, so also here twenty-eight-fold?²⁰ — One may infer a thing in connection with which gold is not mentioned from another thing, in connection with which gold is not mentioned;²¹ that excludes the breast-plate and apron in connection with which gold is mentioned. On the contrary! One should, rather, infer concerning one garment from another garment, which would exclude the curtain, because that [in a sense] is a tent! — Rather, if it is inferred from the girdle,²² thus inferring concerning a garment, in connection with which gold is not mentioned from another garment, in connection with which gold is not mentioned; but not inferring concerning anything, in connection with which gold is mentioned from something in connection with which gold is mentioned. R. Mari said: Scripture said: Thou shalt make it,²³ i.e., only, nothing else.²⁴ R. Ashi said: And thou shalt make,²⁵ i.e., all the work in connection therewith must be the same. Now how is that possible? If he were to make the three kinds tenfold each, there would be thirty [threads]. And if one made two ninefold and one tenfold, but Scripture said: ‘And thou shalt make’, i.e., all the work in connection therewith must be alike.

Whence do we know that the robe [had its threads] twelfefold? Because Scripture said: And thou shalt make the robe of the ephod

-
- (1) Job XIV, 8, 9. The Torah is compared to water. Such fragrant water the children of the disciples of the wise will bring with them into the new home.
- (2) Lit., ‘world’.
- (3) They were the famous teachers of Hillel and Shammai of the Mishnah, v. Aboth I. Descendants of non-Jews, according to one tradition (Git. 57b), scions of Sennacherib's.
- (4) In this manner this graceless high priest gave vent to his jealous anger at the honour which the people had bestowed upon these masters of the Law.
- (5) Aaron pursued peace; his disciples, too, were very peaceful. So were Shemayah and Abtalion increasing peace in the world, but this high priest, whose arrogance caused strife, was not a worthy descendant of Aaron.
- (6) v. Ex. XXVIII, 30.
- (7) Lit., ‘Father of the Court’. V. Glos.
- (8) v. Mak. 11b.
- (9) V. Ex. XXVI, 31.
- (10) Ex. XXXIX, 27-8.
- (11) Bad from badad means single, single stalk. Bad also means linen; hence the interpretation using both homonyms. Similarly, shesh means both ‘fine linen’ and ‘six’, whence support for the teaching that it must be sixfold. Flax has no branches, but leaves, the flax coming from the middle stem.
- (12) On the sheep; does not grow in single threads like stalks.
- (13) Whilst normally it grows in single stalks.
- (14) Ezek. XLIV, 18, whilst in the Pentateuch these tires are prescribed to be of shesh which proves shesh to be flax.
- (15) That an uncircumcised priest (no matter whether uncircumcised because of disobedience to the Torah, which would render him also uncircumcised in heart, whose actions ‘alienate’ him from the Lord, or because his brethren had died as the result of circumcision, which circumstances would free him from the obligation of the circumcised) may not enter the Sanctuary.
- (16) Ezek. XLIV, 9.
- (17) Ex. XXXIX, 24.
- (18) [The curtain had four kinds of material, each having its thread sixfold, since the word shesh is mentioned in connection therewith, v. Ex. XXVI, 31. Thus each twined thread which consisted of the four materials was twenty-fourfold].
- (19) I.e., with the robe where only three kinds of materials were used, the threads of each strand had to be eightfold to make each twined thread of all the material twenty-eightfold].
- (20) As shewn infra.
- (21) I.e., the robe from the curtain neither of which had gold.
- (22) [Which also had four kinds of material each of sixfold threads, since shesh is written in connection therewith, v. Ex.

XXXIX, 29].

(23) Ex. XXVIII,15 is with reference to the breast-plate.

(24) Only breast-plate and apron, 'it', hence no precedence for any other garment, taking 'it' to indicate 'it' exclusively.

(25) Ex. XXVIII, 33, repeated in connection with the pomegranates, indicates that all the material used there must have been made alike. Hence it is impossible for the twined thread in the robe to be of a twenty-eightfold, as he goes on to explain.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 72a

plaited of blue.¹ And one may infer from the analogy of 'blue', used also in connection with the curtain, just as there [each of the materials had its threads]² sixfold, so also sixfold here.³ But let us infer from the skirt and the pomegranates, just as there it was eightfold thus also here eightfold? — One may infer for one garment from another, but one may not infer for a garment from an adornment to a garment. On the contrary! One may infer concerning a matter from the matter itself,⁴ but one may not infer for a thing from something outside thereof. For that reason we said:⁵ One, to inform us concerning other garments in connection with which 'shesh' is not used. The curtain twenty-fourfold. Four [strands of material] each of sixfold [threads], there being here neither controversy nor decision.⁶

Whence do we know that [each twined thread of] breast-plate and apron was twenty-eightfold? Because it is written: And thou shalt make a breast-plate of judgment, the work of the skillful workman; like the work of the ephod thou shalt make it; of gold, of blue and purple, and scarlet and fine twined linen⁷ — four kinds of material, each sixfold, amount to twenty-four threads, and of the gold, one thread to each of the sixfold threads of the four materials, four [threads], together twenty-eightfold [twine]. Perhaps the gold too was sixfold? — R. Aha b. Jacob said: Scripture said: And they [did beat the gold into thin plates and] cut it into threads — that means four.⁸ R. Ashi said: Scripture states: To work it in the blue and in the purple.⁹ How should that be done? Shall one make [the gold] four times in twofold, that would amount to eight [fold gold threads]! Shall one make it twice twofold and twice a one single thread? — Surely the word 'make' indicates that all the work in connection therewith must be alike!

Rehaba said in the name of R. Judah: One who makes a tear in priestly garments is to be punished with lashes, for Scripture said: That it be not rent.¹⁰ R. Aha b. Jacob demurred to this: Perhaps this is what the Divine Law Says: Make a hem lest it be torn?¹¹ — But is it written: Lest it be torn?

R. Eleazar said: One who removes the breast-plate from the apron, or who removes the staves of the ark receives the punishment of lashes, because it was said: That it be not loosed from the ephod,¹² and [the staves] they shall not be removed from it.¹³ — To this R. Aha b. Jacob demurred: But perhaps this is what the Divine Law says: Fasten them and arrange them properly [by forcing the chords through the ring], so that they 'be not loosed', or that they 'be not removed'? — Is it written: 'that they be not loosed' or 'that they be not removed'?

R. Jose b. Hanina pointed out a contradiction. It is written: The staves shall be in the rings of the ark: they shall not be taken from it,¹² and it is also written: The staves thereof shall be put into the rings.¹⁴ How is that possible? They were movable, but could not slip off.¹⁵ Thus also was it taught: 'The staves shall be in the rings of the ark'. One might have assumed that they could not be moved from their place. Therefore the text reads: 'And the staves thereof shall be put into the rings'. If I had this verse [to go by] one might have assumed that they could be taken out and put in again. Therefore the text says: 'the staves shall be in the rings of the ark'. How that now? They were movable but could not slip off.

R. Hama b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the verse: [Thou shalt make the boards of the tabernacle] of acacia wood, standing up,¹⁶ i.e., they should stand up, even as they grow.¹⁷ Another interpretation: 'Standing up — i.e., they kept up [the gold] they were overlaid with.'¹⁸ Another interpretation: 'Standing up' — one might assume; Their hope [of restoration] is gone,¹⁹ their expectation is frustrated, therefore the text says: 'Standing up, i.e., standing up for ever and ever.

Rabbi Hama b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the text: The plaited

-
- (1) E.V. 'all of blue', ibid. 31.
 - (2) V. supra p. 341, n. 8.
 - (3) [And the term plaited' implies at least another strand of six threads, hence twelvefold].
 - (4) Skirt and pomegranates are part of the upper garment, hence an inference from them appears more legitimate.
 - (5) V. supra p. 340.
 - (6) That is too simple for any dispute, requires no case, and no judge to sit upon it.
 - (7) Ex. XXVIII, 15.
 - (8) Ibid. XXXIX, 3. Threads being plural means at least two. When these are cut, at least, or—since there is no qualifying suggestion—four.
 - (9) Ibid. [This implies that there must be an admixture of gold with every kind of material].
 - (10) Ibid. XXVIII, 32. Since a precaution is prescribed to prevent a rent, obviously the rending thereof is prohibited and transgressions as with any other not otherwise specified offence, incur punishment of lashes.
 - (11) It is a precautionary command but its significance is not that of a prohibition, the transgression of which implies punishment by lashing.
 - (12) Ex. XXVIII, 28.
 - (13) Ibid. XXV, 15.
 - (14) Ibid. XXVII, 7. (Rashi quotes Ibid. XXV, 14). The first passage indicated immovability, the other adjustment, which implies contradiction.
 - (15) The staves at their ends were thicker than the rings, hence could be moved, but not removed entirely.
 - (16) Ibid. XXVI, 15.
 - (17) The top on top.
 - (18) [I.e., without the need of nails. V. D.S. a.l.].
 - (19) The hope for restoration is found buttressed by the implication of the text.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 72b

garments for ministering in the holy place.¹ But for the priestly garments, there would not have remained of the haters² of Israel one to remain or to escape.³ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: In the school of R. Simeon it was taught: [They were] webs which they cut off the looms in the shape required, leaving a small portion of the unwoven thread.⁴ What was that? — Resh Lakish said: It was needle-work.⁵

An objection was raised.⁶ 'All priestly garments must not be made by needle-work, but by weaving', as it is said: woven work!⁷ — Abaye said: This applies only to their sleeves, as it was taught: The sleeves of the priestly garments were woven apparently and then attached to the garment.⁸ They reached up to the wrist.

Rehaba said in the name of Rab Judah: Three arks did Bezalel make: the middle one of wood, nine [handbreadths] high; the inner one of gold, eight high, the outer one of gold,⁹ a little more than ten high. But it was taught: A little more than eleven [high]?— That is no contradiction: the one opinion agrees with the view that the thickness thereof¹⁰ was one handbreadth, the other was in accord with the view that the thickness thereof was not one handbreadth.¹¹ And what purpose served the 'little more'?¹² — It is the space of the crown.¹³

R. Johanan said: There were three crowns: that of the altar, that of the ark, and that of the table.

The one of the altar Aaron deserved and he received it. The one of the ark, David deserved and received. The one of the ark is still lying and whosoever wants to take it, may come and take it.¹⁴ Perhaps you might think it is of little account, therefore the text reads: By me kings reign.¹⁵

R. Johanan pointed out a contradiction. It is written: Zar [alien] and we read it: zir? i.e., [crown] — If he deserves it, it becomes a wreath unto him; if not it remains alien to him.¹⁶ R. Johanan pointed out another contradiction. It is written: Make thee an ark of wood,¹⁷ and it is also written: And they shall make an ark of acacia wood?¹⁸ Hence one learns that the inhabitants of his city are obliged to do the work of the scholar for him.

Within and without shalt thou overlay it.¹⁹ Raba said: Any scholar whose inside is not like his outside, is no scholar.²⁰ Abaye, or, as some say, Rabbah b. ‘Ulla said: He is called abominable, as it is said: How much less one that is abominable and impure, man who drinketh iniquity like water.²¹ R. Samuel b. Nahmani, in the name of R. Jonathan: What is the meaning of the scriptural statement: Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool, to buy wisdom, seeing he hath no understanding,²² i.e., woe unto the enemies of the scholars,²³ who occupy themselves with the Torah, but have no fear of heaven! R. Jannai proclaimed: Woe unto him who has no court, but makes a gateway for his court!²⁴ Raba said to the Sages: I beseech you, do not inherit a double Gehinnom!²⁵

R. Joshua b. Levi said: What is the meaning of the Scriptural verse: And this is the law which Moses set [before the children of Israel]?²⁶ — If he is meritorious it becomes for him a medicine of life, if not, a deadly poison. That is what Raba [meant when he] said: If he uses it the right way it is a medicine of life unto him; he who does not use it the right way, it is a deadly poison.

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: R. Jonathan pointed out the following contradiction: it is written: The precepts of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart,²⁷ but it is also written: The word of the Lord is tried?²⁸ If he is meritorious, it rejoices him; if not, it tries him.²⁹ Resh Lakish said: From the body of the same passage this can be derived: If he is meritorious, it tests him unto life; if not, it tests him unto death.³⁰ The fear of the Lord is pure, enduring forever.³¹ R. Hanina said: This refers to one who studies the Torah in purity. What does that mean? — He marries a woman and afterwards studies the Torah.³²

The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.³³ R. Hiyya b. Abba said: It [the Torah] may be entrusted to testify as to those who study it. ‘The work of the skillful workman³⁴ . . . the work of the skillful embroiderer.³⁵ R. Eleazar said: Those embroidered over what they had traced. It was taught in the name of R. Nehemiah: The embroiderer's is needle-work, therefore it has only one [visible] figure. The designer's is weaving work, therefore it has two different figures.³⁶

IN THESE WERE THE URIM AND THUMMIM INQUIRED OF. When R. Dimi came [from Palestine] he said: In the garments wherein the high priest officiates, the [priest] Anointed for Battle officiates, as it is said: And the holy garments of Aaron shall be for his sons after him,³⁷ i.e., for him who comes after him in greatness [of office]. R. Adda b. Ahabah, some say Kadi, raised an objection: One might have assumed that the son of the Anointed for Battle succeeds him in service, even as the son of the high priest succeeds him in service,

(1) Ex. XXXV, 19.

(2) Euphemistic for Israel — a calamity is foreshadowed only in indirect fashion.

(3) The root sarad (to plant) also means ‘leaving over’, hence the interpretation: the garments of escape, because they brought atonement for Israel, thereby preventing their extinction.

(4) Here the term is explained as the garments, one part of which was left over unwoven, or unmade.

(5) [This is difficult, nor is the text apparently quite in order. According to Rashi the meaning is, what is done with the unwoven remnant? And the answer is that it is cut off, woven separately and then sewn on to the main garment].

- (6) Zeb. 88a.
- (7) Ex. XXVIII, 32.
- (8) According to Resh Lakish, then, the unwoven remnant would be used in connection with the sleeves.
- (9) Reading with Bah.
- (10) Of the outer ark.
- (11) [In order to understand the distinction thus drawn, it is well to remember that the three arks were open at the top; consequently if the thickness of the outer one was less than one handbreadth, a height of ten handbreadths and a little more would suffice: nine handbreadths corresponding to the height of the middle ark (when measured from without) and a fraction of a handbreadth to allow for the thickness of the outer ark at the bottom, while one extra handbreadth was necessary for the mercy seat which was inserted between the two side boards of the outer ark to rest upon the thickness of the sides of the two smaller arks. If, however, the thickness of the outer ark was one handbreadth, its height, measured from outside would then have to be at least ten handbreadths whilst for the purpose of the mercy seat an extra handbreadth would be necessary, making a total of eleven. As to the need of the 'little more' this will be explained soon. V. Rashi].
- (12) Mentioned in the Baraitha, v. supra n. 1.
- (13) [V. Ex. XXV, 11. The side boards of the outer ark projected beyond the mercy seat that was inserted between them (cf. n. 1), a kind of rim (crown)].
- (14) Aaron, the first high priest, obtained the crown of priesthood, symbolized by the altar; David, the crown of kingdom; but there is no hereditary crown of learning, it must be acquired by each individual. The aspirants, however, are not many, hence it is still lying unclaimed.
- (15) Prov. VIII, 15. Wisdom is identified with Torah, through which it is acquired.
- (16) The Hebrew spelling of wreath may include the letter 'yod', without it the word might be read 'zar', stranger, hence the illustrative suggestion.
- (17) Deut. X, 1.
- (18) Ex. XXV, 10.
- (19) Ibid. II.
- (20) Inside and outside there should be the same golden character.
- (21) Job XV, 16; rendered, one who drinketh the water of the Torah and yet has iniquity in him.
- (22) Prov. XVII, 16. Wisdom is knowledge of the Torah, understanding is moral rightness, based on fear of heaven. Hence this interpretation.
- (23) Euphemism for 'scholars'.
- (24) Fear of the Lord is the court, the goal. Learning should lead to it. Learning (the gateway) without reverence (the goal) is wasteful, sinful.
- (25) The Mishnah, Aboth VI, indicates that acquisition of the Torah depends upon a frugal way of living, a reduction of the margin of joy to a minimum. The reward is to come in after-life. Such reward depends upon reaching the goal of study; fear of heaven. One who now engages in Torah-study without possessing fear of heaven, suffers in this world, wherein he denies himself pleasure for the sake of his study, as well as in the other world, where because he had no fear of heaven, reward will be denied, punishment inflicted.
- (26) Deut. IV, 44.
- (27) Ps. XIX, 9.
- (28) Ibid. XVIII, 31.
- (29) Here the part. passive is interpreted as active, 'tested' becomes 'testing'.
- (30) It tries and refines him, so that he lives a finer life. It tries him by suffering, which ultimately destroys him.
- (31) Ps. XIX, 10.
- (32) So that he is undisturbed by impure thoughts.
- (33) Ibid. 8.
- (34) Ex. XXVI, 31.
- (35) Ibid. v. 1.
- (36) On the two sides of the cloth.
- (37) Ibid. XXIX, 29.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 73a

therefore the text reads: Seven days shall the son that is priest in his stead put them on, even he who cometh into the tent of meeting [etc.],¹ i.e., he who is worthy of entering the tent of meeting. Now if this were the case,² then he too would be fit [to enter the tent of meeting]? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: This is what it means: Whosoever was mainly anointed for the [purpose of] the tent of meeting, that excludes him who was anointed mainly for Battle.

The following objection was raised: The Anointed for Battle officiates neither in four garments, like a common priest, nor in eight like a high priest? — Abaye said: Would you render him then a common man?³ Rather: Neither like a high priest, for the sake of preventing ill-feeling;⁴ nor like a common priest, because one promotes to a higher degree of sanctity, but one must not degrade'. R. Adda b. Ahabah said to Raba: But there is a Tanna who pays no attention to the prevention of ill-feeling, yet according to him, he does not officiate?⁵ For it was taught:⁶ In the following points a high priest differs from a common priest: the bullock of the priest anointed;⁷ and the bullock due in case of [unwitting] transgression of any commandment;⁸ the bullock of the Day of Atonement; the tenth of the ephah;⁹ he does not unbind his hair, nor rend his clothes.¹⁰ But he [the high priest] tears his garments from below, and the common priest tears his from above; he must not defile himself for his [deceased] relatives;¹¹ he is under obligation to marry only a virgin;¹² is prohibited from marrying a widow;¹³ causes the slayer to return;¹⁴ as onen [mourner]¹⁵ he may offer up a sacrifice but may not eat or take a share thereof; he receives his portion first and takes first part in the offering [of the sacrifice]; he officiates in eight garments; is exempt¹⁶ [from a sacrifice] for [an unwitting transgression of] defilement relating to the Sanctuary and its hallowed thing, and the whole service of the Day of Atonement is legitimate only when performed by him. All these [laws] apply also to priests consecrated by a larger number of official garments, with the exception of the bullock to be offered up for the transgression of any commandment. All these apply to the high priest who has passed from his high priesthood,¹⁷ with the exception of the bullock of the Day of Atonement and the tenth of the ephah. All these things do not apply to the priest Anointed for Battle, with the exception of five matters mentioned in that portion of the section: he does not unbind his hair, nor rend his clothes; nor defile himself with any [deceased] relative; is obliged to marry a virgin; forbidden to marry a widow; and causes the slayer to return-according to R. Judah; whereas, according to the Sages, he does not cause him to return.¹⁸ Whence does he [the Tanna] consider [the question of] enmity [to arise]? Only with regard to one of similar rank.¹⁹ But with one of inferior rank he does consider it.²⁰

R. Abbahu was sitting and reporting this teaching in the name of R. Johanan, whereupon R. Ammi and R. Assi averted their faces.²¹ (Some say it was R. Hiyya b. Abba who reported this teaching, whereupon R. Ammi and R. Assi averted their faces). To this R. Papa demurred: Granted [that they could not say anything against] R. Abbahu, because of the high regard the Imperial house had for him, but as for R. Hiyya b. Abba, they should have told him explicitly that R. Johanan had not said so!

When Rabin came, he said: This²² was stated with reference to the time when he is consulted.²³ Thus also was it taught: The garments which the high priest wears when he officiates the Anointed for Battle wears when he is consulted.

Our Rabbis taught: How were [the Urim and Thummim] inquired of? — The inquirer had his face directed to him who was consulted, and the latter directed himself to the Divine Presence. The inquirer said: Shall I pursue after this troop?²⁴ He who was consulted answered: 'Thus saith the Lord: Go up and succeed'! R. Judah said: He need not say, 'This saith the Lord' but only 'Go up and succeed' — One does not inquire in a loud voice, as it is said: Who shall inquire for him;²⁵ neither shall one but think thereof in one's heart, as it is said: 'Who shall inquire for him';²⁵ but rather in the manner in which Hannah spoke in her prayer, as it is said: Now Hannah, she spoke in her heart.²⁶

One should not put two questions at the same time; if one has done so, only one [question] is answered; and only the first [question] is answered, as it is said: Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? Will Saul come down,²⁷ etc. . . . and the Lord said.' He will come down.²⁷ But you said: Only the first [question] is answered? — David had asked

-
- (1) I.e., on the Day of Atonement. Ibid. v. 30.
 - (2) That the Anointed for Battle officiates in eight garments.
 - (3) I.e., a non-priest.
 - (4) It is only Rabbinic enactment that interferes therewith, because of the desire of the Sages to prevent ill-feeling. By the law of the Torah, the Anointed for Battle could officiate.
 - (5) In the eight garments.
 - (6) Mishnah Hor. III, 4,5.
 - (7) Rashi and others omit, as this is the same as the item that follows.
 - (8) V. Lev. IV, 3.
 - (9) Ibid. VI, 13: This is the offering of Aaron and his sons . . . in the day when he is anointed: the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a meal-offering.
 - (10) In the case of mourning.
 - (11) Lev. XXI, 11. These relatives include father, mother, wife, son and daughter, brother or sister.
 - (12) Ibid. v. 13.
 - (13) Ibid. v. 14.
 - (14) When the priest dies, the slayer without intent returns from the city of refuge. Num. XXXV, 10ff.
 - (15) For (Lev. XXI, 12): Neither shall he go out of the Sanctuary. He is called 'onen', whilst his dead lie unburied on the day of death.
 - (16) V. Hor. 12b.
 - (17) Who acted as substitute for the high priest, v. supra 12b.
 - (18) Though this Tanna does not consider here the question of ill-feeling, since he rules that the high priest who passed from his high priesthood continues to officiate with eight garments, and yet the Anointed for Battle he permits the use only of four garments.
 - (19) The substitute enjoyed the same rank as the high priest.
 - (20) The Anointed for Battle is of inferior rank to the high priest, and the donning of eight garments would arouse ill-feeling in the high priest.
 - (21) Refusing to accept the report that R. Johanan had said this.
 - (22) The statement that the Anointed for Battle wears the same eight garments which are the high priest's official garb.
 - (23) By means of the Urim and Thummim.
 - (24) I Sam. XXX, 8.
 - (25) Num. XXVII, 21.
 - (26) I Sam. I, 13.
 - (27) Ibid. XXIII, 11.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 73b

in wrong order and received his answer in right order.¹ And as soon as he knew that he had asked in wrong order, he asked again in right order, as it is said: Will the men of Keilah deliver up me and my men in to the hand of Saul? And the Lord said.' They will deliver thee up.² But if the occasion required both questions, both were answered, as it is said: And David inquired of the Lord, saying: Shall I pursue after this troop? Shall I overtake them? And He answered him: pursue; for thou shalt surely overtake them and shalt without fail recover all.³ And although the decree of a prophet could be revoked, the decree of the 'Urim and Thummim' could not be revoked, as it is said: By the judgment of the Urim. Why were they called 'Urim and Thummim'? 'Urim' because they made their words enlightening.⁴ 'Thummim' because they fulfil their words. And if you should ask: Why did they not fulfil their words in Gibeah Benjamin?⁵ It is because they did not inquire⁶ [whether the result would be] victory or defeat.⁷ But at last, when conquered, they [the Urim and Thummim] approved their action, as it is said: And Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, stood before it in those days, saying: 'Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease?' and the Lord said: Go up, for tomorrow I will deliver him into thy hand.⁸

How was it effected? — R. Johanan said: [The letters] stood forth.⁹ Resh Lakish said: They joined each other. But the 'Zade' was missing?¹⁰ R. Samuel b. Isaac said: They contained also the names of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But the 'Teth', too, was missing? — R. Aha b. Jacob said: They contained also the words: The 'tribes'¹¹ of Jeshurun.

An objection was raised: No priest was inquired of who does not speak by means of the Holy Spirit and upon whom the Divine Presence does not rest, for Zadok inquired and succeeded, whilst Abiathar inquired and failed, as it is said: But Abiathar went up until all the people had done passing out of the city?¹² — He helped along.¹³

AND ONE INQUIRED ONLY FOR A KING. Whence do we know these things? — R. Abbahu said: Scripture said, And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall inquire for him by the judgment of the Urim;¹⁴ 'he' i.e., the king, 'and all the children of Israel with him', i.e., the [priest] Anointed for Battle, 'even all the congregation', that is the Sanhedrin.

CHAPTER VIII

MISHNAH. ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT IT IS FORBIDDEN TO EAT, TO DRINK, TO WASH, TO ANOINT ONESELF, TO PUT ON SANDALS,¹⁵ OR TO HAVE MARITAL INTERCOURSE.¹⁶ A KING OR BRIDE¹⁷ MAY WASH THE FACE, AND A WOMAN AFTER CHILDBIRTH¹⁸ MAY PUT ON SANDALS. THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. ELIEZER. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, FORBID IT. IF ONE EATS THE BULK OF A LARGE DATE, THE LIKE THEREOF, WITH ITS STONE INCLUDED, OR IF HE DRANK A MOUTHFUL, HE IS CULPABLE.¹⁹ ANY FOODS COMPLEMENT ONE ANOTHER IN MAKING UP THE BULK OF A DATE, AND ALL THE LIQUIDS COMPLEMENT ONE ANOTHER IN MAKING UP A MOUTHFUL, BUT WHAT A MAN EATS AND DRINKS DOES NOT GO TOGETHER.²⁰

GEMARA. [Merely] FORBIDDEN? But surely punished with extirpation?²¹ — R. Ela, or as some say, R. Jeremiah, said: This refers only to less than the legal quantity.²² That will be right according to the view that even less than legal quantity is for — bidden by the law of the Torah, but what can be said according to the view that less than the legal quantity is permitted by the law of the Torah? For it was said: As for less than the legal quantity, R. Johanan holds it forbidden by the law of the Torah, but Resh Lakish considers it permitted by the law of the Torah. Now [the above answer] would be right according to R. Johanan, but what can be said according to Resh Lakish? — Resh Lakish would agree that [less than the legal quantity] is forbidden by [decree of] the Rabbis.²³ If that be the case, one should not be liable on account thereof to offer a sacrifice for an oath,²⁴ why then did we learn:²⁵ [If one had sworn] an oath not to eat carrion, trefah things,²⁶ abominable²⁷ or creeping things, and then had eaten thereof, he is culpable? R. Simeon holds him not culpable. And we raised the point in connection therewith: Why should he be culpable? Surely he stands committed to the oath²⁸ from Mount Sinai on! [And] Rab, Samuel and R. Johanan [in reply] said [it is a case] when he includes things permitted in the oath touching foods forbidden,²⁹ whereas Resh Lakish said: This cannot be explained except where he either expressly refers to less than the legal quantity, and that in accord with the view of the Sages,³⁰ or that he made a general statement

(1) He should have asked first: Will Saul come down? Then, Will they deliver me up?

(2) I Sam. XXIII, 12.

(3) Ibid. XXX, 8.

(4) Ety. 'Urim' - lights. 'Thummim' - tam-to be complete, perfect; here true, fulfilled.

- (5) Judg. XX.
- (6) [The text of cur. edd. is not clear and the rendering follows the reading of MS.M. Rashi, on the basis of the present text, explains: They (the Urim and Thummim) did not state clearly, etc.].
- (7) The single question was who should lead them.
- (8) Judg. XX, 28.
- (9) The names of the twelve sons of Jacob were inscribed on the Urim and Thummim. The answer always came through the letters which stood in relief.
- (10) The names of the twelve sons did not include that letter.
- (11) The Hebrew of which includes a teth.
- (12) II Sam. XV, 24. [This is explained, that he retired from the priesthood because he received no reply from the Urim and Thummim. This in turn would indicate that it is the Holy Spirit resting on the priest that gives that reply and not the letters of the Oracle].
- (13) By the priests' merit the oracle came forth.
- (14) Num. XXVII, 21.
- (15) Or any shoes of leather. Tosef. Yoma IV: 'Even cloth-shoes'.
- (16) The term literally means 'use of the bed'.
- (17) Within the first month after the wedding.
- (18) Lit., 'one reconvalescing', whose health is still delicate and to whom a cold may prove dangerous. Leather shoes will protect her against such contingency.
- (19) V. Lev. XXIII, 29.
- (20) To make up the culpable quantity.
- (21) The term forbidden may mean: either unlawful but, de facto, unpunished; or normally: punished with lashes. But transgression by eating would be punished with extirpation, kareth (v. Glos.).
- (22) Lit., 'half the standard'. The usual legal quantity of forbidden foods is the bulk of an olive; on the Day of Atonement, the bulk of a big date. Any less than that, though the eating thereof does not involve one in the prescribed punishment, nevertheless constitutes a transgression. That is what the Mishnah indicates by the term 'forbidden' i.e., in any quantity.
- (23) Even though less than the legal minimum does not involve punishment according to Biblical law, or indeed, may not be forbidden at all, Rabbinical law, as a fence around the laws of the Torah, may declare less than a minimum forbidden, or punishable, too. The dispute between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish would hinge on the question as to whether forbidden foods are so considered in any quantity, however small, or whether the term 'eating' etc. implies a definite minimum below which no transgression at all can be said to have taken place.
- (24) I.e., if someone has sworn that he would not eat less than the legal quantity of a forbidden food. Since that food is forbidden, he has, as it were, already sworn on Mount Sinai, not to eat it; the present oath, therefore, has no force, for the transgression of which no sin-offering is necessary (v. Shebu. 27a).
- (25) Shebu. 21a.
- (26) The word trefah. lit., 'torn', means any kind of abnormal, irregular, ritually inadmissible food. Nebelah 'carrion' refers to the flesh of animals which had died a natural death, or in connection with the ritual slaughtering of which a basic mistake or irregularity had been committed.
- (27) Lev. XI, 11, 31, 42, 46.
- (28) Israel swore their allegiance to the Torah, and that oath binds every Israelite.
- (29) Had he sworn not to eat forbidden things, such oaths would imply his non-culpability in case of transgression, i.e., as far as the oath is concerned. But, by including things permitted, he swears an oath, the effect of which is to prohibit for him the eating of otherwise permissible foods. Hence the transgression implies the obligation of sacrifice.
- (30) The Sages hold that an oath 'I will not eat a certain thing' implies 'I will not eat as much as the legal minimum', hence he could be guilty in the case of having eaten less than that only if he had expressly stated: I shall not eat anything at all of that food, his special declaration investing his oath with validity in the case of an infinitesimal amount of the food now forbidden to himself.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 74a

and in accord with R. Akiba, who said that a man may prohibit to himself anything in any quantity,¹ however small.² And if you would say that since it is permitted by the Torah, [the law relating to the] sacrifice for an oath is operative,³ surely we learned: An 'oath of testimony'⁴ applies only to those qualified to bear witness;⁵ and we raised the point: what does that mean to exclude, whereupon R. Papa said: This excludes a king, and R. Aha b. Jacob said: This excludes a professional dice-gambler.⁶ Now a dice-player, as far as Biblical law is concerned, is qualified to bear witness and only the Rabbis declared him unfit, and yet an oath does not apply to him?⁷ There it is different, for Scripture said: If he do not utter it,⁸ and this man cannot make a [valid] utterance.⁹

Now would you say that wherever the punishment is extirpation the term 'forbidden' is not used?¹⁰ Surely it was taught: Although the term 'forbidden' was used in connection with all of them,¹¹ the punishment of extirpation applies only to him who eats or drinks, or engages in labour? — This is what is said: When the term 'forbidden' is used, it is applied but to less than the legal minimum, but where the legal minimum has been transgressed the punishment involved is extirpation; and also extirpation is the penalty, that is the case only with him who eats or drinks or engages in labour. Or, if you like, say: When [the Mishnah] uses the term 'forbidden', it refers to the rest [of the transgressions],¹² for Rabbah and R. Joseph taught in the other books of the School of Rab:¹³ Whence do we know that it is forbidden on the Day of Atonement to anoint oneself, to wash, to put on shoes, and to have marital intercourse? Therefore the text reads: [It] is a Sabbath of solemn rest [unto you].¹⁴ [To turn to] the main text: As for the matter of less than the legal minimum, R. Johanan said: It is forbidden by Biblical law, whilst Resh Lakish said: It is permitted by Biblical law. R. Johanan said, It is forbidden by Biblical law; since it could be joined [to form a minimum] it is forbidden food that he is eating. Resh Lakish said: It is permitted by Biblical law, for the Divine Law speaks of eating and this is not [eating].¹⁵ — R. Johanan raised the following objection against Resh Lakish: I know only that whatsoever involves punishment is subject to a prohibition; but in the case of the koy,¹⁶ and what is less than the legal minimum, since they do not involve punishment, I might say that they are not subject to a prohibition either, therefore the text reads: No fat.¹⁷ — This is only Rabbinical and the text [adduced] is but a mere support. And that is also logical. For if one should assume that the prohibition is Biblical, surely [the status of] the koy is doubtful and no Scriptural text is necessary to cover a doubtful¹⁸ case! — Were it only for this there would be no argument, they would hold

(1) R. Akiba, on the other hand, holds that a legal minimum exists only in the case of foods etc. forbidden by the Torah, whereas a man who forbids himself by oath any kind of permitted food, implies that he would not partake of any quantity, however small, thereof.

(2) Now, if Resh Lakish held that even less than the legal minimum is forbidden by Rabbinical decree, then how could he endeavour to explain the case of the man taking the oath as applying to one eating less than the legal minimum? For, since he is interdicted to eat by the law of Deut. XVII, 11: According to the law which they shall teach thee ... thou shalt do . . . thou shalt not turn aside... to the right hand or to the left, from eating food Rabbinically forbidden, his oath is inoperative, hence does not oblige him to offer a sacrifice for his transgression thereof.

(3) Shebu. 30a. The answer of Resh Lakish would endeavour to make a distinction between things forbidden by the Torah, the oath re-forbidding the same to oneself would be considered inoperative and would free the swearer, in the case of transgression, from the obligation to offer up a sacrifice — and things permitted by the Torah, to which the oath could apply, so that if one swore not to eat less than the legal minimum which, because below the legal quantity, would be permitted by the law of the Torah and forbidden only by Rabbinic decree, the oath would operate, and in the case of transgression he would have to bring a sacrifice.

(4) Lev. V, 1f.

(5) V. Shebu. 30a.

(6) The king can neither testify, nor be testified against, because of his exalted position; the gambler cannot testify, because his profession renders him, hence his statements or pledges, untrustworthy.

(7) By Biblical law one is considered a robber only if one actually robs from one's hand, as in II Sam. XXIII, 21 where the technical term 'gagal', rob, is used: He (plucked — lit., 'robbed') the spear out of his hand; v. also B.K. 79b. So that, if the oath does not apply to a gambler, although by Biblical law, he is not prevented from testifying, the proposed distinction is unjustified.

(8) Lev. V, 1.

(9) It means: One whose utterance not merely means speech, but words of meaning, words to be trusted, whereas this gambler's words, since he is untrustworthy, are, legally speaking, no utterance at all.

(10) As insufficient, hence misleading; this being the reason for the first question here in the Gemara.

(11) All the things forbidden, as enumerated in our Mishnah.

(12) Not eating and drinking.

(13) From the School of Rab emanated halachical commentaries not only on Leviticus, but on Numbers and Deuteronomy as well.

(14) Lev. XVI,31 interpreted here as solemn rest not only from work, but from the usual occupations, such as eating, drinking, washing, anointing and having marital intercourse. Just as the term 'solemn day of rest' in connection with the Sabbath is, by the Sages, interpreted as including all manner of work, even not employed in connection with the building of the Sanctuary, so does that term here imply affliction by rest, as above.

(15) Since below the minimum it may be nibbling, but it is eating that is forbidden.

(16) A kind of bearded deer or antelope (Jast.). It is left undecided as to whether it belongs to the genus of cattle, the tallow of which is forbidden, or to beasts of chase, the tallow of which is permitted.

(17) Lev. VII, 23. This proves that less than a legal minimum is prohibited by the Torah.

(18) Since there is no doubt before the Divine Lawgiver, no Scriptural text would be necessary to cover a doubtful situation.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 74b

the koy is a creature by itself. For if you were not to say so, how could R. Idi b. Abin say: 'Also all' includes the koy,¹ since the koy is a doubtful case and surely no Scriptural text is necessary to cover doubtful cases. Hence [what you must say is] a 'creature by itself' is a different case, thus also here [say] 'a creature by itself' is a different case.

Our Rabbis taught: Ye shall afflict your souls.² One might assume that one must sit in heat or cold in order to afflict oneself, therefore the text reads: And ye shall do no manner of work;² just as the [prohibition of] labour [means]: sit and do nothing, so does [the enjoinder of] affliction [signify]: sit and do nothing.³ But say perhaps: If one sit in the sun and is warm, one may not say unto him: rise and sit in the shade; or, when he sits in the shade and is cool, one may not tell him: rise and sit in the sun?⁴ — It is as with labour: Just as you have made no distinction with regard to labour, so in connection with the [prescribed] affliction⁵ is no distinction to be made. Another [Baraita] taught: 'Ye shall afflict your souls'. One might assume that one must sit in heat or cold to afflict oneself, therefore Scripture said: 'And ye shall do no manner of work'. Just as in connection with work [the reference is to] something for which one may become culpable also in another connection,⁶ so with affliction it is to something for which one might become culpable in another connection, and what is that? 'An abhorred thing',⁷ or that which remaineth.⁸ I shall then include only 'the abhorred thing' or that which remaineth, because the penalty there is extirpation but not include tebel,⁹ since the penalty involved therein is not extirpation, therefore the text reads: 'Ye shall afflict', 'and ye shall afflict your souls',¹⁰ which is inclusive. I might then include tebel, the punishment in connection with which is death,¹¹ but not include carrion, the penalty for eating which is not death, therefore the text reads: 'Ye shall afflict', 'and ye shall afflict your souls', which is inclusive. I might then include the [eating of] carrion, which involves a [transgression of a] prohibition, but not profane food, [the eating of] which is not prohibited at all, therefore Scripture said: 'Ye shall afflict', 'and ye shall afflict your souls', which is inclusive. I might then include profane food, the eating of which is not commanded, but exclude terumah,¹² the eating of which is commanded, therefore Scripture said: 'Ye shall afflict', 'and ye shall afflict your souls', which is inclusive. I might then include terumah, which is not subject to the law concerning remaining over, but exclude holy sacrifices, in connection with which the law concerning remaining over applies, therefore the text reads: 'Ye shall afflict', 'and ye shall afflict your souls', which is inclusive. And if you should have any remark [in objection thereto], [I can reply], Behold Scripture said: And I will destroy that soul,¹³ i.e., an affliction which causes a destruction of life, and what is that but [the denial of] eating and drinking? What is [meant by]: And if you should have any remark [in objection thereto]? — One might have said Scripture speaks here of marital intercourse,¹⁴ therefore the text reads: ‘And I will destroy that soul’, i.e., an affliction which causes the destruction of life, and that is [the abstention from] eating and drinking. The School of R. Ishmael taught: Here the phrase ‘affliction’ is used, and there¹⁵ the term ‘affliction’ is used; just as there an affliction through hunger is meant, so is here an affliction through hunger meant. But let us infer from: ‘If thou shalt afflict my daughters’?¹⁶ — One should infer concerning the affliction of a community from another affliction of a community, but not for the affliction of a community from the affliction of an individual. But let us infer it from the ‘affliction’ in Egypt, as it is said: And [the Lord] saw our affliction,¹⁷ and in connection with which we said: This is the enforced abstinence from marital intercourse? — Rather [answer thus]: One infers for a heavenly affliction from another heavenly affliction, but one should not infer concerning a heavenly affliction from an affliction through human beings.¹⁸

Who fed thee in the wilderness with manna . . . that He might afflict thee.¹⁹ R. Ammi and R. Assi [are disputing], one said, You cannot compare one who has bread in his basket with one who has none,²⁰ the other said: You cannot compare one who sees what he eats with one who does not see what he is eating.²¹ R. Joseph said: This is an allusion to [the reason] why blind people eat on without becoming satisfied. Abaye said: Therefore let him who has a meal eat only in daylight. R. Zera said: What Scriptural verse intimates that? Better is the seeing of the eyes than the wandering of the desire.²² Resh Lakish said: Better is the pleasure of looking at a woman than the act itself as it is said: ‘Better is the seeing of the eyes than the wandering of the desire’.

When it giveth its colour in the cup, when it glideth down smoothly.²³ R. Ammi and R. Assi [dispute concerning it], one said: Whosoever fixes

(1) V. Hul. 21a with reference to the blood of the koy.

(2) Lev. XVI, 29.

(3) The affliction enjoined is negative; deny to yourself certain things, abstain from them. It does not demand self-affliction by specific activity, such as sitting in the sun on a hot day.

(4) In this case affliction would take the negative form of abstaining from comfort, in accord with the proposition suggested.

(5) Labour, in any form, is prohibited. Just as one is not obliged to engage in positive work of affliction, the negative form of abstention from getting comfort. Hence, just as one need not go out of comfortable shade into the sun for the purpose of afflicting oneself, so need one not abstain from a change into shade in order to be afflicted in the sun.

(6) Namely on the Sabbath.

(7) A sacrifice rejected in consequence of an improper intention in the mind of the sacrificing priest, v. Lev. VII, 18.

(8) Portions of sacrifices left over beyond the legal time.

(9) Produce forbidden until the priestly gifts have been separated.

(10) Lev. XVI, 31.

(11) At the hands of heaven.

(12) The priest's share of the crop, one fiftieth of the dough, Num. XVIII, 8, 25.

(13) Lev. XXIII, 30.

(14) The term ‘affliction’ is used for the abstention therefrom, as well as for rape, in the Talmud (infra 77a) as well as in the Bible, Deut. XXII, 24 and elsewhere.

(15) Ibid. VIII, 3.

(16) Gen. XXXI, 50.

(17) Deut. XXVI, 7.

(18) It was God who afflicted Israel in the wilderness, Who bids them afflict themselves — thus may be said to afflict them Himself- on the Day of Atonement, whereas in Egypt it was Pharaoh who afflicted them.

(19) Deut. VIII, 16.

(20) V. Supra 18b.

(21) The taste of the manna according to tradition varied according to one's liking (v. infra), so that he who ate it did not see actually the thing which he was tasting].

(22) Eccl. VI, 9.

(23) Prov. XXIII, 31.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 75a

his eye in the cup,¹ all incestual intercourse appears to him like a plain;² the other said: One who indulges in his cup, the entire world appears to him like a plain.³

Care in the heart, boweth it down.⁴ R. Ammi and R. Assi [explained it differently], one said: One should force it down,⁵ the other said: One should tell thereof to others.⁵

And dust shall be the serpent's food.⁶ R. Ammi and R. Assi [disputed its meaning], one said: Even if the serpent were to eat all the delicacies of the world, he would feel therein but the taste of dust; the other said: Even though he ate all the delicacies of the world, his mind would not be at ease until he had eaten dust.

It was taught: R. Jose said, Come and see how different the action of human beings is from that of the Holy One, blessed be He. If one of flesh and blood is angry with his neighbour he persecutes him as far as depriving him of his livelihood, but it is different with the Holy One, blessed be He. Although He cursed the serpent, yet when he goes up to the roof, there is his food; if he goes down, there is his food. He cursed Canaan:⁷ yet he eats what his master eats, drinks what his master drinks. He cursed the woman,⁸ all are running after her. He cursed the earth,⁹ all are feeding from it.

We remember the fish which we were wont to eat in Egypt for nought.¹⁰ Rab and Samuel [were disputing its meaning], one said: [Fish here means] real fish; the other said: Illicit intercourse.¹¹ One who said it means real fish [explains it so because of] 'which we were wont to eat'; the other who interprets it as 'illicit intercourse', does so because the term 'for nought' is used.¹² But according to him who said it means 'intercourse', does not Scripture read: 'Which we were wont to eat'? — Scripture uses an euphemism, as it is written: She eateth and wipeth her mouth and saith: I have done no wickedness.¹³ What does 'for nought' mean according to him who says they were real fish? — They were brought to them from public property, for a Master taught: When the Israelites were drawing water, the Holy One, blessed be He, prepared for them in the water little fish for their pitchers. According to him who said 'real fish', but with regard to illicit intercourse [he holds] they were not dissolute, it will be quite right that Scripture said: A garden shut up is my sister, etc.¹⁴ but according to the view that fishes mean 'illicit intercourse', what 'fountain sealed' is here? — They were not dissolute with regard to forbidden relations.¹⁵ It will be right according to him who interprets it as 'illicit intercourse', hence Scripture said: And Moses heard the people weeping for their families,¹⁶ i.e., because of the families [relations] with whom they were forbidden to have intercourse; but according to him who interprets it as 'fish', what does 'weeping for their families' mean? — Both¹⁷ are implied.

The cucumbers and the melons.¹⁸ R. Ammi and R. Assi [were disputing its meaning], one said: They found in the manna the taste of every kind of food, but not the taste of these five;¹⁹ the other said: Of all kinds of food they felt both taste and substance, but of these the taste only without the substance.

Now the manna was like gad [coriander] seed.²⁰ R. Assi said [it was] round like a seed [of coriander] and white like a pearl.

Our Rabbis taught: ‘Gad’ i.e., the manna resembled the seed of flax in its capsules. Others say: ‘Gad’ i.e., it was like a tale, which draws the heart of man, even like water.²¹ Another [Baraita] taught: ‘Gad’, because it revealed to Israel whether the child was one of nine months’ pregnancy from the first husband, or of seven months’ [pregnancy] from the second.²² ‘White’,²³ because it makes white [cleanses] the sins of Israel.

It was taught: R. Jose said: Even as the prophet would tell Israel what is to be found in clefts or holes so would the manna reveal to Israel what is to ‘be found in clefts or holes’. How that? If, e.g., two men came before Moses with a law-suit, one saying: You have stolen my servant, the other saying: You have sold him to me, Moses would say to them: To-morrow judgment will be pronounced. To-morrow, then: If his [the slave's] ‘omer was found in the house of his first master, it was evidence that the other one had stolen him; if it was found in the house of his second master, that was proof that the former had sold him to the latter. Similarly, if a man and a woman came before Moses with a suit, he saying: She acted offensively against me, and she asserting: He acted offensively against me, Moses would say to them: To-morrow judgment will be pronounced. On the morrow: If her ‘omer was found in her husband's house, that was proof that she had acted offensively, but if it was found in her father's house, that was evidence that he had acted offensively towards her.²⁴

It is written: And when the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it,²⁵ and it is also written: And the people shall go out and gather,²⁶ and it is written too: The people went about and gathered it.²⁷ How all that?²⁸ — Unto the righteous it fell in front of their homes; the average folk went out and gathered, whereas the wicked ones had to go about to gather it. It is written: ‘bread’,²⁶ and it is written, [dough of] ‘cakes’,²⁹ and it is written, ‘they ground it’.²⁹ How that? — The righteous received it as bread, the average Israelites as [dough of] cakes, and the wicked ones had to grind it in the handmill. Or beat it in mortars.³⁰ Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, or as some say, R. Hama b. Hanina: That teaches that there came down to Israel with the manna the cosmetics for women, i.e., a thing that is ground in a mortar. And seethed it in pots.³⁰ R. Hama said: This intimates that with the manna there came down to Israel the ingredients for pudding.

And they brought yet unto him freewill-offerings every morning.³¹ What does ‘every morning’ mean? — R. Samuel b. Nahmani, in the name of R. Jonathan said: [This:] Of those things which came down every morning intimates that, together with the manna, there came down to Israel precious stones and pearls, as it is said: And hanesi'im brought the onyx stones;³² [and] it was taught: [nesi'im here means]: clouds literally, as it is said also: As clouds [nesi'im] and winds, without rain.³³ And the taste of it was as the taste of a cake baked with oil.³⁰ R. Abbuha said: [Do not read le-shad (cake), but shad (breast)]³⁴ viz: Just as the infant finds very many a flavour in the breast, so also did Israel find many a taste in the manna as long as they were eating it. Some there are who say: [‘Le-shad’ means] a real demon; even as the demon changes into many colours, so did the manna change into many tastes.³⁵

And Moses said: This shall be when the Lord shall give you in the evening flesh to eat, and in the morning bread to the full.³⁶ A Tanna [taught] in the name of R. Joshua b. Karhah: The flesh for which they asked improperly was given to them at an improper time;³⁷

(1) The Talmud takes the passage in this sense: When he puts his eye i.e., devotes his attention to the cup, when he is drunk.

(2) ‘Mesharim’ (‘smoothly’) is connected with meshor, ‘a plain’.

(3) In his drunken state the man overlooks all handicaps to his desire, be they directed against illicit intercourse or against his neighbour's property.

(4) Prov. XII, 25.

(5) One connects the word yashhenna (boweth it down) with the Hebrew nassah, ‘to remove’; the other with the Hebrew suh, 'to speak'.

(6) Isa. LXV, 25.

(7) Gen. IX, 26. God did not really curse him, it was Noah who did so. But by decreeing that Canaan be a slave, He seems to confirm Noah's curse.

(8) Here, too, God did not really curse the woman, unless the punishment He meted out to her may imply a curse. All the passages here adduced are connected either by the fact that R. Ammi and R. Assi discussed them or by association of ideas.

(9) Gen. III, 17.

(10) Num. XI, 5.

(11) [I.e., they chafed under the new restrictions in matters of intercourse that had been imposed on them.]

(12) The suggestion is that whereas regular marriage implied widowhood (kethubah), before that mohar (dowry, Ex. XXII, 16), no such financial responsibility is necessary in the case of illicit intercourse.

(13) Prov. XXX, 20, referring to an unchaste woman.

(14) Cant. IV, 12.

(15) [I.e., those that had been already forbidden to the sons of Noah, v. Sanh. 57b].

(16) Num. XI, 10: E.V. 'family by family'; because of its families, family affairs, prohibitions of family life.

(17) The one (fish) is obvious, the other (illicit intercourse) is suggested.

(18) V. p. 361, n. 4.

(19) The Israelites remembered sadly these foods, cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions, garlic. which they had enjoyed in Egypt and which they now missed. Evidently the manna substituted for all other foods, but these five. The latter were 'absent' because these foods do not agree with women in pregnancy.

(20) Num. XI, 7.

(21) Connecting it with rt. negad, draw, pull, attract.

(22) The 'omer per head in each household (v. Ex. XVI, 16) being arranged miraculously in accord with the true state of affairs, would be found in the house of the true father and thus would reveal whose child the infant was. Gad is thus connected with the causative of nagad, meaning to 'reveal', 'tell'.

(23) Being dependent for their daily food on God's bounty, the children of Israel would reflect on their conduct and continually improve it in order to deserve God's food.

(24) In either situation the 'omer would be found in the home of him who deserved it. The master of the slave would have an additional 'omer bestowed upon himself; the husband whom his wife had offended would have the measure in his house, where she belonged; if the husband had ill-treated her, so that her father's house was a legitimate refuge, her 'omer would be found there. Thus would the gad (to which the manna was compared) reveal the true state of affairs. In the case of the slave he would be restored, on the evidence of the 'omer, to his master; in the case of the wife, either the husband would have to pay her her marriage settlement (kethubah) or, if she had been guilty, she would forfeit it.

(25) Num. XI, 9.

(26) Ex. XVI, 4.

(27) Num. XI, 8.

(28) These three statements seem incompatible with one another; according to Num. XI, 9 the manna fell into the camp; according to Ex. XVI, 4 outside thereof, whereas according to Num. XI, 8 it was so far away from the camp that the people had to go far to find it.

(29) עוגות, Num. XI, 8; this denotes cakes while yet unbaked (Rashi).

(30) Num. XI, 8.

(31) Ex. XXXVI, 3.

(32) The word nesi'im, from the root nasa, 'to lift up'; thus things lifted up, elevated, may mean either princes or clouds.

(33) Prov. XXV, 14.

(34) Supplemented from Bah.

(35) The word le-shad may mean cake, as the simple text has it. It may also be connected with shad, 'breast', or with shed, 'demon'. Thus the two following interpretations. The different tastes of the milk depend on the food the mother has eaten.

(36) Ex. XVI, 8.

(37) They had enough cattle to feed their lust for flesh, their importune prayers for flesh, hence, were improper, and they would in punishment receive the flesh at night when, because of the need for preparation, it came too late, 'at an improper time', because usable only the next day.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 75b

whereas the bread for which they asked properly was given to them in its proper time.¹ Here the Torah intimates a matter of good form; that one should eat meat but at night. But surely Abaye said: One who has a meal should eat it only during the day? — We mean: as in day-light.²

R. Aha b. Jacob said: At first Israel were like hens picking in the dunghill, until Moses came and fixed for them a definite meal-time.³

While the flesh was yet between their teeth,⁴ yet it is also written: But a whole month,⁵ how is that? — The average people [died] at once, the wicked ones continued to suffer a whole month. And they spread them all abroad.⁶ Resh Lakish said: Do not read 'wayishtehu' [they spread abroad], but 'wa-yishahtu' [they were slaughtered], which [reading] intimates that the enemies of Israel had incurred the punishment of being slaughtered.⁷ 'Spread abroad'; it was taught in the name of R. Joshua b. Karhah: Do not read 'shatoah', but 'shahut' [ritually killed], which would intimate that there came down to Israel together with the manna something requiring ritual killing.⁸ Rabbi replied: So must you infer it from here. Was it not stated before: He caused flesh also to rain upon them as the dust, and winged fowl as the sand of the sea?⁹ And was it not taught: Rabbi said, Then thou shalt kill [of thy herd and of thy flock]. . . as I have commanded thee.¹⁰ This teaches that Moses received commandments concerning the gullet, and the windpipe, and concerning the larger part of one [organ] in the case of a fowl, and the larger part of two in the case of cattle?¹¹ What then does 'shatoah' [read, shahut] intimate? — That they [the quails] came down so as to form layers.

It is written: 'bread', but it is also written, 'oil' and it is also written, 'honey'?¹² — R. Jose b. Hanina said: Bread for the youths, oil for the aged, honey for the infants. It is written 'shlaw' and we read: slaw?¹³ — R. Hanina said: The righteous eat it at ease,¹⁴ whereas when the wicked eat it, it is unto them like thorns.¹⁵ R. Hanan b. Abba said: There are four kinds of slaw [quails]: thrush, partridge, pheasant and quail proper; the best of all is the thrush, the worst of all is the quail proper, which is like a small bird. [One stuffs it],¹⁶ places it in the oven, and it swells up, and becomes so big that it fills the oven. Thereupon one places it on top of twelve loaves of bread, and [even] the lowest one of them cannot be eaten without [some other food] in combination.¹⁷ Rab Judah would find them among his jars; R. Hisda among the twigs. Unto Raba his field labourer used to bring them from the meadow¹⁸ every day. One day he did not bring them. He wondered: Why this? He went up to the roof and heard a child which read: When I heard, my inward parts trembled.¹⁹ Thereupon he said: One knows from this that R. Hisda is dead.²⁰ It is for this reason that people say: By the merit of his master eats the pupil. It is written: And when the layer of dew was gone up,²¹ but it is also written: And when the dew fell?²² — R. Jose b. Hanina said: There was dew above, and dew below it; it resembled something placed in a box. A fine scale-like thing [mehuspas];²³ Resh Lakish said: It is something that melts on the wrist [palm] of the hand.²³ R. Johanan said: [It means] something which is absorbed by the two hundred and forty-eight parts [of the human body].²⁴ But [the numerical value] of mehuspas is much more?²⁵ — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: The word is written defective. Our Rabbis taught: Man did eat the bread of the mighty,²⁶ i.e., bread which ministering angels eat. This was the interpretation of R. Akiba. When these words were reported to R. Ishmael he said to them: Go forth and tell Akiba: Akiba, thou hast erred. For do, indeed, the ministering angels eat bread? Was it not said long ago: I did neither eat bread, nor drink water?²⁷ How, then, do I interpret 'the bread abbirum [of the mighty]'? I.e., bread which was absorbed by the two hundred and forty-eight parts [ebarim]. Then how do I apply: And thou shalt have a paddle among thy weapons?²⁸ That refers to what [foods] the foreign merchants were selling unto them. R. Eleazar b. Perata said: Even of the foodstuff which merchants of other nations sold them, the manna would counteract the effect. What then is the meaning of 'And thou shalt have a paddle among thy weapons'? — That applied to the time after their offence.²⁹ The Holy One, blessed be He, said: I thought they shall be like ministering angels, but now I shall burden them with the walk of three parasangs³⁰ as it is written: And they pitched by the Jordan, from Beth-jeshimoth even unto Abel-shittim.³¹ And Rabbah b. Hana had said: I have seen this place, it is three parasangs in extension.³² And furthermore it was taught when they went to relieve nature they went neither forward, nor sideways, but rearwards.³³

But now our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all.³⁴ They said: This manna will swell up their bowels, for is there one born of woman who absorbs food without eliminating it too? But when these words were reported before R. Ishmael he said to them: Do not read abbirim [mighty] but ebarim [parts of the body], i.e., something which is absorbed by the two hundred and forty-eight parts. But how do I then interpret: 'And thou shalt have a paddle among thy weapons'? — That refers to food that came to them from the distant parts.³⁵ Another interpretation of: Man did eat the bread of the mighty:

(1) Nobody can live without bread, hence that prayer was proper.

(2) By the light of torch, or candle.

(3) Morning and evening, the manna and the quails respectively.

(4) Num. XI, 33.

(5) Ibid. v. 20.

(6) Ibid. v. 32. This suggestion, although aggadic, is not ungrammatical, metathesis being frequent, as in kesseb, kebess (sheep).

(7) Perhaps because of their unrighteous clamour for flesh, when they had cattle of their own. 'Enemies of Israel' is an euphemism for 'Israel'.

(8) Hence we infer that quails were of a species that require ritual killing.

(9) Ps. LXXVIII, 27. 'Before' means, before this indirect inference there was a clear text to convey this teaching.

(10) Deut. XII, 21.

(11) The windpipe and the gullet, one in the case of fowl, both in the case of cattle, must be cut according to the ritual. There is no commandment anywhere in the Pentateuch as to the details of ritual slaughtering of animals or birds, called shechitah. Hence 'as I have commanded thee' must needs refer to another source of law: the unwritten or oral one.

(12) In reference to the manna. Ex. XVI, 29, 31 and Num. XI, 8. Three different tastes are ascribed to this food.

(13) The spelling is מ, the pronunciation מ. The deviation indicates another aspect.

(14) The Hebrew word (with מ) may be traced to a root meaning 'ease'. Thus the homiletical interpretation.

(15) The Aramaic equivalent of the reading means 'thorn', hence the suggestion that slaw in addition to the simple text meaning, has also other implications.

(16) Supplemented from Bah.

(17) It is so greasy that without some other dry food added it would be indigestible.

(18) Bah.

(19) Hab. III, 16.

(20) This story is very satisfactorily explained in Schatzkes' Mafteah I, Warsaw, 1866. R. Hisda, in spite of his great riches, was very frugal in his habits and so economical that he would not entrust even the management of wood to any servant, but himself every day handed wood to the cooks (Git. 56a). Although he would find the quails among his twigs, he would prevent anyone from laying his hands upon these delicacies. His son-in-law Raba, therefore, arranged with a tenant-farmer to bring them. His failure to bring them one day Raba rightly attributed to the thought that something had happened which rendered such service unnecessary. To this inference he added, according to widespread custom, the additional reliance on the implications of a text the first child he met would be studying. When that text suggested evil news the 'evidence was complete'.

(21) Ex. XVI, 14.

(22) Num. XI, 9. The passage in Ex. suggests that the dew covered the manna, whereas the verse in Num. indicates that the dew was below the manna.

(23) There is a play on 'mah', 'melt', and 'pas', 'palm'.

(24) The numerical value of 'Mehuspas': Mem = 40, heth = 8, samek = 60, pe = 80 and samek = 60, together 248. V. Mak., Sonc. ed., p. 169, n. 5.

(25) The part. pass. is usually spelt with a waw, which makes its numerical value plus 6 =254; whereas the reading is plene, the text is without the waw מַחֲפַפִּים, hence 248; and the inference as to the 248 parts of the body is supported.

(26) Ps. LXXVIII, 25.

(27) Deut. IX, 18.

(28) Ibid. XXIII, 14. The paddle is to serve thus: And it shall be, when thou sittest down abroad, thou shalt dig therewith, and shalt turn back, and cover that which cometh from thee. But, if the manna was completely absorbed, there was nothing 'coming from the Israelite', hence no need for the paddle.

(29) In complaining of the manna as Num. XXI, 5; Our soul loatheth this light bread.

(30) To get outside the confines of the camp for the call of nature.

(31) Num. XXXIII, 49.

(32) 'Er. 55b.

(33) None would turn backwards, therefore there was no offence against common decency involved.

(34) Num. XI, 6.

(35) Lit., 'province of the sea'.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 76a

That is Joshua for whom manna [specially] fell down as it did to¹ all Israel, [for] it is written: here, 'man',² and also there it is written: Take thee Joshua, the son of Nun, a man in whom is spirit.³ But perhaps it is Moses, of whom it is said: Now the man Moses was very meek?⁴ — One may infer ish from ish, but not ish from we-ha-ish.⁵

R. Simon b. Yohai was asked by his disciples: Why did not the manna come down unto Israel once annually? He replied: I shall give a parable: This thing may be compared to a king of flesh and blood who had one son, whom he provided with maintenance once a year, so that he would visit his father once a year only. Thereupon he provided for his maintenance every day, so that he called on him every day. The same with Israel. One who had four or five children would worry, saying: Perhaps no manna will come down to-morrow, and all will die of hunger. Thus they were found to turn their attention to their Father in Heaven. Another interpretation: They ate it whilst it was yet warm.⁶ Another interpretation: Because of the burden of the way.⁷

And it long ago happened that R. Tarfon, R. Ishmael and the Elders were seated and occupied with the portion referring to the manna, and also R. Eleazar of Modiim was seated among them. R. Eleazar of Modim commenced [to expound] and said: The manna which came down unto Israel was sixty cubits high! R. Tarfon said to him: Modite! How long will you rake words together and bring them up against us?⁸ — He answered: My master! I am expounding a Scriptural verse.

Fifteen cubits upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.⁹ Were there indeed fifteen cubits [high] in the valley, [fifteen cubits in the lowlands],¹⁰ fifteen cubits on the mountains?¹¹ Were the waters standing like a series of walls? And, furthermore, how could the ark come to the top [of the mountains]? Rather, all the fountains of the great deep came up first until the water was even with the mountains, then the water rose fifteen more cubits. Now which measure is larger, that of reward or punishment? You must needs agree that the measure of goodness [reward] is larger. Now with the measure of punishment it is written: The windows of heaven were opened,¹² with the measure of goodness, however, it is said: And he commanded the skies above, and opened the doors of heaven; and caused manna to rain upon them for food, and gave them of the corn of heaven.¹³ [And a Tanna taught]:¹⁴ Now how many windows has a door? Four; hence 'doors' [imply] eight.¹⁵ Thus it is found that the manna which fell upon Israel was sixty cubits. It was taught: Issi b. Judah says: The manna which fell down for Israel rose so high that all the kings of the east and the west could see it, as it is said: [Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies. . .] my cup runneth over.¹⁶ (Abaye said: It is evident from this that the cup of King David in the future world will hold two hundred and twenty-one logs, as it is said: My cup is rewayah [overflowing], and this is the numerical value of rewayah).¹⁷ But there is no comparison: there it took forty days, here only one hour;¹⁸ or there for all the world, here for Israel alone;¹⁹ and it should have been higher still! — [Rather]: R. Eleazar of Modim infers it from the analogy of ‘opened’, ‘opened’.²⁰

[ON YOM KIPPUR] EATING IS FORBIDDEN. To what do the five afflictions correspond? — R. Hisda said: To the five afflictions mentioned in the Torah: And on the tenth day:²¹ howbeit on the tenth day;²² a sabbath of solemn rest;²³ it is a sabbath of solemn rest,²⁴ and it shall be unto you.²⁵ But these are only five, whereas [in our Mishnah] we learned of six [afflictions]? — Drinking is included in eating. For Resh Lakish said: When do we know that drinking is included in eating? Because Scripture said: And thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God . . . the tithe of thy corn, of thy [tirosh] wine, and of thine oil;²⁶ ‘tirosh’ is wine and yet Scripture reads: ‘And thou shalt eat’. Whence this proof? Perhaps it means that he used it as all admixture to elaiogarum?²⁷ For Rabbah b. Samuel said: Elaiogarum contains the juice of beets; oxygarum the sauce of all kinds of boiled vegetables? — Rather, said R. Aha b. Jacob, is that inferred from here: And thou shalt bestow thy money for whatever thy soul desireth, for oxen, for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink.²⁸ [To] wine and strong drink [applies the term] drinking and yet the Divine Law reads: ‘And thou shalt eat’. How is that [conclusive]? — Perhaps here, too, the implication is that he uses it as an admixture to elaiogarum?— Scripture says ‘Strong drink’, i.e., something which intoxicates.²⁹ But perhaps the reference here is to preserved figs from Keilah, for it was taught: If one [a priest] ate preserved figs from Keilah,³⁰ and drank honey and milk, and thus entered the Sanctuary

(1) Corresponding to.

(2) Num. XXVII, 18.

(3) Ex. XXIV, 13. Joshua went up with Moses to Mount Sinai, Moses did not eat, but Joshua did, hence the manna must have come to him there.

(4) Num. XII, 3.

(5) Analogy should be built upon exact similarity, almost identity, not on relative similarity of expression; according to this rigid rule no analogy from ‘ish’ to ‘ha-ish’ or vice versa could be argued.

(6) Its taste or flavour was preserved, but if gathered once for the whole year, it would become stale, cold, tasteless.

(7) It would greatly hamper them on their journeys.

(8) Try to impress us with unsubstantiated statements.

(9) Gen. VII, 20.

(10) [Var. lec. rightly omit as unnecessary repetition].

(11) The phrase fifteen cubits upward surely could not be taken to mean that the fifteen cubits were measured from different levels.

(12) Ibid. v. 11.

(13) Ps. LXXVIII, 23, 24.

(14) Supplied from MS.M. V. also Rashi.

(15) At least two are implied in ‘doors’ hence at least eight windows. But the measure of goodness surpasses the measure of punishment (as e.g., Ex. II, 6, 7). There were at least two ‘windows’ of heaven at the flood, as implied in ‘windows’ which poured forth fifteen cubits of rain; the eight windows (of the two doors of heaven) must have produced at least no less, i.e., sixty cubits of manna, since the measure of goodness is surely no smaller than that of punishment. So that ‘sixty’ here is to be taken as minimum.

(16) Ps. XXIII, 5, 6. This reckoning is stimulated by the preceding one.

(17) The psalm is taken as prophetic of restoration — either in this world (then ‘in the future’ at the time of the Messiah) or in the world to come (usual interpretation).

(18) Between the flood and manna.

(19) Here the argument is in favour of a higher measure for the manna. For since the space wherein it fell was limited, whilst the windows of heaven presumably were capable of pouring out the same quantity, the manna confined to a small area should have risen very much higher than the waters, which covered all the earth.

(20) Gen. VII, 11 and Ps. LXXVIII, 23; he does not employ the argument of a greater measure in store for reward than for punishment; but merely from the fact that in each case two windows produced a height of fifteen cubits — whether of manna or water.

(21) Num. XXIX, 7.

(22) Lev. XXIII, 27.

(23) Ibid. 32.

(24) Ibid. XVI, 31.

(25) Ibid. v. 29.

(26) Deut. XIV, 23.

(27) Greek; a sauce of oil and garum, to which wine is sometimes added.

(28) Deut. XIV, 26.

(29) And no intoxication results from eating.

(30) A town in the lowlands of Judea, cf. Josh. XV, 44; v. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 481, n. 6.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 76b

he is culpable?¹ — Rather, he infers it by analogy of ‘strong drink’ from the Nazirite.² Just as there it means wine, so here too is wine involved. But is ‘tirosh’ wine? Was it not taught: One who takes a vow to abstain from ‘tirosh’ is forbidden to use any sweet drink but may use wine? — But is [‘tirosh’] not wine? Surely it is written: And tirosh makes the maids flourish!³ The thing which is derived from ‘tirosh’ makes maids flourish.⁴ But it is written: And thy vats shall overflow with tirosh?⁵ — Thy vats shall overflow with what is derived from ‘tirosh’. But it is written: Harlotry, wine and tirosh take away the heart?⁶ — Rather, everybody agrees that ‘tirosh’ is wine, but with regard to vows we go after common parlance.⁷

Why is it [wine] called ‘yayin’ and ‘tirosh’? — It is called ‘yayin’ because it brings lamentation into the world, and ‘tirosh’ ‘because he who indulges in it becomes poor.’⁸

R. Kahana pointed out a contradiction: It is written ‘tirash’ and we read ‘tirosh’! — If he is meritorious he becomes a head [rosh] through it; if not, he becomes poor [rash] through it.⁹ Raba pointed out this contradiction: The text reads, ‘yeshammah’, whilst we read ‘yesammah’?¹⁰ — If he is meritorious it makes him happy, if not, it makes him desolate. That is why Raba said: Wine and odorous spices made me wise.¹¹

Whence do we know that [abstention from] bathing and from anointing oneself is considered an affliction? — Because it is written: I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all.¹² What does ‘I ate no pleasant bread’ mean? — Rab Judah, in the name of R. Samuel b. Shilath said: He ate not even bread made of pure wheat. Whence do we know that [the abstention from anointing] was considered an affliction? Because it is written: Then he said unto me: Fear not, Daniel, for from the first day that thou didst set thy heart to understand, and to afflict¹³ thyself before thy God, thy words were heard; and I am come because of thy words.¹⁴ We have found it now with regard to [abstention from] anointing oneself. Whence do we know it about [abstention from] washing? — R. Zutra, son of R. Tobiah said: Scripture reads: And it is come into his inward parts like water, and like oil into his bones.¹⁵ But perhaps that applies to drinking it? — It is compared to oil; just as the oil is applied externally, so also the water [is such as is applied] externally. But a Tanna teaches just the reverse, for we learned: Whence do we know that anointing oneself is like drinking on the Day of Atonement? Although there is no conclusive evidence for this, there is some intimation, for it is said: ‘And it is come into his inward parts like water, and like oil into his bones’?¹⁶ — Rather, said R. Ashi: [That abstention from] washing [is considered an affliction] is evident from the verse itself, for it is written: ‘Neither did I anoint myself at all’.¹⁷ What does: ‘And I am come because of thy words’ mean?¹⁸ — It is written: And there stood before them seventy men of the elders of the House of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jazaniah, the son of Shapan, every man with his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.¹⁹ [Furthermore]: And the form of a hand was put forth, and I was taken by a lock of my head; and a spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me into the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the gate of the inner court that looketh toward the north; where

(1) Lev. X, 9.

(2) Num. VI, 3.

(3) Zech. IX, 17.

(4) The argument is not too obvious. According to Rashi the point under consideration is whether 'tirosh' is the name for wine (new wine) or for the grapes themselves. If the latter is accepted wine is 'that which is derived from tirosh (berries)'.

(5) Prov. III, 10 and into vats the wine is poured, not the berries!

(6) Hos. IV, II. Surely grapes would not fit into this context.

(7) And in common parlance 'tirosh' and 'yayin' are separated.

(8) The first is a play on 'ya, ya' exclamation of woe, the second on the second syllable of 'tirosh', which is connected with 'rash', to become poor, as if 'tirosh' meant, You will become poor.

(9) The text connected with the root meaning 'poor', the reading with the noun 'rosh', head.

(10) Ps. CIV, 15. Again a difference between text and pronunciation with a significance attached to both; samah means 'rejoicing', 'shammah' is connected with 'shammah', desolation, the 'he' and 'heth' interchanging.

(11) Stimulated my intellect.

(12) Dan. X, 3.

(13) E.V. 'to humble'.

(14) Ibid. V. 12.

(15) Ps. CIX, 18.

(16) Here water in the verse is taken to refer to 'drinking' from which 'anointing' is derived, contrary to the conclusion just arrived at whereby the meaning of 'water' is derived from its juxtaposition to 'oil'.

(17) Lit., '(as to) anointing I did not anoint myself at all'. 'At all' means, not even washing, which may be preparatory.

(18) When was he driven out, so that he had to re-enter? The reference is to 'the man clothed in linen', (v. ibid. verse 5) identified infra with Gabriel.

(19) Ezek. VIII, 11.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 77a

there was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.¹ [Furthermore]: And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.² Now from the implication of the text: 'And their faces toward the east', do I not know that their backs were toward the temple of the Lord? Why then does the text state: 'With their backs toward the temple of the Lord'? It teaches that they uncovered themselves and committed a nuisance toward that which is below.³ The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Michael:⁴ Michael, your nation has committed sin. Michael answered: Lord of the Universe! Let the good ones among them be considered sufficient! He replied: I shall burn both them and the good ones among them! Immediately then: And he spoke unto the man clothed in linen, and said: Go in between the wheelwork, even under the cherub, and fill both thy hands with coals of fire from between the cherubim, and dash them against the city. And he went in my sight.⁵ Thereupon: And the cherub stretched forth his hand between the cherubim unto the fire that was between the cherubim, and took thereof and put it into the hands of him that was clothed in linen, who took it and went out.⁶ R. Hana b. Bizna said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious: Were it not for the fact that the coals of the hand of the cherub became cold [in the process of coming] into the hands of Gabriel,⁷ there would not have been left over from the 'enemies of Israel'⁸ one to remain or one to escape, for it is written: And behold the man clothed in linen, who had the inkhorn on his side, reported, saying: 'I have done according to all that Thou hast commanded me'.⁹ R. Johanan¹⁰ said: In that hour Gabriel was led out behind the curtain and received forty fiery strokes, he being told: If you had not executed the command at all, well, you simply would not have executed it.¹¹ But since you did execute it, why did you not do as you were commanded?¹² Furthermore: Don't you know that:¹³ 'One brings no report about mischief'?¹⁴ Thereupon Dubiel,¹⁵ the guardian angel of the Persians, was brought in and placed in his stead, and he officiated for twenty-one days. This is what is written: But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days; but lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me; and I was left over there beside the kings of Persia.¹⁶ Twenty-one provinces and the port of Mashmahig¹⁷ were given to him. Thereupon he said: Put down for me Israel for the polltax! They did so. Put down the Sages for the poll-tax! They did so. When they were about to sign, Gabriel came forth from behind the curtain and said: It is vain for you that ye rise early, and sit up late, ye that eat the bread of toil; so He giveth unto His beloved in sleep.¹⁸ (What does 'So He giveth unto His beloved in sleep' signify? R. Isaac said: This refers to the wives of the scholars who deny themselves sleep in this world, and acquire the world to come).¹⁹ No attention was paid to him. He said before Him: Lord of the Universe, if all the wise men of other nations were in one scale of the balance, and Daniel, the man of pleasant parts, in the other, would he not be found to outweigh them all? — The Holy One, blessed be He, said: Who is it that pleads the merit of my children? They replied: Lord of the Universe, it is Gabriel. He said: Let him come in, as it is written: 'And I am come [in] because of thy words'. Having commanded that they bring him in, they brought him in. He noticed that Dubiel held the document in his hand, and he wanted to take it from him, but the former swallowed it. Some say: [The document] was written out, but not signed. Others say: It was also signed, but as he swallowed it, the signature was blotted out. Hence there are some people in the kingdom of Persia who are obliged to pay poll-tax, while others are free from it. And when I go forth, lo, the prince of Greece shall come.²⁰ He cried and cried and none minded him.

Or, if you like, that [abstention from] washing is considered an affliction is deducible from here. For it is written: And unto Abiathar the priest said the king: 'Get thee to Anathoth, unto thine own fields; for thou art deserving of death; but I will not at this time put thee to death, because thou didst bear the ark of the Lord God before David my father, and because thou wast afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted'.²¹ And concerning David it is written: For they said: 'The people is hungry, and faint and thirsty in the wilderness'.²² 'Hungry' because of no bread; 'thirsty' because of no water; 'faint' because of what? Would you not say: Because of no washing?²³ — But perhaps 'faint' [means] because of no sandals? — Rather said R. Isaac, [it is to be deducted] from this: As cold water to a faint soul.²⁴ But perhaps it means: [Faint] from [lack of] drink? — Does Scripture read: 'Into a faint soul'? Upon a faint soul is written! And whence is to be inferred that [abstention from wearing] sandals [is considered an affliction]? Because it is written: And David went up by the ascent of the Mount of Olives and wept as he went up; and he had his head covered, and went bare.²⁵ 'Bare' of what? Obviously 'of shoes'. Perhaps it means bare because without horse and whip?— Rather, said R. Nahman b. Isaac, the inference comes from: Go and loose the sack-cloth from off thy loins, and put thy shoe from off thy foot,²⁶ and it is written: And he did so, walking naked and bare.²⁶ 'Bare' of what? Obviously bare of sandals. But perhaps [it means he went] in patched shoes. For, if you were not to interpret thus, 'naked' would also have to be explained as stark naked? Rather, must you here too explain: [naked] i.e.. in shabby garments, thus also 'bare' in patched sandals! — Rather, said R. Nahman b. Isaac: [It is derived] from here: Withhold thy foot from being unshod, and thy throat from thirst,²⁷ i.e., withhold thyself from sin lest thy foot become unshod; withhold thy tongue from idle speech, lest thy throat become dry [faint with thirst].

Whence do we know that [abstention from] marital intercourse is considered an affliction? — Because it is written: If thou shalt afflict my daughters, and if thou shalt take wives beside my daughters,²⁸ [i.e..]

(1) Ibid. v. 3.

(2) Ibid. v. 16.

(3) A euphemism for heaven.

(4) Who is the guardian angel of Israel.

(5) Ezek. X, 2.

(6) Ibid. 7.

(7) Alluded to in 'the man clothed in linen'.

(8) Euphemistic for Israel.

(9) Ibid. IX, 11.

(10) Var. lec. remove the whole account that follows from here.

(11) He may have assumed that God's mercy would postpone or suspend punishment.

(12) You were commanded to fetch the coals yourself, you sinned in appointing someone else to do so.

(13) Meg. 15a. For the same reason one need not report to children the death even of their parents.

(14) With reference to his reporting back, 'I have done according to all that Thou hast commanded me'.

(15) Lit., 'bear-god'. In Daniel VII, 5 Persia appears as 'a bear', hence their angel is bear-god. V. Kid. 72a. A.Z. 2a.

(16) Dan. X, 13. This verse is ingeniously used to build up the present Aggadah.

(17) A place on an island of the Persian Gulf, famous for pearl fisheries. V. R. H., Sonc. ed., p. 99, n. 5. V. D. S. as to the MSS. which omit this whole passage.

(18) Ps. CXXXVII, 2.

(19) The nations of the world should not be able to subdue or tax these, for they are the beloved of the Lord, and their own wives, in denying sleep to themselves in this world (taking 'yedid' ad hoc as if derived from 'nadad', flee, avoid i.e., sleep) earn eternal salvation. God thus protects them. When this argument proved unavailing, they made another attempt by comparing Daniel with all non-Jewish scholars, and this was accepted by the Lord.

(20) Dan. X, 20. Gabriel's protest was of no avail against the time when Greece was given rule over Israel.

(21) I Kings II, 26.

(22) II Sam. XVII, 29.

(23) Thus would abstention from bathing be proved to be considered an affliction.

(24) Prov. XXV, 25.

(25) II Sam. XV, 30.

(26) Isa. XX, 2.

(27) Jer. II, 25.

(28) Gen. XXXI, 50.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 77b

'if thou shalt afflict' by denying conjugal duty, 'if thou shalt take' refers to rivals. But say [perhaps]: Both [afflictions due] to rival women? — Does Scripture say: 'If thou shalt take',¹ it reads: 'And if thou shalt take'. But perhaps both refer to affliction through rivals; one through rivalries among them, the other through rivalries of new wives, so that ['if thou shalt afflict'] would be the same as 'if thou shalt take'.² Does Scripture say: 'If thou wilt take and afflict'? It reads: If thou shalt afflict and thou shalt take.³ R. Papa said to Abaye: But intercourse in itself is described as affliction, for it is written: And he lay with her and afflicted her?⁴ He answered: He afflicted her through other [forms of] intercourse.

Our Rabbis taught: It is forbidden to wash part of the body [on the Day of Atonement], as [it is forbidden to wash] the whole body. But if one was soiled with mud or excrement, he may wash in his usual way without any fear.⁵ It is forbidden to anoint part of the body [as it is forbidden to anoint] the whole body. If, however, one was sick or had scabs on his head, he may anoint himself in his usual way without any fear. The School of R. Menasseh taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: A woman may wash one of her hands in water to give bread to an infant without any fear. It was reported about the older Shammai⁶ that he would not [hand food] to be eaten even with one hand, whereupon the Rabbis decreed that he must do so with both hands.⁷ Why that? Abaye said: Because of Shibta.⁸

Our Rabbis taught: One who goes to visit his father or his teacher, or his superior,⁹ may walk through water up to his neck without any fear. They asked: How about a master who visits his disciple? — Come and hear: For R. Isaac b. Bar Hana said: I saw Ze'iri who went to R. Ashi, his disciple. R. Ashi said: That was R. Hiyya b. Ashi, who went to Ze'iri, his master. Raba permitted the people of 'Ibar Jemina¹⁰ to walk through water for the purpose of guarding [fruits] the crop.¹¹ Abaye said to Raba: I know a teaching that supports you [your decision]: Those who guard the crop may walk up to the neck through water without any fear. R. Joseph permitted the people of Be Tarbu¹² to walk through the water in order to go to the lecture [of the Day of Atonement] but he did not permit them to return [in the same fashion]. Abaye said to him: If so, you will put a stumbling-block in their way for the future.¹³ Some say: He permitted them to go and to return [through water], whereupon Abaye said: Quite right [to permit them] to do so on the way to the lecture, but why the permission on their return? — Lest you put a stumbling-block in their way for the future.

Rab Judah and R. Samuel son of R. Judah were standing at the bank of Nehar Papa,¹⁴ at the ford of Hazdad, and Rami b. Papa was standing on the other bank. He shouted across: How about going over to you to inquire about a decision of the Law? Rab Judah answered; Rab and Samuel both agree: One may come over, provided one take not one's hand out of the bosom of his shirt.¹⁵ Some say: It was R. Samuel, son of Rab Judah who said: We were taught, He may come over, provided he take not his hand out of the bosom of his shirt.

R. Joseph demurred: But, even on a weekday is such action permitted?¹⁶ Does not Scripture say: He measured a thousand cubits and he caused me to pass through the waters, waters that were to the ankles;¹⁷ hence we infer that it is permitted to pass through water up to the ankles. Again he measured a thousand, and caused me to pass through the waters, waters that were up to the knees;¹⁸ hence we learn that it is permitted to pass through waters up to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and caused me to pass through waters that were to the loins;¹⁸ hence we know that it is permissible to pass through water up to the loins. Henceforth: Afterward he measured a thousand, and it was a river that I would not pass through.¹⁹ Abaye said: It is different with a river whose waters run rapidly.²⁰ One might have assumed that it is permissible to swim across such a river, therefore the text reads: For the waters were risen, waters to swim in.¹⁹ What does 'sahu' mean? —

‘Swim’, for a swimmer is called ‘sayaha’. One might have assumed that it is permissible to pass through such [river] in a small Liburnian boat, therefore the text reads: Wherein, shall go no galley with oars.²¹ One might have assumed that one may cross it in a big Liburnian ship, therefore Scripture says: Neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.²⁰ How does that follow from the text? — As R. Joseph interprets it: No fisher's boat goes thereon, no big boat traverses it.²² R. Judah b. Pazzi said: Even the Angel of Death has no permission to cross it, for here it is said: ‘Wherein shall go no galley with oars [shayit].’²³ and there it reads: From going [shut] to and fro in the earth.²³ R. Phinehas in the name of R. Huna of Sepphoris said: The spring that issues from the Holy of Holies in its beginning resembles the antennae of locusts; as it reaches the entrance to the Sanctuary it becomes as the thread of the warp; as it reaches the Ulam,²⁴ it becomes as the thread of the woof; as it reaches the entrance to the [Temple] court, it becomes as large as the mouth of a small flask, that is meant by what we learned: R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: [Hence] go forth the waters

(1) So that the second part of the verse would state explicitly what the first implies.

(2) Thus the question as to the meaning of ‘and’ would be disposed of.

(3) The lesser evil would be mentioned first, whereas the marrying of Jacob of other additional women would constitute the larger wrong.

(4) Gen. XXXIV, 2.

(5) Of transgressing the prohibition of washing on the Day of Atonement.

(6) The colleague of Hillel in the Sanhedrin under King Herod.

(7) Shammai did not wish to allow himself the concession made by the Rabbis, since he always took the severer view for himself, when two interpretations of ritual obligations were involved. But the Rabbis decided that their permission to wash one's hand was a matter of safeguarding the child's health, and Shammai's unwillingness to accept their rule was unjustified. To emphasize that they imposed upon him the obligation to wash both his hands before handing food to his infant.

(8) An evil spirit, or odour, that endangers the health of those that eat food touched with unwashed hands.

(9) On the day of Atonement and in order to reach him must wade through a river. ‘His superior’ is one to whom one owes obeisance either by Biblical or Rabbinic law or by the exigencies of political situation.

(10) [Lit., ‘the right (= south) side’, the district south of Mahoza on the Tigris, where lay the orchards of Mahoza and which could not be reached except across some canal, v. Obermeyer p. 181.]

(11) [Apparently the people of Ibar Jemina came up to Mahoza for the service of the Day of Atonement and Raba permitted them to return home by wading through water in order to guard their produce, v. loc. cit.].

(12) [Near Pumbeditha, v. Obermeyer. p. 230].

(13) They will abstain from attending the lecture on future occasions because of the discomfort involved in having to wait until the end of the Day of Atonement for their return home.

(14) [A canal that passed through Pumbeditha, v. Obermeyer. p. 227].

(15) I.e., to throw his cloak over his shoulder, it would look as if he were carrying it, rather than wearing it.

(16) To walk through water up to one's neck.

(17) Ezek. XLVII, 3.

(18) Ibid. 4.

(19) Ibid. v. 5.

(20) As with the river, coming from the Holy of Holies; but this is no precedent.

(21) Isa. XXXIII, 21.

(22) V. Targum on Prophets a.l.

(23) Job I, 7. The argument is based on the analogy of expression. The conditions attaching to the ‘shayit’ in Isaiah inferred from Ezekiel apply also to shut in Job. Hence, just as there it is forbidden, by inference, to cross the river, so may the Angel of Death, as another shayit not do so either.

(24) The Main Hall leading into the interior of the Sanctuary.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 78a

which will bubble forth from under the threshold of the Sanctuary.¹ From there onwards it becomes bigger, rising higher and higher, until it reaches the entrance to the House of David.² As soon as it reaches the entrance to the house of David, it becomes even as a swiftly running brook, in which men and women afflicted with gonorrhoea, menstruating women, and women after childbirth bathe, as it is said: In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for purification and for sprinkling.³ Said R. Joseph: Hence there is an intimation that a menstruating woman [at her purification] must sit in water [that reaches in height] up to the neck. But the law is not in accord with him.

(That will be right on the Day of Atonement, on which no sandal is worn). But what about the Sabbath on which sandals are worn?⁴ — R. Nehemiah, the son-in-law of the Prince,⁵ said: I saw R. Ammi and R. Assi who reached a pool of water and crossed it dressed.⁶ That is all right in shoes, but what can be said in the case of sandals?⁷ R. Rihumi said: I saw Rabina, who crossed it in sandals. R. Ashi said: One must not do so at the outset in sandals. The Exilarch once came to Hagronia to the house of R. Nathan. Rafram and all the Rabbis attended his lecture, Rabina did not. Next day Rafram wanted to remove Rabina from the mind of the Exilarch,⁸ so he said to him: 'Why did you not come to the lecture, Sir?' He answered: 'My foot hurt me'. 'You should have put shoes on!' 'It was the back of the foot'. 'You should have put sandals on'. He answered: 'A pool of water was in the way'. 'You should have crossed it in them,'. He replied: 'Don't you hold, Sir, the view of R. Ashi, that one must not at the outset do so in sandals'!

Judah b. Gerogeroth taught: It is forbidden to sit on moist muddy ground on the Day of Atonement. R. Joshua b. Levi said: This refers to mud which makes wet [those sitting on it]. Abaye said: If it is moist enough to moisten other subjects.

Rab Judah said: It is permitted to cool off [by sitting] on fruit on the Day of Atonement. Rab Judah would cool off through squash, Raba through fresh twigs, Rabbah through a silver cup. R. Papa said:⁹ On a silver vessel one may not cool oneself if it is full; it is permissible only when it is not full. On an earthen vessel it is forbidden in either case, because [the unglazed vessel] lets the moisture ooze through. R. Papa¹⁰ said: A silver vessel, if not full, is also forbidden for use as a cooler-off, because it may be upset.¹¹ Ze'iri b. Hama was the host of R. Ammi and R. Assi, and R. Joshua b. Levi, and of all the Rabbis of Caesarea. He said to R. Joseph the son of R. Joshua b. Levi: O, son of a great man,¹² come and let me tell you a fine custom that your father had. He had a towel from the eve of the Day of Atonement, which he soaked in water, made it into a kind of dry vessel, and on the morrow would wipe his face, hands and feet with it. On the eve of the ninth of Ab he would soak it in water and on the morrow he would stroke his eyes with it. Similarly¹³ when Rabbah b. Mari came he reported: On the eve of the ninth of Ab a towel was brought to him, he soaked it in water, and put it under his head. On the morrow he would therewith wipe his face, hands and feet. On the eve of the Day of Atonement one brought him a towel, which he soaked in water and made it into a kind of dry vessel, and on the morrow he stroked his eyes with it. Said R. Jacob to R. Jeremiah b. Tahlifa: You had told us the matter in just the opposite fashion and we refuted you by reference to prohibition of wringing out.¹⁴

R. Menashiah b. Tahlifa, in the name of R. Amram, on the authority of Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said: The following question was propounded to R. Eleazar: Must a scholar, who is a member of an Academy, obtain special permission to declare a firstborn animal allowed,¹⁵ or does he not need that special permission? What was it that appeared doubtful to them? — This is what they wanted to know: In accord with the statement of R. Iddi b. Abin that 'this matter was left in the hands of the Prince as a special distinction for himself', the question is: Must [the elder] receive permission, or, since he is an elder and a member of an Academy, he need not? R. Zadok b. Haloka thereupon stood up and said: I saw R. Jose b. Zimra who was both an elder and a member of an Academy, and indeed was superior to the grandfather of this our Prince,¹⁶ yet obtained permission to declare firstborn animals for profane use! — R. Abba replied to him: It was not like this, but rather, this was the fact:

R. Jose b. Zimra was a priest, and this was his problem: Is the halachah in accord with R. Meir, who said: One who is suspected concerning a matter¹⁷ may neither judge nor offer testimony in connection therewith; or is the halachah in accord with R. Simeon b. Gamaliel who said: Such a one would be trustworthy in a case concerning his neighbour, but not in a case concerning himself? The answer given was: The halachah is in accord with the view of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel. Furthermore did they ask [R. Eleazar]: How about

(1) Mid. III, 6. A play on pakh (pitcher) as if derived from pakhakh (to bubble forth).

(2) I.e., Zion, outside Jerusalem, the fortress in the wall of the Holy City.

(3) All of which need a ritual immersion to regain their purity. Zech. XIII, 1.

(4) Some commentators, among them Rashi, omit the bracketed portion. The question taken up again is: Whether, as apart from the prohibition to wear shoes, which applies on the Day of Atonement as a form of affliction, on a Sabbath such crossing would be permissible, since the possibility of their falling off, and being carried, should involve a preventive prohibition of such crossing. They might slide off easily, and thus lead the wearer to carrying them.

(5) Perhaps R. Judah II.

(6) I.e., with their feet dressed in shoes.

(7) The difference between the two lies in this: that shoes, as a rule, are laced or worn tight, whence the danger of their falling off is minimized. Therefore the Rabbis above were seen wearing shoes. But sandals which are but lightly attached, might slide off.

(8) I.e., to find out from Rabina the reason for his absence and thereby remove the suspicion of deliberate negligence in his friend's part from the mind of the Exilarch.

(9) Asheri: Rab.

(10) Alfasi and Asheri: R. Ashi.

(11) The silver vessel, being smooth, may be upset and the liquid spilt, thus offering unlawful flow.

(12) Lit., 'son of a lion'.

(13) [Wilna Gaon Glosses deletes 'Similarly'].

(14) Wringing out is forbidden on the Day of Atonement; the towel had therefore to be dried on the eve of the Day of Atonement. Abba Mari was wrong and rejected this important detail, hence the version reported by R. Jeremiah b. Tahlifa.

(15) According to Sanh. 5a no Sage was permitted to declare a firstborn animal free, i.e., defective and hence permitted for profane use, unless he had received special authorization from the Prince in Palestine. The question here posed is whether a member of an Academy may be considered a privileged person in this respect or not. This problem is not germane to the present discussion and is introduced only because it leads to another (the next) question, touching the Day of Atonement, which was submitted at the same time.

(16) [R. Judah II, whose grandfather was R. Judah I, the Prince].

(17) Since the destruction of the Temple a firstborn animal must be left to pasture under priestly control until it acquired a blemish. To avoid such inconvenience many a priest felt tempted to discover a blemish before its actual appearance, hence the priests were suspected of undue laxity in this matter. V. Bek. 35a.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 78b

going forth [on the Day of Atonement] in sandals of bamboo? — Thereupon R. Isaac b. Nahmani stood up and said: I saw myself R. Joshua b. Levi going forth in sandals of bamboo on the Day of Atonement. I asked him: How about [on public rain] fast?¹ He answered: There is no difference. Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said: I saw R. Eleazar of Niniveh² who was going forth in sandals of bamboo on a public [rain] fast, and I asked him: How about the Day of Atonement? He answered: There is no difference. Rab Judah went forth in [sandals made of] reeds; Abaye in [such made] of palm-branches; Raba in [such made of] twisted reeds; Rabbah b. Bar Hanah tied a piece of cloth around his legs and went thus forth.

Rami b. Hama raised an objection: 'A cripple may go forth with his artificial foot', according to R. Meir, whilst R. Jose forbids it. Both agree, however, that he must not go forth with it on the Day of Atonement.³ Said Abaye: There, the reference is where it [the wooden leg] has pads, and [the prohibition to go out with them on the Day of Atonement is] due to the comfort [they bring]. Said Raba to him: But if it be no object of wear [without them], would the pads make it one? And, furthermore, is any comfort not coming from shoes forbidden on the Day of Atonement? Did not Rabbah b. Bar Hanah tie a cloth around his legs and thus go forth? Furthermore, since the conclusion [of that teaching] reads: 'If it [the artificial leg] has a receptacle made of pads, it is capable of acquiring ritual uncleanness',⁴ it follows that the first portion deals with a wooden leg without such pads? — Rather, said Raba: In truth, all agree that an artificial leg is not considered a shoe, but in the case of the Sabbath they differ on the following point: One Master holds, We decree [the prohibition for fear] it may fall off and cause him to carry it four cubits in a public thoroughfare;⁵ whereas the other Master holds, We do not decree [any prohibition because of such fear].

Our Rabbis taught: Children are permitted all these [matters],⁶ with the exception of the putting on of shoes. Wherein is the putting on of shoes different? [Presumably] because people might say: Adults made them [wear them]. In all other cases, too, they might say: Adults made them for them? Bathing and anointing can be performed on the preceding day. But sandals, too, may be assumed to have been put on yesterday? It is impossible for sandals to have been put on yesterday, for Samuel said: Let one who would experience a taste of death put on shoes and sleep in them! But it is stated that [the other matters] are permitted [implying] for them at the very outset? — Rather, those things which have nothing to do with their natural growth,⁷ the Rabbis have interdicted, these however, which are needed for their health,⁸ the Rabbis have not forbidden. For Abaye said: Mother⁹ told me the proper treatment for a child consists in [bathing in] warm water and [rubbing with] oil. If he has grown a bit, in egg with kutah;¹⁰ if he grows up still more, the breaking of clay vessels.¹¹ Thus did Rabbah buy clay vessels in damaged condition for his children who would break them.¹²

THE KING AND THE BRIDE MAY WASH THEIR FACES. According to whom is our Mishnah? According to R. Hananiah b. Tradion. For it was taught: [Even] the king and the bride may not wash their faces. R. Hananiah b. Tradion said in the name of R. Eliezer: The king and the bride may wash their faces. The woman after childbirth may not put on a sandal. R. Hananiah b. Tradion said in the name of R. Eliezer: A woman after childbirth may put on a sandal. Why [may] a king [wash his face]?—Because Scripture said: Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty.¹³ Why [may] a bride [wash her face]? — Lest she become unattractive to her husband. Rab said to R. Hiyya: How long [does] a bride [enjoy this privilege]? He replied: As it was taught: One must not withhold her adornment from the bride during the full thirty days [after the wedding].¹⁴ The woman after childbirth may put on shoes to avoid a cold. Samuel said: If there is danger of a scorpion it is permitted [for all to wear shoes].

ONE WHO EATS AS MUCH AS THE BULK OF A BIG DATE. R. Papa asked:

(1) V. Ta'an. 12b.

(2) [Probably Nawa in the Golan Province (Transjordan). V. Klein JQR (NS) II, 550ff]

(3) Shab. 65b. It is assumed at present that although the artificial leg is not considered a shoe, it is yet forbidden to walk out with it on the Day of Atonement. Hence sandals of bamboo should also be forbidden on that day.

(4) V. loc. cit.

(5) The minimum constituting a transgression of the prohibition to carry anything in a public thoroughfare. No minimum is necessary for transferring an object from a private to public thoroughfare and vice versa.

(6) Prohibited in our Mishnah on the Day of Atonement.

(7) As wearing shoes.

(8) As washing and anointing.

(9) V. Kid. 31b.

(10) A preserve consisting of sour milk, bread-crusts and salt.

(11) The breaking of the glass is not a concession to their youthful fury, but an excellent outlet for emotional surplus energies, cheaper than anything else on which they might wreak themselves.

(12) V. Kid. 31b.

(13) Isa. XXXIII, 17.

(14) The bride or young matron retains her privilege for thirty days, even if she becomes a mourner after father or mother, her ornaments would be left to her (v. Keth. 4a). Similar consideration is lawful for the weak mother after childbirth, and for any person in danger of contracting a disease. Hence the 'menace of a scorpion' applies to all, even healthy persons.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 79a

Does the [size of] the date spoken of include the kernel or does it not?¹ R. Ashi asked: Does 'a bone as big as a barley-corn' include the husk or does it not?² [Is the reference to] a moist one or to a dry one? — R. Ashi did not ask the question posed by R. Papa: For 'a big date' was said, which means a date in its complete size.³ R. Papa did not ask the question propounded by R. Ashi, because a moist one would be called 'shibolet' and one without its husk 'ushla'.⁴

Rabbah said in the name of Rab Judah: The big date spoken of is bigger than an egg, and our Rabbis had established the fact that with such a quantity [a hungry person] becomes satisfied,⁵ but with less than that he does not become satisfied.

An objection was raised: Once they brought to R. Johanan b. Zakkai a dish to taste and to Rabban Gamaliel two dates and a bucket of water, whereupon they said: Take them up to the Sukkah.⁶ (In connection therewith it was taught:)⁷ [They ordered so], not because that was the legal decision, but because they desired to take a severer view for themselves. And⁸ when someone gave R. Zadok a piece of food smaller than an egg, he would take it with a towel, eat it outside the Sukkah, and pronounce no blessing after it.⁹

(1) The Mishnaic text 'kamoha u-kegarinatha' may mean either, date and its kernel; or, date or its kernel (Rashi). Cf. Ex. XXI, 6 where the word 'o' also means 'either' and/or 'or'. V. Mecklenburg, ha-kethab we-hakabbalah a.l. [The question is nevertheless not clear. Var. lec., however, read: Does the size of the date (spoken of) with its kernel (refer to) a dry or moist one, v. D. S. a. l. Cf. the next question].

(2) Ber. 41a. The reference is to a bone as small as a barley-corn, of a corpse which renders him who touches it ritually unclean.

(3) I.e., including the kernel.

(4) And not 'se'orah'.

(5) Comes to himself.

(6) This happened on a Sukkoth day, when meals are to be taken in the booth (sukkah).

(7) The bracketed portion is omitted in some texts.

(8) Hul. 107a.

(9) R. Zadok showed a less severe attitude in three things: (a) He did not wash his hands but would take the food with a towel — only because of his fastidiousness. (b) He ate it outside the Sukkah. (c) He did not pronounce the customary blessing after it (Rashi).

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 79b

This [implies that] if it were as big as an egg it would require [to be eaten] in the Sukkah, and if the thought should occur to you that the big date referred to is larger in size than an egg — now if two dates¹ without kernels are not even as large as one egg, how could a large date with its kernel be bigger in size than an egg? — R. Jeremiah said: Yes, two dates without their kernel are not as large as an egg, but a large date with its kernel is bigger than an egg. R. Papa said: Therefore do people say: Two kabs of dates contain as much as one kab of kernels, with a bit left over.² Raba said: The reason there was that they were fruits, and fruits do not require [to be eaten in] a Sukkah.³ An objection was raised: Rabbi said, ‘When we were studying the Torah with R. Eleazar b. Shammua,’ figs and wine-berries were brought before us and we ate them outside the Sukkah as an incidental meal’. That means only as an incidental meal [is it permitted to eat fruit] outside the Sukkah, but as a proper meal not?⁴ — Say: ‘We ate them as [if we had partaken of] an incidental meal outside the Sukkah’.⁵ Or, if you like say: ‘We ate them for a regular meal and we ate bread with them outside the Sukkah [in a quantity small enough to be considered only for] an incidental meal’. Shall we say that the following supports his view: ‘Therefore if he made up the number [of meals] by means of delicacies, he has done his duty’.⁶ Now if you should think that fruits must be eaten in the Sukkah, he should have stated ‘fruits’ [instead of ‘delicacies’]? What does he mean by ‘delicacies’? ‘Fruits’. Or, if you like, say: [The reference is to] a place wherein fruits are not to be found.

R. Zebid said: The big date whereof they spoke is smaller in size than an egg, for we learned: Beth Shammai say: ‘Of leaven as much as an olive, or leavened bread as much as a date’.⁷ And thereon we were debating; what is the reason of Beth Shammai? [And were given this]: Let the Divine Law write about hamez [leavened bread] alone, without needing a reference to leaven, and I would say: If the eating of an olive-size of hamez the leaven whereof is not so intensive is forbidden, how much more is such size forbidden in the case of leaven which is so much more leaven! But since the Divine Law nevertheless mentioned them separately, it teaches you that the minimum size of the one is not the same as of the other, viz., in the case of leaven it is that of an olive, in the case of hamez that of a date. Now if you should think that the big date mentioned is bigger than an egg, since Beth Shammai are looking for a quantity bigger than an olive, let them teach that of an egg; and even if the two be of the same size let them teach ‘that of an egg’. Hence one must infer therefrom that the date spoken of is smaller than an egg! How does that follow? In truth I may say to you, perhaps, that the big date referred to is bigger than an egg, but the normal one is as big as an egg, and (even though they be of the same size)⁸ Beth Shammai just mentions one of the two! Rather, may one infer it⁹ from here: ‘How much must one have eaten to be obliged to make an appointment for common [saying of] grace [after meals]? The size of an olive, according to R. Meir. According to R. Judah: The size of an egg’.¹⁰ [And in connection therewith it was said:] Wherein are they differing? R. Meir holds: And thou shalt eat,¹¹ refers to eating. ‘And be satisfied’,¹¹ refers to drinking. And the minimum of ‘eating’ is the size of an olive whereas R. Judah holds: ‘And thou shalt eat and be satisfied’, i.e., an eating which brings satisfaction, and that is [at least as much] as an egg. And if you should think that the big date referred to is bigger than an egg — how if the quantity of an egg even satisfied one, would it not help one to come to? Thence the inference is proper that the big date referred to is smaller than an egg: the quantity of an egg will satisfy one, the size of a big date will help one to come to. It was taught: Rabbi says,

(1) Which R. Gamaliel had eaten in the Sukkah and in connection with which it was stated ‘not that the law required it’, which means they were less than the legal minimum — one egg.

(2) Because the kernels are larger in bulk than the dates.

(3) The argument from the Sukkah is misleading, because fruits, no matter what their quantity, are not required to be eaten in the Sukkah.

(4) Which would signify, as against R. Papa, that fruits in proper quantity would have to be eaten in the Sukkah.

(5) Because they were fruits, no matter how many of them, they would be considered a mere incidental meal, permissible to be had outside the Sukkah.

(6) V. Suk. 28a. R. Eliezer holds fourteen to be the required minimum number of meals that must be taken in the Sukkah during the feast of Tabernacles. If someone now made up the number of prescribed meals by means of delicacies etc.

(7) The minimum, the possession of which during Passover causes one to transgress the prohibition. Ex. XII, 19: Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses, and XIII, 7: And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee, neither shall there be leaven seen with thee, in all thy borders. V. Bez. 2a.

(8) [The bracketed words are best left out with var. lec.].

(9) That the big date spoken of is less than an egg.

(10) Ber. 45a.

(11) Deut. VIII, 10.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 80a

All the legal standards [for foods] are the size of an olive, with the exception of that of the ritual defilement of foods, because there Scripture has used a different expression and the Sages accordingly have altered the standard. The proof for this view is furnished by the Day of Atonement.¹ What is the change in the usual expression in connection therewith? — [It follows] from: [For whatsoever soul it be that] shall not be afflicted.² And what is the change in the usual quantity the Sages have decreed here? — ‘As much as a date’. And what constitutes the proof from the Day of Atonement?³ One could have replied: Here it is the usual Scriptural expression.⁴

Whence do we know that the minimum for the ritual uncleanness of foods is the size of an egg? — Said R. Abbahu in the name of R. Eleazar: Scripture says, All food therein which may be eaten,⁵ i.e., food⁶ derived from food, and that is an egg of a hen. But say it is a kid? That still requires slaughtering.⁷ But say it is an animal taken alive out of the slaughtered mother's womb?⁸ — That still requires cutting open.⁹ Then say: the egg of bar-yokani?¹⁰ — If you take hold of too large a thing, you may lose your hold, but if you take hold of the lesser thing, you will retain your hold.¹¹ But say: the egg of a little bird, that is very small? — R. Abbahu said in his own name: ‘All food there in which may be eaten’, i.e., food which you may eat in one swallowing; and the Sages measured that the esophagus cannot hold more than the size of a hen's egg.

R. Eleazar said: If one has eaten tallow in these times,¹² he must put down [make a note of] the quantity, because another Rabbinical Court may come and increase the measures.¹³ What does increase the measures mean? Would say you that they would declare one obliged to bring a sin-offering for having eaten the size of a small olive, but it was taught: When a ruler sinneth, and doeth through error any one of all the things [which the Lord his God hath commanded] not to be done, and is guilty.¹⁴ i.e., only he who repents when he finds out his transgression must bring a sacrifice, because of his error, but he who does not repent when he finds out his transgression, does not bring a sacrifice for his error.¹⁵ Rather, therefore, must [‘increase the measures’] signify that they would declare a sacrifice obligatory only when he had eaten a quantity as large as a large olive. But according to the first view, viz., that they could impose a sacrifice even for the quantity of a small olive, what does ‘increase the measure’ mean? — It might mean increase the number of sacrifices’ required because of the reduced minimum of the quantities. R. Johanan said: Standard measures and penalties are fixed by laws [communicated] to Moses on Sinai. But the penalties are written out in Scripture? — Rather: The minimum required for penalties is fixed by laws [communicated] to Moses on Sinai. It was also taught thus: The minima required for penalties are fixed by laws [communicated] to Moses on Sinai. Others say: The Court of Jabetz¹⁶ fixed them. But Scripture said: These are the commandments,¹⁷ which means that no prophet is permitted to introduce any new law from then on? — Rather: They were forgotten and then they established them anew.

OR IF HE DRANK A MOUTHFUL. Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: Not really a mouthful, but so much that if he moves it to one side it looks like a mouthful. But we learned: A MOUTHFUL. — Say: ‘As much as A MOUTHFUL’!

An objection was raised: ‘How much must one have drunk to become culpable? Beth Shammai say: One fourth [of a log], Beth Hillel say: One mouthful. R. Judah in the name of R. Eliezer says: As much as a mouthful. R. Judah b. Bathyra says: As much as can be swallowed at a time! Is this one better than our Mishnah which we explained as meaning: ‘That it look like a mouthful’, and this, too, we can explain: That it look like a mouthful. But if so, it is the same opinion as that of R. Eliezer? — There is a difference in the case of an exact mouthful.¹⁸

R. Hoshaiah demurred to this: If so, there would be a [another] case in which Beth Shammai took the more lenient view, and Beth Hillel the severer one?¹⁹ — He replied to him:

- (1) Where a change in expression on the part of the Bible involved a change in the fixed minimum standard.
- (2) Lev. XXIII, 29. The usual expression would be: Whosoever eateth on the day. The Rabbis, then, would have applied the normal measure, the olive, the legal minimum with every forbidden food.
- (3) There seems to be no difference between the law touching ritual impurity of foods and that covering the prohibition of food on the Day of Atonement. In both cases change in expression is responsible for change in measure. Wherein, then, lies the reason for the Day of Atonement text being chosen as a proof?
- (4) In the text relating to the uncleanness of foods the expression 'All foods therein which may be eaten' (which is the change in the usual expression alluded to, v. infra) would not appear an unusual expression. But 'that shall not be afflicted' for 'that shall eat' is indeed, unusual and thus accounts best for the change in measure determined by the Rabbis.
- (5) Lev. XI, 34.
- (6) Interpreted: that (coming) from food, which is also eatable.
- (7) Before it can be designated food.
- (8) Lit., 'the young one of an animal which is ripped open'. Such a young animal, where the mother in whose womb it still was, was slaughtered in accord with the rite, is considered ready food, since it does not require ritual slaughtering.
- (9) It is not considered ready food since it requires not, indeed, the ritual slaughter, but cutting open and removal of the blood.
- (10) A bird of fabulous size, the eggs of which are very large, v. Bek. 57b.
- (11) A proverb: v. R.H. 4b. In the case of two possible interpretations, always choose the smaller as the more likely one.
- (12) I.e., when the Temple is no longer in existence.
- (13) R. Eleazar suggested that if the Sanctuary be rebuilt in his days and a new Rabbinical Court were in session, they might render such decision. Hence one who is conscious of having eaten tallow may well take the precaution of putting down the exact quantity so as to be sure that his transgression does, or does not, involve the obligation of a sin-offering, in accord with the new enactment of the revived court.
- (14) Lev. IV, 22.
- (15) As he became conscious of his transgression, the new enactment was still unknown, the quantity of a small olive to him, hence, was below the minimum required for a transgression to be constituted, hence he has not 'found out his transgression', and is not required to offer up a sacrifice in atonement of his sin.
- (16) Identified with Othniel, the son of Kenaz; after the death of Moses he revived the forgotten portions of the law, v. Tem. 16a.
- (17) Lev. XXVII, 34: These are the laws, i.e., no others may ever be offered.
- (18) According to the Hillelites who insist: a mouthful, it is enough if it looks like a generous mouthful when moved to one cheek; according to R. Eliezer the appearance of an exact mouthful is required.
- (19) In the fourth chapter of 'Ed. all cases are enumerated in which, as against the usual norm, Beth Shammai take the more lenient, and Beth Hillel the more severe, view. If our text were right it should have been enumerated as an additional exception, because here too the usual attitudes of these two conflicting schools of learning are reversed, since Beth Hillel make him liable for what appears like a mouthful, which is less than the minimum required by Beth Shammai.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 80b

When this came up for discussion, it came up in connection with 'Og, king of Bashan',¹ so that Beth Shammai will be found to take the severer view. — R. Zera asked a strong question: To what difference is it due that, with regard to eating, the minimum of a date was fixed for every one, whereas in the case of drinking each has [his minimum] in accord with his own [mouthful]? — Abaye replied to him: Regarding² food the Rabbis established that with [the quantity of] a date a person may come to, but with a smaller quantity he will not come to; but with regard to drinking [they have found] that a man will come to with the quantity of his own [mouthful], but not with less than that. — R. Zera then asked another strong question: ‘All the world’ with a date and Og, the king of Bashan, also with a date? — Abaye replied: The Rabbis have ascertained that [touching food] the quantity [of a date] helps one to come to, but with a smaller quantity he will not come to; but, whereas all the world [can come to] more so, Og, king of Bashan, [only] somewhat so. R. Zera again asked another strong question: Fat meat in the quantity of one date and wine-branches also in the quantity of one date? — Abaye replied: The Rabbis have ascertained that one comes to with so much, but not with less; with [this quantity of] fat meat one becomes, however, more satisfied, whilst with the same quantity of wine-branches one becomes less so. Raba asked a strong question: The quantity of an olive, during the time one could eat a peras,³ — and the quantity of a date during the time required for eating a peras!⁴ — Abaye replied: The Rabbis have ascertained that if it [the eating of the quantity of a date] takes so long [as one could eat a peras] a person will come to, but if longer he will not come to. Raba asked another strong question: The quantity of a date, during the time required for the eating of a peras, and half a peras during the time required for the eating of a peras?⁵ — R. Papa answered: Leave alone the uncleanness of the body, which is not determined by Biblical law.⁶ But could R. Papa have answered thus? Is it not written: Neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby.⁷ and R. Papa said that from here is derived the Biblical origin of the [laws concerning] the body's becoming defiled [through unclean foods]? — It is really Rabbinical, and Scripture is quoted only as mere [mnemotechnical] aid.⁸

ALL FOODS COMPLEMENT ONE ANOTHER IN MAKING UP THE BULK OF A DATE. R. Papa said: If one ate a piece of raw meat with salt, they are joined;⁹ and although [salt] in itself is no food, since people eat [the two] together, they are joined. Resh Lakish said: The juice on the green [vegetables] joins so as to make up [with the vegetable] the [quantity of a] date in connection with the Day of Atonement. But that is self-evident? You might have said: It is drink,¹⁰ therefore he informs us that whatever is used for seasoning food is considered as food. Resh Lakish said: If one eats an excessive meal on the Day of Atonement, he is free from punishment. Why? Scripture said: That shall not be afflicted,¹¹ and that excludes whatever causes harm.¹² R. Jeremiah said in the name of Resh Lakish: If a non-priest eats excessively of terumah,¹³ he need pay but the principal, but not the [fine of the] additional fifth, for Scripture says: And if a man eat,¹⁴ which excluded one causing harm.¹⁵ R. Jeremiah said in the name of R. Johanan: A non-priest

(1) I.e., this teaching refers to the case of men as gigantic as Og, king of Bashan (Ber. 54b); in such cases Beth Shammai will be found to have taken, as usual, the severer view. For according to that school the minimum incurring penalty for any man is a fourth of a log, whereas according to the Hillelites it is for each according to his mouthful. According to Beth Shammai, therefore, an ‘Og, king of Bashan’ would become culpable on drinking, what to him would be less than a drop, whereas according to Beth Hillel he would incur penalty only when drinking the generous measure of his own mouthful.

(2) Corrected according to Bah.

(3) Peras, lit., ‘a piece (of bread)’ is in the Tosef. Neg. VII, 10 defined as half a loaf, three of which make a kab. The time it takes to eat such a quantity is the maximum within which morsels of food smaller than the minimum measure are considered to join in order to make up the minimum incurring penalty.

(4) Ought not a longer period to be allowed for the quantity of a date?

(5) If one has eaten half a peras of ritually unclean food during the time it takes to eat a peras of food, one is considered unclean and may not partake of sacred foods. Half a peras is (‘Er. 83a) as two ‘friendly’ (generous sized) eggs, equal in size to three ordinary eggs.

(6) And consequently is not governed by such strict standards.

(7) Lev. XI, 43.

(8) As far as Biblical law is concerned, a person could become defiled by food only by swallowing the meat of a ritually clean fowl that has died a natural death. The reference to this verse is used by R. Papa only to lend support to the more severe rabbinic law.

(9) To make up together the legally required minimum of the big date.

(10) And, according to the Mishnah, foods and drinks do not combine to make up the required minimum.

(11) Lev. XXIII, 29.

(12) The man causes harm to himself by excessive eating and thus is also afflicting himself, or at least not enjoying himself. Rashi suggests that since Jews eat lavishly on the eve of the Day of Atonement, a meal taken immediately thereupon, i.e. after the incidence of the fast, would constitute excessive eating.

(13) V. Glos.

(14) Lev, XXII, 14.

(15) The offence here was committed in error, whence the capital and the fifth as fine is to be repaid by the offender. Such fine would be dispensed with in case this food was taken as an excessive meal, where the eating is but sheer waste of the terumah.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 81a

who chews¹ barley-corns of terumah must pay the principal, but not the additional fifth, for Scripture said: 'If a man eat', that excludes one causing harm. R. Shezbi said in the name of R. Johanan: If a non-priest swallowed jujubes of terumah, and spat them out, and another one ate them, then the first pays the principal, and the fifth, whereas the second does not pay more than their wood [fuel] value.²

BUT WHAT A MAN EATS AND DRINKS DOES NOT GO TOGETHER. Who is the Tanna [of this part of the Mishnah]? — R. Hisda said: This has been taught under a controversy of opinion, and it is in accord with R. Joshua, for we learned: R. Joshua pronounced with principle: All foods are equal regarding the [duration of] their uncleanness and the quantity of them [required to convey uncleanness] combine; if they be equal only concerning the [duration of] their uncleanness, but not concerning the quantity of them [required to convey uncleanness]; or only regarding quantity, but not in the duration of uncleanness; or if they be equal neither in respect of [duration of] uncleanness nor quantity, they do not combine [to make up the minimum quantity which constitutes the transgression].³ R. Nahman said: You may even say that [this part of our Mishnah is] in accord with the Rabbis. For the Rabbis [opposing R. Joshua] hold their view only touching uncleanness, because all are designated as 'uncleanness', but here the point involved is 'coming to', and this⁴ does not enable one to come to. Thus also did Resh Lakish say: This has been taught under the controversy of an opinion and our Mishnah is in accord with R. Joshua, for we were taught: R. Joshua pronounced a principle etc. but R. Johanan said: You may even say that our Mishnah is in accord with the Rabbis: There the Rabbis present their view only in connection with uncleanness, but here 'coming to' is the point, and this⁴ does not enable one to come to.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN ATE AND DRANK IN ONE STATE OF UNAWARENESS, HE IS NOT OBLIGED TO BRING MORE THAN ONE⁵ SIN-OFFERING, BUT IF HE ATE AND PERFORMED LABOUR WHILE IN ONE STATE OF UNAWARENESS HE⁶ MUST OFFER UP TWO SIN-OFFERINGS. IF HE ATE FOODS UNFIT FOR FOOD, OR DRANK LIQUIDS UNFIT FOR DRINKING, OR DRANK BRINE OR FISH-BRINE, HE IS NOT CULPABLE.

GEMARA. Resh Lakish said: Why is no explicit warning⁷ mentioned in connection with the commandment to afflict oneself? — Because it is impossible. For how shall the Divine Law word it? Were the Divine Law to write: 'He shall not eat'? But 'eating' implies [the minimum size of] an olive.⁸ Shall the Divine Law write: 'He shall not afflict himself'?⁹ That would mean: Go and eat! — R. Hoshaiah asked a strong question: Let the Divine Law write: 'Take heed, lest thou dost not afflict thyself'! — That would mean several prohibitions.¹⁰ To this R. Bibi b. Abaye demurred: Let the Divine Law write: Take heed concerning the commandment of affliction! 'Take heed' implies a command, if attached to a command, and a prohibition, if attached to a prohibition.¹¹ R. Ashi asked a strong question: Let the Divine Law write: Do not depart from affliction! — This is a difficulty.

The following Tanna derives it [the prohibition relating to affliction] from here: And ye shall afflict your souls: ye shall do no manner of work.¹² One might have assumed that the punishment¹³

[of extirpation] is involved for one who disregarded the addition¹⁴ by doing a labour, therefore Scripture said: For whatsoever soul it be that doeth any manner of work in that same day he shall be cut off,¹⁵ i.e., only for the [disregard of] that day itself is one punished with extirpation, but for labour performed during the additional time one is not punished with extirpation. One might have assumed that one does not incur punishment of extirpation by doing labour during the additional time, but that one does incur punishment of extirpation for failure to afflict oneself during the additional time, therefore the text reads: For whatsoever soul it be that shall not be afflicted in that same day he shall be cut off;¹⁶ that means for [failure of] afflicting [oneself on] the day itself does the penalty of extirpation come, but the penalty of extirpation does not result from failure to afflict oneself during the additional time. One might have assumed that one is not included in the penalty, but that one is under a warning against performing work during the additional time, therefore the text reads: And ye shall do no manner of work in that same day,¹⁷ i.e., one is warned concerning the day itself but not concerning [work done] during the additional time. One might have assumed that one is not under a warning concerning labour performed during the additional time, but one is under a warning concerning [failure of] affliction during the additional time; but a logical inference cancels that. For if in the case of labour, the prohibition of which applies on Sabbath and festival days, one is not under a warning [concerning additional time] then with regard to [the commandment of] affliction, which does not apply on Sabbath and festival days, how much more should one not be under a warning against it [during the additional time]! But we have not learnt [so far] of any explicit warning with regard to the [obligation to] affliction on the day itself, whence then do we derive [that required 'warning']? [From the following]: There was no necessity for stating the penalty resulting from the performance of labour, for that is inferable from the [commandment of] affliction. If [for failure of] affliction, which is not commanded on the Sabbath and festival days, one is punished with extirpation, then for the performance of labour [the prohibition of] which does apply on Sabbath and festival days, how much more shall [one be punished with extirpation]! Why then was [the penalty] stated? It is free¹⁸ for interpretation, hence it serves for comparison, to derive thence an inference from analogy of expression: the penalty is stated in connection with [the commandment of] affliction, and the penalty is stated in connection with the [prohibition of] labour, hence just as the performance of labour was punished only after warning,¹⁹ so also is [failure of] affliction punished only after warning. But against this it may be objected:²⁰ The specific condition with affliction [which attaches a penalty to it] lies in the fact that no exception against the general rule was made here; but would you apply [the same] to the performance of labour seeing that in its case exceptions from the general rule were made?²¹ Rather [argue thus]: Let Scripture not mention any penalty in connection with [failure of] affliction, inferring it from the [prohibition of] labour. If [the performance of] labour, from the general prohibition of which some exceptions were made, involves the penalty of extirpation, how much more must [failure of] affliction, from the general prohibition of which no exception was made, involve such penalty? Then why does Scripture mention it? It is free for interpretation, hence it serves for comparison, to derive thence an inference from analogy of expression: the penalty is mentioned in connection with [failure of] affliction, and the same penalty is mentioned in connection with [the performance of] labour, hence just as [performance of] labour is punished only after warning, so is [the failure of] affliction punished only after warning. Against this may be objected: There is a specific condition in connection with labour [to which a penalty is attached] in that it is forbidden on Sabbath and festival days, but would you apply the same to [the commandment of] affliction seeing that does not apply on Sabbath and festival days? Rabina said: This Tanna infers it from the word 'self-same'.²² Now it must be free,²³ for if it were not free, the objection as above could be raised against it. Hence it indeed must be free.

[Consider] there are²⁴ five Scriptural verses written in connection with labour:²⁵ one indicating the prohibition for the day, one the prohibition for the night, one the warning for the day, one the warning for the night, one remains free for inference from [the prohibition of] labour for [the commandment of] affliction, touching both day and night.

The School of R. Ishmael taught: Here the word 'affliction' is used and there the word 'affliction'²⁶ is used; hence just as there the penalty is incurred only after warning, so here too the penalty is incurred only after warning. R. Aha b. Jacob said: One can infer that from the phrase 'Shabbath Shabbathon' ['solemn day of rest']²⁷ which occurs in connection with the ordinary Sabbath,²⁸ and just as there penalty is incurred only after warning, so here too, penalty is incurred only after warning. R. Papa said:

- (1) 'Chewing' which is the term. techn. for irregular eating.
- (2) The first, having eaten them, must pay both principal and fine, a complete offence having been committed by him; but not the second, who ate something which could have been used only as fuel.
- (3) Two half olives from two corpses, or two pieces of the size each of one half of a lentil, coming from a dead creeping thing, share the duration of uncleanness and the minimum quantity; a creeping thing and the carcase of an animal that died a natural death, are alike with regard to duration of the uncleanness they cause (in each case up to the evening of the day), but differ as to the minimum quantity which causes defilement; the former has the standard of an olive, the latter that of a lentil. A human corpse and the carcase of an animal again are alike in the minimum required for defiling a person, viz., an olive, but are different with regard to the duration of the uncleanness caused: the former causing one lasting seven days, the latter one lasting up to the evening only; v. Me'il. 17a.
- (4) The quantity of a big date, composed of food and drink does not enable one to come to, whereas food alone of that quantity would. The only matter in connection with the minimum required on the Day of Atonement is that it enables one to come to, hence the Rabbis could agree here, whilst disputing R. Joshua in the matter of the combination of various unclean foods.
- (5) He did not know all the time that it was the Day of Atonement. Because whereas two offences took place, both belong to one head: eating includes drinking.
- (6) But eating and working are two different forms of activities prohibited on the Day of Atonement, derived from two Scriptural verses, Num. XXIX, 7 and Lev. XXIII, 29.
- (7) The usual form of which is: 'Thou shalt not'.
- (8) The usual minimum (to render one culpable of having eaten forbidden food) is the quantity of an olive. Had the Torah therefore used the phrase 'He shall not eat', the inference would have been that one who ate the quantity of an olive had thereby transgressed the law; whereas the quantity on the Day of Atonement is dependent on one's coming to, which is the result of having eaten as much as the size of a big date.
- (9) The form would be negative, but the meaning just the opposite of what is required!
- (10) 'Take heed' and 'lest' are phrases each implying a separate negative command, v. 'Er. 96a.
- (11) Deut. XXIV, 8: 'Take heed in the plague of leprosy' implies the prohibition of cutting off the bright spot (Lev. XIII, 2) whereas 'Take heed that you do a certain thing', i.e., not neglect it, has affirmative exhortatory meaning. The phrase here would therefore imply a positive command.
- (12) Num. XXIX, 7.
- (13) Reading with Bah.
- (14) The prohibitions and positive commandments in connection with the Day of Atonement become valid some time before the actual commencement of the day — before the night of the tenth of Tishri, and extend for some minutes after the end of the Day of Atonement — the night of the eleventh day. The validity for this additional time of the laws governing the Day of Atonement is Biblical, v. infra 81b.
- (15) Lev. XXIII, 30.
- (16) Lev. XXIII, 29.
- (17) Ibid. v. 28.
- (18) Lit., 'being free', or 'vacated', here unnecessary for the context, hence available for hermeneutical purposes.
- (19) Lev. XXIII, 28.
- (20) The comparison is superficial, because in spite of similarity of expression, basic difference of prevailing conditions render the comparison unjustified, and but for an explicit statement of penalty in the case of 'labour' one would not be able to derive it from 'affliction'.
- (21) None is exempted from the affliction, whereas as regards labour the priests in the Sanctuary were permitted to perform all work in connection with the ceremonial of the Day of Atonement.
- (22) This word occurs both with the prohibition of labour in Lev. XXIII, 30 and with the commandment of affliction in

v. 29 ibid., hence appears available for inference from analogy of expression.

(23) V. p. 397. n. 3.

(24) So Bah.

(25) Lev. XVI, 29; XXIII, 28, 29, 30 and Num. XXIX, 7.

(26) In connection with the rape of a betrothed maiden, Deut. XXII, 24.

(27) Lev. XXIII, 32.

(28) Lit., 'with the Sabbath of creation', i.e., the Sabbath, the observance of which is due to the first Sabbath, a tech. term. for any ordinary seventh day Sabbath, as against other days of rest, viz., the Holy Days.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 81b

This day itself is also called Sabbath, for Scripture said: [In the ninth day of the month, from even to even], shall ye keep your Sabbath. R. Papa did not [well] interpret as R. Aha b. Jacob, because it is preferable to use a Scriptural text mentioned in connection with the subject itself. But why did not R. Aha b. Jacob expound as R. Papa did? — That¹ is necessary for the following teaching: And ye shall afflict your souls, in the ninth day of the month. One might have assumed that such affliction commences on the ninth of the month already. Therefore the text reads: 'At even'. If from 'at even', one might have inferred that one must afflict oneself only after it gets dark, therefore the text reads: 'In the ninth'. How is [this to be explained]? He should commence to afflict himself whilst it is yet day. From here we learn that we add from the profane time to the sacred one. Thus I know it only at its beginning. Whence do I know it at its end? Therefore Scripture said: 'From even unto even'. Thus I know it only for the Days of Atonement, whence do I learn the same for the Sabbath days? Therefore the text reads: 'Your Sabbath'. How is that? Wherever the word 'shebuth' [rest] is mentioned, we add from the profane time to the sacred one.

How does the Tanna who infers from the word-analogy of 'self-same',² 'self-same' interpret the words: 'In the ninth of the month'? — He uses it in accord with what Hiyya, the son of Rab, of Difti taught, for Hiyya, the son of Rab, of Difti learned: 'And you shall afflict your souls in the ninth [day of the month]'. But is one fasting on the ninth? Do we not fast on the tenth? Rather, it comes to indicate that, if one eats and drinks on the ninth, Scripture accounts it to him as if he had fasted on the ninth and the tenth.³

IF HE ATE FOODS UNFIT FOR FOOD. Raba said: If one chewed pepper on the Day of Atonement, he is not culpable. If one chewed ginger on the Day of Atonement, he is not culpable. An objection was raised: R. Meir used to say: By mere implication from the text: Then you shall count the fruit thereof as forbidden.⁴ I could understand that fruit trees are meant. Why then does Scripture say: 'trees for food'? It means a tree the taste of whose wood and fruit are alike. Say: This is pepper. That teaches you that the plant of pepper is subject to the law of 'orlah',⁵ and that the land of Israel lacks nothing, as it is said: Thou shalt not lack anything in it.⁶ — That is no difficulty; The one case deals with green pepper, the other with dry pepper.⁶ Rabina said to Meremar: But R. Nahman has said that preserved ginger coming from India is permitted,⁷ and the blessing . . . Who createst the fruit of the ground' is obligatory [before eating it].⁷ — This is no difficulty: The one case deals with fresh one, the other with dry one.

Our Rabbis have taught: If one ate the leaves of calamus, he is culpable. If he ate the leaves of vine, he is culpable. What vines are meant here? — R. Isaac of Magdala said: Such as sprouted forth between New Year and the Day of Atonement.⁸ R. Kahana said: During the first thirty days,⁹ it was taught in accord with R. Isaac of Magdala: If one ate the leaves of calamus, he is not culpable. If he ate the leaves of vines, he is culpable. The vines meant here are those that sprouted forth between New Year and the Day of Atonement.

IF HE DRANK BRINE OR FISH-BRINE HE IS NOT CULPABLE. But [if he drank] vinegar, he is culpable — according to whom is our Mishnah? — According to Rabbi. For it was taught: Rabbi said, Vinegar restores the soul.¹⁰ R. Giddal b. Menasseh of Bari of Naresh¹¹ reported that the halachah is not in accord with Rabbi, whereupon in the following year all went forth to drink [on the Day of Atonement] vinegar [mixed with water]. When R. Giddal heard that he became angry and said: I spoke only of a de facto case, did I say at all that one may do so at the outset? I referred only to a small quantity, did I speak at all of a large one? I spoke only of raw vinegar, did I refer at all to [vinegar] mixed [with water]? [

(1) The Scriptural text adduced by R. Papa.

(2) Who infers the additional time from the words of the text, which are free for interpretation (v. supra). To him the words 'And ye shall afflict yourself on the ninth', which to us suggest the additional time, must convey a different meaning.

(3) The feasting on the ninth of Tishri helps to emphasize the solemnity and the self-affliction due on the morrow, indeed, starting at the eve of the same day. The more feasting on the eve of the Day of Atonement, the more pronounced the affliction on the day itself.

(4) Lev. XIX, 23.

(5) Which forbids for the first three years the fruit of trees, v. ibid.

(6) Deut. VIII, 9. Hence pepper is considered fruit, and as such should involve the eater thereof on the Day of Atonement in the penalty of extirpation, whereas Raba had taught that one who ate thereof is not culpable. R. Meir speaks of green pepper which can be eaten, hence subject to the law of 'orlah, whereas Raba speaks of dry pepper, which cannot be considered a food, hence one who has eaten thereof, in the best case has not partaken of eatables, in the worst case has harmed himself, in either case is not culpable.

(7) Preserved ginger therefore is considered a food. The blessing due emphasizes that it is considered such.

(8) But if they sprouted forth before the New Year, they are considered stale and 'even as wood', i.e., no food.

(9) The same principle, though in different terms.

(10) I.e., has the effect of satisfying one, of helping one to come to, on the Day of Atonement.

(11) I.e., Bari, which was near Naresh, north of Sura. V. Obermeyer, p.308.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 82a

MISHNAH. ONE SHOULD NOT AFFLICT¹ CHILDREN AT ALL ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT. BUT ONE TRAINS THEM A YEAR OR TWO BEFORE² IN ORDER THAT THEY BECOME USED TO RELIGIOUS OBSERVANCES.

GEMARA. Since [the Mishnah has taught already that] two years before [their attaining majority] they must be trained, is it necessary to state that one must do so a year before that time? R. Hisda said: This is no difficulty: the one refers to a healthy³ child, the other to a sickly one. R. Huna said: At the age of eight and nine years one trains them by hours,⁴ at the age of ten and eleven they must fast to the end of the day, by Rabbinic ordinance. At the age of twelve they must fast to the end of the day by Biblical law, [all this] referring to girls. R. Nahman said: At the age of nine and ten one trains them by hours, at the age of eleven and twelve they must fast to the end of the day by Rabbinic ordinance, at the age of thirteen they must fast to the end of the day by Biblical law, [all this] referring to boys. R. Johanan said: There is no Rabbinic ordinance about the obligation of children to fast to the end of the day. But, at the age of ten and eleven one trains them by hours, at the age of twelve they must fast to the end of the day by Biblical law.

We learned: ONE SHOULD NOT AFFLICT THE CHILDREN AT ALL ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT, BUT ONE TRAINS THEM A YEAR OR TWO BEFORE. That will be right according to R. Huna and R. Nahman: A YEAR OR TWO BEFORE [means] a year before, according to Rabbinic law, or two years before, according to Biblical law.⁵ But according to R. Johanan, there is a difficulty!⁶ R. Johanan will tell you: 'One or two years before means: before their reaching maturity.'⁷

Come and hear: For Rabbah b. Samuel taught: One does not afflict children on the Day of Atonement, but one trains them a year, or two, before their attaining maturity. That will be right according to R. Johanan, but according to R. Huna and R. Nahman this presents a difficulty. — [These] Rabbis will tell you: ‘Training’ here means ‘fasting to the end of the day’. But has ‘training’ the meaning of ‘fasting to the end of the day’? Was it not taught: What is training? If he was accustomed to eat at the second hour [eight o'clock],⁸ one feeds him now at the third hour [nine o'clock]; if he was accustomed to eat at the third hour, one feeds him now at the fourth.⁹ Raba b. ‘Ulla said, There are two kinds of training.¹⁰

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN WITH CHILD SMELT,¹¹ SHE MUST BE GIVEN TO EAT UNTIL SHE FEELS RESTORED. A SICK PERSON IS FED AT THE WORD OF EXPERTS.¹² AND IF NO EXPERTS ARE THERE, ONE FEEDS HIM AT HIS OWN WISH UNTIL HE SAYS: ENOUGH.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: If a woman with child smelt the flesh of holy flesh, or of pork, we put for her a reed into the juice and place it upon her mouth. If thereupon she feels that her craving has been satisfied, it is well. If not, one feeds her with the juice itself. If thereupon her craving is satisfied it is well; if not one feeds her with the fat meat itself, for there is nothing that can stand before [the duty of] saving life, with the exception of idolatry, incest¹³ and bloodshed [which are prohibited in all situations]. Whence do we know that about idolatry? For it was taught: R. Eliezer said: Since it is said, With all thy soul,¹⁴ why is it said: With all thy might?¹⁴ And since it is said: ‘With all thy might’, why is it said: ‘With all thy soul’? [It but comes to tell you that]¹⁵ if there be a man whose life is more cherished by him than his money, for him it is said: ‘With all thy soul’; and if there be a person to whom his money is dearer than his life, for him it is said: ‘With all thy might’.¹⁶ Whence do we know it about incest and bloodshed? — Because it was taught: Rabbi said, For as when a man rises against his neighbor, and slayeth him, even so is this matter.¹⁷ What matter do we infer for [the rape of] a betrothed maiden from a murderer? — Rather: What was meant to teach, learns itself.¹⁸ Just as in the case of a betrothed maiden it is lawful to save her at the expense of his [the would-be raper's] life, thus also in the case of a murderer. And just as in the case of [an order to] shed blood one should rather be killed oneself than transgress [the prohibition of murder], thus also in the case of a [command to rape a] betrothed maiden, one should rather be killed than transgress [the prohibition of violating her].

(1) To make them fast, to deny them food. Concerning other afflictions, v. supra 78b.

(2) The connotation of this is discussed in the Gemara.

(3) With a healthy child the training may be started at an earlier year than with a sick or sickly one.

(4) Extending the hours of fasting from one hour to another.

(5) So Rashi, v. Bah; v. next note. Cur. edd. according to rabbinic law. On interpretation of this reading v. Wilna Gaon, Glosses.

(6) Whereas R. Huna and R. Nahman could explain ‘BEFORE’ as meaning ‘before they are obliged by Rabbinic law’ to fast to the end of the day. R. Johanan holds there is no Rabbinic ordinance compelling children to fast to the end of the day, and would be unable to account for this text.

(7) His answer is simple; ‘before’ means ‘before maturity’, when yet the obligation to fast to the end of the day does not apply.

(8) According to the Jewish calculation for ritual purposes, every day, summer and winter, has twelve hours, every night twelve hours. The hours, however, vary in duration. In December an hour may consist of forty minutes, in June of ninety minutes. In Tishri (usually September) an hour would have about sixty minutes. The first hour of the day would be from six to seven, the second from seven to eight. ‘At the second hour’ would thus correspond to ‘about eight o'clock’.

(9) This indicates, at any rate, that ‘training’ means ‘training by the extension of hours’, not ‘fasting to the end of the day’.

(10) Raba replies that the term ‘training’ is being used in both senses.

(11) Smelt a dish on the Day of Atonement and has a morbid desire for it.

(12) Physicians.

(13) Including adultery.

(14) Deut. VI, 5. The word 'meod', usually translated as 'might', is here interpreted as 'economic might', money.

(15) Life is more important than 'money' or 'might'. Why then the mention of both? If one is commanded to love the Lord even with all one's soul, viz., so that one would surrender life in the service of Him, it is self-evident and therefore superfluous to mention the obligation to love Him with all one's money, viz., to be willing to surrender one's possessions to Him.

(16) Scripture takes account of people's idiosyncrasies, the Lord, Who gave the Torah to Moses, knoweth the heart of man.

(17) Deut. XXII, 26 referring to the rape of a betrothed maiden.

(18) Lit., 'Behold this one comes to teach and turns out a learner'. This passage is intended to throw light on another one, whereas it receives light therefrom.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 82b

Rut whence do we know that this principle applies in the case of a murder? — This is reasonable. For there was a man who came before Raba and said to him: The lord of my village told me: Kill so-and-so, and if you will not, I shall kill you! — He [Raba] answered: Let him kill you, but do not kill! What makes you see that your blood is redder than his? Perhaps the blood of that man is redder than yours?¹

There was a woman with child who had smelt [a dish]. People came before Rabbi [questioning him what should be done]. He said to them: Go and whisper to her that it is the Day of Atonement. They whispered to her and she accepted the whispered suggestion, whereupon he [Rabbi] cited about her the verse: Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee.² From her came forth R. Johanan. [Again] there was a woman with child who smelt [a dish]. The people came to R. Hanina, who said to them: Whisper to her [that it is the Day of Atonement]. She did not accept the whispered suggestion. He cited with regard to her:

(1) The Lord wants you to save your own life, because the life of any one of His children is clear to Him. But your neighbour's life is as clear to Him as your own; and no blood is 'redder than the other'. Hence you must not kill someone else, in order to save life. But if someone comes to murder you, self-defence is not only permissible, but mandatory.

(2) Jer. I, 5.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 83a

The wicked are estranged from the womb.¹ From her came forth Shabbatai, the hoarder of provisions² [for speculation].

A SICK PERSON IS FED AT THE WORD OF EXPERTS. R. Jannai said: If the patient says, I need [food], whilst the physician says: He does not need it, we hearken to the patient. What is the reason? The heart knoweth its own bitterness.³ But that is self-evident? You might have said: The physician's knowledge is more established; therefore the information [that we prefer the patient's opinion]. If the physician says: He needs it, whilst the patient says that he does not need it, we listen to the physician. Why? Stupor seized him.⁴

We learned: A SICK PERSON IS FED AT THE WORD OF EXPERTS. [That implies]: Only upon the order of experts, but not upon his own order? [Further it implies]: Only upon the order of 'experts,' but not upon the order of a single expert?⁵ — This refers to the case that he says: I do not need it. But one should feed him upon the order of one expert? — This refers to the case when someone else is present who agrees that he does not need it. [If so, wherefore state that he] is FED

AT THE WORD OF EXPERTS. Surely that is self-evident, for it is a possibility of danger to human life and ‘in the case of the possibility of danger to human life we take a more lenient view’!⁶ — It refers to a case in which two more people are present who say that he does not need it.⁷ And although R. Safra said that ‘Two are as a hundred and a hundred are as two’⁸ applies only to witnesses, but with regard to opinion we go according to the number of opinions, all that applies only to opinions concerning money matters, but here it is a case where there is a possibility of danger to human life. But since in the second part [of the Mishnah] it states: AND IF NO EXPERTS ARE THERE, ONE FEEDS HIM AT HIS OWN WISH, it is to be inferred that in the first part we deal with the case that he said he needed it? There is something missing [in the Mishnah] and this is how it reads: These things are said only for the case that he says: I do not need it; but if he says: I need it, then if two experts are not there, but one who says: He does not need it, then ONE FEEDS HIM AT HIS OWN WISH.

Mar son of R. Ashi said: Whenever he says. ‘I need [food]’, even if there be a hundred who say, ‘He does not need it’, we accept his statement, as it is said: ‘The heart knoweth its own bitterness’. We learned in the Mishnah: If no experts are there one feeds him at his own wish. That means only if no experts are there, but not if such experts were there? — This is what is meant: These things are said only for the case that he says, ‘I do not need it’, but if he says, ‘I need it’, then there are no experts⁹ there at all, [and] one feeds him at his own wish, as it is said: ‘The heart knoweth its own bitterness’.

MISHNAH. IF ONE IS SEIZED BY A RAVENOUS HUNGER,¹⁰ HE MAY BE GIVEN TO EAT EVEN UNCLEAN THINGS UNTIL HIS EYES ARE ENLIGHTENED.¹¹ IF ONE WAS BIT BY A MAD DOG, HE MAY NOT GIVE HIM TO EAT THE LOBE OF ITS LIVER, BUT R. MATTHIA B. HERESH PERMITS IT.¹² FURTHERMORE DID R. MATTHIA B. HERESH SAY: IF ONE HAS PAIN IN HIS THROAT, HE MAY POUR MEDICINE INTO HIS MOUTH ON THE SABBATH,¹³ BECAUSE IT IS A POSSIBILITY OF DANGER TO HUMAN LIFE AND EVERY DANGER TO HUMAN LIFE SUSPENDS THE [LAWS OF THE] SABBATH. IF DEBRIS FALL ON SOMEONE, AND IT IS DOUBTFUL WHETHER OR NOT HE IS THERE, OR WHETHER HE IS ALIVE OR DEAD, OR WHETHER HE BE AN ISRAELITE OR A HEATHEN, ONE SHOULD OPEN [EVEN ON SABBATH] THE HEAP OF DEBRIS FOR HIS SAKE. IF ONE FINDS HIM ALIVE ONE SHOULD REMOVE THE DEBRIS, AND IF HE BE DEAD ONE SHOULD LEAVE HIM THERE [UNTIL THE SABBATH DAY IS OVER].

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: How did they know that his eyes are enlightened again? When he distinguishes between good and bad [food]. — Abaye said: In the taste thereof. Our Rabbis taught: If one was seized by a ravenous hunger, one feeds him with the less forbidden things first; as between tebel [untithed food] and carrion,¹⁴ one should feed him carrion first; between tebel and fruit of the seventh year, one should give him the fruit of the seventh year first.¹⁵ As between *terumah*¹⁶ and tebel, Tannaim are of divided opinion. For it was taught: One should feed him tebel, but not terumah. Ben Tema holds: Terumah, but not tebel. Rabbah said: If it is possible [to feed him] with common food,¹⁷ there is general agreement that one should prepare it¹⁸ for him and feed him with it; the dispute concerns the case when it is not possible [to feed him] with common food; one holds that [the prohibition of] tebel is more severe, the other assuming that the prohibition¹⁹ of terumah is the more severe. The one holds that [the prohibition of] eating tebel is more severe because terumah is permissible to priests. the other holding [the prohibition of] terumah more severe, whereas tebel may be rendered right [by tithing].

(1) Ps. LVIII, 4.

(2) The suggestion throughout the page of a woman with child who smells a dish and develops a morbid longing for it, is that it is the embryo, and not the mother, who has the desire. If the mother accepted the whispered suggestion, it was due to the noble piety of the unborn child, hence, R. Johanan as the child of the first woman. None is more contemptible than the speculator in foodstuffs who corners the markets for his sordid gain and who causes great affliction among the poor. Such a person, even in the embryonic stage, would not be influenced by the information that it is the Day of Atonement. He would crave his food, unresponsive to any law or sentiment.

(3) Prov. XIV, 10.

(4) So that he does not feel the lack of food.

(5) Which refutes R. Jannai.

(6) V. Shab. 129a.

(7) Two witnesses are considered sufficient evidence (Deut. XIX, 15) and no increase of their number either strengthens, or if they were counter-witnesses, by reason of superior numbers, weakens their original testimony.

(8) And yet on the strength of the two experts who say 'he needs it', he is fed.

(9) Such experts, opposing the patient's own view, would be ignored: 'They are not present at all'.

(10) , bulimy, ox-hunger.

(11) Cf. I Sam. XIV, 27. Such ravenous hunger renders the eyes dull.

(12) That was considered a cure: a fore-runner of modern homeopathics. The Tanna who forbids it denies its curative value, hence its use is forbidden. Matthia b. Heresh believed in this cure, hence permitted it.

(13) The dispute here concerns not the principle, but the efficacy, of the proposed medicines.

(14) Whenever the permitted and forbidden food alone are insufficient to restore the patient, one should proceed by eliminating as far as possible the more forbidden foods. Untithed food involves punishment of death by divine hand, whereas the eating of carrion involves only the castigation by stripes.

(15) Similarly is the fruit of the seventh year less 'forbidden', its eating implies much less penalty than the eating of untithed food, because there only the transgression of a positive commandment is involved.

(16) V. Glos.

(17) [Probably it means that the hungry person can wait for the priestly dues to be duly set aside, v. D.S. a.l. p. 50].

(18) By setting aside the prescribed dues.

(19) In each case that food which is considered less forbidden, or involving less of a penalty, would be given first.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 83b

'If it be possible with common food [etc.]'. Surely it is self-evident?—This refers to the case [that it would have to be done] on the Sabbath.¹ But on the Sabbath, too, It is self-evident, because moving is forbidden only by Rabbinic decree?² — We deal here with a pot without a hole, the obligation³ on which, too' is only Rabbinic.⁴ ('One holds [the prohibition of] tebel is more severe, the other holding [the prohibition of] terumah more severe).⁵ Shall we say that Tannaim have been disputing this matter already?⁶ For it was taught: If one was bitten by a snake, one may call for him a physician from one place into another,⁷ or tear open a hen for him, or cut leak from the ground for him, give it to him to eat, without having separated the tithe thereof; this is the view of Rabbi. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon said: He must not eat until tithe has been separated. Shall we say that it is in accord with R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon, and not with Rabbi?⁸ — You may even say that it is in accord with Rabbi's view. Rabbi [one may say] makes his statement only here because the tithe of vegetables is in question and that is due but Rabbinically, but in the case of the tithe of corn, which is obligatory by Biblical law, even, Rabbi would agree that if you permit him to eat without [due tithing] in the case of a pot without a hole, he would come to eat likewise even in the case of a pot with a hole.⁹

Our Rabbis taught: If one was seized with a ravenous hunger, he is given to eat honey and all kinds of sweet things, for honey and very sweet food enlighten the eyes of man. And although there is no proof for the matter, there is an intimation in this respect: See, I pray you how mine eyes are brightened. because I tasted a little of this honey.¹⁰ What does 'although there is no proof for the matter' mean? Because there no ravenous hunger has seized him. Abaye said: This applies only after a meal, but before the meal, it even increases one's appetite, as it is written: And they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him, to David, and gave him, bread, and he did eat,' and they gave him water to drink,' and they gave him a piece of cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins,' and when he had eaten, his spirit came back to him,' for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, three days and three nights.¹¹

R. Nahman said in the name of Samuel: If one was seized by a ravenous hunger, one should give him to eat a tail with honey. R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua said: Also pure flour with honey. R. Papa said: Even barley-flour with honey [is effective]. R. Johanan said: Once I was seized by a ravenous hunger, whereupon I ran to the eastern side of a fig-tree, thus making true in my own case: Wisdom preserveth the life of him who hath it,¹² for R. Joseph learned: One who would taste the [full] taste of a fig, turns to its eastern side, as it is said: And for the precious things of the fruits of the sun.¹³

R. Judah and R. Jose were walking together when a ravenous hunger seized R. Judah. He seized a shepherd and devoured his bread. R. Jose said to him: You have robbed the shepherd! As they entered the city, a ravenous hunger seized R. Jose. They brought him all sorts of foods and dishes. Whereupon R. Judah said to him: I may have deprived the shepherd, but you have deprived a whole town. Also, R. Meir and R. Judah and R. Jose were on a journey together. (R. Meir always paid close attention to people's names, whereas R. Judah and R. Jose paid no such attention to them). Once as they came to a certain place. they looked for a lodging, and as they were given it, they said to him [the innkeeper]: What is your name? — He replied: Kidor. Then he [R. Meir] said: Therefrom it is evident that he is a wicked man, for it is said: For a generation [ki-dor] very forward are they.¹⁴ R. Judah and R. Jose entrusted their purses to him;¹⁵ R. Meir did not entrust his purse to him, but went and placed it on the grave of that man's father. Thereupon the man had a vision in his dream [saying]: Go, take the purse lying at the head of this man! In the morning he [the innkeeper] told them [the Rabbis] about it, saying: This is what appeared to me in my dream. They replied to him: There is no substance in the dream of the Sabbath night¹⁶. R. Meir went, waited there all day, and then took the purse with him. In the morning they [the Rabbis] said to him,: 'Give us our purses'. He said: There never was such a thing!¹⁷ R. Meir then said to them: Why don't you pay attention to people's names? They said: Why have you not told this [before]. Sir? He answered: consider this¹⁸ but a suspicion. I would not consider that a definite presumption! Thereupon they took him [the host] into a shop [and gave him wine to drink].¹⁹ Then they saw lentils on his moustache. They went to his wife and gave her that as a sign, and thus²⁰ obtained their purses and took them back. Whereupon he went and killed his wife. It is with regard to this that it was taught:²¹ [Failure to observe the custom of] the first water²² caused one to eat the meat of pig, [failure to use] the second water slew a person. At the end they, too, paid close attention to people's names. And when they called to a house whose [owner's] name was Balah, they would not enter, saying: He seems to be a wicked man, as it is written: Then said I of her that was [balah] worn out by adulteries.²³

IF SOMEONE WAS BITTEN BY A MAD DOG. Our Rabbis taught: Five things were mentioned in connection with a mad dog. Its mouth is open, its saliva dripping, its ears flap, its tail is hanging between its thighs, it walks on the edge of the road. Some say, Also it barks without its voice being heard. Where does it²⁴ come from? — Rab said: Witches are having their fun with it. Samuel said: An evil spirit rests upon it. What is the practical difference between these two views? — This is the difference

(1) On the Sabbath it is not usually permitted to separate the terumah.

(2) [The prohibition to set aside on Sabbath any of the priestly dues is of Rabbinical origin, in the same category as moving about on the Sabbath articles that are unfit for use (cf. Bez. 36b)].

(3) To tithe the fruit grown therein.

(4) [I.e., the tebel under consideration grew in a pot without a hole, and consequently not subject biblically to priestly dues. Nevertheless where it can be rendered right by setting aside the dues, we are told one should rather override the shebuth (v. Glos.) involved than feed him with what is regarded as tebel only Rabbinically (Rashi)].

(5) [On the interpretation of Rashi which is followed in these notes, the bracketed passage is best omitted, as it is in various MSS. V. D.S.]

(6) [I.e., Rabbah's principle that we override the shebuth rather than to feed him, with produce which is tebel only

Rabbinically, v. p. 408, n. 10].

(7) On the Sabbath, as a rule, that would not be permitted, but in the case of a possible danger to human life, that restriction would be inoperative.

(8) [I.e., Rabbah's principle is in agreement with R. Eleazar b. R. Simeon, who likewise holds that the vegetables must be first tithed even on Sabbath, although they are subject to tithes only Rabbinically].

(9) In which case the obligation is Biblical, which involves the penalty of death by divine decree. [MS.M. has an entirely different reading of the whole passage. v. D.S. a. l.]

(10) I Sam. XIV, 29.

(11) I Sam. XXX, 11, 12.

(12) Eccl. VII, 12.

(13) Deut. XXXIII, 14.

(14) Ibid. XXXII, 20. The name 'kidor' suggested to R. Meir one who does not deserve confidence. That, as he later explained, was an idiosyncrasy of his own, amounting at best to an intuitive caution.

(15) It was on the eve of the Sabbath,

(16) The Sabbath rest gives rise to idle thoughts which are then reflected in dreams.

(17) Lit., 'these things never happened'.

(18) The suggestion conveyed by the sound of a man's name.

(19) Supplemented from Bah.

(20) Telling him the husband had sent them for the purses and giving her as a proof the fact that lentils had been the last meal in her house.

(21) Corrected in accord with marginal gloss.

(22) The washing of hands before meals implies 'the first water', as against the latter water-washing of the hands after meals, to remove any fat, grease, crumbs, from the meal. The one precedes the blessing before the meal, the other the grace after meals. Failure to wash his hands before meals caused one to eat pork. A certain innkeeper, who served both Jews and heathens, guided himself by the attitude of the guests as to 'first waters'. Once a non-conforming Jew entered, asked for a meal, without washing his hands; the innkeeper taking him for a heathen, placed pork before him (Rashi). In our case, had Kidor washed his hands after meals, and as is usual in such a case, wiped his upper lip, the traces of his repast would not have been visible, the Rabbis would have had no clue as to how to restore their purses to themselves, and the enraged thief would not have killed his wife.

(23) Ezek. XXIII, 43. A play on 'balah', viz., one worn out by wrong living.

(24) The madness of the dog.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 84a

as to killing it by throwing¹ something at it. It was taught in accordance with Samuel: When one kills it, one does so only with something thrown against it. One against whom it rubs itself is endangered; one whom it bites, dies. 'One against whom it rubs itself is endangered'. What is the remedy?—Let him cast off his clothing, and run. As happened with R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua, against whom one mad dog rubbed itself in the market-place: he stripped off his garments and ran, saying: I fulfilled in myself. 'Wisdom preserveth the life of him who hath it'.²

'One whom it bites, dies'. What is the remedy? — Abaye said: Let him take the skin of a male hyena.³ and write upon it: I, So-and-so, the son of that-and-that woman, write upon the skin of a male Hyena: Hami, kanti, kloros. God, God, Lord of Hosts, Amen, Amen, Selah,⁴ Then let him strip off his clothes, and bury then, in a grave [at cross-roads],⁵ for twelve months of a year. Then he should take them out and burn them in an oven, and scatter the ashes. During these twelve months, if he drinks water, he shall not drink it but out of a copper tube, lest he see the shadow⁶ of the demon and be endangered. Thus the mother of Abba b. Martha, who is Abba b. Minyumi, made for him a tube of gold [for drinking purposes].

FURTHERMORE DID R. MATTHIA SAY. R. Johanan suffered from scurvy. He went to a matron, who prepared something for him on Thursday and Friday. He said to her: How shall I do it on the Sabbath? She answered him,: Then you will not need it [any more]. He said: But if I should need it, what then,? She replied: ‘Swear unto me by the God of Israel⁷ that you will not reveal it’ [to others]; whereupon he swore: ‘To the God of Israel I shall not reveal it’. She revealed it to him, and he went forth and expounded it in his lecture. But he had sworn to her? — [He swore]: ‘To the God of Israel I shall not reveal it’ [which implies] but to His people I shall reveal it! But this is a profanation of the Name?⁸ — It was so that he had explained it [the meaning of his oath] to her from the very beginning. What did she give to him? R. Aha, the son of R. Ammi said: The water of leaven, olive oil and salt. R. Yemar said: Leaven itself, olive oil and salt. R. Ashi said: The fat of a goose-wing. Abaye said: I tried everything without achieving a cure for myself, until an Arab recommended: ‘Take the stones of olives which have not become ripe one third, burn them in fire upon a new rake, and stick them into the inside of the gums’.⁹ I did so and was cured. Whence does [scurvy] come? — From [eating] very hot wheat [-en bread], and from the [overnight] remnants of a pie of fish-hash and flour. What is its symptom? — If he puts anything between his teeth, his gums will bleed.

When R. Johanan suffered from scurvy, he applied this [remedy] on the Sabbath and was healed. How could R. Johanan do that?¹⁰ — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: It is different with scurvy, because whereas it starts in the mouth, it ends in the intestines. R. Hiyya b. Abba said to R. Johanan: According to whom is it? According to R. Matthia b. Heresh who said that if one has pains in his throat one may pour medicine into his mouth on the Sabbath?¹¹ — I say: In this case, but in no other.¹² Shall we say that the following [teaching] supports his view? If one is attacked by jaundice one may give him to eat the flesh of a donkey; if one was bitten by a mad dog, one may give him to eat the lobe of its liver; and to one who has pains in his mouth may be given medicine on the Sabbath — this is the view of R. Matthia b. Heresh; but the Sages say: These are not considered cures — Now what does ‘these’ mean to exclude? Won't you say it is meant to exclude medicine?¹³ No, it is meant to exclude blood-letting in case of asphyxia.¹⁴ Thus also does it seem logical. For it was taught: R. Ishmael son of R. Jose reported three things in the name of R. Matthia b. Heresh: One may let blood in the case of asphyxia on the Sabbath, and one whom a mad dog has bitten may be given to eat the lobe of its liver, and one who has pains in his mouth may be given medicine on the Sabbath, whereas the Sages hold: These are not considered cures. Now what does ‘these’ exclude? Would you not say ‘these’ excludes the two latter one, and not the first one?¹⁵ — No, it means to exclude the first two ones, and not the last one.

(1) If it were killed by something held in one's hand the contact with the dog's body might cause the evil spirit to attack the dog's assailant. If madness is the result of witches' fun, no such danger would seem to inhere.

(2) Eccl. VII, 12.

(3) Or, leopard.

(4) V. Blau, Altjud. Zauberwesen, p. 80f

(5) Supplemented from Bah.

(6) Which might have jumped over from the dog, and would endanger him.

(7) The Hebrew proposition ‘l’ may be interpreted as ‘by’ (the God of Israel), as the matron meant it; or, ‘to’ the God of Israel, as the Rabbi took it: I swear that ‘to the God of Israel I shall not reveal it’.

(8) If a scholar deceives a non-Jew he profanes the Name of the Lord, Who is associated with the Torah and Israel, much more than when an ordinary Jew does so although it is a grave offence in any case.

(9) Lit., ‘inside the row of teeth’.

(10) Since that does not seem to be a dangerous disease, justifying the application of medicine on the Sabbath day. By Rabbinic ordinance that is forbidden, as a fence around the law (Aboth I, 1) to prevent its leading to the grinding of spices for medicinal purposes, grinding being one of the thirty-nine kinds of labour prohibited by Biblical law on the Sabbath.

(11) But the Sages oppose R. Matthia, hence he remains in the minority and his permission is invalid.

(12) Here the Sages will agree with him, because of the ultimately dangerous character of the disease.

(13) As being permissible owing to their curative properties.

(14) Which is permitted.

(15) Which the Rabbis consider a cure. Which proves that the Sages, while they regard bloodletting as a cure for asphyxia and permissible on Sabbath, do not extend this sanction to medicine in general.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 84b

Come and hear: For Rabbah b. Samuel learned: If a woman with child has smelt [food], one feeds her until she is restored; and one who was bitten by a mad dog is given to eat from the lobe of its liver, and one who has pains in his mouth may be given medicine on the Sabbath — these are the words of R. Eleazar b. Jose in the name of R. Matthia b. Heresh. But the Sages say: In this case, but not in another. Now what does ‘in this case refer to? Would you say to the woman with child? That is self-evident; for is there anyone to say that in the case of a woman with child it would not be permitted? — Hence it must refer to the medicine.¹ This is conclusive.²

R. Ashi said: Our Mishnah too justifies this inference. R. MATTHIA B. HERESH SAID FURTHERMORE: IF ONE HAS PAINS IN HIS MOUTH ONE MAY GIVE HIM MEDICINE ON THE SABBATH.³ And herein the Rabbis⁴ do not dispute him. For if it were that the Rabbis dispute him, he should teach these together,⁵ and afterwards mention that the Rabbis dispute it . This is conclusive evidence.

BECAUSE IT IS A POSSIBILITY OF DANGER TO HUMAN LIFE. Why was it necessary to add ‘AND WHEREVER THERE IS DANGER TO HUMAN LIFE, THE LAWS OF THE SABBATH ARE SUSPENDED?—Rab Judah in the name of Rab said: Not only in the case of a danger [to human life] on this Sabbath, but even in the case of a danger on the following Sabbath.⁶ How that? If e.g. the [diagnosis] estimates an eight-day [crisis] the first day of which falls on the Sabbath. You might have said, let them wait until the evening, so that the Sabbaths may not be profaned because of him, therefore he informs us [that we do not consider that]. Thus also was it taught: One may warm water for a sick person on the Sabbath, both for the purpose of giving him a drink or of refreshing him, and not only for [this] one Sabbath did they rule thus, but also for the following one. Nor do we say: Let us wait, because perchance he will get well, but we warm the water for him immediately, because the possibility of danger to human life renders inoperative the laws of the Sabbath, not only in case of such possibility on this one Sabbath, but also in case of such possibility on another Sabbath. Nor are these things to be done by Gentiles or minors,⁷ but by Jewish adults.⁷ Nor do we say in this connection: We do not rely in such matters on the opinions of women, or of Samaritans, but we join their opinion to that of others.⁸

