Our Rabbis taught: One must remove debris to save a life on the Sabbath, and the more eager one is, the more praiseworthy is one; and one need not obtain permission from the Beth din. How so? If one saw a child falling into the sea, he spreads a net and brings it up — the faster the better, and he need not obtain permission from the Beth din though he thereby catches fish [in his net]. If he saw a child fall into a pit, he breaks loose one segment [of the entrenchment] and pulls it up — the faster the better; and he need not obtain permission of the Beth din, even though he is thereby making a step [stairs]. If he saw a door closing upon an infant,⁹ he may break it, so as to get the child out — the faster the better; and he need not obtain permission from the Beth din, though he thereby consciously makes chips of wood. One may extinguish and isolate [the fire] in the case of a conflagration — the sooner the better, and he need not obtain permission from the Beth din, even though he subdues the flames.¹⁰ Now all these cases must be mentioned separately. For if only the case of the [infant falling into] the sea had been mentioned [one would have said, it is permitted there] because meantime¹¹ the child might be swept away by the water, but that does not apply in the case [of its falling into] the pit, because since it remains [stays] therein, one might have thought, one may not [save it before obtaining permission], therefore it is necessary to refer to that. And if the teaching had confined itself to the case of the pit, [one would have thought, there no permission is required] because the child is terrified but in the case of a door closing upon it, one might sit outside and [amuse the child] by making a noise with nuts, therefore it was necessary [to include that too].

For what purposes is the 'extinguishing' and 'isolating' necessary? — Even for the benefit of another [neighbouring] court.

R. Joseph said on the authority of Rab Judah, in the name of Samuel: In the case of danger to human life one pays no attention to majority. How is that? Would you say [in the case of] nine Israelites and one heathen among them? But then the majority consists of Israelites! Or, even if there were half and half, in the case of danger to human life, we take the more lenient view? Again, if you say that it is a case of nine heathens and one Israelite, that too is self-evident, because it is stationary and whatever is stationary is considered¹² half and half? — No, it refers to a case in which [one has]¹³ gone off into another court.¹⁴ You might have said: Whosoever has gone off, has gone off from the majority which consisted of heathens, therefore the information that in case of danger to human life, we are not concerned with question of majorities which consisted of heathens. But that is not so, for R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: In the case of nine heathens and one Israelite, [if a building collapsed upon them while they were all] in that court, one must remove debris, but not if [a building collapsed] in another court?¹⁵ — This is no contradiction: In the one case all had gone off, in the other only a few had gone off.¹⁶ But could Samuel have said that? Have we not learnt: If one finds therein¹⁷ a child abandoned, if the majority of the inhabitants are heathens, it is to be considered a heathen; if the majority are Israelites, it is to be considered an Israelite; in the case of half and half it is to be also considered an Israelite.¹⁸ And in connection therewith Rab said: This was taught only in relation to sustaining it,¹⁹ but not for the purpose of legitimizing²⁰ it;

(8) If e.g., two say it is necessary, three say it was not, and a woman or a non-Jew assert it is necessary, the opinion of the latter is joined to that of the others, who are in the affirmative, thus presenting a divided opinion, in which case, since danger to human life is involved, the more lenient view is adopted.

whereas Samuel said: [It was taught] with reference to removing the debris for its sake?¹ — The words of Samuel refer to the first clause, 'If the majority are heathens, it is considered a heathen'. It is in connection therewith that Samuel said that it did not apply to the saving of life.²

'If the majority are heathens, it is considered a heathen'. For what practical law [is this taught]? — Said R. Papa: To give it to eat carrion.³ 'If the majority are Israelites, it is considered an Israelite' — For what practical purpose [is this taught]? To restore to it lost property.⁴ 'In the case of half and half, it is considered an Israelite'. For what practical purpose [is this taught]? Resh Lakish said: With regard to damages⁵ How that? Shall we say that one ox of ours gored one of his?⁶ Let him bring proof and collect!⁷ — No, It is necessary for the case that an ox of his had gored one of ours; then he must pay one half, and concerning the other he can say: Prove that I am not an Israelite and collect!⁸

IF DEBRIS HAD FALLEN UPON SOMEONE [etc.]. What does he teach herewith?⁹ — It states a case of 'not only'.¹⁰ Not only must one remove the debris in the case of doubt as to whether he is there or not, as long as one knows that he is alive if he is there; but, even though it be doubtful whether he is alive or not he must be freed from the debris. Also, not only if it is doubtful whether he be alive or dead, as long as it is definite that he is an Israelite; but even if it is doubtful whether he is an Israelite or a heathen, one must, for his sake, remove the debris.

IF ONE FINDS HIM ALIVE, ONES SHOULD REMOVE THE DEBRIS. But that is self-evident if one finds him alive? — No, the statement is necessary for the case that he has only a short while to live.

AND IF HE BE DEAD, ONE SHOULD LEAVE HIM THERE. But that, too, is self-evident? — It is necessary because of the teaching of R. Judah b. Lakish. for it was taught: One may not save a dead person out of a fire.¹¹ R. Judah b. Lakish said: I heard that one may save a dead person out of a fire. Now even R. Judah b. Lakish says that only because¹² 'a person is upset about a dead relative' and if you will not permit him [to save his dead] he will ultimately come to extinguish the fire, but here, if you do not permit it, what can he do?¹³

Our Rabbis taught: How far does one search?¹⁴ Until [one reaches] his nose. Some say: Up to his heart. If one searches and finds those above to be dead, one must not assume those below are surely dead. Once it happened that those above were dead and those below were found to be alive. Are we to say that these Tannaim dispute the same as the following Tannaim? For it was taught: From where does the formation of the embryo commence? From its head, as it is said: Thou art he that took me [gozi] out of my mother's womb,¹⁵ and it is also said: Cut off [gozi] thy hair and cast it away.¹⁶

Abba Saul said: From the navel which sends its roots into every direction!¹⁷ You may even say that [the first view is in agreement with] Abba Saul, inasmuch as Abba Saul holds his view only touching the first formation, because 'everything develops from its core [middle]', but regarding the saving of life he would agree that life manifests itself through the nose especially, as it is written: In whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life.¹⁸

R. Papa said: The dispute arises only as to from below upwards,¹⁹ but if from above downwards, one had searched up to the nose, one need not search any further, as it is said: 'In whose nostrils was the breath of life'.

R. Ishmael, R. Akiba and R. Eleazar b. Azariah were once on a journey, with Levi ha-Saddar²⁰ and R. Ishmael son of R. Eleazar b. Azariah following them. Then this question was asked of them: Whence do we know that in the case of danger to human life the laws of the Sabbath are suspended? — R. Ishmael answered and said: If a thief be found breaking in.²¹ Now if in the case of this one it is doubtful whether he has come to take money or life; and although the shedding of blood pollutes the land, so that the Shechinah departs from Israel, yet it is lawful to save oneself at the cost of his life — how much more may one suspend the laws of the Sabbath to save human life! R. Akiba answered and said: If a man come presumptuously upon his neighbour etc. thou shalt take him from My altar, that he may die.²² I.e., only off the altar, but not down from the altar.²³ And in connection therewith Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: That was taught only when one's life is to be forfeited,

 - (2) Samuel holds that even in that case life must be saved, majority or minority not influencing such a duty.

 - (5) V. B.K., Sonc. ed., p. 211, n. 6. The Jewish owner of an ox which has gored an ox owned by a heathen, is not obliged to pay damages, whereas the heathen would have to pay full damage, whether the owner had been forewarned or not. The Jewish owner of an ox who has gored an ox owned by a fellow-Jew, if not forewarned must pay half of the damage; if forewarned, full damage.
 - (6) I.e., the abandoned child. The suggestion is that we would make him pay damage.
 - (7) The damages due to you.
 - (8) He pays one half, as any Jew not forewarned would if his ox gored the ox of a fellow-Jew. The owner in this case would wait to collect full damages, claiming the owner of the goring ox to be a heathen, hence obliged to repay full damages, even if not forewarned. The latter would say: One half I have paid because I am a Jew. If you wish to collect the other half, it is upon you to adduce evidence that I am not a Jew. Only thus could you collect.

but to save life¹ one may take one down even from the altar. Now if in the case of this one, where it is doubtful whether there is any substance in his words or not, yet [he interrupts] the service in the Temple [which is important enough to] suspend the Sabbath, how much more should the saving of human life suspend the Sabbath laws! R. Eleazar answered and said: If circumcision, which attaches to one only of the two hundred and forty-eight members of the human body, suspends the Sabbath,² how much more shall [the saving of] the whole body suspend the Sabbath! R. Jose son of R. Judah said: Only ye shall keep My Sabbaths,³ one might assume under all circumstances, therefore the text reads: 'Only' viz, allowing for exceptions.⁴ R. Jonathan b. Joseph said: For it is holy unto you;⁵ I.e., it [the Sabbath] is committed to your hands, not you to its hands.

R. Simeon b. Menassia said: And the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath.⁶ The Torah said: Profane for his sake one Sabbath, so that he may keep many Sabbaths. Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: If I had been there, I should have told them something better than what they said: He shall live by them,⁷ but he shall not die because of them. Raba said: [The exposition] of all of them could be refuted, except that of Samuel, which cannot be refuted. That of R. Ishmael — perhaps that is to be taken as Raba did, for Raba said : What is the reason for the [permission to kill the] burglar? No man controls himself when his money is at stake, and since [the burglar] knows that he [the owner] will oppose him, he thinks: If he resists me I shall kill him, therefore the Torah says: If a man has come to kill you. anticipate him by killing him! Hence we know it [only] of a certain case; [but] whence would we know it of a doubtful one? That of R. Akiba's, there too [there may be a refutation]. Perhaps we should do as Abaye suggests, for Abaye said: We give him⁸ a couple of scholars, so as to find out whether there is any substance in his words. Again we know that only in the case of certain death, [but] whence would we know it of a doubtful case? [And similarly with the exposition of] all of them we know it only of a certain case; whence do we know of a doubtful case? But of Samuel, as to that there is no refutation. Rabina, or R. Nahman b. Isaac said: 'Better is one corn of pepper than a whole basket full of pumpkins.'⁹

MISHNAH. THE SIN-OFFERING AND THE GUILT-OFFERING [FOR THE] UNDOUBTED COMMISSION OF CERTAIN OFFENCES¹⁰ PROCURE ATONEMENT, DEATH AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURE ATONEMENT TOGETHER WITH PENITENCE.¹¹ PENITENCE PROCURES ATONEMENT FOR LIGHTER TRANSGRESSIONS: [THE TRANSGRESSION OF] POSITIVE COMMANDMENTS AND PROHIBITIONS. IN THE CASE OF SEVERER TRANSGRESSIONS IT [PENITENCE] SUSPENDS [THE DIVINE PUNISHMENT], UNTIL THE DAY OF ATONEMENT COMES TO PROCURE ATONEMENT. IF ONE SAYS: I SHALL SIN AND REPENT, SIN AND REPENT, NO OPPORTUNITY WILL BE GIVEN TO HIM TO REPENT.¹² [IF ONE SAYS]: I SHALL SIN AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT WILL PROCURE ATONEMENT FOR ME, THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURES FOR HIM NO ATONEMENT. FOR TRANSGRESSIONS AS BETWEEN MAN AND THE OMNIPRESENT THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURES ATONEMENT, BUT FOR TRANSGRESSIONS AS BETWEEN MAN AND HIS FELLOW THE DAY OF ATONEMENT DOES NOT PROCURE ANY ATONEMENT, UNTIL HE HAS PACIFIED HIS FELLOW. THIS WAS EXPOUNDED BY R. ELEAZAR B. ALARIAH: FROM ALL YOUR SINS BEFORE THE LORD SHALL YE BE CLEAN,¹³ I.E., FOR TRANSGRESSIONS AS BETWEEN MAN AND THE OMNIPRESENT THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURES ATONEMENT, BUT FOR TRANSGRESSIONS AS BETWEEN MAN AND HIS FELLOW THE DAY OF ATONEMENT DOES NOT PROCURE ATONEMENT UNTIL HE HAS PACIFIED HIS FELLOW.¹⁴ R. AKIBA SAID: HAPPY ARE YOU, ISRAEL! WHO IS IT BEFORE WHOM YOU BECOME CLEAN? AND WHO IS IT THAT MAKES YOU CLEAN? YOUR FATHER WHICH IS IN HEAVEN, AS IT IS SAID: AND I WILL SPRINKLE CLEAN WATER UPON YOU AND YE SHALL BE CLEAN.¹⁵ AND IT FURTHER SAYS: THOU HOPE OF ISRAEL, THE LORD!¹⁶ JUST AS THE FOUNTAIN RENDERS CLEAN THE UNCLEAR, SO DOES THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, RENDER CLEAN ISRAEL.

GEMARA. Only the undoubted guilt-offering [atones], but not the suspensive one? But is not the word 'forgiveness' written with regard to it too?¹⁷ — These [others] procure complete atonement, the suspensive guilt-offering does not procure complete atonement. Or else, As for these [others]¹⁸ another can effect their atonement, whereas in the case of the suspensive guilt-offering nothing else can effect their atonement. For it was taught: If those who were liable to sin-offerings, or guilt-offerings [for the] undoubted [commission of offences] permitted the Day of Atonement to pass, they are still obliged to offer then, up; but in the case of those who were liable to suspensive guilt-offerings, they are exempt.¹⁹

DEATH AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURE ATONEMENT TOGETHER WITH PENITENCE. Only TOGETHER WITH PENITENCE, but not in themselves! — Shall we say that this teaching is not in accord with, Rabbi? For it was taught: Rabbi said, For all transgressions [of commands of] the Torah, whether one had repented or not, does the Day of Atonement procure atonement, except in the case of one who throws off the yoke²⁰ [of the Torah], interprets the Torah unlawfully.²¹ or breaks the covenant of Abraham our father.²² In these cases, if he repented, the Day of Atonement procures atonement, if not, not! — You might even say that this is in accord with Rabbi: Repentance needs the Day of Atonement, but the Day of Atonement does not need repentance.

PENITENCE PROCURES ATONEMENT FOR LIGHTER TRANSGRESSIONS: [THE TRANSGRESSION OF] POSITIVE COMMANDMENTS AND PROHIBITIONS. If it procures atonement for the transgression of negative commandments, is it necessary [to state that it procures it for the transgression of] positive ones?²³ — Rab Judah said: This is what he means, [It procures atonement] for [the transgression of] a positive commandment , of a negative commandment that is to be remedied into a positive one.²⁴ But not [for the transgression] of an actual negative commandment? Against this the following contradiction is to be raised: These are light transgressions [for which penitence procures atonement: transgression of] positive commandments and negative commandments

(1) If one had been sentenced to death, there is ample provision for a revision, if even at the last moment someone claims to have found evidence of the accused's innocence. If a priest has such evidence, or is only believed to have it, he would be taken down from the altar even after he had commenced, and before having completed, his service.

(2) The circumcision must take place on the eighth day, even if that day falls on the Sabbath, suspending the law of the Sabbath, which prohibits operation, as well as preparations leading to it.

(3) Ex. XXXI, 13.

(6) Ibid., 16.

(7) Lev. XVIII, 5.

(8) To the priest who thinks he has relevant testimony in favour of the accused, because of which he may be taken down from the altar in the midst of the service.

(9) A commentary on Samuel's irrefutable simple interpretation, as against the more involved and less perfect interpretations of the other Rabbis.

(10) Cf. Lev. V, 15 and VI, 6, as opposed to the suspensive guilt-offering, due in the case of doubtful commission of sin, which postpones punishment until that doubt is removed, when a sin-offering is due to procure atonement. Among the guilt-offerings due for undoubted commission of certain offences are: one for illegal appropriation of private property, after reparation has been made; one for misappropriation of sacred property; one for carnal connection with a bondwoman betrothed to another man; the offering of a nazirite who had interrupted the days of his avowed naziriteship by levitical impurity.

(11) Penitence is essential; it consists of genuine regret, and determination to improve one's conduct. In the case of any offering (sin or guilt) such penitence is taken for granted, for without it no sacrifice has any meaning or value.

(12) Because this statement indicates that he never experienced genuine regret.

(13) Lev. XVI, 30.

(14) The verse is thus taken to mean 'From all your sins before the Lord', (i.e. , as between man and his Creator) will the Day the Atonement procure you forgiveness; but not for those which are committed not 'before the Lord', and 'before man', viz., sins committed against our fellow-man.

with the exceptions of: Thou shalt not take [in vain]¹ — 'Thou shalt not take' and others of the same kind.²

Come and hear: R. Judah said: For everything from 'Thou shalt not take' and down repentance procures atonement, for everything from 'Thou shalt take' and up.³ penitence procures suspension [of punishment] and the Day of Atonement procures atonement? — 'Thou shalt not take' and others of the same kind.

Come and hear: Since in connection with Horeb⁴ penitence and forgiveness are stated,⁵ one might assume, that includes the [transgression of] 'Thou shalt not take', therefore it says: He will not clear the guilty.⁶ Then I might have assumed that with all others guilty of having transgressed negative commandments the same is the case, therefore the text reads: '[Will not clear the guilt of him who taketh] His name [in vain].⁷ i.e., He does not clear the guilt in [the taking in vain of] His name, but He clears the guilt in the transgression of other negative commandments?⁸ -This is indeed a point of dispute between Tannam; for it was taught: For what transgression does penitence procure atonement? For that of a positive commandment. And in what case does repentance suspend punishment and the Day of Atonement procure atonement? In such as involve extirpation, death-penalty through the Beth din and in actual negative commandments.

The Master said: In connection with Horeb [penitence and]⁹ forgiveness is stated. Whence do we know that? Because it was taught : R. Eleazar said: It is impossible to say. 'He will not clear the guilt '¹⁰ Since it says: 'He will clear the guilt'; nor is it possible to say: 'He will not clear the guilt' since it is said: 'He will clear the guilt'; how is that to be explained? 'He clears the guilt' of those who repent, and does not 'clear the guilt' of those who do not repent.

R. Matthia b. Heresh asked R. Eleazar b. Azariah in Rome: have you heard about the four kinds of sins, concerning which R. Ishmael has lectured? He answered: They are three, and with each is repentance connected — If one transgressed a positive commandment , and repented , then he is forgiven, before he has moved from his place; as it is said: Return, O backsliding children.¹¹ If he has transgressed a prohibition and repented, then repentance suspends [the punishment] and the Day of Atonement procures atonement, as it is said : For on this day shall atonement be made for you ... from all your sins.¹² If he has committed [a sin to be punished with] extirpation or death through the Beth din, and repented, then repentance and the Day of Atonement suspend [the punishment thereon], and suffering finishes the atonement,¹³ as it is said: Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with strokes.¹⁴ But if he has been guilty of the profanation of the Name, then penitence has no power to suspend punishment, nor the Day of Atonement to procure atonement, nor suffering to finish it, but all of them together suspend the punishment and only death finishes it , as it is said : And the Lord of hosts revealed Himself in my ears; surely this iniquity shall not be expiated by you till ye die.¹⁵ What constitutes profanation of the Name? — Rab said: If, e.g., I take meat for the butcher and do not pay him at once.¹⁶ Abaye said: That we have learnt [to regard as profanation] only in a place wherein one does not go out to collect payment, but in a place where one does not go out to collect, there is no harm in it [not paying at once]. Rabina said: And Matha Mehasia¹⁷ is a place where one goes out collecting payments due. Whenever Abaye bought meat from two partners, he paid money to each of them, afterwards bringing them, together and squaring accounts with both. R. Johanan said: In my case [it is a profanation if] I walk four cubits without [uttering words of] Torah or [wearing] tefillin.¹⁸

Isaac, of the School of R. Jannai. said: If one's colleagues are ashamed of his reputation, that constitutes a profanation of the Name. R. Nahman b. Isaac commented: E.g., if people say, May the Lord forgive So-and-so. Abaye explained: As it was taught: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God,¹⁹ i.e., that the Name of Heaven be beloved because of you. if someone studies Scripture and Mishnah, and attends on the disciples of the wise, is honest in business,²⁰ and speaks pleasantly to persons, what do people then say concerning him? 'Happy the father who taught him Torah, happy the teacher who taught him Torah; woe unto people who have not studied the Torah; for this man has studied the Torah look how fine his ways are, how righteous his deeds! . Of him does Scripture say: And He said unto me: Thou art My servant, Israel, in, whom I will be glorified.²¹ But if someone studies Scripture and Mishnah, attends on the disciples of the wise, but is dishonest in business, and discourteous in his relations with people, what do people say about him? ' Woe unto him who studied the Torah, woe unto his father who taught him Torah; woe unto his teacher who taught him Torah!' This man studied the Torah: Look, how corrupt are his deeds, how ugly his ways; of him Scripture says: In that men said of them,: These are the people of the Lord, and are gone forth out of His land.²²

R. Hama b. Hanina said: Great is penitence, for it brings healing to the world, as it is said: I will heal their backsliding, I will love them, freely.²³ R. Hama b. Hanina pointed out a contradiction: It is written : Return, ye backsliding children,²⁴ I.e., you who were formerly backsliding; and it is written: I will heal your backsliding?²⁵ This is no difficulty: in the one case the reference is where they return out of love, in the other, out of fear.²⁶

Rab Judah pointed out this contradiction: It is written: 'Return ye backsliding children, I will heal your backsliding', but it is also written: For I am a lord unto you. and I will take you one of a city. and two of a family?²⁷ This is no contradiction: The one verse speaks [of a return] out of love or fear; the other, when it comes as a result of suffering.

R. Levi said: Great is repentance, for it reaches up to the Throne of Glory, as it is said: Return, O Israel, unto the Lord thy God.²⁸

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 86b

R. Johanan said: Great is repentance. for it overrides a prohibition of the Torah, as it is said: . . . saying: If a man put away his wife, and she go from him, and become another man's, may he return unto her again? Will not that land be greatly polluted? But thou hast played the harlot with many lovers; and wouldest thou yet return to Me? Saith the Lord.¹ R. Jonathan said: Great is repentance, because it brings about redemption, as it is said And a redeemer will come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob,² i.e., why will a redeemer come to Zion? Because of those that turn from transgression in Jacob. Resh Lakish said: Great is repentance, for because of it premeditated sins are accounted as errors, as it is said: Return, O Israel, unto the Lord, thy God,' for thou hast stumbled in thy iniquity.³ 'Iniquity' is premeditated, and yet he calls it 'stumbling' But that is not so! For Resh Lakish said that repentance is so great that premeditated sins are accounted as though they were merits, as it is said: And when the wicked turneth from his wickedness, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby!⁴ That is no contradiction: One refers to a case [of repentance] derived from love, the other to one due to fear. R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Great is repentance, because it prolongs the [days and]⁵ years of man, as it is said: 'And when the wicked turneth from his wickedness . . . he shall live thereby'. R. Isaac said: In the West [Palestine] they said in the name of Rabbah b. Mari: Come and see how different from the character of one of flesh and blood is the action of the Holy One, blessed be He. As to the character of one of flesh and blood, if one angers his fellow,⁶ it is doubtful whether he [the latter] will be pacified or not by him. And even if you would say, he can be pacified, it is doubtful whether he will be pacified by mere words. But with the Holy One, blessed be He, if a man commits a sin in secret, He is pacified by mere words, as it is said: Take with you words, and return unto the Lord.⁷ Still more: He even accounts it to him as a good deed, as it is said: And accept that which is good.⁷ Still more: Scripture accounts it to him as if he had offered up bullocks, as it is said : So will we render for bullocks the offerings of our lips.⁷ Perhaps you will say [the reference is to] obligatory bullocks. Therefore it is said: I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely.⁸

It was taught: R Meir used to say, Great is repentance. for on account of an individual who repents, the sins of all the world are forgiven, as it is said: I will heal their backsliding. I will love them freely, for mine anger is turned away from him.⁸ 'From them' it is not said, but 'from him,'.

How is one proved a repentant sinner? — Rab Judah said: If the object which caused his original transgression comes before him on two occasions, and he keeps away from it. Rab Judah indicated: With the same woman, at the same time, in the same place. Rab Judah said: Rab pointed out the following contradictions. It is written: Happy is he whose transgression is covered,⁹ whose sin is pardoned;¹⁰ and it is also written: He that covereth his ‘transgression shall not prosper?’¹¹ This is no difficulty, one speaks of sins that have become known [to the public], the other of such as did not become known.¹² R. Zutra b. Tobiah in the name of R. Nahman said: Here we speak of sins committed by a man against his fellow, there of sins committed by man against the Omnipresent.¹³ It was taught: R. Jose b. Judah said: If a man commits a transgression, the first, second and third time he is forgiven, the fourth time he is not forgiven, as it is said: Thus saith the Lord.’ For three transgressions of Israel, Yea for four, I will not reverse it;¹⁴ and furthermore it says: Lo, all these things does God work, twice, yea, thrice, with a man.¹⁵ What does ‘furthermore’ serve for? — One might have assumed that applies only to a community, but not to an individual, therefore: Come and hear [the additional verse]: ‘Lo, all these things does God work, twice, yea, thrice with a man’.

Our Rabbis taught: As for the sins which one has confessed on one Day of Atonement, he should not confess them on another Day of Atonement; but if he repeated them, then he should confess them, on another Day of Atonement — And if he had not committed them again, yet confessed them again, then it is with regard to him that Scripture says: As a dog that returneth to his vomit, so is a fool that repeateth his folly.¹⁶ R. Eleazar b. Jacob said: He is the more praiseworthy, as it is said: For I know my transgressions, and my sin is even before me.¹⁷ How then do I [explain]. ‘As a dog that returneth to his vomit, etc.’? In accord with R. Huna; for R. Huna said: Once a man has committed a sin once and twice, it is permitted to him. ‘Permitted’? How could that occur to you? — Rather, it appears to him as if it were permitted.¹⁸

It is obligatory to confess the sin in detail [explicitly], as it is said: This people have sinned a great sin, and have made them a god of gold.¹⁹ These are the words of R. Judah b. Baba. R. Akiba said: [This is not necessary],²⁰ as it is said: ‘Happy is he whose transgression is covered, whose sin is pardoned.’²¹ Then why did Moses say: ‘And have made them a god of gold’? That is [to be explained] in accord with R. Jannai, for R. Jannai said:²² Moses said before the Holy One, blessed be He: The silver and gold which Thou hast increased unto Israel until they said ‘enough !’²³ has caused them to make golden gods.

Two good administrators arose unto Israel, Moses and David. Moses begged: let my sin be written down, as it is said: Because ye believed not in me to sanctify me.²⁴ David begged that his sin be not written down, as it is said; ‘Happy is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is pardoned’. This case of Moses and Aaron may be compared to the case of two women who received in court the punishment of stripes; one had committed an indecent act, the other had eaten the unripe figs of the seventh year.²⁵ Whereupon the woman who had eaten unripe figs of the seventh year said: I beg of you, make known for what offence I²⁶ have been punished with stripes, lest people say: The one woman was punished for the same sin that the other was punished for. They brought unripe fruits of the seventh year, and hanged them on her neck, and they were calling out before her: This woman was punished with stripes because she ate the unripe figs of the seventh year.

One should expose hypocrites to prevent²⁷ the profanation of the Name,²⁸ as it is said: Again, when a righteous man doth turn from righteousness. and commit iniquity, I will lay a stumbling-block before him.²⁹ The repentance of the confirmed sinner delays punishment, even though the decree of punishment for him had been signed already. The careless ease of the wicked ends in calamity. Power buries those who wield it. Naked did man come into the world, naked he leaves it. Would that his coming forth be like his coming in.³⁰ Whenever Rab went to the court, he used to say thus: Out of his own will he goes³¹ towards death, the wishes of his household he is unable to fulfil, for he returns empty to his home. Would that the coming forth be like the going in.³²

There were no salaries for the judges in antiquity. Like the office of the Rabbi, it was a post of honour. But every scholar who spent his time exclusively in the study of the Torah was freed from taxes and received public and private privileges.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 87a

Out of his own will he goes towards death, the wishes of his household he is unable to fulfil, for he returned empty to his house. Would that the coming forth be like the going in).¹ And when he [Rab]² saw a crowd escorting him, he would say: Though his excellency mount up to heaven, and his head reach unto the clouds, yet shall he perish forever like his own dung, they that have seen him shall say: 'Where is he?'³ When R. Zutra was carried shoulder-high⁴ on the Sabbath before the Pilgrimage festivals,⁵ he would say: For riches are not forever; and doth the crown endure unto all generations?⁶

It is not good to respect the person of the wicked.⁷ It is not good for the wicked that they are being favoured [by the Holy One, blessed be He] in this world. It was not good for Ahab that he was favoured in this world, as it is said: Because he humbled himself before Me, I will not bring the evil in his days.⁸ So as to turn aside the righteous in judgment⁹ — it is good for the righteous that they are not favoured in this world. It was good for Moses that he was not favoured in this world, as it is said: Because ye believed not in Me, to sanctify Me [etc.]. But had you believed in Me your time to depart this world would not yet have come. Happy are the righteous! Not only do they acquire merit, but they bestow merit upon their children and children's children to the end of all generations, for Aaron had several sons who deserved to be burnt like Nadab and Abihu, as it is said: 'That were left';¹⁰ but the merit of their father helped them. Woe unto the wicked! Not alone that they render themselves guilty, but they bestow guilt upon their children and children's children unto the end of all generations. Many sons did Canaan have, who were worthy to be ordained¹¹ like Tabi, the slave of R. Gamaliel, but the guilt of their ancestor caused them [to lose their chance].

Whosoever causes a community to do good, no sin will come through him, and whosoever causes the community to sin, no opportunity will be granted him to become repentant. Whosoever causes a community to do good, no sin will come through him'. Why? Lest he be in Gehinnom, and his disciples in Gan Eden [Paradise], as it is said: For Thou wilt not abandon my soul to the nether world, neither wilt Thou suffer thy godly one to see the pit.¹²

'And whosoever causes the community to sin, no opportunity will be granted him for repentance', lest he be in Gan Eden and his disciples in Gehinnom, as it is said: A man, that is laden with the blood of any person shall hasten his steps unto the pit; none will help him.¹³

IF ONE SAYS: I SHALL SIN, AND REPENT, SIN AND REPENT. Why is it necessary to state I SHALL SIN AND I SHALL REPENT twice? — That is in accord with what R. Huna said in the name of Rab; for R. Huna said in the name of Rab: Once a man has committed a transgression once or twice, it becomes permitted to him. 'Permitted'? How could that come into your mind — Rather, it appears to him like something permitted.

I SHALL SIN AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT SHALL PROCURE ATONEMENT; THEN THE DAY OF ATONEMENT DOES NOT PROCURE ATONEMENT. Shall we say that our Mishnah is not in accord with Rabbi, for Rabbi said: It was taught, For all transgressions of Biblical commandments, whether he repented or not, whether positive or negative, does the Day of Atonement procure atonement? — You may even say it will be in agreement with Rabbi. It is different when he relies on it.¹⁴

FOR TRANSGRESSIONS COMMITTED BY MAN AGAINST THE OMNIPRESENT. R. Joseph b. Helbe pointed out to R. Abbahu the following contradiction: [We learned]:¹⁵ FOR TRANSGRESSIONS COMMITTED BY MAN AGAINST HIS FELLOWMAN THE DAY OF ATONEMENT PROCURES NO ATONEMENT, but it is written: If one man sin against his fellow-man, God [Elohim] will pacify him?¹⁶ 'Elohim' here means 'the Judge'. But how then is the second half of the clause to be understood, 'But if a man sin against the Lord, who shall entreat for him'? — This is what he means to say: 'If a man sins against his fellow-man, the judge will judge him, he [his fellow] will forgive him';¹⁷ 'but if a man sins against the Lord God, who shall entreat for him'? Only repentance and good deeds.

R. Isaac said: Whosoever offends his neighbour, and he does it only through words, must pacify him, as it is written: My son, if thou art become surety for thy neighbour, If thou hast struck thy hands for a stranger — , thou art snared by the words of thy mouth. . . do this, now, my son, and deliver thyself, seeing thou art come into the hand of thy neighbour; go, humble thyself, and urge thy neighbour.¹⁸ If he has a claim of money upon you, open the palm of your hand to him,¹⁹ and if not, send many friends to him.²⁰ R. Hisda said: He should endeavour to pacify him through three groups of three people each, as it is said: He cometh before me and saith: I have sinned and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not.²¹ R. Jose b. Hanina said: One who asks pardon of his neighbour need do so no more than three times, as it is said: Forgive. I pray thee now . . . and now we pray thee.²² And if he [against whom he had sinned] had died, he should bring ten persons and make them stand by his grave and say: I have sinned against the Lord, the God of Israel, and against this one, whom I have hurt. R. Abba had a complaint against R. Jeremiah. He [R. Jeremiah] went and sat down at the door of R. Abba and as the maid poured out water, some drops fell upon his head. Then he said: They have made a dung-heap of me, and he cited this passage about himself: He raiseth up the poor out of the dust.²³ R. Abba heard that and came out towards him, saying: Now, I must come forth to appease you, as it is written: 'Go, humble thyself and urge thy neighbour'. When R. Zera had any complaint against any man, he would repeatedly pass by him,²⁴ showing himself to him, so that he may come forth to [pacify] him. Rab once had a complaint against a certain butcher, and when on the eve of the Day of Atonement he [the butcher] did not come to him,²⁵ he said: I shall go to him to pacify him. R. Huna met him and asked: Whither are you going, Sir? He said, To pacify So-and-so. He thought: Abba²⁶ is about to cause one's death.²⁷ He went there and remained standing before him [the butcher], who was sitting and chopping an [animal's] head. He raised his eyes and saw him [Rab], then said: You are Abba, go away. I will have nothing to do with you. Whilst he was chopping the head, a bone flew off, struck his throat, and killed him.

Talmud - Mas. Yoma 87b

R. Hiyya, whereupon Rab started again from the beginning; as Bar Kappara entered, he started again from the beginning; as R. Simeon, the son of Rabbi entered, he started again from the beginning. But when R. Hanina b. Hama entered, he said: So often shall I go back? And he did not go over it again. R. Hanina took that amiss. Rab went to him on thirteen eves of the Day of Atonement, but he would not be pacified. But how could he do so, did not R. Jose b. Hanina Say: One who asks pardon of his neighbour need not do so more than three times?¹ — It is different with Rab.² But how could R. Hanina act so [unforgivingly]? Had not Raba said that if one passes over his rights, all his transgressions are passed over [forgiven]? — Rather: R. Hanina had seen in a dream that Rab was being hanged on a palm tree, and since the tradition is that one who in a dream is hanged on a palm tree will become head [of an Academy] he concluded that authority will be given to him, and so he would not be pacified, to the end that he departed to teach Torah in Babylon.³

Our Rabbis taught: The obligation of confession of sins comes on the eve of the Day of Atonement, as it grows dark. But the Sages said: Let one confess before one has eaten and drunk, lest one become upset⁴ in the course of the meal. And although one has confessed before eating and drinking, he should confess again after having eaten and drunk, because perchance some wrong has happened in the course of the meal, And although he has confessed during the evening prayer, he should confess again during the morning prayer; [and although he has confessed] during the morning prayer, he should do so again during the Musaf [additional prayer]. And although he had confessed during the Musaf, he should do so again during the afternoon prayer; and although he had done so in the afternoon prayer, he should confess again in the Ne'ilah [concluding prayer]. And when shall he say [the confession]? The individual after his 'Amidah Prayer',⁵ the public reader in the middle thereof. What is it [the confession]? — Rab said: 'Thou knowest the secrets of eternity'.⁶ Samuel said: From the depths of the heart.⁷ Levi said: And in thy Torah it is said . . .⁸ R. Johanan said: Lord of the Universe, [etc.].⁹ Rab Judah: 'Our iniquities are too many to count, and our sins too numerous to be counted'. R. Hamnuna said: 'My God, before I was formed, I was of no worth, and now that I have been formed, it is as if I had not been formed. I am dust in my life, how much more in my death. Behold I am before Thee like a vessel full of shame and reproach. May it be thy will that I sin no more, and what I have sinned wipe away in Thy mercy, but not through suffering'.¹⁰ That was the confession [of sins] used by Rab all the year round, and by R. Hamnuna the younger, on the Day of Atonement. Mar Zutra said: All that [is necessary only] when he did not say: 'Truly, we have sinned'.¹¹ but if he had said: 'Truly, we have sinned', no more is necessary, for Bar Hamdudi said: Once I stood before Samuel, who was sitting, and when the public reader came up and said: 'Truly, we have sinned', he rose. Hence he inferred that this was the main confession.

We learned elsewhere: On three occasions of the year the priests raise their hands [in benediction] four times during the day; at the morning prayer, at Musaf, at Minhah [afternoon prayer] and at the closing of the [Temple] gates. Viz., on fast days, at the ma'amads and on the Day of Atonement.¹² What [is the prayer at] 'the closing of the [Temple] gates'? — Rab said: An extra prayer.¹³ Samuel said: 'Who are we, what is our life, etc.'?¹⁴

The following objection was raised: On the evening of the Day of Atonement one reads seven [benedictions]¹⁵ and then makes the confession, in the morning prayer one reads seven [benedictions] and makes confession, at Musaf one reads the seven [benedictions] and makes confession, at Minhah one reads the seven [benedictions] and makes confession, and at Ne'ilah one reads the seven [benedictions] and makes confession?¹⁶ [And further was]¹⁷ it taught: On the Day of Atonement as it becomes dark one reads the seven benedictions and makes confession, and concludes with the confession¹⁸ — that is the view of R. Meir, whereas the Sages say: He should read the seven [benedictions], and if he wishes to conclude with the confession, he may do so. That would be a refutation of Samuel?¹⁹ — It is a refutation.

'Ulla b. Rab came down [to the reader's desk] before Raba, commencing the Ne'ilah prayer with 'Thou hast chosen us and concluding with 'What are we, what is our life', and he praised him. R. Huna b. Nathan said: The individual should say it²⁰ after his prayer.

Rab said: The concluding prayer exempts from evening prayer [to follow]. Rab goes according to his idea that it is all extra prayer, and since one has said it already [at dusk] it is not required any more. But did Rab say so? Did not Rab say: The halachah is according to the view that the evening Prayer is not obligatory?²¹ He said this on the view that it is obligatory.²²

An objection was raised: On the evening of the Day of Atonement he should read seven [benedictions] and make confession, in the morning also seven and make confession, at Musaf also seven and make confession, at Minah also seven and make confession,²³ at Ne'ilah also seven and make confession, at the evening Prayer he reads seven benedictions [the seventh consisting of] the substance of the eighteen benedictions.²⁴ R. Hanina b. Gamaliel said in the name of his ancestors: One must read the complete prayer of eighteen benedictions,

In order to allow for another interpretation, with less fatal results to himself of that vision, he refused to become reconciled to Rab, forcing the latter to go to Babylon, where in accord with that dream he did become before long head of the School of Sura.

because one must make mention of Habdalah¹ in the benediction [commencing with] ‘Thou favourest’.² That is a dispute of Tannaim, for it was taught in a Baraitha: All those obliged to immerse themselves may do so in their usual manner on the Day of Atonement, the menstruating woman, and the woman after childbirth immerse themselves in their usual manner on the evening of the Day of Atonement. One who had a pollution may do so until the afternoon prayer.³ R. Jose said: He may do so throughout the day. But the following contradiction is to be pointed out: A man or woman afflicted with gonorrhoea, or with leprosy, one who had had intercourse with a menstruant, or one rendered unclean by contact with a dead person, may immerse themselves in their usual manner on the Day of Atonement. A menstruating woman, and a woman after childbirth may immerse themselves in their usual manner on the night before the Day of Atonement. One who had experienced a pollution may immerse himself throughout the day.⁴ R. Jose said: From the Minhah onwards, he may not immerse himself? — This is no difficulty: The one refers to the case that he had read the Ne’ilah prayer,⁵ the other that he had not read the Ne’ilah. If he had prayed, what is the reason for the view of the Rabbis?⁶ — The Rabbis hold: It is obligatory to take the ritual bath at the proper times.⁷ This implies that R. Jose would not hold this not to be obligatory, but surely it was taught: If he has had the name [of God] inscribed on his body he must not bathe, nor anoint himself, nor stand in an unclean place; if it happens that he is obliged to immerse himself, he should tie some reed around, go down and immerse himself, R. Jose said: He may go down and immerse himself in the usual manner, provided he does not rub it off. And we know that they are disputing the principle as to whether it is obligatory to take the ritual bath at its definite time!⁸ [The Tanna of] that [former Baraitha]⁹ is R. Jose b. Judah, for it was taught: R. Jose b. Judah said: The [one] immersion at the end suffices for her.¹⁰ Our Rabbis taught: One who experiences a pollution on the Day of Atonement should go down and immerse himself and in the evening he should rub himself off properly. ‘In the evening’? What is passed, is it not passed?¹¹ Rather say: He should rub himself off on the eve before!¹² He holds it is obligatory to rub oneself off. A tanna¹³ recited before R. Nahman: To one who experienced a pollution on the Day of Atonement, all sins will be forgiven. But it was taught: All his sins will be arranged before him? — What does ‘arranged’ mean? Arranged to be forgiven. In the School of R. Ishmael it was taught: One who experienced a [night-] pollution on the Day of Atonement, let him be anxious throughout the year, and if he survives the year, he is assured of being a child of the world to come. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: You may know it [from the fact that] all the world is hungry, and he is satisfied. When R. Dimi came, he said: He will live long, thrive and beget many children.¹⁴

(1) Lit., ‘division’. The reference to the distinction between holy and profane recited in the Amidah on the termination of the Sabbath and Festivals.

(2) V. P.B., p. 46.

(3) That means, if he had experienced pollution before then, he may immerse himself until Minhah, so that he may pray the afternoon prayer. But if it happened after the afternoon prayer, he should not immerse himself, but await until dark therewith. The Sages hold that the Ne’ilah is to be said at night, and therefore in agreement with Rab’s teaching, renders exempt the evening prayer; whereas R. Jose, who holds that the man who had experienced pollution may immerse himself throughout the day, so that even if he had experienced after the afternoon prayer, he may immerse himself in order that he might pray the concluding prayer, is of the opinion that the Ne’ilah prayer is not said at night, and therefore does not exempt the evening service.

(4) V. supra 6b.

(5) Before he experienced the pollution, and therefore R. Jose holds that he may not immerse himself after the Minhah.

- (6) In the second Baraita, allowing immersion after Minhah.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. A SUKKAH¹ WHICH² IS MORE THAN TWENTY CUBITS HIGH IS NOT VALID, R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID. ONE WHICH IS NOT TEN HAND BREADTHS HIGH, OR WHICH HAS NOT THREE WALLS, OR WHICH HAS MORE SUN THAN SHADE, IS NOT VALID.

GEMARA. We have learnt elsewhere³ : If the [cross-beam above an] alley-entry⁴ is more than twenty cubits high, it must be lowered. R. Judah says this is unnecessary. Now wherein lies the difference [between the two cases that] with regard to the Sukkah it is declared NOT VALID, while with regard to [the cross-beam over] the alley-entry, a remedy is indicated? — With regard to the Sukkah, since it is a Pentateuchal⁵ ordinance, it [was proper categorically to] state, NOT VALID;⁶ with regard to [the cross-beam over] an alley-entry, however, since the injunction is only Rabbinical,⁷ a remedy is given.⁸ And, if you wish, you may say that even with a Pentateuchal command a remedy may be given, but with regard to the Sukkah, as the ordinances relating thereto are many it was briefly stated, NOT VALID⁹ [while in the case of a cross-beam over] an alley-entry, since the regulations thereof¹⁰ are not many, a remedy is indicated.

Whence do we know this?¹¹ — Rabbah answered: Scripture says, That your generations may know¹² that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths,¹³ [with a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man 'knows' that he is dwelling in a booth, but with one higher than twenty cubits he does not 'know' that he is dwelling in a booth, since his eye does not descry it.¹⁴ R. Zera replied: From the following verse, And there shall be a booth for a shadow in the daytime from the heat.¹⁵ [With a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man sits in the shade of the booth;¹⁶ but with one higher than twenty cubits he sits, not in the shade of the booth¹⁶ but in the shade of its walls.¹⁷ Said Abaye to him,¹⁸ But if so, if a man made his Sukkah in Ashteroth Karnayim¹⁹ would it also be no valid Sukkah? — He answered him: In that case, remove the 'Ashteroth Karnayim' and there will remain the shade of the Sukkah, but here, remove the walls, and you have no shade of a Sukkah.²⁰

Raba replied: [It is derived] from the following verse, Ye shall dwell in booths seven days,²¹ the Torah declared, For the whole seven days leave thy permanent abode and dwell in a temporary abode. [With a booth] up to twenty cubits [high] a man makes his abode a temporary one; [in one] higher than twenty cubits, a man does not make his abode temporary, but permanent.²² Said Abaye to him, But if so, if he made walls of iron and placed the [proper] covering²³ over them, would it also²⁴ be no valid Sukkah. The other answered him, it is this that I mean to tell you: [In a booth] up to twenty cubits, which a man makes his temporary abode, even if he makes it permanent, he has fulfilled his obligation; [but in one] higher than twenty cubits, such as a man makes his permanent abode, even if he makes it temporary, he has not fulfilled his obligation.

(4) If an alleyway has courtyards opening into it, while on one side it is open to a public domain, a cross-beam placed over the entrance imparts to it some of the characteristics of a private domain within which freedom of movement on the Sabbath is permitted.

(5) V. Supra n. 1.

(6) The suggestion of a remedy might have been misunderstood as being mere advice the neglect of which did not vitally affect the performance of the precept, and so it would be concluded that ex post facto the Sukkah may be deemed fit. (V. Tosaf. 'Er. 2a s.v. סוכה contra Rashi).

(7) According to the Pentateuchal ordinance three walls suffice to make an enclosure private.

- (8) There is no need for so much precaution in the case of a Rabbinical, as in that of a Pentateuchal law.
- (9) Thus presenting a succinct ruling covering all disqualifications. Were remedies for each disqualification to be indicated the ruling would have extended to undue lengths, contrary to the principle of brevity in teaching (v. Pes. 3b).

- (22) Such a high structure requires firm foundations and walls and these give it the characteristics of a permanent abode.
- (23) סכך, 'to cover' refers especially to the valid covering of a Sukkah,
- (24) Since it is a permanent structure.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 2b

All¹ do not agree with [the deduction of] Rabbah, since that [verse]² refers to the knowledge of [future] generations. Nor do they agree with R. Zera, since that verse³ refers to the Messianic age.⁴ [What, however, does] R. Zera [answer to this objection]?- [he could answer], If so, the verse could read 'And there shall be a covering for a shadow in the daytime'. Why then was it stated, 'And there shall be a booth for a shadow in the daytime'? Hence you must infer therefrom both points.⁵

Nor do they⁶ agree with Raba, on account of the objection of Abaye.⁷

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Josiah in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion⁸ is where the walls do not reach the covering, but where the walls do reach the covering the sukkah is valid, even if it is higher than twenty cubits?

'Whose authority is followed' [you ask]? it is in accordance with Rabbah whose reason⁹ is that the eye does not descry it, but where the walls reach the covering, the eye¹⁰ does descry it.

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Huna in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion⁸ is where the area of the sukkah was only four cubits square but where it was more than four cubits square [both agree] that even if it is higher than twenty cubits it is valid? — In agreement with whom [you ask]? In agreement with R. Zera who gives as the reason¹¹ the [character of the] shade, and, since it¹² is spacious- there is the shade of a Sukkah.¹³

Whose authority is followed in the statement made by R. Hanan b. Rabbah in the name of Rab, that the difference of opinion¹⁴ is only where [the Sukkah] can contain [only] a person's head, the greater part of his body, and his table,¹⁵ but where it is larger than this [both agree] that even if it is higher than twenty cubits it is valid? — In agreement with whom [you ask]? In agreement with none.¹⁶

It is understandable that R. Josiah disagrees with R. Huna and with R. Hanan b. Rabbah, since they lay down a [minimum] measurement in the extent [of the Sukkah] while he does not lay down a minimum measurement as to the extent [thereof]; but [as regards] R. Huna and R. Hanan b. Rabbah, can we say that they differ on [what minimum of extent constitutes] the validity of the Sukkah, the former¹⁷ holding the opinion that the validity of the sukkah [depends upon its being a minimum of] four cubits [square] while the latter¹⁸ holds that the validity of the sukkah [depends, upon its capacity of] containing his head, the greater part of his body, and his table?— No! Both may agree that the validity of the Sukkah [depends upon its capacity of] containing his head, the greater part of his body, and his table, but here they differ on the following principle: One master¹⁸ holds the opinion that they¹⁹ differ where the Sukkah [can] contain [only] his head, the greater part of his body, and his table, but if it is larger than this both agree that it is valid,²⁰ while the other master¹⁷ holds the opinion that they differ [about a Sukkah whose size is] between [one capable of] containing his head, the greater part of his body and his table, and one four cubits square, but if it is more than four cubits square, both agree that it is valid.²¹

It was objected:²² A Sukkah which is higher than twenty cubits is not valid, but R. Judah declared it valid up to a height of forty or fifty cubits. R. Judah stated, ‘It happened with Queen Helena²³ in Lydda²⁴ that her Sukkah was higher than twenty cubits, and the elders nevertheless were going in and out of it and spoke not a word to her [in disagreement]’. They said to him, ‘Is²⁵ this a proof? She was a woman and [therefore] free from the obligation of the Sukkah’.²⁶ He answered them, ‘Did she not have seven sons? And besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’. Why does he have to add ‘and besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’? Thus he said to them: If you will answer [with regard to her seven sons] that her sons were minors²⁷ and minors are free from [the obligation of] the sukkah, since [however] she had seven, there must have been at least one²⁸ who was [old enough] not to be dependent on his mother; and if you will object that [the duty of educating] a child who is not dependent on his mother is merely a Rabbinical injunction, and she took no heed of a Rabbinical injunction, I²⁹ add ‘and besides, she did nothing except in accordance with the command of the Sages’. Now this [Baraita] is well according to the authority who says that their³⁰ difference of opinion was in the case where the walls did not reach the covering;³¹ since it is the custom of a queen to sit in a sukkah whose walls do not reach the roof because of ventilation; but according to the authority who states that they differed only in the case of a small' Sukkah,¹ is it then customary for a queen to sit in a diminutive sukkah?² — Rabbah b. Adda answered, The ruling was necessary only in the case of a Sukkah constructed with many recesses.³ Is it then customary for a queen to sit in a sukkah with many recesses? — R. Ashi answered: [The ruling] was necessary only in the case of the recesses in it.⁴ The Rabbis hold the opinion that her sons sat in the proper Sukkah, while she sat in one of the recesses for reasons of modesty, and hence they⁵ made no remark,⁶ while R. Judah was of the opinion that her sons sat with her,⁷ and still they⁵ made no remark.

R. Samuel b. Isaac⁸ stated, The halachah is that [the Sukkah] must be able to contain his head, the greater part of his body, and his table. R. Abba said to him, In agreement with whom is this ruling? Is it in agreement with Beth Shammai?⁹ -The other answered him,, According to whom else? Another version: R. Abba said to him, Who holds this opinion?-He answered, 'Beth Shammai, and¹⁰ do not budge from it'.

R. Nahman b. Isaac demurred: Whence do we know that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel are in dispute concerning a small Sukkah? Perhaps their dispute concerns a large Sukkah, as for instance, where a man sat at the entrance of the Sukkah with his table inside the house,¹¹ Beth Shammai holding the opinion that we prohibit it lest he be drawn after the table, while Beth Hillel hold that we do not prohibit it? This, furthermore, may be deduced also [from the wording], for it was stated, 'If his head and the greater part of his body were within the Sukkah but his table was within the house, Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid;'¹² but if it is [as you say]¹³ it ought to read, [If the Sukkah can] contain, or cannot contain [his head etc.].¹⁴

But do they not dispute concerning a small Sukkah? Has it not in fact been taught: [If a Sukkah can] contain his head, the greater part of his body and his table, it is valid. Rabbi says, It must be four cubits square. While in another [Baraita] it has been taught: Rabbi says, Any Sukkah which is not four cubits square is invalid, while the Sages say, Even if it can contain only his head, and the greater part of his body it is valid. Whereas of 'his table' there is no mention. Does not thus¹⁵ a contradiction arise between the two [Baraitas]? We must consequently infer therefrom that one is [according to] Beth Shammai, and the other according to Beth Hillel!¹⁶

Mar Zutra observed, The wording of this Mishnah¹² also proves it,¹³ since it says: 'Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid', and if it were [as you say]¹⁷ it ought to read: Beth Shammai say', He has not fulfilled his obligation while Beth Hillel say that he has.¹⁸ But do not the words, 'He [whose head etc.] were'¹⁹ present a difficulty? — The fact is that they differ on two [points], on a small Sukkah and a large one, but the text is defective and is to be read thus: 'He whose head and the greater part of his body were within the sukkah and his table within the house,'²⁰ Beth Shammai say, He has not fulfilled his obligation and Beth Hillel say, He has; and if it is [able to] contain only his head and the major part of his body alone,²¹ Beth Shammai declare it invalid and Beth Hillel valid.' Who is the authority for that which our Rabbis taught: 'A house which is not four cubits square is free from the obligations of Mezuzah²², and parapet,²³ does not contract levitical uncleanness from leprosy,²⁴ is not irredeemable among the dwelling houses of a walled city,²⁵ nor does one return on its account from the array of war,²⁶ nor need an 'Erub²⁷ be prepared for it, nor Shittuf,²⁷ nor does one place therein an 'Erub²⁸ nor make of it an extension¹ between two cities, nor can brothers or partners divide it '2 Must we say that it agrees with Rabbi,³ and not with the Rabbis?⁴ — No! One can even say that it agrees with the Rabbis. The Rabbis say it⁵ only with regard to a Sukkah which is a temporary abode, but with regard to a house which is a permanent abode, even the Rabbis admit that if it has an area of four cubits square, people dwell therein,⁶ otherwise, they do not dwell therein.

The Master said, 'It is free from the obligations of Mezuzah, and parapet, does not contract levitical uncleanness from leprosy, is not irredeemable among the houses of a walled city, nor does one return on its account from the array of war'. What is the reason? — Because the term 'house' occurs in all [these commandments].⁷

'Nor need an 'Erub be prepared for it, nor Shittuf, nor does one place therein an 'Erub'. What is the reason?—Since it is unsuitable as a dwelling.⁸ Now the 'Erub of courtyards is not placed therein, but a Shittuf⁹ may be placed therein. What is the reason? — Since it is no worse than a courtyard within an alleyway as we have learnt, 'The 'Erub of courtyards [are placed] in a courtyard, and the shittuf of an alley in the alley',¹⁰ and the point was raised, [How can it be said that], 'The 'Erubs of courtyards [are placed] in a courtyard'? Have we not in fact learnt,¹¹ If a man placed his 'Erub in a gatehouse¹² or in an exedra, or in a gallery, it is no valid 'Erub,¹³ and he who dwells therein cannot be a cause of prohibition?¹⁴ — Say rather, 'Erubs of courtyards [are placed] in a house of the courtyard, and the Shittufs of alleys in a courtyard of the alley; and this¹⁵ is no worse than a courtyard in an alley.

'Nor make of it an extension between two cities'. Since it is not regarded even as an outpost.¹⁶ What is the reason?— Outposts are suitable for their purpose,¹⁷ but this is unsuitable for anything.¹⁸

'Nor can brothers or partners divide it'. The reason apparently is that it is not four cubits square, but if it were four cubits square, [presumably] they could divide it.¹⁹ But have we not learnt, A courtyard should not be divided unless there be four cubits to each [of the parties]?²⁰ — Say rather, The law of division²¹ does not apply to it, as [it does in the case of] a courtyard. For R. Huna ruled, 'A courtyard is divided according to the number of its doors',²² and R. Hisda said, 'Four cubits are allowed for each door and the remainder is divided equally', but this²³ applies only to a house which is intended to stand, [and therefore] we allow it a [share in the] courtyard; but as to this [a hovel] which is intended to be demolished, we do not allow it [a share in the] courtyard.

If [a Sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high and he diminished its [height] with bolsters and cushions it is not a [valid] diminution,

(1) A legal fiction whereby a house between two cities' (situated at a distance of a hundred and forty-one and a third cubits from each other) 'extends' the boundaries of each if it was equidistant from both. The two cities are then treated as one, and walking from one to the other and along distances of two thousand cubits from each city in all directions is permitted on the Sabbath.

For the same reason only the resident of a house that is suitable as a dwelling imposes restrictions on his neighbours unless he joined in the 'Erub. even though he abandoned them¹ since his intention is canceled by that of other men;² if [he spread] straw [in order to diminish the height] and abandoned it, it is a [valid] diminution, and much more so is this the case with earth which he abandoned. [If he spread] straw which he had no intention of removing³ or earth concerning which his intention is unknown — this is a matter of dispute between R. Jose and the Rabbis. For we have learnt, If a house was filled with straw or gravel and the owner announced his intention to abandon it, it is duly abandoned.⁴ [Thus only if] he expressly abandoned it,⁵ is it not regarded as abandoned, but if he did not expressly do so, it is not so regarded; and with regard to this we have learnt, R. Jose ruled: Straw which he has no intention of removing is like ordinary earth⁶ and is deemed to be abandoned; earth which he intends to remove [later] is like ordinary straw⁶ and is not deemed to be abandoned.⁷ [If a Sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high but palm-leaves⁸ hung down within the twenty cubits, if the shade⁹ is more than the sun,¹⁰ it is valid, otherwise it is invalid. If [the sukkah] was ten handbreadths high¹¹ and palm-leaves hung down within the ten cubits, Abaye¹² intended to say that if the sun [that penetrates through them] is more than their shade, it is valid,¹³ [but] Raba said to him, This is a house [whose roof] hangs low down, and no man lives in such a dwelling. If it was higher than twenty cubits and he built a ledge at the middle wall¹⁴ along its whole length¹⁵ and it¹⁶ has the minimum size of a valid Sukkah,¹⁷ it¹⁸ is valid.¹⁹ If [he built the ledge] on a side [wall], — if from the edge of the ledge to the wall [opposite] there are four cubits,²⁰ it²¹ is invalid; but if the distance was less than four cubits, it¹⁸ is valid.²² What principle does he teach us by this ruling? That we apply the rule of the 'curved wall'?²³ But have we not [already] learnt it: A house [the middle of whose flat roof] is missing and one placed the valid covering of a Sukkah upon it,²⁴ if there are four cubits from the [top of the] wall to the covering, it²⁵ is invalid;²⁶ which [shows that] if the distance was less than this it is valid?²⁷ — One might have thought that only there²⁸ [it is valid] since [each side] is suitable [to serve] as a wall;²⁹ but that here³⁰ since it³¹ is unsuitable for a wall, one might say that it is invalid, [therefore] we were taught [that even here the principle³² is applied].

If [a sukkah] was higher than twenty cubits and one built a platform in the middle of it, if there are four cubits on every side between the edge of the platform and the wall, it³³ is invalid; but if the distance is less than four cubits, it is valid. What principle does this teach us? That we apply the rule of the 'curved wall'?³⁴ But is not this principle identical with the former one?—One might have thought that we apply the rule of the 'curved wall' on one side only, but not on every side, therefore we were taught [that we apply it to all sides also].

If [a Sukkah] was less than ten handbreadths in height and one hollowed out³⁵ [a hole]³⁶ in order to bring it to [ten handbreadths], — if there was a distance of three handbreadths from the brim of the hollow to the wall, it is invalid;

- (7) It has thus been shown that all agree that straw or earth that had been explicitly abandoned is deemed to be duly abandoned, and that straw about which the owner's intention is not known and earth which he intends to remove is not regarded as abandoned, while as regards straw or earth which the owner does not intend to remove and earth about which the owner's intention is not known there is a divergence of view between R. Jose, who deems it to be abandoned, and the Rabbis.

if the distance was less than three handbreadths¹ it is valid. Why do we say there² 'less than four cubits', and here 'less than three handbreadths'? In the former case where there is a wall,³ it is sufficient [if the distance is] 'less than four cubits'; in the latter case, however, where a wall has to be made,⁴ [if the distance is] 'less than three handbreadths' it is [valid]; otherwise it is not.

If [a sukkah] was more than twenty cubits high and one erected in it⁵ a pillar ten handbreadths high, and large enough for a valid sukkah,⁶ [in this case] Abaye intended to say the partitions⁷ are deemed to be continued upward,⁸ [but] Raba said to him: Recognizable partitions are necessary, which these are not.

Our Rabbis taught: If a man drove four poles into the ground and put the sukkah-covering on them, R. Jacob declares it valid and the Sages declare it invalid. R. Huna stated: The dispute relates only [to poles erected] on the edge of a roof, where R. Jacob holds that we apply the rule of 'the partition continues upward'⁹ while the Sages hold that we do not apply the rule of 'the partition continues upward'; but [if they were erected] in the middle of the roof,¹⁰ all agree that [the Sukkah is] invalid.¹¹ R. Nahman, however, maintained that the dispute relates only [to poles erected] in the middle of the roof.¹² It was asked: [Does he mean that] the dispute concerns only [poles that were erected] in the middle of the roof, but if such were erected on the edge of the roof all agree that it is valid,¹³ or is it possible [that he means that] the dispute concerns both cases? — The question remains undecided.¹⁴

An objection was raised: If one drove poles in the ground and placed the Sukkah-covering over them, R. Jacob declares [such a sukkah] valid, and the Sages declare it invalid. Now the earth, surely, is [in respect of partitions] like the middle of a roof¹⁵ and still R. Jacob regards [the Sukkah] as valid. Is this not, then, a refutation of R. Huna?¹⁶ — It is indeed a refutation. Moreover, [presumably] they dispute¹⁷ concerning the middle of the roof, only, but where [poles are put up] on the edge of the roof they all agree that it is valid. Must it then be said that this will refute R. Huna on two points?¹⁸ -R. Huna could answer you: They disagree about poles in the middle of the roof, and likewise also about those on the edge, and the reason why the dispute concerns the middle of the roof is in order to show you how far R. Jacob's view extends viz., that even where the poles were in the middle of the roof he holds [the Sukkah] to be valid.

Our Rabbis taught: If a man drove four [round shaped] poles into the ground and covered them with the Sukkah-covering, R. Jacob ruled, We see: If it is found that on being planed and smoothed¹⁹ there would remain the width of a handbreadth on two adjacent sides,²⁰ they²¹ are treated as deymoads,²² but if not, they cannot be treated as deymoads for R. Jacob used to say, The prescribed minimum width of the deymoads of a Sukkah is a handbreadth;²³ but the Sages say, Only if two [of the adjacent walls] are proper [walls], may the width of the third be only a handbreadth.

ONE OF WHICH IS NOT TEN HANDBREADTHS HIGH. Whence do we know this?- It was stated, Rab, R. Hanina, R. Johanan and R. Habiba learnt: (throughout all Seder Mo'ed²⁴ when these pairs are mentioned together [some] substitute the name of R. Jonathan for that of R. Johanan), the ark [of the covenant] was nine handbreadths high,²⁵ and the ark cover one handbreadth,²⁶ making a total of ten handbreadths, and it is written, And there I will meet with thee, and I will speak with thee from above the ark-cover;²⁷

(1) So that the rule of labud (v. Glos.) can be applied.

(2) In the case of the ledge.

(3) Since its height was no less than ten handbreadths.

(4) Since one lower than ten hand breadths cannot be regarded as a valid wall.

(5) Far away from the walls.

(6) I.e., its top had an area of no less than seven handbreadths and a fraction square.

(7) Sc. the side of the pillar.

(8) As far as the ceiling, and that, since the sides are no less than ten handbreadths high and the distance between the top of the pillar and the roof is less than twenty cubits, the pillar constitutes a valid Sukkah.

(9) The walls of the house, may, therefore, be regarded as continuing upward and forming walls for the Sukkah.

(10) So that the house walls are removed front the poles.

(11) The poles alone being insufficient to constitute valid walls.

(12) R. Jacob holding that poles provided the width of each is no less than a handbreadth, constitute valid walls for a Sukkah, while the Sages hold that a Sukkah must have no less than two valid walls adjacent to each other and a third one of the minimum width of a handbreadth.

- (13) On the principle of upward extension.
- (14) Teku (v. Glos.).
- (15) Since in neither case are there any partitions beneath the poles to which the rule of ‘partitions continue upward’ could be applied.
- (16) Who holds that, where the poles were erected in the middle of a roof, all agree that the Sukkah is invalid.
- (17) R. Jacob and the Rabbis, in the Baraitha just cited.
- (18) His statement (a) that all agree that poles in the middle of a roof constitute no valid Sukkah is refuted by the explicit statement in the Baraitha, while his statement (b) that the dispute concerns poles erected on the edge of the roof is refuted by the inference just made.
- (19) I.e., cut into a rectangular shape and a portion of the inside removed.

and it has been taught, R. Jose stated, Neither did the Shechinah¹ ever descend to earth, nor did Moses or Elijah ever ascend to Heaven,² as it is written, ‘The heavens are the heavens of the Lord, but the earth hath He given to the sons of men’.³ But did not the Shechinah descend to earth? Is it not in fact written, And the Lord came down upon Mount Sinai?⁴ — That was above ten handbreadths [from the summit]. But is it not written, And His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives?⁵ — That will be above ten handbreadths. But did not Moses and Elijah ascend to Heaven? Is it not in fact written, And Moses went up unto God?⁶ — [That was] to a level lower than ten [handbreadths from heaven]. But is it not written, And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven?⁷ — [That was] to a level lower than ten handbreadths. But is it not written, He⁸ seizeth hold of the face of His throne, and He spreadeth His cloud upon him,⁹ and R. Tanhum said: This teaches that the Almighty spread some of the radiance of¹⁰ his Shechinah and his cloud upon him?¹¹ — That was at a level lower than ten handbreadths. But in any case is it not written, ‘He seizeth hold of the face of His throne’?¹² — The throne was well lowered for his sake until [it reached a level] lower than ten handbreadths [from Heaven] and then he¹¹ seized hold of it.

One can well understand that the ark was nine [handbreadths high] since it is written, And they shall make an ark of acacia wood: two cubits and a half shall be the length thereof, and a cubit and a half the breadth thereof, and a cubit and a half¹³ the height thereof,¹⁴ but whence do we know that the ark-cover was a handbreadth [high]? — From that which R. Hanina learned: As for all the vessels which Moses made, the Torah gave the measurements of their length and breadth and height, [while in the case of] the ark-cover its length and its breadth are given,¹⁵ but not its height.¹⁶ Proceed, therefore, to deduce it from the smallest of the vessels, concerning which it is said, And thou shalt make unto it a border of a handbreadth round about.¹⁷ Just as there the height was a handbreadth so was it there also a handbreadth. But why should not our deduction be made from the vessels themselves?¹⁸ — If one select the greater, one does not select well; if one select the lesser, one selects well.¹⁹ But why should not our deduction be made from the plate of gold,²⁰ as it was taught: ‘The ziz²¹ was in the shape of a plate of gold two finger-breadths broad and stretching from ear to ear, and upon it were engraved two lines, Yod and He²² above, and Kodesh²³ [followed by a] Lamed²⁴ below,²⁵ and R. Eliezer son of R. Jose said, I saw it in Rome²⁶ and it had Kodesh Ladonai²⁷ on one line? — We deduce [the measurements of a] vessel from another vessel, but we do not deduce [the measurements of a] vessel from an ornament. Why then should we not deduce from the crown,²⁸ of which a master stated, The crown was on the smallest possible size?²⁹ — We deduce the size of a vessel from that of another vessel, but not from the appurtenances of a vessel. If so, [it may be objected] was not the border also an appurtenance of a vessel?³⁰ — The border was below [the top of] the table.³¹ This is correct according to the authority who holds that the border was below, but according to the authority who holds that it was above³² what can one answer³³ seeing that it³⁴ was only an appurtenance of a vessel? — The fact is that one adduces the size of a thing some of whose measurements are given by the Torah from another thing whose measurements are given by the Torah, but no deduction can be made from the plate of gold or the crown of which the Torah gave no measurements at all.

R. Huna said: [The height of the ark-cover may be deduced] from the following verse, Upon the face of the ark-cover' on the east,³⁵ and a 'face' is not smaller than a handbreadth. But perhaps it means a face like that of the Bar-Yokani?¹ — If one select the greater, one does not choose well, if one select the lesser, one does select well. Might it not be said that the face meant was one like that of a zipartha² which is very small? — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, R. Huna draws an analogy between two expressions of 'face'.³ It is written here, '[Upon the face of the ark-cover]', and it is written elsewhere,⁴ From the face of Isaac his father.⁵ But why should we not deduce from the 'face' Above, concerning which it is written, As one seeth the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me?⁶ -If one selects the greater, one does not select well; if one select the lesser, one selects well. Then why should we not deduce from the cherub,⁷ concerning which it is written, Toward the face of the ark-cover shall the faces of the cherubim be?⁸ — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, We have a tradition that the face of the cherubim was not less than a handbreadth, and R. Huna too made his deduction from this verse.⁹ What is the derivation of cherub?— R. Abbahu said, 'Like a child', for in Babylon they call a child Rabia.¹⁰ Said Abaye to him: If so,¹¹ how will you explain the Scriptural text, The first face was the face of the cherub and the second face the face of a man,¹² seeing that the face of a cherub is the same as that of a man?¹³ — [One¹⁴ has] a large face and the other a small face.¹⁵

(2) This is no doubt a polemic against the doctrine of the Ascension.

(3) Ps. CXV, 16. Now since the Shechinah descended as low as the ark-cover it may be concluded that the boundary of the earth is at that level, viz., ten handbreadths from, the ground. Consequently a wall whose height is less than ten handbreadths cannot be regarded as a valid wall.

But whence do we know that the height of the interior space¹⁶ exclusive of the covering, must be ten [handbreadths] seeing that it might be said that the covering¹⁷ also is included? — The fact is that the deduction¹⁸ is made from the Temple covering of which it is written, And the house which King Solomon built for the Lord, the length thereof was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits,¹⁹ and it is written, The height of the one cherub was ten cubits and so was it of the other cherub,²⁰ and it was taught, Just as we find in the Temple that the cherubim²¹ reached to a third of the height thereof²² so also in the Tabernacle²³ they reached to a third of its height.²⁴ Now what was the height of the Tabernacle? Ten cubits, as it is written, Ten cubits shall be the length of a board.²⁵ How much is this? Sixty handbreadths. How much is a third? Twenty handbreadths. Deduct the ten of the ark and the ark-cover,²⁶ and ten handbreadths remain; and it is written, And the cherubim shall spread out their wings on high, covering the ark-cover with their wings.⁹ [From which we see that] the Divine Law calls [the wings that were stretched] above a height of ten handbreadths²⁷ a 'covering'.²⁸ But whence do we know that their wings were above their heads? Is it not possible that they were on a level with their heads.²⁹ — R. Aha b. Jacob answered, It is written 'On high'. But perhaps this means that the wings were raised very high?³⁰ — Is it then written, 'On high, on high'?

This explanation is satisfactory according to R. Meir, who says that all the cubits [in the Sanctuary] were normal cubits,³¹ but according to R. Judah who says that the cubits of the edifice were six handbreadths, but of the vessels were five, what can be said? For how much [then] were the ark and cover?³² Eight and a half,³³ so that eleven and a half handbreadths are left.³⁴ Shall we [therefore] say that [according to R. Judah] a Sukkah must be [at least] eleven and a half [handbreadths high]? — The fact is that according to R. Judah the law³⁵ was learnt as a tradition, for R. Hiyya b. Ashi citing Rab stated: The laws concerning [minima],³⁶ standards, interpositions³⁷ and partitions³⁸ are [a part of the] halachah that was given to Moses on Sinai. But are not the laws relating to minima Pentateuchal, since it is written, A land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig-trees and pomegranates, a land of olive-trees and honey,³⁹ and R. Hanin stated that all this verse was said in allusion to the prescribed minima. 'Wheat' is an allusion to the leprous house as we have learnt: He who enters a leprous house with his clothes on his shoulders, and his sandals and rings in his hand, both he and they become instantaneously unclean;⁴⁰ [ if however he was dressed in his garments, and his sandals were on his feet, and his rings on his fingers, he becomes instantaneously unclean, but they¹ remain clean² unless he carries there long enough to eat half a loaf of wheaten bread but not of barley bread,³ while in a reclining position and eating with condiment.⁴ ‘Barley’? As we have learnt, A barley-corn's bulk of a bone⁵ defiles by contact and by carrying, but not by ‘overshadowing’.⁶ ‘Vines’ are an allusion to the fourth part [of a log of wine which is the minimum prohibited] to a Nazirite.⁷ ‘Fig-trees’ allude to the size of a dry fig [which is the minimum measurement for transgressing the law against] the carrying out⁸ of [food] on the Sabbath. ‘Pomegranates’? As we have learnt: All [defiled wooden] vessels belonging to householders⁹ [become clean if the breaches in them] are as large as pomegranates.¹⁰ ‘A land of olive-trees’ [is an allusion to the] land all of whose [minima] standards [for permitted and forbidden things] is the bulk of an olive. How can it possibly mean ‘all whose [minima] standards’? Are there not those which we have just mentioned? — Say rather, ‘The majority of whose [minima] standards are the bulk of an olive’. ‘Honey’ alludes to the size of a large date,¹¹ [which is the minimum size forbidden] on the Day of Atonement. Does it not then clearly follow that the [minima] standards are Pentateuchal?¹² — Do you then imagine that the [minima] standards were actually prescribed in the Pentateuch? [The fact is that] they are but traditional laws while the Scriptural verse is merely a support.

But are not [the laws of] interposition Pentateuchal, as it is written, And he shall wash his flesh in water¹³ [which implies] that nothing should interpose between him and the water? The traditional law comes [to teach] concerning one's hair, in agreement with a statement of Rabbah b. Bar Hana, for Rabbah b. Bar Hana stated: One knotted hair constitutes an interposition;¹⁴ three hairs do not, but I do not know [the law in the case of] two. But is not the law relating to one's hair also Pentateuchal, since it was written, And he shall wash [eth] his flesh in water¹³ and [the word] ‘eth’ includes that which is joined to his body, i.e., his hair?¹⁵ — The traditional law comes to teach with reference to [the ruling reported by] R. Isaac; for R. Isaac said:

(1) Since they were worn in the usual manner.

(2) They are included in the category of ‘clothes’ which are only to be washed (cf. Lev. XIV, 47).

(3) Wheaten bread is the more easily eaten.

If wooden vessels which are unclean become broken, they revert to their cleanliness if the breach is so large, since no householder would continue the use of utensils broken to such an extent, and by losing the status of a utensil, an object becomes levitically clean. In the case of a craftsman's utensils, even holes as small as an olive, are sufficient to deprive them of the legal status of utensils, since they cause the utensils to be unfit for sale, and they consequently become clean.

(11) ‘Honey’ in the Bible is regarded as referring to dates’ honey.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 6b

According to the word of the Torah¹ if most [of one's hair is covered]² and one minds it, an interposition is constituted,³ and if one does not mind it, no interposition is constituted. [The Rabbis] however enacted a prohibition against [a covering of] most of one's hair, even if one does not mind it, as a preventive measure [against the possibility of allowing an interposition on] most of one's hair where one does mind it, and that [a covering over] the minor part of one's hair where one minds it [shall constitute an interposition] on account [of the possibility of allowing an interposition over] most of one's hair where one minds it. Then why should not a prohibition be enacted against an interposition over the lesser part of one's hair where one does not mind it as a preventive measure against [the possibility of allowing an interposition over] the lesser part where one does mind it or the major part which one does not mind? — This ruling⁴ itself is only a restrictive enactment; shall we come and institute a restrictive enactment against the possibility of infringing another restrictive enactment?⁵

[As for the laws of] partitions, these are those referred to above.⁶ That is satisfactory according to R. Judah,⁷ but according to R. Meir⁸ what can one say?⁹ — That the tradition refers to [the legal fiction] of extension,¹⁰ junction¹¹ and the curved wall.¹²

OR WHICH HAS NOT THREE WALLS. Our Rabbis taught: Two [walls] must be of the prescribed dimensions, and the third [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ R. Simeon says: Three walls must be of the prescribed dimensions, and the fourth [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ On what principle do they differ? — The Rabbis hold that the traditional Scriptural text¹⁴ is authoritative, while R. Simeon holds that the traditional reading¹⁵ is authoritative. 'The Rabbis hold that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative', and the word Sukkoth occurs twice defectively and once plene, making four references.¹⁶ Deduct one¹⁷ for the law itself,¹⁸ and three remain; two [walls at least] must be of the prescribed dimensions, and tradition came and diminished [the prescribed minimum of] the third, reducing it to only one handbreadth. 'R. Simeon holds that the traditional reading is authoritative'. The word Sukkoth¹⁹ is read thrice, which²⁰ equals six [references]. Deduct one Scriptural reference²¹ for the law itself and four remain; three walls at least of prescribed dimensions, and tradition came and diminished the [prescribed minimum of the] fourth and reduced it to a handbreadth. And if you wish, you can say that they²² are unanimous that the traditional reading is authoritative²³ but they differ in this; that one Master²⁴ holds that the covering heeds a Scriptural reference,²⁵ while the other Master²⁶ holds that it does not.²⁷ And if you wish you can say that they are unanimous that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative,²⁸ but they differ on this principle; that one Master²⁴ holds that the tradition comes to diminish [the implications of Scripture]²⁹ while the other²⁶ holds that tradition comes and adds to it.³⁰

And if you wish you can say that both agree that tradition comes to diminish and that the traditional Scriptural text is authoritative, but they differ as to whether one uses first [references] for exegesis. One Master²⁶ holds that we employ first references for exegesis, and the other Master³¹ holds that we do not.

R. Mattenah said: The reason of R. Simeon is a derivation from the following verse: And there shall be a Sukkah for a shadow in the day-time from the heat, and for a refuge and for a covert from storm and from rain.³² Where is this handbreadth [of a wall]³³ placed? — Rab said: It is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls].³⁴ R. Kahana and R. Assi said to Rab:

(1) 'Torah' here means the halachah received by Moses on Sinai (Rashi).

(2) With mud; or each hair was knotted singly.

(3) So far in virtue of the halachah given to Moses on Sinai.

(4) That an interposition (a) over a minor part which one minds or (b) over a major part which one does not mind.

(5) Of course not. Hence the permissibility of an interposition over a minor portion which one does not mind.

- (27) And four free references for the walls remain.
- (28) The number of free references is consequently three.
- (29) Thus reducing the third wall to one handbreadth.
- (30) I.e., Scripture teaches us the necessity of three walls and tradition adds a fourth.
- (31) Sc. the Rabbis.
- (32) Isa. IV, 6; unless there are four walls, the Sukkah is no refuge from storms.
- (33) Of the third wall according to the Rabbis and of the fourth according to R. Simeon.
- (34) Sc. if, for instance, (according to the Rabbis) there are only two walls running respectively from north to south along the east and from east to west along the south, meeting each other at south east, the small handbreadth wall is to be placed either at the northern end of the eastern wall or at the western end of the southern wall.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 7a

Why not place it in a slanting position?¹ Rab remained silent. It was also stated: Samuel said in the name of Levi: It is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls], and so it is ruled in the Beth Hamidrash that it is placed at right angles to one of the projecting [walls]. R. Simon (or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi) ruled: One makes [the additional wall of the width of] a loose² handbreadth and places it within three handbreaths of the wall, since whatever is less than three handbreadths from the wall is regarded as joined to the wall.³

Rab Judah said, A Sukkah made like an [open] alley-way⁴ is valid, and this handbreadth [wall] is placed in whatever side one pleases.⁵ R. Simon (or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi) says, He makes a strip of slightly more than four [handbreadths]⁶ and places it within three handbreadths of the wall, since whatever is less than three handbreadths from the wall is regarded as joined to the wall. But why did you say in the previous case⁷ that one loose handbreadth suffices while here you say that there must be a strip of four handbreadths? — In the previous instance where there are two valid walls,⁸ a loose handbreadth suffices, but here, where there are no two valid walls,⁹ if there is a strip of four handbreadths it is valid, otherwise, it is not [valid]. Raba ruled, It¹⁰ is only permitted if it has the form of a doorway.¹¹ Another version is that Raba said, And it¹⁰ is also valid if it has the form of a doorway.¹² Another version is that Raba said: And in addition,¹³ the form of a doorway [to the intervening part] is necessary.¹⁴ R. Ashi found R. Kahana making [the third wall of a Sukkah] a loose handbreadth wide¹⁵ and constructing also the form of a doorway. He said to him: Does not the Master hold the opinion of Raba who said that it is also valid with the form of a doorway?¹⁶ — He answered: I accept the other reading of [the statement of] Raba viz., that in addition [to a board of the size of a handbreadth] the form of a doorway is also necessary.

‘Two walls must be of the prescribed dimensions etc.’¹⁷ Raba¹⁸ said, And similarly with regard to the Sabbath.¹⁹ Since [the handbreadth] is regarded as valid wall of the Sukkah it is also regarded as a valid wall in respect of the Sabbath.²⁰ Abaye raised an objection against him: Do we then apply the rule of ‘since’?²¹ Was it not in fact taught: ‘[The rules relating to the structure of] the wall of a Sukkah are the same as those relating to that of the Sabbath,²² provided only that there is no gap of three handbreadths between any two reeds.²³ And the [law relating to the] Sabbath is more [stringent] than that of Sukkah, in that the [wall for purposes of] the Sabbath is valid only if its standing portion is more than that which is broken,²⁴ which is not the case with the Sukkah’. Now this means, does it not, that the law relating to the Sabbath of the Sukkah²⁵ is more [stringent] than that relating to the Sukkah itself,²⁶ and that we do not apply the rule of ‘since’?²⁷ — No, [it means that the law relating to] the ordinary Sabbath is more [stringent in its requirements with regard to a valid wall] than [the law relating to] the Sabbath of the Sukkah.²⁸ But if this is so,²⁹ why was it not also stated: [The law relating to] the ordinary Sukkah³⁰ is more [stringent] than [that of] the Sukkah of Sabbath,³¹ since [the validity of] the ordinary Sukkah demands a width of a loose handbreadth [for the third wall] while [the validity of] the Sukkah of Sabbath does not require the width of a loose handbreadth [for a wall] but a side-post alone is sufficient,³² for it is you who ruled³³ that if one placed Sukkah-covering over an alleyway which has a side-post it is valid?³⁴ — There was no need to mention this,³⁵ [since it is obvious³⁶ that] if we apply [the rule of ‘since’] from the less stringent³⁷ to the more stringent,³⁸ we certainly apply it From the more stringent to the less stringent.³⁹ [Reverting to] the main subject; ‘Rab ruled:

- (1) So that it would be facing two walls and the Sukkah would seem to have four walls. Lit., ‘as the head of an ox’, so
 - (2) A handbreadth is four fingerbreadths and the ‘loose handbreadth’ is measured by holding the fingers loosely, not pressed against one another.
 - (3) The total width now being four handbreadths and the prescribed minimum size of a Sukkah wall being seven handbreadths, the wall constitutes the greater part of a valid Sukkah wall.
 - (4) The two walls facing one another.
 - (5) Since either wall at either end is a projecting wall.
 - (6) The width of one handbreadth not being enough in this case.
 - (7) Where the walls were at right angles to one another.
 - (8) Cf. previous note.
 - (9) Since each stands isolated from the other.
 - (10) A Sukkah that has one wall less than the required number of walls.
 - (11) I.e., it is not enough to attach one board of the width of four handbreadths to one of the walls, but two posts each half a handbreadth in width must be attached to each opposite wall with a cross-beam joining them (cf. ‘Er. 11b).
 - (12) Instead of a board of the width of a handbreadth; sc. either the one or the other contrivance renders the Sukkah valid.
 - (13) To a board of the width of a handbreadth.
 - (14) Sc. one of the posts on which the cross-beam lies (cf. supra n. 2) must be a full handbreadth wide.
 - (15) In agreement with the ruling of R. Simon supra.
 - (16) Without the addition of a board of the full width of a handbreadth.
 - (17) Supra 6b.
 - (18) Var. lec. Rabbah.
 - (19) Sc. though at least three walls are necessary to constitute a private domain to permit carrying therein on the Sabbath, on the Sabbath of Tabernacles the Sukkah is regarded as a private domain even though it has only two normal walls and one of the width of a handbreadth, and if he set up such a Sukkah next to his entrance of this house adjoining the street, he may carry in and out of it into his house.

(20) As the third narrow wall is on such a Sabbath, as on any other day, deemed valid as a wall for the Sukkah it is ipso facto deemed valid as a wall in respect of enclosing a private domain, and if such a Sukkah is set up at the entrance of a house opening out into the street, one may carry out of the house into the Sukkah and vice versa.

(21) 'Since (the handbreadth wall) is regarded etc.'

(22) Sc. the same relaxation of the law (cf. 'Er. 16b) is applicable in both cases.

(23) That make up the fence.

(24) A technical term meaning that the space of wall must exceed the interstices.

(25) Sc. the Sabbath in the week of Tabernacles.

(26) Sc. that though the Sukkah is valid as a Sukkah, it is not valid to carry therein on the Sabbath unless the wall space is more than the interstices.

(27) Since the walls are valid in respect of the Sukkah they are also valid in respect of the Sabbath.

(28) For on the Sabbath of the Festival the rule of 'since' (cf. n. 6) is well applied.

(29) That the comparison is only between the Sabbath generally and the Sabbath of the festival.

(30) Of the festival weekdays.

(31) Cf. supra n. 4.

(32) Since we compare the wall of Sabbath to the wall of Sukkah, two opposite walls and a side-post should suffice in the case of the latter as in that of the former.

(33) By 'applying the rule of 'since etc.'.

(34) On the Sabbath.

(35) That the law relating to a Sukkah generally is more restrictive than that relating to a Sukkah on the Sabbath.

(36) By an inference from the ruling in the earlier clause.

(37) Sukkah.

(38) Sabbath.

(39) Viz., that a sidepost that effects validity in respect of the Sabbath also effects it in respect of Sukkah.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 7b

If one placed Sukkah-covering over an alley-way which has a side-post it is valid'. Rab further ruled: If one placed Sukkah-covering over the [upright] boards around wells¹ it is valid [as a Sukkah]. And the enunciation of [all the three laws² was] necessary. For if he had mentioned only [the law relating to] the alley-way one would have assumed [that there the Sukkah is valid]³ because it had two proper walls, but that in the case of partitions of wells, which have not two proper walls, the Sukkah is not valid. And if we had been informed of the boards around wells only, one would have assumed [that there the sukka is valid] because there are four walls, but that if one placed sukka-covering over an alleyway, where there are no walls, it is not [valid]. And if we had been informed of both those laws [but not of the third,] one would have assumed that from the more stringent to the less stringent [we apply the rule of 'since'] but not from the less stringent to the more. [Therefore all the three enunciations were] necessary.

OR WHICH HAS MORE SUN THAN SHADE IS NOT VALID.

Our Rabbis taught: [This⁴ applies only where] the sunshine is due to the scanty covering, but not where it is due to [interstices in] the walls, while R. Josiah says,⁴ Even where it is due to [interstices in] the walls. R. Yemar b. Shelemiah said in the name of Abaye, What is the reason of R. Josiah?⁵ — Because it is written: And thou shalt cover the ark with the veil.⁶ Now since the 'veil' was a partition⁷ and the Divine Law nevertheless called it a 'covering' it is evident that a wall must be as [close] as the covering. And [how do] the Rabbis [explain this verse]? — It⁸ means that the veil should bend over a little [at the top] so that it might look like a covering.

Abaye said: Rabbi, R. Josiah, R. Judah, R. Simeon, R. Gamaliel, Beth Shammai, R. Eliezer and ‘Others’⁹ -all hold the opinion that the Sukkah must be constructed like a permanent abode. ‘Rabbi’? — As it has been taught: Rabbi said, A sukkah which is not four cubits square¹⁰ is invalid.¹¹ ‘R. Josiah’? — As we have [just] stated. ‘R. Judah’? — As we have learnt: A SUKKAH WHICH IS MORE THAN TWENTY CUBITS HIGH IS NOT VALID, R. JUDAH, HOWEVER, DECLARES IT VALID.¹² ‘R. Simeon’? — As it has been taught: Two [walls] must be of the prescribed dimensions and the third [may be] even one handbreadth.¹³ ‘R. Gamaliel’? — As it has been taught: If a man erects his Sukkah on the top of a waggon or on the deck of a ship, R. Gamaliel declares it invalid and R. Akiba declares it valid.¹⁴ ‘Beth Shammai’? — As we have learnt: If his head and the greater part of his body were within the Sukkah and his table was within the house, Beth Shammai declare it invalid, and Beth Hillel declare it valid.¹⁵ ‘R. Eliezer’?—As we have learnt: If a man makes his sukkah like a cone-shaped hut¹⁶ or if he propped it up against a wall,¹⁷ R. Eliezer declares it invalid, since it has no roof’, and the Sages declare it valid.¹⁸ The ‘Others’? As it has been taught: Others Say: A Sukkah made like a dovecote¹⁹ is invalid, since it has no corners.

R. Johanan said: If a sukkah was [round shaped] like a furnace,²⁰ provided twenty-four men can sit around its circumference,²¹ it is valid, otherwise it is invalid. According to whom [is this²² state — ment made]? Obviously²³ according to Rabbi who says that a sukkah which is not four cubits square is invalid. But consider: A man occupies the space of a cubit, and where the circumference [of a circle] is three handbreadths, its diameter is one handbreadth,²⁴ should it not then²⁵ suffice²⁶ if only twelve men²⁷ [can sit around it]?²⁸

(25) Since the circumference is three times the diameter.

(26) According to Rabbi who prescribes the size of four cubits square.

(27) Three times four (cf. supra n. 3).

(28) Why then did R. Johanan speak of twenty-four men?

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 8a

— That¹ applies only to a circle, but in the case of a square, a greater perimeter is required.² But consider: By how much is a square greater than its [inscribed] circle? By a quarter. Should it then not suffice if only sixteen [men can be seated around it]?³ -That⁴ is so in the case of a circle inscribed within a square, but if a square is to be inscribed within a circle a greater circumference is required on account of the projection of the corners.⁵ But consider: If the side of a square is a cubit, its diagonal is approximately one and two fifths cubits.⁶ Should not then [a circumference equivalent to] sixteen and four fifths [cubits]⁷ suffice?⁸ — [R. Johanan] gave only an approximate figure. But is it not to be maintained that one may be assumed to give all approximate figure only [where the discrepancy is] small, but could such all assumption be made [where the discrepancy is] big? — Mar Kashisha the son of R. Hisda said to R. Ashi: Do you think that a man occupies one cubit? [The fact is that] three men occupy two cubits. How much then does this [amount to for twenty-four men]? Sixteen cubits; and we [really] demand here sixteen and four fifths,⁹ [because, as has been said, R. Johanan] gave only an approximate figure. But is it not to be maintained that one may be assumed to give approximate figures only when the law is thereby restricted, but could such an assumption be made where a law is thereby relaxed? -R. Assi answered R. Ashi: In truth, a man occupies a cubit-space, but R. Johanan does not include the space occupied by the men.¹⁰ How many [cubits] does this¹¹ [amount to]? Eighteen;¹² while sixteen and four-fifths suffice. That is [then] what was meant [when it was stated] that he only gave an approximate figure; and in this case it is in the direction of stringency.¹³

The Rabbis of Caesarea¹⁴ (and some say, The judges of Caesarea) maintain, The circumference of a circle inscribed in a square is a quarter;¹⁵

(1) That the perimeter is approx. only three times the diameter.

(2) Since the diameter is not equal to the side, but to the diagonal of the square.

(3)  being regarded as equivalent to three, a square is one quarter larger than its inscribed circle. If a circle with a diameter of four cubits accommodates four times three is twelve men, a square of four cubits provides seating capacity for four times four is sixteen men. A circumference of sixteen cubits should, therefore, have sufficed.

(4) That a square exceeds a circle by a quarter, and that a four cubits square contains a perimeter of sixteen, and a circle one of twelve cubits.

(5) The circumferences of the Sukkah must, therefore, be large enough to contain a square of four cubits.

(6) Actually it is 1.4142.

(7) Lit., 'seventeen less a fifth'. The diagonal of the square being equal to $(4+4 \times \frac{2}{5}) = 5 \frac{3}{5}$ cubits, and  being approximately equivalent to three, a circumference of $3 \times 5 \frac{3}{5}$ cubits $16 \frac{4}{5}$ cubits ought to suffice. (For this whole discussion of Feldman, op. cit., pp. 28-30). Cf. also 'Er., Sonc. ed., p. 531ff, notes.

(8) I.e., space for no more than sixteen men. Why then did R. Johanan prescribe a space for twenty-four men?

(9) V. p. 29, n. 13.

(10) The men are considered as sitting round the circumference of the Sukkah they themselves forming a circumference of twenty-four cubits (equivalent to the space occupied by twenty-four men) with a diameter of eight cubits. But the inner circumference formed by the Sukkah is smaller since its diameter is eight minus two (the space occupied lengthways by the legs of two men, one sitting at each end) is six cubits.

(11) For the circumference of the Sukkah.

(12) Since a diameter of six cubits has a circumference of eighteen cubits.

(13) Instead of a circumference of $16 \frac{4}{5}$ one of eighteen cubits is prescribed while the difference in the diameter ($6 - 5 \frac{3}{5} = \frac{2}{5}$) is even less but the square inscribed within that circle is a half.¹ But this² is not correct, for we see that these are not so much bigger. R. Levi said in the name of R. Meir: If the two booths of the potters are one within the other,³ the inner one⁴ is not valid as a Sukkah,⁵ and is obliged to have a Mezuzah⁶ while the outer one⁷ is valid as a Sukkah,⁸ and is free from the obligation of a Mezuzah.⁹ But why should this be so? Why should not the outer one be regarded as the gate-house of the inner one, and¹⁰ therefore be obliged to have a Mezuzah? — Because neither [booth] is of a permanent nature.¹¹

Our Rabbis taught: [Mnemonic,] Ganbak.¹² A booth of Gentiles,¹³ women, cattle or Samaritans and any booth whatever¹⁴ is valid, provided that it is covered according to the rule. What is meant by 'according to the rule'?¹⁵ — R. Hisda answered: Provided that [the covering] was made [with the intention of providing] the shade for the Sukkah.¹⁶ What does 'any booth whatever' include? — It includes the booths [whose mnemonic is] Rakbash,¹⁷ as our Rabbis taught: The booth of shepherds, the booth of field-watchers, the booth of city guards, and the booth of orchard-keepers,¹⁸ and any booth whatever¹⁹ is valid, provided that it is covered according to the rule. What is meant by 'according to the rule'?²⁰ — R. Hisda answered: Provided [the covering] was made [with the intention of providing] the shade for the Sukkah. What does 'any booth whatever' include? — It includes the booths [whose mnemonic] is Ganbak.²¹ The Tanna of Ganbak²² regards these booths as possessing greater validity²³ because they are permanent, and therefore he used the expression, any booth whatever' to include Rakbash which are not permanent,²⁴ while the Tanna of Rakbash regards the latter as possessing greater validity since they belong to those who are bound [by the commandment of Sukkah]²⁵ and therefore he used the expression, 'any booth whatever' to include the Ganbak booths which belong to those who are not bound [by the commandment of Sukkah].

(1) Of the circumscribed square. Thus if a circumference is twenty-four cubits (the figure given by R. Johanan) the circumscribed square has a perimeter of $24 + 24/3 = 32$ cubits, while the inscribed square has a perimeter of approximately: $32/2 = 16$ cubits (the measurements prescribed by Rabbi).

(2) That the perimeter of the circumscribed square is twice the perimeter of the inscribed square and that the circumference of the circle is, therefore, bigger than the latter by a half of its perimeter. V. 'Er., Sonc. ed., p. 533, n. 6.

(3) A potter worked and lived in his inner booth and displayed his wares in the outer one.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 9a

[MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE AN OLD SUKKAH¹ INVALID,² BUT BETH HILLEL PRONOUNCE IT VALID. WHAT IS AN OLD SUKKAH? ONE MADE THIRTY DAYS BEFORE THE FESTIVAL; BUT IF ONE MADE IT FOR THE PURPOSE OF THE FESTIVAL, EVEN AT THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR, IT IS VALID.

GEMARA. What is Beth Shammai's reason?³ -Scripture says, The festival of Sukkoth, for seven days unto the Lord,⁴ [implying therefore] a Sukkah made expressly for the sake of the Festival. And Beth Hillel?⁵ - They need that [verse] for the same deduction as that of R. Shesheth, R. Shesheth having said in the name of R. Akiba, Whence do we know that the wood of the Sukkah is forbidden⁶ all the seven [days of the Festival]? From Scripture which states, 'The Festival of Sukkoth, seven days to the Lord'; and it was taught, R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Just as the Name of Heaven rests upon the Festival offering,⁷ so does it rest upon the Sukkah, since it is said, 'The Festival of Sukkoth, seven days to the Lord': just as the Festival [offering] is 'to the Lord', so is the sukkah also 'to the Lord'. And Beth Shammai also, do not they need the verse for this deduction?-Yes, indeed. What then is Beth Shammai's reason?⁸ -There is another Scriptural verse. Thou shalt make⁹ the Festival of Sukkoth for seven days.¹⁰ This implies a sukkah made expressly for the sake of the Festival. And Beth Hillel?¹¹ -They need this [verse for the deduction] that a sukkah may be made in the intermediate days of the Festival.¹² And Beth Shammai? — They hold the same opinion as R. Eliezer, who laid down that no sukkah may be made in the intermediate days of the Festival.¹³

Do not Beth Hillel, however, agree with the statement Rab Judah cited in the name of Rab: If a man made [zizith]¹⁴ from the hanging web or woof,¹⁵ or sewing threads,¹⁶ they are invalid;¹⁷ but if he made them from a tuft [sewn to a garment]¹⁸ they are valid.¹⁹ When I repeated this in the presence of Samuel,²⁰ he said to me, Even if made from a tuft [sewn to a garment] they are also not valid, because²¹ it is necessary that the weaving²² shall be done specifically for its purpose?²³ Here too then we should require a Sukkah²⁴ to be made specifically for its purpose?²⁵ — [Zizith are] different, since Scripture says, Thou shalt make to thee twisted cords:²⁶ 'to thee' [means] for the specific purpose of thy obligation. But here also [Scripture says], 'The Festival of Sukkoth thou shalt make to thee', 'to thee' meaning for the specific purpose of thy obligation? That [phrase]²⁷ is needed to exclude a stolen [Sukkah].²⁸ But in the other case too it²⁷ is needed to exclude stolen [zizith]? — In that case there is another verse, [that serves the purpose], And they shall make to them,²⁹ i.e., of their own.

(1) This is explained anon.

(2) The reason is given in the Gemara infra.

(3) For their ruling in our Mishnah.

- (15) Sc. he twisted into zizith threads hanging over from a woven garment.
- (16) That were used in the sewing of a garment and ends of which were hanging from that garment.
- (17) Since they were not attached to the garment as zizith, but merely formed a part of the web etc.
- (18) Sc. a tuft of wool was sewn to the garment and then was cut into strips and twisted into zizith.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 9b

MISHNAH. IF ONE MADE HIS SUKKAH UNDER A TREE, IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE.¹ IF ONE SUKKAH IS ERECTED ABOVE ANOTHER, THE UPPER ONE IS VALID BUT THE LOWER IS INVALID.² R. JUDAH SAID, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS IN THE UPPER ONE, THE LOWER ONE IS VALID.

GEMARA. Raba said, [Our Mishnah] was taught only in respect of a tree whose shade is greater than the sun [shining through its branches] but if the sun is more than its shade, it is valid. Whence [do we know this]? Since it states, IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE. Now for what purpose does it state IT IS AS IF HE MADE IT WITHIN THE HOUSE? Let it simply state 'it is invalid'? But the fact is that he taught us this, that the tree³ [referred to is] like a house, just as in a house the shade is more than the sunshine, so the tree has more shade than sunshine.

But even where the sun is more than the shade, what is the advantage, seeing that all invalid covering is joined to a valid one?⁴ — R. Papa answered: [This⁵ is a case] where [the branches of the tree] were interwoven.⁶ If the branches were interwoven,⁶ why⁷ mention the case at all? — One might have thought that it should be prohibited where it is interwoven as a preventive measure against the possibility of regarding it as valid even where it was not interwoven,⁸ [therefore the Mishnah] informs us that no such preventive measure has been enacted. Have we not learnt this also: If a man trained upon it [a sukkah] vine, or a gourd, or ivy, and he covered [it with a valid covering], it is invalid.⁹ But if the valid covering exceeded these in quantity, or if one cut them,¹⁰ it is valid.¹¹ Now to what case does this¹² refer? Shall I say where he did not interweave them,¹³ then obviously the invalid covering is joined to¹⁴ the valid one?¹⁵ Must it not then¹⁶ refer to a case where one did interweave them,¹³ and hence it may be inferred that no preventive measure was in such a case deemed necessary?¹⁷ — One might have presumed that [this¹⁸ is permissible] only ex post facto but not ab initio, hence we were informed [that¹⁹ even ab initio it is permissible]. IF ONE SUKKAH IS ERECTED ABOVE ANOTHER. Our Rabbis taught, Ye shall dwell in Sukkoth,²⁰ but not in a sukkah under another sukkah, nor in a Sukkah under a tree, nor in a Sukkah within the house. On the contrary! Does not the word Sukkah²¹ imply two? — R. Nahman b. Isaac answered, The word is written defectively.²² R. Jeremiah said: Sometimes both²³ are valid, sometimes both invalid; sometimes the lower one is valid and the upper invalid, and sometimes the lower one is invalid and the upper one valid. ‘Sometimes both are valid’. In what circumstances? When in the lower one the sun is more than the shade,²⁴ and in the upper the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is within twenty [cubits from the ground].²⁵ ‘Sometimes both are invalid’. In what circumstances? When in both of them the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is more than twenty cubits [high].²⁶ ‘Sometimes the lower one is valid and the upper invalid’.

- (1) I.e., it is as though there are two roofs, and it is, therefore, invalid
 - (2) The reason is given in the Gemara infra.
 - (3) Which renders a Sukkah under it invalid.
 - (4) The covering of a Sukkah must be made of plants that are detached from the ground. Growing ones are invalid. The presence of the invalid covering of the tree should, therefore, invalidate the Sukkah.
 - (5) The ruling in our Mishnah.
 - (6) Lit., ‘he pressed them down’. The branches of the tree were pressed down and interwoven with the valid covering, and, since the former are less in quantity than the latter, the Sukkah is valid (cf. infra 11a).
 - (7) Since the ruling is so obvious why did the Mishnah have to state ‘AS IF HE MADE IT IN THE HOUSE’; and what need of Raba's ruling?
 - (8) Invalid materials that are not interwoven with valid ones render a Sukkah invalid.
 - (9) On account of the invalid covering which remained isolated from the valid one.
 - (10) And thus detached them from the growing tree.
 - (11) Infra 11a.
 - (12) The Mishnah just cited.
 - (13) The invalid with the valid material.
 - (14) But not interwoven with.
 - (15) And the Sukkah therefore would be invalid.
 - (16) Since the Sukkah was stated to be valid.
 - (17) And the question re-arises: Why should the same law be repeated here?
 - (18) The joining of the two materials.
 - (19) Provided the two materials were interwoven.
 - (20) Lev. XXIII, 42.
 - (21) The plural form of Sukkah.
 - (22) V. supra. Traditional spelling is סִכָּה a singular form.
 - (23) Sukkoth that were put up on the top of one another.
 - (24) Its covering can, therefore, be disregarded.
 - (25) The covering of the upper one is thus valid for both, since they are regarded as one Sukkah.
 - (26) I.e., from the roof of the lower one. The lower one is invalid since it is a Sukkah under a Sukkah, and the upper one is similarly invalid since it is more than twenty cubits high.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 10a

In what circumstances? When the lower one has more shade than sun, and the upper one more sun than shade,¹ and both are within twenty cubits [from the ground].² ‘And sometimes the upper one is valid and the lower invalid’. In what circumstances? When in both of them the shade is more than the sun, and the upper one is within twenty cubits.³ [But is not all this] self-evident? — The statement of the case of the ‘lower one valid and the upper one invalid’ was necessary. As it might have been thought that [the lower sukkah] would be prohibited as a preventive measure lest one also joins⁴ an invalid covering⁵ to a valid covering,⁶ therefore it teaches us [that it is valid].⁷

How much [space] should there be between [the roof of] one sukkah and that of the other to invalidate the lower one?⁸ R. Huna replied, A handbreadth,⁹ since we find a handbreadth [prescribed as the minimum size] with regard to overshadowing in cases¹⁰ of uncleanness, as we have learnt.¹¹ [A space of] one handbreadth square and one handbreadth high¹² acts as a carrier of uncleanness and as an interposition to it,¹³ but if it is less than one handbreadth high it neither conveys nor interposes.¹⁴ R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna [however,] say, Four [handbreadths], since we do not find a place of any [legal] importance¹⁵ to be less than four [handbreadths];¹⁶ while Samuel says, Ten [handbreadths]. What is the reason of Samuel? — As its validity, so is its invalidity. Just as its validity [is effected by a height of] ten handbreadths,¹⁷ so is its invalidity [effected by] ten handbreadths.¹⁸

We have learnt: R. JUDAH SAID, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS IN THE UPPER ONE, THE LOWER ONE IS VALID. Now what is the meaning of 'THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS'? If we say, actual occupants, are then occupants [it could be objected] a determining factor?¹⁹ Must [we then] not [say] that 'THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS' means that the Sukkah is unsuitable for occupation? And how is this possible? Where it is less than ten handbreadths high. May we not, therefore, infer that the first Tanna²⁰ holds the opinion that even if it is unsuitable for occupation it is still invalid?²¹ — When R. Dimi, came,²² he said, In the West²³ they say,²⁴ if the lower one cannot bear the weight of²⁵ the bolsters and the cushions of the upper one, the lower one is valid.²⁶ This implies [does it not] that the first Tanna²⁷ holds the opinion that even if the lower one is not able to bear their weight, it is still invalid?²⁸ -The difference between them²⁹ is³⁰ where it can bear the weight with difficulty.³¹

MISHNAH. IF ONE SPREAD A SHEET³² OVER IT³³ BECAUSE OF THE SUN OR BENEATH IT BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES], OR IF HE SPREAD [A SHEET] OVER THE FRAME OF A FOURPOST BED,³⁴ [THE SUKKAH] IS INVALID.³⁵ ONE MAY SPREAD IT, HOWEVER, OVER THE FRAME OF A TWO-POST BED.³⁶

GEMARA. R. Hisda stated, [Our Mishnah] speaks only [of a sheet spread] BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES],³⁷ but if [it was spread] in order to beautify [the Sukkah], it is valid.³⁸ But is not this obvious! For have we not learnt, BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES]? One might have said that the law is the same even [where the sheet served the purpose] of beautifying [the Sukkah] and that the reason why it was stated, BECAUSE OF FALLING [LEAVES], is that he mentions what is the common practice, therefore he informs us this.³⁹

Can we say that the following supports [R. Hisda's view]: If he covered it⁴⁰ according to the rule, and adorned it with embroidered hangings and sheets, and hung therein nuts, almonds, peaches, pomegranates, bunches of grapes, wreaths of ears of corn, [phials of] wine, oil or fine flour, it is forbidden to make use of them⁴¹

- (1) And thus its covering which is an invalid one cannot invalidate the lower Sukkah.
 - (2) If the roof of the upper Sukkah, however, was above twenty cubits from the ground its invalid material (since all Sukkah roofs above twenty cubits height are invalid) would be deemed to be joined to the roof of the lower Sukkah and to render it invalid in consequence.
 - (3) Of the roof of the lower one. Being a valid Sukkah it invalidates the lower one on the ground of the latter's being a Sukkah under a Sukkah.
 - (4) I.e., regards the roof of the upper, and of the lower Sukkah as one.
 - (5) Sc. the covering of the upper Sukkah where it is higher than twenty cubits.
 - (6) And thus use an invalid Sukkah.
 - (7) Thus indicating that no preventive measure was deemed necessary.
 - (8) As a Sukkah under a Sukkah.
 - (9) I.e., if it is less than this, the two roofs are regarded as one.
 - (10) Lit., 'tents'.

- (11) V. marg. glos. Cur. edd. in parenthesis, 'for it was taught'.
- (12) I.e., a cubic handbreadth between the level on which the contaminating object lies and the object that forms the 'roof' or 'tent' above it.
- (13) It acts as a carrier in that whatever is under the same 'roof' as the unclean object is unclean, and as an interposition in that whatever lies above the 'roof' is not defiled.
- (14) Ohal. III, 7. Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.
- (15) A private domain, for instance.
- (16) V. Shab. 7a. A space between the upper and lower roof that was less than four handbreadths cannot, therefore, be regarded as forming an upper Sukkah above the lower one.
- (17) The roof of a Sukkah must be at least ten handbreadths high to render the Sukkah valid.
- (18) If the roof of the Sukkah above it is, however, lower than ten handbreadths, the lower Sukkah remains valid.
- (19) Of course not.
- (20) The authority of the anonymous first part of the Mishnah who differs from R. Judah.
- (21) Which is refutation of Samuel.
- (22) From Palestine to Babylon.
- (23) Palestine.
- (24) In explanation of R. Judah's ruling, IF THERE ARE NO OCCUPANTS'.
- (25) Lit., receive .
- (26) Since the upper one is not strong enough to be regarded as a Sukkah. As a Sukkah cannot be valid unless its floor can bear the prescribed weight so also, on the principle, 'As its validity so is its invalidity' laid down by Samuel, it cannot cause the invalidity of the lower Sukkah unless the latter's roof which is its floor can bear the prescribed weight. Where the upper one, however, is less than ten handbreadths high even the first Tanna agrees that it cannot affect the validity of the lower one, in agreement with Samuel.
- (27) Who differs from R. Judah.
- (28) Apparently we may. Now, since in this respect the first Tanna does not uphold Samuel's principle, and since the question of height depends on the same principle, may it not be contended that he differs from Samuel as regards the height also?
- (29) The first Tanna and R. Judah.
- (30) Not the complete ability or inability to bear the weight mentioned.
- (31) According to the first Tanna this invalidates the lower one; according to R. Judah, it does not. Where, however, it cannot bear the weight at all, the first Tanna on Samuel's principle, agrees with R. Judah.
- (32) A sheet (cf. infra 11a) is subject to ritual defilement and is, therefore, invalid as a Sukkah-covering.
- (33) The roof of a Sukkah.
- (34) And thus made a tent within the Sukkah. קינות Gr. , four poles over which a covering is placed.
- (35) In the former case, because of the unsuitability of the covering, and in the latter case because of the intervention of a tent.
- (36) A bed frame with only two poles, one on each side, the top of which being less than a handbreadth in width it cannot be regarded as a valid tent (v. Gemara infra).
- (37) In which case it is regarded as a part of the roof and therefore causes the invalidity of the Sukkah.
- (38) Since the sheet does not serve the purpose of a roof covering.
- (39) That the Sukkah is valid if a sheet was intended to beautify it.
- (40) The Sukkah.
- (41) To eat, for instance, any of the fruit.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 10b

until the conclusion of the last day of the Festival, but if¹ he expressed a condition about them,² all depends on [the terms of] his condition?³ — No! It is possible [that the statement was made with reference to sheets] at the side [of the Sukkah].⁴ It was stated: The adornments of a Sukkah do not diminish [the height of] the Sukkah.⁵ R. Ashi said, But at the side, they do diminish [the size of a Sukkah].⁶

Minyamin, the servant of R. Ashi, had his shirt soaked in water, and he spread it out on their Sukkah. R. Ashi said to him, 'Remove it, lest they say that it is permissible to use as a covering something which is susceptible to defilement'. 'But [the other asked] can they not see that it is wet?'⁷ 'I mean [the first answered] when it is dry'.⁸

It was stated: The adornments of a Sukkah⁹ which are removed four [handbreadths from the roof] R. Nahman declared valid,¹⁰ and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna declare invalid.¹¹ R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna once came to the house of the exilarch, and R. Nahman¹² sheltered them in a Sukkah whose adornments were separated four handbreadths [from the roof]. They were silent and said not a word to him. Said he to them, 'Have our Rabbis¹³ retracted their teaching?'¹⁴ -"We", they answered him, are on a religious errand,¹⁵ and [therefore] free from the obligation of the Sukkah'.¹⁶

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, It is permissible to sleep in a canopied bed in a Sukkah, even though it has a flat roof, provided it is not ten [handbreadths] high.¹⁷

Come and hear: He who sleeps in a canopied bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligation?¹⁸ - Here we are dealing with a case of one that was ten [handbreadths] high. It was objected: He who sleeps under the bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligation?¹⁹ — But, surely, Samuel has explained that [this refers to] a bed ten [handbreadths] high. Come and hear: OR IF HE SPREAD [A SHEET] OVER THE FRAME OF A FOUR-POST BED, [THE SUKKAH] IS INVALID? — There also it is a case where they are ten [handbreadths] high. But surely, it was not taught thus, for it has been taught, naklitin [means a frame with] two [poles], and kinofoth [means a frame with] four [poles]; if one spread a sheet over the frame of kinofoth it is invalid, if over naklitin, it is valid, provided that the naklitin are not ten [handbreadths] high above the bed. This implies that kinofoth [are invalid] even if they are less than ten [handbreadths high]? — Kinofoth are different, since they are permanent.²⁰ But, behold the case of one Sukkah above another, which is also permanent; and Samuel nevertheless said, 'As its validity so is its invalidity'?²¹ — I will explain: In the latter case, [when it is a question] of invalidating a Sukkah,²² [the upper one must be ten [handbreadths] high,²³ but here, [where it is a question] of making a tent,²⁴ even less than ten [handbreadths suffices] also to constitute a tent.²⁵

R. Tahlifa b. Abimi said in the name of Samuel, He who sleeps naked in a canopied bed, may put his head out of the canopied bed and read the Shema'.²⁶ It was objected: He who sleeps in a canopied bed naked may not put his head out of it and read the Shema'? — The latter refers to a case where [the canopy] was ten [handbreadths] high.²⁷ This stands to reason also, since it was stated in the final clause: To what can it be compared? To a man standing naked in a house, in which case he may not put his head out of the window and read the Shema'. This is conclusive.

(1) Prior to the Festival.

(2) I.e., he made a declaration that he desired to retain full possession 'during the twilight of the first day' of the Festival of any of the objects mentioned. Unless the declaration is made at the proper time and in this form the objects assume the sanctity of the Sukkah and no subsequent declaration can remove it.

(3) Beza 30b, which shows that ornamental sheets do not invalidate a Sukkah. Does not this then provide support to R. Hisda's view?

(4) One, however, hung under the roof may well invalidate a Sukkah, even if its purpose was ornamental.

(5) If it was higher than twenty cubits and the sheet hung lower, it is still invalid, since a sheet is unsuitable as a Sukkah-covering.

(6) If the presence of the adornments caused it to be less than the minimum of seven handbreadths square.

(7) And that it was spread out for the purpose of drying only.

(8) Only then is it necessary to remove it from the Sukkah.

(9) Sheets spread under the Sukkah roof as decorations (Rashi).

- (10) Because their identity is merged in that of the roof.
- (11) Since they form a 'tent' that intervenes between the roof and the habitable part of the Sukkah.
- (12) R. Nahman was chief in authority at the exilarch's house.
- (13) Sc. R. Hisda and Rabbah b. R. Huna.
- (14) Cited supra.
- (15) It was regarded as a religious duty to visit one's master, or the exilarch, on the Festivals.
- (16) A person engaged on a religious errand is free from other religious duties (cf. infra 25a).
- (17) Above the bed. It cannot be regarded as a valid tent unless it is ten handbreadths high.
- (18) An objection against Samuel's ruling just cited.
- (19) infra 20b.
- (20) Hence they may be regarded as a proper tent. The poles of a canopied bed, however, are not permanent, and cannot be regarded as a valid tent unless they are ten handbreadths high.
- (21) Supra 10a; which shows that even a permanent structure cannot be valid unless it is ten handbreadths high.
- (22) On the ground that one Sukkah is above another.
- (23) Otherwise it cannot invalidate the lower Sukkah.
- (24) Under which it should be forbidden to sleep but the rest of the Sukkah remaining valid.
- (25) If it is to be permanent.
- (26) The Scriptural reading Deut. VI, 4f, which had to be read twice daily; otherwise it is forbidden to read while naked. V. Ber. 24b and 25b.
- (27) Which has, therefore, the legal status of a room. As a naked person is forbidden to read the Shema' even if he puts his head out of a window (because the greater part of his body is still in the room) so it is forbidden to read the Shema' while the greater part of one's body remained in the canopied bed. A canopy that is lower than ten handbreadths is regarded as a covering or cloak.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 11a

But as to a house, even though it is not ten [handbreadths] high, since it is permanent it constitutes a valid tent,¹ for it is no worse than the frame of a four-post bed.

Another version is that Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, It is permitted to sleep in a bridal-bed in a Sukkah, since it has no roof,² even though it be ten [handbreadths] high. It was objected: He who sleeps in a canopied bed in a Sukkah has not fulfilled his obligations? — Here we are dealing with the case of one which has a roof'. Come and hear: Naklithin [means a frame with] two [poles]; kinofoth [means a frame with] four [poles], if he spread a canopy over the frame of kinofoth it is invalid,³ over that of naklithin it is valid, provided that the naklithin are not ten [handbreadths] high above the bed. But if they are ten [handbreadths] high above the bed, it is invalid, [is it not] even though it has no roof?—Naklithin are different, since they are permanent. If they are permanent, why are they not [subject to the same law as] kinofoth?⁴ — As compared to kinofoth they are not [considered] permanent,⁵ but compared to the bridal-bed they are [considered] permanent.⁶

Rabbah son of R. Huna expounded, It is permitted to sleep in a canopied bed [in a Sukkah] even though it has a roof and even though it is ten [handbreadths] high. According to whom [is this opinion expressed]?—According to R. Judah who said that a temporary tent⁷ cannot nullify a permanent one,⁸ as we have learnt: R. Judah said, We were accustomed to sleep under a bed⁹ in the presence of the Elders.¹⁰ Why then does he not say, The halachah is as R. Judah?—If he had said, The halachah is as R. Judah, I might have presumed that this applies only to a bed which is made [to be slept] upon,¹¹ but not to a canopied bed which, is made [to be slept] within,¹² hence he informs us that the reason of R. Judah is¹³ that a temporary tent cannot nullify a permanent one, no matter whether it be an ordinary bed¹⁴ or a canopied bed.¹⁵

MISHNAH. IF HE TRAINED A VINE OR A GOURD OR IVY OVER [THE SUKKAH] AND

COVERED IT WITH THE COVERING OF A SUKKAH, IT IS NOT VALID.¹⁶ IF [HOWEVER] THE SUKKAH-COVERING EXCEEDS THEM IN QUANTITY, OF IF HE CUT THEM,¹⁷ IT IS VALID. THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE. WHATEVER IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND DOES NOT GROW FROM THE SOIL MAY NOT BE USED FOR SUKKAH-COVERING, BUT WHATEVER IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND GROWS FROM THE SOIL MAY BE USED FOR SUKKAH-COVERING.

GEMARA. R. Joseph sai¹⁸ before R. Huna, and in the course of the session he stated, [with reference to the ruling] OR IF HE CUT THEM, IT IS VALID, Rab said, But he must shake them.¹⁹ Said R. Huna to him, This has been said by Samuel! R. Joseph turned away his face [in annoyance] and retorted, Did I then tell you that Samuel did not say it? Rab said it and Samuel also said it. It is this that I say, said R. Huna to him, As to that, Samuel said it, and not Rab, since Rab declares it valid [without shaking],²⁰ as in the case of R. Amram the Pious who attached fringes to the aprons of the women of his house.²¹ He hung them²² but did not cut off the ends of the threads.²³ When he came before R. Hiyya b. Ashi²⁴ the latter said to him, Thus said Rab, [In such a case the threads] may be cut and they are valid. Thus it is obvious that their cutting is their [valid] preparation, so here also,²⁵ their cutting is their [valid] preparation. But does Samuel hold the opinion that we do not say that their cutting is their [valid] preparation? Did not Samuel in fact teach in the name of R. Hiyya, If one attached [zizith] to two corners in one²⁶ and then cut the ends of these threads, the zizith are valid. Does not this mean that he first knotted them and then cut them?²⁷ -No, he cut them first²⁸ and afterwards knotted them. If he cut them first and then knotted them, why mention it?²⁹ -One would have thought

- (1) And therefore if a person is naked he cannot put his head out and read the Shema'.
 - (2) The cover was sloping from above the bed around it.
 - (3) Sc. one may not use it within a Sukkah.
 - (4) And thus render their use in a Sukkah forbidden.
 - (5) Hence they cause no invalidity where they are lower than ten handbreadths.
 - (6) They cause, therefore, invalidity where they are ten handbreadths high even if they have no roof, while a canopied bed that has no roof causes no invalidity even where it is ten handbreadths high.
 - (7) The canopied bed.
 - (8) The Sukkah which in comparison with it may be regarded as permanent.
 - (9) In a Sukkah. The movable bed being regarded as temporary and the Sukkah as permanent.
 - (10) Infra 20b.
 - (11) And not under it. As the bed was never intended to serve as a 'tent' a person's occasional use of it for the purpose of sleeping under it cannot confer upon it the status of a valid tent.
 - (12) And the roof thereof might, therefore, be regarded as constituting a valid tent.
 - (13) Not the one just suggested.
 - (14) Under which one sleeps.
 - (15) Within which one sleeps.
 - (16) Since a growing plant may not be used as a Sukkah-covering.
 - (17) From the ground, after he had trained them on the Sukkah.
 - (18) In the college.
 - (19) After they had been cut. Sc. each branch must be raised and put back in position so that the covering is made from valid materials. If no moving or shifting takes place after the plants had been cut the Sukkah remains invalid since it was made from invalid materials. The mere cutting of them from the ground does not alter the fact that the covering was made from invalid materials.
 - (20) The cutting alone is regarded as the 'making' of the covering.
 - (21) R. Amram was of the opinion, not generally held, that women are bound to wear fringes.
 - (22) On the four corners of the garments.
 - (23) He folded one thread four times, and attached it to the garment. By subsequently cutting it he made of it the eight requisite threads.

(24) To inquire whether the mere cutting of the long thread constitutes the 'making' of the fringes.

(25) In the case of the Sukkah where the branches were only cut and not shifted.

(26) Long threads folded in four were passed through the two corners, and then separated by being cut in the middle.

(27) In agreement with Rab.

(28) Immediately after insertion before he wound the prescribed number of coils and made the necessary knots.

(29) It is obvious that it is valid.

that it was necessary to insert the threads in one corner at a time, which was not the case here, therefore he informed us [that it was not so].

It was objected: If he hung them¹ and did not cut their ends, they are invalid. Does not this mean invalid for ever,² and is thus a refutation of Rab?-[No!] Rab can answer: What is the meaning of 'invalid'? Invalid until they are cut. Samuel, however, says, [It means] invalid for ever. And so said Levi, They are invalid for ever. And so said R. Mattenah in the name of Samuel: They are invalid for ever. Another version is that R. Mattenah said, A [similar] incident happened to me, and when I came before Samuel he told me, They are invalid for ever.

It was objected: If he inserted them³ and then cut their ends, they are invalid; and it was also taught concerning a Sukkah: Thou shalt make⁴ [implies] but not from that which is already made, hence they⁵ inferred, If one trained a vine or a gourd or ivy [over the walls of a Sukkah] and then covered them with the Sukkah-covering it is invalid. Now, how is this to be understood? If you say that it is a case where one did not cut them,⁶ why then give the reason because of "'Thou shalt make" [implies] but not from that which is already made'? Let him rather give the reason that they are joined to the ground? Consequently it must be a case where he cut them,⁶ and yet it is taught that it is invalid. Deduce then, therefrom that we do not say that their cutting⁶ is their [valid] preparation. And is not this then a refutation of Rab? Rab can answer that there we are dealing with a case where he pulled them [from the trunk]⁷ so that their 'making' is not apparent. At all events, [does not the case where] 'he inserted them and then cut their ends'⁸ present a difficulty against Rab?⁹ — It is a difficulty.

Can we say that [their dispute¹⁰ accords with a dispute of] Tannas? [As we have learnt], If one transgressed and¹¹ plucked them,¹² [the myrtle is still] invalid, so R. Simeon b. Jehozadak, while the Sages declare it valid. Now they¹³ were of the opinion that everyone¹⁴ agrees that [the components of] a lulab¹⁵ must be tied together, and that we deduce [the law of] lulab from that of Sukkah, concerning which it is written 'thou shalt make', [which implies]'but not from what which is made'. Do they [then] not dispute on this principle, that the one who declared it¹⁶ valid is of the opinion that with regard to the Sukkah we say that 'their cutting is their [valid] preparation', and [therefore] with regard to lulab also we say that their plucking is their [valid] preparation; while the one who declares it invalid is of the opinion that with regard to the Sukkah we do not say that 'their cutting is their valid preparation', and [therefore] with regard to lulab also we do not say that their plucking is their [valid] preparation?¹⁷ — No! Everyone may agree that with regard to the Sukkah we do not say that their cutting is their [valid] preparation, but here they differ on the principle whether we deduce the law of lulab from that of Sukkah. The one who declares it¹⁶ valid is of the opinion that we do not deduce lulab from Sukkah, while the one who declares it invalid says that we do deduce lulab from sukkah. And if you wish you may say that if we were of the opinion that¹⁸ the [components of the] lulab must be tied together,¹⁹ [we must admit that] all agree that we do deduce the law of lulab from that of Sukkah,²⁰ but here they dispute on the following: One Master²¹ holds the opinion that it²² must be tied together²³ while the other holds that it need not be tied together; and their dispute is analogous to that of the following Tannas of whom it has been taught: A lulab, whether [its components] be tied together or not, is valid, while R. Judah says, If tied together it is valid, if not, it is invalid.²⁴ What is the reason of R. Judah?—He deduces the word ‘take’²⁵ from the word ‘take’ mentioned in connection with the bundle of hyssop. It is written there, And ye shall take a bundle of hyssop,²⁶ and it is written here, And ye shall take you on the first day etc.²⁷ Just as there it was taken in a ‘bundle,’²⁸ so here also it must be taken in a bundle.²⁸ And the Rabbis?²⁹ — They do not deduce ‘take’ from ‘take’.³⁰

According to whom is that which has been taught, It is a religious duty to tie [the components of] the lulab together, but if one did not tie them, it is [still] valid? If it is according to R. Judah, why is it valid if one does not tie them, and if it is according to the Sages, why is it ‘a religious duty’?³¹ -It is in fact according to the Rabbis, but [it is a religious duty]³¹ since it is written, This is my God and I will glorify him³² [which implies] glorification³³ before Him in [the due performance of] religious duties.

THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHATEVER IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS etc. Whence do we know this? Resh Lakish said: Scripture says, But there went up a mist from the earth;³⁴ just as a mist is a thing that is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness and originates from the soil, so must [the covering of] the Sukkah³⁵ [consist of] a thing that is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness, and grow from the soil. That is satisfactory according to the authority who says that [the booths of the wilderness were] clouds of glory, but according to the authority who says [the Israelites] made for themselves real booths, what can one say?³⁶ For it has been taught: For I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths,³⁷ These³⁸ were clouds of glory, so R. Eliezer. R. Akiba says, They made for themselves real booths. Now this³⁹ is satisfactory according to R. Eliezer, but according to R. Akiba, what can one say?³⁶ — When R. Dimi came,⁴⁰ he explained in the name of R. Johanan, Scripture says, The Festival [hag] of Sukkoth thou shalt keep.⁴¹ The Sukkah is thus⁴² compared to the Festival [offering].⁴³ Just as the Festival offering is a thing which is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness and grows from the soil,⁴⁴ so the Sukkah must be unsusceptible to [ritual] uncleanness and grow from the soil.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 12a

And if [you will suggest]: Just as the Festival offering was a live animal so the Sukkah must be [of something which is] alive, [it may be replied that] when Rabin came, he said in the name of R. Johanan, Scripture says, After that thou hast gathered in from thy threshing-floor and thy winepress. The verse thus speaks of the leavings of the threshing-floor and the lees of the wine-press.¹ But perhaps it means the actual threshing-floor and the actual wine-press?² - Zera answered, It is written winepress', and³ it is impossible to cover the Sukkah with this!³ R. Jeremiah demurred: But perhaps it means the solidified wine that comes from Senir, which resembles fig-cakes?⁴ R. Zera observed, We had something in our hands, and R. Jeremiah came and cast an axe at it.⁵ R. Ashi replied, 'From thy threshing-floor',⁶ [implies] but not the threshing-floor itself,⁷ from thy wine-press',⁶ [implies] but not the wine-press itself.⁸ R. Hisda replied,⁹ The deduction is made from this verse, Go forth unto the mount and fetch olive-branches, and branches of wild olive, and myrtle-branches and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees.¹⁰ Are not myrtle-branches, the same as branches of thick trees?¹¹ — R. Hisda answered: The wild myrtle¹² [were to be fetched] for the Sukkah, while the branches of thick trees,¹³ for the lulab.

MISHNAH. BUNDLES OF STRAW, BUNDLES OF WOOD, AND BUNDLES OF BRUSHWOOD MAY NOT SERVE AS SUKKAH-COVERING, BUT ALL OF THEM,¹⁴ IF THEY ARE UNTIED, ARE VALID. ALL MATERIALS, HOWEVER,¹⁵ ARE VALID FOR THE WALLS.

GEMARA. R. Jacob said, I heard from R. Johanan [the explanation of] two things,¹⁶ this one,¹⁷ and the following:¹⁸ If one hollows out a haystack to make of it a Sukkah, [the hollow] is no [valid]

Sukkah.¹⁹ The reason for one of them he attributed to a Rabbinical enactment lest [a man use his] store-house as a Sukkah,²⁰ and as a reason for the other he gave, because 'thou shalt make', [implies] but not from that which is made; but I do not remember which of them is on account of a 'store-house', and which on account of "'thou shalt make" but not from that which is made'. R. Jeremiah said, Let us see:²¹ R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan, Why did they say that bundles of straw, bundles of wood, and bundles of brushwood may not serve as sukkah-covering? Because it may happen²² that a man returns in the evening from the field with his bundle on his shoulder, and raising it up he places it on his hut to dry it,²³ and then²⁴ he might decide to leave it there as a sukkah-covering, but the Torah said, 'Thou shalt make', [which implies], but not from that which is made.²⁵ Now since this is forbidden as a restrictive measure against the possibility of the use of a store-house²⁶ [as a Sukkah]²⁷ the other²⁸ must have been forbidden on the ground of 'thou shalt make' [which implies], but not from that which is made.²⁹ And R. Jacob?³⁰ -He had not heard that [statement] of R. Hiyya b. Abba. R. Ashi said:³¹ Are then bundles of straw, bundles of wood and bundles of brushwood forbidden only because of the possible use of a store-house³² and not because of the injunction 'thou shalt make' [which implies], but not from that which is made,³³ and is the hollowing out of a haystack forbidden only because of the injunction 'thou shalt make' which implies but not from that which is made, and not because of the possible use of a store-house?³⁴ And R. Johanan?³⁵ — He can answer you that here where it states, MAY NOT SERVE AS A SUKKAH-COVERING, it means that only at the outset

Jacob maintain in the name of R. Johanan that only a Pentateuchal, or only a Rabbinical prohibition applied to either Mishnah?
- (35) How, in view of R. Ashi's contention, can he assign only one reason for each.

it is invalid, because of the possible use of a store-house;¹ according to the Biblical law, however, it is valid; while in the other case where it is stated categorically that it is no Sukkah, implying even when he has made it, it is no Sukkah even Pentateuchally. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, If one covered a Sukkah with plain² arrow-shafts, it is valid; with bored³ shafts, it is invalid. 'With plain arrow-shafts it is valid'; but is not this obvious? I might have said that these should be forbidden on account of bored ones, therefore he informs us [that they are not forbidden]. 'With⁴ bored shafts, it is invalid', is not this obvious? — I might have thought that a receptacle which is made to be [permanently] filled up is not regarded as a receptacle, therefore he informs us [that it is].

Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, 'If one covered a Sukkah with flax-stalks that had been soaked and baked, it is invalid;⁵ with flax stalks in their natural state it is valid; with flax-stalks in an intermediate stage of preparation, I do not know [whether it is valid or not]'. But as to what constitutes an intermediate stage,⁶ I⁷ do not know whether if it has been pounded and not corded it is regarded as in an intermediate stage,⁸ but if it has been soaked and not pounded it is regarded as being in its natural state,⁹ or perhaps, even if it has been soaked but not pounded, it is also regarded as being in an intermediate stage.¹⁰

Rab Judah ruled, One may use licorice-wood or wormwood as a Sukkah-covering. Abaye ruled, Licorice-wood may be employed, but not wormwood. What is the reason?- Since

- (1) Ex post facto, however, it is obviously permitted. The prohibition, therefore, can only be Rabbinical.
- (2) Lit., 'male shafts'. The shaft, being plain and inserted into the arrow head, is regarded as a piece of unprepared wood, which is unsusceptible to ritual uncleanness they give an unpleasant odour, one might leave [the Sukkah]¹ and depart.

R. Hanan b. Raba said, Izma and hegeh² may be employed as a Sukkah-covering; [while] Abaye said, Izma may be used, but not hegeh. What is the reason?—Since their leaves fall off, one might leave the Sukkah and depart. R. Giddal said in the name of Rab, The forked portion of a palm tree³ may be used as a Sukkah-covering, even although [the branches] are joined together,⁴ [since] a natural joining⁵ is not considered a joining; and even although one later joined them⁶ [the covering is valid, since] joining of one thing [to itself] is not considered a joining.

R. Hisda said in the name of Rabina b. Shila, One may cover the Sukkah with forked reeds, even though they are joined,⁴ [since] a natural joining is not considered a joining; and even though one later joins them,⁶ the joining of one thing [to itself] not considered as a proper joining.

So it was also taught: Reeds and forked reeds may be used as a Sukkah covering. As to reeds, this is obvious?⁷ — Read: Reeds of the forked variety⁸ may be used as a Sukkah-covering.

R. Hisda [further] stated in the name of Rabina b. Shila, A man fulfils his obligation⁹ on Passover with bitter herbs of the marsh,¹⁰ It was objected: Hyssop but not Greek hyssop, or stibium-hyssop, or wild hyssop, or Roman hyssop or any kind of hyssop which has a special¹¹ name?¹² — Abaye answered: Whatever had different names prior to the Giving of the Law, and yet the Torah makes specific mention of the general name only obviously [the intention is to exclude such of the species which] have special names;¹³ but the former¹⁴ did not have different names before the Giving of the Law at all.¹⁵

Raba answered: Their ordinary name is really 'bitter herbs',¹⁶ but they are called 'bitter herbs of the marsh', because they are found in marshes.

R. Hisda said, The joining of one thing [to itself] is not considered a proper joining;¹⁷ of three things, it is considered a joining; of two, there is a dispute between R. Jose and the Rabbis, as we have learnt, The commandment [to take a bunch] of hyssop [requires the taking of] three stalks having three buds.¹⁸ R. Jose says, Three buds,¹⁹ and its remnants²⁰ [continue valid] if two [stalks remained] and if there is aught [of each] of the stumps.²¹ Now it was assumed that since²² its remnants [are valid] with two, at the outset also two are valid, and that the reason he teaches three is to indicate what is the most proper observance of the commandment;²³ consequently since R. Jose requires three only for the most proper observance of the commandment according to the Rabbis²⁴ three are indispensable.²⁵ But has it not been taught, R. Jose says, If at the outset a bunch of hyssop has only two stalks²⁶ or if its remnants²⁷ consist of one, it is invalid, since a bunch is not valid unless at the outset it contains three and its remnants are no less than two? — Reverse [the assumption]:²⁸ According to R. Jose three are indispensable, according to the Rabbis three are required only for the proper observance of the commandment. So it has also been taught: If²⁹ a bunch of hyssop contains two stalks at the outset or if its remnant consists of one it is valid, since it is not invalid unless at the outset or when it is a remnant it consists of one. But is a remnant of one invalid? Have you not [just] said that a remnant of one is valid?

- (9) Of eating bitter herbs (cf. Ex. XII, 8).
- (10) Probably succory (Jast.).
- (11) Lit., ‘accompanying’.
- (12) Since hyssop in the Bible means ordinary hyssop only, so should ‘bitter herbs’ presumably mean only ordinary bitter herbs, but not that of the marsh.
- (13) [Lit., ‘it is known that it has a special name’ (to be excluded). The text is not clear. MS.M.: ‘such has (a species of) a special name (to be excluded)].
- (14) Bitter herbs.
- (15) All its varieties, therefore, are admissible.
- (16) Hence they are admissible like the ordinary bitter herbs.
- (17) Either in respect of the designation of ‘bundle’ which is invalid for a Sukkah roof or in that of ‘bunch’ in the case of hyssop.

— Say rather, Unless at the outset, [it contains] no more than the permitted number for its remnant, viz., one.¹

Meremar expounded, The bundles of Sura² are valid as a Sukkah-covering.³ Although [the seller] binds them together he does so merely to facilitate their counting.⁴ R. Abba said, As for cone-shaped bundles of bulrushes, as soon as the top-knots are untied they are valid [as a Sukkah-covering]. But are they not still tied at the bottom?⁵ — R. Papa answered, [This is a case] where he loosens them.⁶ R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said, one can even ‘say that [it is valid though] he does not loosen them, since a binding which is not made to facilitate transport⁷ is not considered a binding. R. Abba said in the name of Samuel, Herbs concerning which the Sages said that a man fulfils with them his obligation on Passover,⁸ carry⁹ ritual defilement,¹⁰ do not¹¹ act as an interposition to ritual defilement¹² and cause invalidity in a Sukkah-covering in the same manner as an air space.¹³ What is the reason? — Since when they wither they crumble and fall, they are regarded as though they were not there.

R. Abba further said in the name of R. Huna, He who cuts grapes for the vat, does not render their ‘handles’ [stalks] susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness;¹⁴ while R. Menashia b. Gada said in the name of R. Huna, He who cuts [ears of corn] for a Sukkah-covering¹⁵ does not render their handles susceptible to uncleanness. He who holds this opinion with regard to the cutting [of ears], certainly holds it with regard to the cutting of grapes,¹⁶ since one does not desire [any stalks] lest they suck up one's wine; he who holds the opinion that the cutting of grapes¹⁶ does not render their stalks susceptible to the uncleanness, holds that the cutting [of ears]¹⁵ does render them susceptible since one is pleased to use [the ears] for the Sukkah-covering in order that [the grains] be not scattered.¹⁷

Must we say that the [ruling of] R. Menashia b. Gada¹⁸ is a point at issue between Tannas? For it has been taught, Boughs of fig-trees on which there are figs, branches of vines on which there are grapes, or straws on which there are ears of corn or palm-branches on which there are dates, all these, if the inedible part is greater than the edible are valid [for a Sukkah-covering], otherwise, they are invalid. ‘Others’¹⁹ say, [They are not valid] unless the straw²⁰ is more than both the ‘handle’²¹ and the food. Now do they not differ on this principle, that one Master²² holds the opinion they²³ render the handles²⁴ susceptible to uncleanness,²⁵ while the other Master holds the opinion that they do not render the ‘handles’ susceptible to uncleanness? — According to R. Abba,²⁶ there is certainly²⁷ a dispute of the Tannas,²⁸ but according to R. Menashia b. Gada,²⁹ must we say that [his ruling is] in agreement only with one of the Tannas?³⁰ — R. Menashia can answer you, All³¹ agree that he who cuts ears for a Sukkah-covering does not render the ‘handles’ susceptible to uncleanness, but here we are dealing with a particular case where he cuts them for food,³² and then changed his mind [and used them] for a Sukkah-covering. But if he cut them for food, what is the reason [for the view] of the Rabbis?³³ And if you will answer that the Rabbis³⁴ are of the opinion that since he changed his mind about them [to use them] for a Sukkah-covering, his original intention³⁵ becomes annulled, [it may be objected], does then one's intention become annulled in such a case?³⁶ Have we not learnt:³⁷ All vessels

(1) Thus it has been shown that the number of three stalks mentioned supra in the name of the Rabbis refers only to what is expected for the most proper observance of the commandment. If the number is to be insisted upon as indispensable this last cited Baraitha, could agree neither with R. Jose nor with the Rabbis.

(2) Reeds tied into bundles which were on sale at Sura.

(3) Sc. they are not to be classed with ordinary bundles which are invalid for the purpose.

(4) He has no intention of keeping them together for storage. Any one buying them usually unbinds them before putting them out to dry. Hence their validity for the Sukkah even before they are unbound.

(5) Since the reeds are also woven together at the bottom.

(6) Sc. undid the ends of the cord that hold them together. The woven part may still remain.

(7) If they are carried about they fall apart.

(8) As, for instance, bitter herbs, lettuce or endives prescribed for the first Passover evening meal.

(9) While they are still fresh.

(10) Sc. they serve as ohel (v. Glos.).

(11) If they form a horizontal partition between a clean and an unclean object.

(12) This is a Rabbinical restriction. Pentateuchally they act as an interposition until they become dry.

(13) The space they occupy is regarded as air space, and just as an air space of three handbreadths in the roof of the Sukkah invalidates it, so does a covering of these herbs.

(14) Lit., ‘they have no handles’, since the stalks serve no useful purpose in the case of grapes for a vat. Handles of vessels or stalks of fruit are susceptible to ritual uncleanness only where they are needed for the purpose of lifting the object with their aid.

(15) And produce is attached to them.

(16) For a vat.

(17) In the absence of the stalks the grains could not be used at all as a roof covering.

(22) The ‘Others’.

(23) I.e., both he who cuts grapes and he who cuts ears of corn for Sukkah-covering.

(24) V. supra n. 10.

(25) And, therefore, they are regarded in the same light as the fruit and are unfit for the Sukkah roof unless the inedible portion exceeds both them and the edible portion.

(26) Who ruled that only in the case of grapes are handles not susceptible but in the case of ears the handles are susceptible.

(27) Since the first Tanna holds that in either case the 'handles' are not susceptible.

(28) R. Abba holding the same view as the 'Others' who hold that 'handles' are susceptible.

(29) Who holds that if one cuts ears for a Sukkah-covering it does not render the 'handles' susceptible to ritual uncleanness.

(30) The first Tanna. Sc. must it be admitted that the 'others' always maintain that the handles in the case of 'ears of corn' are rendered susceptible to uncleanness, in complete contradiction of it. Menashia's ruling, or is it possible to explain the view of the 'others' as applying to a particular case only?

(31) Even the 'others'.

(32) When they are rendered susceptible to uncleanness.

(33) The first Tanna, who ruled that the 'handles' are not rendered susceptible to uncleanness.

can be rendered susceptible to uncleanness by intention,¹ but cannot be rendered insusceptible except by an act of change,² since³ an act can disannul a [prior] act or intention, while an intention cannot disannul either a [previous] act or a [previous] intention? And if you will say that this⁴ refers only to vessels which are of importance but that 'handles' which are needed only as aids for the eating of the food,⁵ are made [susceptible to uncleanness] by intention and are also unmade by intention [it may be objected], Have we not learnt: The stalks of all foodstuffs that are threshed⁶ in the threshing-floor⁷ are insusceptible to ritual uncleanness,⁸ and R. Jose declares them susceptible?⁹ It is explicable according to the authority who says that 'threshing' here means loosening [the sheaves],¹⁰ but according to the authority who says that 'threshing' here really means 'threshing',¹¹ what can one answer?¹² — That in the previous case also,¹³ he actually threshed them.¹⁴ If so,¹⁵ what is the reason of the 'others'?¹⁶ They hold the same opinion as R. Jose, as we have learnt, R. Jose declares them susceptible to uncleanness. How can you compare them?¹⁷ One can understand there¹⁸ the reason of R. Jose, that [the stalks] have a use according to R. Simeon b. Lakish, as R. Simeon b. Lakish said, Since one can [the more easily] turn them¹⁹ with the pitchfork,²⁰ but in this case,²¹ what use have they?²² --To seize hold of them by their haulms when he takes it²³ to pieces.

R. Eleazar²⁴ said, Why are the prayers of the righteous likened to a pitchfork?²⁷ To teach thee that just as the pitchfork turns the corn from place to place in the barn, so the prayers of the righteous turn the mind of the Holy One, blessed be He, from the attribute of harshness to that of mercy.

MISHNAH. PLANKS MAY BE USED FOR THE SUKKAH-COVERING. THESE ARE THE WORDS OF R. JUDAH. R. MEIR FORBIDS THEM. IF ONE PLACES OVER IT²⁸ A PLANK FOUR HANDBREADTHS WIDE, IT IS VALID PROVIDED THAT HE DOES NOT SLEEP UNDER IT.²⁹

GEMARA. Rab said, The dispute³⁰ concerns planks which are four [handbreadths wide],³¹ in which case R. Meir holds the preventive measure against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing,³² while R. Judah disregards this preventive measure against [the use of] an ordinary roofing, but in the case of planks which are less than four handbreadths wide all agree that the Sukkah is valid.³³ Samuel however says that the dispute³⁴ concerns planks which are less than four [handbreadths wide],³⁵ but if they are four [handbreadths wide], they are invalid according to all.³⁶ If they are 'less than four' [you say, does this then imply,] even less than three? But [in this case] are they not mere sticks?³⁷ — R. Papa answered, He³⁸ means thus, If they are four [handbreadths wide] the Sukkah is invalid according to all,³⁶ if they are less than three, it is valid according to all.³⁹ What is the reason? Since they are mere sticks. In what do they⁴⁰ dispute? In [planks that are] from three to four [handbreadths wide]. One Master⁴¹ holds the opinion that since there is not in them the minimum extent of a 'place'⁴² we do not make a restrictive enactment,⁴³ and the other Master⁴⁴ holds the opinion that since the law of labud⁴⁵ can no longer apply to them⁴⁶ we make a restrictive enactment.

We learned: IF ONE PLACES OVER IT A PLANK WHICH IS FOUR HANDBREADTHS WIDE, IT IS VALID, PROVIDED THAT HE DOES NOT SLEEP UNDER IT. Now it is well according to Samuel who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths] but where there are four, all agree that it is invalid; for this reason he must NOT SLEEP UNDER IT. But according to Rab who says that the dispute is where there are four [handbreadths] but where there are less than four all agree that it is valid, why, according to R. Judah, may he NOT SLEEP UNDER IT? — Do you then think that this statement⁴⁷ is according to all? The concluding statement agrees in fact with R. Meir [only]. Come and hear: Two sheets combine,⁴⁸

two boards do not combine. R. Meir says, Boards also are like sheets.¹ It is well according to Samuel who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths], but where there are four handbreadths all agree that it is invalid, [since it may be explained:] What does 'combine' mean? That they combine to make four [handbreadths]. But according to Rab, who says that their dispute is where there are four [handbreadths], but where there are not four handbreadths all agree that it is valid, how is it² to be explained? If there are four [handbreadths]³ why need they combine; if there are not, why [is it invalid]? Are they not mere sticks? — Indeed [it is a case] where there are four handbreadths, and what [is meant by] combine is that they combine to form four cubits⁴ at the side.⁵

Another version: It is well according to Samuel, who says that the dispute is where there are not four [handbreadths], but where there are four, all agree that it is invalid, [since it may be explained:] What is meant by 'combine'? That they combine to form four cubits at the side. But according to Rab, it is well according to R. Meir, since what is meant by 'combine' may be that they combine to form four cubits at the side, but according to R. Judah, who says that even if there are four [handbreadths] the Sukkah is valid, what could be the meaning of 'they do not combine'? Are they not like mere sticks?⁶ — Since R. Meir said 'they combine', R. Judah said 'they do not combine'. It has been taught in agreement with Rab, and it has been taught in agreement with Samuel. 'It has been taught in agreement with Rab', If he covered the Sukkah with planks of cedar which are not four [handbreadths wide], it is valid according to all. If they have four [handbreadths], R. Meir declares it⁷ invalid and R. Judah valid. R. Judah said, It happened in a time of peril⁸ that we brought planks which were four [handbreadths wide]⁹ and we laid them over a balcony and sat under them. They¹⁰ said to him, Is this a proof? A time of peril is no proof.

'It has been taught in agreement with Samuel', If one covered the Sukkah with planks of cedar which are four [handbreadths wide] it⁷ is invalid according to all; if they have not four [handbreadths] R. Meir declares it⁷ invalid and R. Judah valid. But R. Meir admits that if there is a space of one plank between every two planks,¹¹ a man may place laths¹² between them and the Sukkah is valid,¹³ and R. Judah agrees that if he placed on it a plank four handbreadths wide, [although] the Sukkah is valid, a man may not sleep under it,¹⁴ and if he sleeps beneath it he has not fulfilled his obligation.¹⁵

It was stated: If he placed the planks¹⁶ on their sides,¹⁷ R. Huna declared it⁷ invalid,¹⁸ and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna declared it valid.¹⁹ R. Nahman once came to Sura and R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna came in to him and asked, If he placed them on their sides, what is the law?²⁰ He said to them, It is invalid, since they are regarded as metal spits.²¹ R. Huna said to them, Did I not tell you, Say as I do? They answered him, Did then the Master give us a reason when he did not accept his ruling? He said to them, Did you ask me for a reason and I would not give you?

Can we say that the following provides support for his view:²² If [the Sukkah] cannot contain his head, the major part of his body and his table, or if a breach has been made in it²³ large enough for a kid to jump in headlong,²⁴ or if he placed on it a plank four handbreadths wide, even if only three handbreadths of it enter within, it²⁵ is invalid. How is this [last sentence]²⁶ meant? Surely that he placed them²⁷ on their sides?²⁸ — No! Here we are dealing with a case where he placed it²⁹ above the entrance of the booth,³⁰ with three [of the four handbreadths] within and one protruding outside, in which case it is considered as a lath protruding from the Sukkah, and every lath protruding from a Sukkah is regarded as [part of the] Sukkah.³¹

(17) Which were less than three handbreadths in width.

(18) For the reason given by R. Nahman infra.

(19) Since no house roof is constructed in such a manner there was no need to enact a preventive measure as in the case of flat-lying planks.

(20) They thought he might agree with their view.

(21) I.e., since a plank of four handbreadths is invalid, as is any metal object, in whatever position it is placed, it is still invalid.

(22) R. Nahman's.

(23) In one of the Sukkah walls near the ground.

(31) V. infra, 19a. Hence it is that the one handbreadth without is deemed to be added to the three within to constitute an invalid covering.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 15a

MISHNAH. IF A ROOF [OF TIMBER]¹ HAS NO PLASTERING, R. JUDAH SAYS THAT BETH SHAMMAI RULED THAT² HE SHOULD LOOSEN [ALL THE PLANKS] AND REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN EACH TWO,³ WHILE BETH HILLEL RULED HE SHOULD EITHER LOOSEN [THE PLANKS] OR REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO. R. MEIR RULED, HE SHOULD REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO, BUT NOT LOOSEN.⁴

GEMARA. It is well according to Beth Hillel; their reason is that 'Thou shalt make', [implies] but not from that which is [already] made,⁵ so that if he loosens [the planks] he performs an action,⁶ and if he removes one from between two he performs an action;⁶ but what is the reason of Beth Shammai? If it is that 'Thou shalt make' [implies] but not from that which is [already] made, one act only⁷ should be sufficient; if it is because of a restriction on account [of the possible use]⁸ of all ordinary roofing,⁹ it should suffice if he removes one from between two?¹⁰ — Indeed it is because of a restriction on account [of the possible use] of an ordinary roofing, but they mean thus: Even although he loosens them, if he removes one from between two,¹¹ it is [valid], otherwise it is not. If so, read the concluding [part:] R. MEIR RULED, HE SHOULD REMOVE ONE FROM BETWEEN TWO, BUT NOT LOOSEN. Is not R. Meir's view thus identical with that of Beth Shammai? — He¹² means thus: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not dispute on this point.¹³ What [then] does [the Mishnah] teach us?¹⁴ That R. Meir holds that a preventive measure [has been enacted] against the possible use⁸ of an ordinary roofing, while R. Judah disregards the preventive measure against [the use of] an ordinary roofing? But have they not already disputed on this point, seeing that we have learnt, Planks may be used for the Sukkah covering, these are the words of R. Judah; R. Meir forbids them?¹⁵ — R. Hiyya b. Abba answered in the name of R. Johanan, The former Mishnah deals with planed boards¹⁶ and they forbade them as a preventive measure against [the possible use⁸ of] vessels.¹⁷ But according to Rab Judah who citing Rab said,¹⁸ 'If he covered the Sukkah with plain arrowshafts, it is valid; with bored arrow-shafts, it is invalid',¹⁸ and he does not restrict plain shafts on account of [the possible use of] bored ones; here also we should not restrict planed boards on account of [the possible use of] vessels? You are consequently obliged to say that the dispute in the former [Mishnah] is on the question whether a preventive measure against the possible use of an ordinary roofing has been enacted and that the dispute in the latter Mishnah is also on the same question; but why should they dispute the same question twice? — The latter [Mishnah] is what R. Judah said to R. Meir: 'Why [he said in effect] do you forbid planks?'¹⁹ As a preventive measure against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing? But it is Beth Shammai only who hold this opinion while Beth Hillel do not enact any preventive measure'.²⁰ To this R. Meir answers that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not dispute this point at all. This is correct according to Rab who says that the dispute²¹ is where the planks are four [handbreadths wide], since in such a case R. Meir holds that a preventive measure [has been enacted] against [the possible use of] an ordinary roofing while R. Judah disregards the preventive measure against all ordinary roofing; but according to Samuel, who says that the dispute²¹ is where the planks are not four [handbreadths wide], but that where they are four handbreadths wide all agree that it²² is invalid, on what principle do they dispute in the latter [Mishnah]?²³ They dispute on [the question of] the annulment of a roof.²⁴ One Master²⁵ holds the opinion that²⁶ by this means it becomes annulled,²⁷ while the other Master²⁸ holds the opinion that by this means it does not become annulled.²⁹

MISHNAH. IF ONE ROOFS HIS SUKKAH WITH IRON SPITS OR THE LONG BOARDS OF A BED,³⁰ AND THE SPACE BETWEEN THEM³¹ EQUALS THEM,³² IT³³ IS VALID. IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK TO MAKE FOR HIMSELF A SUKKAH, IT IS NO VALID SUKKAH.

GEMARA. Can we say that this³⁴ is a refutation of R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua, since it was stated, If the breach is equal to that which is standing,³⁵ R. Papa says it is permitted,³⁶ and R. Huna the son of R. Joshua says it is forbidden?³⁷ — R. Huna the son of R. Joshua can answer, ‘What is meant by EQUALS THEM? That it can easily pass through them.’³⁸

But is it not possible to measure them exactly'?¹ — R. Ammi answered, This is a case where he makes it larger.² Raba said, one can even say that he does not make it larger, but if they³ were placed as the web, he places [the valid covering] as the woof; if as the woof, he places them as the web.⁴ OR THE LONG BOARDS OF A BED. Can we say that this⁵ confirms [a statement of] R. Ammi b. Tabyomi, for R. Ammi b. Tabyomi said, If he covered the Sukkah with discarded⁶ vessels it is invalid? — [No,] as R. Hanan said elsewhere in the name of Rabbi, 'With the long board and two legs, or with the short board⁷ and two legs',⁸ so here also it may refer to the long board and two legs, or the short board and two legs.⁹ Where was this statement of R. Hanan in the name of Rabbi stated? — In connection with what we have learnt:

(1) The questioner assumed that the previous answer meant that the phrase EQUALS THEM denotes a space between boards and the like which is usually larger than the objects between which it intervenes.

(2) I.e., the Mishnah actually referred only to a case where one did make it larger.

(3) The boards or the spits.

(4) I.e., the valid covering is placed crosswise to the invalid, and, therefore, always exceeds it in volume.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 16a

A bed can become unclean [only] when it is assembled¹ and be rendered clean only when it is assembled, these are the words of R. Eliezer, but the Sages say, it can become unclean when it is in parts and become clean when in parts.² What are [these parts]? — R. Hanan said in the name of Rabbi, The long board and two legs or the short board and two legs. For what is it³ fit?⁴ — For placing against a wall and sitting upon it, and for tying it with ropes.⁵

[Reverting to] the main text: 'R. Ammi b. Tabyomi said, If he covered with discarded vessels it is invalid'. What are discarded vessels? — Abaye said, Small strips of cloth less than three [handbreadths] square which are unfit to be used either by rich or by poor. It has been taught in agreement with R. Ammi b. Tabyomi: In the case of a matting of rushes or straw, the remnants thereof, even if diminished,⁶ may not be used for a Sukkah-covering;⁷ in that of a mat of reeds, a large one⁸ may be used for a Sukkah-covering, a small one⁹ may not be used for a Sukkah-covering.¹⁰ R. Eliezer said, The former also is susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness¹¹ and may not be used as a Sukkah-covering.¹²

IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK. R. Huna said, This only refers to where there is not a hollow of one handbreadth [in height] extending to seven [handbreadths square],¹³ but if there is a hollow of one handbreadth extending to seven, it is a [valid]¹⁴ Sukkah. So it has also been taught; If he hollows out a haystack to make for himself a Sukkah, it is a [valid] Sukkah. But have we not learnt, IT IS NO SUKKAH? Deduce, therefore, therefrom [that the explanation is] according to R. Huna. This is conclusive.

Some put it¹⁵ in the form of a contradiction. We have learnt: IF HE HOLLOWS OUT A HAYSTACK TO MAKE FOR HIMSELF A SUKKAH, IT IS NO SUKKAH. But has it not been taught that it is [a valid] Sukkah? — R. Huna answered, There is no difficulty. The latter refers to where there is a hollow of a handbreadth extending to seven [handbreadths]¹³ while the former refers to where there is no hollow of a handbreadth extending to seven [handbreadths].

MISHNAH. IF ONE SUSPENDS THE WALLS¹⁶ FROM ABOVE DOWNWARDS,¹⁷ IF THEY¹⁸ ARE HIGHER THAN THREE HANDBREADTHS FROM THE GROUND, IT IS INVALID. IF HE RAISES THEM FROM THE BOTTOM UPWARDS, IF THEY BE TEN HANDBREADTHS HIGH, IT IS VALID.¹⁹ R. JOSE SAYS, JUST AS FROM THE BOTTOM UPWARDS A HEIGHT OF TEN HANDBREADTHS SUFFICES SO FROM THE TOP DOWNWARDS DOES A HEIGHT OF TEN HANDBREADTHS [SUFFICE].

GEMARA. On what principle do they²⁰ differ? — One Master²¹ holds the opinion that a hanging partition²² renders [the Sukkah] valid, and the other Master²³ holds the opinion that a hanging partition does not render it valid.²⁴

We have learnt elsewhere, If there be a cistern between two courtyards,²⁵ they²⁶ may not take water therefrom on the Sabbath,²⁷ unless a partition ten handbreadths high be made either from above, or from below,²⁸ within²⁹ its rim.³⁰ R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says,

(6) From the minimum required to make them susceptible to uncleanness, i.e., six handbreadths square, v. Kel. XXVII, 2.

(7) Since in origin they constituted a vessel.

(8) Which cannot be regarded as a 'vessel' since it is usually used as a covering.

(9) Which may be regarded as a vessel.

(10) On account of its susceptibility to ritual uncleanness.

(11) In his opinion a large one also is used as a rule for sitting purposes and must, therefore, be regarded as a vessel.

(12) V. infra Mishnah I, 11.

(13) The minimum size of a Sukkah.

(14) [The reason for invalidating a Sukkah which has been hollowed out of the haystack is as stated supra 12a "thou shalt make" which implies but not from that which has been made'. This reservation it is to be noted applies only to the Sukkah-covering but not to the walls. Now, if in piling up the haystack there was left a space below of the mentioned dimensions, the top of the haystack can be said to have been constructed in the very first instance to provide a covering (for the space below) and as such is valid for the Sukkah which has been hollowed out. Where, however, there was no such space left in the first instance, the covering which the top of the haystack provides comes into existence only as the automatic result of the hollowing out and consequently is invalid for the Sukkah; so Rashi. For another interpretation v. R. Han.]

- (22) If it is ten handbreadths high.
- (23) The first Tanna.
- (24) When its lower end, however, is within three handbreadths from the ground it is no longer regarded as a hanging partition but as one resting on the ground.

- (28) Near the water.
- (29) Cf. Rashi. Lit., 'or within', referring to 'from above'.
- (30) This is a special relaxation of the law of partitions in the case of water. Where the suspended partition, however, is without the rim, as is the case with the wall between the courtyards, since it was not especially made for the water, it cannot be regarded as valid.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 16b

Beth Shammai say, [The partition may be suspended] from above, and Beth Hillel say, Only from below. R. Judah said, A partition¹ should not be [subjected to] greater [restrictions] than the wall between them.² Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, R. Judah spoke according to the view of R. Jose³ who said that a hanging partition validates. But in fact it is not so! Neither does R. Judah hold the opinion of R. Jose,⁴ nor does R. Jose hold the opinion of R. Judah.⁵ 'R. Judah does not hold the opinion of R. Jose', for R. Judah speaks only there with regard to the 'erub of courtyards,⁶ which is a Rabbinical injunction, but here, with regard to the Sukkah which is a Pentateuchal commandment, he does not [say so]. 'Nor does R. Jose hold the opinion of R. Judah,' for R. Jose speaks only here with regard to the Sukkah which is merely a positive commandment⁷ but with regard to the Sabbath, the interdiction of which involves stoning, he does not say so.⁸ And if you will retort⁹ with regard to the incident which occurred at Sepphoris,¹⁰ on whose authority was it done?¹¹ Not on the authority of R. Jose,¹² but on that of R. Ishmael son of R. Jose.¹³ What was this incident? — [That concerning which] when R. Dimi came¹⁴ he related that on a certain occasion they forgot to bring a Scroll of the Law¹⁵ on the eve of the Sabbath. On the morrow, they stretched sheets over the pillars¹⁶ and¹⁷ brought the Scroll of the Law and read therein. Can it mean that they [really] spread them out? Whence then did they bring them on the Sabbath?¹⁸ — Rather they found sheets [already] spread over the pillars, and therefore they brought the Scroll of the Law and read therein. R. Hisda stated in the name of Abimi, A matting slightly more than four handbreadths [wide] is permitted as a Sukkah wall.¹⁹ How does one place it? — One suspends it in the middle less than three [handbreadths] from the ground and less than three from the top,²⁰ and whatever [space] is less than three handbreadths is treated as labud.²¹ But is not this obvious? — One might have said that we apply the law of labud once, but we do not apply labud twice [to the same wall], therefore he informed us of this. It was objected: A matting slightly more than seven [handbreadths] is permitted as a Sukkah wall!²² — With reference to what was this taught? With reference to a large Sukkah,²³ and what does it inform us?²⁴ That walls may be suspended from above downwards in agreement with R. Jose.²⁵

R. Ammi said, A board which is slightly more than four [handbreadths] wide²⁶ is²⁷ permitted for a Sukkah wall when he places it less than three [handbreadths] from the termination of the adjacent wall, since a space less than three [handbreadths] is²⁸ treated as labud.²⁹ What does he inform us? — He informs us this: That the minimum extent of a small Sukkah is seven [handbreadths].

- (1) Within the cistern.
- (2) The two courtyards, 'Er. 86b. I.e. the wall alone, though suspended above the cistern, is a valid partition in respect of the movement of objects on the Sabbath.
- (3) Of our Mishnah.
- (4) That a suspended partition is valid in a Sukkah.
- (5) That a suspended partition is valid on the Sabbath in the case of the cistern.
- (6) V. supra 3b.
- (7) The punishment for which transgression is comparatively mild.
- (8) Even in the case of a Rabbinical injunction.
- (9) Since R. Jose does not agree with R. Judah in the case of Sabbath.
- (10) V. infra, where a suspended partition was treated as valid in the case of Sabbath.
- (11) Seeing that R. Jose who was the rector of the academy of Sepphoris (v. Sanh. 32b) did not agree with such a view.
- (12) Who at that time was no longer alive.
- (13) His son.
- (14) From Palestine to Babylon.
- (15) The Scroll was in one of the houses of the courtyard where stood the Synagogue. As there was no 'erub prepared it was forbidden to carry from the house to the Synagogue on the Sabbath, and they, therefore, adopted the following device.
- (16) That were situated between the house and the Synagogue.
- (17) Having thus formed a sort of private domain.
- (18) When the carrying of objects is forbidden.
- (19) If it is as long as the required wall.
- (20) The Sukkah referred to is one that is exactly ten handbreadths high, and the placing of a matting slightly more than four in the middle leaves a space of less than three on either side.
- (21) V. supra 6b, and Glos.
- (22) Since it prescribes the minimum of seven handbreadths, it follows that only one labud is permitted.
- (23) I.e., one more than ten handbreadths in height which precludes the assumption of more than one labud. All that can be done is to suspend the mat at a distance of less than three handbreadths from the roof so that its size (being slightly more than seven handbreadths) combines with the space between it and the roof (which is somewhat less than three handbreadths) to constitute (by the rule of labud) a suspended wall of ten handbreadths in height.
- (24) Sc. is it not obvious that a ten handbreadths high wall is valid?
- (25) Supra.
- (26) And is ten handbreadths high.
- (27) Placed vertically.
- (28) By the rule of labud.
- (29) And thus a wall of the prescribed minimum length of seven handbreadths is obtained.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 17a

MISHNAH. IF ONE REMOVED THE SUKKAH-COVERING THREE HANDBREADTHS¹ FROM THE WALLS, IT IS INVALID.² IF [THE ROOF OF] A HOUSE IS BREACHED,³ AND HE PLACED A SUKKAH-COVERING OVER IT, IF THERE IS A DISTANCE OF FOUR CUBITS FROM THE WALL TO THE COVERING, IT IS INVALID.⁴ SIMILARLY IN THE CASE OF A COURTYARD WHICH IS SURROUNDED BY AN EXEDRA.⁵ IF [THE COVERING OF] A LARGE SUKKAH WAS SURROUNDED WITH A MATERIAL WHICH IS INVALID FOR A SUKKAH-COVERING, IF THERE IS A SPACE OF FOUR CUBITS⁶ BENEATH IT, IT IS INVALID.⁷

GEMARA. Why are all these [rulings]⁸ needed? — It is necessary [to state them all]. For if he⁹ had only informed us of [the roof of] a house which is breached, [one would have said that the validity¹⁰ applied to this case only] because the partitions are made for the house,¹¹ but in the case of a courtyard which is surrounded by an exedra, where the partitions are not made for the exedra it does not apply;¹² and if he had informed us of those two,¹³ [one would have said that the validity¹⁰ applied to these cases only] because their covering might be a valid covering,¹⁴ but in the case of a large Sukkah which is surrounded with a material which is invalid for a Sukkah-covering, since the very material of the covering is invalid, it does not apply, [therefore it is] necessary [to mention all].

Rabbah stated, I found the Rabbis of the College of Rab sitting and saying,¹⁵ ‘An air space invalidates¹⁶ if it is three [handbreadths wide]; an invalid covering invalidates¹⁶ if it is four [handbreadths wide]’, and I said to them, Whence do you know that an air space of three [handbreadths] invalidates? [Presumably] because we learned: IF THE SUKKAH-COVERING IS THREE HANDBREADTHS DISTANT FROM THE WALLS, IT IS INVALID. [But if so,] invalid Sukkah-covering too should not invalidate¹⁶ unless it extends to four cubits, since we have learnt: IF [THE ROOF OF] A HOUSE IS BREACHED AND HE PLACED A SUKKAH-COVERING OVER IT, IF THERE IS A DISTANCE OF FOUR CUBITS FROM THE WALL TO THE COVERING, IT IS INVALID. And they said to me, This is no evidence¹⁷ since Rab and Samuel both say that¹⁸ the reason of its validity is because [the roof is regarded as the continuation] of a ‘curved wall’;¹⁹ and I said to them, What [would the law be] if the invalid Sukkah-covering were less than four [handbreadths], with an air space²⁰ of less than three [handbreadths]? [Surely] it would be valid.²¹ And what if he filled in this space with spits?²² [Surely] it would be invalid.²³ Now should not an air-space which invalidates with three [handbreadths]²⁴ be treated like invalid covering which only invalidates with four?’²⁵ And they answered me, ‘If so, then even according to you, who say that invalid covering invalidates only if there are four cubits, how [would it be] if there was invalid covering of less than four cubits, and [next to it] an air space of less than three handbreadths? [Surely] it would be valid. And if he filled in this space with spits? [Surely] it would be invalid. Now [can it not similarly be argued] should not an air space which invalidates with three [handbreadths] be like the Sukkah-covering which invalidates [only] if there are four cubits?’ And I answered them, ‘How can you compare the two cases? It is well according to me who say four cubits,

(1) Horizontally.

(2) Since the mere air cannot be regarded as a valid part of either the roof or the walls.

(3) In the centre at some distance from the walls.

(4) Since the portion of the roof that intervenes between the walls and the valid covering constitutes a break. If the distance, however, is less than four cubits each wall and the portion of the roof adjacent to it is regarded as one ‘curved wall’ reaching from the ground to the valid covering (v. supra 4a). It is forbidden to use the portion of the Sukkah under the solid roof but the centre of the house is regarded as a valid Sukkah.

(5) A peristyle. A roof projects from the sides of the courtyard in front of the houses that surround it while the centre of the courtyard is exposed. If this centre has been covered with the proper materials the courtyard is subject to the same laws as the house spoken of in the previous clause.

- (6) Between the walls and the valid covering.
- (7) Cf. supra n. 3 mut. mut.
- (8) All of which are based on the principle of the inadmissibility of a 'crooked wall' where the invalid part of the roof is no less than four cubits in width.
- (9) The author of our Mishnah.
- (10) Where the distance is less than four cubits.
- (11) And the house becoming a Sukkah, the 'partitions', i.e., the walls, are, on the principle of the 'curved wall', regarded as the valid walls of the Sukkah also.
- (12) But for the houses, in consequence of which they cannot be regarded as the walls of the Sukkah either.
- (13) House and courtyard.
- (14) Its inadmissibility being due entirely to the fact that it was not originally intended as a Sukkah-covering.
- (15) In the name of Rab.
- (16) An entire Sukkah.
- (17) Lit., 'with the exception of this'.
- (18) In our Mishnah.
- (19) Lit., 'crooked wall', while they spoke of invalid covering that was far removed from the walls and that could not consequently be treated as a continuation of these walls.
- (20) Next to it.
- (21) Since the invalid covering is less than the prescribed minimum.
- (22) Which owing to their susceptibility to ritual uncleanness are invalid for a Sukkah-covering.
- (23) Since there are now more than four handbreadths of invalid covering, whereas hitherto whilst it was air space the Sukkah was not invalidated.
- (24) And which is, therefore, more serious.
- (25) And consequently the Sukkah under discussion would be invalidated by the air space though it is less than three handbreadths.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 17b

because [in this case the validity of the Sukkah depends on] whether there is the standard size¹ or not, and here² there is not the standard size, for since their standard sizes³ are unequal, they do not combine; but according to you, who say that the size is solely dependent on the principle of division⁴ what does it matter whether the division is made through invalid covering, or through invalid covering and space?' Abaye said to him, And according to the Master also, admitted that their standards are unequal in a large Sukkah, but in a small Sukkah are they not equal?⁵ — He answered, The reason there⁶ is not because the standards are equal, but because there is not the [minimum] size of a Sukkah remaining.⁷

Do we not then combine standards when they are unequal? Have we not in fact learnt: A garment that is three [handbreadths] square, sacking four handbreadths square, leather five handbreadths square and matting six handbreadths square⁸ [are susceptible to uncleanness]. And it has been taught concerning this: Garments and sacking, sacking and leather, leather and matting combine with one another?⁹ — In that case the reason has been given, as R. Simeon said, 'What is the reason?¹⁰ Since they¹¹ are susceptible to uncleanness¹² if [a man with running issue] sits on them, as we have learnt: If he cuts from any one of them¹³ a piece one handbreadth square, it is susceptible to uncleanness'.¹⁴ To what use can a piece one handbreadth square be put? — R. Simeon b. Lakish in the name of R. Jannai replied, It can be used as a patch¹⁵ for [the saddle of] an ass.¹⁶

In Sur:¹⁷ they taught this decision¹⁸ in the above words;¹⁹ in Nehardea²⁰ they taught [as follows]:²¹ Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, Invalid covering in the middle [of the Sukkah] invalidates²² if it is four [handbreadths wide]; at the side only if it is four cubits wide; while Rab says, Whether in the middle or at the sides, [it invalidates] only if it is four cubits wide.

We have learnt: If he placed over it²² a plank four hand breadths wide,²³ it is valid.²⁴ It is well according to Rab who says that whether in the middle or at the sides [the invalid covering must be no less than] four cubits [to invalidate it]; for this reason it is [here] valid; but according to Samuel who says that at the middle a width of four [handbreadths invalidates], why is it here valid? — Here it is a case where [the plank was placed at] the side. Come and hear: Two sheets combine,²⁵ two boards do not combine.²⁶ R. Meir says, Boards are like sheets.²⁷ It is well according to that version which says that Rab says that ‘whether in the middle or at the sides [it invalidates only] if it is four cubits wide;’ for thus by ‘combine’ was meant, Combine to make four cubits; but, according to the version which says that Rab says that, in the middle [even, only] four handbreadths [width of invalid covering] invalidates, what kind of boards are we to imagine? If they are each four handbreadths wide, why need they combine? And if they are each less than four handbreadths wide, they are mere sticks!²⁸ — This is indeed a case where they are each four handbreadths wide; and what does ‘combine’ mean? That they combine to make up four cubits at the side.²⁹

Come and hear: If he covered the Sukkah with planks of cedarwood which are four [handbreadths wide], according to all it is invalid; if they have not four handbreadths in their width, R. Meir declares it³⁰ invalid and R. Judah declares it valid,

 - (2) In the case of the Sukkah under consideration.
 - (3) For invalid covering and for air space.
 - (4) The standard of four handbreadths in connection with invalid covering has no basis in tradition, it not being mentioned even in the Mishnah; it has been fixed merely on the principle that four handbreadths represent a ‘division, i.e., the minimum size of a separate place, breaking up the unity of the Sukkah.
 - (5) A Sukkah of minimum size, i.e., of seven handbreadths square, is invalid if there are either three handbreadths of invalid covering or of air space; why then should not the two combine?

but R. Meir admits that if there is the space of one plank between every two planks that one may place laths between them and it is valid.¹ It is well according to him who says that whether in the middle or at the sides it needs four cubits [of invalid covering to invalidate a Sukkah], for this reason it is here valid;² but according to him who says that in the middle four [handbreadths of invalid covering invalidate] why is it valid?³ — R. Huna the son of R. Joshua answered, We are dealing here with a Sukkah which measures no more than a bare eight [cubits], and he places [alternately] plank and lath, plank and lath, plank and lath on one side and [similarly] plank and lath, plank and lath, plank and lath on the other side, so that there are two laths in the middle, and thus a valid Sukkah is formed in the middle.⁴

Abaye ruled, An air space of three handbreadths in a large Sukkah which is diminished with either sticks or spits⁵ is a [valid] diminution;⁶ in a small Sukkah,⁷ with sticks it is a [valid] diminution,⁸ with spits an invalid one.⁹ This¹⁰ applies only to the side,¹¹ but as regards the middle, R. Aha and Rabina differ. One says, The rule of labud¹² applies in the middle,¹¹ while the other says, The rule of labud does not apply in the middle.

What is the reason of him who says that the rule of labud applies in the middle? — Because it has been taught, If a beam protrudes from one wall but does not touch the opposite wall, and similarly in the case of two beams, one protruding from one wall and one from the other and not touching each other, if [the space between¹³ is] less than three [handbreadths] it is unnecessary to provide another beam;¹⁴ if it is three [handbreadths] it is necessary to provide another beam.¹⁵ And [what does] the other¹⁶ [answer to this]? — Beams¹⁷ are different [from a Sukkah]¹⁸ since [their erection is merely] a Rabbinical measure.¹⁹

What is the reason of him who says that the rule of labud is not applied in the middle? — Because we learned: If a skylight in [the roof of] a house was of one handbreadth square, and there was an object of uncleanness in the house, all the house is unclean, but what is directly below the skylight is clean.²⁰ If the unclean object is directly below the skylight, the whole house is clean. If the skylight was less than a handbreadth square, and there was an unclean object in the house, what is directly below the skylight is clean; if the unclean object is directly below the skylight, the whole house is clean.²¹ And [what does] the other²² [say]?²³ — The laws of uncleanness differ [from those of Sukkah] since there is a tradition to that effect.²⁴

R. Judah b. Ila'i expounded, If [the roof of] a house is breached, and he placed a Sukkah-covering over it, it²⁵ is valid.²⁶ R. Ishmael son of R. Jose said to him, Master, explain [thy words]. Thus my father²⁷ explained it: If there are four cubits²⁸ it²⁵ is invalid,²⁶ if less than four cubits, it is valid.

R. Judah b. Ila'i expounded, Abruma²⁹ is permitted. R. Ishmael son of R. Jose said to him, Master, explain [thy words]. Thus said my father, Those from such and such a place are forbidden,³⁰ and from such and such a place are permitted.³¹ This is analogous to that which Abaye said; the zahantha³² of Bab Nahara³³ are permitted. What is the reason? If you will say that it is because there is a swift current there, and an unclean fish, since it has no spinal cord, cannot exist therein, [it could be retorted that] we see that they do exist [in rivers with rapid currents]. Will you then say that it is because it has salt water, and 'an unclean fish, since it has no scales, cannot exist [in salt water, it could be retorted that] we see that they do exist? — The reason in fact is that the muddy nature of this river does not allow unclean fish to breed in it. Rabina said, But at the present time that the River Ethan³⁴ and the River Gamda flow therein, they³⁵ are forbidden.³⁶

It was stated, If a man placed a Sukkah-covering over an exedra³⁷ which has door-frames,³⁸ it is valid;³⁹ if it has no door-frames, Abaye declares it⁴⁰ valid and Raba declares it invalid. Abaye declares it valid [since]

 - (4) Eight cubits equal forty-eight handbreadths which are duly covered by the six planks (six times four is twenty-four handbreadths) and the latter which also total six times four is twenty-four handbreadths, but the alternation of planks and laths is as follows (P is plank, L is lath) PLPLPLLPLPLP. The eight handbreadths in the middle represented by LL constitute a valid Sukkah, the next being regarded as continuations of the walls, since on any side they are less than four cubits in extent.
 - (5) Sticks are a valid, spits an invalid covering.
 - (6) And the Sukkah is valid, since there is now neither the minimum of air space nor the minimum of invalid covering to cause invalidity.
 - (7) Sc. one of minimum size.
 - (8) Since by the rule of labud the air space is deemed to be non-existent.
 - (9) Because the air space and the spits, which together extend along three handbreadths cannot be regarded as a valid part of the roof and the Sukkah (being of the minimum size) is thus reduced to less than the prescribed minimum.

 - (38) The exedra being separated from the courtyard by a sort of colonnade each column in which is less than three handbreadths distant from the other.

(39) Since the space between the door-frames is less than three handbreadths we apply the law of labud whereby they are regarded as one solid wall. In the absence of the colonnade the Sukkah, sc. the centre portion with the valid covering, has no walls since the courtyard walls which are separated from it by more than four cubits cannot serve as its walls to the Sukkah.

(40) The Sukkah.

we say that the edge of the roof [of the exedra is regarded as though it] descends and fills up [the space],¹ while Raba says it is invalid, since we do not say that the edge of the roof descends and fills up [the space]. Said Raba to Abaye, According to you who say that the edge of the roof [is regarded as though it] descends and fills in [the space, is a Sukkah valid] even if the middle wall is missing?² He answered him, In that case I agree with you [that the Sukkah is invalid] since it would be like an alley-way that is open on two opposite sides.

Must we say that Abaye and Raba differ on the same principle as that on which Rab and Samuel differed for it was stated, If an exedra was in a field,³ Rab declares that it is permitted to carry [on the Sabbath] over the whole extent of it, since we say that the edge of the roof descends and fills in the space,⁴ while Samuel said that it is forbidden to carry in it except within four cubits, since we do not say that the edge of the roof descends and fills in [the space]?⁵ — [No!] With regard to the opinion of Samuel neither of them⁶ disagrees;⁷

(1) And this forms a wall on every side of the Sukkah.

(2) Sc. if a Sukkah is erected with only the two opposing sides, are the planks of the roof regarded as descending to form the missing walls?

(3) I.e., one that has a roof but is without walls.

(4) Forming walls around it.

(5) V. 'Er., Sonc. ed., p. 654 notes. Win then Abaye's view agree only with that of Rab, and Raba's only with that of Samuel?

(6) Not even Abaye.

(7) That the edge of the exedra cannot be regarded as descending and forming walls for the Sukkah. For if in the case of the Sabbath where the roof was made for the exedra its edge is not regarded as descending and forming walls how much less could an edge be regarded as descending and forming walls in the case of a Sukkah where the roof was made for the exedra and not for the Sukkah.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 19a

they only differ with regard to the opinion of Rab. Abaye agrees with Rab, while Raba can say that Rab ruled then only in that case,¹ since the partitions² are made for the exedra, but in the case here,³ since they are not made for this purpose [he would] not [rule thus].⁴

We have learnt: SIMILARLY IN THE CASE OF A COURTYARD WHICH IS SURROUNDED WITH AN EXEDRA.⁵ But why?⁶ Should it not rather be assumed that the edge of the roof descends and fills in [the space]?⁷ — Raba explained according to Abaye that this is a case where one made the beams level.⁸

In Sura⁹ they taught these statements¹⁰ in the above form. In Pumbeditha¹¹ they taught [them as follows]: If a man placed a Sukkah-covering over an exedra which has no door-frames, it is invalid according to all.¹² If it has door-frames.¹³ Abaye declares it valid, while Raba declares it invalid. Abaye declares it valid, since we apply the law of labud,¹⁴ Raba declares it invalid, since we do not apply the law of labud;¹⁵ but the law is according to the former version.¹⁶

R. Ashi found R. Kahana placing a Sukkah-covering over an exedra which had no door-frames.¹⁷ He said to him, Does not the Master hold the opinion which Raba stated, that if it has door-frames it is valid, but if it has no door-frames it is invalid? — He showed him [that a door-frame] was visible within though level on the outside, or visible from without, though level from within,¹⁸ for it has been stated, ‘If it¹⁹ is visible from without and level from within,²⁰ it is regarded as a valid side-post’,²¹ and a side-post is in this respect like door-frames. A Tanna taught: Laths projecting from a Sukkah are regarded as the Sukkah.²² What is meant by ‘laths projecting from a Sukkah’? — ‘Ulla replied, Sticks²³ projecting beyond the back²⁴ of the Sukkah. But do we not need three walls?²⁵ — [This refers to a case] where there were [three walls]. But do we not need the size²⁶ prescribed as a minimum for the validity of a Sukkah? — [This refers to a case] where there was [the size prescribed as a minimum for the validity of a Sukkah]. But do we not need that the shade should exceed the sun? — [This refers to] where there was [more shade than sun]. If so,²⁷ what need was there to state it? — One might have said that since they²⁸ were made for the inside but not for the outside it²⁹ is not [valid], therefore he informs us [that it is valid]. Rabbah and R. Joseph both stated: This³⁰ refers to sticks projecting in front of a Sukkah³¹ one wall of which continues with them. As one might have said that it does not contain the prescribed minimum for the validity of a Sukkah,³² therefore he informs us [that it is valid].³³

Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, This³⁰ is necessary only in the case of a Sukkah, most of which has more shade than sun, while a minor part of it has more sun than shade. As one might have said that this small portion³⁴ invalidates it, therefore he informs us [that it does not]. What then is meant by ‘going out’?³⁵ [It means] going out from the validity of a Sukkah. R. Oshaia said, This³⁰ is necessary only in the case of a small Sukkah³⁶ which has invalid Sukkah-covering to an extent of less than three [handbreadths]; and what is meant by ‘going out’?³⁷ Going out from the laws applicable to a Sukkah.³⁸ R. Hoshiah demurred: Let it³⁹ be regarded as no better than air space, does then air space of less than three [handbreadths] invalidate a small⁴⁰ Sukkah?⁴¹ — R. Abba answered him, [The difference is that] in the former case³⁹ it combines [with the rest of the Sukkah] and it is permitted to sleep under it;⁴² in the latter case⁴³ it does not combine and it is forbidden to sleep under it. But is there anything which itself is invalid and yet combines [with another thing to become valid]? — R. Isaac b. Eliashib answered, Yes!

(1) Sabbath.

(2) Sc. the edge of the roof of the exedra which is assumed to descend and to form partitions.

(3) Sukkah.

(4) Cf. supra n. 5 mut. mut.

(5) If the roof of the exedra is four cubits wide, so that the walls of the houses cannot be regarded as the Sukkah walls, the Sukkah is invalid.

(6) Should the Sukkah be invalid.

(7) And thus provides walls.

(8) The beams of the Sukkah-covering were not placed over the exedra roof, so that the edge of the latter was visible within the Sukkah, but on a level with it.

(9) The site of the College of Rab.

(10) The views of Abaye and Raba.

(11) After the destruction of Nehardea by Odenathus in 259, Judah b. Ezekiel (Rab Judah), a pupil of Rab and Samuel, established a college at Pumbeditha.

(12) Even according to Abaye. Since the roof was made for the exedra and not for the outside space its edge cannot be regarded as forming a wall for that space.

(13) And the distance between any two of them is less than three handbreadths.

(14) As the wall is consequently a proper one it may serve for both the exedra and the Sukkah.

(15) The rule of labud is applied only to a wall that was made to serve the space it encloses but not to one that is to serve an outside space also.

- (16) Of Raba's ruling, viz., that labud is applied even where a wall is to serve an outside space, while an edge of a roof is assumed to descend downwards only when it is to serve its inner space.
- (17) Only two walls were made to the Sukkah, the exedra edge forming the third, and the fourth side was open lacking even the minimum of a handbreadth to constitute a fictitious wall.
- (18) The exedra had a door-frame no less than a handbreadth wide which commenced at the corner of the Sukkah and extended outside the Sukkah, being visible only from without, thus: (see drawing left) a = Sukkah wall; b = roof of exedra; c = wall of exedra; d = projection of exedra wall forming door-frame.
- (19) A side-post that must be fixed to the edge of an alley to enable the carrying of objects within it on the Sabbath.
- (20) Sc. if the sidepost is level with one of the walls but extending beyond it, so that it is visible only from without. Thus: (see drawing right) a = side-post.
- (21) V. 'Er. (Sonc. ed.) fol. 9b notes. (11) Hence it is valid whether it is visible from within the Sukkah or without it.
- (22) And one fulfils his obligation by sitting under them.
- (23) Of the Sukkah-covering.
- (24) Sc. the middle wall of the three prescribed as the minimum number of walls for a valid Sukkah.
- (25) While the projection has only one.
- (26) Seven handbreadths square.
- (27) That the projection satisfied all the prescribed requirements of a valid Sukkah.
- (28) The walls.
- (29) The projection.
- (30) The ruling about the projection spoken of.
- (31) Which has only three walls, the fourth side being entirely open.
- (32) And the opposite wall does not reach beyond the Sukkah proper.
- (33) Because it is regarded as part of the Sukkah having as it does two complete walls and a portion of a third one which need not be longer (than one handbreadth).
- (34) Which has more sun than shade.
- (35) The literal translation of נצו rendered supra 'projecting'.
- (36) Measuring only seven handbreadths.
- (37) V. p. 81, n. 14.
- (38) In being an invalid covering.
- (39) The invalid covering.
- (40) Measuring only seven handbreadths.
- (41) Of course it does not; much less then would an invalid covering do it; what need then was there to state the obvious?
- (42) And this is the point the ruling under discussion was intended to emphasize.
- (43) Air space.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 19b

Fluid clay proves it; since it combines¹ to make up forty se'ah,² yet he who immerses in it has not undergone a proper immersion.³

MISHNAH. IF ONE MAKES HIS SUKKAH LIKE A CONESHAPED HUT OR LEANED IT AGAINST A WALL, R. ELIEZER INVALIDATES IT SINCE IT HAS NO [PROPER] ROOF, WHILE THE SAGES DECLARE IT VALID.

GEMARA. It has been taught: R. Eliezer agrees that if he raised it⁴ one handbreadth from the ground,⁵ or if he separated it⁶ one handbreadth from the wall,⁷ it is valid. What is the reason of the Rabbis?⁸ — That the incline of a tent is like the tent itself. Abaye found R. Joseph sleeping on a bridal bed⁹ in a Sukkah. He said to him, 'According to whom [do you act]?¹⁰ [presumably] according to R. Eliezer?¹¹ Do you then forsake the Rabbis¹² and act according to R. Eliezer?'¹³ — He answered him, 'In the Baraita this¹⁴ is taught in the reverse, order, viz., that R. Eliezer declares it valid and the Sages declare it invalid.' [Abaye then asked], 'Do you forsake a Mishnah and act according to a Baraitha?’¹⁵ — He answered him, ‘The Mishnah represents an individual opinion,¹⁶ as it has been taught, If he makes his Sukkah like a cone-shaped hut, or leaned it against a wall R. Nathan says that R. Eliezer invalidates it because it has no roof while the Sages declare it valid.’¹⁷

MISHNAH. A LARGE REED MAT¹⁸ IF MADE FOR RECLINING UPON IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS¹⁹ AND²⁰ IS INVALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING. IF MADE FOR A COVERING,²¹ IT MAY BE USED FOR A SUKKAH-COVERING AND IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS. R. ELIEZER RULED, WHETHER SMALL OR LARGE, IF IT WAS MADE FOR RECLINING UPON, IT IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND IS INVALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING; IF MADE FOR A COVERING, IT IS VALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING AND IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS.

GEMARA. [Is not our Mishnah] self-contradictory? It says, IF MADE FOR RECLINING UPON IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND IS INVALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING. The reason then²² is because it was made specifically for reclining upon, but if it was made without specific purpose, [it would be assumed that it was] for a covering. And then it is taught: IF MADE FOR A COVERING IT IS VALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING AND IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS. The reason then²³ is because it was made specifically for a covering, but if it was made without specific purpose [it would be assumed that it was] made for reclining upon? — This is no difficulty. The former case refers to a large [mat], the latter to a small one. This is well according to the Rabbis, but according to R. Eliezer it still presents a difficulty, for we have learnt:²⁴ R. ELIEZER SAYS, WHETHER SMALL OR LARGE, IF IT WAS MADE FOR RECLINING UPON, IT IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS AND IS INVALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING. The reason then is that it was made specifically for reclining upon, but if made with no specific purpose, [it would be assumed that it was intended] for a Sukkah-covering. But read the latter portion [of the Mishnah]. IF MADE FOR A COVERING, IT IS VALID AS A SUKKAH-COVERING AND IS NOT SUSCEPTIBLE TO [RITUAL] UNCLEANLINESS. The reason then is that it was made specifically for a Sukkah-covering, but if made without specific purpose, [it would be assumed that it was] for reclining upon? — Rather said Raba: In the case of a large [mat] all acquiesce that if made without specific purpose [it is assumed to be intended] for a covering. They only differ in the case of a small [mat]. The first Tanna is of the opinion that ordinarily a small one is for reclining upon, and R. Eliezer is of the opinion that ordinarily a small one is for a covering as well;

- (1) With water.
 - (2) The minimum prescribed for a ritual bath.
 - (3) Immersion in fluid clay is invalid, yet if there is not the minimum forty se'ah in a mikweh, the fluid clay makes up the necessary amount.
 - (4) Either the hut or the lean-to.
 - (5) The intervening air space is regarded as a wall, by applying the law of labud, and the rest as the roof.
 - (6) The lean-to.
 - (7) The intervening air space is regarded as a roof, stretching horizontally to the wall.
 - (8) The Sages.
 - (9) A bed which has no covering on top of the width of a handbreadth, but the curtains rise to a point. V. supra 10b.
 - (10) In using a bed that is covered with a curtain that intervenes between it and the Sukkah roof.
 - (11) Who ruled that a sloping or cone-shaped tent is no valid tent.
 - (12) The Sages.
 - (13) But the decision of the Sages, since they are the majority, should be followed rather than that of an individual.
 - (14) The dispute between R. Eliezer and the Sages.
 - (15) But a Mishnah surely is more authoritative than the Baraitha.
 - (16) That of R. Nathan.

- (17) The contemporaries of R. Nathan, however, differ from him in maintaining that R. Eliezer declared it valid while the Sages held it to be invalid.
- (18) Which is hard and inconvenient for lying or reclining upon.
- (19) Since it was expressly made for the purpose it is regarded as a finished article.
- (20) On account of its susceptibility to uncleanness.
- (21) So that it is not a finished article.
- (22) Why it is not regarded as a finished article.
- (23) Why it is regarded as an unfinished article.
- (24) Rashal omits 'this . . . learnt' and substitutes, 'Read the latter part of the Mishnah'.

and it is this that was meant: If a large mat of reeds is made specifically for reclining upon, it is susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness and is invalid as a Sukkah-covering. The reason is that it was made specifically for reclining upon, but ordinarily it is regarded as though it was made for a covering, and is valid as a Sukkah-covering. A small [mat], if made for a covering, is valid as a Sukkah-covering. The reason is that it was made specifically for covering, but ordinarily it is regarded as though made for reclining upon, and is invalid for a Sukkah-covering.¹ [This is the view of the first Tanna] and R. Eliezer comes to say that whether it is small, or large, if made without specific purpose, it is valid as a Sukkah-covering.

Abaye said to him,² If so,³ [instead of] R. ELIEZER SAYS, WHETHER IT IS SMALL OR LARGE, it ought to read, Whether it is large or small?⁴ Furthermore, is it not in fact with regard to a large mat that they are in dispute, and it is R. Eliezer who takes the stricter view, for it was taught: A large mat of reeds is valid for a Sukkah-covering. R. Eliezer says, If it is not susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness,⁵ it is valid for a Sukkah-covering?⁶ Rather said R. Papa, 'With regard to a small [mat], all acquiesce that ordinarily it is intended for reclining upon. In what do they dispute? In the case of a large one. The first Tanna is of the opinion that ordinarily a large one is intended for a covering, while R. Eliezer is of the opinion that ordinarily a large one is intended for reclining upon also'. And what is meant⁷ by 'IF IT WAS MADE FOR RECLINING UPON?'⁸ It is this that was meant: Ordinarily also its manufacture is assumed to be for the purpose of reclining upon unless one made it specifically for a covering.⁹ Our Rabbis taught, A mat of wicker or of straw, if large,¹⁰ is valid for a Sukkah-covering, if small¹¹ it is invalid for a Sukkah-covering.¹² One of reeds or of helath,¹³ if plaited,¹⁴ is valid for a Sukkah-covering, if woven,¹⁵ it is invalid. R. Ishmael son of R. Jose said in the name of his father, Both the one and the other, are valid for a Sukkah-covering; and R. Dosa also ruled according to his view.

We have learnt elsewhere: All reed mats are susceptible to corpse uncleanness.¹⁶ These are the words of R. Dosa. The Sages, however, say, They are susceptible to the uncleanness of midras.¹⁷ [Can it mean] to the uncleanness of midras but not to that of a corpse seeing that we have learnt: Whatever is susceptible to [primary] uncleanness of midras is also susceptible to [primary] uncleanness from a corpse?¹⁸ — Say rather also to the uncleanness of midras.¹⁹

What is meant by hozloth?²⁰ — R. Abdimi b. Hamduri said marzuble. What is marzuble? — R. Abba said, Bags filled with foliage.²¹ R. Simeon b. Lakish said, Real matting. And Resh Lakish is consistent [in this view], since Resh Lakish said, May I be an expiation for R. Hiyya and his sons.²² For in ancient times when the Torah was forgotten from Israel, Ezra came up from Babylon and established it. [Some of] it was again forgotten and Hillel the Babylonian²³ came up and established it. Yet again was [some of] it forgotten, and R. Hiyya and his sons came up²⁴ and established it. And thus said R. Hiyya and his sons: R. Dosa and the Sages did not dispute about reed-mats of Usha,²⁵

(1) Rashal omits 'A small mat. . . covering' since it is not in the Mishnah.

- (2) Raba.
- (3) That R. Eliezer's point is that a small mat is subject to the same law as a large one.
- (4) The point of R. Eliezer being that a small mat has the same law as a large one, on which the first Tanna agrees. The order should be: Whether large, as you say, or small.
- (5) Sc. if it was specifically intended to be used as a Sukkah-covering.
- (6) From which it follows that if a large mat was made without specific purpose it is regarded as made for a covering according to the first Tanna, while according to R. Eliezer it is regarded as made for lying upon.
- (7) In R. Eliezer's ruling.
- (8) Seeing that ordinarily also it is regarded as intended for the same purpose.
- (9) The statement of the first Tanna is thus explained as before viz., that the first clause refers to a large mat (as was explicitly stated) while the latter clause refers to a small mat, the meaning being that if the mat was a small one, that was made specifically for a covering it may be used as a Sukkah-covering while ordinarily it is assumed to be intended for lying upon. To this R. Eliezer objected: A large mat also is subject to the same law as a small one viz., that if made for no specific purpose it is deemed to have been made for lying upon, is susceptible to ritual uncleanness and may not be used as a Sukkah-covering, but if it was expressly made to serve as a covering it may be used as a Sukkah-covering and is not susceptible to uncleanness.
- (10) In consequence of which it is not used for lying upon.
- (11) Irrespective of whether it was plaited or woven.
- (12) Since the materials are soft they are in either case (cf. prev. n.) suitable for reclining upon.
- (13) Another kind of reed.
- (14) And therefore uneven and unsuitable for reclining upon.
- (15) The materials being hard, it is suitable for reclining upon only if it is woven.
- (16) Sc. they are ordinarily regarded as vessels that are susceptible to the various degrees of ritual uncleanness, except that they, not being intended for lying upon, contract primary uncleanness only through contact with a corpse and not (v. infra) through midras.
- (17) 'Ed. III, 4. V. Glos.; i.e., in their opinion the mats are as a rule intended for lying upon and are, therefore, susceptible to primary uncleanness even through midras.
- (18) Nid. VI, 3.
- (19) Because they are (a) deemed to have the status of a vessel and (b) are as a rule intended for lying upon.
- (20) Rendered supra 'reed mats'.
- (21) Mizable, used by shepherds as pillows (Rashi).
- (22) A respectful way of mentioning one's deceased parent or teacher. V. Kid. 31b.
- (23) This famous teacher hailed from Babylon.
- (24) From Babylon.
- (25) The reeds of Usha, a town in Galilee famous as one of the seats of the Sanhedrin, were soft and were used exclusively for mattresses, those of Tiberias were hard and not used for this purpose.

that they are susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness,¹ or of Tiberias that they are not susceptible.² About what do they dispute? About those of other places. One Master³ is of the opinion that since they are not [as a rule]⁴ used for sitting upon, they are like those of Tiberias, and the Masters are of the opinion that since it sometimes happens that they are 'used for sitting upon,⁵ they are like those of 'Usha.

The Master said: 'All reed mats are susceptible to corpse uncleanness. These are the words of R. Dosa'. But was it not taught: 'And R. Dosa also said according to his⁶ words'?⁷ -This is no difficulty. The former refers to one that has a rim,⁸ the latter to one that has no rim.⁹

It was objected: Mats of bamboo,¹⁰ of reed grass, of sackcloth¹¹ or of goat's-hair¹² are susceptible to corpse uncleanness,¹³ so R. Dosa, while the Sages say, They are also susceptible to midras uncleanness. It is well according to him who says [that hozloth means] 'bags filled with foliage', since those of bamboo and of reed-grass¹⁴ can be used¹⁵ for baling fruit, while those of sackcloth and goat's-hair¹⁶ can be used for haversacks or baskets,¹⁷ but according to him who says that it means 'real matting', it is well¹⁸ with regard to those of sackcloth and goat's-hair, since they can be used¹⁵ for curtains¹⁹ or for sieves but to what use¹⁸ can those of bamboo and reed-grass be put?²⁰ — They can be used for [covering] brewing vats.

Some read [as follows]: It is well according to him who says [that hozloth means] 'real matting', since those of bamboo and reed-grass may be used for [covering] brewing vats while those of sackcloth and goat's hair can be used for curtains or for sieves, but according to him who says that it means 'bags filled with foliage, it is well with regard to those of sackcloth and goat's hair which may be used for haversacks or baskets, but to what use can those of bamboo and reed-grass be put? — They may be used for baling fruit.

It was taught: R. Hanina stated, When I journeyed²¹ in the Diaspora²² I came across an old man who said to me, 'A reedmat may be used as a Sukkah-covering'. And when I came before R. Joshua, my father's brother, he agreed with his words. R. Hisda said, Only if it²³ has no rim.²⁴ 'Ulla said, Those mats of the people of Mahuza, were it not for their rim, would be valid as a Sukkah-covering.²⁵ So it has also been taught: Reed mats are valid as a Sukkah-covering, but if they have rims they are invalid as a Sukkah-covering.

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. HE WHO SLEEPS UNDER A BED IN THE SUKKAH²⁶ HAS NOT FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.²⁷ R. JUDAH STATED, WE WERE ACCUSTOMED TO SLEEP UNDER A BED IN THE PRESENCE OF THE ELDERS, AND THEY SAID NAUGHT²⁸ TO US. R. SIMEON SAID, IT HAPPENED THAT TABI,²⁹ THE SLAVE OF RABBAN GAMALIEL, USED TO SLEEP UNDER A BED.³⁰ AND R. GAMALIEL SAID TO THE ELDERS, 'YE HAVE SEEN TABI MY SLAVE, WHO IS A SCHOLAR, AND KNOWS THAT SLAVES ARE EXEMPT FROM [THE LAW OF] A SUKKAH, THEREFORE DOES HE SLEEP UNDER THE BED', AND INCIDENTALLY WE LEARNED THAT HE WHO SLEEPS UNDER A BED³¹ HAS NOT FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.²⁶

GEMARA. But, surely, there are no ten [handbreadths in the height of the BED, are there]?³² — Samuel interpreted, [that it refers to] a bed which is ten [handbreadths high]. We have learnt elsewhere, A hole which has been hollowed out by water or by insects or eaten through by saline corrosion, and similarly a row of stones,³³ or a pile of beams,³⁴ overshadow uncleanness.³⁵ R. Judah said, Any 'tent' which is not made by the hands of man³⁶ is not³⁷ considered as a tent.³⁸ What is the reason of R. Judah?

(1) Even to that of midras since they are intended for lying upon and for no other purpose.

(2) Since no one would use them for lying upon.

(3) R. Dosa.

(4) V. Rashi. Lit., 'there is none who sits upon them'.

(5) And are appointed for the purpose.

(6) R. Jose's.

(7) That such mats are valid for a Sukkah-covering. From which it follows that they are not regarded as a 'vessel' that is susceptible to ritual uncleanness.

(8) And it is thus a finished article, a 'vessel'.

(9) Which, being used for no other purpose but that of covering booths cannot be regarded as a 'vessel'.

(10) Or 'cork' (v. Jast.).

(11) Made of goat's hair (Rashi).

(12) Or horse-hair from the mane or the tail (Rashi).

- (13) But not to that of midras, since they can be regarded as 'vessels', but not as objects used for reclining or sitting upon.
- (14) Though the materials are loosely woven.
- (15) If not for lying upon.
- (16) Closely woven materials.
- (17) In which even very small objects can be kept.
- (18) According to R, Dosa.
- (19) V. Rashi and Tosaf. 'Covers' (Jast.).
- (20) Sc. since these are not made for lying upon and since they are useless for any other purpose why should they be susceptible to ritual uncleanness?
- (21) Lit., 'went down'.
- (22) Lit., 'exile', sc. Babylon. He undertook the journey for the purpose of arranging the interpolation of an extra month in the calendar. V. Ber. 63a.
- (23) The mat.
- (24) If it has one it might be used as a vessel and, being in consequence susceptible to ritual uncleanness, becomes invalid as a Sukkah-covering.
- (25) Since they were generally used for the coverings of booths and were unsuitable for any other purpose.
- (26) Since the bed forms a 'tent' that intervenes between him and the Sukkah roof.
- (27) During the festival of Tabernacles one must eat, drink and sleep in a Sukkah.
- (28) Against it.
- (29) The famous slave of Gamaliel II, often mentioned in the Mishnah. Elsewhere Gamaliel makes exceptions for him saying, 'Tabi was not like other slaves'. v. Ber. II, 7.
- (30) In his master's Sukkah.
- (31) In a Sukkah.
- (32) The bed not being ten handbreadths high how can it be regarded as a 'tent'? (Cf. Supra n. 1).
- (33) Under which a cavity was formed by the removal of a stone.
- (34) Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.
- (35) A hollow formed by any of the above means is regarded as a 'tent', rendering unclean whatever is within it if a piece of corpse lies there.
- (36) For the purpose of serving as a tent.
- (37) As far as conveying uncleanness is concerned.
- (38) Oh. III, 7.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 21a

— He deduces it from the word 'tent' [common to this¹ and to] the Tabernacle. It is written here, This is the law, when a man dieth in the tent,² and it is written there, And he spread the tent over the tabernacle.³ As there ['tent' means one] made by the hands of man, so here [it means one made] by the hands of man. And the Rabbis?⁴ — The word 'tent' occurs many times,⁵ to include [all tents].⁶

Is then R. Judah of the opinion that a tent which is not made by the hand of man is no valid tent? Let us point out an incongruity: [We have learnt] Courtyards were built in Jerusalem over a rock, and beneath them was a hollow [made] because of [the fear of] a grave in the depths,⁷ and they used to bring there pregnant women, and there they gave birth to their children and there they reared them for [the service of the Red] Heifer.⁸ And⁹ they brought oxen, upon whose back were placed doors, and the children sat upon them with stone cups¹⁰ in their hands. When they reached Siloam¹¹ they went down into the water and filled them, then ascended and sat again [on the doors].¹² R. Jose said, [Each child] used to let [his cup] down and fill it from his place¹³ because of [the fear of] a grave in the depths;¹⁴ and it has been taught, R. Judah said, They did not bring doors, but oxen.¹⁵ Now oxen, surely, are a 'tent' which is not made by the hands of man, and does it not nevertheless teach, R. Judah said, They did not bring doors, but oxen?—When R. Dimi came,¹⁶ he said in the name of R. Eleazar, R. Judah agrees¹⁷ in, the case [of a 'tent' that is as large as] a fistful.¹⁸

So it has also been taught: R. Judah admits in the case of overhanging crags and clefts of rocks.¹⁹ But a door, surely, has²⁰ an altitude of many fistfuls and yet R. Judah teaches, does he not, ‘They did not bring doors but oxen’?²¹ — Abaye replied, [It means that] they did not need to bring doors.²² Raba said, [It means that] they did not bring doors at all because the child, feeling confident,²³ might put out his head or one of his limbs and thus contract uncleanness

 - (7) Sc. the possibility of the existence of an unknown grave under the rock. Unless there is a hollow space of the height of one handbreadth above it the uncleanness of the grave penetrates through the rock and beyond it.
 - (8) The Red Heifer (Num. XIX) necessitated the utmost degree of ritual cleanliness. All the vessels used in connection with it were, therefore, of stone or earthenware which are not susceptible to ritual uncleanness, and, according to the above Mishnah, the children whose duty it was to bring the officiating priest the water for the sin-offering were kept free from contamination from pre-natal days until they were seven or eight years of age (Rashi, — Tosefta says, twelve). Hence the precautions mentioned above.

 - (20) From the ground to the door.
 - (21) Presumably because the doors cannot be regarded as a valid ‘tent’. Now If a door is no valid tent, how could the body of an ox be regarded as a valid one?
 - (22) The oxen alone were sufficient.
 - (23) Lit., ‘the mind of the child might be haughty’, since the width of the door would obviate any fear of his falling.

on account of a grave in the depths.¹

It has been taught in agreement with Raba: R. Judah said, They did not bring doors at all, because the child, feeling confident, might put out his head or one of his limbs and thus contract uncleanness on account of a grave in the depths, but they brought Egyptian oxen with wide bellies, and the children sat on their backs with stone cups in their hands. When they came to Siloam they descended, filled them, and ascended and sat again on their backs.

But has not a bed an altitude of many fistfuls, and yet we have learnt, R. JUDAH SAID, WE WERE ACCUSTOMED TO SLEEP UNDER A BED IN THE PRESENCE OF THE ELDERS?² — A bed is different, since it is made [to be slept] upon?³ But are not oxen also made [to be sat] upon?⁴

— When Rabin came⁵ he explained in the name of R. Eleazar, Oxen are different, since they afford shelter for shepherds in summer from the sun, and in the rainy season from the rain.⁶ If so, should not a bed [also be so regarded] since it affords shelter to the shoes and sandals under it?⁷ — The fact is, said Raba, that oxen are different since they naturally shelter their entrails,⁸ as it is written, Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and covered me with bones and sinews.⁹

And if you like [you may say that] R. Judah¹⁰ follows his own view that a Sukkah must be a permanent abode; and since a bed is but a temporary abode, while a Sukkah is a permanent 'tent', a temporary tent cannot annul a permanent one. But does not R. Simeon also say that a Sukkah must be a permanent abode,¹¹ and yet [he holds¹² that] a temporary tent¹³ does annul a permanent tent?¹⁴ — It is in this that they¹⁵ differ. One Master¹⁶ holds the opinion that a temporary tent can come and annul a permanent tent, while the other Master¹⁷ holds the opinion that a temporary tent cannot annul a permanent tent.

R. SIMEON SAID, IT HAPPENED THAT TABI, THE SLAVE etc. It has been taught: R. Simeon said, From the casual conversation of R. Gamaliel we have learnt two things. We have learnt that slaves are free from the obligation of Sukkah, and we have learnt that he who sleeps under a bed [in a Sukkah] has not fulfilled his obligation. But why does he not say, From the words of R. Gamaliel?¹⁸ -He informs us of something [else] by the way in agreement with that which R. Aha b. Adda, [or as some say, R. Aha b. Adda in the name of R. Hamnuna] said in the name of Rab: Whence do we know that even the casual¹⁹ conversation of scholars demands study? From Scripture where it is said, And whose leaf²⁰ does not wither.²¹

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SUPPORTS HIS SUKKAH WITH THE LEGS OF A BED, IT IS VALID. R. JUDAH SAID, IF IT CANNOT STAND BY ITSELF, IT IS INVALID.

GEMARA. What is the reason of R. Judah? — R. Zera and R. Abba b. Mamal disagree. One says, It is because the Sukkah has no permanence, and the other says, It is because he keeps it up with something susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness. What essentially differentiates them?²² — If, for instance, he fixed iron stakes [in the ground] and covered them with a Sukkah-covering. According to him who says, because it has no permanence, here there is permanence; according to him who says, because he keeps it up with something susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness, he is here also setting it up with something which is susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness.

Abaye said, They taught this²³ only if he supported it,²⁴ but if he placed a Sukkoth-covering above a bed,²⁵ it is valid. What is the reason? — According to him who says, because it has no permanence, here there is permanence; according to him who says, because he sets it up with something susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness, here he does not set it up with something susceptible to [ritual] uncleanness.²⁶ [

(1) In the absence of a door the child, in his fear of falling down, would not venture to put any part of his body out beyond the width of the body of the ox.

(2) Which shows that an occasional 'tent' is no valid tent.

(3) And not underneath it. Hence it cannot constitute a valid 'tent'.

(4) And not underneath them. How then could they be regarded as a valid tent?

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 22a

MISHNAH. A DISARRANGED¹ SUKKAH AND ONE WHOSE SHADE IS MORE THAN ITS SUN² IS VALID. IF [THE COVERING] IS CLOSE KNIT LIKE THAT OF A HOUSE, IT IS VALID, EVEN THOUGH THE STARS CANNOT BE SEEN THROUGH IT.

GEMARA. What is meant by medubleleth?³ — Rab replied, It means a beggarly Sukkah;⁴ and Samuel says, One whose reeds are not all on the same level.⁵ Rab taught the [first part of the Mishnah as] one [statement], while Samuel taught it as two. Rab taught it as one: A Sukkah which is medubleleth, (what is medubleleth? Beggarly) whose shade is more than its sun, is valid; while Samuel taught it as two: What is medubleleth? Disarranged; and [the Mishnah] teaches two [laws,] that a disarranged Sukkah⁶ is valid and that a Sukkah whose shade is more than its sun is valid.

Abaye stated, This⁷ applies only where there are not three handbreadths of distance between one reed and another, but if there are three handbreadths between one and another, it⁸ is invalid. Raba says, Even if there are three handbreadths between one and another we also do not say [that it⁸ is invalid] unless the upper reed⁹ is not a handbreadth wide but if the upper reed is a handbreadth wide, it⁸ is valid,¹⁰ since we apply to it the law of 'Beat and throw it down'.¹¹

Raba said, Whence do I say that if the upper reed is a handbreadth wide we apply to it the law of 'Beat and throw it down', and if it is not so wide we do not apply it? From what we have learnt: If the beams of [the roof of] a house and of its upper chamber have no plaster-work,¹² and they¹³ lie exactly one above the other, and there is uncleanness under one of them,¹⁴ only the space beneath this one is unclean; if between a lower and an upper [beam],¹⁵ the space between them is unclean; if upon an upper beam, what is above it as far as the sky is unclean. If the upper beams were opposite the gaps between the lower beams, and uncleanness lay beneath one of the beams, the space beneath them all is unclean;¹⁶ if it lay above one of the beams, what is above them as far as the sky is unclean.¹⁷ And on this it was taught, When do these¹⁸ apply? When the beams are each a handbreadth [wide]¹⁹ and there is [a gap] of a handbreadth between them,²⁰ but if there is not [a gap] of a handbreadth between them,²¹ if there is uncleanness under one of them,²² whatever is under that beam²³ is unclean²⁴ while the space between them²⁵ and above them is clean.²⁶ Thus it clearly follows that if there is a handbreadth²⁷ we apply the law of 'Beat and throw it down', but if there is not a handbreadth²⁷ we do not apply this law. This is conclusive.

R. Kahana was sitting at his studies and enunciated this statement.²⁸ Said R. Ashi to R. Kahana, Do we then not apply the law of 'Beat and throw down' where an object is not a handbreadth wide?

Has it not in fact been taught: If a beam was protruding from one wall, but was not touching the opposite wall, and similarly if two beams, one protruding from one wall and one from the other, were not touching each other, and [the space between them²⁹ is] less than three [handbreadths]³⁰ it is unnecessary to supply another beam, but if it was three [handbreadths] it is necessary to supply another beam. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel ruled,

 - (2) This rule which appears to be a repetition of the one supra 2a is discussed infra.
 - (3) Cf. supra n. 1.
 - (4) Sc. one covered with very few reeds, the roof having many holes, except that none of them is three handbreadths wide.
 - (5) Lit., one reed going up, and another down', so that the interior of the Sukkah has more sun than shade. The Sukkah is nevertheless valid because the number of reeds is sufficient, had they been laid on the same level, to provide more shade than sun.

 - (10) Even if it is three handbreadths higher than the lower one.
 - (11) A legal fiction whereby a plane is regarded as though it were placed at a lower level. The reed which is raised above the others is regarded as though it were lying on the same level as the lower ones. The necessity of a handbreadth of width is explained forthwith.

 - (19) So that each beam is important enough to be treated as a 'tent' both as regards causing uncleanness to spread all under it and to form an interposition between an uncleanness under it and the space above it.
 - (20) Sc. the lower beams, so that each upper beam placed opposite the gaps between the lower beams virtually covers a part of the roof of the lower room to all extent of not less than one handbreadth.
 - (21) So that each of the upper beams covers in the roof of the lower room a space that is less than one handbreadth.
 - (22) The lower beams.

 - (28) Of Raba.
 - (29) The beam and the wall or the two beams.
 - (30) So that the law of labud is applicable.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 22b

If the space was less than four [handbreadths]¹ it is unnecessary to bring another beam, if not, it is necessary to bring another beam.² And so in the case of two parallel beams neither of which can support a half-brick,³ if they can support a half-brick on their joint width of a handbreadth,⁴ it is not necessary to bring another beam; if not, it is necessary to bring another beam. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said, If they can support a half-brick in its length of three handbreadths,⁵ it is not necessary to bring another beam; if not,⁶ it is necessary to bring another beam. If one was above and the other below,⁷ R. Jose son of R. Judah said, We regard the upper one as though it were lower down⁸ or the lower one as though it were higher,⁹ provided that the upper one is not more than twenty [cubits from the ground]¹⁰ nor the lower one less than ten [cubits from the ground].¹¹ From which it follows that if both of them were within twenty [cubits]¹² we do apply the law of 'beat and throw down' even although none of them is a handbreadth [wide].¹³ — The other replied, Explain thus: Provided that the upper one is not more than twenty [cubits from the ground], but within the twenty [cubits], and the lower one is near it within less than three [handbreadths], or else: Provided that the lower one is not less than ten [cubits from the ground] but more than ten, and the upper one is near it within less than three [handbreadths], but if they were three [handbreadths apart] since [the upper beam] is not a handbreadth [wide], we do not apply the law of 'beat and throw down'.

WHOSE SHADE IS MORE THAN ITS SUN IS VALID. But if they are equal it is invalid? But have we not learnt in the other chapter,¹⁴ 'or whose sun is more than its shade, is invalid', from which it follows that if they are equal it is valid? — There is no difficulty, since the former¹⁵ refers to above and the latter to below.¹⁶ R. Papa observed, This bears on what people say, 'The size of a zuz¹⁷ above becomes the size of an issar¹⁷ below'.

IF CLOSE TOGETHER LIKE A HOUSE. Our Rabbis have taught, If it is close together like a house, even though the stars cannot be seen through it, it is valid. If the rays of the sun¹⁸ cannot be seen through it, Beth Shammai invalidate it, and Beth Hillel declare it valid.

MISHNAH. IF ONE ERECTS HIS SUKKAH ON THE TOP OF A WAGGON,¹⁹ OR ON THE DECK OF A SHIP,²⁰ IT IS VALID²¹ AND THEY MAY GO UP INTO IT ON THE FESTIVAL. IF HE MADE IT ON THE TOP OF A TREE, OR ON THE BACK OF A CAMEL, IT IS VALID,²² BUT THEY MAY NOT GO UP INTO IT ON THE FESTIVAL.²³ IF THE TREE [FORMED] TWO [WALLS] AND ONE WAS MADE BY THE HANDS OF MAN,²⁴ OR IF TWO WERE MADE BY THE HANDS OF MAN AND ONE WAS FORMED BY THE TREE, IT IS VALID, BUT THEY MAY NOT GO UP INTO IT ON THE FESTIVAL.²⁵ IF THREE WALLS WERE MADE BY THE HANDS OF MAN AND ONE WAS FORMED BY THE TREE, IT IS VALID AND THEY MAY GO UP INTO IT ON THE FESTIVAL.

(1) R. Simeon b. Gamaliel applies the law of labud to a space of four handbreadths also.

(2) 'Er. 14a, supra 18a q.v. notes.

(3) The cross-beam at the entrance of an alley has to be one handbreadth wide in order to be capable of holding a half-brick that is one and a half handbreadths wide (v. 'Er. 13b) One smaller than this width is not valid.

(4) In this case two beams, each less than the required width, were placed next to one another so that the half-brick can be placed in its breadth upon both.

(5) I.e., the space between the two narrow beams may be wider, provided they are strong and wide enough to carry the half-brick.

(6) I.e., the beams mentioned were not capable of supporting the half-brick.

(7) Sc. the two beams were not placed exactly level with one another, but one was raised more than the other.

(8) On a level with the lower one.

(9) And level with the one above it.

(10) Since a beam at such a height is invalid.

(11) 'Er. 14a; since no partition is valid unless it is no less than ten handbreadths high.

(12) Though the distance between them was more than three handbreadths.

(13) An objection against Raba.

(14) Mishnah I, 1.

(15) If they are equal it is invalid.

(16) If in the roof ('above') there is as much open, as covered space, then it is invalid, since the sun appears on the floor in broader patches than the shade; if on the floor ('below') there is as much sunshine as shade, it is evident that there is more of the roof covered than open. The idea is that the beams of the sun widen from the roof to the floor.

(17) Coins. The issar was worth one twenty-fourth of a zuz, but being of copper whereas the zuz was of silver, it was larger.

(18) Lit., 'the stars of the sun'.

(19) Though it is on the move.

(20) Where it is exposed to gales.

(21) Since the Sukkah satisfies the requirements of a temporary abode.

(22) On the intermediate days of the Festival or even on the Festival itself if one did enter it.

(23) Since the use of a tree on the Festival is forbidden under a Rabbinic measure.

(24) Cf. Tosaf. This refers to cases where the roof of the Sukkah was resting on the tree.

(25) A preventive measure against the possibility of putting some object on the roof (cf. prev. n.).

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 23a

THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHATEVER CAN STAND BY ITSELF IF THE TREE WERE TAKEN AWAY IS VALID, AND THEY MAY GO UP INTO IT ON THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. According to whom is our Mishnah? According to R. Akiba, as it has been taught, He who erects his Sukkah on the deck of a ship, R. Gamaliel declares it invalid and R. Akiba valid.¹ It happened with R. Gamaliel and R. Akiba when they were journeying on a ship² that R. Akiba arose and erected a Sukkah on the deck of the ship. On the morrow the wind blew and tore it away. R. Gamaliel said to him, Akiba, where is thy Sukkah?

Abaye said, All are in accord that where it³ is unable to withstand a normal land breeze it is nothing;⁴ if it can withstand an unusually [strong] land breeze, all are in accord that it is valid. Where do they dispute? Where it can withstand a normal land breeze, but not a normal sea breeze;⁵ R. Gamaliel is of the opinion that the Sukkah must be a permanent abode, and since it cannot withstand a normal sea breeze, it is nothing,⁴ while R. Akiba is of the opinion that the Sukkah must be a temporary abode, and since it can withstand a normal land breeze, it is valid.

OR ON THE BACK OF A CAMEL etc. According to whom is [this part of] our Mishnah? — According to R. Meir, as it has been taught, If he makes his Sukkah upon the back of an animal, R. Meir declares it valid and R. Judah invalid. What is the reason of R. Judah? — Since Scripture says, Thou shalt keep the feast of Sukkoth for seven days.⁶ A Sukkah which is suitable for seven days is called a valid Sukkah; if it is unsuitable for seven days it is not called a valid Sukkah.⁷ And R. Meir? — According to Pentateuchal law this [Sukkah] is also suitable [for seven days], and it is only the Rabbis who decreed against it.⁸

If he used an animal as a wall of the Sukkah, R. Meir declares it invalid and R. Judah valid, for R. Meir was wont to say, Whatever contains the breath of life can be made neither a wall for a Sukkah, nor a side-post for an alley⁹ nor boards around wells,¹⁰ nor a covering stone for a grave.¹¹ In the name of R. Jose the Galilean they said, Nor may a bill of divorcement be written upon it.

What is the reason of R. Meir? — Abaye replied, Lest it die.¹² R. Zera replied, Lest it escape.¹² Concerning an elephant securely bound, all¹³ agree [that¹⁴ the Sukkah is valid], since even though it die,¹⁵ there is still ten [handbreadths height] in its carcass.¹⁶ Regarding what then do they dispute? Regarding an elephant which is not bound. According to him¹⁷ who says, Lest it die, we do not fear;¹⁸ according to him¹⁹ who says, We fear lest it escape, we do fear.²⁰ But according to him who says, Lest it die, let us fear also lest it escape? — Rather say, Regarding an elephant which is not bound, all agree [that the Sukkah is invalid]; regarding what do they dispute? Regarding an [ordinary] animal which is bound: According to him who says, Lest it die, we fear [for that],²¹ according to him who says, Lest it escape, we have no fear.²² But according to him who says, Lest it escape, let us fear lest it die? — Death is not a frequent occurrence.²³ But is there not an open space between [the animal's legs]?²⁴ — [It refers to] where he filled it in with branches of palms and bay-trees. But might it not lie down? — [It refers to] where it was tied with cords from above.²⁵

And according to him who says, Lest it die, is it not tied with cords from above?²⁶ — It may occur that it is made to stand within three [handbreadths] of the covering²⁷

(1) Supra 7b.

(2) In the week of the Festival.

(3) A Sukkah.

(4) No valid Sukkah.

(5) So Tosaf. supra 7b. Cur. edd., in parenthesis 'an unusually strong land breeze'.

(6) Deut. XVI, 13.

(7) And this one is unsuitable for the first day of the Festival since it is Rabbinically forbidden to enter it on that day.

(8) As Pentateuchally it is suitable for all the seven days it is a valid Sukkah.

(9) V. supra.

(10) V. 'Er. 17b.

(11) Golel, v. Naz., Sonc. ed., p. 202, n. 5. I.e., it is not subject to the laws of a covering stone of a grave (cf. Hul. 72a) even if it was used as such.

(12) During the Festival and the Sukkah that would thus remain with one wall less than the prescribed number would be invalid.

(13) Abaye and R. Zera.

(14) According to R. Meir.

(15) And falls to the ground.

(16) And a valid wall still remains.

(17) Abaye.

(18) Sc. the Sukkah is valid, since there are ten handbreadths in the height of the carcass.

(19) R. Zera.

(20) And the Sukkah is, therefore, invalid.

(21) As the animal when lying on the ground would be less than ten handbreadths high, the wall, and consequently the Sukkah, is invalid.

(22) Since the animal is bound; and the Sukkah is, therefore, valid.

(23) Hence no preventive measure was called for.

(24) Even when it is alive. How then can a wall with such a gap be regarded as valid?

(25) So that it cannot lie down.

(26) So that even if it dies it will still be held up in a standing position. Why then should the Sukkah be invalid?

(27) I. e., there is a space of less than three handbreadths between the top of the animal and the roof, which is quite valid because of the law of labud.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 23b

but when it dies, it shrinks,¹ and this might not enter his mind.² But did Abaye say that R. Meir³ takes the possibility of death into consideration while R. Judah disregards it? Have we not in fact learnt: If the daughter of an Israelite was married to a priest, and her husband went to a country beyond the sea, she may eat of terumah⁴ on the presumption that he is still alive.⁵ And when we pointed to the following contradiction: [If a priest said to his wife,] 'Here is thy bill of divorce [to take effect] one hour before my death',⁶ she is forbidden to eat of terumah forthwith,⁷ Abaye answered that there is no difficulty, since the former [statement]⁸ is according to R. Meir who disregards the possibility of death, while the latter⁹ is according to R. Judah who regards the possibility of death, as it has been taught, If a man buys wine¹⁰ from Cutheans¹¹ he may say, 'Two log¹² which I intend to set aside are terumah, ten are the first tithe, and nine¹³ the second tithe', and then he redeems it¹⁴ and may drink it at once. So R. Meir

- (1) And the space will then be more than three handbreadths to which labud cannot apply and the Sukkah will in consequence be invalid.
 - (2) To make the necessary adjustments. Hence the preventive measure that no living animal may ever be used as a Sukkah wall.
 - (3) In enacting a preventive measure.
 - (4) V. Glos.
 - (5) Git., III, 3.
 - (6) A common procedure to obviate the necessity of halizah (v. Glos.).
 - (7) Git. 28a, Ned. 3b.

 - (9) Forbidding her to eat it.
 - (10) Late on Friday when he has no time to separate the terumah and tithes before the incidence of the Sabbath.
 - (11) Who do not give the priestly dues.
 - (12) Two out of a hundred, the normal amount of terumah given. Unlike tithe, the exact amount is not specified in the Bible. A log is a liquid measure, v. Glos.
 - (13) A tenth of what remains. The terumah goes to the priests, the first tithe to the Levites and the second has to be eaten in Jerusalem.
 - (14) The second tithe which may be redeemed with money. v. Deut. XIV, 22ff.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 24a

. R. Judah, R. Jose and R. Simeon forbid it?¹ -Transpose [the statement:]² R. Meir takes the possibility of death into consideration, while R. Judah disregards the possibility of death, as it was taught, If he used an animal as a wall for a Sukkah, R. Meir declares it invalid and R. Judah valid. [But then there is still] a contradiction between the two statements of R. Meir?³ — R. Meir can answer you: Death is of frequent occurrence, but the splitting of a wineskin is infrequent, since one might give it in charge of a guardian.

[But there is still] a contradiction between the two statements of R. Judah?⁴ The reason of R. Judah⁵ is not lest the wineskin split, but because he does not accept the principle of bererah.⁶ But does R. Judah consider the possibility of the wineskin splitting? Surely since the latter part [of the Baraita] continues: They said to R. Meir, 'Do you not agree that [we must fear] lest the wineskin split, with the result that he drank untithed [wine] retrospectively?' And he answered them, 'When the wineskin splits',⁷ it follows [does it not], that R. Judah⁸ does consider the possibility of the wineskin splitting? — [No!] There it is R. Judah who says to R. Meir in effect, 'As regards myself I do not accept the principle of bererah, but according to you who do accept the principle of bererah, do you not agree that [we must fear] lest the wineskin split?' And the latter answered, 'When the wineskin splits'.⁹

But does not R. Judah regard the possibility of death? Have we not in fact learnt: R. Judah says, Even another wife was prepared for him, lest his wife die?¹⁰ — On this surely it was stated: R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said, They adopted a higher standard with regard to Atonement.¹¹

Now whether according to him who says,¹² Lest it die, or according to him who says, Lest it escape, [the animal] according to the Pentateuchal law is a valid partition, and it is only the Rabbis who made a restrictive enactment concerning it. But if this is so, it ought according to R. Meir, to convey uncleanness [if it is used] as a covering stone of a grave,¹³ why then have we learnt: R. Judah¹⁴ says it¹⁵ is subject to the laws of uncleanness that are applicable to the covering stone of a grave, while R. Meir declares it unsusceptible to such uncleanness?¹⁶ -The fact is, said R. Aha b. Jacob, that R. Meir¹⁷ is of the opinion that any partition which is upheld by wind¹⁸ is no valid partition. Some there are who say that R. Aha b. Jacob said that R. Meir¹⁷ is of the opinion that any partition which is not made by the hands of man¹⁹ is no partition. What [practical difference] is there between [the two versions]? — The practical difference between them is where he set up a Sukkah wall with an inflated skin. According to the version which says a partition which is upheld by wind is no valid partition, [this one is invalid] since it is upheld by wind; according to the version which says ‘not made by the hands of man’

(1) Tosef. Dem. VII, 4, B.K. 69b; since the wineskin may split open and the contents be lost before he is able to make his intended separation an actual one, with the result that what he has already drunk is untithed. Thus R. Judah who takes this possibility into consideration certainly considers the possibility of death, while R. Meir who disregards this possibility equally disregards that of death. Now, since Abaye there distinctly attributes these views to R. Judah and R. Meir respectively how could he attribute to them here the reversed views?

(2) Of Abaye in the passage last cited.

(3) In the case of the skin he does not take its possible splitting into consideration while in the case of the animal he does take into consideration the possibility of its dying.

(4) Cf. supra n. 8, mut. mut.

(5) In the case of the wine.

(6) The principle that the later selection is considered as having been applied retrospectively. The later separation of the wine has no retrospective application. Hence even if the skin did not split the terumah is invalid.

(7) ‘Er. 37b. Sc. one does not anticipate the wineskin splitting.

(8) From whom R. Meir differs.

(11) Where even very remote possibilities were considered and provided for.

(12) In giving R. Meir's reason supra.

(13) Since according to Pentateuchal law it is a valid partition, it ought to contract uncleanness, even if the Rabbis decreed later that it is no valid partition. With regard to Sukkah and the alley the Rabbinical decree might well be upheld since it restricts the law but in the case of uncleanness where it leads to a relaxation of the Pentateuchal law the Rabbinical decree must obviously be disregarded.

The Master said: ‘In the name of R. Jose the Galilean they said, Nor may a bill of divorcement be written upon it’.² What is the reason of R. Jose the Galilean? — As it has been taught: [Scripture³ says], A bill⁴ [hence] I know only [that] a bill⁵ [is valid],⁶ how do we know to include any other material?⁷ Scripture expressly states, Thus he writeth her⁸ implying, on whatever material it may be. If so, why does Scripture state, ‘bill’?⁵ To teach you that just as a bill is a thing which has no breath of life, and cannot eat, so is everything valid which has not the breath of life and does not eat. And the Rabbis?⁹ — If Scripture had written ‘in a bill’, [it would be] as you say,¹⁰ but now that it is written ‘a bill’¹¹ the expression refers merely to the recital¹² of the words.¹³ And how do the Rabbis¹⁴ expound the words, ‘That he writeth’?¹⁵ — They need that [text for the exposition that] with the writing she becomes divorced, but she does not become divorced with money.¹⁶ As I might have said that, since her exit [from the married state]¹⁷ is compared to her entry into it¹⁸ just as her entry is with money,¹⁹ so is her exit, therefore it teaches us [this]. And whence does R. Jose the Galilean deduce this?²⁰ -He deduces it from [the words], ‘a bill of divorcement’;²¹ the bill divorces and nothing else. And the others?²² — They need [this terminology to teach that the bill of divorcement must be] one which severs them [completely], as it has been taught. [If a man say,] Herewith is your get [to take effect] on condition that you do not drink wine, or go to your father's house ever, it is no severance.²³ [If he say, The condition shall apply] for thirty days, it is a severance.²⁴ And the other?²⁵ — He deduces it from [the use of the form] kerithuth [instead of that of] kareth.²⁶ And the others? — They do not expound [the difference between] kerithuth and kareth.²⁷

MISHNAH. IF HE MAKES HIS SUKKAH BETWEEN TREES, SO THAT THE TREES FORM ITS WALLS,²⁸ IT IS VALID. GEMARA. R. Aha b. Jacob said, A partition which is unable to withstand²⁹ a normal wind is no valid partition. We have learnt, IF HE MAKES HIS SUKKAH BETWEEN TREES, SO THAT THE TREES FORM ITS WALLS, IT IS VALID. But do they not sway to and fro? — We are dealing here with solid [trees].³⁰ But are there not the swaying branches?³¹ — [It refers to] where he plaited it with shrubbery and bay-trees.³² If so, why [need he] mention it? — One would have thought that it should be forbidden as a preventive measure lest he come to make use of the tree,³³ therefore he informs us [that it is valid]. Come and hear: If there was there³⁴ a tree,³⁵ or a fence,³⁶ or a partition of reeds, it is regarded as a valid corner-piece!³⁷ — This also refers to where he plaited it with shrubbery and bay-trees. Come and hear: If a tree³⁸ throws a shadow on the ground, it is permitted to move objects under it³⁹ if the ends of its branches are not three handbreadths high above the ground.⁴⁰ But why?⁴¹ Does not the tree sway to and fro? — Here also it is a case where one plaited it with shrubs and bay-trees. But if so,⁴² it should be permitted⁴³ to carry objects³⁹ over its whole area whatever its size; why then did R. Huna the son of R. Joshua say, One may not carry any objects there

 - (16) I.e., a woman cannot be divorced, as she is betrothed by giving her some money.
 - (17) Divorce.
 - (18) Marriage. Deut. XXIV, 2 reads, And when she is departed from his house, and go and be another man's wife. The Talmud on the basis of this juxtaposition compares divorce (‘departure’) to marriage (‘being’).
 - (19) Betrothal may be effected by the man's giving to the woman money and saying, ‘Behold thou art betrothed unto me by this money’.
 - (20) The deduction just made.
 - (21) The juxtaposition of ‘bill’ and ‘divorcement’.
 - (22) The Rabbis. To what do they apply this text?
 - (23) Since the condition is timeless, and at any time in the future she might break the condition and the divorce would become void, it is of no effect.

- (24) Since at the end of the specified period the get would be definitely effective it is regarded as Pentateuchally valid forthwith.
- (25) R. Jose. Whence does he deduce this ruling?
- (26) Since Scripture could have written כרת and writes בריתות the extra letters are regarded as teaching an added lesson.
- (27) The Rabbis disregard such fine distinctions. On the whole passage v. Git. 21b.
- (28) But its roof does not rest upon them (Rashi). [Otherwise it would be invalid as a Sukkah kept up by an object that is attached to the ground. V. supra 21b, Strashun.]
- (29) I.e., to stand firm without swaying.
- (30) Old and strongly built trees which do not sway in the wind.
- (31) Which sometimes form part of the wall.
- (32) So that the branches also form a solid part of the wall.
- (33) By putting his things on it on the festival day.
- (34) At one of the corners of a watering station round which corner-pieces are placed to enable the carrying of the water from the well to the enclosure on the Sabbath.
- (35) Whose thickness was of the dimensions of one cubit by one cubit prescribed for a corner-piece.
- (36) Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.
- (37) 'Er. 19b. Now does not this prove that trees though swaying to and fro are regarded as a valid wall?
- (38) Whose branches bend downwards.
- (39) On the Sabbath.
- (40) 'Er. 15a; since by the law of labud they are deemed to be touching the ground and, since at their other ends at which they are attached to the tree they are ten handbreadths above the ground, they form a valid partition.
- (41) Sc. why should the branches be regarded as a valid partition to constitute an enclosure within which the movement of objects on the Sabbath is permitted?
- (42) That the branches were plaited for the express purpose of serving as an enclosure in which one might dwell while engaged in watching the fields around.
- (43) As in the case of all similar enclosures (cf. prev. n.).

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 25a

except where its area was not bigger than two beth se'ah?¹ — The reason² is that it³ is an abode made to serve the open air⁴ and in every abode that is made to serve the open air⁴ objects may be moved in it⁵ only if its area is no more than two beth se'ah.⁶

Come and hear: If one made his Sabbath rest⁷ in a mound which is ten [handbreadths] high and [whose extent] is from four cubits to two beth se'ah and so also with a cavity⁸ which is ten [handbreadths] deep, and [whose extent] is from four cubits to two beth se'ah and so also with a harvested spot⁹ that was surrounded by ears of corn, he may walk throughout its whole extent and two thousand cubits¹⁰ outside it [on the Sabbath].¹¹ [Now is not this permitted] even although it¹² sways to and fro?¹³ — There also it refers to where he plaited it¹² with shrubs and bay-trees.¹⁴

MISHNAH. THOSE WHO ARE ENGAGED ON A RELIGIOUS ERRAND¹⁵ ARE FREE FROM [THE OBLIGATIONS OF] SUKKAH.¹⁶ INVALIDS AND THEIR ATTENDANTS ARE FREE FROM [THE OBLIGATIONS OF] SUKKAH. CASUAL EATING AND DRINKING¹⁷ ARE PERMITTED OUTSIDE THE SUKKAH. GEMARA. Whence do we know this?¹⁸ — From what our Rabbis taught: When thou sittest in thy house¹⁹ excludes²⁰ the man who is occupied with a religious duty,²¹ And when thou walkest by the way¹⁹ excludes a bridegroom.²⁰ Hence²¹ they²² said, He who marries a virgin is free [from the obligation of reading the Shema'], but [he who marries] a widow is bound [by the obligation].²³ How is this²⁴ inferred? — R. Huna said, It is compared to 'the way'¹⁹ just as 'the way'²⁵ refers to a secular way,²⁶ so must every act²⁷ be secular, thus excluding such a man who is occupied with the performance of a religious duty. But does it²⁸ not refer to where one is going on a religious errand [also]?²⁹ And does not the Divine Law nevertheless say that

one should read?³⁰ — If so,³¹ the verse should have said, ‘When sitting and when walking’;³² why [then does it say,] ‘When thou sittest and when thou walkest’? [It must consequently mean:] When walking for thy own purpose thou art bound by the obligation, but when walking on a religious errand thou art free. If so,³³ should not even the man who marries a widow³⁴ also be exempt?—When he marries a virgin his mind is pre-occupied³⁵ but when he marries a widow his mind is not preoccupied.³⁶

Does this mean that whenever a man's mind is pre-occupied he is exempt?³⁷ If so, if his ship was sunk, so that his mind is preoccupied is he also exempt?³⁷ And if you will say, ‘It is indeed so’, did not R. Abba b. Zabda [it may be retorted] say in the name of Rab: A mourner³⁸ is bound by all the commandments that are enumerated in the Torah, with the sole exception of that of tefillin because the word ‘beauty’³⁹ was applied to them? — In the former case⁴⁰ his pre-occupation is on account of a religious duty;⁴¹ in the latter⁴² it is on account of a secular event.⁴³

But is the law that he who is engaged on one religious duty is free from any other deduced from here?⁴⁴ Is it not deduced from elsewhere, As it has been taught: And there were certain men who were unclean by the dead body of a man, etc.⁴⁵ Who were these men? They were those who bore the coffin of Joseph,⁴⁶ so R. Jose the Galilean.

- (1) ‘Er. 15a. A beth se'ah is a square measure, the size of a field which requires two se'ahs of seed to sow it. One beth se'ah is estimated as two thousand five hundred square cubits.
 - (2) For. R. Huna's ruling.
 - (3) The area under the branches.
 - (4) I.e., it is a mere shelter for the watchman who guards the open field around it.
 - (5) On the Sabbath.
 - (6) The Rabbis limited it to this size on the assumption that the courtyard of the sanctuary was of this size. If the area is larger it is subject to the laws of karmelith and objects in it may be moved within four cubits only.
 - (7) I.e., appointed the spot as his Sabbath abode at the time the Sabbath commenced.
 - (8) Which a man appointed as his Sabbath abode (cf. prev. n.).
 - (9) Cf. prev. n. Lit., ‘cut standing (ears)’.
 - (10) The distance in all directions which a man may walk on the Sabbath outside his town or enclosure in which he rested when the Sabbath began.
 - (11) ‘Er. 15a.
 - (12) The enclosure formed by the ears of corn.
 - (13) Apparently it is. How then could R. Aha maintain that a swaying partition is invalid?
 - (14) So that the enclosure is a firm one.
 - (15) Lit., ‘those that are sent forth for a religious duty’. Those, for instance, who go to study the Torah or to redeem a captive.
 - (16) Even when they stay for a rest.
 - (17) I.e., but not a set meal.
 - (18) The first ruling in our Mishnah.
 - (19) Deut. VI, 7, dealing with the duty of reading the Shema’ (v. P.B. pp. 40-42).
 - (20) From the duty (cf. prev. n.).
 - (21) How this is inferred is explained presently.
 - (22) The Rabbis.
 - (23) Ber. 11a.
 - (24) That those engaged in a religious act are exempt.
 - (25) In walking in which the duty of reading the Shema’ must be performed.
 - (26) Or, ‘optional. It is now taken to mean that one is walking by the way to pursue his normal occupations.
 - (27) The performance of which must not interfere with the duty of reading the Shema’.
 - (28) V. supra n. 2.
 - (29) Apparently it does.

- (30) How then is it inferred that those engaged in a religious act are exempt?
- (31) That Deut. VI, 7 refers also to one engaged in a religious act.
- (32) Which would have included all forms both secular and religious.
- (33) That the performance of a religious act exempts one from the obligations mentioned.
- (34) Who also is performing a religious duty.
- (35) And he cannot, therefore, perform another duty at that time.
- (36) Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.

- (38) Though his mind is pre-occupied.
- (39) Ezek. XXIV, 17; an ornament that is unbecoming to a mourner.
- (40) Where one marries a virgin.
- (41) Hence his exemption from other duties.
- (42) Where a ship was sunk as in that of a mourner.
- (43) Or, 'optional matter'. Mourning to the extent of shutting out of all other thoughts is regarded as optional and is excluded from the religious duty of mourning which is duly defined.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 25b

R. Akiba said, They were Mishael and Elzaphan who were occupied with [the remains of] Nadab and Abihu.¹ R. Isaac said, If they were those who bore the coffin of Joseph, they² had time to cleanse themselves [before Passover,]³ and if they were Mishael and Elzaphan they could [also] have cleansed themselves [before the Passover].⁴ But it was those who were occupied with a meth mizwah,⁵ the seventh day [of whose purification] coincided with the eve of Passover, as it is said, They could not keep the Passover on that day,⁶ on 'that' day they could not keep the Passover, but on the morrow they could?⁷ — [Both texts]⁸ are necessary. For if he had only informed us of the former,⁶ I would have said [that they⁹ were free from the obligation there] because the time of the obligation of the Passover had not yet come,¹⁰ but not here¹¹ where the time of the reading of the Shema' had come,¹² [therefore] it was necessary [to have the latter].¹³ And if he had informed us of the latter¹³ only, I would have said [that one is exempt here] because this does not involve kareth,¹⁴ but not there,⁶ where it¹⁵ involves kareth [therefore the former⁶ also was] necessary.

[Reverting to] the main text: 'R. Abba b. Zabda said in the name of Rab, A mourner is bound by all the commandments of the Torah with the sole exception of that of tefillin since the word "beauty"¹⁶ is applied to them'.¹⁷ Since the All Merciful said to Ezekiel,¹⁸ Bind thy beauty¹⁹ upon thee,¹⁶ the implication²⁰ must be, 'Thou art under this obligation,²¹ but other people²² are free.' This,²³ however, applies only to the first day,²⁴ since of that day it is written, And the end thereof as a bitter day.²⁵

R. Abba b. Zabda also said in the name of Rab, A mourner is bound by the obligation of Sukkah. Is not this obvious?²⁶ — I might have said that since R. Abba b. Zabda said in the name of Rab that he who is in discomfort is free from the obligation of Sukkah, this [mourner should be exempt] since he also is in discomfort, therefore he informs us that this²⁷ applies only to discomfort over which one has no control,²⁸ but [not to that experienced by a mourner]; since it is he himself who is the cause of his discomfort, it is incumbent upon him to compose his mind.²⁹

R. Abba b. Zabda also said in the name of Rab, A bridegroom and the shoshbins,³⁰ and all the wedding guests³¹ are free from the obligation of Sukkah all the seven days.³² What is the reason? Because they have to rejoice. But let them eat in the Sukkah and rejoice in the Sukkah? — There is no proper rejoicing³³ but under the wedding canopy.³⁴ But let them eat in the Sukkah and rejoice under the canopy? — There can be no real rejoicing except where the banquet is held. But why should they not put up a canopy in the Sukkah? — Abaye says, [This is impossible] because [of the possibility] of privacy³⁵ and Raba said, Because of the discomfort of the bridegroom.³⁶ What practical difference is there between them?³⁷ — The practical difference between them emerges where people are in the habit of going in and out of there. According to the view of privacy, the restriction does not apply; according to the view of discomfort, it does. R. Zera³⁸ said, I had the banquet in the Sukkah and rejoiced under the canopy and my heart rejoiced all the more since I was fulfilling two [commandments].³⁹

Our Rabbis have taught, The bridegroom, and the shoshbins and all the wedding guests are free from the obligations of prayer⁴⁰ and tefillin,⁴¹ but are bound to read the Shema'.⁴²

(2) Since they did not carry it for ten months (cf. Rashi for proof).

(3) And could not consequently have been described as 'could not keep the Passover' (Num. IX, 6). Cf. following note.

(4) Since Nadab and Abihu died on the first of Nisan which was the eighth day of consecration (cf. Lev. IX and X and Shab. 87b) and, according to Rabbinic tradition, Eleazar the Priest prepared the ashes of the Red Heifer (Num. XIX) on the second day of Nisan in order to enable those who had come into contact with a dead body to be duly cleansed before the Passover. Cf. prev. n.

(5) Lit., '(the burial of) the dead (as a) commandment'. Generally denoting one who has no relatives to occupy themselves with his burial. Here understood to include the one dead who is a near relative (Rashi).

(6) Num. IX, 6.

(7) Now these men, though they well knew that their attendance to the dead would prevent them from celebrating the Passover at the proper time, nevertheless performed the former and were in consequence exempt from the latter. Similarly in the case of all other religious duties one engaged in the performance of one is exempt from any other. What need then was there for a similar deduction from Deut. VI, 7?

- (35) The bridegroom had to be alone with his bride in a room after the ceremony as a symbol of conjugality. The Sukkah being usually made on a roof (v. infra p. 115 n. 12) which is frequented by very few people, might afford an opportunity for a stranger to enter it during a temporary and unavoidable absence of the bridegroom.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 26a

In the name of R. Shila they said, The bridegroom¹ is free from, but the shoshbins and the wedding guests are subject to the obligation.²

It has been taught: R. Hanania b. Akabya said, Scribes of books of the Law, tefillin and mezuzoth, their agents and their agents’ agents, and all who are engaged in holy work³ including sellers of blue⁴ are free from the obligation of prayer and tefillin and all the commandments mentioned in the Torah. This confirms the words of R. Jose the Galilean who laid down: He who is occupied with the performance of a religious duty is [at that time] free from the fulfilment of other religious duties.

Our Rabbis taught, Day travellers are free from the obligation of Sukkah by day⁵ but are bound to it at night. Night travellers are free from the obligation of Sukkah at night,⁶ but are bound to it by day. Travellers by day and night are free from the obligation both day and night.⁶ Those who are on a religious errand⁷ are free both by day and by night,⁸ as in the case of R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna who, when visiting on the Sabbath of the Festival the house of the Exilarch,⁹ slept on the river bank of Sura,¹⁰ saying, ‘We are engaged on a religious errand¹¹ and are [therefore] free [from the obligation of Sukkah]’.

Our Rabbis taught, The day watchmen of a town are free from the obligation of Sukkah by day¹² and bound to it at night; the night watchmen are free by night¹² and bound by day, the day and night watchmen are free both by day and at night.¹² Keepers of gardens and orchards¹³ are free both by day and by night — But why should they not make a Sukkah there and sit in it? — Abaye said, ‘Ye shall dwell’¹⁴ [implies] just as you normally dwell.¹⁵ Raba said, ‘The breach invites the thief’.¹⁶ What practical difference is there between them?¹⁷ — The practical difference [emerges] where one is guarding a pile of fruit.¹⁸

INVALIDS AND THEIR ATTENDANTS. Our Rabbis taught, The invalid spoken of here is not [only] an invalid who is in danger, but also one who is not in danger, even one who suffers from eyeache or headache. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said, On one occasion I was suffering with my eyes in Caesarea and R. Jose Berebi¹⁹ permitted me and my attendants to sleep outside the Sukkah. Rab permitted R. Aha Bardela to sleep in a tester-bed²⁰ in a Sukkah in order [to shut out] the gnats. Raba permitted R. Aha b. Adda to sleep outside the Sukkah on account of the odour of the day.²¹ Raba is here consistent, since Raba said, He who is in discomfort²² is free from the obligation of Sukkah.

But have we not learnt: INVALIDS AND THEIR ATTENDANTS ARE FREE FROM THE OBLIGATION OF SUKKAH, [from which it follows,] only an invalid²³ but not one who is merely in discomfort? — I will explain: An invalid is free together with his attendants, whereas he who is in discomfort is himself free, but not his attendants.

CASUAL EATING AND DRINKING ARE PERMITTED OUTSIDE THE SUKKAH. What constitutes a casual meal? — R. Joseph said, [The volume of] two or three eggs. Abaye said to him: But sometimes this suffices for [a whole meal for] a man, why then should this not constitute a set meal? Rather, said Abaye, [a small quantity] only as much as a student tastes before proceeding to the college assembly.²⁴

Our Rabbis taught, Casual eating is permitted outside the Sukkah, but not casual sleeping.²⁵ What is the reason? — R. Ashi²⁶ said, We fear lest the person fall into a deep slumber. Abaye said to him, With reference, however, to that which has been taught, 'A man may indulge in casual sleep while wearing his tefillin, but not in regular sleep', why do we not²⁷ fear lest he fall into a deep slumber? — R. Joseph the son of R. Ila'i said, [The latter refers to where] the person entrusts others [with the task of waking him from his] sleep. R. Mesharsheya demurred: Does not 'Your guarantor need a guarantor?'²⁸ — Rather, said Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan, This refers to where the person puts his head between his knees.²⁹ Raba³⁰ said, [In the case of Sukkah the question of] regularity in sleep does not arise.³¹ One [Baraita] teaches, A man may indulge in a casual sleep in his tefillin but not in regular sleep, and another [Baraita] taught, Whether a casual sleep or regular sleep [is permitted] while a third Baraita taught, Neither a casual sleep nor a regular sleep [is allowed]!³² — There is no difficulty: The last refers to where he holds them in his hand,³³ the first one to where they rest on his head,³⁴ while the second refers to where he spreads a cloth over them.³⁵

What constitutes a casual sleep? — Rami b. Ezekiel taught, [Sleeping during the time] it takes to walk one hundred cubits. It has also been taught so: He who sleeps in tefillin and [on waking] observes an issue of semen,³⁶ should seize hold of the strap³⁷

Obermeyer p. 292 who strangely enough does not give the reading of MS.M.]

(10) [According to Obermeyer's interpretation of the passage (v. preceding note), this refers to their outward journey. The caravan which R. Hisda and Rabbah b. R. Huna joined for their journey from Sura, which was their home, to Nehardea (a distance of one hundred and ten km.), set out as was usual very early in the morning, even before the break of dawn, so that they in common with other travellers, in order to be ready for the departure, had to spend the preceding night outside the town, near the river bank of Sura].

but not of the capsule; these are the words of R. Jacob; but the Sages say, A man may indulge in a casual sleep in his tefillin but not in a regular sleep, and what constitutes a casual sleep? [Sleeping during the time] it takes to walk one hundred cubits.

Rab said, It is forbidden to a man to sleep by day¹ more than the sleep of a horse. And what is the sleep of a horse? Sixty respirations. Abaye said, The sleep of the Master² is as that of Rab, and that of Rab as that of Rabbi³ and that of Rabbi as of David,⁴ and that of David as of a horse, and that of a horse is sixty respirations.

Abaye slept [by day] as long as it takes to go up from Pumbeditha to Be Kube.⁵ R. Joseph applied to him the verse, How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard, when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep.⁶

Our Rabbis taught, He who wishes to go to sleep by day, he may, if he desires, remove [his tefillin] and he may if he so desires, put them on.⁷ At night, he may not put them on but must remove them;⁸ these are the words of R. Nathan. R. Jose said, Youths⁹ must always¹⁰ remove them and never⁹ put them on, since ritual uncleanness¹¹ is of frequent occurrence with them. Must we then say that R. Jose is of the opinion that a man who has an issue of semen¹² may not don his tefillin?¹³ — Abaye answered, We are dealing here with the case of young men in the company of their wives, [upon whom the restriction was imposed] lest they proceed to familiar practice.¹⁴

Our Rabbis taught: If he forgot and had sexual intercourse in his tefillin he should not seize hold either of a strap¹⁵ or of a capsule¹⁵ until he wash his hands to take them off, since hands touch things

MISHNAH. IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT THEY BROUGHT COOKED FOOD TO R. JOHANAN B. ZAKKAI TO TASTE, AND TWO DATES AND A PAIL OF WATER TO R. GAMALIEL AND THEY SAID, 'BRING THEM UP TO THE SUKKAH'.¹⁷ BUT WHEN THEY GAVE TO R. ZADOK FOOD LESS THAN THE BULK OF AN EGG,¹⁸ HE TOOK IT IN A TOWEL,¹⁹ ATE IT OUTSIDE THE SUKKAH AND DID NOT SAY THE BENEDICTION AFTER IT.²⁰ GEMARA. Does not the incident²¹ come as a contradiction.²² There is a lacuna, and it should be taught thus: But if he wishes to be strict with himself, he may do so, and it does not constitute presumption, and so it also happened that THEY BROUGHT COOKED FOOD TO R. JOHANAN B. ZAKKAI TO TASTE, AND TWO DATES AND A PAIL OF WATER TO R. GAMALIEL

(22) To the previous Mishnah where casual eating is permitted outside a Sukkah,

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 27a

AND THEY SAID, 'BRING THEM UP TO THE SUKKAH', BUT WHEN THEY GAVE TO R. ZADOK FOOD LESS THAN THE BULK OF AN EGG, HE TOOK IT IN A TOWEL, ATE IT OUTSIDE THE SUKKAH, AND DID NOT SAY THE BENEDICTION AFTER IT.

But if it was the bulk of an egg, must he needs [eat it in] the Sukkah? Should we say that this is a refutation of R. Joseph and Abaye?¹ — Perhaps [it means that] less than the bulk of an egg does not necessitate washing of the hands² and the benediction,³ but if it was the bulk of an egg, it necessitates washing of the hands and the benediction.⁴

MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER SAID, A MAN IS OBLIGED TO EAT FOURTEEN MEALS IN THE SUKKAH,⁵ ONE ON EACH DAY AND ONE ON EACH NIGHT. THE SAGES HOWEVER SAY, THERE IS NO FIXED NUMBER⁶ EXCEPT ON THE FIRST NIGHT OF THE FESTIVAL

ALONE.⁷ R. ELIEZER SAID IN ADDITION, IF A MAN DID NOT EAT IN THE SUKKAH ON THE FIRST NIGHT OF THE FESTIVAL, HE MAY MAKE UP FOR IT ON THE LAST NIGHT OF THE FESTIVAL,⁸ WHILE THE SAGES SAY, THERE IS NO COMPENSATION FOR THIS, AND OF THIS WAS IT SAID: THAT WHICH IS CROOKED CANNOT BE MADE STRAIGHT, AND THAT WHICH IS WANTING CANNOT BE NUMBERED.⁹

GEMARA. What is the reason of R. Eliezer? — Ye shall dwell¹⁰ implies just as you normally dwell. As in a [normal] abode [a man has] one [meal] by day and one by night, so in the Sukkah [he must have] one meal by day and one by night. And the Rabbis?¹¹ — [They say that the implication¹⁰ is] like an abode. Just as in an abode a man eats if he desires and if he does not so desire he does not eat, so also with the Sukkah; if he desires he eats, and if he does not so desire he does not eat. But if so, [why should he not have the option] on the first night of the Festival also? R. Johanan answered in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak, With regard to Sukkah it says, The fifteenth,¹² and with regard to the Festival of Passover it says, The fifteenth.¹³ Just as there¹⁴ the first night only is obligatory¹⁵ but from then on it is optional,¹⁶ so here also the first night is obligatory,¹⁷ but from then on it is optional. And in the case of Passover whence do we know?¹⁸ -Since the verse says, At evening ye shall eat unleavened bread;¹⁹ Scripture thus establishes it²⁰ as an obligation.

R. ELIEZER SAID IN ADDITION. But did not R. Eliezer say that A MAN IS OBLIGED TO EAT FOURTEEN MEALS IN THE SUKKAH, ONE ON EACH DAY AND ONE ON EACH NIGHT?²¹ -Bira answered in the name of R. Ammi, R. Eliezer recanted [of his previous statement]. With what does one make up for it?²² If you will say with bread,²³ is not one merely eating the [obligatory] meal of the festival day?²⁴ — The fact is that by ‘make up is meant that one should make up with various kinds of desert.²⁵ So it has also been taught:²⁶ If he made up [for a meal he has missed] with various kinds of desert he fulfilled his obligation.²⁷

The major domo of King Agrippa²⁸ asked R. Eliezer, [A man] such as I am, who eat but one meal a day, may I eat one meal [in the Sukkah] and be free [of my obligation]? He answered him, Every day you draw out [the meal] with all kinds of dainties for your own honour, and now you cannot add one dainty for the honour of your Creator? He also asked him, [A man] such as I who have two wives, one in Tiberias and one in Sepphoris, and two Sukkahs, one in Tiberias and one in Sepphoris, may I go from one Sukkah to the other and²⁹ thus be free from my obligation? He answered him, No! For I say that he who goes from one Sukkah to another annuls the ‘mizwah³⁰ of the first.

It has been taught: R. Eliezer says,

(1) Who respectively say (supra 26a) that casual eating is two or three eggs and the bulk of an egg, the quantity a student eats before proceeding to college.

(2) Before eating it.

(3) After it has been eaten.

(4) But not Sukkah, the prescribed minimum for which is either that given by R. Joseph or Abaye.

(5) During the seven days of the festival.

(6) Sc. one need not eat even one meal in the Sukkah if one desires to fast throughout the seven days.

(7) When one must eat a meal in the Sukkah.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 27b

One may not go from one Sukkah to another,¹ nor may one² make a Sukkah during the Intermediate Days of the Festival, while the Sages say, One may go from one Sukkah to another, and one may make a Sukkah during the Intermediate Days of the Festival; but both of them are in accord that if it fall down, one³ may re-erect it during the Intermediate Days.

What is the reason of R. Eliezer? — Scripture says, Thou shalt keep the Feast of Sukkah for seven days,⁴ [which implies,] make a Sukkah which shall be fit for seven days.⁵ And the Rabbis?⁶ -This is what the Divine Law means: Make a Sukkah for the Festival. 'But both of them are in accord that if it fall down one may re-erect it during the Intermediate Days' — But is not this obvious?⁷ — I would have said that this⁸ is [deemed to be] another [Sukkah] and is [thus] not one for seven days, therefore he informs us [that we do not say so].⁹

It has been taught: R. Eliezer said, Just as a man cannot fulfil his obligation on the first day of the Festival¹⁰ with the palm-branch of his fellow, since it is written, And ye shall take to you on the first day the fruit of goodly trees, branches of palm-trees¹¹ i.e., from your own, so cannot a man fulfil his obligation with a Sukkah of his fellow, since it is written, The festival of Sukkoth thou shalt keep to thee for seven days.¹² I.e., of thine own. The Sages, however, say, Although they¹³ said that a man cannot fulfil his obligation on the first day of the Festival¹⁰ with the palm-branch of his fellow, he may nevertheless fulfil his obligation with the Sukkah of his fellow, since it is written, All that are homeborn, in Israel shall dwell in Sukkoth,¹⁴ which teaches that all Israel are able to sit in one Sukkah.¹⁵ And how do the Rabbis¹⁶ interpret the words 'to thee'?¹² — It is needed to exclude a stolen [Sukkah]; but as to a borrowed one, It is written, 'All that are homeborn' etc.¹⁴ And what does R. Eliezer do with, 'All that are homeborn'?¹⁴ — It is needed [to include] a convert who had become converted in the meantime¹⁷ or a minor who had attained his majority in the meantime.¹⁸ And the Rabbis?¹⁹ — Since they say that a man²⁰ may make a Sukkah during the Intermediate Days of the Festival no [special] verse is needed [for converts and minors].²¹

Our Rabbis have taught: It once happened that R. Ila'i went to pay his respects to R. Eliezer his master in Lydda²² on a Festival.²³ He²⁴ said to him, 'Ila'i, you are not of those that rest on the Festival',²⁵ for R. Eliezer used to say, 'I praise the indolent who do not emerge from their houses on the Festival'²⁶ since it is written, And thou shalt rejoice, thou and thy household'.²⁷ But it is not so?

For did not R. Isaac say, Whence do we know that a man is obliged to pay his respects to his teacher on the Festival? From Scripture which said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? It is neither New Moon nor Sabbath²⁸ from which it follows that on the New Moon²⁹ and the Sabbath a man is obliged to pay his respects to his master?³⁰ — There is no difficulty. The latter refers to where he can go and return [to his house] on the one day;³¹ the former to where he cannot go and return on the same day.³² Our Rabbis have taught: It happened that R. Eliezer passed the Sabbath³³ in Upper Galilee in the Sukkah of R. Johanan son of R. Ila'i at Caesarea or, as some say, in Caesarea [Philippi],³⁴ and when the sun reached the Sukkah he said to him,³⁵ 'How if I spread a cloth over it?'³⁶ He answered him, 'There was not a tribe in Israel which did not produce a judge'.³⁷ When the sun reached to the middle of the Sukkah, he said to him, 'How if I spread a cloth over it?' He answered him, 'There was not a tribe in Israel from which there did not come prophets, and the tribes of Judah and Benjamin appointed their kings at the behest of the prophets'.³⁸ When the sun reached the feet of R. Eliezer,³⁹ Johanan took a cloth and spread it over [the Sukkah]. R. Eliezer [thereupon] tied up his cloak, threw it over his back, and went out.⁴⁰ It was not in order to evade an answer [that he answered as he did] but because he never said anything which he had not heard from his master.

How did R. Eliezer act thus?⁴¹ Did not R. Eliezer say, One may not go from one Sukkah to another?⁴² — It was on another Festival.⁴³ But did not R. Eliezer say, I praise the indolent who do not leave their houses on the Festival? — It was an ordinary Sabbath.

But could he not deduce [the answer]⁴⁴ from his own⁴⁵ statement, since we have learnt: One may shut a window⁴⁶ with a window-shutter if it is fastened or hung [on the window-frame],⁴⁷ but if not, one may not shut a window with it; but the Sages say, In either case one may shut the window with it?⁴⁸

 - (4) Deut. XVI, 13.
 - (5) One made during the Intermediate Days is obviously for less than 'seven days' as is one that is forsaken before the seven days are over.
 - (6) How can they maintain their view against this exposition?
 - (7) Since the Sukkah was originally put up for the full seven days.
 - (8) Since it is put up again during the Intermediate Days.
 - (9) Because the repaired Sukkah is merely the continuation of the original one which was duly intended for the full seven days.

- (27) Deut. XIV, 26. This verse does not, as a matter of fact, refer to a Festival but to the second tithing. Tosaf. (Pes. 109a) suggests an analogy between this verse and Deut. XVI, 14, the import of each being the same, but the former is quoted since it mentions the word 'house' (i.e., 'wife') specifically.
- (28) 11 Kings IV, 23. The reference is to the Shunamite woman and Elisha.
- (29) Sc. a Festival.
- (30) V. R.H., Sonc. ed., p. 62, n. 12. Now how are the two statements to be reconciled?
- (31) As his wife would thus have his company for a part of the day he must also pay his respects to his teacher.
- (32) His duty to his wife overrides his duty to his teacher as far as a visit to him on a Festival is concerned.

- (37) He turned to another topic, since, as explained infra, he never gave a decision which had not been handed down. R. Eliezer's outstanding characteristic was his rigid conservatism.
- (38) Saul and David, for instance, were appointed by Samuel. Cf. prev. n.
- (39) As the sun climbed the sky, its rays penetrated more and more into the Sukkah.
- (40) In order to avoid responsibility for Johanan's action (cf. supra n. 4).
- (41) Dwell in another person's Sukkah on the Festival.
- (42) How then could he leave his own Sukkah in Lydda (cf. Sanh. 32b) for that of Johanan at Caesarea?
- (43) Not Tabernacles. They sat in the Sukkah for convenience.
- (44) To Johanan's enquiry.
- (45) R. Eliezer's.
- (46) On the Sabbath.
- (47) Because in that case it is regarded as a part of the window and its closure constitutes neither 'building' nor an addition to a building.
- (48) Shab. XVII, 7. Now since the question was whether spreading the cloth over the Sukkah would be regarded as adding to it on the Sabbath why did not it, Eliezer deduce from this analogous case that the answer was in the affirmative?

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 28a

— [No.] In the latter case¹ it is [forbidden] since he destroys its identity,² but in the former where he does not,³ the law is not so.⁴

Our Rabbis have taught: It happened that R. Eliezer passed the Sabbath in Upper Galilee, and they asked him for thirty decisions in the laws of Sukkah. Of twelve of these he said, 'I heard them [from my teachers]'; of eighteen he said, 'I have not heard'. R. Jose b. Judah said, Reverse the words: Of eighteen he said, 'I have heard them', of twelve he said, 'I have not heard them'. They said to him, 'Are all your words only reproductions of what you have heard?' He answered them, 'You wished to force me to say something which I have not heard from my teachers. During all my life [I may tell you] no man was earlier than myself in the college, I never slept or dozed in the college, nor did I ever leave a person in the college when I went out, nor did I ever utter profane speech, nor have I ever in my life said a thing which I did not hear from my teachers'.

They said concerning R. Johanan b. Zakkai that during his whole life he never uttered profane talk, nor walked four cubits without [studying the] Torah or without tefillin, nor was any man earlier than he in the college, nor did he sleep or doze in the college, nor did he meditate⁵ in filthy alleyways, nor did he leave anyone in the college when he went out, nor did anyone ever find him sitting in silence, but only sitting and learning, and no one but himself ever opened the door to his disciples, he never in his life said anything which he had not heard from his teacher, and, except on the eve of Passover⁶ and on the eve of the Day of Atonement,⁷ he never said, 'It is time to arise from the studies at the college'; and so did his disciple R. Eliezer conduct himself after him.

Our Rabbis have taught: Hillel the Elder had eighty disciples, thirty of whom were worthy of the Divine Spirit resting upon them, as [it did upon] Moses our Master, thirty of whom were worthy that the sun should stand still for them [as it did for] Joshua the son of Nun,⁸ [and the remaining] twenty were ordinary. The greatest⁹ of them was Jonathan b. Uzziel,¹⁰ the smallest¹¹ of them was Johanan b. Zakkai. They said of R. Johanan b. Zakkai that he did not leave [unstudied] Scripture, Mishnah, Gemara,¹² Halachah,¹³ Aggadah,¹⁴ details of the Torah,¹⁵ details of the Scribes,¹⁶ inferences a minori ad majus, analogies,¹⁷ calendrical computations¹⁸ gematrias,¹⁹ the speech of the Ministering Angels, the speech of spirits,²⁰ and the speech of palm-trees,²¹ fullers' parables²² and fox fables,²³ great matters or small matters; 'Great matters' mean the Ma'aseh merkabah,²⁴ 'small matters' the discussions of Abaye and Raba;²⁵ in order to fulfil what is said, That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance, and that I may fill their treasuries.²⁶ And if the smallest of them was so great, how much more so was the greatest? They said of Jonathan b. Uzziel that when he used to sit and occupy himself with the study of the Torah, every bird that flew above him was immediately burnt.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN'S HEAD AND THE GREATER PART OF HIS BODY WERE WITHIN THE SUKKAH AND HIS TABLE WITHIN THE HOUSE,²⁷ BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT INVALID AND BETH HILLEL DECLARE IT VALID. BETH HILLEL SAID TO BETH SHAMMAI, DID IT NOT IN FACT HAPPEN THAT THE ELDERS OF BETH SHAMMAI AND THE ELDERS OF BETH HILLEL WENT TO VISIT R. JOHANAN B. HA-HORONITH AND FOUND HIM SITTING WITH HIS HEAD AND THE GREATER PART OF HIS BODY WITHIN THE SUKKAH AND HIS TABLE WITHIN THE HOUSE, AND THEY SAID NAUGHT TO HIM?²⁸ BETH SHAMMAI ANSWERED, IS THAT A PROOF? INDEED THEY SAID TO HIM, IF YOU HAVE SO CONDUCTED YOURSELF, YOU HAVE NEVER IN YOUR LIFE FULFILLED THE LAW OF THE SUKKAH.

WOMEN, SLAVES AND MINORS ARE FREE FROM THE OBLIGATION OF SUKKAH, BUT A MINOR WHO IS NOT DEPENDENT ON HIS MOTHER IS BOUND BY THE LAW OF SUKKAH. IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW OF SHAMMAI THE ELDER GAVE BIRTH TO A CHILD,²⁹ AND HE BROKE AWAY THE PLASTER OF THE ROOF AND PUT SUKKAH-COVERING OVER THE BED FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILD. GEMARA. Whence do we know this?³⁰ For our Rabbis taught: [If Scripture had said] 'homeborn' [it would have included] every homeborn, [but since it says] 'the homeborn'³¹ it excludes women. 'Every' includes minors.

The Master has said: 'The homeborn' excludes women. Does that mean that 'homeborn' implies both men and women? But has it not been taught: 'The homeborn'³² includes the homeborn women that they must fulfil the law of afflicting themselves, which shows that 'homeborn'³³ implies men [only]? — Rabbah answered, They³⁴ are traditional laws³⁵ but the Rabbis applied a Scriptural verse to them. Which³⁶ is based on a Scriptural verse and which on a traditional law? And, moreover, what is the necessity for a Scriptural verse or for a traditional law?³⁷ Is not a Sukkah a positive commandment dependent upon a fixed time [for its fulfilment], and are not women exempt from every positive commandment which depends upon a fixed time [for its fulfilment]? As to the Day of Atonement [also]³⁸ can it not be derived from [the statement] Rab Judah made in the name of Rab, for Rab Judah citing Rab stated and so the school of R. Ishmael taught, As Scripture says, Man or woman³⁹

- (1) That of the window-shutter.
- (2) I.e., the identity of the shutter is lost to the window. The act of closing must, therefore, be regarded as 'building'.
- (3) Since the cloth would not be allowed to remain in the Sukkah.
- (4) The window-shutter becomes part of the frame, but the cover does not become part of the Sukkah. The spread of the latter, therefore, need not necessarily be regarded as building.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 28b

, the Writ [thereby]¹ makes man and woman equal as regards all punishable acts in the Torah?² Abaye answered, Indeed Sukkah is a traditional law, and still³ it is necessary. For I would have said, since 'Ye shall dwell' implies, in the same manner as you ordinarily live; as one's permanent abode is for husband and wife, so the Sukkah must be for husband and wife, therefore he informs us⁴ that it is not so. Raba said, It⁵ is necessary,⁶ since I might have said, Deduce the fifteenth⁷ from the fifteenth⁸ of the Festival of Unleavened Bread: just as in the latter case women are bound by the obligation⁹ so in the former also women are bound, hence we were informed⁴ [that it is not so].

And now that you say that Sukkah is a traditional law, why is the Scriptural verse¹⁰ necessary? — To include converts. I would have said 'the homeborn in Israel', said the Divine Law, but not converts, therefore it informs us¹¹ that it is not so. [That women must fast on] the Day of Atonement is deduced, is it not, from [the statement of] Rab Judah in the name of Rab?¹² — [The verse] is necessary [to include] the additional affliction.¹³ As I might have said that, since the Divine Law excluded the additional affliction from punishment and warning,¹⁴ women are entirely exempt therefrom, therefore he informs us that they are subject to the obligation.

The Master said, [The word] 'every' comes to include minors. But have we not learnt: WOMEN, SLAVES AND MINORS ARE FREE FROM THE OBLIGATION OF THE SUKKAH? — There is no difficulty. The former refers to a minor who has reached the age of being trained,¹⁵ the latter where he has not yet reached the age of being trained. But is not the obligation of a minor who has reached the age of being trained a Rabbinical injunction?¹⁶ — It is indeed a Rabbinical injunction, but the Scriptural verse is merely a support to it. A MINOR WHO IS NOT DEPENDENT ON HIS MOTHER etc. What is meant by a minor who is not dependent on his mother? — The school of R. Jannai said, Whomever, when he relieves himself, his mother need not clean. R. Simeon b. Lakish¹⁷ said, He who awakes from his sleep and does not call his mother. 'His mother'! But do not grown-ups also call their mother? Say, rather, he who awakes from his sleep and does not call 'Mother! Mother!'¹⁸

IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW OF . . . GAVE BIRTH TO A CHILD etc. The incident¹⁹ contradicts [the Mishnah],²⁰ does it not? — There is a lacuna, and thus it should be taught: But Shammai takes a strict view, and [indeed] IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW OF SHAMMAI THE ELDER GAVE BIRTH TO A CHILD AND HE BROKE AWAY THE PLASTER OF THE ROOF, AND PUT SUKKAH-COVERING OVER THE BED FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILD.

MISHNAH. ALL THE SEVEN DAYS [OF THE FESTIVAL]²¹ A MAN MUST MAKE THE SUKKAH HIS PERMANENT ABODE AND HIS HOUSE HIS TEMPORARY ABODE. IF RAIN FELL, WHEN MAY ONE BE PERMITTED TO LEAVE IT?²² WHEN THE PORRIDGE WOULD BECOME SPOILT. THEY PROPOUNDED A PARABLE. TO WHAT CAN THIS BE COMPARED? TO A SLAVE WHO COMES TO FILL THE CUP FOR HIS MASTER, AND HE²³ Poured a pitcher over his face.²⁴

GEMARA. Our Rabbis have taught, All the seven days,²¹ one should make the Sukkah, his permanent abode and his house his temporary abode. In what manner? If he had beautiful vessels, he should bring them up into the Sukkah, beautiful divans, he should bring them up into the Sukkah; he should eat and drink and pass his leisure in the Sukkah.

Whence do we know this?²⁵ — From what our Rabbis have taught: Ye shall dwell²⁶ implies, in the same manner as you ordinarily live. Hence they said, All the seven days²⁷ one should make his Sukkah his permanent abode, and his house his temporary abode. In what manner? If he has beautiful vessels, he should bring them up into the Sukkah, beautiful divans, he should bring them up into the Sukkah, he should eat and drink and pass his leisure in the Sukkah; he should also engage in profound study²⁸ in the Sukkah. But it is not so? For did not Raba say, Scripture and Mishnah [should be studied] in the Sukkah, but Gemara²⁹ outside the Sukkah? — There is no difficulty, The former [statement refers to] revising,³⁰ the latter to profound study.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 29a

As was the case of Raba¹ b. Hama when he was standing before R. Hisda, [first] they ran over the Gemara together, and then they investigated the reasons.

Raba said, Drinking vessels may be kept in the Sukkah,² eating utensils³ [must be taken] outside the Sukkah.⁴ Earthenware pitchers and wooden pails [must be kept] outside the Sukkah. A lamp⁵ [may be kept] within the Sukkah, while some say [that it must be kept] outside the Sukkah; but there is no difference of opinion between them, the former referring to a large Sukkah and the latter to a small one.⁶

IF RAIN FELL. A Tanna taught, When a porridge of beans⁷ would become spoilt.⁸ Abaye was seated before R. Joseph in a Sukkah. The wind blew and brought down chips⁹ [into the food]. R. Joseph¹⁰ said to them, 'Remove the vessels for me hence' — Abaye said to him, 'But have we not learnt, WHEN THE PORRIDGE WOULD BECOME SPOILT?'¹¹ He answered him, 'For me, who am fastidious, this is like the porridge becoming spoilt'.

Our Rabbis taught, If he was eating in the Sukkah, and rain fell, and he left [the Sukkah],¹² he need not trouble to return there¹³ until he has finished his meal. If he was sleeping in the Sukkah and rain fell and he left,¹⁴ he need not trouble to return until it is dawn. They asked them, [Is the reading] sheye'or¹⁵ or sheye'or?¹⁶ — Come and hear, [It has been taught,] 'Until sheye'or¹⁶ and the morning star appear'. [Now¹⁷ how are the] two¹⁸ [to be reconciled]? Consequently you must read, Until sheye'or¹⁹ and the morning star appear.²⁰

THEY PROPOUNDED A PARABLE. TO WHAT CAN THIS BE COMPARED. They asked them, Who Poured upon whom?²¹ Come and hear: For it has been taught: The master poured the pitcher over his face and said, 'I have no desire for your service

Our Rabbis taught,²² When the sun is in eclipse, it is a bad omen for the whole world. This may be illustrated by a parable. To what can this be compared? To a human being who made a banquet for his servants and put up for them a lamp. When he became wroth with them he said to his servant, 'Take away the lamp from them, and let them sit in the dark'.

It was taught: R. Meir said, Whenever the luminaries are in eclipse, it is a bad omen for Israel²³ since they are inured to blows.²⁴ This may be compared to a school teacher who comes to school with a strap in his hand. Who becomes apprehensive? He who is accustomed to be daily punished.

Our Rabbis taught, When the sun is in eclipse it is a bad omen for idolaters; when the moon is in eclipse, it is a bad omen for Israel,²³ since Israel reckons by the moon²⁵ and idolaters by the sun.²⁶ If it²⁷ is in eclipse in the east, it is a bad omen for those who dwell in the east; if in the west, it is a bad omen for those who dwell in the west; if in the midst of heaven it is bad omen for the whole world. If its face is red as blood, [it is a sign that] the sword is coming to the world; if it is like sack-cloth,²⁸ the arrows of famine are coming to the world; if it resembles both, the sword and the arrows of famine are coming to the world. If the eclipse is at sunset²⁹ calamity will tarry in its coming; if at dawn, it hastens on its way: but some say the order is to be reversed. And there is no nation which is smitten that its gods are not smitten together with it, as it is said, And against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgments.³⁰ But when Israel fulfil the will of the Omnipresent, they need have no fear of all these [omens] as it is said, Thus saith the Lord,' Learn not the way of the nations, and be not dismayed at the signs of heaven, for the nations are dismayed at them,³¹ the idolaters will be dismayed, but Israel will not be dismayed.

Our Rabbis taught, On account of four things is the sun in eclipse: On account of an Ab Beth din³² who died and was not mourned³³ fittingly; on account of a betrothed maiden who cried out aloud in the city and there was none to save her;³⁴ on account of sodomy, and on account of two brothers whose blood was shed at the same time. And on account of four things are the luminaries³⁵ in eclipse: On account of those who perpetrate forgeries, on account of those who give false witness; on account of those who rear small cattle in the land of Israel;³⁶ and on account of those who cut down good trees.³⁷

And on account of four things is the property of householders given into the hands of the government: On account of those who retain in their possession bills which have been paid;³⁸ on account of those who lend money on usury; on account of those who had the power to protest [against wrongdoing] and did not protest; and on account of those who publicly declare their intention to give specified sums for charity and do not give.

Rab said, On account of four things is the property of householders confiscated by the state treasury:¹ On account of those who defer payment of the labourer's hire; on account of those who withhold the hired labourer's wages; on account of those who remove the yoke from off their necks and place it on [the necks] of their fellows² and on account of arrogance. And the sin of arrogance is equivalent to all [the others] whereas of the humble it is written, But the humble shall inherit the land, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.³

C H A P T E R III

MISHNAH. A STOLEN OR A WITHERED PALM-BRANCH⁴ IS INVALID. ONE [THAT

CAME] FROM AN ASHERAH⁵ OR FROM A CONDEMNED CITY,⁶ IS INVALID. IF ITS TOP WAS BROKEN OFF OR ITS LEAVES WERE DETACHED,⁷ IT IS INVALID. IF ITS LEAVES ARE MERELY SPREAD APART⁸ IT IS VALID. R. JUDAH SAYS, HE SHOULD TIE THEM UP AT THE TOP. THE THORN-PALMS OF THE IRON MOUNTAIN⁹ ARE VALID.¹⁰ A PALM-BRANCH WHICH IS THREE HANDBREADTHS IN LENGTH, LONG ENOUGH TO WAVE, IS VALID.

GEMARA. [The Tanna]¹¹ categorically teaches [that the PALMBRANCH IS INVALID] irrespective of whether [it is to be used] on the first day of the Festival¹² or on the second day.¹³ Now this is right as regards a withered palm since we must have [a branch that is] 'goodly'¹⁴ which this one is not; but with regard to a stolen one, the law is quite right as far as the first day of the Festival is concerned, since it is written, 'to you'¹⁴ [which implies that it shall be] of your own, but why should it not be allowed on the second day?¹⁵ — R. Johanan answered in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai,

(1) For the fiscus.

(2) The reference is to those who evade payment of taxes, so that the burden falls more heavily on others.

(3) Ps. XXXVII, 11.

(4) Lulab, one of the four species used in the festive wreath (cf. Lev. XXIII, 40).

(5) A grove worshipped by heathens (cf. Deut. XII, 2).

(6) Cf. Deut. XIII, 16.

(7) From the stem.

(8) But are joined to the stem at their roots.

(9) A mountain in the vicinity of Jerusalem.

(10) Though their leaves are short.

(11) In our Mishnah.

(12) When the obligation is Pentateuchal.

(13) On which the obligation is only Rabbinical.

(14) Lev. XXIII, 40.

(15) To which the text cited, which explicitly refers to the first day, does not apply.

because it¹ would be a precept fulfilled through a transgression [which is forbidden], as it is said, And ye have brought that which is stolen, and the lame and the sick,² 'The stolen' is thus compared with the lame; just as the lame can never be rectified,³ so that which is stolen can never be rectified, [that is] irrespective of whether the stolen is used before abandonment [of hope of recovery by the owner] or after abandonment. Now this⁴ is right before abandonment, since the Divine Law said, When any man of you bringeth an offering unto the Lord⁵ and this⁶ is not his, but [why should the law apply] after abandonment [of right by the owner], seeing [that the robber] has acquired it⁷ by [virtue of that] abandonment?⁸ The reason must then be that it is a precept fulfilled through a transgression.

R. Johanan in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai further said, What is the purport of that which is written, For I the Lord love justice, I hate robbery with iniquity?⁹ This may be compared to a human king who passed through his custom-house and said to his attendants, 'pay the tax¹⁰ to the tax-collectors'. They said to him, 'But the whole tax, surely, belongs to thee!' He answered them, 'All travellers would learn from me not to evade their payments of tax'. So the Holy One, blessed be He, said, 'I the Lord hate robbery in burnt-offerings;¹¹ let My children learn from Me and keep away from robbery'.¹²

Sc¹³ it was also stated: R. Ammi said, A withered [palm-branch] is invalid because it is not ‘goodly’,¹⁴ a stolen one is invalid because it constitutes a precept fulfilled through a transgression.

And this¹⁵ disagrees with R. Isaac, since R. Isaac b. Nahmani said in the name of Samuel, This¹⁶ was taught only with regard to the first day of the Festival, but on the second day, since a man fulfils his obligation with a borrowed [palm-branch].¹⁷ he fulfils it also with a stolen one.

R. Nahman b. Isaac objected: A STOLEN OR WITHERED PALM-BRANCH IS INVALID, from which it follows that a borrowed one is valid? Now when?¹⁸ If you say, On the first day of the Festival, is it not written [it may be objected] ‘to you’¹⁹ implying that it should be your own, and this one is not his! Consequently the reference must be to the second day of the Festival, and yet it teaches that a stolen one is invalid?²⁰ — Raba replied: Indeed it refers to the first day of the Festival but he²¹ implies the form of ‘It is not required’:²² It is not required to state that a borrowed one is invalid since it is not his; but in the case of a stolen one, of which I might say that normally a robbery [implies immediate] abandonment by its owner and that it is, therefore, like his own,²³ therefore he informs us [that even a stolen one is invalid].²⁴

R. Huna said to some traders, When you purchase myrtles from heathens,²⁵ do not cut them yourselves, but let them²⁶ cut them and give them to you. What is the reason? — Heathens as a rule acquire their land by robbery²⁷

(1) The use of a stolen palm-branch.

(2) Mal. 1, 13.

(3) To become a valid offering.

(4) That the stolen may not be used.

(5) Lev. I, 2. The Heb. for ‘of you’ may be rendered ‘of yours’. sc. the offering must come from the donor's own property.

(9) Isa. LXI. 8.

(10) For the king's own goods.

(11) Be'olah. E.V. ‘with iniquity’. The noun may bear both significations.

(12) Even although everything belongs to God, and there can, therefore, technically be no robbery in offering a sacrifice to God.

(13) That the reason for the first ruling in our Mishnah is, as R. Johanan explained, that a pious deed may not be performed through a transgression.

(14) Cf. Lev. XXIII, 40.

(15) The ruling that a stolen palm-branch is invalid on the second day of the Festival.

(16) That a stolen palm-branch is invalid.

(17) As was explained supra 29b ad fin.

(18) Is it valid.

(19) Lev. XXIII, 40.

(20) How then could R. Isaac b. Nahmani maintain in the name of Samuel that it is valid?

(21) The author of our Mishnah.

(22) A statement which mentions only the less probable, and includes the more probable.

(23) Even if the owner was not heard to abandon it.

(24) Unless the owner had actually abandoned the hope of ever recovering it.

and there is no [title to] land by robbery;¹ therefore let them cut it down, so that there may be abandonment [of right]² by the owner while it is in their possession,³ and change of domain⁴ in your hands.⁵ But in any case, even when the traders cut the myrtles, let abandonment [of right] by the owner take place when these are in their hands, and change of domain when they are in the hands of the purchasers?⁶ — It is necessary [to state this law] only with regard to the hoshanna⁷ of the traders themselves.⁸ But why could they not acquire possession of them by the change they make in it?⁹ — [R. Huna] is of the opinion that the palm-branch [wreath] does not need binding;¹⁰ and [even] if you were to find some ground for saying that the palm-branch wreath does need binding, [still] the change would be one that can be removed by restoring the object to its original condition¹¹ which is not regarded as a valid change. But why should they not acquire possession by virtue of the change of name, since previously¹² it was called asa [myrtle] and now

(1) Lit., 'land cannot be robbed'; v. B.K. 117b. The myrtle while still growing is, therefore, legally the property of its Jewish owner and thus invalid to the purchaser.

(2) Of the cut myrtles.

(3) Unlike land, detached produce is acquired by robbery.

(4) From that of the seller to that of the buyer.

(5) He is of the opinion that abandonment of right by the owner is not sufficient to constitute acquirement of title by the possessor unless there was in addition either (a) a change of domain, (b) a change in the nature of the object, or (c) a change in its name (v. B.K. 67a). But even if abandonment alone were sufficient, the robbery, if the traders themselves had cut the myrtles, would have been committed by them, and they would have been guilty of performing a precept by means of a transgression.

(6) Lit., 'in our hands'. And since the purchasers commit no robbery they might well use the myrtles.

(7) The myrtle. Lit., 'save, we beseech thee', a refrain chanted when holding the wreath of which the myrtles form a part.

(8) Which they require for their own use. In such a case, were they to cut the myrtles, there would be no change of domain and they (the users) would be committing the robbery.

(9) By binding the three components, the myrtles, the willows and the palm-branch.

(10) Hence there is no change.

(11) He may unbind the component parts.

(12) Before it was put into the festive wreath.

hoshanna?¹ — Previously also a myrtle² was called hoshanna.¹

Our Rabbis taught, In the case of a stolen Sukkah, and [a Sukkah made by] placing Sukkah-covering over a public thoroughfare,³ R. Eliezer declares [them] invalid and the Sages declare [them] valid. R. Nahman explained: The dispute⁴ applies only where he⁵ forcibly ejects his fellow⁶ from the Sukkah. In which case R. Eliezer⁷ is consistent with his view, he having said, 'A man cannot fulfil his obligation in the Sukkah of his fellow', so that if [we hold that] there is a title to land by robbery, the Sukkah is a stolen one,⁸ and even if [we hold that] there is no title to land by robbery,⁹ [still] the Sukkah is a borrowed one;¹⁰ and the Rabbis¹¹ [also] are consistent, since they maintain that a man can fulfil his obligation in the Sukkah of his fellow, and that there is title to land by robbery, so that the Sukkah is a borrowed one.¹² Where, however, he stole wood and used it for Sukkah-covering, all agree¹³ that he [the owner] has [a claim] merely against the cost of the wood.¹⁴ How [do we know this]?¹⁵ — Since [the Sukkah] is compared to a public thoroughfare;¹⁶ as the ground of a public thoroughfare is not his,¹⁷ so [must] the Sukkah [referred to] also be one put up on land that is not his.¹⁸

A certain old woman¹⁹ came before R. Nahman and said to him, 'The Exilarch and all the Rabbis of the house of the Exilarch are sitting in a stolen Sukkah'. She cried²⁰ but R. Nahman took no notice of her. She said to him, 'A woman whose father²¹ had three hundred and eighteen slaves cries out to you, and you take no notice?' R. Nahman said to them, 'She is a noisy woman; but she can claim only the cost of the wood'.²²

Rabina said, If the main joist of a Sukkah was stolen,²³ the Rabbis made an enactment with regard to it,²⁴ similar to the enactment of the beam.²⁵ But is not this²⁶ obvious? Wherein does it differ from wood?²⁷ — I would have thought that [the law applied only to] wood since it is common,²⁸ but not to this which is uncommon,²⁹ therefore he informs us [that the law applies to this case also]. This,³⁰ however, only applies during the seven days [of the Festival], but after the seven days, it must be returned in its original state. If, however, he fixed it in with cement,³¹ even after the seven days he need only give its value.

A Tanna taught, A withered [palm-branch] is invalid; R. Judah declares it valid. Raba said, The dispute concerns only the palm-branch, since the Rabbis are of the opinion that the palm-branch is likened to the ethrog [citron], and just as the ethrog must be a goodly [fruit]³² so must the palm-branch be goodly, while R. Judah holds that we do not liken the palm-branch to the ethrog; but with regard to the ethrog, all agree that it must be a goodly [fruit].³²

Does not then R. Judah demand that the palm-branch shall be goodly? Have we not in fact learnt, R. JUDAH SAYS, HE SHOULD TIE THEM UP AT THE TOP, the reason presumably being that it must be goodly? — No! The reason is as it has been taught: R. Judah said in the name of R. Tarfon, Branches of palm-trees³³ [mean that the palm-branches must be] tied up.³⁴ and if they were separated, one must tie them up.³⁵ But does he not then demand that it be goodly? Have we not in fact learnt, 'The lulab³⁶ is bound only with its own species; so R. Judah',³⁷ the reason presumably being that it must be goodly? — No! Since Raba said [that it may be bound] even with the bast or the root of the palm.³⁷ What then is the reason of R. Judah? — Because he is of the opinion that the [components] of the lulab must be bound together and if one employs another species,³⁸ the number of species becomes five.³⁹

But does R. Judah demand that the ethrog be goodly? Has it not in fact been taught, As to the Four Species of the lulab, just as one may not diminish from them, so one may not add to them. If he cannot find an ethrog, he may neither bring a quince nor a pomegranate, nor any other thing. Dried up [ethrogs] are valid, withered ones are invalid. R. Judah says, Even withered ones [are valid]. And R. Judah, furthermore said, It happened

(7) In ruling the Sukkahs mentioned invalid.

(8) And, therefore, invalid.

(9) And the land as well as the Sukkah are, therefore, the property of the rightful owner (cf. supra p. 135, n. 13).

(10) And R. Eliezer excludes both stolen and borrowed Sukkahs by his exposition of 'to thee' supra.

(11) The Sages.

(12) And, therefore, valid.

(13) Even R. Eliezer.

(14) But the wood itself passes into the possession of the robber who has acquired it by change of function and name, and the Sukkah being neither robbed nor borrowed, is consequently valid.

(15) That the dispute depends on the questions whether land may be legally acquired by robbery and whether a borrowed that urban dwellers¹ used to bequeath their lulabs to their grandchildren. They² said to him, Is that a proof? A case of emergency does not constitute a proof.³ At all events it is taught that R. Judah says that even withered ones are valid, and this refers, does it not, to the ethrog?⁴ — No! It refers to the palm-branch.

Sukkah is valid.

(23) And if it were to be removed, the Sukkah would collapse.

The Master has said, 'Just as one may not diminish from them, so one may not add to them'. But is not this obvious? — I would have said that since R. Judah said that the lulab⁵ must be bound, if one bring another species,⁶ each is regarded as separate,⁷ therefore he informs us [that it is not so].⁸

The Master has said, 'If he cannot find an ethrog, he may bring neither a pomegranate nor a quince, nor any other thing'. But is not this obvious? — I would have said that he may bring it in order that the law of ethrog might not be forgotten, therefore he informs us [that it is forbidden lest] at times the result be disastrous, since one might confound [the one fruit with the other].⁹

Come and hear: An old ethrog is invalid, but R. Judah declares it valid. [Is not this a] refutation of Raba? — It is a refutation.

But does not [R. Judah] demand that it¹⁰ be goodly? Have we not in fact learnt: If it¹⁰ is green as a leek, R. Meir declares it valid and R. Judah invalid?¹¹ Is it¹² not because it¹⁰ must be goodly? No! Because the fruit is not yet ripe. Come and hear: The minimum size of an ethrog is, R. Meir says, the size of a nut; R. Judah says that of an egg.¹¹ Is it¹² not because it¹⁰ must be goodly? — No! Because the fruit is not ripe.

Come and hear: Its¹⁰ maximum size is such that one should be able to hold two in one hand; so R. Judah. R. Jose says, Even if one can hold one ethrog in both hands.¹¹ Now what is the reason?¹³ Is it not because he requires it to be goodly? — No! Because Rabbah¹⁴ said, The lulab [must be held] in the right hand and the ethrog in the left,¹⁵ and since sometimes he might put them in the wrong hands, when he changes over [the ethrog might fall] and become invalid.¹⁶ But, according to R. Judah is it not written in Scripture ‘goodly’?¹⁷ — This means ‘that which remains upon the tree from year to year’.¹⁸

ONE THAT CAME FROM AN ASHERAH OR FROM A CONDEMNED CITY. Is then [the palm-branch that came from] an asherah invalid? Did not Raba in fact say, One should not take a palm-branch of idolatry, but if he did nevertheless take it, it is valid?¹⁹ — Here we are dealing with an asherah [dating from the time of] Moses, whose [minimum] size²⁰ [is regarded as] crushed.²¹ A deduction from the wording also proves this, since it²² is compared with a condemned city.²³ This is conclusive. IF ITS TOP WAS BROKEN OFF. R. Huna said, ‘BROKEN OFF’ only was taught, but if it is only split, it is valid. Is it then valid if it is split? Has it not been taught, A palm-branch which is bent

, thorny, split or curved like a sickle is invalid. If it¹ has become hardened,² it is invalid. If it only appears as though it is hardened,³ it is valid?⁴ — R. Papa answered, It⁵ refers to where it⁶ is like a prong.⁷ ‘If it is curved like a sickle’, Raba said, refers only to its front, but towards its back, it is its nature [to be curved]. R. Nahman said, At the sides⁸ is the same as at the front, and some say, The same as at its back. Raba further said, A palm-branch of which all the foliage grows on one side is a blemished plant and is invalid.

IF ITS LEAVES WERE BROKEN OFF etc. R. Papa said. ‘DETACHED’ means like a broom,⁹ ‘SPREAD APART’ means that they were parted from one another.¹⁰ R. Papa asked, How if the central leaf¹¹ is split?¹² — Come and hear what R. Johanan¹³ said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: If the central leaf is removed, it⁶ is invalid. No doubt if it is split the same law would apply? No, if it is removed the law is different, since it is entirely lacking. Another version is that R. Johanan said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi:¹³ If the central leaf is split, it is as though it is removed, and [the lulab] is invalid.

R. JUDAH SAYS. It has been taught: R. Judah said in the name of R. Tarfon, ‘Branches of palm-trees’, [means that palm-branches must be] tied up, and if they were separated, one must tie them up.¹⁴ Rabina said to R. Ashi, How do we know that ‘Branches of palm-trees’ refers to the [green sprouts of the] palm-branches? Perhaps it means [branches of] the hardened palm?¹⁵ — It must be [a branch the leaves of which can be] bound up, and this one¹⁶ cannot.¹⁷ But¹⁸ perhaps it means the stalk [itself]?¹⁹ — [Since the word] ‘bound’ is used, it must refer to something which can be separated, but this is permanently bound. But perhaps it means the inflorescence of palms?²⁰ — Abaye answered, It is written, Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.²¹ Raba Tosfa'ah said to Rabina, But perhaps it means two branches of palms? — The word is written kappath.²² Then perhaps it means one? — That would be called kaf.²³

THE THORN-PALMS OF THE IRON MOUNTAIN ARE VALID. Abaye said, They taught it only where the top of one [leaf] reaches the junction of the next, but if the top of the one does not reach the junction of the next,²⁴ it²⁵ is invalid. So it has also been taught: The thorn-palms of the iron mountain are invalid. But have we not learnt that they are valid? It may be deduced, therefore, [that the ruling is] in agreement with Abaye. This is conclusive.

(1) The palm-branch.

(2) Wooden.

(3) Sc. it began to harden but the process was not yet complete.

(4) Now since this Baraita distinctly ruled a split lulab to be invalid how could R. Huna uphold it to be valid?

(5) The Baraita.

(6) The lulab.

(7) If it is naturally split to this extent even R. Huna agrees that it is invalid.

(8) Sc. if the lulab is bent sideways.

(9) Leaves detached from the central rib and subsequently bound together.

(10) But joined to the rib at their roots.

(11) Lit., ‘the twins’, the central leaf being a junction of two.

(14) Supra 31a q.v. notes.

(15) I.e., a palm which is some years old, whose branches have become hardened like other tree branches, and there must be one central branch and one protruding from each side.

(16) The hardened branch.

(17) Since the branches are too hard.

(18) Since it is insisted that the branch must be 'bound'.

(19) From which no leaves branch out at all.

(20) A spike covered with flowers, and enveloped by one or more spathes. Being only one or two years old its leaves can still be bent and bound to the central parts.

(21) Prov. III, 17; i.e., it is unpleasant to hold this prickly spike and, therefore, the Torah could not have referred to it.

(22) Implying the singular. The word כפת is written defectively, which can be read as כפת (cf. supra 31a).

(23) A branch; not kappath which implies something that has to be bound, v. supra.

(24) These thorn-palms are very sparsely covered with leaves, so that the top of the lower leaf may not reach as far as the beginning of the one above it.

(25) The branch.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 32b

Some put it¹ in the form of mutual contradiction: We have learnt: THE THORN-PALMS OF THE IRON MOUNTAIN ARE VALID. But has it not been taught that they are invalid? Abaye answered, There is no difficulty: The one² refers to where the top of the one leaf reaches the junction of the next; the other³ to where the top of the one does not reach the junction of the other. R. Marion said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, while others say that Rabbah b. Mari taught in the name of R. Johanan b. Zakkai, There are two palms in the valley of Hinnom,⁴ between which there ascends smoke, and it is in that connection that we have learnt, THE THORN-PALMS OF THE IRON MOUNTAIN ARE VALID, and it is the entrance to Gehenna.

A PALM-BRANCH WHICH IS THREE HANDBREADTHS IN LENGTH. Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, The [minimum] length of the myrtle and the willow is three [handbreadths], and that of the palm-branch four, so that the palm-branch should extend one handbreadth beyond the myrtle. And R. Parnak said in the name of R. Johanan, The stem⁵ of the palm-branch should extend a handbreadth beyond the myrtle.

Have we not learnt, A PALM-BRANCH WHICH IS THREE HANDBREADTHS IN LENGTH, LONG ENOUGH TO WAVE, IS VALID?⁶ — Read AND LONG ENOUGH TO WAVE;⁷ and each one⁸ explains it according to his own view.⁹

Come and hear: [We have learnt.] The [minimum] length of the myrtle and the willow is three [handbreadths], and that of the palm-branch four. Surely [this means, does it not,] inclusive of the leaves?¹⁰ — No, exclusive of the leaves.

[To turn to] the main text: The [minimum] length of the myrtle and the willow is three [handbreadths], and that of the palm-branch four. R. Tarfon says, A cubit¹¹ consisting of five handbreadths.¹² Raba said, May R. Tarfon's Master forgive him [for this absurd statement]! We cannot find a valid myrtle three [handbreadths] long, would one of five handbreadths be required?¹³ When R. Dimi came¹⁴ he explained. [R. Tarfon meant thus]: Make a cubit which has [normally] six handbreadths, into five.¹⁵ Deduct from these the three for the myrtle and the remainder is for the palm-branch. How much then¹⁶ is it?¹⁷ Three and three fifths?¹⁸ Do not then two statements of Samuel contradict one another, for here Rab Judah says in the name of Samuel, The [minimum] length of the myrtle and the willow is three [normal handbreadths], and elsewhere R. Huna said in the name of Samuel that the halachah is as R. Tarfon?¹⁹ — [Samuel] was not precise.²⁰

But do we not say that one is not precise only when [this results in] a restriction [of the law] but not when [it results in] a relaxation of it?²¹

When Rabin came,²² he explained: [R. Tarfon meant thus]: Make a cubit of five normal handbreadths into one of six handbreadths. Deduct of these three for the myrtle, and the remainder is for the palm-branch. But how much¹⁶ is it?²³ Two and a half.²⁴ Is there not ‘then a discrepancy between [the two statements of] Samuel?²⁵ — [The answer is that] he was not precise, and in this case his lack of precision²⁶ results in a restriction [of the law], since R. Huna said in the name of Samuel that the halachah is as R. Tarfon.²⁷

MISHNAH. A STOLEN OR WITHERED MYRTLE IS NOT VALID, ONE OF AN ASHERAH OR OF A CONDEMNED CITY IS INVALID. IF ITS TIP WAS BROKEN OFF, OR ITS LEAVES WERE SEVERED, OR IF ITS BERRIES WERE MORE NUMEROUS THAN ITS LEAVES, IT IS INVALID, BUT IF HE DIMINISHED THEIR NUMBER IT IS VALID. ONE MAY NOT, HOWEVER, DIMINISH THEM ON THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught, ‘Boughs of a thick tree²⁸ [means] [that kind of tree] whose branches completely cover its trunk. Now what [tree] is this? Obviously you must say that it is the myrtle. But perhaps it is the olive?²⁹ — It must be wreathed,³⁰ which [the olive] is not. But perhaps it is the plane tree?³¹ — It is required that the branches shall cover its trunk, which is not the case [with the plane tree]. But perhaps it is the oleander?³² Abaye said, ‘Its³³ ways³⁴ are the ways of pleasantness’,³⁵ and [with the oleander] this is not the case.³⁶ Raba expressed [the same idea] from the following verse, Therefore love ye truth and peace.³⁷

Our Rabbis taught, [That plant whose leaves are] shaped like a plait, and resemble a chain, is the myrtle. R. Eliezer b. Jacob said ‘The boughs of a thick tree’²⁸ [means] a tree the taste of whose wood and whose fruit is similar: Say, then, it is the myrtle.

A Tanna taught, A tree which is ‘aboth³⁸ is valid, and which is not ‘aboth is not valid. What constitutes ‘aboth? — Rab Judah said, When three leaves grow out of one nest.³⁹ R. Kahana said, Even [if they only grow in] twos and ones.⁴⁰ R. Aha the son of Raba sought to obtain⁴¹ one [whose leaves grew] in twos and ones, since R. Kahana said [that such are valid]. Mar b. Amemar said to R. Ashi, ‘My father used to call that⁴² the wild myrtle’.

Our Rabbis taught, If the larger part of its⁴³ leaves fell off⁴⁴ and the lesser part remained, it is valid, provided that its wreath-work⁴⁵ remains. But is not this self-contradictory? You said that if the larger part of its leaves fell off⁴⁴ it is valid and then it is stated, ‘provided that its wreath-work remains’. But since two [of the three leaves] have fallen off, how is it possible to have a wreathwork? — Abaye said, It is possible

(5) Not merely the leaves.

(6) How then could Samuel and R. Johanan maintain that the length must be four handbreadths?

(7) Sc. the part which extends beyond the myrtle and willow, which is, therefore, not bound and can be waved.

(8) Samuel and R. Johanan.

(9) According to Samuel a handbreadth including the leaves, according to R. Johanan one excluding the leaves.

(10) An objection against R. Johanan.

(11) [אמה]. So MS.M. Cur. edd.: באמה (to be measured by) a cubit etc.].

(12) This is now assumed to mean that the myrtle and the willow must each be one such cubit long.

(13) Obviously not.

(14) From Palestine to Babylon.

(15) A normal handbreadth is one-sixth of a cubit. R. Tarfon made its measurement for the purpose of the lulab one fifth instead of one sixth. [I.e., R. Dimi reported that R. Tarfon said באמה and not אמה, cf. p. 142, n. 8.]

(16) In normal handbreadths.

- (17) The three handbreadths each of which is equal to a fifth of the six normal handbreadths.
- (18) Since the three handbreadths of the myrtle are equivalent to $3 \times 1 \frac{1}{5} = 3 \frac{3}{5}$ normal handbreadths.
- (19) Who prescribes $3 \frac{3}{5}$ normal handbreadths.
- (20) By three he really meant $3 \frac{3}{5}$.
- (21) Three instead of $3 \frac{3}{5}$.
- (22) From Palestine to Babylon.
- (23) The three handbreadths each of which equals $\frac{5}{6}$ of a normal one.
- (24) The normal cubit of six handbreadths being divided into five, each handbreadth is $\frac{5}{6}$ of a normal handbreadth. The three handbreadths of the myrtle, therefore, equal $(3 \times \frac{5}{6} = \frac{15}{6} =) 2 \frac{1}{2}$ normal handbreadths, leaving $2 \frac{1}{2}$ for the extending portion of the palm-branch.
- (25) Three, against two and a half normal handbreadths.

with the Egyptian¹ myrtle which has seven [leaves] in each nest, and [therefore] when four fall off, there are still three left. Abaye said, [From this] we can deduce that the Egyptian myrtle is valid for the hoshanna² But is not this obvious? — I might have said that since it has a distinctive name, it cannot be considered valid, therefore he informs us [that it is valid]. But perhaps it is indeed so?³ -The Divine Law says, 'boughs of a thick tree'⁴ i.e., of any kind.

Our Rabbis taught, If the larger part of its leaves were withered, and only three twigs with green leaves⁵ remained, it is valid. And R. Hisda added, [Provided] that they⁶ are at the top of each [twig].⁷

IF ITS TIP WAS BROKEN OFF. 'Ulla bar Hinena taught, If its tip was broken off, and a berry grew on it,⁸ it is valid. R. Jeremiah asked, If the tip was broken off before the Festival, and the berry grew on it on the Festival,⁹ what [is the law]? Do we apply the law of disability to [all] commandments or not?¹⁰ — Can he not decide this point from that which we have learnt: If he covered it and it became uncovered, he need not cover it again; if the wind covered it, he must cover it again.¹¹ And Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan, They taught this¹² only where it subsequently became uncovered, but if it did not subsequently become uncovered, he is free from [the duty of] covering it. And when we asked concerning this, 'Even if it subsequently became uncovered, why must he cover it? Once it¹³ has suffered¹⁴ the disability¹⁵ is it not permanently disabled?'¹⁶ R. Papa said, This implies that the law of disability does not apply to [all] commandments? — The question [of R. Jeremiah] is concerning that very statement of R. Papa: Is he¹⁷ certain that the law of disability does not apply to [all] commandments, irrespective of whether it is in the direction of stringency¹⁸ or leniency,¹⁹ or perhaps he¹⁷ is doubtful, and therefore we apply it in the direction of stringency,¹⁸ but not in the direction of leniency?¹⁹ It remains unanswered.²⁰

Can we say that these²¹ are according to the dispute of Tannas? [For we have learnt], If he transgressed and picked them²² off,²³ it is invalid. These are the words of R. Eleazar b. Zadok,²⁴ while the Sages declare it valid.²⁵ Now they²⁶ were of the opinion that according to all²⁷ the lulab does not need binding, and that, even if some reason could be found for ruling that it does need binding, we do not deduce [the laws of] lulab from those of Sukkah of which it is written, 'Thou shalt make' [which implies] but not from that which is already made.²⁸ Surely then they disagree on the following principle viz., that he who declares it invalid is of the opinion that we apply the law of disability to [all] commandments,²⁹ while he who declares it to be valid is of the opinion that we do not apply the law of disability³⁰ to [all] commandments?³¹ — No! All agree that we do not apply the law of disability to [all] commandments, but they disagree here in whether we deduce [the laws of] lulab from [those of] Sukkah. One Master³² is of the opinion that we do so deduce them,³³ while the other Master³⁴ is of the opinion that we do not make such a deduction.

And if you wish you may say that if it were held that the lulab needs binding all would have agreed that we deduce [the laws of] lulab from [those of] Sukkah;³³ but they disagree here on whether the lulab needs binding, as is the case in the dispute of these Tannas of whom it has been taught: A lulab, whether [the other prescribed species were] bound with it or not, is valid. R. Judah says, If it is bound [with the others] it is valid; if it is unbound, it is invalid.³⁵ What is the reason of R. Judah? — He deduces it from the word 'take' [which occurs here and with] the bundle of hyssop. It is written here, And ye shall take on the first day,³⁶ and there it is written And ye shall take a bundle of hyssop.³⁷ Just as there [it must be] a bundle, so here also [it must be] a bundle. And the Rabbis?³⁸ - They make no deduction from the mention of the word 'take' in the two passages. Who is it that learned that which our Rabbis have taught: It is a pious deed to bind the lulab, but [even] if he did not bind it, it is valid? Now who is it? If R. Judah be suggested, why is it valid if he did not bind it? If the Rabbis are suggested, what pious deed does he perform?³⁹ — It is in fact the Rabbis, and the pious deed spoken of is due to 'This is my God and I will glorify Him'.⁴⁰

OR IF ITS BERRIES WERE MORE NUMEROUS THAN ITS LEAVES. R. Hisda said, The following statement was made by our great Master,⁴¹ and may the Omnipresent be his help! They taught it⁴² only [if all the berries were] in one place, but if in two or three places, it⁴³ is valid. Said Raba,⁴⁴

(1) Or 'hedge', where it is free to grow unhampered (Rashi).

(2) The festive wreath.

(3) That it is not valid.

(4) V. supra p. 144, n. 1.

(5) Each twig having three leaves on it.

(6) The leaves.

(7) If they are not at the top, the myrtle cannot be regarded as 'goodly' and is, therefore, invalid.

(8) A kind of berry which can grow even on a detached myrtle (Rashi).

(9) While it was bound to the lulab.

(10) As it applies to sacrifices. Once a disability appears in a sacrifice after it is slain, even if the disability is removed, the sacrifice is still regarded as invalid. Similarly here the myrtle has become disabled for use before the Festival, and recovers its sound state on the Festival, and the question is whether or not the disability it once suffered renders it permanently invalid.

(11) Hul. 87a. The Mishnah refers to the law of covering up the blood of a bird or beast. V. Lev. XVII, 13 and Mishnah

Hul. VI.

- (12) That if the wind covered the blood it must be covered up again.
- (13) The blood.
- (14) When the wind had covered it.
- (15) I.e., there was no obligation then to cover it again.
- (16) Even after it had been uncovered. Why then has it been ruled that it must be covered again?
- (17) The Tanna of the Mishnah cited.
- (18) As in the case of the blood which must be covered again.
- (19) As in that of the broken myrtle where the growth of the berry would render it valid.

- (21) The two views on the law of disability.
- (22) The berries whose number exceeded that of the leaves. V. supra 11b.

- (27) Sc. the Rabbis and R. Eleazar.
- (28) So that the disqualification of the lulab cannot be due to the fact that when the myrtle became fit the festive wreath had already been made.
- (29) As the myrtle was once invalid it must always remain so.
- (30) Which is applicable to holy sacrifices.
- (31) Hence the validity of the myrtle after the number of its berries had been reduced on the festival.
- (32) R. Eleazar.
- (33) As a Sukkah that was not made for the festival is invalid so also is the festive wreath invalid if the validity of the myrtle was effected after the wreath had been made.
- (34) The Sages.
- (35) Supra 11b.
- (36) Lev. XXIII, 40.
- (37) Ex. XII, 22.
- (38) How can they maintain their view in the face of this deduction?
- (39) Seeing that they require no binding.
- (40) Ex. XV, 2. For the whole passage and notes cf. supra 11b.
- (41) Rab.
- (42) The ruling just cited from our Mishnah.
- (43) The myrtle.
- (44) So Bah. Cur. edd. add 'to him'.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 33b

[If the berries are in] two or three places it is regarded as speckled,¹ and [therefore] invalid. Rather if it² was at all stated, thus was it stated: OR IF ITS BERRIES WERE MORE NUMEROUS THAN ITS LEAVES, IT IS INVALID. R. Hisda said, The following statement was made by our great Master, and may the Omnipresent be his help! They taught this only if the berries were black,³ but if they were green they are merely a species of myrtle and valid. R. Papa said, Red [berries] are like black,⁴ since R. Hanina said, Black blood is [in reality] red blood except that it deteriorated.⁵

IF HE DIMINISHED THEIR NUMBER, IT IS VALID. When did he diminish them? If you say, before he bound them,⁶ is not this obvious? Consequently it must be said, after he bound them?⁷ This then is a disability from the very outset.⁸ Why then may it not be deduced therefrom that a disability from the outset⁸ is no [permanent] disability?⁹ — Indeed it refers to [a diminution that took place] after he bound them, but he¹⁰ is of the opinion that the binding is merely a designation [for its purpose], and a mere designation is of no consequence.¹¹

THE DIMINUTION, HOWEVER, MAY NOT TAKE PLACE ON THE FESTIVAL. But if he transgressed and did pluck them,¹² how is it? Is it valid? But then, when did it become black? If you will say that it became black from the previous day,¹³ then it is a disability from the very outset.¹⁴ Why then may it not be deduced therefrom that a disability from the very outset is no disability? Consequently it must be conceded, must it not, that it became black on the Festival. It is thus a case of being fit¹² and then disabled. May it then be deduced therefrom that if anything was fit¹² and then suffered a disability it may become fit again? — No! Indeed it refers to where it became black before the Festival; and that a disability from the very outset¹¹ is no disability you may well deduce therefrom; but that where it was fit¹² and then suffered a disability it becomes fit again you may not deduce therefrom.

Our Rabbis taught, The diminution¹⁵ may not take place on the Festival. In the name of R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon they said that it may be diminished.¹⁶ But is he not¹⁷ improving an object¹⁸ on the Festival?¹⁹ — R. Ashi said, This is a case where he plucked them²⁰ for food,²¹ and R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon maintains the same opinion as his father who said that a work which is done without intention is permitted. But do not both Abaye and Raba say that R. Simeon admits in the case of ‘cut off his head, but let him not die’²² [that it is forbidden]?²³ — Here we are dealing with a case where he has another hoshanna.²⁴ Our Rabbis taught, If the binding²⁵ became loosened on the Festival,²⁶ he may bind it as one binds vegetables.²⁷ But why [should this²⁸ be necessary]? Why should not one make a proper loop?²⁹ — [This statement is] according to R. Judah who says that a loop is to be considered a proper knot.³⁰ But if it is according to R. Judah, should not a proper binding be required?³¹ The Tanna [of the Baraitha] agrees with R. Judah on one point³² and disagrees with him on the other.³³

MISHNAH. A STOLEN OR WITHERED WILLOW-BRANCH IS INVALID. ONE FROM AN ASHERAH OR FROM A CONDEMNED CITY IS INVALID. ONE WHOSE TIP WAS BROKEN OFF OR WHOSE LEAVES WERE SEVERED, OR A MOUNTAIN WILLOW³⁴ IS INVALID. ONE THAT WAS SHRIVELLED OR HAD LOST SOME OF ITS LEAVES, OR ONE GROWN IN A NATURALLY WATERED SOIL,³⁵ IS VALID.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught, Willows of the brook³⁶ means those which grow by a brook. Another interpretation of ‘willows of the brook’ is one whose leaf is elongated as a brook.³⁷

Another Baraitha taught: ‘Willows of the brook’, [might mean] willows of the brook only. Whence do we know that those grown on naturally watered soil and mountain willows [are also valid]? Scripture expressly states, ‘willows³⁸ of the brook’, i.e., from any place.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 34a

Abba Saul¹ says, Willows [in the plural means] two, one for the lulab and one for the Sanctuary.² And whence do the Rabbis³ deduce [the law of the willow] for the Sanctuary? — They had this as an accepted tradition; for R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan, The laws of ten plants,⁴ the willow-branch and the water libation⁵ were given to Moses upon Mount Sinai.⁶

Our Rabbis taught, 'Willows of the brook'⁷ means those that grow by the brook excluding the zafzafah which is a willow that grows on the mountains. R. Zera said, Where is its Scriptural support?⁸ — He placed it beside many waters, he set it as a zafzafah.⁹ Abaye said to him, Is it not possible that [the latter part] is merely an explanation:¹⁰ 'He placed it beside many waters', and what was it? A zafzafah? — If so, what was the need for 'he set it'? R. Abbahu explained it:¹¹ The Holy One, blessed be He, said, I intended that Israel should be before Me as something placed beside many waters, that is, a willow, but they have made themselves as a zafzafah of the mountains.

Some teach this verse¹¹ in connection with the Baraita:¹² 'He placed it beside many waters, he set it as a zafzafah'.⁹ To this R. Zera demurred, Is it not possible that [the latter part] is merely an explanation: 'He placed it beside many waters' and what was it? A zafzafah? — If so, what could be the meaning of 'he set it'? R. Abbahu explained it:¹¹ The Holy One, blessed be He, said, I intended that Israel should be before Me as something placed beside many waters, that is, a willow, and they have made themselves as a zafzafah of the mountains.

Our Rabbis taught, What is a willow and what a zafzafah?--The willow has a red stem, an elongated leaf and a smooth edge; the zafzafah has a white stem, a round leaf and an edge serrated like a sickle. But has it not been taught, If it is like a sickle it is valid, if like a saw¹³ it is invalid? — Abaye said. That¹⁴ was taught only with regard to the rounded willow.¹⁵ Abaye said, Deduce therefrom that a rounded willow¹⁵ is valid for the hoshanna. But is not this obvious? — I would have said that since it has a distinctive name¹⁶ it would be thereby invalid, therefore he informs us [that it is not so]. But perhaps it is indeed so?¹⁷ — ‘Willows¹⁸ of the brook’, says the Divine Law, implying from any place.

R. Hisda said, Since the destruction of the temple the following three things have had their names interchanged. [What was formerly called] hilpetha [is now called] ‘arabta, and what was called ‘arabta, is now called hilpetha.¹⁹ What does that legally matter?--With regard to the lulab.²⁰ [What was before called] shifora [is now called] hazozerah,²¹ and what was hazozerah is now shifora. In what respect does this legally matter? — In respect of the shofar for the New Year. [What was formerly called] pathora [is now called] pathorta, and what was pathorta is now pathora.²² In what respect does this matter legally? — In respect of business transactions.²³ Abaye said, I also add [that what was formerly called] be kase [is now called] hublila,²⁴ and the former hublila is now be kase. In what respect does this legally matter? — In respect of a needle found in the fleshy part of the second stomach.²⁵ Raba b. does this matter? — In respect of bills of divorcement?¹

MISHNAH. R. ISHMAEL SAYS, [ONE MUST HAVE]² THREE MYRTLE-BRANCHES, TWO WILLOW-BRANCHES, ONE PALM-BRANCH AND ONE ETHROG. EVEN IF TWO [OF THE MYRTLE-BRANCHES] HAVE THEIR TIPS BROKEN OFF AND [ONLY] ONE IS WHOLE [THE WREATH IS VALID]. R. TARFON SAYS, EVEN IF ALL THREE HAVE THEIR TIPS BROKEN OFF. R. AKIBA SAID, JUST AS [IT IS NEEDED TO HAVE BUT] ONE PALM-BRANCH AND ONE ETHROG, SO [IT IS NEEDED TO HAVE BUT] ONE MYRTLE-BRANCH AND ONE WILLOW-BRANCH.

GEMARA. It has been taught, R. Ishmael said, 'The fruit of a goodly tree³ implies one; 'Branches of palm-trees'³ implies one;⁴ 'boughs of thick trees'³ implies three;⁵ 'willows of the brook'³ implies two, and even if two [of the myrtle-branches] have their tips broken off, and only one is whole [the wreath is valid]. R. Tarfon said, [There must be] three,⁶ [and they are valid] even if all have their tips broken off. R. Akiba said. Just as [it is necessary to have but] one palm-branch and one ethrog, so [it is necessary to have but] one myrtle-branch and one willow-branch. R. Eliezer said to him,⁷ If one should say that the ethrog should be bound with them⁸ in one bundle you can answer, Is it then written, 'The fruit of a goodly tree and branches of palm-trees'? It says only, 'The fruit of a goodly tree, branches of palm-trees'.⁹ And whence do we know that they are a hindrance to one another?¹⁰ Scripture teaches, 'And ye shall take'.¹¹ [implying] that the taking must be complete.¹² As to R. Ishmael,¹³ whichever view he takes [he is inconsistent]. For if he demands that the myrtle-branches] be whole, why should he not demand¹⁴ that they all be whole, and if he does not demand it, why should even one [have to be whole]? — Said Bira'ah in the name of R. Ammi, R. Ishmael recanted from this view.¹⁵ Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel, The halachah is in agreement with R. Tarfon.¹⁶ And Samuel is consistent; for in his view [expressed elsewhere] Samuel said to those who sold myrtle. 'Sell at the normal price, for if not, I will expound to you as R. Tarfon'.¹⁷ What is his reason?¹⁸ If you will say that he wished to take a lenient view, why did he not expound to them as R. Akiba¹⁹ who is still more lenient? — Three with broken tips are common, one with an unbroken tip is uncommon.²⁰

MISHNAH. AN ETHROG WHICH IS STOLEN OR WITHERED IS INVALID. ONE FROM AN ASHERAH OR A CONDEMNED CITY IS INVALID. IF IT WAS OF 'ORLAH²¹ OR OF UNCLEAR TERUMAH²² IT IS INVALID. IF IT WAS OF CLEAN TERUMAH HE SHOULD NOT TAKE IT,²³ BUT IF HE DID TAKE IT, IT IS VALID. IF IT WAS DEMAI,²⁴ BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT INVALID, AND BETH HILLEL DECLARE IT VALID. IF IT WAS OF SECOND TITHE, IT SHOULD NOT BE TAKEN²³ [EVEN] IN JERUSALEM, BUT IF HE TOOK IT, IT IS VALID.

IF THE LARGER PART OF IT IS COVERED WITH SCARS, OR IF ITS NIPPLE IS REMOVED, IF IT IS PEELED, SPLIT, PERFORATED, SO THAT ANY PART IS MISSING, IT IS INVALID. IF ITS LESSER PART ONLY IS COVERED WITH SCARS, IF ITS STALK WAS MISSING, OR IF IT IS PERFORATED BUT NAUGHT OF IT IS MISSING, IT IS VALID. AN ETHIOPIAN²⁵ ETHROG IS INVALID. IF IT IS GREEN AS A LEEK, R. MEIR DECLARES IT VALID AND R. JUDAH DECLARES IT INVALID.

THE MINIMUM SIZE OF AN ETHROG, R. MEIR SAYS, IS THAT OF A NUT. R. JUDAH SAYS THAT OF AN EGG. THE MAXIMUM [SIZE] IS SUCH THAT TWO CAN BE HELD IN

ONE HAND. THESE ARE THE WORDS OF R. JUDAH. R. JOSE SAID, EVEN ONE [THAT HE CAN HOLD ONLY] IN BOTH HIS HANDS.

(1) A bill of divorcement executed in the original Borsif and carried to another place is invalid unless the bearer made the declaration; 'In my presence it was written and in my presence it was signed', while one brought from Babylon required no such declaration (cf. Git. 2a, 6a, and Sanh. 109a). For further notes on this passage v. Shab., Sonc. ed., fol. 36a.

(7) [Var. lec. rightly omit 'to him'].

(8) The other three species.

(9) The absence of the waw conjunctive in this case and its presence in the case of the myrtles and willows that follow indicates that while the last three must be tied together the first need not.

(10) I.e., if one of the four species is missing it invalidates all.

(11) Lev. XXIII, 40.

(12) The four species together.

(13) Who requires only one myrtle-branch to be whole while the other two may have their tips broken off.

(14) Since Scripture draws no distinction between the two and the one.

(15) Sc. he now holds that one myrtle-branch is enough, but it must be whole.

(16) That myrtle-branches whose tips are broken off are valid.

(17) The people preferred whole, unbroken myrtles and to prevent exploitation by the vendors, Samuel threatened to expound that even broken ones are valid.

(18) That Samuel threatened to rule as R. Tarfon.

(19) Who requires only one myrtle-branch.

(20) The threat to adopt R. Tarfon's ruling had, therefore, a greater effect.

(21) The fruit of a tree during the first three years of its growth. V. Lev. XIX, 23.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 35a

GEMARA. Our Rabbis have taught, 'The fruit of a goodly tree'¹ implies² a tree the taste of whose 'fruit' and 'wood' is the same. Say then that it is the ethrog. Might it not be said to be pepper, as it has been taught. 'R. Meir used to say, From the implication of the text, And ye have planted all manner of trees,³ do I not know that the reference is to a tree for food?⁴ What then does Scripture teach by the [next phrase] "for food"? [That⁵ the reference is to] a tree the taste of whose fruit and wood is the same. Say then that it is pepper. This is to teach you that the pepper tree⁶ is subject to the law of 'orlah and that the Land of Israel lacks nothing, as it is said, Thou shalt not lack anything in it?⁷ — There⁸ [pepper is excluded] since it is impossible [to use it].⁹ For how shall he proceed? If he take one [pepper seed],⁹ it is unrecognizable;¹⁰ if he takes two or three, the Divine Law surely said, one 'fruit'¹¹ and not two or three fruits. [Its use] therefore is impossible.

Rabbi said, Read not hadar¹² but ha-dir;¹³ just as the stable contains large and small [animals], perfect and blemished ones, so also [the fruit spoken of⁸ must have] large and small, perfect and blemished. Have not then other fruits large and small, perfect and blemished? — It is this rather that was meant: Before the small ones¹⁴ come, the large¹⁵ are still existent [on the tree].¹⁶

R. Abbahu¹⁷ said, Read not hadar,¹² but ha-dar,¹⁸ a fruit which remains upon its tree from year to year. Ben 'Azzai said, Read not hadar, but hudor¹⁹ for in Greek water is called hudor.¹⁹ Now what fruit is it that grows by every water? Say, of course, it is the ethrog.

IF FROM AN ASHERAH OR FROM A CONDEMNED CITY, IT IS INVALID. What is the reason? — Since it is condemned to be burnt, [it is considered as though] its minimum size is destroyed.²⁰

IF FROM 'ORLAH, IT IS INVALID. What is the reason? R. Hiyya b. Abin and R. Assi disagree on this point. One explains because there is no permission to eat it,²¹ and the other explains because it²² has no monetary value.²³ It is now assumed that the authority who insists on permission to eat it [in order to render it valid] does not insist upon [its having] monetary value,²⁴ and that he who insists upon monetary value does not insist upon permission to eat it.²⁵

Now we learned, OR OF UNCLEAN TERUMAH, IT IS INVALID. This is well according to him who explains, because there is no permission to eat it,²⁶ but according to him who explains, because it has no monetary value,²⁷ why [should unclean terumah be invalid] seeing that the man can kindle it under his cooking?²⁸ The fact is [that with regard to] permission to eat it, all agree that it is an essential,²⁹ and they disagree only on the question whether monetary value [is also necessary]. One Master is of the opinion that permission to eat it is necessary²⁹ but not monetary value, while the other Master is of the opinion that monetary value is also necessary. What is the practical difference between them? — The case of the Second Tithe in Jerusalem differentiates them according to R. Meir.³⁰ According to him who explains, because there is no permission to eat it [it is valid, since] in this case there is permission to eat it. According to him who explains, because it has no monetary value [it is invalid, since] the Second Tithe is sacred money.³¹

It may be concluded that it is R. Assi who gives [also] the reason that it has no monetary value,³² since R. Assi said, [With] an ethrog of the Second Tithe according to R. Meir,³³ a person cannot fulfil his obligation on the Festival, and according to the Sages³⁴ he may fulfil his obligation with it on the Festival.³⁵ This is proved.

[Turning to] the main text, R. Assi said: [With] an ethrog of the Second Tithe, according to R. Meir, a person cannot fulfil his obligation on the Festival, and according to the Sages he may fulfil his obligation with it on the Festival. With unleavened bread of the Second Tithe, according to R. Meir, a man cannot fulfil his obligation³⁶ on Passover,³⁷ and according to the Sages he may fulfil his obligation with it on the Passover. Dough of the Second Tithe, according to R. Meir, is exempt from hallah,³⁸ according to the Sages it is liable to hallah.

R. Papa demurred: This³⁹ is well with regard to dough, since it is written, Of the first of your dough.⁴⁰ With regard to the ethrog also it is written, To you⁴¹ [implying that — it should be yours.⁴² With regard however to unleavened bread, does Scripture say, 'your unleavened bread'? — Rabbah b. Samuel, or as some say, R. Yemar b. Shelemiah, replied. We deduce it from the word 'bread' which is common to both passages. In this connection it is written, The bread of affliction⁴³ and there⁴⁴ it is written,

Then it shall be when ye eat of the bread of the land;¹ just as in the latter case [the reference is to] what is yours and not of the tithe, so in the former case, [it must be] yours and not of the tithe.

Can we say that the following supports [this view]: Dough of the Second Tithe is exempt from hallah, according to R. Meir, while the Sages say that it is liable?² — 'Can we say that the following supports [this view]'! Is it not the identical statement? Rather [say that the question was whether we can say that] since they³ dispute in this instance,⁴ they also dispute in the others⁵ or perhaps dough is exceptional because Scripture repeated the words 'your dough'.⁶ OR OF UNCLEAN TERUMAH,

IT IS INVALID; because there is no permission to eat it.

IF IT WAS OF CLEAN TERUMAH, HE SHOULD NOT TAKE IT. R. Ammi and R. Assi disagree on the reason of the ruling. One explains, Because he [thereby]⁷ renders it susceptible [to ritual uncleanness],⁸ while the other explains. Because he depreciates its value.⁹ What is the practical difference between them? The case where one assigned the name of terumah to it¹⁰ except to its outer peel. According to him who explains, Because he renders it susceptible [to ritual uncleanness], this¹¹ does apply;¹² according to him who explains, Because he depreciates its value, it¹³ does not apply.¹⁴

BUT IF HE DID TAKE IT, IT IS VALID; [since] according to him who explains, Because there is no permission to eat it, this is permitted to be eaten,¹⁵ and according to him who explains, Because it has no monetary value, this surely has monetary value.¹⁶

IF IT WAS DEMAI. What¹⁷ is the reason of Beth Hillel?—Because, if he wishes, he may declare his property to be hefker¹⁸ and thereby become a pauper who is entitled to benefit [from demai] we may now also apply to it the expression ‘to you’. For we have learnt, Poor men and billeted troops may be fed with demai.¹⁹ [But on the view of] Beth Shammai²⁰ a poor man may not eat demai; as we have learnt, Poor men and billeted troops may²¹ eat demai and R. Huna stated, A Tanna taught: Beth Shammai say that poor men and billeted troops may not be fed with demai, while Beth Hillel say that poor men and billeted troops may be fed with demai.

IF IT WAS OF SECOND TITHE . . . IN JERUSALEM. According to him who explained,²² Because he renders it susceptible [to uncleanness] it is [here forbidden] since he renders it susceptible [to uncleanness]; according to him who explained.²² Because he depreciates its value [it is forbidden] since here also he depreciates its value.

BUT IF HE TOOK IT, IT IS VALID. According to him who explains.²³ Because there is no permission to eat it,²⁴ [the ruling]²⁵ is according to all.²⁶ According to him who explains,²³ Because it has no monetary value, according to whom [is the ruling]? According to the Rabbis.²⁷

IF THE LARGER PART OF IT IS COVERED WITH SCARS. R. Hisda said, The following was said by our great Master,²⁸ may the Omnipresent be his help! This was taught only [where they were] in one place, but if they were in two or three places, [the ethrog] is valid. Raba said,²⁹ On the contrary! If they were in two or three places the ethrog is as though speckled and invalid. Rather if the statement was at all made, it was made in connection with the latter part [of our Mishnah]: IF ITS LESSER PART ONLY IS COVERED WITH SCARS . . . IT IS VALID. R. Hisda said, The following was said by our great Master, may the Omnipresent be his help! This was taught only [if they were] in one place, but if in two or three places the ethrog is as speckled and invalid. Raba said, But [if a scar is] on the oblate part,³⁰ even if it is one of the slightest extent, the ethrog is invalid.

IF ITS NIPPLE IS REMOVED. R. Isaac b. Eleazar³¹ taught,³² If its peduncle was removed.³³ IF IT IS PEELED. Raba ruled, An ethrog which was peeled so as to resemble³⁴ a red date³⁵ is valid. But have we not learnt, IF IT IS PEELED . . . IT IS INVALID? — This is no difficulty, since the former refers to where all of it [was peeled], the latter to where only a part was peeled.¹

SPLIT, PERFORATED. 'Ulla b. Hanina² learned,³ If it is completely perforated [it is invalid even if the hole is] of the minutest size; if it is not completely perforated [the hole must be of the minimum size] of an issar.⁴

Raba enquired: If there developed in an ethrog the symptoms [which render an animal] terefah,⁴ what is the law? — But concerning what does he inquire? If concerning [an ethrog which is] peeled,⁵ have we not [already] learnt it?⁶ If concerning one that is split⁵ have we not learnt it also?⁶ If concerning one that is perforated.⁵ have we not learnt it also?⁶ — The enquiry he raised was concerning [the law] 'Ulla cited in the name of R. Johanan [who taught], If the [contents of the] lung pour out as from a ladle⁷ [the animal] is fit to be eaten,⁸ and Raba explained that this applies only when the arteries are still whole, but if the arteries are rotted [the animal is] terefah. Now what is the ruling here?⁹ Is it possible that this¹⁰ applies to the former case only, where, since the air cannot affect it,¹¹ it could become healthy again,¹² but not in the latter case where, since the air can affect it, it inevitably decays, or is it possible that there is no difference? — Come and hear: An ethrog which is swollen, decayed, pickled, boiled, and Ethiopian,¹³ white or speckled, is invalid. An ethrog which is round as a ball is invalid. And some add if two are grown together. If an ethrog is half-ripe, R. Akiba declares it invalid, and the Sages valid. If it was grown In a mould, so that it has the appearance of another species, it is invalid. At any rate it teaches ‘swollen or decayed’, which implies, does it not, swollen from without or decayed from within?¹⁴ No! Both refer to the exterior, and yet there is no discrepancy. The one refers to a case where the ethrog is swollen even although it is not decayed; the other to a case where it was decayed without being swollen.

The Master has said, An Ethiopian ethrog is invalid. But has it not been taught, If it is Ethiopian it is valid, if it is like an Ethiopian,¹⁵ it is invalid? — Abaye answered, In our Mishnah also we learned of one that is like an Ethiopian. Raba answered, There is no difficulty. The former refers to us,¹⁶ the latter to them.¹⁷

A half-ripe ethrog, R. Akiba declares invalid, and the Sages declare it valid. Rabbah observed, Both R. Akiba and R. Simeon say the same thing. As to R. Akiba there is the statement just quoted. But what is the ruling of R. Simeon? — That which we have learnt:¹⁸ R. Simeon declares ethrogs to be exempt [from tithes] when they are small.¹⁹ Said Abaye to him, But perhaps it is not so! R. Akiba may uphold his view only here, since the ethrog must be ‘goodly’, which [an unripe ethrog] is not, but there²⁰ he may hold the opinion of the Rabbis;²¹ or else, R. Simeon may have maintained his view only here,²⁰ since it is written, Thou shalt surely tithe all the increase of thy seed,²² [which confines liability to tithe to such fruit only] as men bring forth for sowing,²³ but in the present instance he might agree with the Rabbis, and there is nothing more [to say about it].¹

‘If it was grown in a mould, so that it has the appearance of another species, it is invalid.’ Raba stated, They taught this Only in the case where ‘it has the appearance of another species’, but if it has its natural shape it is valid. But is not this obvious, seeing that it was taught,² ‘the appearance of another species’? — It³ was necessary only in a case where it⁴ was moulded in the shape of planks joined together.⁵

It was stated: An ethrog which has been gnawed by mice, Rab ruled, is no longer ‘goodly’.⁶ But it is not so? Did not R. Hanina in fact, taste a part of it,⁷ and fulfilled his obligation⁸ [with the remainder]? — Does not then our Mishnah⁹ present a contradiction against R. Hanina?¹⁰ — One might well explain that our Mishnah presents no contradiction against R. Hanina since the former might refer to the first day of the Festival,¹¹ while the latter might refer to the second day; but [does not R. Hanina's ruling¹² present] a contradiction against Rab?¹³ — Rab can answer you: [The gnawing by] mice is different, since they are repulsive.

Others says, Rab ruled that it¹⁴ is ‘goodly’ since R. Hanina tasted a part [of an ethrog] and fulfilled his obligation [with the remainder]. But does not our Mishnah⁹ present a contradiction against R. Hanina? — There is really no contradiction, since the former refers to the first day of the Festival, while the latter refers to the second day.

THE MINIMUM SIZE OF AN ETHROG etc. Rafram b. Papa observed: As is the dispute¹⁵ here, so is the dispute with regard to rounded pebbles. For it has been taught, It is permitted on the Sabbath¹⁶ to carry three rounded smooth pebbles¹⁷ into [a field] lavatory.¹⁸ And what must be their size? R. Meir ruled, The size of a nut, R. Judah ruled, That of an egg.

THE MAXIMUM SIZE etc. It was taught: R. Jose related, It happened with R. Akiba that he came to Synagogue with his ethrog on his shoulder.¹⁹ R. Judah answered him,²⁰ Is this a proof? They²¹ in fact said to him, This ethrog is not ‘goodly’.

MISHNAH. THE LULAE²² MAY BE BOUND ONLY WITH [STRANDS OF] ITS OWN SPECIES; SO R. JUDAH. R. MEIR SAYS IT MAY BE BOUND EVEN WITH A CORD.²³ R. MEIR OBSERVED, IT ACTUALLY OCCURRED THAT THE MEN²⁴ OF JERUSALEM USED TO BIND THEIR LULABS WITH STRANDS OF GOLD. THEY²⁵ ANSWERED HIM, BUT THEY BOUND IT WITH [STRANDS OF] ITS OWN SPECIES UNDERNEATH [THE STRANDS OF GOLD].²⁶

GEMARA. Raba stated, A lulab may be bound even with bast, or even with [strips of] the roots of the date-palm. Raba further stated, What is the reason of R. Judah? He is of the opinion that the lulab²² must be bound so that if one uses another species, the wreath would contain five species.²⁷

Raba further stated, Whence do I deduce that bast and roots of date-palms are species of the palm-tree? From what has been taught: [It is written,] Ye shall dwell in Sukkoth [booths],²⁸ which implies a Sukkah²⁹ made of any material; so R. Meir. R. Judah ruled, The Sukkah must be made of the same four species as the lulab. And logic demands it: If the lulab which does not obtain by night as by day,³⁰ is valid only with the Four Species, is there not then much more reason that the Sukkah which obtains both by night and by day,³⁰ shall be valid only with the Four Species? They answered him, Any a fortiori argument which begins with a restriction [of the law] and concludes with a relaxation [of it]³¹ is no valid argument.³²

For suppose he could not find all the Four Species, he would be sitting and doing nothing¹ while the Torah said, 'Ye shall dwell in booths for seven days.' implying a Sukkah of whatever material. And so with Ezra it says, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive branches, and branches of wild olive, and myrtle branches and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees to make Sukkoth, as it is written.² And [what does] R. Judah [answer to this verse?] — He is of the opinion that the other [species] were for the walls, while the 'myrtle branches and palm-branches and branches of thick trees' were for Sukkah — covering. And [nevertheless] we have learnt, Planks may be used as a Sukkah-covering, these are the words of R. Judah.³ Thus⁴ it clearly follows that bast and roots of date-palms⁵ are a species of palm-tree.⁶ This is conclusive.

But did R. Judah rule that the Four Species alone [are valid]⁷ and not anything else? — Was it not in fact taught, 'If he covered it⁸ with planks of cedar wood which are four handbreadths wide, it is invalid according to all.⁹ If they are not four handbreadths wide, R. Meir declares it invalid and R. Judah valid, but R. Meir admits that, if there is a space of one plank between every two planks, he may place laths between them and the Sukkah is valid'¹⁰ — What is meant by 'cedar'? Myrtle. This is in agreement with Rabbah son of R. Huna, since Rabbah son of R. Huna stated, In the school of Rab¹¹ they said that there were ten species of cedar, as it is said, I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the acacia tree, and the myrtle etc.¹²

R. MEIR SAYS EVEN WITH A CORD. It has been taught: R. Meir said, It occurred with the nobility¹³ of Jerusalem that they bound their lulabs with [strands of] gold. They said to him, Is that evidence? They bound it in fact with strands of its own species underneath.¹⁴

Rabbah said to those who bind the hoshanna¹⁵ at the house of the Exilarch, 'When you bind the hoshannas at the house of the Exilarch, [be careful to] leave a handle¹⁶ so that¹⁷ there should be no interposition'.¹⁸ Raba [however] ruled, Whatever is used to beautify it¹⁹ constitutes no interposition.

Rabbah further stated, A man shall not hold the hoshanna²⁰ with a scarf, because it is required that the 'taking'²¹ shall be complete, and in this case it is not. Raba, however, ruled, Taking hold by means of something else is also regarded as a valid 'taking'. Whence, said Raba, do I derive that taking hold by means of something else is also regarded as a valid taking? From what we have learnt: If the hyssop²² is too short,²³ it may be made to suffice with a thread or with a reed and so it is dipped and brought up, but one must hold the hyssop itself when sprinkling.²⁴ Now why [is this²⁵ permitted]? Did not the Divine Law say, And he shall take hyssop and dip?²⁶ May we not then deduce therefrom that taking hold by means of something else is also regarded as a valid 'taking'?²⁷ — But whence the proof? That case²⁸ perhaps is different; since [the thread or reed] was joined on [to the hyssop],²⁹ it is regarded as part of it? — In fact [the deduction is made] from the following: [If the ashes of the Red Heifer] fell [of their own accord] from their tube into the trough they are invalid.³⁰

(1) Sc. would be deprived of the performance of the precept of Sukkah.

(2) Neh. VIII, 15.

(3) Supra 14a.

(4) Since only that which is valid for the lulab is valid for the Sukkah.

(5) Which, in view of R. Judah's restrictions, must be understood to be the material of the planks which he permits for Sukkah-covering.

(6) Had they not been that, they would have been invalid for the Sukkah as well as for the lulab.

(7) As a Sukkah-covering.

(8) A Sukkah.

(9) I.e., even according to R. Judah.

(10) Supra 17b.

(11) Be-rab may also mean simply 'in the school'.

(12) Isa. XLI, 19, which shows that myrtle is also called cedar.

(13) V. supra p. 164, n. 9.

(14) So that the gold bands above them served as a mere ornament.

(15) The term is used for the myrtle or the entire festive wreath, here it is to be understood in the latter sense.

(16) Below the binding.

(17) When the wreath is held in the performance of the precept.

(18) Between the hand of the holder and the wreath. Rabbah holds that according to Pentateuchal law, the binding is unnecessary hence it would form an interposition between one's hand and the wreath.

(19) The wreath.

(20) V. supra n. 7.

(21) With reference to Lev. XXIII, 40.

(22) Used for the sprinkling of the water containing the ashes of the Red Heifer. V. Num. XIX, 6.

(24) Parah XII, 1.

(25) Dipping the hyssop by means of a thread or reed.

(26) Num. XIX, 18, the verb 'to take' being used here as in the case of the lulab.

(27) Nevertheless, in order that he may have a firmer grasp of it for the better sprinkling, he must take hold of the hyssop itself when performing the lustration.

(28) Parah XII, 1.

(29) I.e., to lengthen it.

(30) Parah VI, 1. The ashes were carried in tubes from which they were emptied into a stone trough containing tile water. If the ashes fall into the water of their own accord they become invalid since the putting into the water must be done with intention.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 37b

From this it follows that if the man himself threw them into the water they are [presumably] valid.¹ Now why [should that be so]? Did not the Divine Law say, And they shall take of the ashes . . . and he shall put?² May we not then³ deduce that taking by means of something else is also regarded as a valid 'taking'.

Rabbah further stated, One should not thrust the palm-branch through the bound willow and myrtle⁴ lest some leaves are detached and thus form an interposition.⁵ Raba, however, ruled, A thing of the same species does not constitute an interposition.

Rabbah further stated, One should not shear the palm-branch while it is in the wreath,⁴ since loose leaves⁶ might remain and form an interposition,⁵ Raba however ruled, A thing of the same species does not constitute an interposition.

Rabbah further stated, it is forbidden to smell⁷ a myrtle branch [used] for the [fulfilment of the] commandment,⁸ but it is permitted to smell an ethrog [used] for the [fulfilment of the] commandment. What is the reason? — The myrtle — since it is used as perfume, when it is set apart [for ritual purposes] is set apart from [use as a] perfume: the ethrog, however, since it is used as food, when it is set apart [for ritual purposes] it is set apart [only] from [use as] food.

Rabbah further stated, If a myrtle is attached to the ground, it may be smelt,⁹ if an ethrog is attached to the ground, it may not be smelt. What is the reason? — The myrtle, since it is used as a perfume,¹⁰ [even] if you permit it [to be smelt], the man would not be tempted to cut it; the ethrog, however, since it is used for food, if you permit it [to be smelt] the man might be tempted¹¹ to cut it.¹²

Rabbah further stated, The lulab [must be held]¹³ in the right hand and the ethrog in the left. What is the reason? The former constitutes three commandments¹⁴ and the latter only one.¹⁵

R. Jeremiah enquired of R. Zerika, Why in the blessing¹⁶ do we say only 'To take the palm-branch'?¹⁷ — Because it towers above the others. Then¹⁸ why should not one lift up the ethrog and recite the blessing over it? — The reason is, the other answered him, that as a species it naturally towers above all of them.

MISHNAH. AND WHERE¹⁹ IS [THE LULAB] WAVED? AT THE COMMENCEMENT AND THE CONCLUSION OF THE PSALM, O GIVE THANKS UNTO THE LORD²⁰ AND AT SAVE NOW, WE BESEECH THEE, O LORD.²¹ THESE ARE THE WORDS OF BETH HILLEL. BETH SHAMMAI SAY, ALSO AT O LORD WE BESEECH THEE, SEND NOW PROSPERITY.²² R. AKIBA STATED, I WATCHED R. GAMALIEL AND R. JOSHUA, AND WHILE ALL THE PEOPLE WERE WAVING THEIR LULABS [AT OTHER VERSES], THEY WAVED THEM ONLY AT SAVE NOW, WE BESEECH THEE, O LORD.²²

GEMARA. Who has ever mentioned the name of waving [of the lulab]?²³ — It was mentioned previously:²⁴ A lulab which has a length of three handbreadths, sufficient to wave with it, is valid,²⁵ and in reference to this the Mishnah says, AND WHERE IS THE LULAB WAVED?

We have learnt elsewhere, As to the Two Loaves²⁶ and the Two Lambs of Pentecost,²⁷ how does one proceed? [The priest] places the two loaves upon the two lambs and places his hands beneath them and waves them forwards and backwards, upwards and downwards, as it is said, Which is waved²⁸ and which is heaved²⁹ up.³⁰ R. Johanan explained, [One waves them] to and fro [in honour of] Him to Whom the four directions belong, and up and down [in acknowledgment of] Him to Whom are Heaven and Earth.

In Palestine³¹ they taught us thus: R. Hama b. 'Ukba stated in the name of R. Jose son of R. Hanina, He waves them to and fro in order to restrain harmful winds; up and down, in order to restrain harmful dews. R. Jose b. Abin, or, as some say, R. Jose b. Zebila, observed, This implies that even the dispensable parts¹ of a commandment² prevent calamities; for the waving is obviously a dispensable part of the commandment,³ and yet it shuts out harmful winds and harmful dews. In connection with this Raba remarked, And so with the lulab.⁴ R. Aha b. Jacob used to wave it⁵ to and fro, saying, 'This⁶ is an arrow in the eye of Satan'.⁷ This, however, is not a proper thing [for a man to do] since [Satan] might in consequence be provoked [to let temptation loose] against him.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WAS ON A JOURNEY⁸ AND HAD NO LULAB WHEREWITH TO PERFORM THE PRESCRIBED COMMANDMENT,⁹ WHEN HE COMES HOME HE SHOULD TAKE IT [EVEN IF HE IS] AT TABLE.¹⁰ IF HE DID NOT TAKE THE LULAB IN THE MORNING, HE SHOULD TAKE IT AT ANY TIME BEFORE DUSK, SINCE THE WHOLE DAY¹¹ IS VALID FOR [TAKING] THE LULAB.

GEMARA. You said that he should take it [even if he is] AT TABLE. This then means that he must interrupt [his meal for the purpose]. But is not this in contradiction with the ruling,¹² If they have begun¹³ they need not interrupt [it]?¹⁴ — R. Safra replied, There is no contradiction: The latter statement refers to where there is still time [to perform the commandment] during the day, while the former refers to where there is [otherwise] no time.

Raba retorted, What difficulty is this?¹⁵ Is it not possible [that the difference in ruling is due to the fact that] the former⁵ is a Pentateuchal commandment¹⁶ while the latter¹⁷ is only Rabbinical? Rather, said Raba, if a difficulty at all exists, it is this: [The ruling] HE SHOULD TAKE IT WHEN HE COMES HOME [EVEN IF HE IS] AT TABLE, clearly shows that he must interrupt [his meal], while [the ruling] subsequently taught, IF HE DID NOT TAKE IT DURING THE MORNING HE SHOULD TAKE IT AT ANY TIME BEFORE DUSK shows, [does it not], that he need not interrupt [his meal]? [To this] R. Safra might well reply, There is no difficulty: The latter refers to where there is still time during the day, the former where there is [otherwise] no time.

R. Zera retorted, What difficulty is this?¹⁸ Perhaps it is a religious duty to interrupt [one's meal for the purpose of taking the lulab] but if one did not interrupt it one should take [the lulab] at any time before dusk, since the whole day is valid for the taking of the lulab? Rather, said R. Zera, [The incongruity] indeed is as we said previously;¹⁹ and with regard to your difficulty [why the reply was not given²⁰ that] the former was a Pentateuchal commandment while the latter was only Rabbinical,²¹ the fact is that here we are dealing with the second day of the Festival [the obligation of taking the lulab on] which is only Rabbinical.²² A deduction [from the wording of our Mishnah] also [shows that this is so], since it teaches IF A MAN WAS ON A JOURNEY AND HAD NO LULAB WHEREWITH TO PERFORM THE PRESCRIBED COMMANDMENT. Now if it could possibly have been assumed to refer to the first day of the Festival, [the difficulty would arise] is it permitted [to travel on that day]?²³

MISHNAH. IF A SLAVE, A WOMAN, OR A MINOR RECITED [THE HALLEL]²⁴ TO HIM, HE MUST REPEAT AFTER THEM WHAT THEY SAY,²⁵ (AND A CURSE BE UPON HIM). IF A MAJOR RECITED TO HIM, HE REPEATS AFTER HIM [ONLY] HALLELUJAH.²⁶ WHERE THE CUSTOM OBTAINS TO REPEAT [THE VERSES],²⁷ HE SHOULD REPEAT; [WHERE THE CUSTOM IS] TO SAY THEM ONLY ONCE, HE SHOULD SAY THEM ONCE; [WHERE THE CUSTOM OBTAINS] TO RECITE THE BENEDICTION,²⁸ HE SHOULD RECITE THE BENEDICTION. EVERYTHING IS DEPENDENT ON LOCAL CUSTOM.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis have taught, It has truly²⁹ been laid down that a [minor] son³⁰ may recite [the Grace after meals] for his father,³¹ a slave may recite it for his master, and a wife for her husband; but the Sages said, May a curse come upon that man whose wife and [minor] sons have to recite the benediction for him!³²

Raba observed,

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 38b

One can deduce important decisions from the [present] custom of [reciting the] Hallel.¹ [Thus], since he² says Hallelujah³ and they respond Hallelujah,⁴ it may be inferred that it is a religious duty⁵ to answer Hallelujah.⁶ Since he⁷ says, Praise Him, ye servants of the Lord,⁸ and they [again] respond Hallelujah,⁹ it may be deduced that if a major recites [the Hallel] for one the latter¹⁰ responds Hallelujah.¹¹ Since he⁷ says, Give thanks unto the Lord,¹² and they respond, Give thanks unto the Lord, it may be inferred that it is a religious duty¹⁰ to make a response of the beginning of the sections.¹³ (So it was also stated; R. Hanan b. Raba ruled, It is a religious duty to make a response of the beginning of the sections.) Since he¹⁴ says, Save now, we beseech Thee, O Lord,¹⁵ and they¹⁶ answer, Save now, we beseech Thee, O Lord,¹⁷ it may be inferred that if a minor was reciting it for him, the latter¹⁸ answers after him what he says.¹⁹ Since he¹⁴ says, O Lord, we beseech Thee, send now prosperity,¹⁵ and they¹⁶ respond O, Lord we beseech Thee, send now prosperity, it may be inferred that if a man wishes to double [the verses] he may.²⁰ Since he¹⁴ says, Blessed be he that cometh,²¹ and they²² answer, In the name of the Lord,²¹ it may be inferred that he who hearkens is as though he responded.²⁰

They enquired of R. Hiyya b. Abba, If one listened but did not make the responses — what is the law?²³ — He answered them, The Sages, the Scribes,²⁴ the leaders of the people and the expounders laid down that if a man listened though he did not make the responses he has fulfilled his obligation. So it was also stated:²⁵ R. Simeon b. Pazzi citing R. Joshua b. Levi who had it from Bar Kappara stated, Whence do we know that he who listens is as though he responds? From what is written, Even all the words of the book²⁶ which the King of Judah²⁷ hath read.²⁸ For was it Josiah that read them? Was it not, in fact Shaphan who read them, as it is written, And Shaphan read it²⁹ before the king.³⁰ Consequently it may be inferred that he who listens is as though he responds. But perhaps Josiah read it after Shaphan had read it? — R. Aha b. Jacob replied, This cannot be thought of, since it is written, Because thy heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before the Lord, when thou heardest²⁹ what I spake;³¹ "When thou heardest", not "when thou didst read".

Raba ruled, One should not say Blessed be he that cometh³² and then [pause and] say "in the name of the Lord,"³² but "Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord"³² all together.³³ (R. Safra said to him,

(1) [In former days it was customary for the congregation to rely on the Reader for the recital of the Hallel, and in order to enable them to participate actively in the recital, a number of customs were introduced. In the days of Raba the congregation read it themselves, yet certain features of the former procedure were retained as reminders.]

(11) [I.e., after every clause. As a reminder of this custom the congregants in the days of Raba responded Hallelujah after "Praise him, ye servants of the Lord". This custom is not followed nowadays.]

(12) Ps. CXVIII, 1.

(13) Whereas the mere response of Hallelujah is sufficient for single clauses, this is not enough for the beginning of the sections.

(14) The Reader who recites to the congregation in the Synagogue.

(16) Though they subsequently recite themselves all the Psalm.

Raba ruled, One should not say,⁵ 'May His great Name' and then [pause and] say, 'be blessed' but 'May His great Name be blessed' all together. R. Safra said to him, 'Moses!¹ Do you speak aright? The fact is that both here and there⁶ it⁷ is the conclusion of the clause and the pause does not matter'.

WHERE THE CUSTOM OBTAINS TO REPEAT. It was taught, Rabbi used to repeat [certain] words in it,⁸ R. Eleazar b. Perata used to augment [certain] words in it.⁹ What is meant by 'augment'? — Abaye explained, He augmented the doubling beginning with 'I will give thanks unto Thee'¹⁰ to the end of the Psalm.¹¹

[WHERE THE CUSTOM OBTAINS] TO RECITE THE BENEDICTION, HE SHOULD RECITE THE BENEDICTION. Abaye explained, This was taught only with regard to the concluding benediction,¹² but with regard to the preceding benediction,¹² it is a positive commandment to say it, for Rab Judah citing Samuel ruled, With all commandments the benediction is to be recited 'ober [prior] to their performance. And whence do we know that the word 'ober means prior? — R.¹³ Nahman b. Isaac replied, Since it is written, Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain and he overran¹⁴ the Cushite.¹⁵ Abaye said the inference is from the following verse. And he himself passed over¹⁶ before them.¹⁷ And if you wish, you may infer from the verse, And their king is passed¹⁸ on before them, and the Lord at the head of them.¹⁹

GEMARA. What is the position if the other²³ is unwilling to give him it²⁴ as a gift? — R. Huna replied, He should include²⁵ the price of the ethrog in that of the palm-branch.²⁶ But why should he not pay him directly?²⁷ — Because one must not hand over money for fruit of the Sabbatical Year to an 'am ha-arez.²⁸ For it has been taught, A man must not hand over money to an 'am ha-arez for fruit of the Sabbatical Year²⁹ more than is sufficient for three meals,³⁰ but if he handed [him] over [more]³¹ he should say, 'This money³² shall be exchanged³³ for [the ordinary] fruit which I have in my house'³⁴ and [the purchaser] eats the fruit¹ [as though it has] the sanctity of the Sabbatical Year. This² however, applies only where one buys from what is hefker,³ but if one buys from protected produce⁴ it⁵ is forbidden [to buy] even for as little as half an issar.

R. Shesheth objected, And [if a man buys] from what is hefker [may he pay, you say, for] three meals and no more? I will point out contradictions: Rue, asparagus, fenugreek,⁶ coriander of the mountains, water-parsley and meadow-eruca are always exempt from tithe and may be bought from anyone⁷ in the Sabbatical Year, since the like of these is not guarded.⁸ He⁹ raised the objection and he himself replied to it: They¹⁰ taught [that only as much as is] sufficient for one's food¹¹ [may be bought]. And so said Rabbah b. bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan. They¹⁰ taught [that only as much as is] sufficient for food¹¹ [may be bought]. (How do we know that 'man'¹² means food? — Since it is written, And the king appointed¹³ for them a daily portion of the king's food.)¹⁴

But if so,¹⁵ the lulab also¹⁶ [should not be bought]?¹⁷ — The lulab is a product of the sixth year which entered the seventh.¹⁸ But if so, is not the ethrog also a product of the sixth year which entered the seventh? — In the case of the ethrog we compute from the time of its gathering.¹⁹ But surely, both R. Gamaliel and R. Eliezer²⁰ agree that as regards the Sabbatical Year we compute the year of the ethrog from its time of blossoming, as we have learnt, The ethrog is like a tree in three respects, and like a vegetable in one. It is like a tree in three respects, as regards the laws of ‘orlah,²¹ of the Fourth Year, and of the Seventh Year;²² and like a vegetable in one respect

- (22) I.e., that the year of its growth is the one in which it blossoms.

in that its tithing is determined by the time of its gathering.¹ So R. Gamaliel. R. Eliezer ruled, The ethrog is like a tree in all respects?² — He³ holds the same opinion as that Tanna of whom it has been taught: R. Jose stated, Abtolmos gave evidence in the name of five elders that the tithing of the ethrog depends upon [the time of its] gathering,⁴ but our Rabbis voted in Usha⁵ and laid down [that this⁶ applies] both to tithing and the Sabbatical Year.⁷ But who mentioned the Sabbatical Year?⁸ — There is a lacuna in the text, and so it⁷ should be read: The tithing of the ethrog depends upon [the time of its] gathering, and its subjection to the laws of the Sabbatical Year depends on [the time of its] blossoming, but our Rabbis voted in Usha and laid down that the ethrog is dependent on the time of its gathering as regards both tithing and the Sabbatical Year.⁹

The reason then for the [permission to purchase a] lulab¹⁰ is¹¹ that it is [the product of] the sixth year which entered the seventh, but if it were of the Sabbatical Year it would have been sacred? But why? Is it not mere wood, and wood does not possess the sanctity of the Sabbatical Year, as it has been taught,¹² Leaves of reeds and leaves of the vine which have been heaped up as a hiding-place upon a field, if they were gathered for [animal] food, they possess the sanctity of the Sabbatical Year, but if they were gathered for firewood, they have not the sanctity of the Sabbatical Year?¹³ — There¹³ the case is different, since Scripture says, ‘For you for food’¹⁴ thus comparing ‘for you’ to ‘for food’, i.e., that [product is forbidden] the benefit from which comes at the time of its consumption;¹⁵ firewood therefore is excluded since the benefit from it¹⁶ comes after its consumption.¹⁷ But is there not the wood of the pine tree,¹⁸ the benefit from which is derived at the same time as its consumption?¹⁹ — Raba replied, Wood, as a rule, is used for heating.²⁰

And the question of whether [the restrictions of the Sabbatical Year apply to] wood that is used for heating²¹ is one in dispute between Tannas, as it has been taught: The produce of the Sabbatical Year may not be used²² either for steeping or for washing. R. Jose ruled, they may be so used.²³ What is the reason of the first Tanna? — Because Scripture says ‘for food’²⁴ [implying] but not for steeping or for washing. What is the reason of R. Jose? — Because Scripture says, ‘for you’²⁴ [implying], ‘for all your needs’, even for steeping and for washing. But, according to the first Tanna, is it not written, ‘for you’? — That ‘for you’ is compared with ‘for food’, viz., the benefit from which comes at the same time as its consumption, thus excluding [produce used for] steeping and washing the benefit from which comes after their consumption.²⁵ But according to R. Jose, is it not written ‘for food’? — He employs this phrase for the deduction, ‘for food’, but not for an emollient, as it has been taught, ‘for food’, but not for an emollient. You say that ‘for food’ implies but not for an emollient; why not say, ‘[For food]’ but not for washing? When it says, ‘for you’ washing is included, what then can I deduce from the phrase, ‘for food’? ‘For food’, but not for an emollient. But what reason do you see for including washing and excluding an emollient?

(1) If, for instance, it blossomed in the second year of the Septennial Cycle and was gathered in the third, the ‘poor man’s tithe’ (due in the latter year) must be given in addition to the first tithe, and not ‘second tithe’ which is due in the second year.

(2) Bik. II, 6; even as regard tithes. How then could it be maintained supra that the Tanna of our Mishnah holds that the year of the ethrog is the one in which it is gathered?

(18) Used for torches.

(19) Why then should not the laws of the Sabbatical Year apply to it where it was gathered for lighting purposes?

(20) So that the benefit cannot be derived until it is consumed. Hence its exemption from the laws of the Sabbatical Year even where it was expressly gathered for lighting.

I include washing since¹ it is a requirement common to all men and exclude an emollient since it is not common to all men.² Who is the author of that [statement] which our Rabbis taught: 'For food' implies but not for an emollient, 'for food', but not for perfume, 'for food' but not for an emetic? — In agreement with whom is this statement? It is in agreement with R. Jose;³ for were it [to be suggested, with] the Rabbis,⁴ [it could be retorted,] surely there is also steeping and washing [to be excluded].⁵

R. Eleazar ruled, The produce of the Sabbatical Year can be redeemed⁶ only by way of sale,⁷ while R. Johanan ruled, Either by way of sale or by way of exchange.⁸ What is the reason of R. Eleazar? — Since it is written, In this year of jubilee ye shall return etc.⁹ and there follows immediately the verse, And if thou sell ought to thy neighbour,¹⁰ [which implies,]¹¹ only by way of sale,¹² but not by way of exchange. And what is the reason of R. Johanan? — Since it is written, For it is a jubilee, it shall be holy;¹³ just as sacred objects can be redeemed either by way of sale or by way of exchange, so the produce of the Sabbatical Year can be redeemed either by way of sale or by way of exchange. But what does R. Johanan do with the verse, 'And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour'?¹⁴ — He requires it in accordance with the statement of R. Jose b. Hanina, as it has been taught,¹⁵ R. Jose b. Hanina observed, Come and see how serious is [even] the dust¹⁶ of the Sabbatical Year,¹⁷ etc. For if a man merely trades with the produce of the Sabbatical Year, the result is that he will eventually have to sell his movables and his tools, as it is said, 'In this year of jubilee ye shall return, each man to his possession'¹⁸ and there immediately follows the verse, 'And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour etc.'¹⁹

What, however, does R. Eleazar do with the verse of R. Johanan? — He needs it in accordance with what has been taught, 'For it is a jubilee, it shall be holy unto you';²⁰ just as with holy objects the money [for which it is redeemed] assumes the same sanctity,²¹ so with the products of the Sabbatical Year, the money [for which it is redeemed] assumes the same sanctity.

It has been taught in agreement with R. Eleazar, and it has also been taught in agreement with R. Johanan. It has been taught in agreement with R. Eleazar: [In the case of the produce of] the Sabbatical Year the money [for which it is exchanged] assumes the same sanctity [as the produce itself], for it is said, 'For it is a jubilee it shall be holy unto you';²⁰ just as with holy objects the money [for which it is redeemed] assumes the sanctity [of the holy object], and becomes forbidden, so with the produce of the Sabbatical Year, the money [for which it is redeemed] assumes the same sanctity [as the produce] and becomes forbidden. [But] in case [you would say] that just as, with holy objects, the money [for which it is redeemed] assumes its sanctity and [the holy object itself] becomes profaned, so also with the produce of the Sabbatical Year, the money for which it is redeemed assumes its sanctity and the [produce itself] becomes profaned Scripture explicitly says, 'it shall be'²⁰ i.e., it remains in its original consecrated state. How so? If with the produce of the Sabbatical Year one purchased meat, both the meat²² and the produce²³ must be removed²⁴ during the Sabbatical Year. If, however, one purchased with the meat fish, the meat²⁵ emerges [from the sanctity of the produce of the Sabbatical Year], and the fish assumes it. If one purchased with the fish wine, the fish emerges [from the sanctity of the produce of the Sabbatical Year], and the wine assumes it. If one purchased with the wine oil, the wine emerges [from Its state of sanctity] and the oil assumes it. How does this come about? The last [object for which the previous one is redeemed] assumes [the sanctity] of the Sabbatical Year,²⁶ but the produce itself²⁷ remains under restriction.²⁸

Now since the term 'purchased' repeatedly is used, it is evident that only by way of sale [does it become redeemed], but not by way of exchange.²⁹

It was taught in agreement with R. Johanan: Both the produce of the Sabbatical Year and of the Second Tithe may be redeemed³⁰ with cattle, beast or fowl, whether live or slaughtered. These are the words of R. Meir, while the Sages ruled, With slaughtered [animals and fowls] they may be redeemed,³⁰ but not with live ones, this being a preventive measure against one's possible rearing of flocks³¹ from them.³²

Raba said, The dispute³³ applies only

(1) Like the eating of 'food'.

(2) Thus it has been shown that the first Tanna who excludes steeping and washing, on the ground that the produce is already consumed by the time the benefit is derived from it, excludes also for the same reason, wood that is used for heating, while R. Jose who does not exclude steeping and washing does not exclude wood either.

(8) By declaring 'This produce is exchange for this money'.

to male [animals and birds],¹ but with regard to female ones, all agree that they may be redeemed with slaughtered ones, but not with live ones, since a preventive measure has been enacted against one's possible rearing of flocks from them.

R. Ashi said, The dispute² concerns only the original produce itself,³ but with regard to secondary produce,⁴ both agree that [it can be redeemed] either by way of sale, or by way of exchange: and the reason that the term 'purchased' was continually repeated⁵ is that since in the first clause the term 'purchased' was used it was used in the latter clause also.⁶

Rabina raised an objection against R. Ashi, [It has been taught]: If a man has a sela' of [the proceeds of the produce of] the Sabbatical Year,⁷ and wishes to purchase therewith a shirt,⁸ how should he proceed?⁹ Let him go to his regular shopkeeper¹⁰ and say to him, 'Give me a sela' worth of fruit' and give it to him.¹¹ Then he tells him, 'Behold this fruit¹² is given to you as a gift',¹³ and [the shopkeeper] answers him, 'And here is a gift for you of a sela''¹⁴ And the latter may purchase with it whatsoever he desires.¹⁵ Now here, surely, the sela' is a secondary produce,¹⁶ and yet it teaches, does it not, [that it may be redeemed only] by way of sale, and not by way of exchange?¹⁷ — Rather, said R. Ashi, the dispute [of R. Eleazar and R. Johanan] centres round the secondary produce, but with regard to the primary produce all agree that [it may be redeemed] only by way of sale, and not by way of exchange; and as to what has been stated,¹⁸ 'Both the produce of the Sabbatical Year and of the Second Tithe [may be redeemed by exchange]',¹⁹ what is meant by 'the produce of the Sabbatical Year' is the money for which the produce is exchanged. For if you will not say so, then 'tithe' also must mean actual tithe,²⁰ surely it is written, Thou shalt bind the money in thy hand?²¹ Consequently it must mean the money for which tithe [was exchanged],²² and so here also it means the money for which the produce of the Sabbatical Year [is exchanged].

MISHNAH. FORMERLY²³ THE LULAB WAS TAKEN FOR SEVEN DAYS IN THE TEMPLE, AND IN THE PROVINCES²⁴ FOR ONE DAY ONLY. WHEN THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED, R. JOHANAN R. ZAKKAI INSTITUTED THAT THE LULAB SHOULD BE TAKEN IN THE PROVINCES FOR SEVEN DAYS IN MEMORY OF THE TEMPLE, [AND HE ALSO INSTITUTED] THAT ON THE WHOLE OF THE DAY OF WAVING²⁵ IT SHALL BE FORBIDDEN [TO EAT THE NEW PRODUCE OF THE YEAR].²⁶

GEMARA. Whence do we know that we must perform [ceremonies] in memory of the Temple? — R. Johanan replied, Since Scripture says, For I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds, saith the Lord, Because they have called thee an outcast. She is Zion, there is none that seeketh for her.²⁷ 'There is none that seeketh for her', implies that she should be sought.²⁸

AND THAT ON THE WHOLE OF THE DAY OF WAVING. What is the reason? — The Temple may be rebuilt speedily, and people²⁹ would say, 'Did we not eat [the new corn] last year from the time that day dawned in the East? Let us now also eat it [from the same time]' and they would be unaware of the fact that in the previous year, when there was no Temple, once day dawned in the East it was permitted [to eat of the new corn], but now that the Temple is rebuilt, it is only the [waving of the] 'omer which [commences] the permission.³⁰

But when [does this assume the Temple to be] rebuilt? If you will say that it is rebuilt on the sixteenth [of Nisan], then obviously it is permitted to eat from the time that day dawned in the East?³¹ If, however, it is rebuilt on the fifteenth³² why should it not be permitted after midday, for surely we have learnt, Those that lived at a distance³³ were permitted [to eat of the new corn] from midday³⁴ onwards, because [they knew that] the Beth din would not be negligent in the matter?³⁵ — This³⁶ was necessary [only in case] it is rebuilt at night,³⁷ or [on the fifteenth] close to sunset.³⁸ R.³⁹ Nahman b. Isaac replied, R. Johanan b. Zakkai instituted this in accordance with a principle of R.

- (15) The fruit becomes sacred and being given as a gift, can be eaten by the shopkeeper. The money has become redeemed in the process of exchange and can, therefore, be used to purchase anything.

- (17) Had the latter way been permitted there would have been no need to go to a shopkeeper. It would have sufficed for the man to redeem the sela' with any produce he has in his own house. How then could R. Ashi maintain that secondary produce may be redeemed by way of exchange?

Until this self-same day,¹ [which means] until the very day itself, and he is of the opinion that the expression 'until' is meant to include [the terminus in the prohibition].² But does he³ hold a similar opinion?⁴ Does he not in fact disagree with him, as we have learnt,⁵ When the Temple was destroyed, R. Johanan b. Zakkai instituted that on the whole of the Day of the Waving it should be forbidden [to eat of the new corn]. Said R. Judah to him, But⁶ is it not forbidden Pentateuchally, since it is written, 'Until the self-same day'⁷ [which means] until the very day itself?⁸ — It is R. Judah who was under a misapprehension, He thought that [R. Johanan b. Zakkai] meant that it⁹ was forbidden as a Rabbinical prohibition, but it is not so. He meant it as a Pentateuchal prohibition. But does it not say, 'He instituted'?¹⁰ — What is meant by 'he instituted' is that he expounded (the Pentateuchal verse)¹¹ and instituted the law accordingly.

MISHNAH. IF THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL¹² FALLS ON A SABBATH, ALL THE PEOPLE BRING THEIR LULABS TO THE SYNAGOGUE [ON THE PREVIOUS DAY]. ON THE MORROW THEY ARISE EARLY [AND COME TO THE SYNAGOGUE] AND EACH ONE RECOGNIZES HIS OWN [LULAB] AND TAKES IT, SINCE THE SAGES LAID DOWN THAT NO ONE CAN FULFIL HIS OBLIGATION ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL WITH THE LULAB OF HIS FELLOW. BUT ON THE OTHER DAYS OF THE FESTIVAL A MAN MAY FULFIL HIS OBLIGATION WITH THE LULAB OF HIS FELLOW. R. JOSE RULED, IF THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL FELL ON THE SABBATH, AND A MAN FORGOT AND CARRIED OUT HIS LULAB INTO A PUBLIC DOMAIN, HE IS NOT CULPABLE, SINCE HE BROUGHT IT OUT WHILE UNDER THE INFLUENCE [OF A RELIGIOUS ACT].¹³ GEMARA. Whence do we know this?¹⁴ — From what our Rabbis have taught, 'And ye shall take'¹⁵ [implies] that there should be a 'taking' with the hand of each individual, 'to you,' implies that it should be yours, excluding a borrowed or a stolen [lulab]. From this verse the Sages deduced that no one can fulfil his obligation on the first day of the Festival with the lulab of his fellow, unless the latter gave it to him as a gift. And it once happened that when R. Gamaliel, R. Joshua, R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah and R. Akiba were travelling on a ship¹⁶ and R. Gamaliel alone had a lulab which he had bought for one thousand zuz, R. Gamaliel took it and fulfilled his obligation with it; then he gave it as a gift to R. Joshua who took it, fulfilled his obligation with it and gave it as a gift to R. Eleazar b. 'Azariah who took it, fulfilled his obligation with it, and gave it as a gift to R. Akiba who took it, fulfilled his obligation with it and then returned it to R. Gamaliel.

Why does he need mention that he¹⁷ returned it?¹⁸ — He teaches us something incidentally viz., that a gift made on condition that it be returned constitutes a valid gift; as also follows from what Raba said: [If a man say to his fellow], 'Here is an ethrog [as a gift] on condition that you return it to me', and the latter took it and fulfilled his obligation with it, if he returned it, he is regarded as having fulfilled his obligation,¹⁹ but if he did not return it, he is regarded as not having fulfilled his obligation.²⁰

For what purpose need he mention that [R. Gamaliel] had bought it for one thousand zuz? — In order to let you know how precious to them was the opportunity of fulfilling a religious duty.

Mar b. Amemar said to R. Ashi, My father used to recite his prayers [while holding the lulab in his hand].²¹ It was objected: A man should not hold his tefillin in his hand or a Scroll of the Law in his bosom while reciting his prayers,²² nor [while wearing his tefillin] should he let water, or doze or sleep.²³ And in connection with this Samuel said, The same²⁴ applies to a knife,²⁵ a dish,²⁶ a loaf of bread²⁷ and money?²⁸ — In the latter cases he is not performing a religious duty²⁹ and, therefore, would worry over them³⁰ but in the former one³¹ he is fulfilling a religious duty³² and, therefore, he would not worry over it.³³

It has been taught, R. Eleazar b. Zadok stated, This was the custom of the men³⁴ of Jerusalem. When a man left his house he carried his lulab in his hand; when he went to the synagogue his lulab was in his hand, when he read the Shema³⁵ and his prayers³⁶ his lulab was still in his hand, but when he read in the Law or³⁷ recited the priestly benediction³⁸ he would lay it on the ground.³⁹ If he went to visit the sick or to comfort mourners, he would go with his lulab in his hand, but when he entered the House of Study, he would send his lulab by the hand of his son, his slave or his messenger.⁴⁰ What does this⁴¹ teach us? — It serves to inform you how zealous they were in the performance of religious duties.

R. JOSE RULED, [IF THE FIRST DAY OF] THE FESTIVAL etc. Abaye stated,

 - (19) Because the condition on which the gift was dependent was duly carried out.
 - (20) Since the gift was dependent upon the condition of his returning it, which was not complied with.
 - (21) The fulfilment of the duty of lulab was so dear to him that he did not wish to part with it even during prayer.

 - (23) In case he might drop them (cf. supra 26a).

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 42a

They taught [that he is not culpable] only when he had not yet fulfilled his obligation,¹ but if he had fulfilled his obligation,¹ he is guilty of a transgression.² But has he not fulfilled his obligation³ the moment he lifted it up?⁴ — Abaye answered, [This is a case] where he held it upside down.⁵ Raba replied, You may even say that he did not hold it upside down,⁶ but here we are dealing with a case where he carried it out in a vessel. But is it not Raba himself who laid down that taking by means of something else is regarded as a valid taking?⁷ — That applies only [where the taking with something else is done] as a mark of respect, but not [if it is done] in a disrespectful manner.⁸

R. Huna stated, R. Jose used to say, A fowl [offered as] a burnt-offering⁹ that was found¹⁰ among other fowls¹¹ and [the priest] thought that it was a fowl of a sin-offering, and ate it, he is not culpable.¹² What, however, does he¹³ teach us by this ruling? Is it that if a man errs in connection with a matter of religious duty he is exempt? But this is, is it not, exactly the same [as the one in our Mishnah]?¹⁴ — It might have been assumed that only there¹⁵ is the man not culpable when he errs in connection with a matter of religious duty, because [by his very mistake] he performs a religious duty,¹⁶ but here,¹⁷ where, by erring in connection with a matter of religious duty he does not perform another religious duty,¹⁸ might have said that he is culpable, therefore he¹⁹ informs us [that even here he is not culpable].

An objection was raised: R. Jose ruled, If a man slaughters on the Sabbath the daily offering which has not been properly examined,²⁰ he is liable to bring a sin-offering²¹ and another daily offering must be offered!²² — The other answered him, That case lies in a different category,²³ for concerning it it has been stated: R. Samuel b. Hattai citing R. Hamnuna Saba²⁴ who cited it in the name of R. Isaac b. Ashian who had it from R. Huna who cited Rab, explained, This is a case, for instance, where the daily offering was brought from a chamber that contained animals which had not been examined.²⁵

MISHNAH. A WOMAN MAY TAKE [THE LULAB] FROM THE HAND OF HER SON OR FROM THE HAND OF HER HUSBAND AND PUT IT BACK IN WATER²⁶ ON THE SABBATH.²⁷ R. JUDAH RULED, ON THE SABBATH IT MAY BE PUT BACK [INTO THE WATER IN WHICH IT WAS PREVIOUSLY KEPT],²⁸ ON A FESTIVAL DAY²⁹ [WATER] MAY BE ADDED,³⁰ AND ON THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS [OF THE FESTIVAL THE WATER] MAY ALSO BE CHANGED. A MINOR³¹ WHO KNOWS HOW TO SHAKE [THE LULAB] IS SUBJECT TO THE OBLIGATION OF LULAB.

GEMARA. Is not this³² obvious? — I might have said that, since a woman does not come under the obligation [of lulab] she may not take it,³³ therefore he informs us [that she may].³⁴

A MINOR WHO KNOWS HOW TO SHAKE THE [LULAB]. Our Rabbis taught, A minor who knows how to shake [the lulab] is³⁵ subject to the obligation of the lulab;³⁶ [if he knows how] to wrap himself [with the tallith]³⁷ he is subject to the obligation of zizith;³⁸ [if he knows how] to look after tefillin, his father must acquire tefillin for him; if he is able to speak, his father must teach him Torah and the reading of the Shema'. What [in this context] could be meant by Torah? — R.

Hamnuna replied, [The Scriptural verse] Moses commanded us a Law, an inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.³⁹ What [in this context] is meant by the Shema'? — The first verse.⁴⁰ If [the minor] knows how to take care of his body⁴¹ we may eat food that has been prepared in ritual purity though his body [touched it]; if he knows how to take care of hands,⁴² we may eat food that has been prepared in ritual purity even though his hands [touched it]. If he knows how to answer [questions on whether he touched any ritual uncleanness], a doubtful case on his part⁴³ that occurs in a private domain is regarded as unclean, but if in a public domain as clean.⁴⁴ [If he⁴⁵ knows how] to spread out his hands [in priestly benediction]⁴⁶ *terumah*³⁷ may be shared out to him in the threshing-floors.⁴⁷

- (1) Before he left his house.
 - (2) Since at the time he left his house he could not have been under the influence of a religious act.
 - (3) Of 'taking' the lulab.
 - (4) Of course he did. How then is it possible ever to leave one's house with a lulab in hand without having ipso facto fulfilled the prescribed duty?
 - (5) The obligation is not fulfilled unless it is held as it grows naturally (cf. infra 45b).
 - (6) The reason is explained presently.
 - (7) Supra 37a.
 - (8) If one takes it with the scarf one wears out of respect, it is valid but if one carries it out in a vessel, thus showing lack of respect, it is not valid.
 - (9) The burnt-offering was forbidden to be eaten, since all of it had to be consumed on the altar.
 - (10) At the south western side of the altar where, in addition to burnt-offerings of fowls, sin-offerings of fowls were also sometimes offered.
 - (11) Lit., 'wings'.
 - (12) Sc. is exempt from a trespass-offering which the eating of it would otherwise have entailed. Since the eating of a sin-offering is a religious duty, no offence is committed by the man who, intending to do a good deed, has mistakenly eaten the wrong bird.
 - (13) R. Huna.
 - (14) When R. Jose informs us that if one errs in connection with a matter of religious duty he is not culpable. Why then should R. Huna merely repeat a ruling of our Mishnah?
 - (15) In our Mishnah.
 - (16) That of taking the lulab.
 - (17) In R. Huna's ruling.
 - (18) Since the fowl is a burnt-offering no religious duty is performed in eating it.
 - (19) R. Huna.
 - (20) To ascertain whether it was free from blemishes.
 - (21) Because a daily offering that has not been previously examined is invalid, and by slaughtering it on the Sabbath one is guilty of doing forbidden work.
 - (22) Now since R. Jose holds the man liable to bring a sin-offering it follows that if one errs in connection with a matter of religious duty without performing one, he is culpable. An objection against R. Huna.
 - (23) Lit., 'outside that (case)'.
 - (24) The Elder.
 - (25) The man had no right at all to take an animal from an unexamined supply and his act, therefore, is not a mistake committed when under the anxiety of performing a religious duty, but almost a wilful transgression.
 - (26) To prevent it from withering.
 - (27) And she is not guilty of moving an object that is useless to her.

 - (29) Which is subject to lesser restrictions than the Sabbath.
 - (30) But not changed.
 - (31) Under the age of thirteen years and one day.
 - (32) That A WOMAN MAY TAKE THE LULAB etc.
 - (33) Since she is carrying on the festival an object that is useless to her.

- (34) Since the lulab is suitable for the man it has the status of a 'vessel' which may be moved by everybody.

- (42) Cf. prev. n. mut. mut.
- (43) Sc. if he answer that he is in doubt.
- (44) Cf. Sot. 28a. Any doubtful case of uncleanness is regarded as clean if it is in a public domain and unclean if in a private one.
- (45) Being a priest.
- (46) I.e., he actually performs the precept in public (Rashi). Num. VI, 24ff. Cf. P.B. p. 53.
- (47) Where the sharing of the terumah to the priests took place publicly. As such a boy may obviously be relied upon (cf. Meg. 24a) to preserve the terumah in its levitical purity, it may be given to him even in public. (V. Tosaf). If he is unable to 'spread his hands' he cannot be assumed to know how to take proper care of terumah and, therefore, only those who know him personally to be able to do it may privately send terumah to his house (cf. Yeb. 99b).

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 42b

If he knows how to slaughter [animals ritually]¹ we may eat from [the meat of animals] which he has slaughtered. R. Huna explained: This applies only where an adult was standing by his side [when he performed the act].² If [a child] is able to eat an olive size of [bread made of] corn,³ one⁴ must remove oneself a distance of at least four cubits from his excrement or water.⁵ R. Hisda explained: This applies only where the child is able to consume it⁶ in the time [which it takes an ordinary adult] to eat half a loaf.⁷ (R. Hiyya the son of R. Yeba observed, But in the case of an adult [the law⁸ applies] even if he cannot eat it⁶ in the time [which it takes a normal person] to eat half a loaf, since it is written, He that increaseth knowledge⁹ increaseth sorrow.)¹⁰ If [a child] can eat an olive of roast meat, the Paschal lamb may be slaughtered on his behalf,¹¹ as it is said, According to the eating of every man.¹² R. Judah ruled, [This¹³ is not allowed] until he is able to pick out an eatable. In what manner? — If he is given a splinter, he throws it away; if he is given a nut, he eats it.

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. [THE CEREMONIALS OF] THE LULAB AND THE WILLOW¹⁴ [CONTINUED FOR] SIX [DAYS] OR¹⁵ SEVEN; THE [RECITAL OF THE WHOLE] HALLEL¹⁶ AND THE REJOICING¹⁷ [CONTINUED FOR] EIGHT [DAYS]; [THE DWELLING IN A] SUKKAH AND THE WATER LIBATION¹⁸ SEVEN [DAYS]; THE FLUTE PLAYING¹⁹ FIVE²⁰ OR SIX [DAYS].²¹

'[THE CEREMONIALS OF] THE LULAB . . . SEVEN'. HOW IS THIS? IF THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL FELL ON A SABBATH, THE LULAB [IS CARRIED FOR] SEVEN DAYS; BUT [IF IT FELL] ON ANY OTHER DAY, [IT IS CARRIED ONLY] FOR SIX.²²

'THE WILLOW . . . SEVEN DAYS'. HOW IS THIS? IF THE SEVENTH DAY OF [THE CEREMONIALS OF] THE WILLOW FELL ON SABBATH, [THEY LAST] SEVEN DAYS; IF IT FELL ON ANY OTHER DAY, [THEY LAST ONLY] SIX.²³

HOW WAS [THE CEREMONIAL OF] THE LULAB CARRIED OUT?²⁴ IF THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL FELL ON A SABBATH, THEY BROUGHT THEIR LULABS TO THE

TEMPLE MOUNT, AND THE ATTENDANTS RECEIVED THEM AND ARRANGED THEM IN ORDER UPON THE PORTICO,²⁵ WHILE THE ELDERS²⁶ LAID THEIRS IN A CHAMBER.²⁷ AND THE PEOPLE WERE INSTRUCTED TO SAY, 'WHOSOEVER GETS MY LULAB IN HIS HAND, LET IT BE HIS AS A GIFT'.²⁸ ON THE MORROW THEY AROSE BETIMES, AND CAME [TO THE TEMPLE MOUNT] AND THE ATTENDANTS THREW DOWN [THEIR LULABS] BEFORE THEM, AND THEY SNATCHED AT THEM, AND SO THEY USED TO COME TO BLOWS WITH ONE ANOTHER. WHEN THE BETH DIN, HOWEVER, SAW THAT THEY REACHED A STATE OF DANGER, THEY INSTITUTED THAT EACH MAN SHOULD TAKE [HIS LULAB] IN HIS OWN HOME.

GEMARA. But why [should it be forbidden to carry the lulab on the Sabbath]?²⁹ It³⁰ involves only a mere movement, why then³¹ should it not override the Sabbath?³² — Rabbah answered, It³³ is a restrictive measure, lest a man take [the lulab] in his hand and go to an expert in order to learn [the rites connected with it]

- (1) Though he is not well-versed in the various laws associated with it (Rashi).
 - (2) And the adult testifies that all the ritual laws associated with it were duly observed.
 - (3) Of any of the following five species: Wheat, barley, spelt, oats and rye.
 - (4) Who desires to read his prayers or any sacred matter.
 - (5) Since they emit an offensive odour.
 - (6) The olive size of bread.
 - (7) Sc. an amount of bread that suffices for two ordinary meals. A whole loaf suffices for four meals (cf. 'Er. 82b). If it takes him a longer time he is in the same legal position as one who eats the size of half an olive on one day and the size of another half on the following day, in which case the two are not combined to form the prescribed minimum.
 - (8) To remove oneself etc.
 - (9) Sc. the adult, as compared with the child.

 - (18) After the offering of the regular daily morning offering during the Festival (cf. Yoma 26b).
 - (19) In connection with the water drawing.
 - (20) If a Sabbath occurred during the middle of the Festival.
 - (21) If the first day happened to be a Sabbath. Since the flute may not be played on the Sabbath and on the first and last day of the Festival, three days have to be deducted from the eight in the former case (cf. prev. n.) and only two (the first and the last) in the latter case where Sabbath coincides with the first and last Festival days. Each of the items mentioned in the Mishnah is dealt with at length in the subsequent Mishnahs, where it is fully explained.
 - (22) The lulab may be carried on Sabbath on the first day only. If the first day was not Sabbath, one of the succeeding days was, and on this Sabbath it was not permitted to be carried.

and thereby he will be carrying it for four cubits through a public domain.¹ And the same reason applies to the shofar,² and the same reason applies to the megillah.³

But if so, let it⁴ apply to the first day⁵ also? — ‘The first day’ you say? Did not our Rabbis institute that it should be taken in one's home?⁶ — That is quite correct as from after this enactment, but what can you answer as regards the time before the enactment? — The fact is that with regard to the first day, the obligation to take the lulab on which is Pentateuchal even in the Provinces⁷ the Rabbis⁸ did not enact a restrictive measure,⁹ but with regard to the other days [the command to take the lulab on which] does not Pentateuchally obtain in the Provinces,¹⁰ the Rabbis did enact a restrictive measure.¹¹

But if this is so,¹² the same law should obtain at the present time also?¹³ — We do not know when the New Moon was fixed.¹⁴ But why should it not override the Sabbath¹⁵ for them¹⁶ since they know when the New Moon was fixed? — The law is indeed so; for in our Mishnah we have learnt, IF THE FIRST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL, FELL ON A SABBATH, all the people BROUGHT THEIR LULABS TO THE TEMPLE MOUNT, while in another Mishnah we have learnt [that they brought them] to the Synagogue,¹⁷ consequently you may deduce from these that the former refers to the time when the Temple was in existence while the latter refers to the time when the Temple was no longer in existence.¹⁸ This is conclusive.¹⁹

Whence do we derive that [the taking of the lulab] is a Pentateuchal obligation in the Provinces? — From what has been taught: And ye shall take²⁰ teaches that the lulab must be taken in the hand of each one; to you teaches²¹ that it must be yours, thus excluding a borrowed or a stolen [lulab]; on the day²² implies, even if it be the Sabbath; first²³ implies²⁴ even in the Province; the first²⁵ teaches that it overrides the first day of the Festival only.²⁶

The Master said, ‘On the day²⁷ implies, even if it be Sabbath.’ But consider: [The taking of the lulab] is ordinary carrying. Is a Scriptural verse then necessary to permit ordinary carrying?²⁸ Raba answered, It was necessary to have it only with regard to the preliminaries of the lulab,²⁹ and this is in accordance with a ruling of that Tanna of whom it has been taught, The lulab and all its preliminaries²⁹ override the Sabbath, so R. Eliezer.³⁰

What is the reason of R. Eliezer? — Scripture says, ‘on the day,’ implying, even the Sabbath. But what do the Rabbis³¹ make of the expression, on the day? — They need it to infer from it that on the day, [is the lulab to be taken] but not at night. Then whence does R. Eliezer deduce that [the lulab is to be taken] by day, and not at night? — He deduces it from the conclusion of the verse, ‘And ye shall rejoice before the Lord your God for seven days’, ‘days’ imply, but not nights. And the Rabbis?³² — If deduction were made from this verse, I might have said that we ought to compare ‘days’ [mentioned here] with ‘days’ mentioned with regard to the Sukkah³³ so that just as there [the expression of] ‘days’ includes nights, so here also [the expression of] ‘days’ includes nights.³⁴

And with regard to the Sukkah itself whence do we derive [that the expression of ‘days’ includes nights]? — From what our Rabbis have taught: Ye shall dwell in booths for seven days,³³ the expression of ‘days’ includes also the nights. You say that the expression of ‘days’ includes also the nights, perhaps it is not so and ‘days’ implies but not the nights, and this is really logical. For the word ‘days’ is used here,³⁵ and it is also used in connection with lulab so that just as there it means days and not nights, so here also it must mean days and not nights. Or take it another way: The word 'days' is mentioned here,³⁵ and also in connection with the [seven days of the] investment,³⁶ so that just as there it means days and also nights,³⁷ so here also it must mean days and also the nights! Let us then see to what it³⁸ is more comparable.³⁹ We should deduce a thing whose performance is a matter of the whole day³⁸ from a thing whose performance is a matter of the whole day,⁴⁰ and let no proof be adduced from something whose performance is only for one moment.⁴¹ Or take it another way: We might deduce a thing which was ordained for future generations³⁸ from something whose performance also was ordained for future generations,⁴¹ but let no proof be adduced from the investment which does not obtain for future generations!⁴² [This is, therefore, an open question, but] Scripture explicitly repeats

- (1) Not with the intention of fulfilling a religious duty, but merely to receive instruction.
 - (2) The ram's horn blown on the New Year.
 - (3) The Scroll of Esther read on Purim. The shofar may not be blown and the megillah may not be read on the Sabbath for the same reason.
 - (4) The restrictive measure.
 - (5) Of the festival.
 - (6) As stated in our Mishnah ad fin., and since it must be taken at home only, and not in the Synagogue, no one is likely to forget the prohibition against carrying it out.
 - (7) Sc. all places outside the Temple.
 - (8) On account of its importance.
 - (9) Either in the Temple or in the Provinces.
 - (10) It only obtains in the Temple (v. infra).
 - (11) Even in the Temple.
 - (12) That because it obtains in the Provinces no preventive measure was enacted.
 - (13) I.e., the command to take the lulab should override on the first day the Sabbath even now when the Temple is no longer in existence.
 - (14) Having to rely on the messages from Palestine which did not reach everywhere in time for the Festival, the fifteenth of the month may consequently not be actually the fifteenth and one taking the lulab on that day might be transgressing the Sabbath.
 - (15) Even at the present time.

 - (17) Supra 41b. How then are the two Mishnahs to be reconciled.
 - (18) Hence they brought their lulabs to the Synagogue.

 - (35) In respect of Sukkah.

(36) Of Aaron and his sons for the High Priesthood. (V. Lev. VIII).

(37) Since the text explicitly mentioned day and night (v. Lev. VIII, 35).

(38) The Sukkah.

(39) To the seven days of investment or to the lulab.

(40) Investment (cf. Lev. VIII, 33 and 35).

(41) The lulab.

(42) Each of the rites of lulab and investment has one point of similarity with the Sukkah and one of difference from it. The Sukkah like the lulab is an eternal commandment, but unlike it its performance is continuous. The seven days of investment on the other hand were continuous but not ordained for future generations.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 43b

‘Ye shall dwell’ in order to point an analogy. It is stated here,¹ Ye shall dwell,² and with regard to the [seven days of] investment it is also stated, ‘Ye shall dwell’,³ so that just as in that case the word ‘days’ includes also the nights, so here also ‘days’ includes the nights.

THE WILLOW . . . SEVEN DAYS’. HOW IS THIS? Why does the [ceremonial of the] willow-branch on the seventh day⁴ override the Sabbath?⁵ — R. Johanan answered, In order to publish the fact that it⁶ is a [commandment] of the Torah. But if so, in the case of the lulab also, why should it not override the Sabbath⁷ in order to publish the fact that it⁸ is a [commandment] of the Torah? — In the case of lulab there is a restrictive enactment on account of the reason of Rabbah.⁹ But if so, let us make the same restrictive enactment with regard to the willow also? — In the case of the willow-branch the emissaries of the Beth din would bring it¹⁰ but the lulab is entrusted to everyone.¹¹ But if so,¹² ought it not to override [the Sabbath] on any day?¹³ — [If that were done] people would come to hold the lulab¹⁴ in light esteem. Then why should not [the willow] override [the Sabbath] on the first day of the Festival?¹⁵ — It will not be clear [that it is the rite of the willow that overrides the Sabbath, for] people might say that it is the lulab which overrides it.¹⁶

But why should not the Sabbath be overridden on any one of the other days?¹⁷ — Since [the permission to override the Sabbath] was removed from the first day,¹⁸ it was transferred to the seventh.¹⁹ But if so,¹² why should it not override it at the present time also? — We do not know when New Moon was fixed.²⁰ But in their case²¹ since they know when New Moon was fixed, why should it not override [the Sabbath]? — When Bar Hadya came,²² he explained that this never happened.²³ When, however, Rabin came²² and all the company that used to go down [from Palestine to Babylon]²⁴ they stated that it did happen, and that it did not override [the Sabbath]. Does not then the original difficulty arise? — R. Joseph answered, Who says that [the ceremonial of] the willow-branch is [performed] by the taking of it? Perhaps it is done by its being fixed [to the sides of the altar].²⁵

Abaye raised an objection against him: THE CEREMONIALS OF THE LULAB AND THE WILLOW [CONTINUED FOR] SIX [DAYS] OR SEVEN. Does not [this²⁶ imply that the willow is] as the lulab just as the [ceremonial of the] lulab is [performed] by its being taken, so is that of the willow performed by its being taken?²⁷ — What an argument! The rite of each may have been carried out according to its own particular rules.²⁸

Abaye raised a further objection against him: Every day they walked round the altar once, but on that day²⁹ they walked round it seven times.³⁰ Does not this mean, with the willow-branch?³¹ No, with the lulab.³² But did not R. Nahman state in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha [that the circuit was made] with the willowbranch? — The other³³ answered him, He told you, ‘with the willow-branch’ and I say ‘with the lulab’.

It was stated, R. Eleazar stated [that the circuit was made] with the lulab; R. Samuel b. Nathan citing R. Hanina stated [that it was made] with the willow-branch. And so said R. Nahman who had it from Rabbah b. Abbuha, With the willow-branch.

Raba said to R. Isaac the son of Rabbah b. bar Hana, Come, O Son of the Law, and I will tell you of an excellent statement which your father made. With reference to what we have learnt, 'Every day they walked round the altar once, and on that day they went round seven times',³⁴ your father citing R. Eleazar stated, [This was done] with the lulab.

He raised an objection against him: The rite of the lulab overrides the Sabbath on the first day,³⁵ and that of the willow-branch on the last day.³⁶ On one occasion the seventh day of the [ceremonial of the] willow-branch fell on a Sabbath, and they brought saplings of willows on the Sabbath eve and placed them in the courtyard of the Temple. The Boethusians,³⁷ having discovered them, took and hid them under some stones.³⁸ On the morrow some of the 'amme ha-arez³⁹ discovered them and removed them from under the stones, and the priests brought them in and fixed them in the sides of the altar. [The reason for hiding the willows was that] the Boethusians do not admit that the beating of the willow-branch⁴⁰ overrides the Sabbath.⁴¹ Thus⁴² we see clearly that [the performance of the willow ceremonial is] in the taking of it?⁴³ — This is a refutation. Then why should it⁴⁴ not override [the Sabbath]?⁴⁵ — Since with us⁴⁶ it does not override [the Sabbath]⁴⁷ it does not override it with them⁴⁸ either.⁴⁹

But is there not the first day of the Festival on which [the rite of the lulab] does not override the Sabbath for us,⁵⁰ but does it for them?⁴⁸

(2) Lev. XXIII, 42.

(3) Ibid. VIII, 35.

(4) Of the Festival.

(5) Sc. why was no preventive measure enacted in its case as in that of lulab supra?

(6) Though not specifically mentioned.

(7) On every day of the Festival (not only the first) that falls on the Sabbath.

(8) Sc. taking it on all the seven days, though this is not specifically mentioned in the Pentateuch, since the period indicated in Lev. XXIII, 40, may refer to other forms of rejoicing.

(9) Supra 42b ad fin.

(10) On the Sabbath eve, to be borne round the altar by the priests on the morrow. For these men, who are presumed to be acquainted with the Law, no preventive measures were called for.

(11) Had no preventive measure been enacted, a breach in the Sabbath laws might have occurred.

(12) That in the case of the willow no preventive measure was deemed necessary and that Pentateuchally it must be taken all the seven days of the Festival.

(13) Of the Festival which falls on the Sabbath, and not only on the seventh.

(14) Since it overrides the Sabbath only the first day.

(15) As is the case with the lulab.

(16) The inference might be made that the overriding of the Sabbath is mainly due to the lulab and only incidentally to the separate willow.

(17) Sc. why was preference given to the seventh day?

(18) For the reason given supra.

(19) Another conspicuous day. The middle days are not so conspicuous as the first and the seventh.

(20) V. supra p. 195, n. 9. The day we assume to be the seventh may in fact be the sixth, and the Sabbath is thus overridden on the wrong day.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 44a

— I will answer! For them also it does not override [the Sabbath]. Does not then a contradiction arise between those two Mishnahs, since one teaches 'all the people BROUGHT THEIR LULABS TO THE TEMPLE MOUNT',¹ and the other Mishnah teaches [that they brought them] to the Synagogue,² and we answered,³ did we not, that the one referred to Temple times and the other to the time after the destruction of the Temple? — No; both refer to Temple times,⁴ but there is nevertheless no contradiction since the one refers to the Sanctuary and the other⁵ to the Provinces.⁶

Abaye said to Rabbah,⁷ Why in the case of the lulab do we perform the ceremony for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary, whereas in the case of the willow-branch we do not perform the ceremony for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary?⁸ — He answered him, Since one fulfils the obligation [of taking the willow-branch] with the willow-branch on the lulab. But the former asked, does not one do it⁹ on account of the lulab?¹⁰ And if you will answer that one first raises it once¹¹ and then raises it again,¹² is it not a daily occurrence that we do not so act? — R. Zebid answered in the name of Raba, In the case of the lulab which is a Pentateuchal precept we perform the ceremony for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary; in the case of the willow-branch which is only a Rabbinical precept, we do not perform the ceremony for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary.

According to whom [is this statement]¹³ made? If you will say, According to Abba Saul,¹⁴ did he not say: It is written, willows of the brook,¹⁵ implying¹⁶ two, one referring to the [willow-branch in the] lulab and the other to [the willow-branch for use in] the Sanctuary?¹⁷ If you will say, It is according to the Rabbis, did they not have it as an accepted tradition, since R. Assi citing R. Johanan who had it from R. Nehunya of the Plain of Beth Hawartan,¹⁸ stated, The laws of the ten plants, the willow-branch and water libation were given to Moses upon Mount Sinai?¹⁹ Rather, said R. Zebid, in the name of Raba, In the case of the rite of the lulab, which has a Pentateuchal origin²⁰ for its performance in the Provinces, we perform it for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary; in the case of the rite of the willow-branch, which has no Pentateuchal origin for its performance in the Provinces, we do not perform it for seven days in commemoration of the Sanctuary.

Resh Lakish ruled, Priests suffering from a physical blemish²¹ were permitted²² to enter between the Ulam²³ and the altar in order to fulfil the precept of the willow-branch.²⁴ Said R. Johanan to him, Who said so? — ‘Who said so?’ Did he not himself say so,²⁵ since R. Assi citing R. Johanan who had it from R. Nehunya of the Plain of Beth Hawartan stated, The laws of the ten plants, the willow-branch and water libation were given to Moses upon Mount Sinai?²⁶ — He rather meant this: Who said that [the precept²⁷ is fulfilled] by taking,²⁸ perhaps it is fulfilled by fixing,²⁹ who said that it may be done by priests with a blemish, perhaps it [may be done] only by unblemished priests?

It was stated, R. Johanan and R. Joshua b. Levi differ. One holds that the rite of the willow-branch is an institution of the prophets,³⁰ the other holds that the willow-branch is a usage of the prophets.³¹ It can be concluded that it was R. Johanan who said, ‘It is an institution of the prophets’, since R. Abbahu stated in the name of R. Johanan, ‘The rite of the willow-branch is an institution of the prophets’. This is conclusive.

Said R. Zera to R. Abbahu, Did then R. Johanan say so?³² Did not R. Johanan in fact state in the name of R. Nehunya of the Plain of Beth Hawartan that ‘the law of the ten plants, the willow-branch and the water libation were given to Moses on Mount Sinai’? — [The other] was appalled for a while,³³ and then he answered, They were forgotten³⁴ and the prophets³⁵ reinstated them.

But could R. Johanan say so?³⁶ Did not R. Johanan in fact state, ‘What I said was yours was in fact theirs’?³⁷ — Rather³⁸ [answer thus]: This is no difficulty, since one statement¹ refers to the Sanctuary and the other² to the Provinces.

R. Ammi ruled, The willow-branch is required to have a minimum size³, it must be taken separately only,⁴ and no man can fulfil his obligation with the willow-branch in the lulab. But since the Master said, 'It must be taken separately only' is it not self-evident that 'no man can fulfil his obligation with the willow-branch in the lulab'? — I might have said that that applies only where one does not lift [the lulab] a second time, but not where one does lift it a second time,⁵ therefore he informs us that it is not so. R. Hisda citing R. Isaac, however, ruled, A man may fulfil his obligation with the willow-branch in the lulab.⁶

What is its prescribed minimum?⁷ — R. Nahman said, Three fresh twigs with leaves. R. Shesheth, however, said, Even one leaf and one twig. 'One leaf and one twig'! Can such a rule be imagined?⁸ — Say rather, Even one leaf on one twig.⁹

Aibu¹⁰ related, I was once standing in the presence of R. Eleazar b. Zadok when a man brought a willow-branch before him, and he took it and shook¹¹ it over and over again without reciting any benediction, for he was of the opinion that it¹² was merely a usage of the prophets.¹³

Aibu¹⁰ and Hezekiah, the maternal grandsons of Rab, brought a willow-branch before Rab, and he shook it over and over again without reciting a benediction, for he was of the opinion that it¹² was merely a usage of the prophets.¹³ Aibu stated, I was standing in the presence of R. Eleazar b. Zadok when a certain man came before him and said to him, 'I possess cities, vineyards and olive trees, and the inhabitants of the cities come¹⁴ and hoe the vineyards and eat the olives.¹⁵ Is this¹⁶ proper or improper?' — 'This', the other replied, 'is improper'. As the man was about to leave him and depart, [R. Eleazar] observed, 'It is now forty years that I have dwelt in this land, and I have never seen a man walking in the paths of righteousness as this man'. The man thereupon returned and said to him, 'What should be done?' he answered him, 'Abandon the olives to the poor and pay yourself for hoeing the vineyards'.

But is hoeing permitted [during the Sabbatical year]? Has it not in fact been taught: But the seventh year thou shalt let it rest and lie still¹⁷ means, 'Let it rest' from hoeing and 'lie still' as regards the removal of stones? — R. Ukba b. Hama replied, There are two kinds of hoeing; one consists in closing up the fissures and the other in aerating the soil.¹⁸ Aerating the soil is forbidden¹⁹ but closing up the fissures²⁰ is permitted.

Aibu citing R. Eleazar b. Zadok ruled, One should not walk more than three parasangs on the Sabbath eve.²¹ R. Kahana observed, They made this statement only [in reference to a man who was going to] his home,²² but if he was going to his inn²³ he relies upon [the food] which he has with him. Others say that R. Kahana observed, The statement²⁴ was necessary even in the case of a man [who was going] to his home.²⁵ R. Kahana stated, It actually happened with me, that²⁶ I did not find even a fishpie.²⁷

HOW WAS [THE CEREMONIAL OF] THE LULAB CARRIED OUT? A tanna recited before R. Nahman, 'Arranged them upon the roof²⁸ of the portico'. The other said to him

- (1) That it was a law given to Moses on Mount Sinai.
- (2) That it was an institution of the prophets.
- (3) This is given infra.
- (4) Nothing else may be bound together with it.
- (5) Once in fulfilment of the rite of lulab and a second time in fulfilment of that of the willow.
- (6) Cur. edd. in parenthesis, 'on the first festival day of the feast', which is difficult to explain.
- (7) Sc. of the willow-branches.
- (8) Obviously not
- (9) The size prescribed supra 32b applies only to the willow-branches that were bound with the lulab.
- (10) This Aibu, the father of Rab, is the great-grandfather of the Aibu mentioned later (v. Rashi). R. Eleazar b. Zadok before whom he stood, the grandson of R. Eleazar b. Zadok I, lived in the second century.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 45a

'Does one then need to dry them?'¹ Say rather, Upon the portico'.² Rehaba citing R.³ Judah stated, The Temple Mount had a double colonnade, one colonnade being within the other.⁴

MISHNAH. HOW WAS THE PRECEPT OF THE WILLOW-BRANCH [CARRIED OUT]? THERE WAS A PLACE BELOW JERUSALEM CALLED MOZA.⁵ THEY WENT DOWN THERE AND GATHERED THENCE YOUNG WILLOW-BRANCHES AND THEN CAME AND FIXED THEM AT THE SIDES OF THE ALTAR SO THAT THEIR TOPS BENT OVER THE ALTAR. THEY THEN SOUNDED⁶ A TEKI'AH [LONG BLAST], A TERU'AH [TREMULOUS BLAST] AND AGAIN A TEKI'AH.⁷ EVERY DAY⁸ THEY WENT ROUND THE ALTAR ONCE, SAYING, 'WE BESEECH THEE, O LORD, SAVE NOW, WE BESEECH THEE, O LORD, MAKE US NOW TO PROSPER'.⁹ R. JUDAH SAID, [THEY WERE SAYING],¹⁰ 'ANI WAHO,¹¹ SAVE NOW'. BUT ON THAT DAY¹² THEY WENT ROUND THE ALTAR SEVEN TIMES. WHEN¹³ THEY DEPARTED, WHAT DID THEY SAY? 'THINE, O ALTAR, IS THE BEAUTY! THINE, O ALTAR, IS THE BEAUTY!' R. ELIEZER SAID, [THEY WERE SAYING,] 'TO THE LORD AND TO THEE, O ALTAR, TO THE LORD AND TO THEE, O ALTAR'.

AS WAS ITS PERFORMANCE¹⁴ ON A WEEKDAY, SO WAS ITS PERFORMANCE ON THE SABBATH, SAVE THAT THEY GATHERED THEM¹⁵ ON THE EVE [OF THE SABBATH,] AND PLACED THEM IN GOLDEN BASINS THAT THEY MIGHT NOT BECOME MILDEWED. R. JOHANAN B. BEROKA SAID, THEY USED TO BRING PALM TWIGS AND BEAT THEM ON THE GROUND AT THE SIDES OF THE ALTAR, AND THAT DAY WAS CALLED '[THE DAY OF] THE BEATING OF THE PALM TWIGS'. THEY USED TO TAKE THEIR LULABS FROM THE HANDS OF THE CHILDREN AND EAT THEIR ETHROGS.¹⁶

GEMARA. It was taught, It¹⁷ was the place called Kolonia. Then why does our Tanna call it MOZA?¹⁸ — Since it was exempt from the king's tax, he calls it MOZA.

AND THEN CAME AND FIXED THEM AT THE SIDES OF etc. A Tanna taught, They were large¹⁹ and long and eleven cubits high, so that they might bend over the altar one cubit.²⁰ Meremar citing Mar Zutra observed, Deduce therefrom²¹ that they¹⁵ were laid upon the base [of the altar],²² for if you were to assume that they were placed on the ground, consider this: It²³ rose up one cubit and drew in one cubit, and this²⁴ formed the base. It²⁵ then rose up five cubits and drew in one cubit, and this²⁶ formed the circuit; it²⁷ [then] rose up three cubits, and this²⁸ was the place of the horns.²⁹ Now³⁰ how could they³¹ bend over the altar?³² Consequently it may be deduced from this that they were laid on the base.³³ This is conclusive. R. Abbahu said, What is its Scriptural proof?³⁴ — Since it is said, Order the festival procession with boughs, even unto the horns of the altar.³⁵

R. Abbahu citing R. Eleazar stated, Whosoever takes the lulab with its binding and the willow-branch with its wreathing is regarded by Scripture as though he had built an altar and offered thereon a sacrifice. For it is said,

(1) Obviously not, since a dried lulab is in fact invalid.

(2) Not upon its roof.

- (32) The willow-branch, placed in a slanting position against the altar (nine cubits in height) and removed sufficiently from its base to allow for the horizontal distance of two cubits from the side of the base to the top of the altar, would not project at all beyond the top of the altar; what then, would remain for bending over?
- (33) And leaned against the side of the circuit, thus gaining the two cubits of the height and width of the base and leaving two cubits length of willow-branch sufficient to bend over the top of the altar one cubit.
- (34) That the willow-branches overhung the top of the altar.
- (35) Ps. CXVIII, 27. The height of the horns was one cubit above the top of the altar, and boughs that reached to the top of the horns naturally bent one cubit over the altar top.

Bind the festival¹ with myrtle branches² even unto the horns of the altar.³

R. Jeremiah citing R. Simeon b. Yohai, and R. Johanan citing R. Simeon of Mahoz⁴ who had it from R. Johanan of Makkuth stated, Whosoever makes an addition⁵ to the Festival by eating and drinking⁶ is regarded by Scripture as though he had builded an altar and offered thereon a sacrifice. For it is said, Make an addition to⁷ the Festival with fat cattle,⁸ even to the horns of the altar.⁹

Hezekiah citing R. Jeremiah who had it from R. Simeon b. Yohai stated, In the case of all commandments,¹⁰ one does not fulfil one's obligation unless [the objects involved] are in the same condition as when they grow,¹¹ for it is said, Acacia wood standing up.¹² So it was also taught, 'Acacia wood standing up,' implies that they should stand in the manner of their growth. Another interpretation: 'Standing up' implies that they held¹³ their [gold] overlaying.¹⁴ Another interpretation of 'Standing up'.' Lest you may say, 'Their hope is lost, their expectation is frustrated',¹⁵ Scripture expressly states, 'Acacia wood standing up'¹² implying that they will stand for ever and to all eternity.

Hezekiah further stated in the name of R. Jeremiah who said it in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai, I am able¹⁶ to exempt the whole world from judgment from the day that I was born until now, and were Eliezer, my son, to be with me [we could exempt it] from the day of the creation of the world to the present time, and were Jotham the son of Uzziah¹⁷ with us, [we could exempt it] from the creation of the world to its final end.¹⁸

Hezekiah further stated in the name of R. Jeremiah who said it in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai, I have seen the sons of heaven¹⁹ and they are but few. If there be a thousand, I and my son are among them; if a hundred, I and my son are among them; and if only two, they are I and my son.

Are they then so few? Did not Raba in fact state,²⁰ The row [of righteous men immediately] before the Holy One, blessed be He, consists of eighteen thousand, for it is said, It shall be eighteen thousand round about?²¹ — This is no difficulty: The former number refers to those who see Him 'through a bright speculum, the latter to those who see Him through a dim one.²² But are those who see Him through a bright speculum so few? Did not Abaye in fact state, The world never has less than thirty-six righteous men who are vouchsafed a sight of the Shechinah every day, for it is said, Happy are they that wait lo²³ [for Him] and the numerical value of lo is thirty-six? — There is no difficulty: The latter number²⁴ refers to those who may enter [the Presence] with permission, the former²⁵ to those who may enter without permission.

WHEN THEY DEPARTED, WHAT DID THEY SAY? But does not one thereby²⁶ associate the name of God²⁷ with something else²⁸ concerning which it has been taught, Whosoever associates the name of God with something else is uprooted from the world, as it is said, Save unto the Lord alone?²⁹ — It is this that was meant: TO THE LORD we give thanks, AND TO THEE we offer praise, TO THE LORD we give thanks AND THEE we laud.

AS WAS ITS PERFORMANCE ON A WEEKDAY. Said R. Huna, What is the reason of R. Johanan b. Beroka? Because it is written, Branches,³⁰ which³¹ implies two, one for the lulab and one for the altar. But the Rabbis say, The word 'branches' is written defectively.³² R. Levi explained, [The reason of R. Johanan b. Beroka³³ is that Israel is] compared to the date-palm; as the date-palm has but one heart³⁴ also Israel has but one heart [which is completely devoted] to their Father in Heaven.³⁵

Rab Judah citing Samuel stated, [The benediction is recited over] the lulab for seven [days] and over the Sukkah only on one day.³⁶ What is the reason? — In the case of the lulab where the nights form breaks between the days,³⁷ each day involves a separate commandment; in the case of the Sukkah where the nights do not form breaks between the days,³⁸ all seven days are regarded as one long day. Rabbah b. Bar Hana, however, stated in the name of R. Johanan, [The benediction is recited over] the Sukkah for seven days and over the lulab but one day.³⁶ What is the reason? — For the Sukkah which is a Pentateuchal precept [the benediction must be recited all the] seven [days]; in the case of the lulab which is but a Rabbinical enactment [a benediction on] one day suffices. When Rabin came,³⁹ he stated in the name of R. Johanan, [The benediction is recited over] the one as well as the other [all] seven [days]. R. Joseph ruled, Lay hold fast to the decision of Rabbah b. Bar Hana, since with regard to Sukkah,⁴⁰ all the Amoras adopt the same position as he.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 46a

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 46a

He who makes a lulab¹ for his own use² shall recite the benediction, 'Blessed [art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe] who has kept us in life, and hast preserved us, and enabled us to reach this season'. When he takes it to fulfil therewith his obligation, he shall say, 'Blessed [art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe] who hast sanctified us by Thy commandments, and commanded us concerning the taking of the lulab' and even though he has recited the benediction on the first day, he must again recite it on all seven days. He who makes a Sukkah for his own use shall recite the benediction, 'Blessed [art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe] who kept us in life, and sustained us etc.' When he enters the Sukkah to take up his abode therein he shall say, '... Who hast sanctified us by Thy commandments and commanded us to dwell in the Sukkah'; and once he has recited the benediction on the first day, he has no need to repeat it [on subsequent days].³ Now is there not a contradiction between the one statement concerning the lulab and the other,⁴ and between the one concerning Sukkah and the other?⁵ The difficulty between the one statement concerning the lulab and the other may well be disposed of, since one might refer to Temple times⁶ and the other to the time when the Temple was no longer in existence; but does not the difficulty concerning the two statements about the Sukkah remain? — The question⁷ is one in dispute between Tannas, as it has been taught, Whenever a man puts on his tefillin⁸ he must⁹ recite the benediction; so Rabbi,¹⁰ but the Sages ruled, He recites the benediction in the morning only.¹¹

It was stated:¹² Abaye ruled, The law is in agreement with Rabbi, while Raba ruled, The law is in agreement with the Rabbis. R. Mari the son of Samuel's daughter remarked, I noticed that Raba himself did not act in accordance with his own ruling¹³ but rising early, he would go to the privy, emerge and wash his hands, put on his tefillin and recite the benediction, and when he had to attend to his needs a second time he would¹⁴ go to the privy, emerge and wash his hands, put on his tefillin and recite the benediction again. We also act in accordance with the ruling of Rabbi and recite the benediction¹⁵ all seven days.¹⁶

Mar Zutra remarked, I notice that R. Papi recited the benediction whenever he put on his tefillin.¹⁷ The Rabbis of the school of R. Ashi recited the benediction whenever they touched their tefillin.¹⁸

Rab Judah citing Samuel ruled: The commandment of lulab¹⁹ applies to all the seven days,¹⁶ but R. Joshua b. Levi ruled, The commandment of the lulab¹⁹ applies to the first day only,²⁰ and subsequently it is but an ordinance of the Elders;²¹ while R. Isaac ruled, [The taking of the lulab on] every day, and even on the first one is but an ordinance of the Elders. But have we not an established rule that on the first day it is a Pentateuchal commandment? — Say rather, Except on the first day. But if so, is not this²² identical with the ruling of R. Joshua b. Levi? — Read, And so said R. Isaac.

Rab also is of the opinion that the commandment of the lulab¹⁹ applies to all seven days,²³ for R. Hiyya b. Ashi citing Rab stated, One who kindles the Hanukkah lamp²⁴ must recite a benediction.²⁵

R. Jeremiah ruled, He who sees the Hanukkah light²⁶ must recite the benediction. What benediction does one recite? — Rab Judah answered, On the first day he who kindles the light must recite three benedictions²⁷ and he who sees it must recite two;²⁸ henceforth he who kindles the lights recites two benedictions²⁹ and he who sees them only one.³⁰ What is the benediction? — 'Blessed [art Thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe] who hast sanctified us by Thy commandments, and commanded us to kindle the light of Hanukkah'.²⁷ But where³¹ did He command us? — [The commandment is deduced from the verse,] Thou shalt not turn aside.³² R. Nahman b. Isaac replied, [Deduction is made from the verse,] Ask thy father, and he will declare unto thee.³³ (Which [benediction] does one omit?³⁴ — The benediction on the season.³⁵ Might it not be suggested that one omits the benediction of the miracle?³⁶ — The miracle occurred every day).³⁷

R. Nahman b. Isaac taught this³⁸ explicitly:³⁹ Rab ruled, The commandment of the lulab applies to all seven days.

Our Rabbis taught, He who makes a Sukkah for his own use shall recite the benediction, 'Blessed art Thou . . . who has kept us in life etc.'⁴⁰ When he enters to take up his abode in it, he says, 'Blessed art Thou . . . who has sanctified us, etc.'⁴¹ If it⁴² was already erected,⁴³ he may recite the benediction if he can make some renovation in it; and if not, he recites two benedictions⁴⁰ when he enters to take up his abode in it.

R. Ashi stated, I observed that R. Kahana recited all of them over the cup of Sanctification.⁴⁴

Our Rabbis taught, He who has to perform many commandments⁴⁵ [simultaneously] shall say, 'Blessed . . . who hast sanctified us by Thy commandments and commanded us concerning the commandments'.⁴⁶ R. Judah ruled, One must recite a benediction over each one separately. R. Zera or, as some say, R. Hanina b. Papa stated, The halachah⁴⁷ is in agreement with R. Judah. R. Zera or, as some say, R. Hanina b. Papa further stated, What is the reason of R. Judah? Because it is written, Blessed be the Lord by day.⁴⁸ Now do we bless Him by day and not by night?⁴⁹ But this comes to teach you: Return to Him every day its appropriate benedictions.⁵⁰ So also here: Return unto Him for every single thing, its appropriate benedictions. R. Zera or, as some say, R. Hanina b. Papa further stated, Come and see that not as the standards of mortal man are the standards of the Holy One, blessed be He. According to the standards of mortal man, an empty vessel is able to contain [what is put into it], and a full vessel cannot contain it¹ but according to the standards of the Holy One, blessed be He, a full vessel is able to contain it¹ While an empty one cannot; as it is said, And it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently,² if you hearken,³ you will continue to hearken,⁴ but if not, you will not hearken.⁵ Another interpretation: If you will hearken to the old,⁶ you will be able to hearken to the new,⁷ but if thy heart turn away⁸ you will no more hearken.⁹

FROM THE HANDS OF THE CHILDREN, etc. R. Johanan ruled, The ethrog is forbidden¹⁰ on the seventh day,¹¹ and permitted on the eighth; the Sukkah is forbidden¹² even on the eighth. Resh Lakish, however, ruled that the ethrog is permitted¹⁰ even on the seventh day.¹³ On what principle do they differ? — One Master¹⁴ is of the opinion that it is set aside only for the performance of its commandment,¹⁵ while the other Master¹⁶ is of the opinion that it¹⁷ is set aside for the whole day.¹⁸

Resh Lakish raised an objection against R. Johanan: THEY USED¹⁹ TO TAKE THEIR LULABS FROM THE HANDS OF THE CHILDREN AND EAT THEIR ETHROGS. Does not this equally apply to adults also?²⁰ — No; it applies to children alone.²¹

There are others who say that R. Johanan raised the objection against Resh Lakish: THEY USED¹⁹ TO TAKE THEIR LULABS FROM THE HANDS OF THE CHILDREN AND EAT THEIR ETHROGS. [Of] children only, but not [of] adults!²² — No; the same law applies to [those of] adults also, and the reason that he mentions children is that he states what was customary.²³

Said R. Papa to Abaye, What, according to R. Johanan, is the essential difference between the Sukkah and the ethrog?²⁴ — The other answered him, The Sukkah which is fit to be used at twilight [after the seventh day], for were he perchance to have a meal at that time he would be expected to sit therein and eat there, is set aside for its ritual purpose during the twilight, and since it is set aside during twilight, it is also set aside for the whole of the eighth day; the ethrog, however, which is not suitable during twilight,²⁵ is not set aside for its ritual purpose during twilight, hence it is not set aside for the purpose for the whole of the eighth day.

Levi, however, ruled, The ethrog²⁶ is forbidden even on the eighth day;²⁷ while the father of Samuel ruled, The ethrog is forbidden on the seventh day, but permitted on the eighth — The father of Samuel subsequently adopted the view of Levi. R. Zera, however, adopted the [earlier] view of the father of Samuel, for R. Zera ruled, It is forbidden to eat an ethrog [even one] that has become invalid, all the seven days.²⁸

R. Zera ruled, One should not transfer possession²⁹ of the festive wreath³⁰ to a child on the first day of the Festival.³¹ What is the reason? — Because a child is³² entitled to acquire possession but not to transfer it, and the result will be that (the man] would have to perform his duty with a lulab which is not his.³³

R. Zera further ruled, One should not promise a child to give him something and then not give it to him, because he will thereby teach him lying, as it is said, They have taught their tongues to speak lies.³⁴

[The following dispute is based on the same principles] as the one between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.³⁵ For it was stated, If a man set apart seven ethrogs for the seven days,³⁶ Rab ruled, He may fulfil his obligation with each one and eat it forthwith, while R. Assi ruled, He may fulfil his obligation with each one and eat it on the morrow.³⁷ On what principle do they differ? One Master³⁸ is of the opinion that it³⁹ is set apart only for the performance of its rite⁴⁰ while the other Master⁴¹ is of the opinion that it³⁹ is set apart for the whole day.

And as for us, who⁴² keep two days [of the Festival] how are we to proceed?⁴³ — Abaye replied, On the eighth day which may be the seventh, it⁴⁴ is forbidden;⁴⁵ on the ninth day which may be the eighth, it is permitted. Meremar ruled, Even on the eighth day, which may be the seventh, it is permitted. In Sura they acted in accordance with the ruling of Meremar. R. Shisha the son of R. Idi acted in accordance with the ruling of Abaye. And the law is in agreement with Abaye.

R. Judah the son of R. Samuel b. Shilath citing Rab ruled, The eighth day which may be the seventh is regarded as the seventh in respect of the Sukkah⁴⁶ and as the eighth in respect of the benediction.⁴⁷ R. Johanan, however, ruled, It is regarded as the eighth in respect of both.⁴⁸ That one must dwell [in the Sukkah on the eighth day] is agreed by all, they only differ on the question of the benediction.¹ According to him who regards the day as the seventh in respect of the Sukkah, we also recite the benediction [of the Sukkah], while according to him who holds that it is regarded as the eighth in respect of both, we do not recite the benediction [of the Sukkah].² R. Joseph observed, Hold fast to the ruling of R. Johanan,³ since R. Huna b. Bizna and all the notables of his age once entered a Sukkah on the eighth day which may have been the seventh, and while they sat therein, they did not recite the benediction.⁴ But is it not possible that they were of the same opinion as he who laid down that once a man has recited the benediction⁴ on the first day, he has no more need to recite it?⁵ — There was a tradition that they⁶ had just come from the fields.⁷

There are some who say that the ruling that one must not recite the benediction [of the Sukkah] is agreed upon by both, and that they only differ on the question whether one must sit [in the Sukkah].⁸ According to him who ruled that it is regarded as the seventh day in respect of the Sukkah, we must indeed sit in it thereon, while according to him who ruled that it is regarded as the eighth day in respect of both, we may not even sit in it thereon. R. Joseph observed, Hold fast to the ruling of R. Johanan. For who is the authority of the statement?⁹ R. Judah the son of R. Samuel b. Shilath [of course], and he himself sat on the eighth day which might be the seventh outside the Sukkah.¹⁰ And the law is that we must indeed sit in the Sukkah but may not recite the benediction.

R. Johanan ruled, We recite the benediction of the season¹¹ on the Eighth Day of the Festival,¹² but we do not say the benediction of the season on the seventh day of Passover. [In connection with this] R. Levi b. Hama or, as some say, R. Hama b. Hanina stated, You can have proof that this is so,¹³ since [the Eighth Day] is different [from the preceding days] in three respects: In those of Sukkah, lulab and water libation,¹⁴ and according to R. Judah who maintained that with one log¹⁵ of water they performed the water libation for eight days,¹⁶ it is different at least in two respects.

If so, is not the seventh day of Passover also different in respect of the commandment to eat unleavened bread, since a Master has said, On the first night¹⁷ it is an obligation [to eat unleavened bread], and henceforth it is voluntary?¹⁸ — What a comparison! In the case of Passover, it is different from the first night, but not from the day,¹⁹ whereas in the case of the Eighth Day, it is different even from the preceding day. Rabina replied, The Eighth Day is different from the day immediately preceding it, whereas the seventh day of Passover is different from what is prior [to the period] which precedes it.²⁰ R. Papa replied,²¹ In one case²² it is written 'bullock', in the other²³ 'bullocks'. R. Nahman b. Isaac replied, In this case²² it is written, 'on the day', in the other,²³ 'and on the day'. R. Ashi replied, In the case of the Eighth Day it is written, 'According to the ordinance' while in the case of the seventh day it is written, 'according to their ordinance'.

Can we say that [the following statement] supports [the view of R. Johanan]:²⁴ The bullocks, the rams and the lambs²⁵ act as a hindrance to one another,²⁶ while R. Judah ruled, The bullocks do not act as a hindrance to one another, since they diminish in number progressively.²⁷ They²⁸ said to him, But are not all of them²⁹ diminished in number on the Eighth Day?³⁰ He answered them, The Eighth Day is a separate festival,³¹ for, just as the seven days of the Festival must have [their own] sacrifices, psalm,³² benediction³³ and staying overnight,³⁴ so the Eighth Day must have its own sacrifices, psalm,³⁵ benediction³³ and staying overnight.

(1) 'Blessed art Thou . . . to sit in the Sukkah'.

(2) Thus it is the eighth 'in respect of Sukkah' in that the benediction of the Sukkah is not recited, and it is the eighth 'in respect of the benediction', in that we mention the 'Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly'.

(3) That the benediction of the Sukkah is not to be said on the eighth which may be the seventh.

(4) Of the Sukkah.

(5) On any of the other days of the Festival.

- (11) The benediction, 'Blessed . . . who hast kept us in life . . . to reach this season' (cf. P.B. p. 231) which is said only on the first day of a festival. R. Johanan regards the eighth day as a separate festival.
- (12) The Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly, which is regarded as a festival distinct from that of Tabernacles.
- (13) That the Eighth Day is a festival of its own.
- (14) None of which obtains on the Eighth Day.
- (15) Not, as the first Tanna stated, with three logs.
- (16) Infra 48b; and only for the seven days.
- (17) Of Passover.
- (18) Pes. 120a.
- (19) Since even on the first day of Passover the eating of unleavened bread is voluntary.
- (20) The first night.
- (21) The next three statements point out that in the section dealing with the sacrifices of the festival, Num. XXIX, 12-39, there are differences between the first seven days, and the Eighth Day either in respect of the laws of the sacrifices or the expressions used in connection with them; proving that the latter is a separate festival. These differences are that (a) on each of the seven days a number of bullocks were sacrificed while on the Eighth Day only one was offered (v. 36). (b) the descriptions of the sacrifices of the second to the seventh day begin with the word 'and' ('And on the day'), suggesting continuity, while that of the Eighth Day commences 'On the eighth day' omitting the 'and', (c) on the seventh day it was 'According to their ordinance', connecting it with the previous days whereas the Eighth Day has, 'according to the ordinance'.
- (22) The Eighth Day.
- (23) The first seven days.
- (24) That the benediction of the season is to be said on the Eighth Day.
- (25) Prescribed as sacrifices for the days of Tabernacles.
- (26) The omission of one of them invalidates the whole number.
- (27) Thirteen on the first day and one less every day (v. Num. XXIX). As the number is in any case steadily diminished, the additional omission of one or more cannot affect the remainder.
- (28) The Rabbis who differed from him.
- (29) Even the rams and lambs.
- (30) Of course they are: On the seven days of the festival the number of rams and he-lambs remains constant at two and fourteen respectively, while on the Eighth Day only one ram and seven he-lambs were offered (cf. Num. XXIX, 36). Why then should the omission of one of these more than the omission of a bullock affect the remainder?
- (31) Its sacrifices cannot, therefore, like those of any of the seven days, be compared to the others.
- (32) Ps. XCIV, sung by the Levites when the sacrifice was offered (v. infra 55a).
- (33) This is explained infra.
- (34) The duty of remaining in Jerusalem for the night following the festival, mentioned in the case of the Passover (Deut. XVI, 7) is adduced to apply to all festivals (cf. R.H. 5a).
- (35) According to Soferim XIX, 2, it was Ps. VI.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 47b

Now does not ['benediction' refer to the benediction of the] season?¹ — No, it refers to the Grace after meals and to Prayer.² It is also in accordance with reason to say so, for if you were to imagine that [the reference is to the benediction of] the season, do we then [it could be objected] recite the benediction of the season during all the seven days?³ — This really presents no difficulty, for if a man did not recite the benediction [of the season] during the first day, he has to recite it on the morrow, or on any subsequent day.⁴ But, in any case, must not the benediction [of the season] be recited over a cup [of wine]?⁵ Must we then say that this⁶ supports the view of R. Nahman,⁷ for R. Nahman laid down [that the benediction of the] season may be recited even in the market-place?⁸ For if you will say that the cup [of wine] is essential, has one then a cup [of wine] every day? — This might apply to a case where one chanced to have a cup [of wine].

Is then R. Judah of the opinion that on the Eighth Day there must be staying overnight? Has it not in fact been taught: R. Judah stated, Whence do we know that the Second Passover⁹ does not need staying overnight? From what was said, And thou shalt turn in the morning and go into thy tents¹⁰ and [immediately afterwards] it is written, Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread,¹¹ thus implying that that which must have six days [of observance]¹² must have staying overnight, but that which does not need six days [of observance]¹³ does not need staying overnight. Now is not this¹⁴ to exclude also the Eighth Day of the festival? — No, to exclude only the Second Passover which is similar to it.¹⁵ It is also in accordance with reason to say so,¹⁶ for we have learnt, The bikkurim¹⁷ require a sacrifice, a psalm,¹⁸ waving¹⁹ and staying overnight.²⁰ Now who is it that has been heard to say that they require waving? R. Judah of course, and it states that they²¹ require staying overnight.²² For it has been taught,²³ And thou shalt set it down²⁴ refers to the waving. You say that it refers to the waving but perhaps it means literally ‘setting it down’? As it says [subsequently], And set it down,²⁵ ‘setting down,’ surely, is mentioned, to what then do I apply the verse, ‘and thou shalt set it down’? To waving.²⁶

[This Mishnah],²⁷ however, might concur with R. Eliezer b. Jacob,²⁸ for it has been taught, And the priest shall take the basket out of thy hand²⁹ teaches³⁰ that bikkurim require waving; these are the words of R. Eliezer b. Jacob. What is the reason of R. Eliezer b. Jacob? He deduces it from the word ‘hand’ occurring here and in the case of the peace-offering. Here it is written, ‘And the priest shall take the basket out of thy hand’,²⁹ and there it is written, His own hands shall bring the offering unto the Lord,³¹ just as here the priest [takes it and waves it] so there the priest [takes it and waves it], and just as there the owner [brings and waves it] so here also the owner [brings and waves it]. How is this possible?³² The priest places his hand under the hand of the owner and waves it.³³

What is the ultimate decision?³⁴ — R. Nahman ruled, We say [the benediction of the] season on the Eighth Day of the Festival, while R. Shesheth ruled, We do not say [the benediction of the] season on the Eighth Day of the Festival. And the law is that we say [the benediction of the] season on the Eighth Day of the Festival.

It has been taught in agreement with R. Nahman, The Eighth Day

(1) Which shows, does it not, that in agreement with R. Johanan, the benediction of the season must be said on the Eighth Day?

(2) Instead of saying ‘this Festival of Tabernacles’, as is done during the seven days, one says, ‘this Eighth Day of Solemn Assembly’ (cf. P.B. pp. 282 and 228). The Tosefta (IV, 17) says that this refers to the blessing of the king, in accordance with I Kings VIII, 66.

(3) Of course not. It is said only on the first day.

(4) ‘Benediction’ may, therefore, apply to that of the season.

(5) And not every one has always wine on the intermediate days of a festival.

(6) The assumption that ‘benediction’ refers to that of the season and that it may be said on any of the intermediate days when not every one can afford wine.

(7) That the cup of wine is not essential for the benediction?

(8) Without wine.

(9) Which was kept by those who were unable to keep the Passover proper owing to ritual uncleanness or absence (cf. Num. IX, 6 14).

(10) Deut. XVI, 7.

(11) Ibid. 8.

- (12) Sc. the Passover proper.
- (13) The Second Passover which is kept on the fourteenth of Iyar only.
- (14) The deduction of R. Judah which seems to lay down a general rule.
- (15) [I.e., to the celebration spoken of in the context Deut. XVI, 7-8. Var. lec., however, omit 'which is similar to it'. R. Judah was thus referring only to the Second Passover, and did not lay down a general rule].
- (16) That R. Judah excludes the Second Passover only.
- (17) First fruits (v. Deut. XXVI, 1ff), when taken up to Jerusalem.
- (18) Ps. XXX.
- (19) This is discussed infra.
- (20) Bik. II, 4.
- (21) Bikkurim.
- (22) Though the ceremony does not last for six days, which shows that only the Second Passover has been excluded.
- (23) Proof is now adduced that R. Judah requires bikkurim to be waved.
- (24) Deut. XXVI, 10.
- (25) Deut. XXVI, 4. For variant in order of verses quoted v. Mak., Sonc. ed., p. 130, n. 7.
- (26) Mak. 18b.
- (27) Which requires 'waving' and 'staying overnight' in the case of bikkurim.
- (28) And not with R. Judah who may be maintaining that whatever rite lasts for less than six days requires neither the one nor the other.
- (29) Deut. XXVI, 4.
- (30) Since it says 'Out of thy hand'.
- (31) Lev. VII, 30.
- (32) For both the priest and the owner to perform the waving.
- (33) Mak. 18b. Thus it has been shown that the Mishnah Bik. II, 4, may represent the view of R. Eliezer b. Jacob; and consequently no support may be adduced from it to the view that R. Judah excludes the Second Passover only.
- (34) On the question of the benediction of the season on the Eighth Day.

is a Separate festival with regard to P'Z'R' K'SH'B'¹ i.e., with regard to balloting it is a separate festival,² with regard to the benediction of the season it is a separate festival,³ with regard to the nature of the festival it is a separate festival,⁴ with regard to its sacrifice it is a separate festival,⁵ with regard to its psalm it is a separate festival,³ and with regard to its benediction it is a separate festival.³

MISHNAH. 'THE HALLEL [WAS RECITED] AND THE [PEACE-OFFERINGS OF] REJOICING [WERE OFFERED] ON ALL THE EIGHT DAYS' — HOW IS THAT? THIS TEACHES THAT ONE IS BOUND TO RECITE THE HALLEL, [OFFER PEACE-OFFERINGS OF] REJOICING AND SHOW HONOUR TO THE FESTIVAL ON THE LAST DAY, AS ON ALL THE OTHER DAYS OF THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. Whence do we know this?⁶ — From what our Rabbis taught, [The verse], And thou shalt be altogether joyful⁷ includes⁸ the night of the last day of the Festival.⁹ But perhaps this is not so, but the text was meant to include [the night of] the first day of the Festival?¹⁰ As it says, ak¹¹ a division is indicated.¹² But why have you seen fit to include the last night of the Festival and to exclude the first night? I include the last night since it is preceded by rejoicing¹³ and exclude the first night which is not preceded by rejoicing.

MISHNAH. THE SUKKAH [MUST BE USED ALL] SEVEN DAYS. HOW IS THIS [TO BE UNDERSTOOD]? WHEN A MAN HAS FINISHED HIS [LAST] MEAL,¹⁴ HE MAY NOT DISMANTLE HIS SUKKAH.¹⁵ HE MAY, HOWEVER, REMOVE ITS FURNITURE¹⁶ FROM THE AFTERNOON ONWARDS IN HONOUR OF THE LAST DAY OF THE FESTIVAL.¹⁷

GEMARA. If a man has no FURNITURE to remove,¹⁸ what shall he do? ‘If a man has no FURNITURE’! What then did he use when he was using [his Sukkah]? — Rather say, If he had no place where to put his furniture¹⁹ what shall he do?²⁰ — R. Hiyya b. Ashi²¹ answered, He removes four handbreadths [of its roof],²² while R. Joshua b. Levi answered, he should kindle a lamp in it.²³ In fact, however, there is no difference of opinion between them, the latter referring to us [Babylonians], and the former to them [the Palestinians].²⁴ This²⁵ is a satisfactory procedure with regard to a Sukkah of minimum size²⁶ but what can be said with regard to a large Sukkah?²⁷ — One might carry into it eating utensils, since Raba ruled, Eating utensils must be kept outside the Sukkah; drinking vessels in the Sukkah.²⁸

MISHNAH. HOW WAS THE WATER LIBATION [PERFORMED]? A GOLDEN FLAGON HOLDING THREE LOGS WAS FILLED FROM THE SILOAM.²⁹ WHEN THEY ARRIVED AT THE WATER GATE,³⁰ THEY SOUNDED A TEKIAH [LONG BLAST], A TERUAH [TREMULOUS NOTE] AND AGAIN A TEKIAH [LONG BLAST]. [THE PRIEST THEN] WENT UP THE ASCENT [OF THE ALTAR]³¹ AND TURNED TO HIS LEFT³² WHERE THERE WERE TWO SILVER BOWLS. R. JUDAH SAID, THEY WERE OF PLASTER [BUT THEY LOOKED SILVER] BECAUSE THEIR SURFACES WERE DARKENED FROM THE WINE. THEY HAD EACH A HOLE

(1) A mnemonic acrostic formed by the initial letters of פִּיּוּם ‘balloting’, זֶמַן ‘season’, רִגְלָה ‘festival’, קָרְבָּן ‘sacrifice’, שִׁיר ‘psalm’, בְּרִכָּה ‘benediction’.

(2) There were so many sacrifices on the first seven days, that the balloting for duty among the courses of priests was unnecessary. On the Eighth Day there was but one bullock offered and it was balloted for (cf. infra 55b).

(3) As stated supra.

(4) That it is unnecessary to dwell on it in the Sukkah.

(5) The number of bullocks offered is not six as might have been expected if the sixth day had been regarded as the eighth of the days of Tabernacles on each of which the number of bullocks was reduced by one.

(6) That the duty of rejoicing prescribed for the seven days of the Festival applies to the Eighth Day also.

(7) Deut. XVI, 15.

(8) Since ‘joyful’ is superfluous, the duty of rejoicing having been mentioned earlier in the context.

(9) Sc. one must include the night belonging to the Eighth Day and following the seventh in the rejoicings of the concluding day, i.e., the number of sacrifices on the seventh day must be such as to suffice for the night following; and since the night is included much more so the day that follows since the time for offerings is the day-time.

(10) Sc. that offerings must be brought on the eve of the first day of the Festival in order to provide for the first evening when no offering may be brought.

(11) Lit., ‘but’, ‘only’; E.V., ‘altogether’.

(12) Implying a limitation, v. Pes. 5a.

(13) Of the concluding day.

(14) On the seventh day.

(15) Since he must still use it for learning, sleeping or any occasional meal on that day.

(16) From the Sukkah into the house where he is to have his meals in the evening and the following day.

(17) For the rejoicings of which the house has to be prepared.

(18) V. supra n. 4.

(19) I.e., he had nowhere else to eat.

(20) To indicate that he is not using his Sukkah for more than the prescribed seven days.

(21) So Asheri. Cur. edd. in parenthesis, ‘Rab’.

(22) Thus invalidating it and showing that it is no longer in use.

(23) By doing in it that which is forbidden in a Sukkah (cf. supra 29a) he indicates that it is no longer in use as a Sukkah but as an ordinary hut.

(24) In Babylon where the proper calculations of the calendar are unknown, the Eighth Day may be the seventh, and the Sukkah must, therefore, be used on the morrow. It cannot be invalidated by a breach in its roof so one places there a lamp which can subsequently be removed. The Palestinians, however, who are familiar with the calculations, make no more use of the Sukkah after the seventh day, and it may, therefore, be invalidated on that day.

(25) The kindling of the lamp.

(26) Into which no lamp may be brought during the seven days of the Festival (cf. supra 29a).

(27) Where a lamp may be taken in even during the seven days.

(28) Ibid.

(29) A pool near Jerusalem.

(30) One of the gates of the Temple court.

(31) Which was on the south (Mid. III, 3).

(32) Towards the south-west of the altar where the water libations were offered.

LIKE A SLENDER SNOUT,¹ ONE [HOLE] BEING WIDE AND THE OTHER NARROW SO THAT BOTH EMPTIED THEMSELVES² TOGETHER.³ THE ONE ON THE WEST WAS FOR WATER AND THE ONE⁴ ON THE EAST FOR WINE. IF ONE Poured THE FLAGON OF WATER INTO THE BOWL FOR WINE, OR THAT OF WINE INTO THAT FOR WATER, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION. R. JUDAH STATED, WITH ONE LOG⁵ HE PERFORMED THE CEREMONY OF THE WATER-LIBATION ALL EIGHT⁶ DAYS. TO [THE PRIEST] WHO PERFORMED THE LIBATION THEY USED TO SAY, 'RAISE THY HAND';⁷ FOR ON A CERTAIN OCCASION, A CERTAIN MAN⁸ Poured OUT THE WATER OVER HIS FEET, AND ALL THE PEOPLE PELTED HIM WITH THEIR ETHROGS.

AS WAS ITS PERFORMANCE ON WEEKDAYS, SO WAS ITS PERFORMANCE ON THE SABBATH, SAVE THAT ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH AN UNHALLOWED⁹ GOLDEN BARREL WAS FILLED FROM THE SILOAM, AND PLACED IN A CHAMBER. IF IT WAS Poured AWAY OR UNCOVERED, IT WAS REFILLED FROM THE LAVER,¹⁰ FOR WINE OR WATER WHICH HAS BECOME UNCOVERED IS INVALID FOR THE ALTAR.

GEMARA. Whence do we know this?¹¹ — R. Ena replied, From Scripture which says, Therefore with joy shall ye draw water [from the wells of salvation].¹²

There were once two minim,¹³ one was called Sason¹⁴ and the other Simha.¹⁵ Said Sason to Simha, 'I am better than you, since it is written, They shall obtain Sason and Simha'.¹⁶ 'I', said Simha to Sason, 'am better than you, since it is written, The Jews had Simha and Sason'.¹⁷ 'One day', said Sason to Simha, 'they will take you out¹⁸ and make you a runner, since it is written, For with Simha shall they go forth'.¹⁹ 'One day', said Simha to Sason, 'they will take you out¹⁸ and draw with you water, for it is written, "Therefore with Sason shall ye draw water"'.¹²

A certain min²⁰ whose name was Sason once said to R. Abbahu, 'You are destined to draw water for me in the world to come, for it is written, "Therefore be-sason shall ye draw water"'.²¹ 'If', the other retorted, 'it had been written, "le-sason"²² it would be as you say, but as it is written "be-sason"²³ the meaning must be that a water-skin will be made of your skin, and water will be drawn with it'.

[THE PRIEST] WENT UP THE ASCENT [OF THE ALTAR] AND TURNED TO HIS LEFT etc. Our Rabbis have taught, All who ascended the altar turned to the right, proceeded round and descended by the left,²⁴ save those ascending for the following three purposes,²⁵ who ascended by the left,²⁶ turned on their heel²⁷ and returned [the same way]. These [three things] are the water-libation and wine-libation, and the burnt-offering of a fowl when the altar was full on [its south] east side.²⁸

[BUT THEY LOOKED SILVER] BECAUSE THEIR SURFACES WERE DARKENED. It is well [as regards the flagon of the wine] since wine darkens, but how was that of the water darkened?- Since the Master has said, IF ONE Poured THE FLAGON OF WATER INTO THE BOWL FOR WINE, OR THAT OF WINE INTO THAT FOR WATER, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION, the [flagon] of water may²⁹ thus become darkened.

THEY HAD EACH A HOLE LIKE A SLENDER SNOUT etc. Must we say that our Mishnah³⁰ agrees with R. Judah and not with the Rabbis seeing that we have learnt, R. JUDAH STATED, WITH ONE LOG HE PERFORMED THE CEREMONY OF THE WATER-LIBATION ALL EIGHT DAYS;³¹ for if it agrees with the Rabbis, could they not both pour together?³² — [No,] You may say that it agrees even with the Rabbis, [the reason for the different sizes of the holes being that] wine is viscous and water is fluid. It is in accordance with reason also to say so,³³ for if [our Mishnah concurs with] R. Judah, [it should have used the terms] ‘broad’ and ‘strait’ which he used;³⁴ as it has been taught, R. Judah stated, There were two vessels there, one of water and one of wine, the mouth of the wine [vessel] was broad, and that of the water was strait, so that both should empty themselves together. This is conclusive.

THE ONE ON THE WEST WAS FOR WATER. Our Rabbis taught, It once happened that a certain Sadducee³⁵ poured the water libation over his feet and all the people pelted him with their ethnogs. On that day the horn of the altar became damaged,³⁶ and a handful of salt was brought and it was stopped up, not because the altar was thereby rendered valid for the service, but merely in order that it should not appear damaged

 - (8) A Sadducee. Josephus, Ant. XIII, 13, 5, ascribes the incident to Alexander Jannai, king and High Priest 107-76 B.C.E. The Sadducees denied the validity of this precept and in this way he showed his contempt of the Pharisees.

- (25) Which took place at the south-west corner of the altar.

for¹ an altar which has not the ascent, the horn,² the base³ and the square shape⁴ is invalid for the service. R. Jose b. Judah adds, Also the circuit.⁵

Rabbah b. Bar Hana citing R. Johanan stated, The Pits⁶ have existed⁷ since the Six days of creation,⁸ for it is said, The roundings of thy thighs are like the links of a chain the work of the hands of a skilled workman.⁹ 'The rounding¹⁰ of thy thighs' refers to the Pits; 'like the links¹¹ of a chain' implies that their cavity¹² descends to the abyss; 'the work of the hands of a skilled workman' means that they are the skillful handiwork of the Holy One, blessed be He.

The school of R. Ishmael taught: Bereshith;¹³ read not bereshith but bara shith.¹⁴

It has been taught, R. Jose says, The cavity of the Pits descended to the abyss, for it is said, Let me sing of my well-beloved, a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My well-beloved had a vineyard on a very fruitful hill.¹⁵ And he digged it, and cleared it of stones, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also hewed out a vat therein.¹⁶ 'And planted it with the choicest vine', refers to the Temple; 'and built a tower in the midst of it', refers to the altar; 'and also hewed out a vat therein', refers to the Pits.¹⁷

It has been taught, R. Eleazar b. Zadok stated, There was a small passage-way between the ascent and the altar,¹⁸ on the westward of the ascent, and once in seventy years the young¹⁹ of the priesthood used to descend there²⁰ and gather up therefrom the congealed wine which had the appearance of rounds of pressed figs, and proceeded to burn it in a state of sanctity²¹ as it is said, In the holy place shalt thou pour out a drink-offering of strong drink unto the Lord,²²

just as its libation was done in sanctity, so must its burning be done in sanctity.¹ But what is the proof?² — Rabina answered, An analogy is made between two expressions of 'holy'. It is written here, 'In the holy place shalt thou pour out a drink-offering of strong drink unto the Lord', and it is written elsewhere, Then shalt thou burn the remainder with fire, it shall not be eaten, because it is holy.³

Whose view is followed in what we learned,⁴ 'The law of sacrilege⁵ applies to drink-offerings at the beginning,⁶ but after they have descended into the Pits,⁷ the law of sacrilege does not apply to them'?⁸ Must we say⁹ that it is that of R. Eleazar b. Zadok,¹⁰ for if it were that of the Rabbis [the objection could be raised: Did they not state] that the Pits descended to the abyss?¹¹ You may even say that it is that of the Rabbis, [but it refers to] where it was collected.¹²

There are some who read: Must we say that¹³ it is that of the Rabbis,¹⁴ and not that of R. Eleazar b. Zadok, for if it were that of R. Eleazar b. Zadok, [the objection would arise:] Do they not¹⁵ still retain their hallowed character?¹⁶ — You may even say that it is that of R. Eleazar, for sacrilege cannot apply to anything whose commandment has already been fulfilled.¹⁷

Resh Lakish stated, When the wine-libation was poured upon the altar, the Pits were stopped up,¹⁸ in order to fulfil what is written, 'In holiness shalt thou pour out a drink-offering of strong drink unto the Lord'.¹⁹ But how does this imply it? — R. Papa answered, Shekar²⁰ is an expression suggestive of drink, satiety and plenty. From this it may be inferred, R. Papa observed that when a man has his fill of wine, it is due to his filling of his throat.²¹

Raba remarked, A young scholar who has not much wine should swallow it in quaffs.²² Raba used to gulp down the cup of benediction.²³

Raba made the following exposition: What is the implication of what was written, How beautiful are thy steps in sandals, O prince's daughter?²⁴ How beautiful are the steps of Israel when they go up [to Jerusalem] to celebrate a festival. 'O prince's daughter', means, daughter of our father Abraham, who is called prince, as it is said, The princes of the peoples are gathered together, the people of the God of Abraham.²⁵ 'The God of Abraham'! And not the God of Isaac and Jacob? But the meaning is, The God of Abraham who was the first of proselytes.²⁶

The School of R. Anan taught: It is written,²⁷ The roundings of thy thighs.²⁸ Why are the words of the Torah compared to the thigh? To teach you that just as the thigh is hidden, so should the words of the Torah be hidden,²⁹ and this is the import of what R. Eleazar said, What is the implication of the text, It hath been told thee, O man, what is good, and what the Lord doth require of thee: Only to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?³⁰ 'To do justly' means [to act in accordance with] justice; 'to love mercy' refers to acts of loving kindness³¹ 'and to walk³² humbly with thy God' refers to attending to funerals and dowering a bride for her wedding.³³ Now can we not make a deduction a fortiori: If in matters which are normally performed publicly³⁴ the Torah enjoins 'to walk humbly', how much more so in matters that are normally done privately?³⁵

R. Eleazar stated, Greater is he who performs charity than [he who offers] all the sacrifices, for it is said, To do charity³⁶ and justice is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.³⁷

R. Eleazar further stated, Gemiluth Hasadin³⁸ is greater than charity, for it is said, Sow to yourselves according to your charity, but reap according to your hesed;³⁹ if a man sows, it is doubtful whether he will eat [the harvest] or not, but when a man reaps, he will certainly eat. R. Eleazar further stated, The reward of charity depends entirely upon the extent of the kindness in it,⁴⁰ for it is said, 'Sow to yourselves according to charity, but reap according to the kindness'.

Our Rabbis taught, In three respects is Gemiluth Hasadim superior to charity: charity can be done only with one's money, but Gemiluth Hasadim can be done with one's person and one's money. Charity can be given only to the poor, Gemiluth Hasadim both to the rich and the poor. Charity can be given to the living only, Gemiluth Hasadim can be done both to the living and to the dead.⁴¹

R. Eleazar further stated, He who executes charity and justice is regarded as though he had filled all the world with kindness, for it is said, He loveth charity and justice, the earth is full of the lovingkindness of the Lord.⁴² But lest you say that whoever wishes to do good succeeds without difficulty,⁴³ Scripture expressly says, How precious is Thy lovingkindness, O God etc.⁴⁴ As⁴⁵ one might say that this applies also to a man who fears God,⁴⁶ Scripture expressly says, But the lovingkindness of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him.⁴⁷

R. Hama b. Papa stated, Every man who is endowed with grace⁴⁸ is without doubt a God-fearing man, for it is said, 'But the lovingkindness of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting to them that fear Him.' R. Eleazar further stated, What is the purport of what was written, She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and the Torah of lovingkindness is on her tongue?⁴⁹ Is there then a Torah of lovingkindness and a Torah which is not of lovingkindness? But the fact is that Torah [which is studied] for its own sake is a 'Torah of lovingkindness', whereas Torah [which is studied] for an ulterior motive is a Torah which is not of lovingkindness.

Some there are who say, Torah [which is studied] in order [subsequently] to teach it is a 'Torah of lovingkindness', but Torah [which is] not [studied subsequently] to teach it is a Torah which is not of lovingkindness.

AS WAS ITS PERFORMANCE ON WEEKDAYS etc. But why [bring the water in an UNHALLOWED vessel]? let him bring it in a hallowed one?⁵⁰ — Ze'iri replied, [The author of our Mishnah] is of the opinion that no fixed amount has been prescribed for the water [of libation] and that vessels of ministry hallow their contents even if there was no intention.

(2) That the text refers to burning. No proof is expected for the periodical cleaning of the Pits, since it is obvious that the wine could not be allowed to accumulate there for ever.

- (14) The case being one where the drink-offerings were intercepted in the Pits.

- (16) Why then should not the law of sacrilege still apply?

If, therefore, it were brought in a hallowed vessel it would have been rendered invalid by remaining therein overnight.

Hezekiah¹ replied, Vessels of ministry do not in fact hallow their contents where there was no intention, but [the use of a hallowed vessel was here forbidden] as a preventive measure lest it be assumed that there was intention that the contents should be hallowed.² R. Jannai citing R. Zera replied, You may even say that a fixed amount has been prescribed for the water [of libation]³ and that vessels of ministry do not hallow their contents unless there was intention, [but the use of a hallowed vessel was nevertheless forbidden] as a preventive measure lest people will think that it was filled with the water for the purpose of using it for the washing of the hands and the feet [of the High Priest].⁴

IF IT WAS Poured AWAY OR UNCOVERED etc. But why?⁵ Could it not⁶ be filtered through a strainer?⁷ Must we then say⁸ that our Mishnah does not agree with R. Nehemiah, for it has been taught, [Liquid that has passed through] a strainer is forbidden under the law of uncovering, and R. Nehemiah stated, When does this apply? Only when the receptacle underneath⁹ was uncovered, but when the receptacle underneath is covered, even although the upper one¹⁰ was uncovered, the law of uncovering does not apply, since the venom of a serpent is like a fungus which floats on the surface and remains where it is?¹¹ -You may even maintain that it agrees with R. Nehemiah, since it may be submitted that R. Nehemiah's ruling referred to secular use, but not to one divine,¹² for does not R. Nehemiah uphold [the lesson of the verse,] Present it¹³ now to thy governor; will he be pleased with thee? Or will he accept thy person?¹⁴

MISHNAH. THE FLUTE-PLAYING [TOOK PLACE] SOMETIMES [ON] FIVE DAYS AND SOMETIMES ON SIX. THIS REFERS TO THE FLUTE-PLAYING AT BETH HA-SHO'EBAH [THE PLACE OF THE WATER-DRAWING]¹⁵ WHICH OVERRIDES NEITHER THE SABBATH NOR ANY FESTIVAL DAY.¹⁶

- (1) Granting that our Mishnah provides evidence that no specific quantity has been prescribed for the water of libation.
 - (2) And those observing that the water is used despite the fact that it was kept overnight might draw the wrong conclusion that hallowed objects of similar nature are equally unaffected by a stay overnight.
 - (3) Three logs, according to the Rabbis, and one log according to R. Judah.
 - (4) Such water must first be hallowed (cf. Ex. XXX, 19) and however large its quantity it might still be regarded as intended to be used for this purpose. If the water were allowed to be used on the next day, wrong conclusions (cf. p. 234 n. 6) might be drawn.
 - (5) Should uncovered water be invalid.
 - (6) Since the only reason why uncovered water is forbidden is lest a snake injected its venom into it.
 - (7) And thus eliminate the venom.
 - (8) Since the use of a filter is not allowed.
 - (9) The strainer, i.e., the one that receives the filtered water.
 - (10) Sc. the strainer.
 - (11) In the strainer. B.K. 115b, cf. B.B. 97b.
 - (12) Lit., 'for the Most High'.
 - (13) I.e., the blind, the lame and the sick, mentioned by the prophet in the earlier part of the verse.
 - (14) Mal. I, 8; sc. would you offer to God what is rejected by man? As those objectionable offerings (cf. prev. n.) were condemned by the prophet as unsuitable, so is any objectionable thing (such as liquid that was exposed and possibly contaminated by venom) to be condemned as unsuitable for any divine service.
 - (15) בֵּית הַשּׂוֹאֵבָה. The exact meaning of the term which also appears in the form שׂוֹבָה (v. D.S. a.l.) is not clear. For a full discussion of the ceremony v. Feuchtwanger S., MGWJ. LIV-45]. For the details v. infra.
 - (16) Therefore when one of the Intermediate Days was a Sabbath it was performed on five days only.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 50b

GEMARA. It was stated, Rab Judah and R. Ina differ, one of them taught Sho'ebah¹ and the other taught Hashubah.² Mar Zutra observed, He who teaches, Sho'ebah is not in error, and he who teaches Hashubah is not in error. He who teaches Sho'ebah¹ is not in error, since it is written, And ye shall draw water in joy,³ and he who teaches Hashubah is not in error, since R. Nahman stated, It is an important precept, dating from the very Creation.⁴

Our Rabbis taught, The flute-playing overrides the Sabbath; so R. Jose b. Judah; but the Sages ruled, It does not override even the Festival. R. Joseph explained, The dispute⁵ concerns only the song that accompanied the sacrifices,⁶ since R. Jose is of the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music is the instrument, in consequence of which it is a Temple service which overrides the Sabbath, whereas the Rabbis are of the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music is the vocal singing, in consequence of which the [playing of the instruments] is not a Temple service and does not, therefore, override the Sabbath; but with regard to the singing at the Festival of Water-Drawing, all agree that it is a mere expression of rejoicing and does not, therefore, override the Sabbath.

Whence, said R. Joseph, do I derive that the dispute concerns only that?⁷ From what has been taught, If vessels of ministry were made of wood, Rabbi declares them invalid and R. Jose b. Judah holds them to be valid.⁸ Now do they not differ on this principle, that he who declares them valid is of the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music is the instrument⁹ and [its validity may, therefore,] be deduced from that of the reed-flute of Moses,¹⁰ while he who holds them to be invalid is of the opinion that the essential feature of the Temple music is the vocal singing¹¹ and its validity, therefore, cannot be deduced from that of the reed-flute of Moses? — No; both of them may agree that the essential feature of the [Temple] music is the instrument, but in this case they differ on the question whether we may deduce what it is possible [to manufacture from another material] from that which it is impossible [to manufacture from another material].¹² He who declares them valid is of the opinion that we do deduce that which it is possible [to manufacture from another material], from that which it is impossible [to manufacture from another material],¹³ whereas he who holds them to be invalid is of the opinion that we do not deduce the possible from the impossible.¹⁴ And if you wish you may say that all are in agreement that the essential feature of the [Temple] music is the vocal singing,¹⁵ and that¹⁶ we do not deduce the possible from the impossible,¹⁵ but in this case they differ on the question whether, in making the deduction concerning the candlestick,¹⁷ we apply the principle of 'the general and the particular' or the rule of 'extension and limitation'.¹⁸ Rabbi applies the principle of 'the general and the particular' while R. Jose b. Judah applies the principle of 'extension and limitation'. Rabbi applies the principle of the 'general and particular' [thus:] And thou shalt make a candlestick¹⁹ is a general statement, of pure gold¹⁹ is a particular, of beaten work shall the candlestick be made¹⁹ is again a general statement; [the instruction thus consists of] two general [statements] with a particular [statement between], in which case it includes only such things as are similar to the particular [statement],²⁰ so that as the particular is specified to be of metal, so must all [vessels] be of metal. R. Jose b. Judah applies the principle of 'extension and limitation' [thus:] And thou shalt make a candlestick¹⁹ is an extension, of pure gold¹⁹ is a limitation, of beaten work shall the candlestick be made¹⁹ is again an extension. The text thus gives two extensions with a limitation between in which case it includes everything [and excludes but one thing]. What does it include? All materials, and what does it exclude? [Only]²¹ earthenware.

R. Papa stated,

(1) 'Water-drawing'.

(2) 'Important'. The phrase would thus mean 'The Important Rejoicing of the Temple'. [This reading would support the variant hashe'ubah השאובה (v. n. 1) with which it could easily be confused].

(3) Isa. XII, 3.

(4) When, as stated supra 49a, the Pits were created to receive the libations.

(5) Between R. Jose and the Sages.

(6) When the libation of wine was offered in connection with the continual morning and evening offerings (cf. 'Ar. 10a).

(7) Whether the vocal organs or the instruments are the essential features of the Temple music.

(8) Sot. 14b.

(9) And it may, therefore, be regarded as a Temple vessel.

(10) Which was made of wood (cf. 'Ar. 10b). Tradition dated this reedpipe from Moses. As that pipe was made of wood so may all musical instruments of the Temple be made of wood.

(11) So that the instrument cannot be regarded as one of the Temple vessels.

(12) It was impossible (as explained in 'Ar. 10b) to make the best of pipes of anything but reeds. All other vessels, however, can be made from metal.

(13) Hence he allows all vessels to be made from wood as was the reed-pipe of Moses.

(14) Hence it is only the pipe, which (as stated supra) cannot be satisfactorily made of other materials, that may be made of wood, but not any other vessels which can well be made of metal.

(15) No deduction, therefore, may be made from Moses' reed-pipe.

(16) Even if it were to be insisted that the essential feature of the music was the instrument.

(17) Of the sanctuary, which is regarded as the prototype of all the other vessels.

(18) Two methods of homiletics, the former employed by R. Ishmael, the latter by R. Akiba. Cf. Sanh., Sonc. ed., vol I, p. 301, n. I.

(19) Ex. XXV, 31.

(20) Cf. P.B. p. 13.

(21) Since according to the principle of extension and limitation, only the most remote is excluded.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 51a

[This dispute¹ is] on the same principle as the one between the following Tannas concerning which we have learnt,² [The instrument players in the Temple] were the slaves of the priests; so R. Meir. R. Jose says, They were the families of Beth Ha-Pegarim, and Beth Zipporia who hailed from Emmaus³ and were married into the priestly stock.⁴ R. Hanina b. Antigonus says, They were Levites.⁵ Now do they⁶ not differ on the following principles: He who says that they were slaves is of the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music was the vocal singing,⁷ while he who says that they were Levites holds the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music was the instrument?⁸ — But do you understand this? What then is the opinion upheld by R. Jose? If he is of the opinion that the essential feature of the [Temple] music was the singing, then even slaves [should be allowed to play the instruments],⁹ and if he is of the opinion that the essential feature was the instrument, should not then only Levites [be allowed to play] but not Israelites?¹⁰ But the fact is that all agree that the essential feature of the [Temple] music was the vocal singing, but it is on this that they differ: One Master holds that the practice was as he stated¹¹ while the other Master holds that the practice was as he stated.¹¹ In what respect could this¹² matter? — In respect of taking the fact that a man stood upon the platform¹³ as proof of honourable descent¹⁴ or [as proof that he is eligible for] tithes.¹⁵ He who says that they were slaves is of the opinion that the fact that [one's ancestor] stood upon the platform is proof neither of honourable descent nor that [he is eligible for] tithes;¹⁶ he who says that they were Israelites [of honourable family] is of the opinion that we accept the standing upon the platform as proof of honourable descent, but not [of eligibility for] tithes;¹⁷ while he who says that they were Levites is of the opinion that the standing upon the platform is accepted as proof in regard to both honourable descent and [eligibility for] tithes.¹⁸

R. Jeremiah b. Abba, however, maintains¹⁹ that the dispute²⁰ concerns only the music²¹ at the Water-Drawing, since R. Jose b. Judah is of the opinion that even an added expression of Rejoicing²² overrides the Sabbath, while the Rabbis are of the opinion that an added expression of Rejoicing does not override [either] the Sabbath [or the Festival], but as regards the music which accompanied the sacrifices, all agree that it is [an integral part of] the Service and overrides the Sabbath.

An objection was raised.²³ [It was taught,] The music which accompanied the Water-Drawing overrides the Sabbath. So R. Jose b. Judah. The Sages, however, rule that it does not override even the Festival. Is not this a refutation of R. Joseph?²⁴ — It is indeed a refutation.

Can we also say that they²⁵ dispute only concerning the music which accompanied the Water-Drawing, but that with regard to the music that accompanied the sacrifices all²⁶ agree that it overrides the Sabbath, and this²⁷ would, therefore, constitute a double refutation of R. Joseph?²⁸ — [No.] R. Joseph could answer you, They dispute concerning the music that accompanied the Water-Drawing and the same applies also to [that which accompanied] the sacrifices, and the reason that they expressed their different views with regard to the Water-Drawing was in order to acquaint you with the extent of the view of R. Jose b. Judah, viz., that even the music of the Water-Drawing overrides [the Sabbath]. Was it not, however, stated, THIS REFERS TO THE FLUTE-PLAYING AT THE PLACE OF THE WATER-DRAWING, WHICH OVERRIDES NEITHER THE SABBATH NOR ANY FESTIVAL DAY, [from which we can infer that] this [playing] does not override the Sabbath, but the playing which accompanied the sacrifices does override [the Sabbath]?²⁹ Now whose view is it? If you were to say that it is that of R. Jose b. Judah, did he not state that the playing which accompanies the Water-Drawing also overrides the Sabbath?³⁰ Consequently it must be, [must it not,] the view of the Rabbis, and thus³¹ arises a double refutation of R. Joseph?³² It is indeed a refutation.

What is the reason of him who stated that the essential feature of the [Temple] music was the instrument? — Because it is written, And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar. And when the burnt-offering began, the song of the Lord began also, and the trumpets together with the instruments of David, King of Israel.³³ What is the reason of him who stated that the essential feature of the Temple music was the vocal singing? — Because it is written, It came even to pass, when the trumpeters and the singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard.³⁴ As to the other also,³⁵ is it not written, ‘and Hezekiah commanded etc.’?³⁶ — It is this that was meant: The song of the Lord began’ vocally ‘together with the instruments of David, King of Israel’, which were but to sweeten the voice. And as to the other one too,³⁷ is it not written, ‘it came even to pass, when the trumpeters and singers were as one’?³⁸ — It is this that was meant: ‘The singers’ performed in the same manner as ‘the trumpeters’. Just as the trumpeters [performed] with instruments, so did the singers [perform] with instruments.

MISHNAH. HE³⁹ WHO HAS NOT SEEN THE REJOICING AT THE PLACE OF THE WATER-DRAWING HAS NEVER SEEN REJOICING IN HIS LIFE. AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE FIRST FESTIVAL DAY OF TABERNACLES THEY⁴⁰ DESCENDED⁴¹ TO THE COURT OF THE WOMEN⁴² WHERE THEY HAD MADE A GREAT ENACTMENT.⁴³ THERE WERE THERE GOLDEN CANDLESTICKS WITH FOUR GOLDEN BOWLS ON THE TOP OF EACH OF THEM AND FOUR LADDERS⁴⁴ TO EACH, AND FOUR YOUTHS DRAWN FROM THE PRIESTLY STOCK IN WHOSE HANDS WERE HELD JARS OF OIL CONTAINING ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY LOG WHICH THEY Poured INTO THE BOWLS.⁴⁵

FROM THE WORN-OUT DRAWERS AND GIRDLES OF THE PRIESTS THEY MADE WICKS AND WITH THEM THEY KINDLED THE LAMPS; AND⁴⁶ THERE WAS NOT A COURTYARD IN JERUSALEM THAT WAS NOT ILLUMINED BY THE LIGHT OF THE PLACE OF THE WATER-DRAWING.

- (26) Even the Sages.
- (27) Since he submitted that the Sages hold that this music does not override the Sabbath.
- (28) Both with regard to the Water-Drawing and the sacrifices. In the case of the former he maintained that R. Jose holds that it does not override the Sabbath, while here it is shown that according to R. Jose it does override it; while in the case of the latter he maintained that the Sages hold that it does not override the Sabbath, from here it might be inferred that according to their view it does.
- (29) Apparently we can.
- (30) While here it is stated that it does not override it.

WITH LIGHTED TORCHES IN THEIR HANDS,¹ AND SING SONGS AND PRAISES. AND LEVITES WITHOUT NUMBER WITH HARPS, LYRES, CYMBALS AND TRUMPETS AND OTHER MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS WERE THERE UPON THE FIFTEEN STEPS LEADING DOWN FROM THE COURT OF THE ISRAELITES TO THE COURT OF THE WOMEN, CORRESPONDING TO THE FIFTEEN SONGS OF ASCENTS² IN THE PSALMS.³ IT WAS UPON THESE⁴ THAT THE LEVITES STOOD⁵ WITH THEIR INSTRUMENTS OF MUSIC AND SANG THEIR SONGS. TWO PRIESTS STOOD BY THE UPPER GATE WHICH LEADS DOWN FROM THE COURT OF THE ISRAELITES TO THE COURT OF THE WOMEN, WITH TWO TRUMPETS IN THEIR HANDS. WHEN THE COCK CROWED THEY SOUNDED A TEK'AH [LONG DRAWN-OUT BLAST], A TERU'AH [TREMULOUS NOTE] AND AGAIN A TEK'AH.⁶ WHEN THEY REACHED THE TENTH STEP THEY SOUNDED A TEK'AH, A TERU'AH AND AGAIN A TEK'AH. WHEN THEY REACHED THE COURT⁷ THEY SOUNDED A TEK'AH, A TERU'AH AND AGAIN A TEK'AH.⁸ AND WHEN THEY REACHED THE GROUND⁹ THEY SOUNDED A TEK'AH, A TERU'AH, AND AGAIN A TEK'AH.¹⁰ THEY PROCEEDED, SOUNDING THEIR TRUMPETS, UNTIL THEY REACHED THE GATE WHICH LEADS OUT TO THE EAST. WHEN THEY REACHED THE GATE WHICH LEADS OUT TO THE EAST, THEY TURNED THEIR FACES FROM EAST TO WEST¹¹ AND PROCLAIMED, OUR FATHERS¹² WHO WERE IN THIS PLACE [STOOD] WITH THEIR BACKS TOWARD THE TEMPLE OF THE LORD, AND THEIR FACES TOWARD THE EAST, AND THEY WORSHIPPED THE SUN TOWARD THE EAST,¹³ BUT AS FOR US, OUR EYES ARE TURNED TO THE LORD'. R. JUDAH STATED, THEY USED TO REPEAT [THE LAST WORDS] AND SAY 'WE ARE THE LORD'S AND OUR EYES ARE TURNED TO THE LORD'.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught, He who has not witnessed the rejoicing at the place of the Water-Drawing has never seen rejoicing in his life. He who has not seen Jerusalem in her splendour, has never seen a desirable city in his life. He who has not seen the Temple in its full construction has never seen a glorious building in his life. Which Temple?¹⁴ — Abaye, or it might be said, R. Hisda, replied, The reference is to the building of Herod.¹⁵ Of what did he build it? — Rabbah¹⁶ replied, Of yellow and white marble. Some there are who say, With yellow, blue and white marble. The building rose in tiers¹⁷ in order to provide a hold for the plaster. He¹⁸ intended at first to overlay it with gold, but the Rabbis told him, Leave it alone for it is more beautiful as it is, since¹⁹ it has the appearance of the waves of the sea.

It has been taught, R. Judah stated, He who has not seen the double colonnade²⁰ of Alexandria in Egypt²¹ has never seen the glory of Israel. It was said that it was like a huge basilica, one colonnade within the other, and it sometimes held²² twice the number of people that went forth from Egypt.²³ There were in it seventy-one cathedras of gold, corresponding to the seventy-one members of the Great Sanhedrin,²⁴ not one of them containing less than twenty-one²⁵ talents of gold, and a wooden platform in the middle upon which the attendant of the Synagogue stood with a scarf in his hand. When the time came to answer Amen,²⁶ he waved his scarf and all the congregation²⁷ duly responded. They moreover did not occupy their seats promiscuously, but goldsmiths sat separately, silversmiths separately, blacksmiths separately, metalworkers separately and weavers separately, so that when a poor man entered the place he recognized the members of his craft and on applying²⁸ to that quarter obtained a livelihood for himself and for the members of his family.²⁹

Abaye stated, Alexander of Macedon³⁰ slew them all. Why were they so punished? — Because they transgressed this verse: Ye shall henceforth return no more³¹ that way,³² and they did return. When he³³ came and found them reading from The Book, ‘The Lord will bring a nation against thee from afar’,³⁴ he remarked, ‘I³⁵ should have brought my ships in a ten days’ journey, but as a strong wind arose the ships arrived in five days’! He, therefore,³⁶ fell upon them and slew them.

AT THE CONCLUSION OF THE FIRST FESTIVAL DAY etc. What was the GREAT ENACTMENT? — R. Eleazar replied, As that of which we have learnt. Originally [the walls of the Court of the Women] were smooth,³⁷ but [later the Court] was surrounded with a gallery, and it was enacted that the women should sit above and the men below.³⁸

Our Rabbis have taught, Originally the women used to sit within [the Court of the Women] while the men were without, but as this caused levity, it was instituted that the women should sit without and the men within. As this, however, still led to levity, it was instituted that the women should sit above³⁹ and the men below.

But how could they do so?⁴⁰ Is it not written, All this [do I give thee] in writing as the Lord hath made me wise by His hand upon me?⁴¹ — Rab answered, They found a Scriptural verse and expounded it:

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 52a

And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart.¹ Is it not, they said, an a fortiori argument? If in the future² when they will be engaged in mourning and the Evil Inclination will have no power over them,³ the Torah⁴ nevertheless says, men separately and women separately, how much more so now⁵ when they are engaged in rejoicing and the Evil Inclination has sway over them.⁶

What is the cause of the mourning [mentioned in the last cited verse]?¹ — R. Dosa and the Rabbis differ on the point. One explained, The cause is the slaying of Messiah the son of Joseph,⁷ and the other explained, The cause is the slaying of the Evil Inclination.

It is well according to him who explains that the cause is the slaying of Messiah the son of Joseph, since that well agrees with the Scriptural verse, And they shall look upon me because they have thrust him through, and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for his only son;⁸ but according to him who explains the cause to be the slaying of the Evil Inclination, is this [it may be objected] an occasion for mourning? Is it not rather an occasion for rejoicing? Why then should they weep? — [The explanation is] as R. Judah expounded: In the time to come⁹ the Holy One, blessed be He, will bring the Evil Inclination and slay it in the presence of the righteous and the wicked. To the righteous it will have the appearance of a towering hill, and to the wicked it will have the appearance of a hair thread. Both the former and the latter will weep; the righteous will weep saying, 'How were we able to overcome such a towering hill!' The wicked also will weep saying, 'How is it that we were unable to conquer this hair thread!' And the Holy One, blessed be He, will also marvel together with them, as it is said, Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in those days, it shall¹⁰ also be marvellous in My eyes.¹¹

R. Assi stated, The Evil Inclination is at first like the thread of a spider, but ultimately¹² becomes like cart ropes, as it is said, Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart-rope.¹³

Our Rabbis taught, The Holy One, blessed be He, will say to the Messiah, the son of David (May he reveal himself speedily in our days!), 'Ask of me anything, and I will give it to thee', as it is said, I will tell of the decree etc. this day have I begotten thee, ask of me and I will give the nations for thy inheritance.¹⁴ But when he will see that the Messiah the son of Joseph is slain, he will say to Him, 'Lord of the Universe, I ask of Thee only the gift of life'. 'As to life', He would answer him, 'Your father David has already prophesied this concerning you', as it is said, He asked life of thee, thou gavest it him, [even length of days for ever and ever].¹⁵

R. 'Awira or, as some say, R. Joshua b. Levi, made the following exposition: The Evil Inclination has seven names. The Holy One, blessed be He, called it Evil, as it is said, For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth.¹⁶ Moses called it the Uncircumcised, as it is said, Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart.¹⁷ David called it Unclean, as it is said, Create me a clean heart, O Lord,¹⁸ which implies that there is an unclean one. Solomon called it the Enemy, as it is said, If thine enemy¹⁹ be hungry, give him bread²⁰ to eat and if he be thirsty give him water to drink.²¹ For thou wilt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord will reward thee;²² read not, 'will reward thee'²³ but 'will cause it to be at peace with thee.'²⁴ Isaiah called it the Stumbling-Block, as it is said, Cast ye up, Cast ye up, clear the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people.²⁵ Ezekiel called it Stone, as it is said, And I will take away the heart of stone out of your flesh and I will give you a heart of flesh.²⁶ Joel called it the Hidden One, as it is said, But I will remove far off from you the hidden one.²⁷

Our Rabbis taught: 'But I will remove far off from you the hidden one',²⁷ refers to the Evil Inclination which is constantly hidden in the heart of man; and will drive him into a land barren and desolate²⁸ means, to a place where there are no men for him to attack; with his face toward the eastern sea,²⁸ [implies] that he set his eyes against the First Temple²⁹ and destroyed it and slew the scholars who were therein; and his hinder part toward the western sea²⁸ [implies] that he set his eyes against the Second Temple and destroyed it and slew the scholars who were therein. That his foulness may come up and his ill-savour may come up²⁸ [means] that he leaves the other nations in peace and attacks only Israel.³⁰ Because he hath done great things.²⁸ Abaye explained, Against scholars³¹ more than against anyone;³² as was the case when Abaye heard a certain man saying to a woman, 'Let us arise betimes and go on our way'. 'I will', said Abaye, 'follow them in order to keep them away from transgression' and he followed them for three parasangs across the meadows. When they parted company³³ he heard them say, 'Our company is pleasant, the way is long'.³⁴ 'If it were I',³⁵ said Abaye, 'I could not have restrained myself', and so went and leaned in deep anguish against a doorpost, when a certain old man³⁶ came up to him and taught him: The greater the man, the greater his Evil Inclination.

R. Isaac stated, The [Evil] Inclination of a man grows stronger within him from day to day, as it is said, Only evil all the day.¹ R. Simeon b. Lakish stated, The Evil Inclination of a man grows in strength from day to day and seeks to kill him, as it is said, The wicked watcheth the righteous and seeketh to slay him;² and were it not that the Holy One, blessed be He, is his help, he would not be able to withstand it, as it is said, The Lord will not leave him in his hand, nor suffer him to be condemned when he is judged.³

The school of R. Ishmael taught, If this repulsive wretch⁴ meets thee, drag him to the Beth Hamidrash.⁵ If he is of stone, he will dissolve, if of iron he will shiver into fragments. 'If he is of stone he will dissolve', for it is written, Ho, every one that thirsteth come ye to the water⁶ and it is written, The waters wear the stones.⁷ 'If he is of iron, he will shiver into fragments', for it is written, Is not my word like as fire? Saith the Lord, and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?⁸

R. Samuel b. Nahmani citing R. Johanan stated, The Evil Inclination entices man in this world and testifies against him in the world to come, as it is said, He that delicately bringeth up his servant from a child shall have him become a manon⁹ at the last,¹⁰ for according to the Atbah¹¹ of R. Hiyya a witness¹² is called¹³ manon.¹⁴ R. Huna pointed out an incongruity: It is written, For the spirit of harlotry hath caused them to err,¹⁵ but is it not also written, [For the spirit of harlotry] is within them?¹⁶ First it only causes them to err, but ultimately it enters into them. Raba observed, First he¹⁷ is called a passer-by, then he is called a guest, and finally he is called a man,¹⁸ for it is said, And there came a passer-by¹⁷ to the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the guest¹⁷ and then it is written, but took the poor man's lamb and dressed it for the man¹⁷ that was come to him.¹⁹

R. Johanan remarked, There is a small organ in man which satisfies him when in hunger and makes him hunger when satisfied,²⁰ as it is said, When they were starved²¹ they became full etc.²²

R. Hana b. Abba stated: It was said at the schoolhouse, There are four things of which the Holy One, blessed be He, repents that He had created them, and they are the following: Exile, the Chaldeans, the Ishmaelites and Evil Inclination. 'The Exile', since it is written, Now, therefore, what do I here, saith the Lord, seeing that My people is taken away for naught etc.;²³ ‘the Chaldeans’, since it is written, Behold the land of the Chaldeans — this is the people that was not;²⁴ ‘the Ishmaelites’, since it is written, The tents of the robbers²⁵ prosper, and they that provoke God are secure since God brought them with His hand;²⁶ ‘the Evil Inclination’, since it is written, [And I will gather her that is driven away] and her that I have afflicted.²⁷

R. Johanan remarked, Were it not for [the declarations in] the following three Scriptural verses,²⁸ the feet of the enemies of Israel²⁹ would have sunk. One is the verse, And her that I have afflicted;³⁰ the other is the verse, Behold, as the clay in the potter's hand, so are ye in My hand, O House of Israel;³¹ and the third, And I will take away the heart of stone out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh.³² R. Papa observed, [This may be derived] from the following verse also, And I will put My spirit into you.³³

And the Lord showed me four craftsmen.³⁴ Who are these ‘four craftsmen’? — R. Hana b. Bizna citing R. Simeon Hasida replied: The Messiah the son of David, the Messiah the son of Joseph, Elijah and the Righteous Priest.³⁵ R. Shesheth objected,³⁶ If so, was it correct to write, These³⁷ are the horns which scattered Judah,³⁸ seeing that they came to turn [them] back?³⁹ — The other answered him, Go to the end of the verse: These then are come to frighten them, to cast down the horns of the nations, which lifted up their horns against the Land of Judah, to scatter it⁴⁰ etc. Why, said R. Shesheth to him, should I argue with Hana in Aggada?⁴¹

And this shall be peace: when the Assyrian shall come into our land, and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise up against him seven shepherds and eight princes among men.⁴² Who are the ‘seven shepherds’? — David in the middle, Adam, Seth and Methuselah⁴³ on his right, and Abraham, Jacob and Moses⁴⁴ on his left. And who are the ‘eight princes among men’? — Jesse, Saul, Samuel, Amos, Zephaniah, Zedekiah, the Messiah, and Elijah.⁴⁵

FOUR LADDERS etc. A Tanna taught, the height of a candlestick was fifty cubits.

AND FOUR YOUTHS DRAWN FROM THE PRIESTLY STOCK IN WHOSE HANDS WERE HELD JARS OF OIL CONTAINING ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY LOG. It was asked: Were there one hundred and twenty log for⁴⁶ all of them or one hundred and twenty log for each? — Come and hear: With jars of oil in their hands, each of thirty log making a total of one hundred and twenty log.

A Tanna taught, And they⁴⁷ were superior⁴⁸ to the son of Martha the daughter of Boethus.⁴⁹ It was said of the son of Martha the daughter of Boethus, that he⁵⁰ could take⁵¹ two sides of a huge ox which cost one thousand zuz and walk with them,⁵² heel to toe,⁵³ but the Sages would not permit him to do so because In the multitude of the people is the King's glory.⁵⁴ In what respect, however, were they⁵⁵ superior? If you will say because of the weight do not those⁵⁶ weigh more?⁵⁷ — The fact is that in that case there was an ascent every four [cubits length of which rose only to a height of about one cubit]⁵⁸ so that it was far from being perpendicular, while here there were ladders which were almost perpendicular.⁵⁹

A woman could¹ sift wheat by the illumination of the place of the Water-Drawing.

MEN OF PIETY AND GOOD DEEDS, etc. Our Rabbis have taught, Some of them, used to say,² 'Happy our youth that has not disgraced our old age'. These were the men of piety and good deeds. Others used to say, 'Happy our old age which has atoned for our youth'. These were the penitents. The former and the latter, however, said, 'Happy he who hath not sinned, but let him who hath sinned return and He will pardon him.'³

It was taught, Of Hillel the Elder, It was said that when he used to rejoice at the Rejoicing at the place of the Water-Drawing, he used to recite thus, 'If I am here, everyone is here; but if I am not here, who is here?'⁴ He also used to recite thus, 'To the place that I love, there My feet lead me: if thou wilt come into My House, I will come into thy house; if thou wilt not come to My House, I will not come to thy house, as it is laid, In every place where I cause My name to be mentioned, I will come unto thee and bless thee'.⁵

He⁶ moreover once saw a skull floating upon the face of the water. 'Because', he said to it, 'thou didst drown others, they have drowned thee, and they that drowned thee shall be drowned too'.⁷

R. Johanan stated, A man's feet are responsible for him; they lead him to the place where he is wanted.⁸

There were once two Cushites⁹ who attended on Solomon, and these were Elihoreph and Ahyah, the sons of Shisha, scribes,¹⁰ of Solomon. One day Solomon observed that the Angel of Death was sad. 'Why', he said to him, 'art thou sad?' — 'Because', he answered him, 'they¹¹ have demanded from me the two Cushites who sit here'.¹² [Solomon thereupon] gave them in charge of the spirits¹³ and sent them to the district of Luz.¹⁴ When, however, they reached the district of Luz¹⁵ they died. On the following day he observed that the Angel of Death was in cheerful spirits. 'Why', he said to him, 'art thou cheerful?' — 'To the place', the other replied, 'where they expected them from me, thither didst thou send them!'¹⁶ Solomon thereupon uttered the saying, 'A man's feet are responsible for him; they lead him to the place where he is wanted'.

It was taught: They said of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel that when he rejoiced at the Rejoicing at the place of the Water-Drawing, he used to take eight lighted torches [and throw them in the air] and catch one and throw one and they did not touch one another;¹⁷ and when he prostrated himself, he used to dig his two thumbs in the ground, bend down,¹⁸ kiss the ground, and draw himself up again,¹⁸ a feat which no other man could do, and this is what is meant by Kidah.¹⁹

Levi showed in the presence of Rabbi what Kidah is and as a result, became lame.²⁰ But was this the cause of his [lameness]? Did not R. Eleazar in fact state, One should never cast reproach against Providence, for a great man cast reproach against Providence and was as a result rendered lame, and he was²¹ Levi?²² Both the former and the latter were the cause [of his lameness].²³

Levi²⁴ used to juggle in the presence of Rabbi²⁵ with eight knives, Samuel before King Shapur²⁶ with eight glasses of wine,²⁷ and Abaye before Rabbah²⁸ with eight eggs or, as some say, with four eggs. It was taught: R. Joshua b. Hanania stated, When we used to rejoice at the place of the Water-Drawing, our eyes saw no sleep. How was this? The first hour [was occupied with] the daily morning sacrifice; from there [we proceeded] to prayers; from there [we proceeded] to the additional sacrifice, then the prayers to the additional sacrifice, then to the House of Study, then the eating and drinking, then the afternoon prayer, then the daily evening sacrifice, and after that the Rejoicing at the place of the Water-Drawing [all night]. But it cannot be so!²⁹ For did not R. Johanan rule, He who says, 'I take an oath not to sleep for three days' is to be flogged³⁰ and he may sleep forthwith?³¹ — The fact is that what was meant was this: 'We did not enjoy a proper sleep', because they dozed on one another's shoulder.

FIFTEEN STEPS. R. Hisda said to a certain Rabbi who was arranging his Aggadas before him,³² 'Have you heard in correspondence to what David composed his fifteen Songs of Ascent?'³³ — 'Thus', the other replied, 'said R. Johanan: When David dug the Pits³⁴ the Deep rose up and threatened to submerge the world, and David thereupon uttered the fifteen Songs of Ascent and caused its waves to subside'. But if so, [asked R. Hisda,] ought it not to be Songs of Descent, instead of Ascent? — 'Since you have reminded me', the other replied '[I may say that] it was stated thus: When David dug the Pits, the Deep arose and threatened to submerge the world. "Is there anyone", David enquired, "who knows whether it is permitted to inscribe the [Ineffable] Name upon a sherd, and cast it into the Deep that its waves should subside?" There was none who answered a word. Said David, "Whoever knows the answer and does not speak, may he be suffocated". Whereupon Ahitophel¹ adduced an a fortiori argument to himself: "If, for the purpose of establishing harmony between man and wife, the Torah said, Let My name that was written in sanctity² be blotted out by the water,³ how much more so may it be done in order to establish peace in the world!" He, therefore, said to him, "It is permitted!" [David] thereupon inscribed the [Ineffable] Name upon a sherd, cast it into the Deep and it subsided sixteen thousand cubits. When he saw that it had subsided to such a great extent, he said, "The nearer it is to the earth, the better the earth can be kept watered" and he uttered the fifteen Songs of Ascent and the Deep reascended fifteen thousand cubits and remained one thousand cubits [below the surface]'. Ulla remarked, Deduce therefrom that the thickness of the earth's surface is one thousand cubits.⁴ But do we not see that one has but to dig a little for the waters to emerge? — R. Mesharsheya answered, That⁵ is due to the high level⁶ [of the source] of the Euphrates.⁷

TWO PRIESTS STOOD BY THE UPPER GATE WHICH LEADS DOWN etc. R. Jeremiah asked, [What is meant by] 'THE TENTH STEP'? Does it mean that they descended five [of the fifteen] and stood upon the remaining ten, or rather that they descended ten and stood upon the five? — It cannot be decided.⁸

Our Rabbis taught, Since it is said, And their faces toward the east,⁹ is it not obvious that their backs were toward the Temple of the Lord?⁹ What then is the import of the statement, 'their backs were toward the Temple of the Lord'? It teaches that they uncovered themselves and committed there a nuisance.

WE ARE THE LORD'S AND OUR EYES ARE TURNED TO THE LORD etc. But can it be so? Did not R. Zera in fact rule, He who repeats Shema', Shema'¹⁰ is as though he said Modim, Modim [and he is silenced]?¹¹ — The fact is that it was this that they used to say, "They worshipped the sun toward the east" but as for us we give thanks unto the Lord, and to the Lord do our eyes hope'.¹²

MISHNAH. THEY NEVER SOUNDED LESS THAN TWENTY-ONE BLASTS IN THE TEMPLE,¹³ AND NEVER MORE THAN FORTY-EIGHT. EVERY DAY THEY BLEW TWENTY-ONE BLASTS¹⁴ IN THE TEMPLE, THREE AT THE OPENING OF THE GATES,¹⁵ NINE AT THE DAILY MORNING SACRIFICE,¹⁶ AND NINE AT THE DAILY EVENING SACRIFICE. AT THE ADDITIONAL SACRIFICES¹⁷ THEY SOUNDED AN ADDITIONAL NINE; AND ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH THEY ADDED SIX, THREE AS A SIGN TO THE PEOPLE TO CEASE FROM WORK AND THREE TO MARK A DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE HOLY AND THE PROFANE.¹⁸

ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH IN THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF THE [SUKKOTH] FESTIVAL, THERE WERE [THEREFORE] FORTY-EIGHT BLASTS, [VIZ.,] THREE AT THE OPENING OF THE GATES,¹⁵ THREE AT THE UPPER GATE,¹⁹ THREE AT THE LOWER GATE,²⁰ THREE AT THE WATER-DRAWING, THREE AT THE ALTAR,²¹ NINE AT THE DAILY MORNING SACRIFICE, NINE AT THE DAILY EVENING SACRIFICE, NINE AT THE ADDITIONAL SACRIFICES, THREE AS A SIGN TO THE PEOPLE TO CEASE FROM WORK, AND THREE TO MARK A DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE HOLY AND THE PROFANE.¹⁸ GEMARA. Our Mishnah does not agree with R. Judah, for it has been taught: R. Judah ruled, The minimum number of blasts is seven, and the maximum sixteen.²² What is the basic principle of their dispute? — R. Judah is of the opinion that Teki'ah, Teru'ah and Teki'ah²³ are counted as one, and the Rabbis²⁴ are of the opinion that the Teki'ah and the Teru'ah are separate and distinct notes. What is the reason of R. Judah? — Scripture says, And ye shall sound a Teki'ah Teru'ah,²⁵ which clearly proves that the Teki'ah and the Teru'ah are regarded as one.²⁶ And the Rabbis?²⁷ — That verse is required to teach that the Teru'ah must be preceded and followed by a sustained blast.²⁸ What then is the reason of the Rabbis? — Because it is written, And when the congregation is to be gathered together, ye shall sound a Teki'ah, but not a Teru'ah.²⁹ Now if you could imagine that the Teki'ah and the Teru'ah form one note, would the Divine Law say, 'Perform one half of the commandment, but not the other half'?³⁰ And R. Judah?³¹ — That sounding was a mere signal.³² And the Rabbis? — It was indeed a signal, but the Divine Law³³ made it into a commandment.

Whose view is followed in that which R. Kahana stated, There must be no interval whatever between the Teki'ah and the Teru'ah?³⁴ — In agreement with whose view [you ask]? In agreement with that of R. Judah.³⁵ But³⁶ is not this obvious?

(12) [Since each mention of the name of the Lord has reference to a different context, the suggestion of dualism does not arise].

- (27) How, in view of this text can they maintain that the Teki'ah and the Teru'ah are regarded as separate blasts?
- (28) Since in this verse Teki'ah precedes Teru'ah, and in another it follows it (cf. R. H. 34a). Cur. edd. in parenthesis insert, 'And whence does R. — [No.] As it might have been said that it is also in agreement with the view of the Rabbis, and that its purpose¹ was to exclude the view of R. Johanan who laid down that if a man heard the nine Teki'ahs² in nine hours³ during the day he has still fulfilled his obligation, therefore he informed us [that it agrees only with the view of R. Judah]. Might it not be suggested that it is indeed so?⁴ — If it were so,⁵ what could be meant by 'no interval whatever'?

ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH IN THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF THE FESTIVAL etc. But [the sounding of the trumpet] on the tenth step⁶ he does not mention. In agreement with whose view then is our Mishnah? — It is in agreement with that of R. Eliezer b. Jacob, for it has been taught: Three blasts on the tenth step. R. Eliezer b. Jacob ruled, Three at the altar. He⁷ who ruled three on the tenth step omits the three at the altar; and he⁸ who ruled three at the altar omits the three upon the tenth step.

What is the reason of R. Eliezer b. Jacob? — Since one sounded the trumpet for the opening of the gates, why should one sound it on the tenth step? Is it not a gate!⁹ It is, therefore, preferable that the trumpet should be sounded at the altar. The Rabbis, however, are of the opinion that since one sounds the trumpet for the Water-Drawing,¹⁰ why should one sound it at the altar?¹¹ It is, therefore, preferable to sound it upon the tenth step.¹²

When R. Aha b. Hanina came from the South, he brought a Baraitha with him [which read:] And the sons of Aaron the priests shall blow with trumpets.¹³ Surely there was no need to state explicitly 'shall blow', since it is already written, Ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt-offerings and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings.¹⁴ Why then was it stated, 'shall blow'? [To teach you that] the sounding of the trumpets is throughout in accordance with the number of the additional offerings.¹⁵ He¹⁶ taught this [Baraitha] and he also explained it to mean that the trumpet is to be sounded¹⁷ for every single additional offering.¹⁸

We have learnt, ON THE EVE OF THE SABBATH IN THE INTERMEDIATE DAYS OF THE FESTIVAL THERE WERE [THEREFORE] FORTY-EIGHT BLASTS. Now if it were so,¹⁹ why was it not stated²⁰ that on the Sabbath of the Festival²¹ it was possible to have fifty-one blasts?²² — R. Zera answered, Because the trumpet was not sounded at the opening of the gates on the Sabbath.²³

Who is this, Raba exclaimed, who is not concerned about the flour [he grinds out]?²⁴ [The answer is untenable], firstly, because we have learnt EVERY DAY²⁵ and, secondly, even if there were²⁶ the same number,²⁷ it should still have been stated that 'on the Sabbath of the Festival they blew forty-eight blasts' since from this statement one could make two deductions, that of R. Eliezer b.

Jacob²⁸ and that of R. Aha b. Hanina.²⁹ The fact, however, is, Raba explained, [that the reason³⁰ is] because the trumpet was not sounded for the Water-Drawing on the Sabbath,³¹ so that³² the number was diminished much.³³

But³⁴ why was not the New Year that fell on a Sabbath mentioned³⁵ seeing that on it there are three additional sacrifices: The additional offering of the New Year, the additional offering of the New Moon, and the additional offering of the Sabbath?³⁶ — It was necessary to teach the instance of the eve of the Sabbath in the Intermediate Days of the Festival in order to inform us that the law is in agreement with R. Eliezer b. Jacob.³⁷ Was it then asked why the one was not mentioned instead of the other? [The question in fact is] why is not the one mentioned as well as the other?³⁸ — [The Tanna of our Mishnah] might have mentioned some and omitted others. But what else did he omit to justify this omission also?³⁹ — He omitted the instance of the eve of Passover.⁴⁰

 - (28) That the blowing of the trumpets was upon the altar and not on the tenth step, as our Mishnah goes on to explain.

 - (34) According to R. Aha who maintains that each additional offering was accompanied by additional blasts.

(35) Among the maxima in our Mishnah.

(36) Making a total of forty-eight: The twenty-one daily blasts and the twenty-seven for the three additional sacrifices.

(37) As stated supra, that no blasts were sounded on the tenth step.

(38) Lit., 'let him teach this and let him teach that'.

(39) The answer that he mentioned some and omitted others is valid only if it can be shown that other instances beside the one under discussion have also been omitted.

(40) The sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb was performed by three groups of the people, each one reading the Hallel three times and sounding three blasts on the trumpet each time, making a total of twenty-seven blasts (cf. Pes, 64a). which added to the twenty-one blasts sounded daily, amounts to forty-eight.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 54b

If [the omission is to be justified] on account of the omission of the eve of the Passover, [the latter, it may be pointed out], is no omission, for this statement¹ is made according to² R. Judah who stated, Never in the life of the third group did they reach the verse, I love the Lord, for he heareth my voice,³ since the people composing the group were few in number.⁴ But⁵ did you not say that the earlier part of our Mishnah is not in agreement with R. Judah?⁶ — Is it not possible that our Tanna agrees with R. Judah on one point⁷ though he disagrees with him on another point?⁸ What else then was omitted that we might say that this also was similarly omitted? — The other omission was the eve of the Passover which fell on the eve of a Sabbath, when six blasts are to be subtracted⁹ and six¹⁰ are to be added.

AND NEVER MORE THAN FORTY-EIGHT. No? But is there not the eve of the Passover which falls on the Sabbath, on which, if the statement is in agreement with R. Judah, there were fifty-one blasts, and if it is in agreement with the Rabbis¹¹ there were fifty-seven?¹² — [Our Mishnah] mentioned only those which recur annually, but does not mention the case of the eve of the Passover which falls on the Sabbath, since it does not occur every year. Does then the eve of the Sabbath in the Intermediate Days of a Festival occur every year? May it sometimes not happen at all, this being the case¹³ when, for instance, the first day of the Festival coincides with the eve of the Sabbath?¹⁴ — No, when the first day of the Festival would coincide with the eve of the Sabbath, the Festival is postponed.¹⁵ What is the reason?¹⁶ — Because if the first day of the Festival were to fall on the eve of the Sabbath, when would the Day of Atonement [of that year] be? On the [previous] Sunday.¹⁷ Therefore it is postponed.¹⁸

But do we postpone it? Have we not in fact learnt, The fats [of offerings performed on] the Sabbath¹⁹ may be offered on the Day of Atonement,²⁰ and R. Zera furthermore stated, When I was²¹ in the school of Rab in Babylon²² I used to say that that which has been taught, 'If the Day of Atonement fell on the eve of the Sabbath, they did not sound the trumpet,²³ and if it fell at the conclusion of the Sabbath²⁴ they did not recite the Habdalah'²⁵ is agreed to by all,²⁶ but when I came up to Palestine²⁷ I found R. Judah the son of R. Simeon b. Pazzi that he sat at his studies and taught that it was in agreement with R. Akiba only?²⁸ — This is no difficulty since the one statement²⁹ is according to the Rabbis³⁰ and the other³¹ according to 'the Others',³² for it has been taught, 'Others' say, There cannot be more than four weekdays' difference between the Pentecost of one year and the next, and between one New Year and the next,³³ and if the year was prolonged,³⁴ there would be five days.³⁵

An objection was raised.³⁶ If New Moon fell on the Sabbath, the Psalm of the New Moon³⁷ supersedes the Psalm of the Sabbath.³⁸ Now if the law were [as R. Aha stated], why³⁹ should not one say both that of the New Moon and that of the Sabbath?⁴⁰ — R. Safra replied: What is meant by 'supersedes'? That it⁴¹ supersedes it⁴² in the sense of taking precedence over it. But why? [Does not then] that which is constant take precedence over that which is not constant?⁴³ — R. Johanan answered, [The New Moon Psalm was given precedence] in order that people should know that the

New Moon has been fixed⁴⁴ at its proper time.⁴⁵ Do we then use this⁴⁶ as a distinguishing sign? Do we not in fact use another distinguishing sign, as we have learnt:⁴⁷ 'The fats⁴⁸ of the Daily Morning offering were placed on the lower half of the Ascent [of the altar] on its east side,⁴⁹ while those of the additional offerings were placed on the lower half of the Ascent on its west side;⁵⁰ while those of the New Moon were placed beneath the rim of the altar below,'⁵¹

- (2) Lit., 'this according to whom'.
- (3) Ps. CXVI,1; sc. they did not complete the Hallel even once. The number of blasts in their case was, therefore, no more than three.
- (4) Pes. 64a; most of the people having joined the first, or the second group. Only in the case of these two groups, the offering of whose sacrifices took longer than the singing of the Hallel, owing to their large number, it was necessary to read it a second and a third time.

- (28) Shab. 114b. Now in any case both the Mishnah and the Baraitha cited prove that the Day of Atonement may fall on a Sunday. How then could it be maintained that if it were to fall on a Sunday it must be postponed?
- (29) Our Mishnah which implies that there is no Intermediate Sabbath every year.
- (30) Who allow the addition of an extra day to Ellul to meet certain exigencies. Hence the postponement.
- (31) The Baraitha which implies that the Day of Atonement can fall on a Sunday.
- (32) Sc. R. Meir who allows no addition of any extra day to a month to meet certain exigencies and, consequently, no postponement.
- (33) I.e., if in one year it falls on a Sunday, in the next it must be on a Thursday, since the twelve months consist of 29 and 30 days alternately or $6 \times (29 + 30) = 354$ days $= 354/7$ weeks $= 50$ weeks and 4 days.

- (34) By the addition of an extra month.
- (35) The additional intercalated month being always twenty-nine days, R.H. 6b.

and in connection with this R. Johanan stated that [the reason for this¹ was] that people should know that the New Moon has been fixed at its proper time? — Two distinguishing signs were made, so that some might see the one while others might see the other.²

An objection was raised³ [from what] Raba b. Samuel learned: Since it might have been presumed that as the trumpet is sounded for the Sabbath on its own⁴ and for the New Moon on its own⁵ it is also sounded for each additional offering separately.⁶ Scripture, therefore, teaches explicitly, And on your New Moons.⁷ Is not this then a refutation of R. Aha? — It is indeed a refutation. But how is the inference⁸ made? — Abaye answered, Scripture says, 'And on your New Moons', whereby all the months are compared with one another.⁹ R. Ashi answered, It is written, 'your month'¹⁰ and it is written 'On the beginnings of.'¹¹ What month is it that has two beginnings? It is, you must say, that of the New Year,¹² and the Divine Law nevertheless says, 'your month'¹⁰ viz., that it is to be regarded as one.

Moreover it has been taught: What did they recite on the first day of the Intermediate Days?¹³ Ascribe unto the Lord, O ye sons of might.¹⁴ On the second day what did they recite? But unto the wicked God saith.¹⁵ On the third day what did they recite? Who will rise up for me against the evil-doers?¹⁶ On the fourth day what did they recite? Consider, ye brutish among the people.¹⁷ On the fifth day what did they recite? I removed his shoulder from the burden.¹⁸ On the sixth day what did they recite? All the foundations of the earth are moved;¹⁹ and if the Sabbath occurred on any of these days²⁰ 'are moved'²¹ is to be superseded.²² R. Safra assigned to them²³ the mnemonic Humbahi.²⁴ R. Papa assigned to them the mnemonic Humhabi;²⁵ and the mnemonic for you²⁶ is 'the escort of the scribes'.²⁷ Now is not this a refutation of R. Aha b. Hanina?²⁸ — It is indeed a refutation.

But did not R. Aha b. Hanina quote both a Scriptural verse and a Baraita [in support of his view]?²⁹ — Rabina answered, [The meaning of the Baraita is] that the trumpet blasts are lengthened.³⁰ The Rabbis of Caesarea in the name of R. Aha³¹ stated, It³² means that the number of the trumpeters is to be increased.

And we who keep two days [of the Festival], how do we proceed?³³ — Abaye ruled, The [paragraph for the] second day is to be omitted.³⁴ Raba ruled, [That of] the seventh day is omitted.³⁵ It was taught in agreement with Raba: If the Sabbath falls on one of them³⁶ 'are moved'³⁷ is omitted.

 - (28) Who ruled supra that for every additional offering of the day there were special blasts, thus requiring also special Psalms while here it is ruled that one Psalm superseded the other.
 - (29) How then could such an authoritative statement be refuted?
 - (30) Not as R. Aha b. Hanina interpreted it. The Baraitha merely says that 'they sound according to the additional offerings'. The explanation that it means separate blasts for each additional offering is R. Aha's alone and his own interpretation might well be refuted.
 - (31) Not to be confused with R. Aha b. Hanina.
 - (32) The Baraitha.
 - (33) The paragraphs of the sacrifices (v. Num. XXVIII) are to be read on the respective days. Since, owing to doubt, two days instead of one, are kept as the first day of the Festival, thus diminishing the Intermediate Days by one, which of the paragraphs is to be omitted?

(36) The days of Tabernacles.

(37) Sc. Ps. LXXXII, i.e., the Psalm of the seventh, which is the last day.

(38) In the case of the Pentateuchal texts dealing with the respective sacrifices on the different days of the Festival, that are included in the additional prayers of the respective days.

(39) Lit., 'to skip'. Sc. on the first day of the Intermediate Days, concerning which there is doubt whether it is the second or the third day of the Festival, the paragraphs relating to the second and the third (Num. XXIX, 17-22) are recited; on the second day which might be the third or the fourth, the paragraphs relating to the third and the fourth (ibid 20-25) are recited; on the third day, which might be the fourth or the fifth, the paragraphs relating to the fourth and fifth (ibid. 23-28) are recited, and so on. None of the paragraphs is thus omitted. This is the custom followed nowadays.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 55b

MISHNAH. ON THE FIRST FESTIVAL DAY OF TABERNACLES THERE WERE OFFERED THIRTEEN BULLOCKS, TWO RAMS AND ONE HE-GOAT.¹ FOURTEEN HE-LAMBS² THEREFORE³ REMAINED FOR THE OTHER EIGHT COURSES OF PRIESTS. ON THE FIRST DAY, SIX⁴ OFFERED⁵ TWO EACH AND THE REMAINING [TWO] ONE EACH.⁶ ON THE SECOND DAY⁷ FIVE [COURSES]⁸ OFFERED⁵ TWO EACH AND THE REMAINING [FOUR] ONE EACH.⁶ ON THE THIRD DAY⁹ FOUR [COURSES]¹⁰ OFFERED TWO EACH AND THE REMAINING [SIX] ONE EACH.¹¹ ON THE FOURTH DAY¹² THREE¹³ OFFERED TWO EACH AND THE REMAINING [EIGHT] ONE EACH.¹¹ ON THE FIFTH DAY¹² TW¹³ OFFERED TWO EACH AND THE REMAINING [TEN] ONE EACH.¹¹ ON THE SIXTH DAY¹² ONE¹³ OFFERED TWO AND THE REMAINING [TWELVE] ONE EACH.¹¹ ON THE SEVENTH DAY¹⁴ ALL WERE EQUAL.¹⁵ ON THE EIGHTH DAY¹⁶ THEY AGAIN CAST LOTS¹⁷ AS ON THE OTHER PILGRIM FESTIVALS. IT WAS ENJOINED THAT [THE COURSE] THAT OFFERED BULLOCKS ON ONE DAY SHOULD NOT OFFER THEM ON THE MORROW, BUT THAT THEY SHOULD TAKE THEIR TURNS IN ROTATION.¹⁸

GEMARA. Must we say that our Mishnah¹⁹ represents the view of Rabbi, and not that of the Rabbis, since it has been taught, For the bullock which is offered on the Eighth Day lots are cast as at first,²⁰ these are the words of Rabbi, but the Sages ruled, One of the two courses which did not have a third turn in the bullocks²¹ offered it? — You may even say that it represents the view of the Rabbis,²² for do not two courses also require²³ the casting of lots?²⁴

Whose view is followed in that which has been taught, All the courses repeated²⁵ a second and a third time, with the exception of two courses who repeated a second time but not a third one?²⁶ Must we say that it follows that of Rabbi, and not that of the Rabbis?²⁷ — You may even say that it follows that of the Rabbis, but the statement that²⁸ they did not repeat a third time refers to the bullocks of the Festival.²⁹ What then does this³⁰ teach us?³¹ — It is this that we were taught, that he who offered bullocks on the one day shall not offer them on the morrow, but they must all take their turns in rotation.

R. Eleazar³² stated, To what do those seventy bullocks³³ [that were offered during the seven days of the Festival] correspond? To the seventy nations.³⁴ To what does the single bullock [of the Eighth Day] correspond? To the unique nation.³⁵ This may be compared to a mortal king who said to his servants, 'Prepare for me a great banquet'; but on the last day he said to his beloved friend, 'Prepare for me a simple meal that I may derive benefit from you'.

R. Johanan observed, Woe to the idolaters, for they had a loss and do not know what they have lost.³⁶ When the Temple was in existence the altar atoned for them, but now³⁷ who shall atone for them?

MISHNAH. AT THREE PERIODS IN THE YEAR³⁸ ALL THE COURSES OF THE PRIESTS SHARED EQUALLY IN THE FESTIVAL SACRIFICES³⁹ AND IN THE DIVISION OF THE SHEWBREAD.⁴⁰ ON PENTECOST⁴¹ THEY USED TO SAY TO THE PRIEST,⁴² 'HERE IS UNLEAVENED BREAD FOR YOU,⁴³ HERE IS LEAVENED BREAD'.⁴⁴ THE COURSE OF PRIESTS WHOSE PERIOD OF SERVICE WAS FIXED [FOR THAT FESTIVAL WEEK]⁴⁵ OFFERED THE DAILY OFFERING, VOW-OFFERINGS AND FREEWILL-OFFERINGS AND ALL OTHER CONGREGATIONAL OFFERINGS,⁴⁶ AND IT OFFERED THEM ALL.⁴⁷

GEMARA. But are not the emurim⁴⁸ the Most High's?⁴⁹ - R. Hisda replied, [The meaning is], that which is prescribed [to be offered] on the Festivals.⁵⁰

Our Rabbis taught, Whence do we know that all the courses share equally in the sacrifices of the Festival? Since Scripture explicitly stated, And come with all the desire of his soul . . . and minister.⁵¹ As it might be said that the same applies to all the days of the year Scripture explicitly teaches 'From one of thy gates'⁵² [meaning this:] I have said so, [saith the Lord], Only when all Israel enter⁵³ by one gate.⁵⁴

AND IN THE DIVISION OF THE SHEWBREAD. Our Rabbis taught, Whence do we know that all the courses share equally in the division of the shewbread?

(1) As prescribed in Num. XXIX, 13 and 16, a total of sixteen beasts.

(2) Ibid. 13.

(3) Since there were twenty-four courses (v. Ta'an., Sonc. ed., pp. 136 and 142f) of priests all of whom were entitled to share in the Festival sacrifices, and sixteen of these were occupied with the sixteen beasts (ct. n. 7).

(4) Of the eight courses.

(5) Of the fourteen lambs.

(6) A total of fourteen.

(7) When the number of bullocks was reduced by one (cf. Num. XXIX, 17), and only fifteen courses were occupied with the twelve bullocks, two rams and one he-goat.

(8) Of the remaining (24 — 15 =) 9.

(9) When the number of bullocks was again reduced by one. From the second day to the seventh day the number was reduced by one on each successive day (v. Num. XXIX, 17-32).

(10) Of the remaining (24 — 14 =) 10.

(11) A total of fourteen.

(12) Cf. p. 267, n. 15 mut. mut.

(13) Cf. p. 267, n. 16.

(14) When the number of beasts, seven bullocks, two rams, fourteen he-lambs (Num. XXIX, 32) and one he-goat (ibid. 34) was equal to the number of the courses of priests.

(15) Sc. each course offered one beast.

(16) When there was but one bullock, one ram and seven he-lambs to be offered (Num. XXIX, 36) a number that did not suffice to provide even one beast for each course of priests.

(17) As prescribed in Yoma 22a.

(18) So that twenty-two of the courses had three turns with the bullocks and only two had no more than two turns (cf. Rashi a.l.).

(19) Which states ON THE EIGHTH DAY THEY AGAIN CAST LOTS, presumably for all the twenty-four courses.

(21) Cf. supra n. 8.

(22) The Sages.

(23) To determine which of them should have the privilege of offering the bullock of the Eighth Day.

(24) Of course they do.

(25) The offering of a bullock during the seven days of Tabernacles.

- (26) Tosef. Suk. IV, 15.
- (27) Since according to the Rabbis, who regard the offering of the bullock of the Eighth Day as connected with the offerings on the previous seven days, only one course did not offer a third time.
- (28) Lit., 'what'.
- (29) But not to the bullock of the Eighth Day.
- (30) The statement that twenty-two repeated three times and two repeated only twice.
- (31) Is it not obvious that seventy bullocks divided among twenty-four courses means that twenty-two offered three each and the remaining two courses two each?
- (32) Cur. edd. in parenthesis, 'Eliezer'.
- (33) Cf. prev. n. but one.
- (34) Seventy is the traditional number of Gentile nations, and the seventy bullocks are offered to make atonement for them.
- (35) Israel.
- (36) By their destruction of the Temple.
- (37) That it is no longer in existence.
- (38) Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles.
- (39) Sc. those prescribed for respective Festivals. The word used is emurim which usually signifies that part of the sacrifice which is burnt upon the altar. The Gemara explains this infra.
- (40) If there was a Sabbath during the Festival. Cf. Lev. XXIV, 5-9. The shewbread was removed from the table and distributed among the priests on the Sabbath day (cf. Men. 52b).
- (41) If it happened to be on a Sabbath.
- (42) When he was given his share.
- (43) Sc. shewbread. The twelve loaves of the shewbread were unleavened.
- (44) The two loaves prescribed as a Pentecost offering. These were leavened. Each priest must receive a share from the leavened as well as from the unleavened. It is not enough to give him a larger share in the one to make up for the share due to him in the other (cf. Kid. 53a, Men. 73a).
- (45) Each course officiated in turn for one week during which they offered and received the dues from all the sacrifices of that week.
- (46) That have not been prescribed for the Festival. It is only in the sacrifices that were prescribed for the Festival in question that all the courses have an equal share.
- (47) This apparently superfluous statement is explained in the Gemara infra.
- (48) Rendered in our Mishnah SACRIFICES (cf. supra p. 269, n. 14).
- (49) Burnt upon the altar. How then can they be shared among the priests?
- (50) R. Hisda connects emurim with amur 'stated', 'declared', referring to the sacrifices prescribed to be offered by individuals on a Festival; the festive peace-offerings of the breast and shoulder belonged to the priests, and the burnt-offerings brought on appearing in the Temple of which the hide was given to the priests. V. Hag., Sonc. ed., p. 2, nn. 1-2.
- (51) Deut. XVIII, 6, 7. 'Levite' in this verse refers to the priests. On all other days the offering belonged to the officiating course (cf. Lev. VII, 9).
- (52) Deut. XVIII, 6; emphasis on 'one'.
- (53) I.e., into the one city of Jerusalem.
- (54) Sc. during the Festivals.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 56a

From Scripture which teaches, They shall have portion to portion to eat,¹ meaning, as the division of the service [is equal for all], so is the division of the food.² Now what food [could this mean]? If you will say that it means the sacrifices, do we not deduce that from a different verse,³ It shall be the priest's that offers it?⁴ Consequently⁵ it must refer to the shewbread. As one might assume that the same applies also to obligatory offerings that are offered on the Festival, though not on account of the Festival,⁶ Scripture explicitly teaches, Except for that which is sold⁷ according to the fathers' houses;¹ now what is it that the fathers have sold to each other? [The week allotted to each course, each one having agreed] ‘I shall be in charge in my week and you in your week’.⁸

ON PENTECOST THEY USED TO SAY TO THE PRIEST etc. It was stated, Rab ruled, [The benediction of] the Sukkah⁹ [comes first]¹⁰ and then that of the season.⁹ Rabbah b. Bar Hana ruled, [The benediction of] the season [is first] and then that of the Sukkah. ‘Rab ruled, [The benediction of] the Sukkah [comes first] and then that of the season’, since the obligation of the day is more important. ‘Rabbah b. Bar Hana ruled, [The benediction of] the season [is first]’, since that which is more constant¹¹ precedes that which is less constant.¹² Must we say that Rab and Rabbah b. Bar Hana differ on the same principles as those on which Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel differed? For our Rabbis have taught, These are the points of difference between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel with regard to [the ritual at] a meal: Beth Shammai rule that one¹³ recites the benediction of the day¹⁴ and then the benediction over the wine, whereas Beth Hillel rule that one recites the benediction over the wine and then the benediction of the day. ‘Beth Shammai rule that one recites the benediction of the day and then the benediction over the wine’, since it is the day which is the cause of the wine being brought,¹⁵ and [moreover] the sanctification of the day comes before the wine is brought,¹⁶ ‘whereas Beth Hillel rule that one recites the benediction over the wine first and then the benediction of the day’, since the wine is the cause of the sanctification being recited.¹⁷ Another reason: The benediction over wine is more common,¹⁸ and the benediction of the day less common,¹⁹ and that which is more common takes precedence over that which is less common.²⁰ Now must we say that Rab²¹ is in agreement with Beth Shammai and Rabbah b. Bar Hana²² with Beth Hillel? — [No,] Rab can answer you, I may uphold my view even according to Beth Hillel, for Beth Hillel maintain their ruling only in that case, since the wine is the cause of the sanctification being recited, but not in this case, since even if there were no benediction of the season, do we not say [the benediction of] the Sukkah?²³ And Rabbah b. Bar Hana can answer you, I may maintain my view even according to Beth Shammai, for Beth Shammai gave their ruling only in that case, since it is the day which is the cause of the wine being brought, but not in this case, since even without a Sukkah do we not recite [the benediction of] the season?²⁴

We have learnt, ON PENTECOST THEY USED TO SAY TO THE PRIEST, ‘HERE IS UNLEAVENED BREAD FOR YOU, HERE IS LEAVENED BREAD’. Now here, surely, the leavened bread is the essential feature [of the Festival]²⁵ and the unleavened bread an unessential one,²⁶ and yet it teaches, ‘HERE IS UNLEAVENED BREAD FOR YOU, HERE IS LEAVENED BREAD’. Is not this then a refutation of Rab?²⁷ — Rab can answer you, This point is one in dispute between Tannas; for it has been taught [elsewhere], ‘Here is unleavened bread for you, here is leavened bread’. Abba Saul, [however] stated, [They said,] ‘Here is leavened bread for you, here is unleavened’.

R. Nahman b. R. Hisda expounded: The law is not according to Rab who said, [First the benediction of] the Sukkah and then [that of] the season, but first [is the benediction of] the season and then [is that of] the Sukkah. R. Shesheth the son of R. Idi however, laid down, First [the benediction of] the Sukkah and then [that of] the season; and the law is that the benediction of Sukkah is first and then follows that of the season.

THE COURSE OF PRIESTS WHOSE PERIOD OF SERVICE WAS FIXED etc., AND ALL OTHER CONGREGATIONAL OFFERINGS. What does [this]²⁸ include? — It includes the bullock brought as a result of a transgression caused by the forgetfulness of the congregation²⁹ and the he-goats brought as an atonement for idolatry.³⁰

AND IT OFFERED THEM ALL. What does this include? — It includes the slack season³¹ of the altar.³² MISHNAH. IF A FESTIVAL FELL NEXT TO THE SABBATH, EITHER BEFORE OR AFTER IT,³³ ALL THE COURSES SHARED EQUALLY IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE SHEWBREAD. IF ONE DAY INTERVENED BETWEEN THEM,³⁴ THE COURSE WHOSE

PERIOD OF SERVICE WAS FIXED [FOR THAT WEEK] TOOK TEN [OF THE] LOAVES, WHILE THEY THAT WERE DETAINED³⁵ TOOK TWO.³⁶ ON ALL OTHER DAYS OF THE YEAR THE INCOMING COURSE TOOK SIX LOAVES AND THE OUTGOING COURSE SIX.³³ R. JUDAH STATED, THE INCOMING COURSE TOOK SEVEN AND THE OUTGOING FIVE.³³ THE INCOMING COURSE DIVIDED IT IN THE NORTH, AND THE OUTGOING IN THE SOUTH.³³ [THE COURSE OF] BILGAH³⁷ ALWAYS DIVIDED IT IN THE SOUTH,³³ SINCE THEIR RING³⁸ WAS IMMOVABLE³⁹ AND THEIR ALCOVE⁴⁰ WAS BLOCKED UP.

GEMARA. What is meant by BEFORE and what by AFTER? If you will say that BEFORE refers to the First Day of the Festival and AFTER to the Last Day of the Festival,⁴¹ is not then [the Sabbath referred to] the very Sabbath of the Intermediate Days? But the fact is that BEFORE refers to the Last Day of the Festival and AFTER refers to the First Day of the Festival.⁴² What is the reason?⁴³ — Since the one course⁴⁴ had to arrive early⁴⁵ and the other had to leave late,⁴⁶ the Rabbis made the provision⁴³ in order that they⁴⁷ might have their meals together.

IF ONE DAY INTERVENED.

(1) Deut. XVIII, 8.

(2) Lit., 'eating'.

(3) Lit., 'from there'.

(4) Lev. VII, 9, i.e., the priest who offers it is entitled to its dues.

(5) Since it cannot refer to the ordinary sacrifices.

(6) Obligatory offerings which happen to be offered on the Festival, but are not prescribed for the Festival.

(7) E.V., 'his due'.

(8) I.e., that each course shall officiate for one week in rotation. Hence it is only in the sacrifices that are specially prescribed for the Festival that all the courses have an equal share.

(9) Cf. P.B. p. 232.

(10) If one did not recite the benediction of the season when the Sukkah was made in consequence of which (cf. supra 46a) the benedictions of Sukkah and the season have to be recited on entering the Sukkah for the first time during the Festival.

(11) The benediction of the season is recited at all Festivals.

(12) That of Sukkah is recited during Tabernacles only.

(13) In the course of the recital of the kiddush on Friday nights (cf. P.B. p. 124).

(14) The Sabbath.

(15) If not for the Sabbath there would have been no need at all to bring wine.

(16) I.e., the Sabbath is automatically sanctified at sunset.

(17) Without it the sanctification (kiddush) is not said.

(18) It has to be said whenever one drinks wine.

(19) It occurs only once in seven days.

(20) Ber. 51b.

(21) Who laid down that the obligation of the day is more important.

(22) Who holds that the more constant takes precedence.

(23) Of course we do. Hence it takes precedence on account of the precedence of the obligation of the day.

(24) We do; and since the latter is more constant it takes precedence.

(25) Since it is prescribed for the ritual of the day (cf. Lev. XXIII, 17).

(26) It is the ordinary shewbread of the previous Sabbath.

(27) Since that which is constant, though unessential is mentioned first.

(28) The addition of ALL OTHER.

(29) V. Lev. IV, 13 — 14. If the congregation as a whole erred on the Festival through the forgetfulness of a law.

(30) Committed during the Festival.

(31) פ"ק Lit., 'summer time' or 'summer fruit'. V. Shebu., Sonc. ed., p. 50, n. 3.

(32) When there were not sufficient private offerings to supply the altar, freewill-offerings were offered from the public funds.

(33) The Gemara infra explains this.

(34) The Sabbath and the Festival.

(35) If the Festival fell, for instance, on a Thursday, and the outgoing course instead of leaving on Friday remained over the Sabbath.

(36) Since they could have left on the Friday which was an ordinary weekday, if they wanted.

(37) V. I Chron. XXIV, 14.

(38) Which was on the north side.

(39) And useless. Twenty-four rings were attached to the floor of the Temple court, corresponding to the number of courses, to hold the necks of the animals sacrificed by each course respectively. Since Bilgah was debarred from officiating (v. infra) their ring was fixed and made immovable.

(40) A sort of niche in which were kept the sacrificial instruments etc. (cf. Mid. IV, 7).

(41) I.e., the first day fell on Friday or the last day fell on Sunday.

(42) I.e., the last day fell on Friday or the first day on Sunday. There was no Intermediate Sabbath, since the Sabbath either immediately preceded the first day or immediately followed the last.

(43) That the outgoing course received a share in the shewbread.

(44) The incoming.

(45) Before the Sabbath.

(46) After the Festival.

(47) The two courses.

Talmud - Mas. Sukkah 56b

But why the extra two?¹ - R. Isaac answered, They were a reward for the closing of the doors.² But [why should not the outgoing course] say to the other, 'Less for less'?³ — Abaye replied, 'A young pumpkin [in hand] is better than a full-grown one [in the field]'.⁴

Rab Judah stated, In the same manner⁵ they⁶ divided the additional offerings.⁷

An objection was raised: 'The outgoing course offered the Daily Morning Sacrifice and the additional offerings, and the incoming course offered the Evening Daily Sacrifice and the censers';⁸ but it does not state, [does it,] that they divided the additional offerings? — That Tanna⁹ does not deal with the question of division.

Rab objected, But the Tanna cited at the school of Samuel does deal with the question of division, and yet does not mention the division of the additional offerings, for at the school of Samuel it was taught: The outgoing course offered the Daily Morning Sacrifice and the additional offerings; the incoming course offered the Daily Evening Sacrifice and the censers; four priests entered there,¹⁰ two from one course and two from the other and they divided the shewbread. But it does not mention that they divided the additional offerings. Is not this a refutation of Rab Judah? It is indeed a refutation. THE INCOMING COURSE DIVIDED IT IN THE NORTH. Our Rabbis taught, The incoming priests divided their shares in the north in order that it should be seen that they were the incoming course, and the outgoing priests divided theirs in the south, so that it should be seen that they were the outgoing course.¹¹

[THE COURSE OF] BILGAH ALWAYS DIVIDED IT IN THE SOUTH. Our Rabbis taught, It happened that Miriam the daughter of Bilgah¹² apostatized and married an officer of the Greek¹³ kings. When the Greeks¹⁴ entered the Sanctuary,¹⁵ she stamped with her sandal upon the altar, crying out, 'Lukos! Lukos!¹⁶ How long wilt thou consume Israel's money! And yet thou dost not stand by them in the time of oppression!' And when¹⁷ the Sages heard of the incident, they made her ring¹⁸ immovable and blocked up her alcove.¹⁹

Some however, say that the course [of Bilgah] was dilatory in coming²⁰ and [that of] Jeshebeab his brother²¹, entered with him and served in their stead. Although the neighbours of the wicked have no profit [from their proximity]²² the neighbours of Bilgah²³ did have profit, since [after the imposition of the penalty, the course of] Bilgah always²⁴ divided their shares in the south, while that of his brother Jeshebeab did it²⁵ in the north.²⁶

It is well according to him who stated²⁷ that his²⁸ course was dilatory in coming, since for this reason the whole course might well be penalized; but according to him who stated²⁹ that it was Miriam the daughter of Bilgah who apostatized, do we [it may be objected] penalize [even a] father on account of his daughter?

Yes, replied Abaye, as the proverb has it, 'The talk of the child in the market-place, is either that of his father or of his mother'.³⁰ May we then penalize the whole course on account of her father or mother? — 'Woe', replied Abaye, 'to the wicked, woe to his neighbour';³¹ it is well with the righteous and well with his neighbour; as it is said, Say ye of the righteous, that it shall be well with him, for they shall eat the fruit of their doings'.³²

- (1) The question concerns R. Judah. Why, according to him, does the incoming course receive two more loaves than the outgoing one?
 - (2) The incoming course had to close the Temple Gates which the outgoing course had left open.
 - (3) Lit., 'take off for take off', sc. you take one less now and when it is your turn to go out, the next incoming course will in its turn be one less.
 - (4) Proverb. Cf. 'A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush'.
 - (5) As the shewbread.
 - (6) The outgoing and incoming courses.
 - (7) Of the Sabbath, sc. both had equal shares in the skills of the offerings.
 - (8) Of frankincense. Before these were burnt the shewbread could not be eaten.
 - (9) Of the Baraitha cited.
 - (10) The Temple courtyard.
 - (11) Tosef. Sukkah IV.
 - (12) Of the course of Bilgah, although her father's name also might have been Bilgah (v. infra).
 - (13) Sc. Syrian Greek.
 - (14) Cf. prev. n.
 - (15) In 168 B.C.E., during the persecutions of Antiochus IV that culminated in the same year in the Maccabean revolt. [Buchler, Priester, p. 76, n. 3 places this incident during the Roman wars, the terms Greek and Roman being frequently interchangeable in the Talmud].
 - (16) , 'Wolf', name for the altar. [For this expression applied to the altar, with an allusion to its construction and situation rather than to its voraciousness, v. Gen. R. XCIX and Brull, Jahrbucher I, p. 63].
 - (17) After the Maccabean victory.
 - (18) Sc. that of her course.
 - (19) The justice of the penalty is discussed infra.
 - (20) When it was their turn to take charge of the Temple service.
 - (21) Cf. I Chron. XXIV, 13.
 - (22) Cf. 'woe to the wicked, woe to his neighbour' (Neg. XII, 6, Num. R. XVIII, 5 and infra).
 - (23) Sc. the course of his brother Jeshebeab.
 - (24) Even on entering.
 - (25) Even when leaving.
 - (26) Cf. Tosef. Suk. III. The north was deemed to be superior to the south.
 - (27) As a reason for the penalty imposed on the course of Bilgah.
 - (28) Bilgah's.
 - (29) As a reason for the penalty imposed on the course of Bilgah.
 - (30) Parents are held responsible for the character and upbringing of their offspring.

(31) The neighbours of the wicked suffer with him.

(32) Isa. III, 10. The verse is omitted in some editions since it does not conclusively prove Abaye's statement. It may have been quoted merely in order to conclude the Tractate with a happy Scriptural verse.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH . [IF] AN EGG IS LAID ON A FESTIVAL-DAY, BETH SHAMMAI¹ SAY: IT MAY BE EATEN [ON THE SAME DAY], BUT BETH HILLEL¹ MAINTAIN: IT MAY NOT BE EATEN [UNTIL THE DAY IS OVER]. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: [THE QUANTITY OF] LEAVEN² IS OF THE SIZE OF AN OLIVE³ AND LEAVENED BREAD IS OF THE SIZE OF A DATE,⁴ BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: BOTH⁵ ARE OF THE SIZE OF AN OLIVE. HE WHO SLAUGHTERS GAME ON POULTRY ON A FESTIVAL-DAY, BETH SHAMMAI SAY: HE MAY DIG UP [EARTH] WITH A SHOVEL⁶ AND COVER [THE BLOOD],⁷ BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: ONE MAY NOT SLAUGHTER⁸ UNLESS HE HAS [LOOSE] EARTH PREPARED FROM THE DAY BEFORE [THE FESTIVAL];⁹ BUT THEY AGREE THAT IF HE HAS [ALREADY] SLAUGHTERED, HE MAY DIG UP [EARTH] WITH A SHOVEL AND COVER [THE BLOOD], BECAUSE¹⁰ THE ASHES OF THE HEARTH ARE MUKAN [CONSIDERED AS HAVING BEEN PREPARED].¹¹

GEMARA. What¹² are we discussing? If one should say about a hen kept¹³ for food, what is the reason of Beth Hillel,¹⁴ [seeing that] it is food which has been separated;¹⁵ and [if] about a hen kept for laying eggs, what is the reason of Beth Shammai,¹⁶ [seeing that] it is mukzeh?¹⁷ — But what objection is this? Perhaps Beth Shammai do not accept [the prohibition of] Mukzeh? (We are of the opinion that even he who permits mukzeh forbids nolad;¹⁸ what then is the reason of Beth Shammai?) — R. Nahman replied: In table [we are debating] about a hen kept for laying eggs; but he who accepts [the prohibition of] mukzeh accepts [the prohibition of] nolad, and he who rejects [the prohibition of] mukzeh rejects [the prohibition of] nolad.¹⁹ Beth Shammai is [of the same opinion] as R. Simeon²⁰ and Beth Hillel is [of the same opinion] as R. Judah.²¹ But did R. Nahman say thus? Surely we have learnt: Beth Shammai say: One may remove²² [on the Sabbath] from the table [with the hand] bones and nutshells;²³ but Beth Hillel maintain: One lifts off the whole table-top and shakes it.²⁴ And R. Nahman²⁵ said: As for us, we only hold that Beth Shammai [follow the view] of R. Simeon! — R. Nahman can reply to you: With reference to the Sabbath where the Tanna teaches anonymously²⁶ according to [the opinion of] R. Simeon as we have learnt: You may cut up gourds²⁷ for cattle and a carcass²⁸ for dogs²⁹ Beth Hillel is made to represent the opinion of R. Simeon; but

(1) For the Schools of Shammai and Hillel v. J.E. III, 115ff.

(2) On the Feast of Passover, involving penalty; cf. Ex. XII, 19.

(3) But not less.

(4) A date is considered larger than an olive; but v. Jast. s.v.

(5) Leaven and leavened bread.

(6) If loose earth is not available.

(7) Cf. Lev. XVII, 13.

(8) On a Festival-day.

(9) In the three cases here mentioned Beth Shammai is more lenient than Beth Hillel. Hence they are taught together though not all are relevant to the subject.

(10) The sentence introduced by because has no casual relation with what precedes, and infra 8a, the letter ׀ == because, is emended to ׀ == and.

(11) 'Mukan', 'set in readiness'; v. Glos. The wood having been kindled on the previous day, the ashes accumulated during the Festival are considered as if they were prepared before the Festival, as the house-holder had in his mind that there would be ashes which he could use for covering the blood.

(12) Kind of hen that laid the egg.

(13) Lit., 'standing'.

(14) Who say the egg may not be eaten.

(15) From the hen. Since the hen was kept to be killed for food, the egg laid is regarded as a separated edible part of the hen. Cf., however, נרשום Hul. 14b who takes the word אפרת in the sense of פרו ורבו.

(16) Who say the egg may be eaten.

(17) A thing not mentally intended or set in readiness before the Festival to be used on the Festival is called mukzeh; v. Glos. Since the hen was not 'set in readiness' before the Festival the egg should therefore be forbidden to be eaten or handled on the Festival.

(18) Lit., 'born'; i.e., an object which has only come into existence in its present form on a Festival. Such is forbidden to be used on a Festival.

(19) There is no fundamental difference between mukzeh and nolad, only temporal.

(20) Who rejects the prohibition of mukzeh, cf. Shab. 44b.

(21) The opponent of R. Simeon, ibid.

(22) Because they do not accept the prohibition of mukzeh.

(23) Bones and nutshells are regarded as refuse and by the law of mukzeh may not be handled.

(24) Beth Hillel accept the prohibition of mukzeh and therefore rule that one may not remove the bones and nutshells with his hand but gets rid of them by lifting the table-top. Shab. 143a.

(25) R. Nahman, wishing to follow the standard rule that in disputes between Shammai and Hillel the law prevails as Hillel, and also to follow the rule that the law prevails according to the opinion expressed in an anonymous Mishnah, here reverses the teaching of the two Schools.

(26) A Mishnah taught anonymously without mention of its author indicates that the teaching is the prevailing law.

(27) The cutting up of gourds is not regarded as unnecessary labour on Sabbath, for the animals are then better able to feed.

(28) Of an animal that dies on a Sabbath and consequently was not intended before the Sabbath to be given to the dogs to feed on.

with reference to Festivals, where the Tanna teaches anonymously according to [the Opinion of] R. Judah as we have learnt: You may not [on a Festival] chop up firewood from rafters¹ nor from a beam which was broken on a Festival² — Beth Hillel is made to represent the opinion of R. Judah.

Now who taught our Mishnah anonymously, [was it not] Rabbi?³ Why then is it that with reference to the Sabbath he teaches the Mishnah anonymously according to [the opinion of] R. Simeon, whereas with reference to Festivals he teaches the Mishnah anonymously according to R. Judah? — I will answer. With respect to the Sabbath which is stringent so that people will not come to treat it lightly, he taught the Mishnah anonymously according to R. Simeon who is lenient; [with respect to] a Festival which is less stringent⁴ so that people might come to treat it lightly, he taught the Mishnah anonymously according to R. Judah who is strict.

How have you explained it [the Mishnah]? With respect to a hen kept for laying eggs [the prohibition is] on account of mukzeh! If so, then instead of disputing about an egg,⁵ let [the Mishnah state that] they dispute about the hen [itself]!⁶ — It is in order to inform you of the extent of the opinion⁷ of Beth Shammai that [even] nolad is permitted. Then let them, dispute about the hen [itself] to show you the extent [of the opinion] of Beth Hillel that they forbid [even] mukzeh! And if you reply that information with respect to the extent of the opinion of permitting is to be preferred,⁸ then let them dispute about it both,⁹ thus: 'A hen and its egg [laid on a Festival] may be eaten; but Beth Hillel maintain: They may not be eaten'¹⁰ — Therefore, said Rabbah: In reality, it [the Mishnah] refers to a hen kept for food; but we are discussing a Festival which fell on a Sunday,¹¹ and [the prohibition¹² is] on account of preparation [on a Sabbath].¹³ For Rabbah is of the opinion that every egg laid now was completely formed the day before. And Rabbah is consistent with his view;¹⁴ for Rabbah said: What is [the teaching of] that which is written,¹⁵ and it shall come to pass on the sixth day that they shall prepare that which they bring in?¹⁶ [It is that] a weekday may prepare¹⁷ for Sabbath, and a weekday may prepare for a Festival; but a Festival may not prepare for Sabbath and Sabbath may not prepare for a Festival.¹⁸ Said Abaye to him [Rabbah]: But if it is so,¹⁹ let [the egg laid on] a Festival in general²⁰ be permitted!²¹ — It is a preventive measure out of consideration for a Festival falling on a Sunday.²² Let [the egg laid on] a Sabbath in general²³ be permitted!²¹ — It is a preventive measure out of consideration for a Sabbath [immediately] following a Festival.²⁴ But do we enact a preventive measure [in such a case]? Surely it was taught: If one slaughters a hen²⁵ and finds therein eggs completely formed, they may be eaten on the Festival.²⁶ Now if this be so,²⁷ let them²⁸ be prohibited on account of those [eggs] laid on the same day!²⁹ — He answered him: [The case of] there being in a hen eggs completely formed is a rare occurrence, and the Rabbis do not decree a prohibition with regard to a rare occurrence.

R. Joseph said: It³⁰ is a preventive measure on account of [the eating of] fruit fallen [from a tree].³¹ Said Abaye to him: What is the reason [that] fruit fallen from a tree [on a Festival] is forbidden?

- (1) Stacked for building purposes.
 - (2) Before the Festival the beam was not intended to be used for firewood, hence it may not be so used on account of mukzeh, infra 31a, Shab. 157b.

 - (4) Cf. Ex. XII, 16.
 - (5) Which is forbidden on account of its hen.
 - (6) Whether it may be eaten or slaughtered on the Festival, since it was specifically kept for laying eggs.
 - (7) Lit., 'power'; i.e., how far Beth Shammai maintain their view.
 - (8) Because It is an evidence of courage of conviction, while the more rigid opinion may be the outcome of doubt.
 - (9) The hen and its egg. Granted that information respecting the power of permission is preferable, but where, by a slight addition, more information could be given, this addition should be made.
 - (10) And since the Mishnah does not state this, R. Nahman's explanation of the Mishnah cannot be accepted.
 - (11) Lit., '(immediately) after the Sabbath'.
 - (12) According to Beth Hillel.

 - (28) The eggs found in the hen killed on a Festival falling on a Sunday.
 - (29) Which are forbidden.
 - (30) The prohibition of the egg according to Beth Hillel.
 - (31) On a Festival, which is forbidden. Not eating the egg laid on a Festival is fencing the law of not eating fruit fallen on a Festival.

It is a preventive measure lest one climbs [a tree] and plucks [its fruit];¹ but this² is itself [only] a preventive measure: should we then come and enact one preventive measure to safeguard [another] preventive measure! — Both³ are one preventive measure.⁴

R. Isaac said: It is a preventive measure on account of [the consuming of] juices exuding [from fruit].⁵ Said Abaye to him: What is the reason that juice exuding [from fruit on a Festival] is forbidden? It is a preventive measure lest one [purposely] squeezes out [the juice];⁶ [thus] this is itself [only] a preventive measure; should we then come and enact one preventive measure against [the breach of] another preventive measure! — Both⁷ are one preventive measure.⁸

All [the other Rabbis] do not explain⁹ as R. Nahman does, in accordance with our objection.¹⁰ Likewise they do not explain as Rabbah, because they do not accept [his rule of] Hakanah.¹¹ But why does not R. Joseph explain as does R. Isaac? — He will answer you: An egg is food and fruit is food, excluding juice which is not food [but a beverage]. And why does not R. Isaac explain as does R. Joseph? — He will answer you: An egg is enclosed [in the hen] and juice is enclosed in the fruit, excluding fruit which is exposed all the time.

R. Johanan also is of the opinion that it is a preventive measure on account of [the consuming of] juices exuding [from fruit]. For R. Johanan pointed out a contradiction between one statement of R. Judah and another statement and [also] reconciled it: We have learnt: You may not squeeze fruit¹² to bring out juice, and [even] if the juice exuded of itself it is [still] forbidden. R. Judah says: If [the fruit was intended] as an eatable, what exudes is permitted; but if [it was kept] for its juice, then what exudes is forbidden.¹³ So we see that according to R. Judah [what exudes from] anything [kept] as eatables is [regarded] as food separated.¹⁴ But contrast this with the following: R. Judah further said:¹⁵ One may stipulate on the first day of the [New Year] Festival with respect to a basket of fruit¹⁶ and eat it on the second [day];¹⁷ similarly an egg laid on the first [day] may be eaten on the second.¹⁸ Only 'on the second', but not on the first!¹⁹ And R. Johanan answered: The statement must be reversed.²⁰ Now since he [R. Johanan] contrasts them with each other, infer from this that there is one and the same reason.²¹

(1) An act Biblically forbidden on a Sabbath or Festival, being in the nature of reaping.

(2) Prohibition of eating fallen fruit on a Festival.

(3) The prohibition of eating the egg laid on a Festival and the fruit fallen from a tree on a Festival.

(4) Against the same prohibition of climbing and gathering fruit. In the enactment of the measure against fallen fruit the egg was included, being regarded as a fallen fruit.

(5) On a Festival. Not eating the egg laid on a Festival is fencing the law of not consuming juice exuding from fruit on a Festival.

(6) An act Biblically forbidden on a Sabbath or Festival, being in the nature of threshing.

(7) The prohibition of eating the egg and the juice.

(8) Against the same prohibition of squeezing juice from fruit on a Festival. In the enactment of the measure against exuding juice the egg was included.

(9) Our Mishnah.

(10) Supra 2b.

(11) V. Glos.

(12) On a Sabbath or Festival.

(13) Shab. 143b.

(14) I.e., a part of the whole.

(15) With respect to the New Year Festival which even in Palestine was observed for two days.

(16) Not yet tithed.

(17) It is forbidden to separate the Levitical tithe on a Festival (v. infra 36b). But since, according to R. Judah, only one of the two days is holy, the owner can make a conditional statement on the first day as follows: if to-day is not the Festival, then let this specified portion be the tithe for the rest; if, on the other hand, to-day is the Festival, then let what I have just said be void. On the second day he says likewise: If to-day is not the Festival, then let the specified portion be the tithe; if to-day is the Festival, then the specified portion is already tithe. By means of these two conditional statements the owner can, on the second day, proceed to eat the fruit, for it has been tithed either on the first or second day. V. 'Er. 39b.

(18) For if the first day when the egg was laid was the holy day of the two days, then it can be eaten on the following day; and if the first day was not the holy day then the egg may also be eaten on the second day because it was not laid on a Festival. 'Er. 39b.

(19) Because the egg is not regarded as food separated from the hen, and this is contradictory to his statement above with respect to the juice being permitted to be consumed on the Festival itself. At present it is assumed that the reference here is to a hen kept for food.

(20) To remove the contradiction, R. Johanan suggests, that in the quoted Mishnah, it is not R. Judah who permits the juice to be consumed but his opponent, the anonymous Tanna.

(21) For prohibiting both the egg and the self-exuded juice, viz., it is a preventive measure against the breach of the prohibition of squeezing juice from fruit on a Festival.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 3b

Rabina says: In reality you need not reverse [the authorities] for R. Judah was speaking from the point of view of the Rabbis,¹ thus: According to my view [the egg] is permitted even on the first day, because it is food separated [from the hen]; but according to your opinion, you should at least agree with me that it is permitted on the second day, for they² are two distinct days of holiness.³ And the Rabbis answered him: No, [the two days] are one [continuous day of] holiness. Rabina, the son of R.'Ulla, says: [We are dealing] here with a hen kept for laying eggs, and R. Judah⁴ is consistent with his view, for he holds [the interdict of] mukzeh.⁵

An objection was raised: Both an egg laid on a Sabbath and an egg laid on a Festival may not be moved to cover therewith a vessel,⁶ nor to support therewith the leg of a bed;⁷ but a vessel may be placed over it so that it should not be broken; and if in doubt,⁸ it is forbidden; and if it got mixed up with [even] a thousand [eggs], they are all forbidden.⁹ This is well, according to Rabbah, who says [that it is] 'on account of preparation',¹⁰ [then it is a] doubt with respect to a Biblical prohibition, and every doubt with respect to a Biblical prohibition [must be decided] with stringency. But according to R. Joseph and R. Isaac, who say [that it is] 'a preventive measure', then it is a doubt with respect to a Rabbinical enactment, and every doubt with respect to a Rabbinical enactment [is resolved] with leniency!¹¹ — The last clause [of the text] deals with a doubt of trefa.¹² If so, consider the latter clause; 'and if it got mixed up with a thousand [eggs] they are all forbidden'. Now if you say that the doubt is whether [the egg was laid on] a Festival or on a weekday,¹³ it is well, because [the egg] is an object which can become [otherwise] permitted,¹⁴ and any object which can become [otherwise] permitted is not neutralized even in a thousand [times its quantity].¹⁵ But if you say that it is a doubt of trefa, then [the egg] is an object which cannot become [otherwise] permitted and should therefore be neutralized by a greater number [than itself].¹⁶ And if you answer 'an egg is valuable and is not neutralized by a greater number,' this¹⁷ would be correct according to him who says that we learnt 'whatsoever one is wont to count'.¹⁸ But according to him who says that we learnt 'that which one is wont to count', what is to be said?¹⁹ For we have learnt:²⁰ If one had trusses of fenugreek of kil'ayim of a vineyard²¹ they are to be burnt;²² if they got mixed up with others²³ and these [again with others,²⁴ they are all to be burnt. This is the opinion of R. Meir. But the Sages say: [The forbidden trusses] are neutralized in [a majority of the proportion of] one in two hundred. For R. Meir used to say: That which one is wont to count [when selling] disqualifies.²⁵ But the sages say: Only six things²⁶ render [the whole] prohibited — R. Akiba says: seven — and they are as follows: The nuts of Perek,²⁷ and the pomegranates of Baden,²⁷ casks spigoted, beetroot-tops,²⁸ cabbage stalks²⁹ and Greek gourds. R. Akiba adds also the loaves of a householder.³⁰ Those mixtures which are subject to the law of 'Orlah, [impart the prohibition of] 'Orlah,³¹ and those which are subject to the law of Kil'ayim of a vineyard [impart the prohibition of] Kil'ayim of a vineyard.³² And it was stated thereon that R. Johanan said: We learnt,³³ ‘that which one is wont to count [when selling]’; and Resh Lakish said: We learnt: ‘whatsoever one is wont to count [when selling].’ [Now the text]³⁴ would be well according to the opinion of Resh Lakish; but according to the opinion of R. Johanan, what can be said? R. Papa replied: This Tanna³⁵ is the author [of the teaching] concerning the ‘litra of dried figs’, who says that anything which [is sold] by number, even though [its prohibition is] a Rabbinical enactment, is not annulled, how much more so when it is Biblical.³⁶ For we have learnt:³⁷ If a litra of dried figs³⁸ was pressed upon the top of a jar³⁹ and he does not know on which jar it was pressed, or on the top of a barrel and he does not know on which barrel it was pressed, or on top of a basket⁴⁰ and he does not know on which basket it was pressed, R. Meir maintains [that] R. Eliezer

Though normally a certain portion of the latter is sufficient to neutralize the former, that does not operate if the former is destined to become permitted without recourse to neutralization. Hence, in our case, where the egg was laid on a Festival-day and is forbidden for that day only, but not after, if that egg got mixed up with no matter how many others on the day it was laid, it is not neutralized, but all are forbidden on that day. said: We regard the upper [layers] as if they are dispersed [among each barrel] and the lower¹ neutralize the upper [litra of figs]; [while] R. Joshua says: If there were there a hundred tops [of barrels] they neutralize, but if not, then [all] the top layers are forbidden and [all] the remainders are permitted. [But] R. Judah maintains² [that] R. Eliezer said: If there are a hundred upper layers they neutralize, but if not then [all] the top layers are forbidden and [all] the remainders are permitted; [while] R. Joshua Says: Even if there are three hundred tops of barrels they do not neutralize.³ If it⁴ was pressed in a jar and he does not know in which jar he pressed it, all agree that they neutralize. [You say], All agree? [Why] this is the point they are disputing! Said R. Papa: This is what he says: If it was pressed in a jar and he does not know it, which part of the jar it was pressed, whether northward or southward, all agree that it is neutralized.⁵

R. Ashi said: In reality the doubt is whether [the egg was laid] on a Festival-day or on a weekday,⁶ [but] it [the egg] is a forbidden] object which will become permitted,⁷ and anything [forbidden] which will become permitted, even though [forbidden] by a Rabbinical enactment⁸ is not neutralized.⁹

It was taught: Others say in the name of R. Eliezer: The egg [laid on a Festival] and the hen may be eaten. About what are we discussing? If about a hen kept for food, it is self-evident that the egg and the hen are permitted;¹⁰ and if about a hen kept for laying eggs, then the egg and the hen are forbidden!¹¹ — Answered R. Zera: [It means,] it [the egg] may be eaten in virtue of the hen.¹² What are the circumstances?¹³ — Said Abaye: For example when he bought it [the hen] without specifying [for what purpose]; if it is killed then it is [retrospectively] clear that it was intended to be kept for food;¹⁴ if it is not killed, then it is evident that it was intended to be kept for laying eggs.¹⁵ R. Mari says: He states an exaggeration.¹⁶ For it was taught: Others say in the name of R. Eliezer: The egg may be eaten, it and its hen, and its chicken and its shell. What is meant by 'its shell'? Shall I say [it means] literally 'shell', is then the shell [fit for] food?¹⁷ Again, if it should [mean] a chicken in its shell, surely the Rabbis dispute with R. Eliezer b. Jacob¹⁸ only when the chicken is actually hatched, but when it has not yet been hatched they do not dispute!¹⁹ Therefore 'the chicken and its shell' is an exaggeration,²⁰ so also here 'it and its hen may be eaten' is an exaggeration.

It was stated: A Sabbath and a Festival [following one another]. Rab says: [An egg] laid on the one is forbidden on the other, but R. Johanan maintains: [The egg] laid on the one is permitted on the other. Shall we say that Rab holds that they [a Sabbath and a Festival immediately following] are regarded as one [continuous day of] holiness? But Rab said: The halachah is according to the four elders who decided according to the opinion of R. Eliezer who says [the Sabbath and the Festival] are two [distinct days of] holiness! — Rather they differ here in Rabbah's [law of] Hakanah;²¹ Rab accepts Rabbah's law of Hakanah and R. Johanan rejects Rabbah's law of Hakanah.

The same is disputed by Tannaim: If it [an egg] is laid on a Sabbath, it may be eaten on a Festival;²² [if it is laid] on a Festival it may be eaten on a Sabbath.²³ R. Judah says in the name of R. Eliezer: The dispute still continues; for Beth Shammai say: It may be eaten; whereas Beth Hillel maintain: It may not be eaten.²⁴ The host of R. Adda b. Ahabah had some eggs from a festival [which he wished to prepare] for the Sabbath.²⁵ He came before him, and asked: Is it permitted to roast them to-day²⁶ that we may eat their to-morrow? He answered him: What is in your mind: [in a dispute between] Rab and R. Johanan the halachah Is as R. Johanan? But even R. Johanan only allows [the egg] to be quaffed on the morrow, but not on the same day [it was laid];²⁷ even as it was taught: Whether an egg was laid on a Sabbath or on a Festival, one may not move it to cover therewith a vessel nor to support therewith the leg of a bed.²⁸

The host of R. Papa — some say it was another man who came before R. Papa — had some eggs from a Sabbath [which he wished to prepare] on the [immediately following] Festival. He came, asking him: Is it permitted to eat them to-morrow?²⁹ He answered him: Go away now and come to-morrow: for Rab would not appoint an interpreter for himself from [the first day of] the Festival until [the termination of] its companion³⁰ on account of inebriety.³¹ When he came on the morrow, he said to him:

(1) Layers of each barrel.

(2) R. Meir and R. Judah differ with respect to the dispute between R. Eliezer and R. Joshua.

(3) The litra of figs, for the top layers of figs are in the category of things that are also sold by number and therefore the quantity of vessels is immaterial. Cf. J. Ter. IV, 7.

(4) The litra of terumah figs.

(5) Because not being a complete layer now, it is no longer in the category of being numbered. R. Joshua is then the Tanna who held that anything which is often sold by number is not annulled, and he will be the author of the teaching regarding the mixed egg.

(6) And as for the suggestion that in any doubt with respect to a prohibition based on a Rabbinical enactment leniency is required, v. supra 3b.

(7) After a certain time. The egg will in any case be permitted after the Festival.

(8) Concerning which leniency is usually preferred.

(9) And we are to proceed with stringency even in the case of doubt.

(10) That is, in the view of Beth Shammai; and if R. Eliezer intends to rule like Beth Shammai, why mention the hen-mother at all? Rashi.

(11) On account of mukzeh. V. infra 34a.

(12) If the hen is eaten on the Festival so may also the egg be eaten.

(13) When it is the actual eating of the hen that renders also the egg permissible.

(14) And therefore the egg, being part of the hen, may also be eaten.

(15) And therefore the egg is not permitted.

(16) He uses the figure of speech called hyperbole for the sake of emphasis; i.e., he states the law very emphatically, mentioning more than is necessary.

(17) All that was necessary to be said was 'the chicken', for the shell is not classed as food.

(18) And say that a chicken just hatched may be eaten even though its eyes were not open. V. infra 6b.

(19) I.e., they all agree that it may not be eaten. Hence it cannot mean in its shell.

(20) Saying more than is required.

(21) Supra 2b. V. Glos.

(22) Immediately following the Sabbath.

(23) Immediately following the Festival.

(24) So that the anonymous Tanna supports R. Johanan and R. Judah supports Rab.

(25) Immediately following the Festival, and he was doubtful.

(26) On Friday, the day they were laid.

(27) When it is forbidden even to move it.

(28) Supra 3b. q.v.

(29) I.e., on the Sunday.

(30) I.e., the second day of the Festival.

(31) Rab was in the habit of appointing an interpreter who would enlarge and expand the teachings he would communicate to him. Rab was so scrupulous that he refrained from communicating teachings and decisions to his interpreter on a feast day lest he should risk giving less than his best through the influence of drinking wine on the Festival. R. Papa would not give on a Sabbath a decision for the same reason.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 4b

If [I had given my decision] forthwith, I would have erred, and told you that [in a dispute between] Rab and R. Johanan the halachah is as R. Johanan; whereas Raba has said: In these three [cases]¹ the law is as Rab, both when he is lenient and when he is stringent.

R. Johanan said: If branches fell off a palm tree on a Sabbath, it is forbidden to burn them [for firewood] on the Festival [immediately following it], and do not seek to refute me [by referring to the case] of the egg.² What is the reason? Because the egg is fit to be taken raw on the [Sabbath] day [it was laid],³ and since you do not permit it [to be eaten] until the following day, one will surely know that on the same day [that it was laid] it is prohibited.⁴ [But in the case of the] branches which are not fit for the [Sabbath] day [on which they fell],⁵ if you permit them to be used on the morrow,⁶ one might say that even on the [same] day [they fell off]⁷, they are also permitted, while [their prohibition] the day before was on account of the Sabbath, when they were not fit for burning.

R. Mattenah said: If branches fell off a palm tree on a Festival into an oven, one may add thereto a larger amount of wood kept in readiness⁸ and burn them [together]. But is he not handling a prohibited object?⁹ Since the greater part consists of that which is permitted, when he is handling, he is handling that which is permitted. But he neutralizes a prohibited object at the outset, and we have learnt: One may not [directly] neutralize a prohibited object at the outset!¹⁰ — This applies only [where the object is prohibited] according to the Biblical law, but [where it is only] Rabbinical] [prohibited] one may [directly] neutralize.¹¹ But how is it to be explained according to R. Ashi, who says that an object [forbidden] which will become permitted is not neutralized even though [forbidden] by a Rabbinical enactment?¹² — this applies only where the prohibited object remains intact, but here the thing forbidden is indeed burnt up.¹³ It was stated: [With reference to] the two Festival-days of the Diaspora,¹⁴ Rab says: [The egg] laid on the one¹⁵ is permitted on the other,¹⁶ and R. Assi maintains: [The egg] laid on the one is forbidden on the other. Shall it be said that R. Assi holds the opinion that [both days] have one continuous holiness? But R. Assi recited the habdalah¹⁷ [blessing] between the first and second Festival-days?¹⁸ — R. Assi himself was in doubt, hence he acted in both cases with stringency.¹⁹

R. Zera said: Logic supports R. Assi; for we are now well acquainted with the fixing of the new moon and, nevertheless, we do observe two days.²⁰ Abaye said: Logic supports Rab; for we have learnt: In early times they used to light bonfires,²¹ but on account of the mischief of the Samaritans²² the Rabbis ordained that messengers should go forth.²³ Now if the [mischief of the] Samaritans ceased²⁴ we would [all] observe only one day; and [even during the Samaritan mischief] wherever the messengers arrived²⁵ they observed [only] one day.²⁶ But now that we are well acquainted with the fixing of the new moon,²⁷ why do we observe two days? — Because they sent [word] from there [Palestine]:²⁸ Give heed to the customs of your ancestors which have come down to you; for it might happen that the government might issue a decree²⁹ and it will cause confusion [in ritual].

It was stated: [With respect to] the two Festival-days of the New Year, Rab and Samuel³⁰ both say: [An egg] laid on the first day is forbidden on the second day. For we have learnt:³¹ In early times they [the Sanhedrin] admitted the testimony about new moon throughout the [whole]³² day.³³ Once, however, the witnesses were late in arriving

 - (2) Concerning which I have said that an egg laid on a Sabbath may be eaten on the immediately following Festival-day.
 - (3) All egg may not be cooked on a Sabbath, but may be eaten raw because there is no work in sucking eggs.
 - (4) On account of mukzeh.
 - (5) For it is prohibited to kindle fire on a Sabbath. Cf. Ex. XXXV, 3.
 - (6) The following Festival-day.
 - (7) If it were a Festival and not a Sabbath.
 - (8) V. Glos. s.v. mukan.
 - (9) When stoking the fire the alien branches are prohibited on account of mukzeh.
 - (10) This statement is not found anywhere else so worded, but is inferred from Ter. V, 9, where it is stated that if one se'ah of Heave-offering fell into less than 100 se'ahs of common produce, and other common produce afterwards fell therein, if it was in error the whole is permitted, but if wantonly, it is forbidden. Cf. ש'ר a.l.
 - (11) And the prohibition of mukzeh is only Rabbinical.
 - (12) V. supra 3a. And the wood will in any case be permitted after the Festival.
 - (13) Cf. Tosaf. Pes. 26b. s.v. חדש .
 - (14) Outside Palestine every Festival which Biblically is to be observed for day is kept for two days because of doubt. Since the Festival is fixed for a certain day of the month (for example passover on the 15th Nisan) it is Important to know the exact day the New Moon appears. For the consecration of the New Moon was determined not only by mathematical calculation but by the confirmation of witnesses who had seen it. This applied only to the 30th, but on the 31st, the day would be consecrated even without witnesses, because it would be known that after the 30th the moon should become new even if it were not seen, for the moon renewed itself about every 292 days. therefore those in Palestine could easily be informed whether the new moon was consecrated by the Sanhedrin in Jerusalem on the 30th day or on the 31st, thus making the month just passed either full or defective. But those in the Diaspora, not being able to be informed in time whether the new moon was consecrated on the 30th or on the 31st, kept the appointed Festival-day for two days in order to be sure of observing it (for example, in the case of Passover, they kept both the 15th and 16th of Nisan as the 1st day of Passover). Hence the two Festival-days of the Diaspora.
 - (15) I.e., the first day.
 - (16) Because only one of the two days is holy.
 - (17) V. Glos.
 - (18) He would not have recited the habdalah had he regarded the two Festival-days as one continuous day of holiness. V. Rashi.
 - (19) The observance in the Diaspora of two days instead of one as in Palestine can be regarded from two points of view: (a) It was an enactment of the Rabbis that for all time in the Diaspora two days should be kept for each Festival-day (v. supra n. 1). From that point of view the two days are regarded as one long day of holiness and the egg might not be eaten on the second day. (b) The people in the Diaspora have taken upon themselves the observance of two days instead of one because of their uncertainty; for those however, who were well acquainted with the fixing of the new moon, the first day only is regarded as really holy and the second day as of a minor holiness, requiring the recitation of the habdalah between the two, and the egg would be permitted to be eaten on the second day.
 - (20) Presumably because the Rabbis have so enacted for us to keep the two days as one continuous day of holiness and it is their ordinances that we observe.
 - (21) They indicated the new moon outside Jerusalem by means of firesignals whether the day just elapsed was the 30th of the past month or the 1st of the coming month.
 - (22) In lighting beacons at other times to confuse the Jews. For the term Cuthim v. J.E. vol. IV, p. 398.
 - (23) V. R.H. 22b (Sonc. ed. p. 96, n. 7).
 - (24) And we reverted to the lighting of fire-signals.
 - (25) The distance covered by the traveling messengers was relative, dependent on what day in the month a festival fell, so that sometimes they would cover more territory than at others.

(26) Evidently the observance of two days was not an enactment for all time.

(27) The calendar was fixed about the beginning of the fourth century. [This has been ascribed to Hillel II, v. Graetz IV, pp. 316-318.]

(28) To the Jews in the Diaspora. Cf. Sanh. 17b. [probably this refers to the message sent by R. Jose (J. 'Er. III) a contemporary of Hillel II, urging the people of the Diaspora not to depart from the ancestral customs despite the calendar which have been introduced by the Patriarch, v. Graetz IV, p. 456.]

(29) To destroy all the sacred writings and prevent the study of the Law and thus all knowledge of fixing the calendar would be lost.

and the Levites erred in the chant.¹ [In consequence] they enacted that they should only receive witnesses until Minhah,² but if witnesses came from Minhah onwards³ they observed [the remainder of] that day⁴ and the following day as holy.⁵

Rabbah said: Since the enactment of R. Johanan b. Zakkai, the egg is permitted,⁶ for we have learnt:⁷ After the destruction of the Temple⁸ R. Johanan enacted that testimony [concerning the appearance of new moon] should be admitted the [whole] day.⁹ Said Abaye to him: But have not Rab and Samuel both said that the egg is forbidden [on the second day]? — He replied to him: I quote to you R. Johanan b. Zakkai, and you tell me about Rab and Samuel!¹⁰ But for Rab and Samuel our Mishnah is a difficulty! — There is no difficulty. This [ruling] applies to us [Babylonians], but that [ruling] applies to them [the Palestinians].¹¹ But R. Joseph¹² says: Even from [the time of] the enactment of R. Johanan b. Zakkai and onwards the egg is prohibited [on the second day]. What is the reason? It¹³ is a matter which was decided by a majority vote¹⁴ and whatever was [forbidden] by a majority vote, requires another majority vote to permit it.¹⁵ Said R. Joseph: Whence do I infer this?¹⁶ From what is written: 'Go say to them, return ye to your tents'.¹⁷ And [Scripture] further says: 'When the trumpet soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount'.¹⁸ And we have further learnt:¹⁹ The fourth [year] vineyard [fruit] was to be brought to Jerusalem [from all places] within a radius of one day's journey [from Jerusalem], and the following are its boundaries: Elath²⁰ on the South,²¹ Akrabah²² on the North, Lydda²³ on the West, and the Jordan on the East.²⁴ And 'Ulla said — others say Rabba b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan — What is the reason? [It is] in order to decorate the streets of Jerusalem with fruits. And it was [further] taught: R. Eliezer had trees of the fourth year in a vineyard to the east of Lydda near Kefar Tabi²⁵

(1) They sang the psalm for ordinary days at the eventide sacrifice and it turned out after the arrival of witnesses that it was actually New Year's day. V. Tamid VII, 3-4.

(2) The time of the offering of the eventide sacrifice. V. Glos. Cf. Schurer II, I pp. 286ff.

(3) When there was still some part of the day to run, though their testimony would not be accepted for consecrating the 30th as New Year's day, yet.

(4) The end of the 30th from the arrival of the witnesses to the close of the day was also considered holy.

(5) Hence it was seen that the Sanhedrin itself under such conditions observed the New Year's Festival for two days even where there was no uncertainty; and the people outside Jerusalem would need to observe both the 30th and the 31st of Ellul as New Year in case of such a contingency, so that the observance of two days for the New Year's Feast was an enactment of the Rabbis from the very beginning making two days one continuous day of holiness, and, therefore, an egg laid on the first day is prohibited even on the second.

(6) To be eaten on the second day.

(7) R.H. 30b.

- (8) Since the Temple no longer existed the reason for the previous enactment falls away.
- (9) So that the observance of the two days at the present time could only be on account of doubt, since only one of the two days is holy. For, even if witnesses came towards the end of the 30th, the whole of the 30th would be regarded as New Year and the 31st would be regarded as a weekday. But if no witnesses came on the 30th, the 31st would be New Year's day and the 30th, though observed as a holy day, was in reality an ordinary day; and therefore the egg laid on the 30th in such a case would be permitted on the 31st.
- (10) R. Johanan b. Zakkai was the greater authority.
- (11) The enactment of R. Johanan b. Zakkai could only affect Palestine, where only one day, viz., the 30th, would now be regarded as New Year, however late the messengers came on that day. But in Babylon and all places outside Palestine, the observance of the two days was not affected by the enactment of R. Johanan, for there the two days were kept holy by the early Rabbinical enactment, and were regarded as one continuous day of holiness.

V. Sanh. 59b. It is pointed out infra 5b that the vote of Assembly was not directly dealing with the egg but with the making of the two days one continuous day of holiness.

- (18) Ex. XIX, 13. Here too the prohibition of ascending Mt. Sinai was on account of the Theophany, and at the ceasing of the Theophany it could be inferred that the people might ascend the Mount. - (19) M.Sh. V, 2; R.H. 31b. (9) Fruit of the first three years of a tree may not be eaten, and the fruit of the fourth year must be eaten before the Lord in Jerusalem, Lev. XIX, 23. If, however, the journey was too great, the fruit might be redeemed and the money expended in Jerusalem. V. Deut. XIV, 24-25. The Rabbis, however, ordained that for a radius of one day's journey from Jerusalem the fruit could not be redeemed but must be brought to Jerusalem.

and he wished to renounce [the vineyard] for the poor.¹ But his disciples said to him: Master, thy colleagues have already taken a vote with respect to your case and permitted it.² Who are meant by 'thy colleagues'? R. Johanan b. Zakkai [and his school]. Now the reason [why the fruit may be redeemed] is only because they had taken a vote; but if they had not taken a vote, it would not [have been permitted].³

What is meant by 'And [Scripture] further says'?⁴ — He means thus: Consider: It is written: Be ready against the third day, come not near a woman.⁵ Then what is the purpose of 'Go say to them, Return ye to your tents'? Infer therefrom that every prohibition decided by a majority vote requires another majority vote to rescind it. And should you reply, it comes as a command concerning conjugal duties,⁶ [then] come and hear: 'When the trumpet soundeth long they shall Come up to the mount.’ Now consider: It is written: ‘Neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that Mount.’⁷ Then what is the purpose of?’ When the trumpet soundeth long they shall come up to the Mount’. Conclude therefrom that what has been prohibited by a majority vote requires another majority vote to rescind it.⁸ And should you argue, this only applies to the case of a Biblical [prohibition] but not to the case of a Rabbinical [prohibition],⁹ [then] come and hear: ‘The fourth [year vineyard] fruit, etc.’ Now the law concerning the fourth [year vineyard] fruit is a Rabbinical enactment, and yet they said to him: ‘Thy colleagues have already taken a vote respecting your case and permitted it!’ And if you say¹⁰ that R. Johanan b. Zakkai allowed also a vote to be taken concerning an egg and permitted it, [I will reply]: They only took a vote concerning testimony, but concerning the egg they did not take a vote. Said Abaye to him: Has there been then at all a vote taken [at any time] concerning the egg [itself]?¹¹ The egg is dependent on [the acceptance of] testimony: If the testimony of the witnesses is disallowed, then the egg is forbidden¹² but if the testimony of the witnesses is permitted then the egg is [a automatically] permitted,¹³

R. Adda and R. Salmon, both of Be Kelohith¹⁴ say: Even [from the time of] the enactment of R. Johanan b. Zakkai and onwards the egg is prohibited. Why? The Temple may very soon be rebuilt,¹⁵ and people would say: ‘Did we not eat last year on the second day [of the New Year] the egg [laid on the first day]? Now too, we shall continue to eat it;’ and they will not know that in the previous year¹⁶ they [the two days] were of two distinct forms of holiness¹⁷ whereas now¹⁸ they are one [continuous day of] holiness.¹⁹ If so, we should not even accept [the] testimony [of witnesses the whole day]! What is the reason? For the Temple may very soon be rebuilt, and people might say: ‘Did we not accept last year testimony concerning the New Moon during the whole day [long]? Now too, we shall [continue to] accept [their testimony]!’? — Where [is the comparison] in this? [The acceptance of] testimony is entrusted to the Beth din²⁰ [only], but [the case of] the egg is entrusted to all.²¹

Raba Says: Even since the enactment of R. Johanan b. Zakkai and onwards, the egg is forbidden; [for] does not R. Johanan b. Zakkai agree that if witnesses arrive after Minhah, the remainder of that day and the following day is observed as holy?²² Raba further said: The law [is as] Rab in the foregoing three cases²³ whether he is lenient or stringent. [

(1) In order not to have to bring the fruit himself to Jerusalem, but that the poor might gather the fruit for themselves and bring it to Jerusalem. Although R. Eliezer lived after the fall of Jerusalem when the reason for decorating its streets no longer existed, yet he adhered to the ruling that the fruit being within the radius of one day's journey, could not be redeemed but had to be brought to Jerusalem.

(2) I.e., the authority you are holding to has been rescinded by another authority and you can therefore redeem the fruits and bring only the money to Jerusalem.

(3) [Which proves that whatever has been decided by a majority vote requires another majority vote to abrogate the decision, even where the reason for the original decision no longer operates].

(4) The question here is: How do you infer from the first passage of Scripture the principle that a prohibition once made is absolutely binding until it has been rescinded; and if the inference is satisfactory, why is it necessary to have a second Scripture text? Rashi.

(5) Ex. XIX, 15.

(6) But not a cancelling of the previous prohibition of Ex. XIX, 15.

(7) Ibid. XXXIV, 3. The expression ‘before that Mount’ is interpreted as meaning ‘that Mount covered with the cloud of the Divine presence’, from which it might be inferred that only as long as the cloud of the Divine presence remained over the mountain no man or beast could draw near, but when the cloud was removed the people might, by their own inference, have thought that they might now ascend the mountain.

(8) The reason for the ‘trumpet sounding long’ was to indicate that the Divine presence was removed from the mountain.

(9) As our case of the egg.

(10) R. Joseph resumes here the thread of his remarks which were interrupted by quoting the source of his principle.

(11) And if no vote was directly taken, the question of requiring another vote rescinding it does not arise.

Johanan's enactment of accepting witnesses throughout the 30th day was for the purpose of fixing the days of the Festivals following New Year; i.e., if witnesses came any time on the 30th, that day would be the first of Tishri, from which the days of the month would be computed.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 6a

Raba said: On the first day of a Festival, [only] Gentiles may busy themselves with a corpse,¹ [but] on the second day, Israelites may busy themselves with a corpse, and² even on the two Festival-days of the New Year, which however is not the case with respect to an egg.³ The Nehardeans⁴ say: The same holds good even with respect to an egg; for what is in your mind: Perhaps [the month of] Ellul will be intercalated?⁵ Surely R. Hinena b. Kahana said in the name of Rab: From the days of Ezra⁶ and onward we do not find Ellul ever intercalated.⁷

Mar Zutra said: This⁸ was said only when [the corpse] had already been lying for some time,⁹ but if it had not lain for a long time, we let it remain.¹⁰ R. Ashi says: Even if it had not lain for a [good] long time we do not let it remain [unburied]. What is the reason? With regard to a dead body the Rabbis have made the second day of a Festival as a weekday even with respect to cutting for it a shroud and cutting for it a [branch of] myrtle.¹¹ Rabina said: But nowadays when there are Guebers¹² we apprehend.¹³

Rabina was once sitting in the presence of R. Ashi on [one of] the two Festival-days of the New Year,¹⁴ [and] noticing that he was troubled, he said to him: Why is the Master troubled? He [R. Ashi] replied: I have not set an 'erub tabshilin.¹⁵ Said he to him: Let the Master prepare an 'erub tabshilin now. For did not Raba say: A man may set an 'erub tabshilin on the first day of a Festival for the second and stipulate?¹⁶ — He replied: Granted that Raba [indeed] said so with respect to the two Feast-days of the Diaspora.¹⁷ But did he then say this also with respect to the two days of the New Year's Festival?¹⁸ But the Nehardeans maintain that even an egg is permitted!¹⁹ — R. Mordecai observed to him [to Rabina]: The Master²⁰ distinctly told me that he does not accept this [teaching] of the Nehardeans.

It was stated: If a chicken was hatched out on a Festival, Rab says: It is forbidden,²¹ but Samuel — some say, R. Johanan — maintains: It is permitted. Rab says it is forbidden [because] it is mukzeh;²² but Samuel — some say, R. Johanan — maintains it is permitted, since it makes itself permitted through shechitah.²³ R. Kahana and R. Assi said to Rab: What difference is there between this and a calf born on a Festival?²⁴ — He replied to them: [The case of the calf is different] since it was [regarded as] mukan²⁵ by virtue of its mother.²⁶ And what difference is there between this and a calf born [on a Festival] from a Trefa?²⁷ Rab remained silent. Said Rabbah — some say [it was] R.

Joseph — Why was Rab silent? He should have replied to them: [This calf is permitted] since it is mukan for dogs through its [trefa] mother.²⁸ — Abaye replied to him:

The method is to prepare a dish on the Thursday for the Sabbath which enables all the cooking done on the Friday to be regarded as a continuation of the cooking begun on the Thursday.
- (16) If the first of the two days is the real feast-day, then the preparation of the food on the second day should be permitted; and if the second day is the proper feast-day, then preparation of the 'erub is permissible on the first day, which is not a Festival but a weekday.

And since the hatching out of the chicken (on the Festival) enables it to be eaten through slaughtering, it also frees it from mukzeh; i.e., since it gains permission for itself to be eaten through ritual slaughter, it also gains permission for itself to be free from mukzeh.

- (28) Immediately before the Festival the mother-cow as trefa was intended as food for dogs, and this included the calf within it. The cow and the calf would thus become mukan for dogs and therefore the law of mukzeh should not apply to the calf. The same, however, cannot be said of the chicken in the egg.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 6b

Seeing that that which is mukan for human consumption is not mukan for dogs — for we have learnt: One may cut up¹ gourds for cattle and a carcass for dogs;² R. Judah says: If [the animal] was not yet nebelah³ on the eve of the Sabbath it is forbidden,⁴ for it was not mukan⁵ — can that which is mukan for dogs be considered mukan for human beings? — He said to him: It is even so; that which is mukan for human consumption is not mukan for dogs, for that which is useable for man one does not throw to dogs. [But] that which is mukan for dogs is [also] mukan for human consumption, for the mind of man is directed to everything which may be fitting for him. [A Baraitha] was taught in accordance with Rab [and a Baraitha] was taught in accordance with Samuel, or as some say, R. Johanan. [A Baraitha] was taught in accordance with Rab: A calf which is born on a Festival is permitted;⁶ [but] a chicken which is hatched on a Festival is forbidden. And what difference is there between the one and the other? [The calf] is mukan by virtue of its mother through shechitah,⁷ but [the chicken] is not mukan by virtue of its another.⁸ [A Baraitha] was taught in accordance with Samuel, or as some say, R. Johanan: A calf which is born on a Festival is permitted; a chicken which is hatched on a Festival is permitted. Why? [The calf] is mukan by virtue of its mother and [the chicken] makes itself permitted through slaughter.

Our Rabbis taught: A chicken which is hatched on a Festival is forbidden. R. Eliezer b. Jacob says: It is forbidden even on a weekday since its eyes are not yet open. With whose opinion does the following passage agree: Even all creeping things that creep upon the earth,⁹ this includes chickens whose eyes are not yet opened?¹⁰ With whose opinion? The opinion of R. Eliezer b. Jacob.

R. Huna said in the name of Rab: An egg is completed on its issue [from the fowl]. What is meant by ‘completed on its issue’? If we say, [it means] it is completed on its issue, so that [the egg] may be eaten with milk;¹¹ [which implies] when it is still within the hen [the egg] may not be eaten with milk? But surely we have learnt: If one kills a hen and finds therein completely formed eggs, these may be consumed with milk! And if [it means] it is completed on its issue so that [the egg] may be eaten on a Festival;¹² [which implies] when [the egg] is still within the hen,¹³ it may not be eaten on the Festival?¹⁴ But surely we have learnt: If one kills a hen and finds therein eggs completely formed they are permitted to be eaten on the Festival.¹⁵ And if you say that he informed us in the Baraitha what we do not learn in the Mishnah?¹⁶ This too¹⁷ we have learnt [in a Mishnah]: If an egg is laid on a Festival, Beth Shammai say: It may be eaten [on the same day], but Beth Hillel maintain: It may not be eaten [until the day is over].¹⁸ Now Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel dispute thus only about [the egg] that is laid; but if [the egg] is in the hen, all agree that it is permitted! And if you maintain that Beth Hillel prohibit [the egg] even when it is within the hen, and the reason he [the author of the Mishnah] quotes [their dispute with respect to an egg] ‘laid’ is in order to manifest to you the extent of the opinion of Beth Shammai that even if it is laid it is permitted; then as to that which we have learnt: If one slaughtered a hen and found therein eggs completely formed they are permitted to be eaten on the Festival — who will its author be? Neither Beth Shammai nor Beth Hillel!¹⁹ Therefore ‘it is completed on its issue’ [means] that [the egg] can hatch chickens, [but the egg found] in the body of the hen cannot hatch chickens. What is its practical bearing? — with respect to buying and selling.²⁰ As once happened when someone called out [to the salesmen]: Who has eggs

(1) On the Sabbath.

(4) To be given to the dogs.

(5) For dog's consumption before the Sabbath.

(6) [The prohibition of nolad (V. Glos.) does not apply to living beings. V. Tosaf. s.v. עגל.]

(7) The owner of the mother-cow could have intended to kill the cow on the Festival and the cow and the calf that was within it would be mukan. The same however cannot be said of a chicken, because the owner could never conceive of an egg within the fowl ready to be hatched, so that in the case of the chicken there is no case of mukan.

(8) Because no egg is ever upon the point of being hatched when the hen is killed.

(11) And is not regarded as part of the flesh of the fowl. The Biblical rule not to eat meat together with milk (based on Ex. XXIII, 19) is extended by the Rabbis to include fowls. Eggs, however, may be eaten with milk.

(12) If the egg was laid before the Festival.

(13) Which was slaughtered on the Festival.

(14) On account of the law of Hakanah, v. supra 2b.

(15) Supra 2b.

(16) I.e., the Baraitha finds no support in the Mishnah, and therefore the Baraitha is not authoritative, so that R. Huna could rule that when the egg is still in the hen it may not be eaten on the Festival.

(17) The ruling of the Baraitha.

(18) Supra 2a.

(19) For Beth Shammai permit even the laid egg and Beth Hillel, according to this theory, prohibit the egg even though it is in the body of the hen.

of a cackling hen? When they gave him eggs [found] in a slaughtered hen, he came to R. Ammi [complaining], who said to them: It is an erroneous sale and he can withdraw [from it]. [But] this is self-evident!¹ — You might say that this [buyer] really wanted [the eggs] for eating, and the reason he asked [for eggs] of a cackling hen is that [such eggs] are hard-shelled; and that the practical outcome [of] his claim² is that he must refund him the difference,³ so he informs us [that this is not so].⁴

There was once one who said to [the salesmen], ‘Who has mated eggs⁵ [for sale]? Who has mated eggs?’ [When] they gave him unmated eggs,⁶ he came to R. Ammi who said to them: It is an erroneous sale and he can withdraw [from the transaction]. [But] this is self evident! — You might say that he needed [the eggs] only for eating,⁷ and the reason he asked for mated eggs is that they are richer; and that the practical bearing of this is that they must refund him the difference,⁸ so he informs us that the whole transaction is fraudulent].

Alternatively: What is meant, ‘it is completed on its issue’? [It means] it is completed with the coming forth of its greater part, and it is accordance with R. Johanan. For R. Johanan said: If the greater part of an egg issued on the day before the Festival and went back, it may be eaten on the Festival-day.⁹ There are some [scholars] who say: What is meant, ‘it is completed on its issue’? [It means] it is completed with the [coming forth] of the whole of it. Only with the coming forth of the whole of it, but not with its greater part,¹⁰ and this is to reject the opinion of R. Johanan.

[To revert to] the main text: If one slaughtered a hen and found therein completely formed eggs, these may be taken with milk.¹¹ R. Jacob says: If [the eggs] were attached [to the hen] by sinews they are forbidden.¹² Who is the author of that which our Rabbis taught: He who eats of a carcass¹³ of a clean bird, of its cluster of eggs, or of its bones, or of its veins, or of its flesh torn off while alive¹⁴ is clean;¹⁵ [but he who eats] of its ovary or of its crop or of its entrails, or if he melted its fat and swallowed it,¹⁶ he is unclean.¹⁷ — Who is the author [of the teaching], ‘[He who eats] of its cluster of eggs is clean’? — Said R. Joseph: It is not in accordance with R Jacob. For if it were in accordance with R. Jacob, lo, he says: If [the eggs] were attached by sinews they are forbidden [to be taken with milk]!¹⁸ Said Abaye to him: Whence [do you say this]? Perhaps R. Jacob regards [these eggs as flesh] only with respect to a prohibition¹⁹ but not with respect to defilement? And if you say that we should enact a preventative measure also in respect to defilement?²⁰ [I would reply], This would be an extension of [the scope of] defilement, and we do not extend [the scope of] defilement by Rabbinical enactment.²¹

There are some [scholars] who say [thus]: Who is the author [of the teaching that if one eats] ‘of its ovary he is unclean’?²² Said R. Joseph: It is R. Jacob: For he says, ‘If [the eggs] were attached [to the hen] by sinews they are forbidden [to be taken with milk]’. Said Abaye to him: Whence [do you understand] that by the term ovary is meant [the eggs] that are attached to the ovary? Perhaps it means the ovary itself!²³ And if you object: What need is there to say this with respect to the ovary? [I would reply]: It is analogous to the crop and the inwards; for although these are [really] flesh,²⁴ [yet] since there are people who do not eat them, it is therefore necessary to state these; so also here [with respect to the ovary] since there are people who do not eat it, it is necessary to teach it. Our Rabbis taught: All creatures which copulate during the day are born during the day; all creatures which copulate during the night are born during the night; all creatures which copulate both by day and by night, give birth both by day and by night. ‘Those which copulate by day are born by day’, this refers to a fowl; ‘those which copulate during the night are born during the night’, this refers to the bat; ‘those which copulate by day and by night give birth by day and by night’, this refers to man and whatever is like him.

The Master said [above]: ‘Those who copulate by day are born by day refers to a fowl’. What is the practical difference? — With respect to the teaching of R. Mari son of R. Kahana. For R. Mari son of R. Kahana said: If one examined a hen-coop on the eve of the Festival and could not find in it an egg, and on the morrow he rose early²⁵ and found in it an egg, it is permitted.²⁶ But did he not examine [the nest]? — I say²⁷ that he did not examine it very carefully, and even if he did examine it very carefully, I would say that [perhaps] the greater part [of the egg] came out [before the Festival] and went back; and [this ruling is] in accordance with [the opinion of] R. Johanan.²⁸

But that is not so; for R. Jose b. Saul said in the name of Rab: If one examined a hen-coop on the eve of the Festival and did not find in it an egg and on the morrow he rose early and found an egg in it, it is prohibited?²⁹ — This [latter passage] refers to eggs laid through friction with the earth,³⁰ If so,³¹ with respect to the teaching of R. Mari, might I not also say [the egg] was laid through friction with the earth? — When there is a cock near her.³² Even when there is a cock [near her] might I not [still] say that the egg was laid through friction with the earth? — Said Rabina: There is a tradition³³ that wherever there is a cock near her she will not fructify [eggs] through friction. And how near [should the cock be]?³⁴ — R. Gamda replied in the name of Rab: Sufficiently near

- (1) That it is a fraudulent sale, since he asked for one thing and was given another.
 - (2) Seeing that he requires them in any case for eating.
 - (3) Between the value of cackling eggs and the eggs received, but the sale is nevertheless valid and cannot be rescinded.
 - (4) But we rather assume that when he asked for eggs of a cackling hen he wanted them for hatching, hence the sale is null.
 - (5) Lit., ‘eggs of (a hen paired with) a cock’.
 - (6) Lit., ‘eggs produced through friction of the body in the earth’, but not through contact with a male.
 - (7) And not for hatching.
 - (8) Between the value of mated eggs and the eggs received, but the transaction would still be valid.
 - (9) If subsequently laid on the Festival-day, and the law of mukzeh does not apply in this case.
 - (10) Lit., ‘with the coming . . . yes, but with . . . no’.
 - (11) V. supra p. 25, n. 4.
 - (12) Because they are then regarded as flesh.
 - (13) The carcass of a bird not ritually slaughtered does not defile a person through being carried or touched; it is only the eating of its flesh which defiles. Cf. supra to Lev. XXII, 8 and Nid. 42b.
 - (14) If any part of the bird is cut off while the bird is still living, although it may not be eaten, it does not defile.
 - (15) Because the cluster of eggs, the bones and the veins are not considered as flesh.
 - (16) Drinking is included in this law of defilement.
 - (17) These are considered as part of the flesh.

(18) Hence they are considered flesh.

(19) Not because he regards the eggs as flesh but as a preventative measure to safeguard the breach of eating flesh and milk together.

(20) I.e., to pronounce the person unclean when eating only the eggs.

(21) The Rabbis did not extend the law of defilement by declaring the man who eats of these eggs unclean, because of the monetary loss that would follow (by his clothes and whatever he touches becoming unclean; v. Lev. XVII, 15). But with respect to the prohibition of eating the eggs with milk, there the eggs themselves are not prohibited; it is only to safeguard the law of eating flesh and milk that the Rabbis instituted a preventive measure, and though the eggs themselves may be eaten, they may not be eaten with milk. In this respect they consider the eggs flesh.

(22) And thus considers the eggs flesh. Cf. Tosaf. Men. 70a. s.v. ביצי.

(23) And that is indeed flesh.

(24) And you would understand that they defile.

(25) Before daybreak.

(26) Because it is assumed that the egg was laid the previous day as, by the nature of the case, it could not have been laid during the night.

(27) אימר Either Imperf. 1. sing., or Imper. 2. sing.

(28) Who regards the egg as having been laid. It may have been deposited during the night of the Festival, but it is not regarded as having been laid during the night.

(29) Because we assume the egg was laid during the night of the Festival.

(30) Which eggs might be laid even at night.

(31) That unmated eggs can be laid at night.

(32) Therefore the egg must have been laid during the day.

(33) Lit., 'they (teachings) are handed down'.

(34) That the hen should not lay eggs through friction.

that [the hen] can hear his crowing in the daytime.¹ R. Mari gave a decision [in a case where the cock was] at a distance of sixty houses.² But if there is a river [between them] she [the hen] does not cross over, but if there is a bridge,³ she crosses over; if there is a plank she does not cross over. It happened once that [a hen] crossed over even a plank.

How have you explained it;⁴ with respect to unmated eggs? Then why particularly teach when he examined [the hen-coop]; even if he had not examined, it should also [be prohibited]! — If he did not examine it, I might say [the egg] was from yesterday. If so, even if he had examined it, I might still say that the greater part [of the egg] came out [yesterday] and went back and [should therefore be permitted] in accordance with R. Johanan! — The contingency stated by R. Johanan is rare.

R. Jose b. Saul further said in the name of Rab: This pulverized garlic is a danger to be left exposed.⁵

BETH SHAMMAI SAY: [THE QUANTITY OF] LEAVEN IS OF THE SIZE OF AN OLIVE, AND LEAVENED BREAD IS OF THE SIZE OF A DATE. What is Beth Shammai's reason? — If so,⁶ the Divine Law should only have written about leavened bread and not about leaven and I should have said: If leavened bread, the acidity of which is not very great, [is forbidden] at the size of an olive, how much more should leaven, the acidity of which is very great [be forbidden] at the size of an olive: then why does the Divine Law need to state leaven? In order to teach that the standard of the one is not like the standard of the other.⁷ And Beth Hillel? — It is necessary [for the Divine Law to state both]. For if the Divine Law had written only about leaven I might have said that the reason [leaven is forbidden to be seen] is that its acidity is very great, but leavened bread, the acidity of which is not great, I might have said is not [forbidden to be seen at all]. It is therefore necessary [to state leavened bread]. And if the Divine Law had stated leavened bread, [I might have said that] the reason [leavened bread is forbidden to be seen] is that it is fit for food, but leaven which is not fit for food, I might have said is not [forbidden to be seen at all]. Therefore both are necessary.

Shall we say that Beth Shammai does not agree with what R. Zera had said? For R. Zera said: The Scripture [verse]⁸ begins with the term 'leaven' and concluded with the term 'leavened bread' in order to teach that 'leaven' and 'leavened bread' are alike? — With respect to eating, no one differs [about the size].⁹ They only differ with respect to the removal [of the leaven from the house]; Beth Shammai is of the opinion that we do not learn [the law of] 'removal' from [that of] 'eating', while Beth Hillel maintains that we do learn 'removal' from 'eating'.¹⁰

Likewise it was stated: R. Jose b. Hanina said: The dispute is only with respect to the 'removal', but with respect to 'eating' all agree that both [leavened bread and leaven] are [forbidden] of the size of an olive. Likewise it was also taught: 'And there shall no leavened bread be seen with thee neither shall there be leaven seen with thee';¹¹ herein lies the dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel, where Beth Shammai say that leaven is the size of an olive and leavened bread is of the size of a date, but Beth Hillel maintain that both are of the size of an olive.

HE WHO SLAUGHTERS GAME OR POULTRY ON A FESTIVAL, etc. HE WHO SLAUGHTERS [implies] only if he has done so,¹² but not [that it may be done] at the very outset. Then consider the subsequent clause: BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: HE MUST NOT SLAUGHTER [etc.], whence it follows that the first Tanna holds that he may slaughter [at the outset]! — This is no difficulty. He means, 'HE MUST NOT SLAUGHTER AND COVER [etc.]'.¹³ But consider the final clause: BUT THEY AGREE THAT IF HE SLAUGHTERED HE MAY DIG WITH A SHOVEL AND COVER; whence it follows the first clause does not mean '[only] if he has done it'! — Answered Rabbah: This is what [the Mishnah] says: 'The slaughterer who comes to ask advice'¹⁴ how should one answer him? Beth Shammai say: One answers him: Slaughter, dig and cover; but Beth Hillel maintain: he must not slaughter unless he had [loose] earth set in readiness before the Festival'. R. Joseph says: This is what [the Mishnah] says: 'The slaughterer who comes to ask advice, how should one answer him? Beth Shammai say: One answers him: Go [and] dig, slaughter and cover; but Beth Hillel maintain: He may not dig unless he had [loose] earth set in readiness from before the Festival'.

Said Abaye to R. Joseph: Shall it be said that you, Sir, and Rabbah disagree with respect to the teaching of R. Zera in Rab's name? R. Zera said in the name Rab: The slaughterer [of game or poultry] must put earth beneath [to receive the blood] and earth above, for it is said: 'He shall pour out the blood thereof, and cover it with dust'.¹⁵ It does not say earth but 'in earth',¹⁶ teaching that the slaughterer must put earth beneath and earth above. You, Sir, [therefore] accept the teaching of R. Zera and Rabbah rejects the teaching of R. Zera. He answered him: Both I and Rabbah accept the teaching of R. Zera and our dispute here is as follows: Rabbah is of the opinion that he may [only slaughter] if there is [already] earth beneath [to receive the blood]; but if not, he may not slaughter,¹⁷ for we apprehend that he might change his mind and not slaughter.¹⁸ But according to my view, it is better,¹⁹ for if you will not permit him [to dig] he will come to be deprived of the joy of the Festival.²⁰

BUT THEY AGREE THAT IF SOME HAS [ALREADY] SLAUGHTERED, HE MAY DIG UP [EARTH] WITH A SHOVEL AND COVER [THE BLOOD]. R. Zerika said in the name of Rab. Judah: This only holds good when the shovel had [already] been sticking [in the earth] since the previous day.²¹ But does he not cause crumbling of the earth?²² — Answered R. Hiyya b. Ashi in the name of Rab:

(1) The crowing does not reach so far during the daytime as at night.

- (2) The cock was removed sixty houses from the hen yet R. Mari maintained that there was copulation and permitted the egg.
- (3) Or 'ferry'.
- (4) The saying of R. Jose b. Saul.
- (5) Any exposed liquid is forbidden for use lest a snake has drunk therefrom. The same applies to pulverized garlic.
- (6) That the prohibition of both leaven and leavened bread were of the size of an olive.
- (7) I.e., leavened bread is of the size of a date, for food of such a size is estimated by the Rabbis sufficient to make one 'come to', (cf. Yoma 79a), and leaven is of the size of an olive which is the minimum.
- (8) Ex. XII, 19.
- (9) I.e., even Beth Shammai agree that both leaven and leavened bread of the size of an olive are forbidden to be eaten.
- (10) Ex. XII, 19 deals with the prohibition and penalty of eating anything leavened. Ex. XIII, 7 deals with the removal of anything leavened from the house. From the fact that Ex. XIII, 7 mentions both 'leaven' and 'leavened bread' Beth Shammai infer that the size of the 'leavened bread' with respect to removal is not that of an olive but that of a date.
- (11) Ex. Xlii, 7.
- (12) For otherwise, the Mishnah should state that a man may slaughter it. HE WHO SLAUGHTERS, however, implies that the law which follows holds good only if he has already slaughtered.
- (13) Beth Hillel's point is made with reference to the covering of the blood, not with reference to the killing at all; and therefore a deduction as to the view of the first Tanna can likewise be made only with reference to the covering.
- (14) Whether he may slaughter, having no earth.
- (15) Lev. XVII, 13
- (16) The preposition ב here means in rather than with, indicating that dust is to be put on all sides. V. Nachmanides a.l. for reason of covering the blood.
- (17) For he may not dig to obtain the earth to place beneath.
- (18) He would then have dug earth unnecessarily.
- (19) That he should be allowed to dig.
- (20) For he will not be able to slaughter, v. Deut. XVI, 14.
- (21) So that there is no violation of the law of digging on the Festival; for digging requires both the sticking in of the shovel as well as the lifting of it with the earth in it.
- (22) Granted there is not digging, but this crumbling of the earth is also forbidden, being in the nature of grinding.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 8a

[We are dealing with a case] where the soil is loose.¹ But does he not make a hole?² — This is according to R. Abba; for R. Abba said: if one digs a hole on the Sabbath and only requires its soil, he is guiltless in regard to it.³

BECAUSE THE ASHES OF THE HEARTH ARE MUKAN [CONSIDERED AS HAVING BEEN PREPARED]. Who is speaking here of the ashes of the hearth?⁴ Answered Rabbah: Read thus: 'AND⁵ THE ASHES OF THE HEARTH ARE MUKAN'. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: They only taught this⁶ when it [the fire] had been kindled on the day of the Festival; but if it had been kindled on the Festival [itself] it is forbidden;⁷ but if [the ashes] are suitable⁸ to roast an egg therein, it is permitted.⁹ Likewise It was also taught: When they said [that] the ashes of the hearth are mukan, they only said so when it [the fire] had been kindled before the Festival; but if it had been kindled on the Festival it is forbidden; but if they are suitable to roast an egg therein it is permitted. If one had brought earth into his garden or into his waste land [before the Festival] one may cover the blood therewith.¹⁰

Rab Judah further said in the name of Rab: A man may bring a basket-full of earth [into his house] and may use it for whatever is necessary.¹¹ Mar Zutra pointed out in the name of Mar Zutra the Great: This only holds good if he had appointed a special corner for it.¹²

An objection was raised: One may not slaughter a koy¹³ on a Festival, and if he did slaughter it, he may not cover its blood.¹⁴ Now if this were so¹⁵, let him cover it [the blood] in accordance with the opinion of Rab Judah?¹⁶ — But even according to your point of view, let him cover the blood with ashes of the hearth, or with earth in which a shovel was stuck?¹⁷ Therefore you must needs say that we are dealing here with a case where he has not [any of these];¹⁸ so also explain that we are dealing with a case where he has not [a basket-full of earth in the house]. If so¹⁹ then why particularly with respect to [an animal about which there is] a doubt [whether its blood requires covering]; even with respect to an animal about which there is no doubt one also may not [cover the blood by digging]?²⁰ — He uses the expression ‘not only but also’: not only may he not slaughter [in the case of an animal about which there is no doubt],²¹ but even in the case of an animal about which there is a doubt, where I might have said that because of the joy of the Festival he should be allowed to slaughter without covering the blood, he informs us [that he may not slaughter].

- (1) As for example gravel or sand.
 - (2) When he takes it out, which is forbidden, being in the nature of ‘building’.
 - (3) Since it was not his intention to make the hole, the presence of the hole is only a disfigurement and for such an act of impairing or disfiguring one is not considered guilty of a breach of the Sabbath law; and although such an act is forbidden ab initio, yet for the sake of the joy of the Festival it has been permitted.
 - (4) Lit., ‘who has mentioned its name previously (that you are referring to it now)?’
 - (5) Changing the letter ו for י. V. supra p. 1, n. 10.
 - (6) That the ashes of the hearth are considered mukan.
 - (7) On account of mukzeh.
 - (8) Hot enough.
 - (9) To use such ashes for covering the blood even though the fire was kindled on the Festival itself, because since the ashes may be used for baking they cannot be regarded as mukzeh and may therefore be used, when in such a state, for any other purpose.
 - (10) Since it was prepared for any purpose.
 - (11) And it is not regarded as a part of the earth of the house and thus be prohibited from being handled.
 - (12) I.e., he did scatter over the ground, thereby indicating that it was for his use.
 - (13) A bearded deer or antelope (GR. ) Jast. V. however Hul. 79b where it is defined as a cross between a goat and a gazelle. V. also B.K., Sonc. ed. p. 443 n. 6. A doubt prevails regarding this animal whether it is in the category of cattle the blood of which need not be covered, or in the category of game the blood of which is to be covered. Cf. Lev. XVII, 13.
 - (14) Perchance it is cattle and he would be handling earth unnecessarily. V. Hul. 83b, 79b.
 - (15) That earth thus brought could be used in any way.
 - (16) By listing the basket-full of earth. Even if it were definitely cattle, the earth could still be used without infringing the law not to do any work on a Festival.
 - (17) From before the Festival, which is stated in our Mishnah to be mukan.
 - (18) Viz., ashes or a shovel of earth.
 - (19) That we are dealing with a case where he has no earth except through digging.
 - (20) Since we accept the decision of Beth Hillel according to which it is forbidden to dig earth on a Festival for covering blood.
 - (21) Since he has no earth in readiness.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 8b

But surely since he teaches at the end [of the clause] ‘and if he did slaughter it, he may not cover its blood’, understand from this that [we are] speaking of a case where he has [earth in readiness]!¹ — Therefore answered Rabbah: The ashes of the hearth² are regarded as mukan for [the covering of blood of] animals about which there is no doubt, but they are not regarded as mukan with respect to animals about which there is some doubt [whether their blood requires covering]. Why are they not [considered mukan in respect of the blood of the animal] about which there is a doubt? because he would be making a hole [in the ashes on the Festival]! Then in the case of an animal [game] about which there is no doubt, he would also be making a hole? But [why would it not be regarded as making a hole in the ashes]? because it is in accordance with R. Abba!³ Than here also it is in accordance with R. Abba!⁴ And if [you say that] the reason [why he may not use them to cover the blood of an animal about which there is] a doubt is that he may cause a crumbling [of the earth],⁵ we should enact a preventive measure on account of crumbling of the earth even in the case of definite [game]? — In the case of [animals] about which there is no doubt, even if he crumbles the earth [it is permitted]; for the positive command [to cover the blood] comes and overrides the negative command.⁶ But when do we say that a positive command overrides⁷ a negative command, [only in cases] like ‘circumcision in leprosy’⁸ or ‘a linen garment with [woolen] fringes’,⁹ where the infringement of the negative command is at the same time as the fulfillment of the of the positive command!¹⁰ — This presents no difficulty, for simultaneously with the crumbling of the earth he covers the blood. But after all, [in] a Festival there exists both a positive and a negative command,¹¹ and a positive command cannot override both a positive and negative command! — Therefore answered Raba: ashes of the hearth [or anything like it] are intended for a definite case of game but not for a doubt.¹² And Raba follows [here] his opinion [expressed elsewhere]. For Raba said: If one brought in earth [before the Festival] to cover therewith excrement [of a child], he may cover therewith the blood of a bird;¹³ [to cover therewith] the blood of a bird he may not cover therewith the excrement [of a child].¹⁴ The Neharbeleans¹⁵ say: Even if one brought in earth to cover therewith the blood of a bird, he may [also] cover therewith the excrement [of a child].¹⁶

In the West¹⁷ they say: R. Jose Hama and R. Zera — some say, Raba the son of R. Jose b. Hama and R. Zera — differ therein; one says: koy is analogous to excrement,¹⁸ and the other says: koy is not analogous to excrement.¹⁹ It may be proved that it was Raba who said that koy is analogous to excrement; for Raba said: If one brought in earth to cover therewith excrement [of a child], he may cover therewith the blood of a bird, [but if he brought it earth to cover therewith] the blood of a bird, he may not cover therewith the excellent [of a child].²⁰ Conclude from this [that it was Raba].

Rami the son of R. Yabba said: The reason why we are not allowed to cover [the blood of] a koy is that it is a preventive measure against permitting the use of its suet.²¹ If it is so, [it should be prohibited] even on a weekday! — On a weekday people will say because he wants to clean his court.²² What is there to be said if he slaughtered [the koy] on a dust-heap?²³ [And further] what will you say if one comes to ask advice?²⁴ — On a weekday even if there is any doubt the Rabbis would tell him: Go, take trouble and cover [the blood]; but on a Festival, if there is a doubt, would the Rabbis tell him: Go, take trouble and cover [the blood]!²⁵ R. Zera learnt: it is not only with respect to a koy that the Rabbis said [thus]; but even if one slaughtered cattle, game and poultry and their blood became mingled, it is [also] prohibited to cover [such mingled blood] on a Festival.²⁶

Said R. Jose b. Jasiniah: This was only said when one cannot cover it [the mingled blood] with one thrust of the shovel;²⁷ but if one can cover it with one thrust of the shovel, it is permitted. But is not this self-evident?²⁸ — You might assume that we should prohibit [even] one shovelful lest perchance [he might go on to use] two shovelfuls, so he informs us [that one is allowed]. Rabbah said: If one slaughtered a bird on the eve of the Festival [and omitted to cover the blood], one may not cover it on the Festival;²⁹

(1) For otherwise there would be no point in stating the law, seeing that where no earth in readiness is available he may not cover the blood of an animal which certainly requires covering. The original question therefore remains, viz., why should he not cover the blood of the koy either according to the teaching of Rab Judah or with the ashes of the earth?

(2) The same applies to the basket-full of earth.

(3) Who does not regard this as digging a pit; v. supra 6a.

(4) Therefore the reason cannot be on account of making a hole.

(5) [It is possible that the ashes contain cinders, or the basket-full of earth clods. V. supra p. 33 n. 6].

(6) Not to do any work on a Festival.

- (7) Lit., 'positive command comes and overrides etc.'
- (8) It is forbidden to remove a Leprous spot by an operation. Deut. XXIV, 8. The command to circumcise however (Gen. XVII, 10ff) has to take place even though a leprous spot is on the foreskin.
- (9) Woollen fringes (Deut. XXII, 12) may be inserted in a garment of linen in spite of the prohibition not to wear a garment of heterogeneous materials.
- (10) For the act of crumbling the earth precedes the action of covering the blood.
- (11) In addition to the negative command 'not to do any work', cf. Lev. XXIII, 7, 8, 21, 35 there is also a positive command of 'resting', cf. ibid. XXIII, 39.
- (12) [They are not considered mukam in respect of animals about which there is a doubt, not because of the infringement of any prohibition involved, but because it is assumed that he had intended to use them only for such animals as definitely require the covering of their blood].
- (13) In the case of a child's excrements the need is only a probable one, but with respect to the blood, he decided beforehand to kill on that day. Therefore if he prepared the earth to use for a contingency. how much more should he be permitted to use it for that which he definitely decided.
- (14) For the earth was set in readiness only for a certain definitely determined object and therefore cannot be used in case of contingency.
- (15) I.e., Rami b. Berabi or Beroki V. Sanh. 17b, Sonc. ed. p. 89. Neharbel identified with Nehar Bil, east of Bagdad, Obermeyer, p. 269.
- (16) Because the contingency of the excrement is almost a certainty.
- (17) I.e., Palestine. The Babylonians, when alluding to Palestine, called it the West, as Palestine was to the west of Babylon. Cf. Ber. 2b. But V. Sanh. 17b.
- (18) I.e., if one brought earth to cover dung, he could cover therewith the blood of the koy, for the contingency of the dung is similar to the uncertainty with respect to the koy.
- (19) Because the contingency of the dung is almost a certainty, and is therefore regarded as definite in comparison with koy which is absolutely uncertain.
- (20) Hence Raba regards the contingency of requiring the earth for dung as remote and not as almost a certainty
- (21) Heleb (V. Glos.). Suet is disallowed in the case of oxen and sheep but not in the case of game. If therefore you allow to cover its blood, people might regard it as game.
- (22) And not because the koy is regarded as game. On a Festival work is forbidden with the exception of the preparation of food. The cleansing of a court is no exception.
- (23) Where you cannot say that the covering of the blood is in order to keep the dust-heap clean.
- (24) Whether, if he slaughters a koy on a weekday he should cover its blood? Is there not the possibility of the one asking the question, on being told that he is to cover its blood, himself coming to the conclusion that he may regard the koy as game and thus eat its suet.
- (25) Surely not! Therefore people might come to a wrong inference.
- (26) Because in so doing, he would be doing unnecessary work in covering the blood of the cattle.
- (27) Which would be sufficient to cover the blood of the game and poultry; so that anything more than one shovelful would be unnecessary work.
- (28) The one shovelful is required for the game and poultry, so that no extra work is done on account of the blood of the cattle.
- (29) Because that which could be done before the Festival may not be done on the Festival. The bird, however, could be eaten in spite of the breach of the positive command to cover the blood.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 9a

if one prepared dough on the eve of the Festival, he may separate from its hallah¹ on the Festival.² The father of Samuel Says: Even if one Prepared dough on the eve of the Festival, he may not separate from it hallah on the Festival.³ Shall it be said that Samuel disputes with his father? For Samuel said: With respect to hallah outside Palestine, one may go on eating [of the dough] and separate the priestly portion at the end!⁴ — Answered Raba: Does then not Samuel agree that if one designated it by name⁵ that it is forbidden to be eaten by laymen?⁶

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY NOT CARRY A LADDER [ON A FESTIVAL] FROM ONE DOVECOTE TO ANOTHER,⁷ BUT HE MAY INCLINE IT FROM ONE PIGEON-HOLE TO ANOTHER. BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT [THIS].

GEMARA. R. Hanan b. Ammi said: The dispute refers only to public ground, when Beth Shammai is of the opinion that whoever sees [him carrying the ladder] might say that he needed it for [plastering his roof];⁸ Beth Hillel hold, his dovecote proves his intention; but in private ground, all agree that it is permitted. But it is not so. For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab:⁹ ‘Wherever the sages have forbidden anything because of appearances, it is forbidden even in the most innermost chambers!’¹⁰ — It is [a contro versy of] Tannaim. For it was taught: One may spread them out in the sun, but not in the presence of people.¹¹ R. Eleazar and R. Simeon forbid this.¹²

Others say [thus]: R. Hanan b. Ammi said: The dispute refers to private ground; for Beth Shammai accept the teaching of Rab Judah in the name of Rab, and Beth Hillel reject the teaching of Rab Judah in the name of Rab; but on public ground all agree that it is forbidden. Shall it be said that Rab ruled as Beth Shammai?!¹³ — It is [a controversy of] Tannaim.¹⁴ For it was taught: ‘He may spread them out in the sun, but not in the presence of people. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon forbid this’

(1) The priestly portion of dough. V. Glos.

(2) For the decree of the Rabbis ‘not to separate tithes on a Festival’ (infra 36b) did not include dough, since it is permitted to make dough, which cannot be eaten until the priestly portion of the dough has been taken.

(3) When the Rabbis permitted the separation of hallah on a Festival, it only referred to a dough that was made on the Festival.

(4) Thus showing that the separation of hallah is not essential, since the eating of the dough does not depend upon the separation of hallah; and since one may eat of the dough before the separation one should be allowed to separate the hallah on the Festival, since the separation cannot be regarded as making the dough legally fit for use; cf. infra 36b.

(5) If one designated the separated part by the name hallah, it automatically assumes the name of terumah (V. Glos.).

(6) Hence such hallah is called terumah and can therefore be included in the Rabbinical enactment forbidding tithing on a Festival.

(7) To bring down the pigeons that are to be slaughtered.

(8) A man must avoid even the appearance of transgression.

(9) The authority of Rab as head of the Babylonian Community was not to be disputed by all Amora like R. Hanan, for he was regarded as enjoying the authority of a Tanna. CF. Sanh. 83b; ‘Er. 50b; etc.; cf. also Tosaf. B.M. 46b.

(10) If therefore on public ground it is forbidden because of appearances, It should also be forbidden even on private ground.

(11) This refers to clothes which were accidentally wetted on the Sabbath. For they might say that work had been done in washing. Hence there is an opinion that in private ground where the question of because of appearances does not apply it is permitted.

(12) Shab. 64b; 146b.

(13) This explanation would make Rab appear to side with Beth Shammai against Beth Hillel. But Rab would not go against the standard rule that the halachah prevails according to the opinion of Beth Hillel.

(14) The dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel according to R. Hanan is similar to the dispute between the anonymous Tanna and Rabbis Eleazar and Simeon. Rab, however, must explain the dispute of the Mishnah as in the first stage of the argument, and Beth Hillel, according to him, permit even on public ground because the dovecote proves the intention.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 9b

Our Mishnah is not in agreement with the following Tanna. For it was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel agree that one may carry the ladder from one dovecote to [another] dovecote;¹ they dispute only about bringing it back, Beth Shammai saying: One may not bring it back, and Beth Hillel maintaining: One may even bring it back. R. Judah said: These words apply only to a dovecote ladder;² but with respect to a loft-ladder all agree that it is forbidden.³ R. Dosa says: One may incline it [the ladder] from one pigeon-hole to another. Others say in the name of R. Dosa: One may even move it with [short] hop-like steps.⁴

The sons of R. Hiyya⁵ went out to the Villages [to inspect the fields]. When they came back their father asked them: Has any legal question come before you? They replied to him: A case of [carrying] a loft-ladder came before us and we permitted it. He said to them: Go and forbid what you have permitted. They were of the opinion: Since R. Judah said that they [Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel] do not dispute with respect to a loft-ladder, it follows that the first Tanna holds that they do differ [even there].⁶ But this is not so; R. Judah is only explaining the view of the first Tanna.⁷ Whence [is this known]? — Since [the list Tanna] states: ‘One may carry a ladder from one dovecote to another [dovecote].’ If therefore you maintain that they differ with respect to a loft-ladder [instead of] this [phrase], ‘One may carry a ladder from one dovecote to another dovecote,’⁸ he should say, ‘One may carry a ladder to a dovecote.’⁹ [Evidently] this is what he means: only [the ladder] of a dovecote but not that of a loft. And the other?¹⁰ — Does it then state a ladder of a dovecote? It [only] states ‘from one dovecote to another dovecote’, [indicating] even to any number of dovecotes.¹¹

Others say: A case of inclining a loft-ladder came before us and we permitted it. He said to them: Go and forbid what you have permitted. They were of the opinion that what the first Tanna¹² forbids, R. Dosa permits.¹³ But it is not so. [Rather is it] what the first Tanna permits,¹⁴ R. Dosa forbids.

BUT HE MAY INCLINE IT FROM ONE PIGEON HOLE TO ANOTHER etc. Accordingly [we see] that Beth Shammai is stringent in regard to the joy of the Festival¹⁵ and Beth Hillel is lenient, but the following contradicts this: If one slaughters game or poultry on a Festival, Beth Shammai say: He may dig up [earth] with a shovel and cover [the blood], but Beth Hillel maintain: One may not slaughter unless he has [loose] earth prepared from the day before [the Festival]!¹⁶ — R. Johanan replied: The authorities should be reversed.¹⁷ ‘Whence [does this follow]?¹⁸ Perhaps Beth Shammai say thus there¹⁹ only when there is [already] a shovel sticking in the earth,²⁰ but not where there is no shovel sticking in the earth.²¹ Or perhaps Beth Hillel permit here²² only because the dovecote makes it evident,²³ but there²⁴ it is not permitted!²⁵ Rather, if there is a difficulty,²⁶ the following is the difficulty. Beth Shammai say,²⁷ One may not take [pigeons]²⁸ unless he stirred [them] up²⁹ the day before. But Beth Hillel say: He stands and declares, ‘This one or that one shall I take’.³⁰ Accordingly [we see] that Beth Shammai is stringent in regard to the joy of the Festival and Beth Hillel is lenient; but the following contradicts this: If one slaughters game or poultry on a Festival [etc.]! — R. Johanan replied: The authorities should be reversed. Whence [does this follow]?³¹ Perhaps Beth Shammai [permit] only when there is [already] a shovel sticking in the earth

(1) In order not to be deprived of the joy of the Festival.

(2) As his intention is then unmistakable.

(3) For the sake of appearance, as it may certainly be thought that he wishes to repair the roof.

(4) If the top of the ladder does not reach a particular pigeon-hole otherwise.

(5) Judah and Hezekiah.

(6) And, of course, Beth Hillel's view is law.

(7) Thus none permit the use of the ladder of the loft, since R. Judah does not state a separate view.

(8) Which signifies a ladder only used for dovecotes.

(9) The word משובך should have been omitted.

(10) I.e., R. Hiyya, what was the meaning of the text to him?

(11) The expression from ‘one dovecote to another dovecote’ is not asserting that it was a dovecote ladder, but rather that the ladder may be moved to several dovecotes.

- (12) The first Tanna of R Dosa is R. Judah who forbids the carrying of a loft-ladder.
- (13) The loft-ladder at any rate to be inclined from one pigeon hole to another.
- (14) R. Judah permits the carrying of a dovecote ladder while R. Dosa forbids carrying and only permits inclining the ladder which had been brought to the dovecote before the Festival. But a loft-ladder would be forbidden even to incline.
- (15) Beth Shammai do not give a more lenient decision out of regard for the joy of the Festival.
- (16) Supra 2a. In this case Beth Shammai is more lenient than Beth Hillel.
- (17) Rashi: The authorities in the second Mishnah are to be reversed; Tosaf.: The authorities of the first Mishnah are to be reversed.
- (18) There is no need to change the authorities for the attitude of each school in the second Mishnah can be in harmony with their attitude in the first Mishnah.
- (19) That it is permissible to dig up earth with a shovel.
- (20) Before the Festival when there is no likelihood of breaking any law on the Festival.
- (21) Even if the earth is loose, for in sticking in the shovel it would appear as if he were digging on a Festival. Similarly in the second Mishnah an onlooker might think that he was intending to repair his roof.
- (22) Not out of consideration for the joy of the Festival.
- (23) That no forbidden work is intended to be performed.
- (24) In the first Mishnah.
- (25) To dig even though the shovel was already sticking in the earth because he may cause a crumbling of the earth which is in the nature of grinding and the possibility of an infringement of the law by digging takes precedence over the consideration of the joy of the Festival.
- (26) Which led R. Johanan, to reverse the authorities.
- (27) Infra 10a.
- (28) For slaughtering on a Festival.
- (29) V. infra 10a.
- (30) Preparing then, for the following day.
- (31) So D.S. as supra. Cur. edd. 'perhaps it is not so'.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 10a

but not when there is no shovel sticking in the earth;¹ or perhaps Beth Hillel rule thus only here because since it is mukzeh,² it is sufficient if he stands and declares, 'This one or that one shall I take';³ but there [they do] not [rule thus]! Rather, if there is a difficulty, the following is the difficulty: Beth Shammai say: One may not take a pestle⁴ to cut up meat thereon; but Beth Hillel permit [it].⁵ Accordingly [we see] that Beth Shammai is stringent in regard to the joy of the Festival and Beth Hillel is lenient, but the following contradicts this: If one slaughters game or poultry [on a Festival] Beth Shammai etc.! — R. Johanan replied: The authorities should be reversed. 'Whence [does this follow]? Perhaps it is not so? [Perhaps] Beth Shammai rule [thus] only there where there is [already] a shovel sticking in the earth, but not when there is no shovel sticking In the earth. Or perhaps Beth Hillel rule thus only here, because it [the pestle] bears the designation of utensil;⁶ but there [they do] not [rule thus]! Rather, if there is a difficulty, the following is the difficulty: Beth Shammai say: One may not lay out a hide⁷ for treading on⁸ and one may not lift it up unless it has [sticking to it] flesh [as much as] an olive;⁹ but Beth Hillel permit.¹⁰ Accordingly [we see] that Beth Shammai is stringent in regard to the joy of the Festival and Beth Hillel is lenient, but the following contradicts that if one slaughters game or poultry on a Festival etc! — R. Johanan replied: The authorities should be reversed. Whence [does this follow]? Perhaps it is not so; [perhaps Beth Shammai rule thus only there, where there is [already] a shovel sticking in the earth, but not when there is no shovel sticking in the earth. Or perhaps Beth Hillel rule thus only here because it [the hide] is fit for sitting thereon,¹¹ but there [they do] not [rule thus]! Rather, if there is a difficulty, the following is the difficulty: Beth Shammai say: One may not take down shutters¹² on a Festival, but Beth Hillel permit them even to be put back.¹³ Accordingly [we see] that Beth Shammai is stringent in regard to the joy of the Festival and Beth Hillel is lenient, but the following contradicts this: If one slaughters game or poultry on a Festival etc.! It is well [that the rulings of] Beth Shammai are not contradictory: there [it is permitted only] when there is [already] a shovel sticking in the earth but here there is no shovel sticking in the earth.¹⁴ But [the views of] Beth Hillel are contradictory! — Said R. Johanan: The authorities should be reversed. [Why reverse the authorities]?¹⁵ Perhaps Beth Hillel rule thus only here because building and pulling down do not apply to utensils,¹⁶ but there [they do] not [rule thus].

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY:¹⁷ ONE MUST NOT TAKE [PIGEONS] UNLESS HE HAS STIRRED¹⁸ [THEM] UP THE DAY BEFORE [THE FESTIVAL]; BUT BETH HILLEL SAY: HE STANDS AND DECLARES: THIS ONE OR THAT ONE WILL I TAKE. GEMARA. R. Hanan b. Ammi said: The dispute is only with respect to the first brood¹⁹ when Beth Shammai is of the opinion that²⁰ we preventively prohibit,²¹ lest he may come to change his mind,²² whereas Beth Hillel is of the opinion: We do not prohibit as a precautionary measure; but with respect to the second brood all agree that it is sufficient when he stands and declares, ‘This one or that one will I take’.²³

Now according to Beth Hillel, why must he declare, ‘This one or that one will I take’, let him [rather] say, ‘Of these will I take [one] tomorrow’?²⁴ And if you reply that Beth Hillel do not accept [the law of] Bererah,²⁵ surely we have learnt:²⁶ If a corpse [lay] in a room²⁷ which has many doors²⁸ they are all unclean;²⁹ if one of these [doors] was opened,³⁰ it alone is unclean³¹ and all the others are clean.³² If he formed the intention to take it [the corpse] out through one of them, or through a window which [measures] four handbreadths square,³³ this gives protection to all the other doors.³⁴ Beth Shammai say: Providing that he had formed his intention to take it out³⁵ before the person died;³⁶ but Beth Hillel say: [It holds good] even [if his intention was formed] after the person died!³⁷ — But has it not already been stated thereon: Rabbah said: [The statement of Beth Hillel is] with respect to the cleansing of the entrances from now onwards.³⁸ R. Oshaia also said: [The statement of Beth Hillel is] with respect to the cleansing of the entrances from now onwards; only ‘from now onwards’ but not ‘retrospectively’.³⁹ Raba says: In reality [the statement of Beth Hillel is even in respect of cleansing] retrospectively,⁴⁰ and here⁴¹ the reason⁴² is lest he might take up [a pigeon] and put it down again, take up [a pigeon] and put it down again and thus come to take one which is not fit for him.⁴³ But you say it is sufficient if he stands and says this or that will I take!⁴⁴ — This only applies on the eve of the Festival,⁴⁵

(1) Similarly they do not permit to take a pigeon on a Festival unless he had specified before the Festival the particular pigeon he intended to slaughter, for after handling one he might change his mind and decide upon another and thus the handling of the first pigeon would be regarded as unnecessary work on a Festival.

(2) Viz., the prohibition of taking pigeons without previous preparation.

(3) This constitutes sufficient preparation.

(4) Used for the pounding of groats and therefore reserved for work forbidden on a Festival and so must not be handled.

(5) Infra 11a.

(6) Lit., ‘the law of a utensil is upon it’, and one may always handle a utensil on a Festival.

(7) Flayed on the Festival.

(8) Whereby it becomes tanned.

(9) The minimum to be used as a meal and what is needful for food may be carried about on a Festival.

(10) Cf. infra p. 51.

(11) They used to sit cross-legged upon rugs.

(12) For it is of the nature of building and pulling clown. V. infra 54, n. 2.

(13) Although such work is not directly for the sake of the Festival, infra 11b.

(14) I.e., in this case there is nothing corresponding to the shovel sticking in the earth in order to permit.

(15) Cf. MS.M. Cur. ed. ‘or’. [The text is in disorder: D.S. a.l. on the basis of different MSS. reconstructs it as follows: ‘On a Festival etc.’ — Said R. Johanan: The authorities are reversed. But whence (does this follow)? Perhaps Beth Shammai rules thus only there . . . but here there is no shovel . . . earth. Or perhaps Beth Hillel rule thus only here because building etc.’ — following the same line of argument as in the preceding cases].

- (16) The forms of the utensils are not changed but are only used for a different purpose.
- (17) Supra 9b. q.v.
- (18) To stir up, means to examine properly what sort of bird it was.
- (19) It is usual to leave the first brood as company for the parent birds.
- (20) If he did not 'stir' them before the Festival.
- (21) Taking any on the Festival.
- (22) About slaughtering that particular pigeon and put it back. He would thus have handled and moved the pigeon unnecessarily. If, however, he 'stirred' them before the Festival and chose one for slaughter, then he has definitely made up his mind to have that bird.
- (23) For there is no question of putting the bird back, since it is only the first brood that is left with the parent birds.
- (24) Since a verbal preparation is sufficient to remove the prohibition of mukzeh, it should be assumed that the bird chosen on the Festival is retrospectively the same one about which he spoke the day before.
- (25) Retrospective selection. A legal term to denote that a present selection shall have retrospective validity. The selection of a particular dove on the Festival from a number that have been generally designated before the Festival (when it was intended to take one only) shall rank as though that dove itself has been selected before the Festival.
- (26) Infra 37b; 'Er. 68b; Oh. VII, 3.
- (27) A corpse in a room defiles not only the vessels inside the room but even those standing just outside the door beneath the lintel of the entrance through which the corpse is to be carried out. If there is more than one entrance to the room the same rule applies to them all unless it has been specifically determined to carry it through one particular entrance. Such determination protects the other entrances.
- (28) All of which are closed or open.
- (29) The doors themselves and even the vessels outside under the same lintels; because the corpse may be carried out through any one of them.
- (30) After the person's death.
- (31) For it is assumed that the corpse will be taken out through the open door.
- (32) I.e., all vessels placed subsequently in the remaining entrances. With respect to those vessels placed there prior to the opening of the one door v. the immediately following hypothetical dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel.
- (33) The minimum opening through which a whole corpse could be carried out.
- (34) His intention or determination is regarded as if he had actually opened the entrance.
- (35) Through a particular door.
- (36) But if only after death, then those vessels which had been placed in the same entrance prior to his determination would be unclean.
- (37) It ranks as though that door had been designated for that purpose immediately at death; hence we see that Beth Hillel accept the rule of Bererah.
- (38) I. e., from the time subsequent to his determination. According to Beth Shammai, when there has been no determination before the death, all the entrances are unclean and the subsequent determination does not remove the uncleanness except by the actual act of opening. Not so Beth Hillel. But Beth Hillel will not accept the rule of Bererah.
- (39) I.e., those vessels placed in the entrances from the time of death until the forming of his intention all agree are unclean.
- (40) Because Beth Hillel accept the rule of Bererah.
- (41) In our Mishnah.
- (42) That Beth Hillel say that he must specify this or that.
- (43) On account of mukzeh; for his intention was to take only what was necessary' for him. If, however, he said 'this or that I will take,' he will definitely take those designated.
- (44) Why not apprehend here too lest he will pick and choose since he did not 'stir' them before the Festival?
- (45) I.e., If he makes this declaration on the eve of the Festival to remind him that he may not pick and choose on the Festival on account of mukzeh.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 10b

but¹ on the Festival [itself]² it is forbidden;³ for sometimes the [seemingly] fat ones are found [to be] lean, and the [seemingly] lean ones are found [to be] fat, and [thus] he handles [birds] which are not fit for him; or else, sometimes they may all be found lean, and he will leave them and thus come to refrain from the joy of the Festival.⁴

MISHNAH. IF HE DESIGNATED⁵ BLACK [DOVES]⁶ BUT FOUND WHITE, WHITE BUT FOUND BLACK, TWO BUT FOUND THREE, THEY ARE [ALL] FORBIDDEN;⁷ THREE BUT FOUND TWO, THEY ARE PERMITTED. [IF HE DESIGNATED DOVES] INSIDE THE NEST AND FOUND THEM IN FRONT OF THE NEST, THEY ARE FORBIDDEN; BUT IF NONE EXCEPT THESE WERE THERE, THEY ARE PERMITTED.

GEMARA. Is not this self-evident? — Said Rabbah: We are dealing here with a case where he had designated black and white,⁸ and on the following morning he found black ones in the place of the white and white ones in the place of the black; you might say they are the very same [doves] and they had only exchanged [their nests], so he informs us⁹ that those¹⁰ are gone away and these are different ones. Shall it be said that [this Mishnah] supports the view of R. Hanina? for R. Hanina said:¹¹ [If] majority and proximity [are in opposition]¹² you follow the majority?¹³ — As Abaye has explained,¹⁴ when there is a board,¹⁵ likewise also here [explain] when there is a board.

[IF HE DESIGNATED] TWO [DOVES] BUT FOUND THREE THEY ARE [ALL] FORBIDDEN. Whichever way you take it [they are forbidden]; if these¹⁶ are other [doves], then they are indeed others;¹⁷ if they are the same, then there is [another] one mixed up with them.¹⁸

[IF HE DESIGNATED] THREE [DOVES] BUT FOUND TWO THEY ARE PERMITTED. What is the reason? — They are indeed the same¹⁹ and one of them has flown away. Shall it be said that the Mishnah is according to Rabbi and not according to the Sages? For we have learnt: If one deposited one hundred [zuz]²⁰ and found two hundred,²¹ [it is assumed that] there is hullin [money]²² and second tithes [money] mixed together. This is the opinion of Rabbi. But the Sages say: The entire sum is hullin [money].²³ If he deposited two hundred [zuz] and found one hundred, [it is assumed that] one hundred has been left²⁴ and one hundred has been taken away. This is the opinion of Rabbi. But the Sages say: The entire sum is hullin [money].²⁵ — You can even say [that it is] in accordance with the Sages, for It was stated thereon: R. Johanan and R. Eleazar both say:²⁶ Doves are different since they are used to hop about.²⁷ But why is it necessary²⁸ to explain here, ‘doves are different since they are used to hop about’? Surely it has already been stated with respect to this [very Baraita] that [there is a dispute between] R. Johanan and R. Eleazar; one says: The controversy [between Rabbi and the Sages] is when there were two purses,²⁹ but when there is [only] one purse all agree that the entire sum is hullin.³⁰ And the other says: The dispute is when there is one purse,³¹ but when there are two purses all agree that [we are to assume] one hundred has been left and one hundred taken away! It is well according to the view that the dispute relates to two purses; hence it is necessary to explain here ‘it is different with doves since they are used to hop about.’ But according to the view that ‘the dispute is [only] with respect to one purse but when there are two purses all agree that one hundred had been left and one hundred taken’ why is it necessary to answer it [as above]; surely you have said indeed that they do not dispute with respect to two purses?³² — Said R. Ashi: We are dealing here with doves tied together and with purses fastened together;³³ doves pull themselves apart from one another, but purses do not pull themselves apart from one another.³⁴ And Rabbi?³⁵ — He will answer you: In the case of purses too, it occurs

(1) If he has to make up his mind.

(2) I.e., if he only said ‘of these will I take to-morrow.’

(3) To take any bird.

(4) But had he specifically designated which to take, he would not change his mind.

(5) For eating on the Festival.

(6) That were in the nest.

(7) In the first case they are definitely strange doves and in the second case since he cannot recognize the doves he designated they are all forbidden.

(8) In two separated nests.

(9) That we are to suppose.

(10) Doves that have been designated for slaughter on the eve of the Festival.

(11) B.B. 23b.

(12) I.e., If a case can be decided one way on the ground of majority and another way on the ground of nearness. For majority and nearness, cf. Ex. XXIII, 2 and Deut. XXI, 3 respectively. V. also B.B., Sonc. ed. p. 117, n. 2.

(13) Here too it is probable that the doves are the same and that the nests have been exchanged owing to their close proximity. On the other hand it is possible to imagine these doves as part of the great majority of birds which do not belong to him and which had not been predetermined on.

(14) With reference to another case, infra 11a.

(15) In front of the dovecote upon which strange birds settle. Accordingly it is also probable that as soon as the old doves left their dovecote (quitted their nest), these strange doves took their place. The question of proximity therefore applies equally to the strange doves as well as to the doves that were originally in the nest in which case no one disputes that majority decides.

(16) All three.

(17) They are therefore forbidden, for these have not been designated before the Festival.

(18) And since it is not known which is the new one they are all forbidden.

(19) I.e., two of the three previously designated.

(20) I.e., one case of a hundred zuz of the second tithe which had to be taken to Jerusalem, but which owing to the distance was converted into money. This money had to be spent in Jerusalem. V. Deut. XIV, 22-26.

(21) I.e., two one-hundred zuz pieces.

(22) I.e., ordinary, unconsecrated, not of the second tithe.

(23) He must therefore select the finest coin for the second tithe and say: If this was originally the second tithe coin then it is well; if, on the other hand, the other coin was originally the second tithe, then let this one be exchanged for the other.

(24) For he would not have put away hulin money together with second tithe money; and since two coins were found instead of one, it is to be assumed that the one-hundred zuz piece of the second tithe had been taken out and put in another place, while this two-hundred is ordinary money subsequently put in the same place.

(25) Because the owner would not have separated one second tithe coin from the other except to take it to Jerusalem; hence the Sages assume that he had taken out the two hundred zuz which he put somewhere away, replacing them by the hundred zuz of ordinary money, but that he had forgotten the whole matter. Similarly according to the Sages it would follow that the three doves had flown away and two others came in their place. V. Pes. 100.

(26) In explanation of this seeming contradiction.

(27) Therefore one of them may have hopped away and the two left are of the original ones. But the same cannot be said with respect to money.

(28) For both R. Johanan and R. Eleazar.

(29) Each containing one hundred zuzim. It is then that Rabbi says that one hundred was left and one hundred taken away.

(30) For if he took aught of such money he would have taken the lot.

(31) It is then that the Sages assume that the entire two hundred second tithe money had been taken out and placed elsewhere.

(32) The contradiction shown between the Mishnah and the view of the Sages was removed by both R. Johanan and R. Eleazar by explaining that there was a difference between doves and coins. But since one of the same two Rabbis maintains that in the case of two purses each containing one hundred zuzim the Sages agree that the hundred left is part of the original, which is in agreement with the statement in the Mishnah, then why was he a party to that explanation of the contradiction?

(33) The expression 'One purse containing two hundred zuzim' means two purses, each containing one hundred zuzim, tied together and regarded as one purse; likewise 'two purses' would mean when they are not tied together. In the former case the Sages hold that the purse left is not one of the original two that were tied together. This view is contradictory to the Mishnah which says that the two doves found are of the original three that were tied together from which one had torn itself away. This contradiction is overcome by drawing a distinction between live birds and inanimate purses.

(34) And therefore the purse left may not be of the original two tied together.

(35) Surely this is a logical distinction!

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 11a

that their knot becomes worn out.

WITHIN THE NEST AND FOUND THEM IN FRONT OF THE NEST THEY ARE FORBIDDEN. Shall it be said that this¹ supports the view of R. Hanina? For R. Hanina said:² [If] majority and proximity [are in opposition] you follow the majority? — Said Abaye: When there is a board.³ Raba says: 'We are treating here of two nests one above the other;⁴ and it goes without saying that if he designated [doves] in the lower [nest] and did not designate [those] in the upper, and [on the morrow] finds [doves] in the lower [nest] and none in the upper they are forbidden, for we assume that those of the lower [nest] had flown away and these⁵ had indeed hopped down; but even if he designated [doves] in the upper [nest] and did not designate [those] in the lower and he came and found [some] in the upper and did not find [any] in the lower, these too are forbidden, for we assume that those⁶ had flown away and these had indeed fluttered up.⁷ BUT IF NONE EXCEPT THESE WERE THERE THEY ARE PERMITTED. What are the circumstances? If you say that [this refers] to those which can fly, then it is possible to assume that those had flown away and these are different ones? And if [this refers] to those which can [only] hop,⁸ then if there is [another] nest within fifty cubits, they might indeed have hopped away;⁹ and if there is no [other] nest within fifty cubits, it is obvious that they are permitted, for Mar 'Ukba b. Hama said: 'Whatever hops does not hop more than fifty cubits! — In truth [it means] where there is [another] nest within fifty cubits, but e.g., it is situated round a corner; you might say that they has indeed hopped away,' so it¹⁰ informs us that they only hop along as long as by turning they see their nest,¹¹ but if not,¹² they do not hop away.

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY:¹³ YOU MAY NOT TAKE A PESTLE¹⁴ TO CUT UP MEAT THEREON,¹⁵ BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT [IT]. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY NOT PLACE A HIDE¹⁶ FOR TREADING ON¹⁷ NOR MAY HE LIFT IT UP UNLESS THERE IS AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE OF FLESH WITH IT,¹⁸ BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT IT.

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: And they [both] agree that if he had already cut up meat thereon, it [the pestle] may not be moved.¹⁹

Abaye said: The dispute is [only] with respect to a pestle, but in the case of a butcher's block²⁰ all agree that it is permitted. This is obvious: we learnt, A PESTLE!²¹ — You might say that the same applies even to a butcher's block²² and the reason it states PESTLE is in order to inform you of the extent of the view of Beth Hillel that even an object specially made for work which is forbidden²³ is also permitted; hence he informs us [that it is not so]. Others state; Abaye [himself] replied:²⁴ It is only necessary [to teach] that even a new butcher's block [is permitted]. You might say: He may change his mind and not cut up [meat] on it,²⁵ so he informs us [that this is not so]. Do then Beth Shammai not fear [the possibility of] one changing his mind?²⁶ Surely it was taught: Beth Shammai say: One may not lead the slaughterer²⁷ and the knife to the animal [to be slaughtered]²⁸ nor the animal to the slaughterer and the knife; but Beth Hillel say: One may bring the one to the other. Beth Shammai say: One may not carry spices or a pestle to the mortar, nor the mortar to the spices or the pestle; but Beth Hillel say: One may bring the one to the other! — What comparison is this? [With respect to] an animal it is well: he may come to change his mind saying, let us leave this lean animal and I will bring another animal which is fatter than this; [with respect to] a dish too he may come to change his mind, saying, let us leave this dish which requires spices and I will bring another [dish] which does not require spices. [But] here what are we to suppose? He will change his mind and not cut up [the meat]? Since he has already slaughtered [the animal], it has to be cut up.

BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY NOT PLACE A HIDE. A Tanna taught: And they [both] agree that one may salt upon it meat for roasting.²⁹ Abaye said: It was taught only [when it is] for roasting but not for boiling.³⁰ This is obvious: We learnt³¹ ‘for roasting’? — This he [Abaye] informs us that even for roasting [to salt it almost as much] as for boiling is [also] forbidden.

Our Rabbis taught: One may neither salt³² pieces of suet³³ for turn them about.³⁴ They reported in the name of R. Joshua: One may spread them out in the air on pegs [of wood]. R. Mattenah said: The halachah is as R. Joshua. Others state: R. Mattenah said: The halachah is not as R. Joshua. This is well according to the version, ‘the halachah is as R. Joshua’, [then it is necessary]: For I might say, [when] an individual and a majority [are in dispute] the halachah is as the majority: [hence] he informs us that [here] the halachah is as the individual. But according to the version ‘the halachah is not as R. Joshua’, it is obvious: [for when] an individual and a majority [are in dispute], the halachah is as the majority! — You might think that the opinion of R. Joshua is logical, for if you will not permit him³⁵ he will altogether forbear to slaughter,³⁶ so he informs us.³⁷ And why is this different from the case of placing a hide before the treading place?³⁸

— There it is not manifest,¹ since it [the hide] is fit to be used as a mat to sit on. Here [however] he will be led to argue: ‘What is the reason [that] the Rabbis permitted me [to spread it on pegs]: so that it should not become offensive: what difference is there whether I spread them or salt them? Rab Judah in the name of Samuel said: A man may salt [on a Festival] several pieces of meat together even though he needs only one piece.² R. Adda b. Ahabah made use of an artifice and salted piece after piece.³ MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY:⁴ ONE MAY NOT TAKE DOWN SHUTTERS ON A FESTIVAL,⁵ BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT EVEN TO PUT THEM BACK AGAIN.

GEMARA. What [kind of] shutters? — Said ‘Ulla: The shutters of a [shopkeeper's] stall.⁶ ‘Ulla further said: There are three cases where [the Rabbis] allowed the completing [of the action]⁷ on account of its beginning,⁸ and they are as follows: [The placing of] the hide for people to tread on;⁹ [the taking down of] shutters from stalls¹⁰ and the replacing of a plaster¹¹ in the Temple. And Rehaba said in the name of Rabbi Judah:¹² Also he who opens his cask [of wine] or commences [cutting] into his dough for the requirements of the Festival¹³ and according to R. Judah who Says: He may finish [selling them after the Festival].¹⁴

‘[The placing of] the hide for people to tread on’; we have [already] learnt it!¹⁵ — You might say that the reason of Beth Hillel¹⁶ is because it is fit to be used as a mat and therefore even though [the hide was flayed] before the Festival it is also [permitted]; so he informs us [that] they permitted its completion for the sake of the beginning: [therefore if flayed] on the Festival it is [permitted], before the Festival it is not [permitted].

‘[THE TAKING DOWN OF] SHUTTERS FROM STALLS’ we have also learnt, [viz., but Beth Hillel permit even to put them back again]: — You might say that the reason of Beth Hillel is that building or demolishing does not apply to utensils and [therefore] even [the lids of chests in] houses are also permitted,¹⁷ so he informs us that they only permitted its completion on account of the beginning; therefore of stalls only [is it permitted] but not of [chests in] houses.¹⁸

‘The replacing of a plaster in the Temple’ we have also learnt [viz.]:¹⁹ One may replace²⁰ a plaster [on a wound] in the Temple but not in the country:²¹ — You might Say, what is the reason? Because there is no shebuth²² in the Temple and [therefore] even a priest not performing a Temple service [may also replace a plaster], so he informs us that they [only] permitted its completion on account of the beginning, [therefore it is permitted] only in the case of [a priest] performing a Temple service, but not when not performing a Temple service. ‘[The case of] opening a cask’, we have also learnt²³ [viz.]: He who opens his cask [of wine] or commences cutting into his dough for the requirements of the Festival, R. Judah says: He may finish [selling them after the Festival]; but the Sages say: He may not finish! — You might say that the Rabbis regarded the uncleanness of an ‘am ha-arez during the [period of the] Festival as cleanness and [therefore] even though he had not commenced²⁴ it is also [permitted];²⁵ so he informs us that they only permitted its completion on account of the beginning, [therefore] only if he had commenced [to sell them during the Festival] but not if he had not commenced.²⁶ And ‘Ulla: What is the reason that he does not state this?²⁷ — He does not deal with [cases] where there is a dispute. But there is a dispute concerning those too!²⁸ — The [opinion of] Beth Shammai against that of Beth Hillel is regarded as having no authority.²⁹

Our Mishnah³⁰ is not according to the following Tanna; for it was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel agree that one may take down the shutters on a Festival; they dispute only about replacing, Beth Shammai maintaining: One may not replace [them]; while Beth Hillel rules: One may even replace [them]. When is this said? Where they [the shutters] have hinges,³¹ but if they have no hinges all agree that it is permitted [even to replace them]. But it was taught: This applies only if they have no hinges, but if they have hinges all agree that it is forbidden! — Said Abaye: When they have hinges on the side all³² agree that it is forbidden;³³ they only dispute where there is a hinge in the middle:

- (1) That the spreading of the hide is for tanning.
- (2) For this is not doing extra work, for there is one act of salting whether it be for one or for several pieces.
- (3) After salting one piece for eating on the same day, he took another under the pretence that it was preferable, and so on until the whole was salted. The object was to preserve the meat in better condition for the days following the Festival.
- (4) Supra 10a.
- (5) For it is of the nature of building and pulling down, work forbidden on a Festival.
- (6) Although general trading is prohibited on a Festival, yet things necessary for the full enjoyment of the Festival may be sold on trust, no payment being made on the day of the Festival. One or two shutters were taken down to show that such goods might be obtained.
- (7) Which was not necessary for the Festival and in an ordinary way would have been prohibited.
- (8) The beginning of the action was necessary for the enjoyment of the Festival and so the ending is permitted for the sake of the beginning. If it were forbidden, it might cause the neglect of beginning certain work which was necessary for the full enjoyment of the Festival.
- (9) If he would not be allowed to use the skin in this way he would not kill.
- (10) If he will not be allowed to close he will not open to give food.
- (11) To apply a plaster on the Sabbath is forbidden. If, however, a priest having a plaster on a wound on his hand by reason of which he may not perform the Temple service (because nothing may adhere to his hand during the Temple service) has removed same, then he may replace it after the Temple service is over.
- (12) [The reference is to Rab Judah, whom Rehaba designated as 'Rabbi' ('my teacher') because he was his teacher (Rashi). V. D.S. a.l.]
- (13) To retail these to the pilgrims during the Festival among whom may be some of the עמי הארץ who do not observe the law of purification and who may have come into contact with the wine or bread thus rendering them unclean. According to R. Judah, the remainder also may after the Festival be bought by or sold to anyone however scrupulous he may be. V. p. 56, n. 1. Here, too, if we do not allow him to sell after the Festival, he will not commence opening for the Festival.
- (14) This is explained infra.
- (15) Supra 11a. Then why mention it again?
- (16) In permitting the hide to be trodden on.
- (17) To be taken off and to be put back again.
- (18) I.e. , even Beth Hillel hold that building or demolishing with respect to utensils is Rabbinically prohibited, but here they permit only on account of the enjoyment of the Festival.
- (19) 'Er. 102b.
- (20) On a Sabbath.
- (21) מדינה (country) used here as opposed to מקדש (Sanctuary, Temple precincts).
- (22) A Rabbinical Statute concerning the true keeping of the Sabbath; an act forbidden by the Rabbis on a Sabbath as being out of harmony with the celebration of the day. The replacing of a plaster on a Sabbath, like other medicinal remedies, is forbidden by the Rabbis as a preventive measure against pounding spices. The prohibition of acts as shebuth, however, did not apply to Temple duties. V. Glos.
- (23) Hag. 26b. Wine or dough which has been touched by an 'am ha-arez may not be bought by or sold to persons who are scrupulous about purification, for the 'am ha-arez is suspected of being unclean. If an 'am ha-arez comes into contact with the wine or the dough during the Festival, they are not contaminated and may be bought by or sold to anybody during the Festival, even the most scrupulous. Should any wine or dough remain after the Festival, R. Judah and the Sages dispute whether these may continue to be bought by or sold to scrupulous people. If, however, wine or dough not for sale during the Festival came in contact with an 'am ha-arez, such may not be bought by or sold to the scrupulous after the Festival even according to R. Judah.

(24) To sell during the Festival.

(25) To the most scrupulous according to R. Judah, even though an 'am ha-arez had come into contact with these.

(26) The uncleanness of an 'am ha-arez was regarded as clean only with respect to things that were started to be sold, but if an 'am ha-arez touched a thing that had not been started to be sold, he contaminated them.

(27) Additional case of Rehaba.

(28) For Beth Shammai dispute the three cases he mentions.

(29) Lit., 'Beth Shammai('s view), in the place of Beth Hillel is not a Mishnah', since the halachah is determined according to Beth Hillel. Cf. Ber. 36b, Yeb. 9a.

(30) Which states the dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel with respect to taking down shutters.

(31) In which case replacing appears more in the nature of building.

(32) Both Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel.

(33) Because it is more difficult to put them back.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 12a

One master¹ holds that we preventively prohibit a hinge in the centre on account of a hinge at the side;² and the other master³ is of the opinion we do not preventively prohibit.⁴

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY NOT CARRY OUT AN INFANT⁵ OR A LULAB⁶ OR A SCROLL OF THE LAW⁷ INTO PUBLIC GROUND,⁸ BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT [IT].

GEMARA. A Tanna taught before R. Isaac b. Abdimi: He who slaughters a freewill burnt-offering on a Festival is flagellated.⁹ Said he to him: He who taught you this held the opinion of Beth Shammai who maintain: We do not say, 'Since carrying out is permitted for what is [actually] necessary [for the preparation of food], it is also permitted for that which is not necessary'.¹⁰ For if [he held the opinion of] Beth Hillel, surely they maintain: 'Since carrying out is permitted where it is necessary, it is also permitted where it is not necessary', so also here, since slaughtering is permitted where it is necessary¹¹ it is also permitted where it is not necessary.¹² To this Rabbah demurred: Whence do you know that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel differ on this [point]; perhaps they differ as to whether [the laws of] 'erub and carrying out apply to Sabbath, but [the laws of] 'erub and carrying out do not apply to a Festival?¹³ One Master is of the opinion, 'Erub and [the laws of] carrying out apply to both the Sabbath and the Festival,¹⁴ and the other Master maintains, 'Erub and [the laws of] carrying out apply to Sabbath but 'erub and [the laws of] carrying out do not apply to the Festival, as it is written, Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the Sabbath day,¹⁵ only on the Sabbath day but not on the Festival!¹⁶ To this R. Joseph demurred [in turn]: If so,¹⁷ let them¹⁸ dispute with respect to stones!¹⁹ Since, however, they do not dispute about stones, infer from it that they differ with respect to carrying out [things] that are not necessary [in the preparation of food].²⁰

R. Johanan is also of the opinion that they differ in whether [we say], 'Since carrying out is permitted for what is necessary [in the preparation of food] it is also permitted for what is not necessary [in the preparation of food]'; for a tanna recited before R. Johanan:²¹ He who boils the thigh sinew on a Festival²² in milk and eats it is flagellated on five counts, for [unnecessarily] cooking the sinew on a Festival,²³ for eating the sinew, for boiling meat in milk,²⁴ for eating meat with milk,²⁴ and

- (1) I.e., Beth Shammai.
- (2) If the former is permitted, one will think that the latter, too, is permitted.
- (3) I.e., Beth Hillel.
- (4) And therefore permit even to put them back again. The two Baraita therefore are not contradictory, for each refers to a different case.
- (5) On a Festival, even to circumcise it. The circumcision ceremony was usually performed in a synagogue, hence the need to carry the infant out.
- (6) Lit., 'palm-branch', which bound together with myrtles and willows was carried, together with a citron, during the Feast of Tabernacles. V. Lev. XXIII, 40. Beth Shammai prohibit the carrying out of the lulab even for the purpose of fulfilling this command.
- (7) For the purpose of reading it.
- (8) For only such work as is necessary in the preparation of food may be done on a Festival.
- (9) The only offering which an individual may bring on a Festival is one part of which he may eat. But a burnt-offering is entirely consumed by fire on the altar; hence he does unnecessary work on the Festival. Obligatory (i.e., public) burnt-offerings are however permitted, as are all public sacrifices, both on the Sabbath and on Festivals, but voluntary offerings can be offered after the Festival.
- (10) As follows from our Mishnah.
- (11) For his own food during the Festival.
- (12) As the freewill burnt-offering.
- (13) The carrying of articles from one domain to another is forbidden, yet by means of an 'erub it is permitted. 'Erub is a symbolical act by which is established the legal fiction of joining one private estate with another private estate, thus extending the area in which things could be carried.
- (14) Just as it is not permitted on a Sabbath to carry from one domain to another without an 'erub, so on a Festival.
- (15) Jer. XVII, 22.
- (16) Thus Beth Hillel too may hold that we do not say, 'Since a certain labour is permitted in the preparation of food, it is also permitted in other cases too', their reason in the Mishnah being that they do not regard carrying out as a labour at all vis a vis Festivals.
- (17) That Beth Hillel hold that the prohibition of carrying without an 'erub does not apply to Festivals.
- (18) Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel.
- (19) Which it is altogether unnecessary to carry out; whether these may be carried out on Festivals into a public domain, v. Tosaf. s.v. זָרָה and R. Hananel.
- (20) But for the carrying out of which there is nevertheless some reason as the examples quoted in the Mishnah, v. loc. cit.
- (21) Mak. 21b; Yes. 47b. In Mak. the reading is slightly different.
- (22) Forbidden in Gen. XXXII, 33.
- (23) Since the sinew may not be eaten, the work of cooking it is unnecessary and consequently punishable by flogging. The same applies to the work of kindling a fire.
- (24) The prohibition of boiling meat with milk or eating of the same as well as making any use thereof is derived from the three passages of Scripture (Ex. XXIII, 19; XXXIV, 26; Deut. XIV, 21) forbidding to seeth a kid in its mother's milk.

for kindling fire.¹ Said he [R. Johanan] to him: Go, teach [this] outside [the Academy]; [what you have said with respect to] kindling and cooking has no authority, and if you say that it has an authority, [that authority] must be Beth Shammai who maintain that we do not say, 'Since carrying out [on a Festival] is permitted for what is necessary² it is also permitted for what is not necessary', likewise [they maintain] here that we do not say, 'Since the kindling of fire is permitted [on a Festival] for what is necessary, it is also permitted for what is not necessary'. For according to Beth Hillel, since they maintain [that we do say] 'Since carrying out is permitted for what is necessary, it is also permitted for what is not necessary', so also they would maintain here [that we say], 'Since the kindling of fire is permitted for what is necessary. it is also permitted for what is not necessary'.³

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: YOU MAY NOT TAKE TO THE PRIEST HALLAH⁴ OR PRIESTLY DUES⁵ ON A FESTIVAL WHETHER THEY WERE SEPARATED ON THE DAY BEFORE OR ON THE SAME DAY. BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT IT. SAID BETH SHAMMAI TO THEM: AN ANALOGY [SUPPORTS OUR VIEW]: HALLAH AND PRIESTLY DUES ARE A GIFT TO THE PRIEST AND TERUMAH⁶ IS [LIKEWISE] A GIFT TO THE PRIEST; JUST AS ONE MAY NOT TAKE [TO THE PRIEST] TERUMAH⁷ SO ONE MAY NOT TAKE [TO HIM] PRIESTLY DUES. BETH HILLEL, REPLIED TO THEM: NO! IF YOU SAY⁸ IN THE CASE OF TERUMAH WHICH HE HAS NOT THE RIGHT TO SEPARATE,⁹ WILL YOU SAY [THE SAME] WITH RESPECT TO PRIESTLY DUES WHICH HE IS PERMITTED TO SEPARATE?¹⁰

GEMARA. Now it was assumed that [the Mishnah means where] they were [both] separated on that day and slaughtered on that day, and [where] they were [both] separated the day before and slaughtered the day before. Who is [the authority for] our Mishnah: It is neither R. Jose nor R. Judah but the 'Others'!¹¹ For it was taught: R. Judah said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not differ concerning the dues which were separated on the eve of the Festival, [both agreeing] that you may take them together with the dues which were separated and killed on the same day [viz., the Festival]!¹² They differ only whether one may take them¹³ by themselves, when Beth Shammai say: You may not take [them], and Beth Hillel maintain: You may take [them]. And this is how Beth Shammai argued: Hallah and Priestly Dues are a gift to the priest and terumah is a gift to the priest; just as you may not take terumah, so may you not take Priestly Dues. Beth Hillel replied to them: No! If you say [thus] of terumah which he has not the right to set apart [on a Festival], would you say [the same] of Priestly Dues which he has the right to set apart! R. Jose said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ about the Priestly Dues, [both agreeing] that you may take [them];¹⁴ they dispute only with respect to terumah when Beth Shammai say: You may not take [it],¹⁵ and Beth Hillel maintain: You may take [it]. And this is how Beth Hillel argued: Hallah and Priestly Dues are a gift to the priest and terumah is a gift to the priest; just as you may take the Priestly Dues [to the priest] so may you take terumah [to him]. Beth Shammai replied to them: No! If you say [thus] of Priestly Dues which he has the right to separate [on a Festival], would you say [the same] of terumah which he has not the right to separate! Others say: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ about terumah, [both agreeing] that you may not take [it]; they dispute only with respect to the Priestly Dues, when Beth Shammai say: You may not take [them] and Beth Hillel maintain: You may take [them]. Now shall it be said that it [the Mishnah] is [the ruling of] 'Others' and not [the ruling of] R. Judah?¹⁶ — Said Raba: Does it then say, 'Which were separated that day and killed that day'? It [only] says, 'WHICH WERE SEPARATED [etc.]' but in reality they were slaughtered the day before. [Accordingly] shall it be said that it [the Mishnah] is according to R. Judah and not according to the 'Others'?¹⁷ — You can even say, [It agrees with] the 'Others', for [they speak of Priestly Dues separated on a Festival] from those [animals] slaughtered the day before. If so they are identical with R. Judah! — They differ in respect of being brought together with other Priestly Dues.¹⁸

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as R. Jose.¹⁹ R. Tobi the son of R. Nehemiah had a jug of wine of terumah. He came to R. Joseph asking him: May I carry it now [on the Festival] to the priest? He answered him: Thus did Rab Judah say in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as R. Jose.

The host²⁰ of Rab, son of R. Hanan had bundles of mustard-stalks [and] he asked him: Is it permissible to crush it on the Festival and eat of it?²¹ He could not answer.²² He went to Raba who replied: You may rub ears of corn together²³ and crumble pods²⁴ on a Festival.²⁵ Abaye raised an objection: He who rubs ears of corn on the eve of the Sabbath may winnow them on the following day [Sabbath] from hand to hand and eat, but [he may] not [winnow them] with a reed-basket nor with a dish. He who rubs ears of corn on the eve of a Festival may winnow them on the following day [the Festival] little by little²⁶ and eat, even with a reed-basket and even with a dish, but not with a tray nor with a winnowing fan nor in a sieve.²⁷ [Now] only 'on the eve of the Festival' [is rubbing of corn stated to be permitted] but not on the Festival [itself]²⁸ — You may even say [that it may be done] on the Festival [itself], but because he states in the first part [of the passage] ‘on the eve of the Sabbath’, he also states in the concluding part ‘on the eve of a Festival’. If so,²⁹ we find that one has the right to separate [on a Festival]³⁰ and we have learnt: NO! IF YOU SAY THAT WITH RESPECT TO TERUMAH WHICH HE HAS NO RIGHT TO SEPARATE etc.! — This is no difficulty:

- (1) V. Ex. XII, 16 and cf. n. 4.
- (2) As in the preparation of food.
- (3) This proves that R. Johanan is also of the opinion that the dispute between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel is whether we say, ‘Since carrying out is permitted etc.
- (4) Dough-offering. V. Num. XV, 17-21. Although hallah may be taken from the dough in order to enable the dough to be eaten, it may not be carried to the priest.
- (5) For the different parts of a slaughtered animal which fall to the share of the priest, v. Deut. XVIII, 3.
- (6) Heave-offering. V. Num. XVIII, 11ff and Glos.
- (7) To the priest on a Festival, since it could have been taken to the priest before the Festival when it was separated.
- (8) That one may not bring to the priest on a Festival.
- (9) On a Festival; cf. infra 36b.
- (10) Since slaughtering is permitted on a Festival. Surely not!
- (11) ‘Others’ usually refers to R. Meir; Hor. 13b.
- (12) He regards the latter as axiomatic, and permits the former because no extra work is involved.
- (13) The Priestly Dues separated before the Festival.
- (14) The same holds good with respect to hallah.
- (15) To the priest on a Festival.
- (16) The Mishnah can certainly not agree with R. Jose; but can it agree with R. Judah?
- (17) For according to the present explanation, even Beth Shammai permit taking to the priest the Priestly Dues of animals slaughtered on the Festival. Put the ‘Others’ represent Beth Shammai as prohibiting the bringing of Priestly Dues from both an animal slaughtered before or on the day of the Festival.
- (18) Which were separated on the Festival itself. In R. Judah's opinion Beth Shammai permit them to be taken in conjunction with similar gifts separated on the day of the Festival.
- (19) Who hold that Beth Hillel permits even terumah to be taken to the priest on a Festival.
- (20) I.e., Innkeeper.
- (21) Is crushing prohibited since it is possible to do this before the Festival?
- (22) Lit., ‘it was not in his hand’.
- (23) To separate the grain from the chaff; v. infra 13b.
- (24) To get the seeds out.
- (25) Since rubbing ears of corn is different from the usual manner of threshing and does not involve culpability on a Sabbath it is altogether permitted in the case of a Festival.
- (26) Lit., ‘upon the hand’, v. fast. s.v. ת.
- (27) Such vessels are used for large quantities and it would appear as if he was preparing for the following day.
- (28) Which contradicts Rab b. R. Hanan.
- (29) That one may rub ears of corn on a Festival.
- (30) Corn is liable for tithing only after it has been threshed, winnowed and piled up in a heap, after which nothing may be eaten until terumah is taken. But before it is subject to tithe a light meal is permitted. By allowing a man on a Festival to rub ears of corn and eat the grain it follows that he must also be permitted to take terumah which he would not have done before, as terumah is generally not separated in the ears of corn until they have been turned into grain.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 13a

One¹ is [according to] Rabbi and the other² is [according to] R. Jose son of R. Judah.³ For it was taught: If he brought in ears of corn⁴ to make dough therefrom, he may eat a slender repast⁵ thereof and it is exempt [from terumah]; [if however he brought in the ears of corn] in order to rub the in together,⁶ Rabbi declares them liable [to terumah]⁷ and R. Jose son of R. Judah exempts them.⁸ But [even] according to R. Jose son of R. Judah, it⁹ may also occur when, for example, one has brought in ears of corn to make dough therefrom¹⁰ and on the Festival changed his mind [deciding] to rub them,¹¹ so that they become tebel¹² on the day [of the Festival]!¹³ — Rather what does terumah [mentioned in the Mishnah] mean? Terumah [as separated] in most cases.¹⁴

Abaye said: The dispute¹⁵ is only with respect to ears of corn,¹⁶ but in the case of grain of pulse all agree that when in bundles they are tebel.¹⁷ Shall it be said that the following supports him? [For we have learnt]: He who had bundles of fenugreek of tebel, must beat out [the seeds] and estimate how much seed there is in them and separate [terumah] on the seed, but he does not separate [terumah] on the stalks.¹⁸ Is not the author of this R. Jose son of R. Judah who says there¹⁹ that it is not tebel, yet here²⁰ it is tebel?²¹ — No, it is in accordance with the opinion of Rabbi.²² If it is in accordance with Rabbi, [then] why state fenugreek; even ears of corn too [are liable to be tithed]? — What then: [it is according to] R. Jose son of R. Judah? Let [the text] inform us of other kinds of pulse²³ and [I would infer] how much more [is it true of] fenugreek? But he [the Tanna] needs [to teach it about] fenugreek; for I might have thought that since the stalks have the same taste as the fruit, he should also give tithe on the stalks,²⁴ so he informs us [that it is not so].

Others state: Abaye said: The dispute is only with respect to ears of corn,²⁵ but as for grain of pulse all agree that when in bundles they are not tebel.²⁶ An objection is raised: He who had bundles of fenugreek of tebel, he must beat out [the seeds] and estimate how much seed there is in them and separate [terumah] on the seed but not on the stalks. Does not tebel connote that it is tebel in respect of terumah?²⁷ — No, [it means] tebel in respect of the terumah of the tithe,²⁸ and it is in accordance with R. Abbahu's dictum in the name of R. Simeon b. Lakish. For R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Simeon b. Lakish: The first tithe [levitical] which one anticipated while the corn was yet in the ears,²⁹ its designation renders it tebel in respect of the terumah of the tithe.³⁰ Why must he [the Levite] beat out [the seeds]? Let him say [to the priest]: Just as they have given them to me so will I give them to you!³¹ — Said Raba: This is a penalty.³² Likewise has it been taught: A Levite to whom his tithes were given while the corn was still in the ear, must³³ make it [fit for] a barn;³⁴ [if it is] grapes, he must make them into wine; if olives, he must turn them into oil; [only] then does he separate the terumah of [the] tithe and give same to the priest. For just as the great terumah is taken

(1) The Baraitha allowing the corn to be rubbed and eaten on the Festival.

(2) Our Mishnah.

(3) Both agree that rubbing ears of corn on a Festival is allowed. They only dispute whether terumah must then be separated. Rabbi maintains that it is required; consequently terumah may in such a case be separated on a Festival. R. Jose, however, holds that it is unnecessary; hence terumah may never be separated on a Festival. (Rashi). Tosaf: This, i.e., the Mishnah, is according to Rabbi, for since Rabbi holds that the bringing in of the ears for eating raw constitutes the final stage for tithing, terumah could and should have been separated before the Festival; and it is a general rule that whatever could be done before the Festival may not be done on the Festival. But the Baraitha is according to R. Jose b. R. Judah: for since he holds that the bringing in of the ears for eating raw does not constitute the final stage for tithing, there was no obligation to tithe them before the Festival; hence if he decides on the Festival to make a full meal of them, he must first separate terumah; since there was no obligation before, it is regarded as something which could not be done earlier, and therefore it is permitted on a Festival.

(4) Not yet ready for tithing.

(5) V. p. 62, n. 13.

(6) And to eat the grain raw little by little.

(7) According to Rabbi, the bringing in of corn into the house for the purpose of eating raw grain corresponds to the finishing touch of the corn brought into the barn and makes it liable for tithing even for a light meal.

(8) He draws a distinction between the two purposes. For the Biblical expression תבול (Num. XVIII, 27) signifies corn which has been threshed and levelled out in a heap, and as this corn was brought in the ears, it has not had the finishing touch making it ready for tithing.

- (9) The taking of terumah on a Festival.
- (10) After the usual threshing and winnowing.
- (11) And eat them raw. On the interpretation of Tosaf. (v. supra p. 63 n. 3) the question should read, 'But even according to Rabbi . . . therefrom' (when no obligation rested upon him to tithe before the Festival), 'and on the Festivals . . . to rub them', when he may not eat of these except after tithing, so that we find terumah being authorized to be set apart on a Festival.
- (12) Grain from which the priestly and Levitical dues have not been taken. V. Glos.
- (13) The fact that he brought in the ears of corn to make dough therefrom after the normal threshing and winnowing made them liable for terumah, and by changing his mind to rub the ears together to eat them raw not only cannot remove the liability for tithing, but, on the contrary, takes the place of the finishing touch in the barn so that not even a light meal may be had without first taking terumah.
- (14) Viz., when the corn is levelled out in heaps in a barn, as above. But the case which is now discussed is exceptional and therefore generally disregarded. The Mishnah can therefore agree both with Rabbi and R. Jose.
- (15) Between Rabbi and R. Jose b. Judah.
- (16) It is then that R. Jose exempts from tithing.
- (17) V. Glos. Because pulse is frequently tied up in bundles to be threshed in small quantities as required, and consequently the bringing in of a bundle of pulse in the house corresponds to the finishing touch of grain in a barn. (Rashi).
- (18) Ter. X, 6.
- (19) In the case of ears of corn.
- (20) In the case of pulse.
- (21) The statement 'bundles of fenugreek of tebel' presupposes a liability for tithing, because the tying up into bundles is the finishing preparation for tithing.
- (22) Who maintains that even ears of corn are also liable for tithing when brought into the house for use.
- (23) Which are not tied up into bundles, like peas or beans.
- (24) For the stalks together with its fruit are used for seasoning. The Baraitha can therefore on this argument be in accordance with Rabbi, so that it affords no support to Abaye.
- (25) It is then that Rabbi says that they are liable to be tithed, because many take bundles of corn into the house to eat them raw or roasted without having been stored and prepared for tithing in a barn.
- (26) Because pulse becomes liable for tithing only after it has been made into a stack.
- (27) Consequently we see that although yet in bundles they are already liable for tithing.
- (28) The proper order of tithing, after the corn has first been levelled out in the barn, is this: First terumah is separated for the priest (called the great terumah) and one-tenth of the remainder (called tithe) for the Levite, who in turn, separates one-tenth of his tithe for the priest which is designated terumah of the tithe. The great terumah, or simply terumah as it is generally referred to, varies from one-fortieth to one-sixtieth. It is also called the 'great terumah' because this portion is greater than that received from the Levite.
- (29) I.e. , the Israelite separated it before separating the great terumah.
- (30) Although had he not separated tithe it would not be regarded as tebel, and a light meal would be permissible. Similarly in the Baraitha, although pulse does not become liable to terumah before it has been made into a stack, once the Levite anticipated and received his share when in bundles, it becomes liable also to terumah of the tithe.
- (31) If it referred to the terumah of an Israelite he would have to beat out the grain because the expression תביל (Num. XVIII, 27) signifies that the priest is to be given tithe only when the corn is threshed; V. Rashi.
- (32) For taking the tithe before the great terumah was rendered, against the prescribed order.
- (33) Before giving his terumah to the priest.
- (34) When it would have received the last preparation for tithing.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 13b

only from the threshing-floor and from the wine-press,¹ so also is the terumah of the tithe to be taken only from the threshing-floor and from the wine-press.

[It is stated above]: 'He estimates!' Surely it requires [exact] measuring!² — The author of this is Abba Eleazar b. Gimal. For it was taught: Abba Eleazar b. Gimal says: 'And your heave-offering shall be reckoned unto you'.³ Scripture speaks of two heave-offerings,⁴ one [being] the great terumah and the other the terumah from the [Levite's] tithe; just as the great terumah may be separated by estimation⁵ and by mental determination⁶ so may the terumah from the [Levite's] tithe be separated by estimation and by mental determination.

The text [above stated]: R. Abbahu said in the name of R. Simeon b. Lakish: The first tithe which one anticipated while the corn was yet in the ears, its designation renders it tebel in respect of the terumah from the [Levite's] tithe. What is the reason? Said Raba: Because it already bears the name tithe.

R. Simeon b. Lakish said: The First Tithe which was anticipated while the corn was yet in the ears is exempt from the great terumah, for Scripture Says: Then ye shall offer up an heave-offering of it for the Lord, a tithe of the tithe;⁷ a tithe of the tithe have I commanded you, but not 'the great terumah and a tithe of the tithe'. Said R. Papa to Abaye: If so, even if he anticipated it⁸ at the barn too? — He replied to him: It is for your sake that Scripture states: Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave-offering of the Lord.⁹ What [reason] do you see?¹⁰ — In the one case,¹¹ it is already corn;¹² in the other, it is not already corn.

We have learnt elsewhere:¹³ He who hulls barley,¹⁴ may hull it grain by grain and eat it,¹⁵ but if he hulls [it] and lays [the grains] in his hand, he is liable [to give tithe].¹⁶ Said R. Eleazar: And it is likewise with respect to the Sabbath.¹⁷ But this is not so! For Rab's wife hulled for him cupfuls, and likewise R. Hiyya's wife hulled cupfuls for him! Rather if this [statement of R. Eleazar] has been said, It was said with respect to the second clause: He who rubs ears of wheat may winnow them from one hand to the other and eat them [without tithing]; but if he winnows them and lays them on his lap he is liable. Said R. Eleazar: And it is likewise with respect to the Sabbath. R. Abba b. Mamel demurred to this: And [in] the first clause, [is he liable] in respect to tithe but not in respect to Sabbath? Is there then any action which with respect to the Sabbath does not rank as the final act,¹⁸ whereas with respect to tithe it is regarded as the final act?¹⁹ To this R. Shesheth the son of R. Idi demurred: Is there not? Surely there is [the case of what constitutes] their threshing-floor in respect of tithing;²⁰ for we have learnt,²¹ When is their harvesting time for tithing?²² In the case of cucumbers and gourds after their coils of blossom have dropped,²³ and if they have not dropped, then as soon as they have been made a heap. And we learnt likewise of onions:²⁴ [They are liable for tithing] as soon as he [their owner] sets up a heap. Yet with respect to the Sabbath the setting up of a heap does not involve culpability? Therefore you must needs say that [with respect to the Sabbath] the Torah forbade work of craftsmanship;²⁵ so also here²⁶ [say] the Torah forbade work of craftsmanship.

How should one rub them?²⁷ — Abaye in the name of R. Joseph says: One [finger] against one [finger].²⁸ But R. 'Awia in the name of R. Joseph says: One [finger] against two [fingers].²⁹ Raba [however] says: So long as he does it in an unusual way it is permitted even between the thumb and all the fingers.

How should one winnow [them on a Sabbath]? — Said R. Adda b. Ahabah in the name of Rab: He should winnow

(1) V. Num. XVIII, 27.

(2) If the text referred to the great terumah, the expression 'estimate' would be correct, since according to Scripture no definite percentage is required, for even a single grain can exempt the whole of the crop, while the giving of one-fortieth — one-sixtieth is only a Rabbinical enactment. But now that we explain that it means the terumah from the Levite's tithe, it definitely says (Num. XVIII, 27) that this must be one-tenth.

- (19) To make him liable for tithing.

XXXI, 4-5 speaks of the work of craftsmanship of the Tabernacle and is immediately followed by the laws respecting the Sabbath, indicating that the work forbidden on the Sabbath is similar to the craftsmanship there referred to. from the joints of the fingers upwards.¹ They laughed at it in the West:² so long as he does it in an unusual manner [it is permitted to be done] even with the whole palm! But said R. Eleazar: He should winnow vigorously with one hand.³ MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: SPICES MAY BE POUNDED WITH A WOODEN PESTLE⁴ AND SALT IN A SMALL CRUSE OR WITH A WOODEN LADLE;⁵ BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: SPICES MAY BE POUNDED AFTER THEIR USUAL FASHION WITH A STONE PESTLE AND SALT WITH A WOODEN PESTLE.⁶

GEMARA. All agree at any rate that [the pounding of] salt must be done in an unusual manner; what is the reason? — R. Huna and R. Hisda [differ]. One says: [Because] all dishes require salt,⁷ but not all dishes require spices; and the other says: [Because] all spices lose their flavour,⁸ but salt does not lose its flavour. Wherein do they differ? — The difference between them is when he knew [on the eve of the Festival] what dish he will cook [on the morrow],⁹ or in the case of saffron.¹⁰

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: Everything which is pounded may be pounded in the usual way, even salt.¹¹ But Surely you have said that salt must be [pounded] in an unusual way! He rules as the following Tanna, for it was taught: R. Meir says: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ over [commodities] which are pounded, [agreeing] that they may be pounded in the usual way, and salt with them;¹² they differ only with respect to pounding it [salt] alone, when Beth Shammai say: Salt [may be pounded] in a small cruse and with a wooden ladle only for roasting¹³ but not for boiling, and Beth Hillel maintain: [It may be pounded] with everything. ‘With everything’! — Can you think so?¹⁴ — Say rather, for everything.¹⁵

R. Aha Bardela said to his son: ‘When you pound [salt], incline [the mortar] sideways and pound. R. Shesheth heard¹⁶ the sound of a mortar and pestle; [then] said he: This is not [coming] from my house. Perhaps it was done sideways?¹⁷ — He heard a shrill noise.¹⁸ Perhaps it was spices?¹⁹ — Spices produce a dull sound.

Our Rabbis taught: One may not prepare pearl-barley²⁰ nor pound anything in a mortar. [You state] two [contradictory rulings]?²¹ — This is what it means to say: ‘What is the reason that you may not prepare pearl-barley? Because you may not pound [anything] in a mortar. Then it should have [only] stated: ‘One may not pound [anything] in a mortar’! — If it stated [only], ‘One may not pound anything in a mortar’, I would say, that is only in a big mortar; but in the case of a small mortar [I would say], It is well; so it informs us [that this is not so]. But it was taught: One may not pound in a big mortar but one may pound in a small mortar! — Said Abaye: ‘When the teaching²² was taught, it too was taught of a large mortar.’²³

(1) But not in his palm.

(2) I.e., the scholars of Palestine. V. Sanh. 17b, Sonc. ed. p. 89.

(3) Not just throw it up a little.

(4) Although the pounding of spices is permitted on a Festival it should be done in a somewhat different way from ordinary days.

(5) The pounding of salt must be done in all entirely unusual way, both with regard to the vessel in which, and also with regard to the vessel with which, it is pounded.

(6) According to Beth Hillel it is sufficient if the vessel with which it is pounded is different.

(7) He should therefore have prepared the salt before the Festival.

(8) Therefore it must be prepared on the day it is required.

(9) According to the first reason, even the pounding of spices must be done in an unusual manner since it could have been prepared on the day it is required.

(10) According to not lose its flavour, so that according to the second reason it is the same as salt.

(11) Or, Even salt! But etc.

(12) I.e., , pounding them both on the same occasion, by preparing the salt in immediately after the spices Rashi as explained by Rashal).

(13) When a small quantity only is required.

(14) Even with a utensil which may not be handled at all on the Sabbath?

(15) I.e., for every purpose, whether for roasting or boiling — and that in the usual way Rab Judah thus has a Tanna in support for his ruling.

(16) On a Festival.

(17) In which case it is permissible.

(18) Whereas if the mortar were inclined there would be a heavy, dull noise.

(19) Which may be pounded in the usual way.

(20) On a Festival, because it requires toilsome pounding.

(21) The first ruling forbids toilsome pounding only, whereas the second for bids all pounding.

(22) Introduced by, Our Rabbis taught’.

(23) The two statements are not contradictory. The first statement forbidding the pounding of pearl-barley refers even to a small mortar, and the second statement refers to a big mortar. Only pearl-barley is forbidden to be pounded in a small mortar but other things may be.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 14b

Raba says: There is no difficulty: this [Baraita¹ refers] to us,² and the other [Baraita³ refers] to them.⁴

R. Papa visited Mar Samuel.⁵ They set before him pearl-barley broth and he did not eat of it. Perhaps they prepared it in a small mortar?⁶ — He noticed that it was very fine.⁷ Perhaps they prepared it the day before [the Festival]? — He saw that it [the pearl-barley] was still bearing the polish from the husking.⁸ Or you can say: It is different in the case of the house of Mar Samuel, on account of the laxity of the servants.⁹

MISHNAH. IF ONE SELECTS PULSE ON A FESTIVAL, BETH SHAMMAI SAY: HE MUST SELECT THE EDIBLE PARTS AND EAT [THEM FORTHWITH]; BUT BETH HILLEL SAY: HE MAY PICK OUT AS USUAL¹⁰ [FROM A SMALL QUANTITY] IN HIS LAP OR IN A BASKET OR IN A DISH; BUT NOT ON TO A BOARD OR IN A SIFTER OR IN A SIEVE.¹¹ RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS: HE MAY EVEN RINSE THEM [IN WATER] AND SKIM OFF [THE REFUSE].

GEMARA. It was taught: Rabban Gamaliel said: This was [only] stated when the edible part is more than the refuse;¹² but if the refuse is more than the edible part, all agree that he must pick out the edible part and leave the refuse. If the refuse is more than the edible part, is there anyone who permits it [to be picked]?¹³ — This refers to a case where the work [of picking out the refuse] is great though the quantity [of the refuse] is small.¹⁴

RABBAN GAMALIEL SAYS: HE MAY EVEN RINSE THEM AND SKIM OFF [THE REFUSE]: It was taught: R. Eleazar son of R. Zadok said: This was the practice in the house of Rabban Gamaliel; they brought a bucket-full of lentils and poured water over them with the result that that which was edible remained below and the refuse [floated] on top. But has not the opposite been taught?¹⁵ — There is no contradiction: The one applies to sand, the other applies to chaff.¹⁶

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY SEND [GIFTS TO A NEIGHBOUR] ON A FESTIVAL ONLY PORTIONS [READY FOR EATING],¹⁷ BUT BETH HILLEL SAY: ONE MAY SEND CATTLE, GAME AND POULTRY WHETHER ALIVE OR SLAUGHTERED. ONE MAY [ALSO] SEND WINE, OIL, FLOUR OR PULSE BUT NOT GRAIN.¹⁸ BUT R. SIMEON PERMITS [ALSO] GRAIN.¹⁹

GEMARA. R. Jehiel taught: Provided that he does not send it [the present] by a company [of men].²⁰ A Tanna taught: A company consists of not less than three persons. R. Ashi put the question: What [is the law] with respect to three persons with three varieties [of gifts]?²¹ This question is undecided.

R. SIMEON PERMITS [ALSO] GRAIN. It was taught: R. Simeon allows grain: e.g., wheat, to prepare thereof food for gladiators;²² barley, to give to his cattle; [and] lentils to prepare thereof groats.²³

MISHNAH. ONE MAY SEND CLOTHES, WHETHER SEWN UP OR NOT YET SEWN UP EVEN THOUGH THERE IS KIL'AYIM²⁴ IN THEM, PROVIDED THEY ARE NECESSARY²⁵ FOR THE FESTIVAL; BUT [ONE MAY] NOT [SEND] HOB-NAILED SANDALS²⁶ NOR UNSTITCHED SHOES. R. JUDAH SAYS: NOT EVEN WHITE SHOES BECAUSE THEY [STILL] REQUIRE AN ARTISAN [TO BLACKEN THEM]. THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHATEVER MAY BE USED ON A FESTIVAL MAY [ALSO] BE SENT [ON A FESTIVAL].

GEMARA. As for sewn [articles] it is well: they are fit for garments; [likewise] unsewn [articles] too, [as] they are fit for a covering. But for what are kil'ayim fit? And if you say they can be used to fold under him,²⁷ surely it was taught: Neither shall there come upon thee [a garment of two kinds of stuff mingled together],²⁸ but you may spread it beneath you. But the Sages said: It is forbidden to do so lest a thread might cling to his body! And if you say [that it is permissible] if there is anything interposing between them,²⁹ surely R. Simeon b. Pazzi said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi, who said in the name of R. Jose b. Saul, who said in the name of Rabbi in the name of the Holy Community at Jerusalem:³⁰ Even if ten mattresses lie one on top of the other and [some material of] kil'ayim is beneath them, it is forbidden to sleep thereon! And if [you say] it refers to a curtain, surely 'Ulla said: Why did [the Sages] say a curtain is unclean³¹ because the attendant warms himself beside it!³²

 - (12) It is then that Beth Hillel permit to pick out the refuse.
 - (13) Since the lesser part is lost in the greater it is forbidden even to be handled on the Festival.
 - (14) By the expression 'if the refuse is more' is to be understood not that the refuse is greater in quantity but rather that the trouble of picking out the refuse was greater.

— Rather, [this refers] to hard material;¹ just as R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said: The coarse felt-mattresses [coming] from Naresh² are permitted [to sit on].³ R. Papa said: Slippers⁴ are not [forbidden] on account of kil'ayim. Raba said: These money-bags do not come under [the law of] kil'ayim,⁵ but seed-bags do come under [the law of] kil'ayim.⁶ R. Ashi said: Neither money-purses nor seed-bags are subject to [the law of] kil'ayim, because it is not the usual practice to warm oneself with these.

BUT NOT HOB-NAILED SANDALS: What is the reason that hob-nailed sandals may not [be sent]? Because of the incident that occurred.⁷ Abaye said: Hob-nailed sandals may not be worn [during a Festival] but they may be handled. 'They may not be worn on account of the incident that happened; 'but they may be handled', since it teaches ONE MAY NOT SEND; for if you maintain that it is forbidden to handle, now if it is forbidden to handle, need sending [be taught]?⁸

NOR UNSTITCHED SHOES. This is obvious! — It is necessary even when it is fastened with wooden pins.⁹

R. JUDAH SAYS: NOT EVEN WHITE SHOES. It was taught: R. Judah permits black [sandals] and forbids white because they [still] require a clod containing silicate of iron.¹⁰ R. Jose forbids black [sandals] because they [still] require to be smoothed. And they do not differ, the one Master [ruling] according to his district and the other Master according to his district. In the district of the one Master [the sandal was finished] with the flesh [side of the leather] inside, [and] in the district of the other Master [they finished the sandals] with the flesh [side] outwards.¹¹

THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHATEVER MAY BE USED ON A FESTIVAL R. Shesheth permitted scholars to send tefillin¹² on a Festival. Abaye said to him: But we have learnt: WHATEVER MAY BE USED ON A FESTIVAL MAY HE SENT:¹³ — This is what he means to say: 'Whatever one uses on a weekday¹⁴ may be sent on a Festival.

Abaye said: Since we are now dealing with tefillin, we would say something thereon. If one was on his way [home],¹⁵ wearing tefillin on his head,¹⁶ and the sun was setting upon him, he should place his hand upon them¹⁷ until he reaches his house. If he was sitting in the Academy¹⁸ with tefillin on his head and the holiness of the day [the Sabbath] came in, [then] he must place his hand upon them, until he reaches his house.¹⁹ R. Huna the son of R. Ika raised an objection: If one was on his way [home] with tefillin on his head and the holiness of the day [the Sabbath] came in, [then] he must place his hand upon them until he reaches a house situated near the wall [of the city].²⁰ If he was sitting in the Academy [with tefillin on his head] and the holiness of the day came in, he must place his hand upon them until he reaches the house nearest to the Academy.²¹ There is no contradiction. The one treats of a case when it [the house] is guarded,²² the other when it is not guarded. If it is not guarded, [then] why particularly 'on his head'; even if they [the tefillin] were [found] lying on the ground he should also [be allowed to carry them to this house]: For we have learnt: He who finds tefillin [on a Sabbath] may bring them in in pairs!²³ — This is no difficulty: The one²⁴ treats of a case when it is guarded against thieves and against dogs, the other²⁵ when it is guarded against dogs but it is not guarded against thieves.²⁶ You might think that the majority of robbers [in that district] are Israelites²⁷ who would not handle them disrespectfully; hence he informs us [that it is not so]. [

(3) Although they are manufactured from kil'ayim.

(4) Home-shoes or a kind of socks.

(5) Because the purses become hard through the coins they contain and therefore do not warm.

(6) And therefore may not be placed on one's lap.

- (7) The event is recorded in Shab. 60a. This particular sandal could be worn with the heel in front, giving the appearance that the one who had entered had gone out. When men hiding in a cave from the Romans saw what appeared as Signs of someone having left they became panic-stricken lest the Romans should by this means find them in their hiding-place, and in their attempt to escape more were killed through the panic than might have been killed by the Romans.

- (15) On the eve of the Sabbath.
- (16) In Talmudic times tefillin were worn all day and in the street not merely at the morning service as now.
- (17) The Sages allowed him to carry the tefillin into the city after the manner of a garment and not to leave them unguarded, out of respect for the tefillin.
- (18) Which was in the field, and therefore an unguarded place.
- (19) The tefillin could not be left in the Academy for fear of being lost.
- (20) And leave the tefillin there, but he may not carry them into the city.
- (21) But he may not carry them to his own house.
- (22) And therefore the tefillin must be left in the house nearest the city wall or the Academy.

- (27) Cf. A.Z. 70b; Tosaf. B.B. 55b, s.v. רבי אליעזר. This refers to large Jewish settlements. The Rabbis were broad-minded enough to realize that in a town containing an overwhelming Jewish population the majority of thieves would be Jewish.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 15b

CHAPTER II

MISHNAH. [IF] A FESTIVAL FELL ON THE EVE OF SABBATH, ONE MAY NOT AT THE OUTSET COOK ON THE FESTIVAL FOR THE SABBATH, BUT HE MAY COOK FOR THE FESTIVAL, AND IF ANY IS LEFT OVER IT REMAINS FOR THE SABBATH; AND HE MAY PREPARE A DISH ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL¹ AND RELY UPON IT [TO PREPARE FOOD] FOR THE SABBATH.² BETH SHAMMAI SAY: TWO DISHES [ARE REQUIRED FOR THIS PURPOSE], WHILE BETH HILLEL SAY: ONE DISH. YET THEY [BOTH] AGREE THAT A FISH AND AN EGG UPON IT ARE [CONSIDERED AS] TWO DISHES. [IF] HE ATE IT³ OR IT WAS LOST, HE MAY NOT IN THE FIRST PLACE COOK [IN RELIANCE] ON IT, BUT IF HE LEFT OVER ANY [SMALL] PORTION OF IT, HE MAY RELY ON IT [TO COOK] FOR THE SABBATH.

GEMARA. Whence do we know this?⁴ — Said Samuel: Because the Scripture Says: Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy,⁵ remember it in view of another⁶ Festival which comes to make it forgotten.⁷ What is the reason [for the institution of the 'erub]?⁸ — Said Raba: In order that he may choose a fine portion for the Sabbath and a fine portion for the Festival.⁹ R. Ashi said: In order that people might say, 'You may not bake on a Festival for the Sabbath, how much the more [is it forbidden] on a Festival for a weekday'.¹⁰

We have learnt: HE MAY PREPARE A DISH ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL AND RELY

UPON IT [TO PREPARE FOOD] FOR THE SABBATH. It is well according to R. Ashi who says, 'In order that people might say you may not bake on a Festival for the Sabbath [etc.]:' hence it is only ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL but not on the Festival. But according to Raba, why particularly on the eve of the Festival; even on the Festival [itself] too [let it be permitted]?¹¹ — It is even so, but it is a preventive decree lest he be negligent.¹² Now a Tanna deduces it from the following: Bake that which ye will bake, and seethe that which ye will seethe;¹³ from this R. Eliezer concluded [that] you may bake only [in dependence] upon what is [already] baked and you may cook only [in dependence] upon what is [already] cooked.¹⁴ Herein the Sages found a Biblical support for 'erub tabshilin.¹⁵

Our Rabbis taught: It happened that R. Eliezer was once sitting and lecturing the whole day [of the Festival] on Festival laws. [When] the first group left [the lecture hall] he said: These are people of butts;¹⁶ [when] the second group [left] he said: These are people of casks; [when] the third group [left] he said: These are people of pitchers;¹⁷ [when] the fourth group [left] he said: These are people of flasks; [when] the fifth group [left] he said: These are people of beakers.¹⁸ [When] the sixth group began to go out he said: These are the people of the curse.¹⁹ He cast his eyes at his disciples²⁰ and their faces began to change,²¹ [whereupon] he said to them: My sons, not of you said I this, but of those who have gone out, who put aside life eternal and occupy themselves with the life temporal [or ephemeral]. When they were taking their leave²² he said to them: Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto him for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye grieved; for the joy of the Lord is your [strength] stronghold.²³ The Master said: 'Who put aside life eternal and occupy themselves with the life temporal'. But the enjoyment of the Festival is a religious duty! — R. Eliezer is consistent with his [own] view, for he said: Rejoicing on the Festival is optional. For it was taught: R. Eliezer says: On a Festival a man has nought [to do] save either eat and drink or sit and learn. R. Joshua says: Divide it, half of it for the Lord, [and] half of it for yourselves. R. Johanan said: Both drew their inference from the same Scripture verse[s]. One verse states: A solemn assembly to the Lord thy God,²⁴ and another verse reads: Ye shall have a solemn assembly.²⁵ How is this [to be reconciled]? R. Eliezer is of the opinion: Either the whole of it is for the Lord or the whole of it is for yourselves; while R. Joshua is of the opinion: Divide it; half of it is for the Lord and half of it is for yourselves. What means 'for whom nothing is prepared'? — R. Hisda said: For him who did not set [i.e., prepare] an 'erub tabshilin. Others say: He who had not the opportunity to set an 'erub tabshilin; but he who had the opportunity to set an 'erub tabshilin and did not set is a transgressor. What means 'for the joy of the Lord is your strength'? — R. Johanan said in the name of R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon: The Holy One, blessed be He, said unto Israel: My children, borrow on My account and celebrate the holiness of the day, and trust in Me and I will pay. R. Johanan [further] said in the name of R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon: He who desires his property to be preserved for him, should plant therein an adar,²⁶ for it says: The Lord on high is mighty;²⁷ alternatively, adara,²⁸ [implies] what its name [indicates]; for people say: Why [is it called] adara? Because it lasts from generation to generation.²⁹ It was similarly taught: A field in which there is an adar can neither be robbed nor forcibly purchased and its fruits are protected.³⁰

R. Tahlifa, the brother of Rabinai of [Be] Hozae³¹ learnt:

(1) V. supra p. 23, n. 1.

(2) The dish prepared on the eve of the Festival is regarded as the basis upon which the right to cook on the Festival for the Sabbath depends.

(3) The dish intended for the 'erub.

(4) That he may cook for the Sabbath in virtue of a special dish ('erub).

(5) Ex. XX, 8.

(6) Lit., 'from another'.

(7) The interest in the Festival preceding the Sabbath might cause one to forget about the Sabbath. The 'erub counteracts this possibility. [Aliter: 'Remember it since one might forget it' (v. Rashi) — a rendering supported by MS.M. which reads לֶאֱחֹר for מֵאֲחֹר cf. cur. edd.]

- (8) Actually it is not based upon any Biblical verse, but is only a Rabbinical enactment, the verse being a mere support.
- (9) He will not consume all the good things on the Festival, but will leave some for the Sabbath.
- (10) The 'erub is instituted not in honour of Sabbath but in honour of the Festival.
- (11) For on the Festival itself he can still choose a fine portion for the Sabbath.
- (12) And omit to prepare it altogether.
- (13) Ex. XVI, 23.
- (14) On the Friday which is a Festival, you may bake and cook only in virtue of the baking and cooking of the previous day.
- (15) This phrase indicates that the present deduction too is merely in support, not the actual source of the law, which is Rabbinical only.
- (16) I.e., very rich, counting their wine by butts. They have left thus early because of the large quantities of food and drink waiting for them. These are gluttons.
- (17) I.e., less rich than the second but wealthier than the next group.
- (18) Less keen on their pleasures.
- (19) The emptiness of the Lecture Hall roused his ire.
- (20) Who had remained behind.
- (21) I.e., to turn pale, because they thought he was angry with them for not leaving earlier — apparently they thought that he considered himself bound to go on as long as he had hearers.
- (22) At the close of the lecture.
- (23) Neh. VIII, 10.
- (24) Deut. XVI, 8.
- (25) Num. XXIX, 35. The first verse implies that it may be devoted to God's service, whereas the second intimates that it is meant for man.
- (26) A kind of cedar, high and majestic. Such a tree is known, and in case of his having to go abroad, he will be remembered as possessor, for his name will be coupled with the adar tree.
- (27) Ps. XCIII, 4. The word אֲדִיר is linked with the אֲדָר tree. The planting of the adar tree will strengthen his claim to the property.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 16a

The entire sustenance of man [for the year] is fixed for him from New Year's [Festival] to the Day of Atonement,¹ except the expenditure for Sabbaths and the expenditure for Festivals and the expenditure for the instruction of his children in the Law; if he [spent] less [for any of these] he is given less and if he [spent] more he is given more. Said R. Abbahu:² What verse of Scripture [supports this]? 'Blow the horn at the new moon at the full moon for our feast-day'.³ Which is the Festival on which the moon is concealed? Say, it is New Year;⁴ and it is written [with respect to this Festival]: 'For it is a statute [hok] for Israel, an ordinance of the God of Jacob'.⁵ How is it implied that [the word] hok connotes sustenance? For it is written: 'And did eat their portion [hukkam] which Pharaoh gave them'.⁶ Mar Zutra says, [It is inferred] from here: 'Feed me with mine allotted [hukki]⁷ bread'. It was taught: They related concerning Shammai, the Elder [that] all his life he ate in honour of the Sabbath. [Thus] if he found a well-favoured animal he said, Let this be for the Sabbath. [If afterwards] he found one better favoured he put aside the second [for the Sabbath] and ate the first.⁸ But Hillel the Elder had a different trait, for all his works were for the sake of heaven,⁹ for it is said: Blessed be the Lord, day by day.¹⁰ It was likewise taught: Beth Shammai say: From the first day of the week [prepare] for the Sabbath;¹¹ but Beth Hillel say: Blessed be the Lord, day by day.¹⁰

R. Hama b. Hanina said: He who makes a gift to his neighbour need not inform him, for it says, 'And Moses knew not that the skin of his face sent forth beams'.¹² An objection was raised: 'That ye may know I am the Lord who sanctify you',¹³ The Holy One, blessed be He, said unto Moses: Moses, I have a precious gift in my treasury and its name is Sabbath and I wish to give it to Israel; go and tell them. Hence R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: He who gives a child [a piece of] bread must inform its mother! — There is no difficulty. The one treats of a gift which will naturally become known, and the other treats of a gift which does not naturally become known. But the Sabbath too is a gift which would have naturally become known! — Its reward¹⁴ would not naturally be known.¹⁵ The Master said: 'Hence R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: He who gives a child [a piece of] bread must inform its mother'. What should he do to it [the child]?¹⁶ — He smears it with oil or puts rouge on it. But now that we are afraid of witchcraft, what [is to be done]?¹⁷ — R. Papa said: He must smear it [the child] with some of that very substance [he put on the bread].¹⁸ R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Every commandment which the Holy One, blessed be He, gave unto Israel, He gave to them publicly, except the Sabbath which He bestowed upon them in secret, for it is said: 'It is a sign between Me and the children, of Israel for ever'.¹⁹ If so, idolators should not be punished on its account!²⁰ — The Sabbath He indeed made known to them [the idolator] but its reward He did not make known to them. Or you can say: Its reward too He made known to them [but] the enlarged soul,²¹ He did not make known to them; for R. Simeon b. Lakish said: On the eve of the Sabbath the Holy One, blessed be He, gives to man an enlarged soul and at the close of the Sabbath He withdraws it from him, for it says: He ceased from work and rested:²² once it [the Sabbath] has ceased²³ woe that the [additional] soul is lost!²⁴

A MAN MAY PREPARE A DISH ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL. Abaye said: They taught this only of a dish²⁵ but not of bread.²⁶ Why is bread different that it is not [fit for an 'erub]? If I were to say something used as a relish is required then what of pearl-barley which is also not a relish — for R. Zera said: These Babylonians are fools for they eat bread with bread²⁷ — and [yet] R. Nahumi b. Zecharaiah said in the name of Abaye: One may set an 'erub of pearl-barley broth! — Rather, we require [for an 'erub dish] something which is not common, and bread is common, whereas pearl-barley broth is not common.²⁸ Others teach: Abaye said: They taught this only of a dish but not of bread. What is the reason? If I were to say something which is not common is required whereas bread is common, then what of pearl-barley broth, which is also not common and [yet] R. Nahumi b. Zecharaiah said in the name of Abaye: One may not set an 'erub with pearl-barley broth! — Rather, something used as a relish is required and bread is not used as a relish and pearl-barley broth too is not used as a relish for R. Zera said: These Babylonians are fools for they eat bread with bread.

R. Hiyya taught: The lentils at the bottom of the pot²⁹ can be relied upon as an 'erub tabshilin, providing that they amount to as much as an olive. R. Isaac son of Rab Judah said: One may scrape off the fat which is upon the knife and rely upon it as an 'erub tabshilin, providing that it amounts to as much as an olive.

R. Assi said in the name of Rab: Small salted fish are not subject to [the interdict against] the cooking of a heathen.³⁰ R. Joseph said: And if a heathen grilled them one may rely upon them as [or for] an 'erub tabshilin,³¹ but if a heathen made them into a pie of fish-hash it is prohibited.³² This is obvious!  (20) V. A.Z. 2b, where it is implied that the idolator will be punished for rejecting the Torah when it was offered to him. But in respect of the Sabbath, at least, there should be no punishment, seeing that it was offered even to Israel in secret only.
 (21) Lit., 'additional soul', by this term the Talmud indicates the spiritual ennoblement conferred by the Sabbath.
 (22) Ex. XXXI, 17.
 (23) The verb שבת 'he ceased from work' is translated: He ceased keeping the Sabbath (because of its expiration). Malter, Ta'anit, 27a.
 (24) This is a play on the word וינפש which is taken to stand for וי אבדה נפש (Goldschmidt suggests the reading וי אבדה נפש 'the soul is no longer (here)', which is nearer the Hebrew word וינפש .)
 (25) A cooked meal.
 (26) Bread cannot be an 'erub.
 (27) Concerning the Babylonians who eat pearl-barley broth with bread, v. Ned. 49b.
 (28) Bread is eaten at every meal, whereas pearl-barley is not.
 (29) Left over unintentionally on the eve of the festival.
 (30) The Rabbis forbade food cooked by heathens, to prevent over-familiarity leading to intermarriage. But things which can be eaten raw do not come under this prohibition even if they are cooked, been use the cooking of such things could hardly be considered a favour. These salted small fish can be eaten raw.
 (31) Since they can be eaten raw.
 (32) Because the dough could not be eaten unbaked (i.e. uncooked).

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 16b

[that] the fish-hash is the principal element;¹ hence he informs us that the flour is the principal element.

R. Abba said: An 'erub tabshilin² must be the size of all olive.³ The Scholars asked: [Does that mean] one olive for all [the participants together] or an olive for each one separately? — Come and hear: For R. Abba said in the name of Rab: An 'erub tabshilin requires to be the size of an olive whether for one or for one hundred.

We have learnt: [IF] HE ATE IT OR IT WAS LOST, HE MAY NOT IN THE FIRST PLACE COOK [IN RELIANCE] ON IT, BUT IF HE LEFT OVER ANY [SMALL] PORTION OF IT, HE MAY RELY ON IT [TO COOK] FOR THE SABBATH. What does 'ANY' [SMALL] PORTION mean? Does it not mean although it is not as much as an olive?⁴ — No, when it is as much as an olive.

Come and hear: This dish⁵ [can be] grilled or pickled or stewed⁶ or boiled; and the Spanish colias⁷ [can be used] when he had poured hot water over it⁸ on the eve of the Festival; [for] its commencement and its end⁹ there is no standard [in quantity]. Does it not [surely] mean there is no standard [fixed] at all? No, there is no upper [i.e., maximum] standard,¹⁰ but there is a downwards [i.e., minimum] standard.¹¹

R. Huna said in the name of Rab: The 'erub tabshilin requires cognizance.¹² It is certain that the cognizance of him who deposits [the dish] is required but do we require the cognizance of him for whom it is deposited, or do we not require [it]? — Come and hear: For the father of Samuel used to set the 'erub for the whole of Nehardea; R. Ammi and R. Assi used to set the 'erub for the whole of Tiberias.¹³ R. Jacob b. Idi proclaimed: He who has not set an 'erub tabshilin, let him come and rely upon mine. And how far?¹⁴ — R. Nahumi b. Zecharaiah said in the name of Abaye: As far as the Sabbath limit.¹⁵

There was a certain blind man who used to recite Baraitas in the presence of Mar Samuel. When he noticed that he was gloomy he asked him: Why are you gloomy? Because I have not set an 'erub tabshilin,¹⁶ replied he. Then rely upon mine, he rejoined. The following year he [again] noticed that he was gloomy. Said he to him: Why are you gloomy? He answered him: Because I have not set all 'erub tabshilin. [Then] said he to him: You are a transgressor: to everybody else it is permitted,¹⁷ but to you it is forbidden.¹⁸

Our Rabbis taught: If a Festival falls on the eve of Sabbath one may neither set [on the Festival] a boundary 'erub¹⁹ nor an 'erub of courts.²⁰ Rabbi Says: One may set a court 'erub but not a boundary 'erub, for you can forbid him²¹ what is forbidden to him [on a Festival]²² but you cannot forbid him what is allowed to him [on a Festival].²³ It was stated: Rab says: The halachah is as the first Tanna, and Samuel says: The halachah is as Rabbi.

The Scholars asked: Is the halachah as Rabbi [meant] leniently or stringently? — Of course he [Samuel] meant it leniently!²⁴ — [The question was raised] because R. Eleazar sent word to the Diaspora [to wit]; Not as you teach in Babylon that Rabbi permits and the Sages forbid, but [rather] Rabbi forbids and the Sages permit. How is it now?²⁵ — Come and hear: For R. Tahlifa b. Abdimi decided a case according to Samuel, and Rab remarked [thereon:] The first decision of this young scholar is harmful.²⁶ [Now] if you say that he [Samuel] meant [his teaching] to be lenient it is well, hence this is harmful. But if you say [he meant] stringently, what harmful [teaching] is there! — Since many come to error²⁷ this is harm.¹ Raba said in R. Hisda's name who said in the name of R. Huna: The halachah is as Rabbi, viz., that it is forbidden.²

Our Rabbis taught: If a Festival fell on a Sabbath, Beth Shammai Say: He must pray eight [benedictions]³ and recite [the benediction] of the Sabbath separately and of the Festival separately; but Beth Hillel say: He must pray seven [benedictions]⁴ beginning with the Sabbath [formula] and ending with the Sabbath [formula],⁵ and he makes mention of the holiness of the day in the middle.⁶ Rabbi says: He should also conclude it [the benediction] 'Who sanctifieth the Sabbath, Israel and the Seasons.' A tanna recited in the presence of Rabina: 'Who sanctifieth Israel and the Sabbath⁷ and the Seasons.' He said to him: Does then Israel sanctify the Sabbath?⁸ The Sabbath has already been sanctified [from the creation] and so continues! Say rather: 'Who sanctifieth the Sabbath, Israel and the Seasons.' R. Joseph said: The halachah is as Rabbi and as Rabina explained it.

Our Rabbis taught: If a Sabbath falls on a New Moon or on the intermediate days of a Festival,⁹ at the evening, morning and afternoon services he prays seven [benedictions]¹⁰ and makes mention of the nature of the day¹¹ in the 'Abodah,¹² and if he did not recite [it], he is made to turn back;¹³ R. Eliezer says: [He alludes to the day] in the Thanksgiving [benediction],¹⁴ while in the Additional Services¹⁵ he begins with the Sabbath [formula] and closes with the Sabbath [formula], and makes mention of the holiness of the day in the middle.¹⁶ R. Simeon b. Gamaliel and R. Ishmael son of R. Johanan b. Beroka say: Whenever one is obliged to say seven benedictions¹⁷ he begins with the Sabbath [formula] and closes with the Sabbath [formula] and mentions the holiness of the day in the middle. Said R. Huna: The halachah is not as that pair [of scholars].¹⁸

R. Hiyya b. Ashi in Rab's name said: A man may prepare a boundary 'erub on the first day of a Festival¹⁹ for the second and stipulate.²⁰ Raba said: A man may prepare an 'erub tabshilin on the first day of a Festival for the second and stipulate.²¹ He who states a boundary 'erub, all the more an 'erub tabshilin' while he who states an 'erub tabshilin, but not a boundary 'erub. What is the reason? Because one may not acquire a [Sabbath] residence on a 'Sabbath'.²²

Our Rabbis taught: One may not bake on the first day of a Festival for the second. In truth they said:²³ A woman may fill the whole pot with meat although she only needs one portion; a baker may fill a barrel with water although he only needs one handful,²⁴ but as for baking he may bake only what he needs. R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: A housewife may fill the entire oven with loaves, because bread is baked better in a full oven. Said Raba: The halachah is as R. Simeon b. Eleazar.

The scholars asked: He who did not set an 'erub tabshilin is he forbidden [to bake for the Sabbath] and [likewise] his flour is forbidden,²⁵ or perhaps only he is forbidden, but his flour is not forbidden? What is the practical difference? — Whether he must give up his flour to others.²⁶ If you say that [both] he is forbidden and [likewise] his flour is forbidden, then he must give his flour to others,²⁷ but if you say, he is forbidden but his flour is not forbidden, [then] he need not give up his flour to others. What [is the law]? — Come and hear: He who has not set an 'erub tabshilin may neither bake nor cook nor store [food] away²⁸ neither for himself nor for others; nor may others bake or cook for him. What should he do? He gives up his flour to others [and these] bake and cook for him — Conclude therefrom that he is forbidden and [likewise] his flour is forbidden. It is thus concluded.

The scholars asked: What if he transgressed and baked?²⁹ Come and hear: He who has not set an 'erub tabshilin what is he to do? He gives up his flour to others and [these] others bake and cook for him.

(1) Had he permitted the 'erub to be set on the Festival they could have carried without transgressing the law.

- (17) Even in the first-named prayers.
- (18) But as the first Tanna in so far as the nature of day at the evening, morning and afternoon services is to be mentioned in the 'Abodah. His ruling, however, that the close at the Additional Service is only with the Sabbath formula, is not adopted as halachah, for in that respect the halachah is as Rabbi that the conclusion is, 'Who sanctifieth the Sabbath, Israel and the seasons (or the New Moon)' — Rashi.]

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 17b

Now if there is [this possibility],¹ let him state: If he transgressed and baked it is permissible! — Said R. Adda b. Matena: [The Tanna] teaches a legal remedy; an illegal remedy he does not teach.

Come and hear: He who has set an 'erub tabshilin may bake and cook and store, and if he wishes to eat his 'erub he is at liberty to do so. If he ate it [the 'erub] before he had baked [or] before he had stored, then he may not bake nor cook nor store away neither for himself nor for others, nor may others bake or cook for him; but he may cook for the Festival and if he leaves [any thing] he has left it for the Sabbath, provided that he does not [intentionally] resort to an artifice;² and if he has resorted to all artifice it is forbidden!³ — Said R. Ashi: You speak of all artifice? An artifice is different, for the Rabbis have treated it more rigorously than an intentional transgression.⁴

R. Nahman b. Isaac says: This⁵ represents the opinion of Hananiah and according to Beth Shammai. For it was taught:⁶ Hananiah says that Beth Shammai maintain: One may bake only if he set an 'erub of bread, and one may cook only if he set an 'erub of cooked food, and one may store only if he had already warm water stored on the eve of the Festival; but Beth Hillel affirm: One may set an 'erub with one dish and prepare all his requirement [in reliance] thereon.⁷

Come and hear: He who tithed his fruits on the Sabbath,⁸ if [he acted] in error he may eat [of them], if deliberately, he may not eat [of them].⁹ This treats of a case where he has other fruits.¹⁰

Come and hear: If one purified his [unclean] vessels on the Sabbath,¹¹ if in error he may use them, if deliberately he may not use them!¹² — This treats of a case where he has other vessels, or [the reason may be because] it is possible to borrow [vessels from others].

Come and hear: He who has cooked on the Sabbath, if in error he may eat [of it], if deliberately, he may not eat [of it]!¹³ — The prohibition with respect to Sabbath is different.¹⁴

BETH SHAMMAI SAY TWO DISHES. Our Mishnah is not in accordance with the following Tanna; for it was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel agree that two dishes are necessary;¹⁵ they differ only about a fish and the egg thereon,¹⁶ when Beth Shammai say: Two [separate] dishes [are necessary] and Beth Hillel maintain: [This] one dish [is sufficient]. But they agree that if one crumbles a [hardboiled] egg and puts it inside the fish or if he shreds a head of leek¹⁷ and puts it inside the fish, they [count as] two dishes. Rab said: The halachah is according to our Tanna¹⁸ [in his representation] of the view of Beth Hillel.¹⁹

IF HE ATE IT OR IF IT WERE LOST, HE MAY NOT . . . Abaye said: We have a tradition; if his 'erub was eaten up after he had begun to prepare the dough he may finish it.²⁰

MISHNAH. IF IT [THE FESTIVAL] FELL ON THE DAY AFTER THE SABBATH, BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MUST IMMERSE EVERYTHING [UNCLEAN] BEFORE THE SABBATH;²¹ BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN; VESSELS [MUST BE IMMERSED] BEFORE THE SABBATH BUT MEN ON THE SABBATH. THEY AGREE [HOW EVER] THAT ONE MAY EFFECT SURFACE CONTACT FOR [UNCLEAN] WATER IN A STONE VESSEL,²² BUT ONE MAY NOT IMMERSE [IT];²³ AND ONE MAY IMMERSE²⁴ [TO CHANGE] FROM ONE INTENTION TO ANOTHER²⁵ OR FROM ONE COMPANY TO ANOTHER.²⁶

GEMARA. All incidentally agree that a vessel may not [be immersed] on a Sabbath: What is the reason? — Said Rabba: It is a preventative measure

(1) Of being able to eat, viz., by transgressing.

(2) Evasion of the law by purposely cooking much more than he requires.

(3) And presumably the same is true if he transgressed and cooked!

(4) Deliberate transgression is recognized as such and will not entice others whereas all evasion may be regarded as wholly permitted and set an evil example for others too.

(5) The teaching if he has resorted to an artifice it is forbidden. R. Nahman does not admit the possibility that an artifice may be treated more stringently than deliberate transgression, for the latter is certainly a graver fault intrinsically.

(6) Supra 22b.

(7) Consequently we see that Hananiah is very stringent with reference to an 'erub tabshilin, and therefore the same applies to an artifice, but our problem is based on Beth Hillel's more lenient ruling.

(8) This is forbidden by the Rabbis. V. infra 36b.

(9) Ter. II, 3. Hence we may infer that if he deliberately baked without an 'erub, he may not eat of it.

(10) To eat on the Sabbath, so that there is no hindering of the enjoyment of the Sabbath. The problem here is when he has no other provision.

(11) In order to cleanse them, which is forbidden by the Rabbis since it is equivalent to repairing a utensil. V. infra 18a.

(12) Ibid.

(13) V. infra 18a.

(14) Cooking on the Sabbath is Biblically forbidden, the penalty for which may be stoning. Therefore the Rabbis have been rigorous in the treatment of such intentional breach. But with respect to cooking on a Festival without an 'erub, where the prohibition is mere Rabbinical, it is possible that the Rabbis are more lenient and would allow him to eat on the Sabbath.

(15) As an 'erub.

(16) I.e., the egg in which the fish is smeared before cooking.

(17) קפלוטות GR.  == a head of leek. V. Krauss T.A. II, pp. 560-561.

(18) I.e.,

(19) In Mishnah. (7) Viz., that an 'erub may consist of one dish only.

(20) Even to baking it.

(21) But not on the Sabbath, because it is equivalent to repairing or reconditioning the vessel, and the same applies to man.

(22) Which cannot be defiled. The stone vessel containing the unclean water is placed in a mikweh (ritual bath) and immersed until the two waters make contact. Other liquids and foods once unclean cannot be made ritually clean. V. Mik. VI, 8.

(23) Viz., the unclean water in a defiled vessel in order to cleanse the vessel at the same time.

(24) On a Festival.

(25) I.e., if the vessels were immersed before the Festival to be put to a particular use and on the Festival he decided to use them for another purpose which requires higher sanctity, he may immerse them on the Festival, for the second immersion is not regarded as reconditioning the vessels. V. Hag. II, 6, 7.

(26) If he performed an immersion before Passover with the intention of eating the Paschal Lamb with one company, and then determined to join another company which required a higher degree of sanctity, he may immerse again on the Festival itself.

lest he take it in his hand and carry it four cubits in a public ground.¹ Abaye said to him: How is it to be explained when there is a pit² in his courtyard?³ He answered him: A pit in his courtyard is preventively forbidden on account of a pit in public ground. This is well with respect to Sabbath, but with respect to Festivals⁴ how is it to be explained? — They forbade [it on] Festivals on account of [the] Sabbath. Do we then preventively forbid?⁵ Surely we have learnt: THEY AGREE THAT [ON A FESTIVAL] ONE MAY EFFECT SURFACE CONTACT FOR [UNCLEAN] WATER IN A STONE VESSEL BUT ONE MAY NOT IMMERSE [IT]; and if this is so, let us forbid surface contact on account of immersion! — Now is that logical? If he has [other] clean water, then why effect surface contact for this [water]? Therefore [this treats of a case] where he has no [other clean water], and since he has no [other clean water] he will be very careful with it.⁶

He raised an objection to him: One may draw [water] with a [ritually] unclean bucket and it [the bucket] becomes clean;⁷ Now if it is so, let us preventively forbid lest he come to immerse it by itself! It is different there; since he is permitted [to immerse it] by means of drawing water only he will remember.⁸ He raised an objection to him: A vessel which became defiled on the eve of a Festival, one may not immerse it on the Festival; [if it became defiled] on the Festival one may immerse it on the Festival: Now if it is so, let us forbid [that which became defiled] on the Festival on account of [that which became defiled] on the eve of the Festival? — Defilement on a Festival is a rare occurrence and [with regard to] a thing of rare occurrence the Rabbis did not enact a preventative measure.⁹

He raised an objection to him: A vessel which became defiled¹⁰ through a father of uncleanness,¹¹

one may not immerse it on a Festival;¹² [but if it became defiled] through a derivative uncleanness,¹³ one may immerse it on a Festival.¹⁴ Now if it is so, let us forbid one because of the other! — How is a derivative uncleanness possible?¹⁵ [Only] in the case of priests,¹⁶ [and] priests are careful.¹⁷

Come and hear: For R. Hiyya b. Ashi said in Rab's name: A niddah,¹⁸ who has no [ritually clean] clothes,¹⁹ may use guile and immerse herself in her clothes.²⁰ Now if it is so, let us forbid this lest she come to immerse [her clothes] by themselves! — It is different there; since it is permitted to her only in her clothes, she will remember .²¹

R. Joseph says: It²² is a preventive measure on account of wringing [the clothes].²³ Said Abaye to him: This is well [with respect to] apparel, which can be wrung; [but with respect to] vessels, which cannot be wrung, what is there to be said? — He replied to him: These have been forbidden on account of those. He raised all the above mentioned objections and he answered him [the said] as we have answered.

R. Bibi says: It²² is a preventive measure, lest he delay.²⁴ It was taught as R. Bibi: A vessel which became defiled on the eve of the Festival, one may not immerse it on the Festival lest he delay.

Raba Says: [The immersion of vessels is forbidden] because it looks like repairing the vessel.²⁵ If it is so, a man too [should likewise] be forbidden?²⁶ — [In the case of] a man it looks as if he were cooling himself.²⁷ This is well in the case of clear water;²⁸ but what will you say with respect to turbid water? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: It happens that one comes [home]

(1) The minimum distance involving culpability.

(2) I.e., a mikveh.

(3) When there is no need to carry the vessel out of private ground at all.

(4) When carrying is permitted.

(5) I.e., enact one preventative measure lest another preventative measure be violated.

(6) Not to allow it to become defiled. Accordingly the water becoming defiled is a rare occurrence and such is disregarded; cf. infra.

(7) Because the real purpose of the immersion is not patent, for people would think that his purpose was to draw water.

(8) That immersion itself is forbidden on a Festival.

(9) V. 'Er. 63a.

(10) On the eve of the Festival.

(11) I.e., a primary uncleanness, a person or object that touched a dead body. For the various degrees of defilement v. Pes. 14a.

(12) For a father of uncleanness defiles the vessel by Biblical law, hence the immersion of the vessel would be regarded as reconditioning it on a Festival.

(13) I.e., anything which itself became unclean through contact with a 'father of uncleanness'; which Biblically is incapable of transmitting uncleanness to the vessel.

(14) Since by Biblical law the vessel is still clean, the immersion is not regarded as reconditioning it.

(15) That it should defile a vessel

(16) Who eat consecrated food which would be contaminated by this vessel.

(17) To distinguish between a vessel that became defiled through a primary cause or through a secondary cause. Or, they are careful not to permit their vessels to become unclean, which makes such defilement rare: v. supra.

(18) V. Glos.

(19) To put off after performing tebillah, while, on account of the Festival, she is unable to immerse the clothes she wears.

(20) Which cleanses both herself and her clothes. This is permitted for the same reason that you may draw water in an unclean bucket, as people will think that she is performing it for herself.

(21) As above.

(22) The prohibition of immersing vessels and clothes on Sabbath and Festivals.

(23) Wringing is prohibited both on Sabbath and Festivals.

(24) Their immersion until the Festival when he has more time and in the meantime uses the defiled vessels for consecrated food.

(25) Since this makes it useable.

(26) Since tebillah makes him fit to eat sacred food, such as flesh of sacrifices.

(27) And that he was not taking a ritual bath.

(28) Where one may wash oneself.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 18b

in hot weather and bathes even in water used for soaking [dirty linen]. This is well in summer;¹ what will you say of winter? R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: A man sometimes returns [home] from the field besmeared with mud and filth and bathes even in winter. This is well on a Sabbath;² but on the Day of Atonement³ what is there to be said? — Said Raba: Is there then any[thing] which on a Sabbath is permitted⁴ and on the Day of Atonement is forbidden?⁵ But since it [bathing] is permitted on the Sabbath, it is also permitted on the Day of Atonement. Does then Raba accept the argument of 'Since'?⁶ Surely we have learnt: He who has toothache must not rinse them with vinegar⁷ [On the Sabbath],⁸ but he may dip [his food] in vinegar in his usual manner, and if it becomes better, it becomes better.⁹ And we pointed out a contradiction: He must not rinse and expectorate¹⁰ but he may rinse and swallow? And Abaye answered: When we learnt our Mishnah,¹¹ we learnt it also [as referring to] rinsing and expectorating. Raba however answered: You may even say [the Mishnah refers to] rinsing and swallowing, and [still] there is no contradiction: in the one case [it means] before the dipping [of the food into the vinegar]¹² and in the other case [it means] after the dipping [of the food in the vinegar]. Now if it is so¹³ let us say, Since it is permitted before the meal, it is also permitted after the meal! — Raba retracted from that [statement].¹⁴ How do you know that he retracted from that [statement]; perhaps he changed his mind with respect to the present one?¹⁵ — You cannot suppose this, for it was taught: Everyone who is required to take a ritual bath¹⁶ may bathe in the usual way, both on the [fast of the] Ninth of Ab and on the Day of Atonement.⁷ BUT THEY BOTH AGREE THAT [ON A FESTIVAL] YOU MAY EFFECT SURFACE CONTACT FOR [UNCLEAN] WATER IN A STONE VESSEL etc. What does BUT ONE MAY NOT IMMERSE [IT] mean? — Said Samuel: One may not on a Festival immerse the [unclean] vessel on account of its water in order to cleanse it!¹⁷

Who is the author of our Mishnah? It is neither Rabbi nor the Sages! For it was taught: One may not immerse the [unclean] vessel on account of its water in order to cleanse it, nor may one effect surface contact or [unclean] water in a stone vessel in order to cleanse it; this is the opinion of Rabbi. But the Sages say: One may immerse the vessel on account of its water in order to cleanse it, and one may effect surface contact for [unclean] water in a stone vessel in order to cleanse it.¹⁸ Who now is [the author of our Mishnah]? If Rabbi, [the ruling on] surface contact is a difficulty;¹⁹ if the Sages, [the ruling on] immersion²⁰ is a difficulty? — If you like I can say [the author of the Mishnah is] Rabbi; alternatively, it is the Sages. If you like I can say it is Rabbi; the first clause of the Baraita²¹ concerns Festivals and the concluding clause²² concerns the Sabbath, whereas the whole of our Mishnah²³ deals with Festivals.

(1) When one may bathe to cool oneself.

(2) When it is permissible to wash.

(3) When it is forbidden to wash oneself

(4) On the score of work.

(5) Surely not!

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 19a

Alternatively, I can say it is the Sages and the whole of our Mishnah deals with the Sabbath.

Our Rabbis taught: A vessel which became defiled on the eve of a Festival one may not immerse at twilight.¹ R. Simeon Shezuri says: Even on a weekday one may not immerse it [then], because it requires [waiting until] sunset.² And does not the first Tanna require [waiting until] sunset?³ Said Raba: I found the disciples of the Academy who sat and said: They differ whether his intention is to be recognized from his acts. How so? If, for example, he is holding a vessel in his hand and running along [about] twilight [time]⁴ to immerse it; one Master is of the opinion that the reason he is running along is that he indeed knows that he requires [to wait until] sunset;⁵ and the other Master is of the opinion that he is running on account of his work.⁶ Then said I to them: None dispute that his intention is recognized from his acts;⁷ they differ [only] when [another] vessel⁸ became defiled through [part of a reptile] less than the size of a lentil,⁹ and he¹⁰ came before the Rabbis to ask whether [having come into contact with part of a reptile] less than the size of a lentil it has become defiled or not.¹¹ One Master is of the opinion: Since he does not know this he also does not know that;¹² and the other Master is of the opinion: This [only] he does not know,¹³ but [with the requirement of] sunset he is well acquainted.¹⁴ AND ONE MAY IMMERSE [TO CHANGE] FROM ONE INTENTION TO ANOTHER. Our Rabbis taught: How is, FROM ONE INTENTION TO ANOTHER, meant? He who wishes to make his wine press out of his olive press¹⁵ or his olive press out of his wine press may do so.¹⁶ What means 'FROM ONE COMPANY TO ANOTHER'? If he intended to eat with one company,¹⁷ and [now] wishes to eat with another company,¹⁸ he may do so.¹⁹

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: ONE MAY BRING PEACE-OFFERING²⁰ [ON FESTIVALS] BUT MAY NOT LAY [HANDS] THEREON;²¹ BUT ONE MAY NOT BRING BURNT-OFFERINGS²² [ON A FESTIVAL]; BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: ONE MAY BRING PEACE-OFFERINGS AND BURNT-OFFERINGS AND ALSO LAY HANDS THEREON.

GEMARA. 'Ulla said: 'The dispute is only with respect to the laying on [of hands] on Festival peace-offerings²³ and the sacrificing of the pilgrimage burnt-offerings,²⁴ when Beth Shammai hold:

‘And ye shall keep [wehagothem] it a Feast [hag] unto to the Lord’,²⁵ implies only Festival peace-offerings [hagigah]²⁶ but not the pilgrimage burnt-offerings; and Beth Hillel maintain: ‘unto the Lord’ [implies] all [sacrifices offered] unto the Lord;²⁷ but all agree that vows and freewill-offerings²⁸ may not be offered on a Festival.²⁹ And thus did R. Adda b. Ahabah say: Vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival.

An objection was raised: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ concerning a burnt-offering which is not for the Festival,³⁰ [both agreeing] that it may not be offered on a Festival,³¹ and concerning peace-offerings of the Festival³² that they may be offered on the Festival;³³ they only differ concerning a burnt-offering which is for the Festival and concerning peace-offerings which are not for the Festival, when Beth Shammai say: He may not bring [them]³⁴ and Beth Hillel maintain: He may bring [them]! — Reconcile it by saying thus: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ concerning a burnt-offering or peace-offering which are not connected with the Festival that they may not be offered on the Festival and concerning peace-offerings connected with the Festival that they may be offered on the Festival; they differ only concerning a burnt-offering connected with the Festival, when Beth Shammai say: He may not bring [it], and Beth Hillel maintain: He may bring [it]. R. Joseph said:³⁵ You quote Tannaim at random.³⁶ There is a dispute of Tannaim. For it was taught: [As to] peace-offerings which are offered³⁷ on account of the Festival, Beth Shammai say: He lays [hands] on them on the eve of the Festival and slaughters them on the Festival; but Beth Hillel maintain: He lays [hands] on them on the Festival and slaughters their on the Festival,

(1) Because it may already be the Festival. Twilight is a period after sunset which it cannot exactly be determined whether it is day or night.

(2) I.e., if a person is seen to attempt to immerse a vessel at twilight he is stopped: the person immersing the vessel at twilight evidently intends to use it immediately after immersion. But the vessel immersed at twilight would still be unclean until sunset of the following day; cf. Lev. XI, 32.

(3) Before it is ritually clean. Surely a person who has ritually cleansed all unclean vessel by immersion must wait until the sun sets before he may use it.

(4) [I.e., before sunset. The bracketed words must be added if the word ‘twilight’ which MS.M. omits is retained with cur. edd.]

(5) Before he can use it. Therefore on a weekday he is allowed to proceed because when, on reaching the ritual bath, he finds that the sun has already set, he will immerse it and wait until the following sunset before using it. But on the eve of a Festival he may not immerse it in case it is already the Festival. But v. Goldschmidt, n. a.l.

(6) I.e., he is in a hurry to get on with his work. Such action does not show intention and it is therefore to be apprehended lest he will come to use it after immersing it.

(7) We may certainly deduce his intention from his acts.

(8) In addition to the one already defiled, Rashi. V. n. 9.

(9) The minimum size to cause defilement.

(10) This man who was seen running before sunset to immerse the vessel.

(11) R. Hananel reads: ‘Became defiled through (a part of a reptile) of the size of a lentil, and he came before the Rabbis to ask whether a reptile of the size of a lentil defiles’ (he not knowing the law that it does). On this reading the vessel which he was rushing to immerse was the very vessel about which he enquired of the Rabbis and which he was told that it required immersion; v. n. 6.]

(12) Viz., that sunset is required.

(13) For it is not specifically written in Scripture that it must be of the size of a lentil. [On the reading of R. Hananel (note 9): For it is not specifically stated in Scripture that a reptile (or part of it) bigger than a lentil defiles.]

(14) Scripture distinctly states that sunset is required cf. Lev. XI, 32.

(15) If one immersed his defiled vessel in order to use it for his olive press and then changed his mind and wished to use it for his wine press. כַּד is the smaller vessel for oil. [MS.M. reads כַּד ‘Olive press’.]

(16) Without requiring further immersion. If therefore the owner takes it upon himself to immerse again the vessel, such immersion may be performed on a Festival, for he is not thereby reconditioning the vessel.

- (17) And performed immersion with this intention.
- (18) He can only change his mind before the animal is sacrificed.
- (19) Without requiring further immersion. The extra immersion is therefore permissible on a Festival.
- (20) Because part thereof is eaten by their owners.
- (21) Beth Shammai forbid this as a shebuth (v. Glos.), as it was performed with all one's strength and is regarded as being in the nature of riding an animal which is expressly forbidden by the Rabbis (Rashi). [V. however, infra 20a where Beth Shammai are said to hold that the law of laying on of hands does not apply at all to obligatory offerings. Rashi's explanation follows, however, that of R. Johanan, Hag. 16b; v. Tosaf. infra 20a s.v. סוף]
- (22) I.e., private voluntary burnt-offerings.
- (23) Which are obligatory. V. Lev. XXIII, 41, and the eating of meat was considered an essential part of the festival enjoyment.
- (24) V. Ex. XXIII, 15. Lit., 'the appearance (in the Temple before the Lord)'.
- (25) Lev. XXIII, 41.
- (26) We-hagothem being grammatically connected with hag and hagigah.
- (27) Which includes the pilgrimage burnt-offering.
- (28) I.e., private sacrifices.
- (29) Since they do not belong to the Festival and can be offered on any other day.
- (30) E.g., a burnt-offering as a vow or a freewill-offering.
- (31) Because (a) none of the sacrifice is eaten by the owners; and (b) it can be brought after the Festival.
- (32) I.e., the Festival peace-offerings.
- (33) Because (a) They are eaten by the owners, thus increasing the joy of the Festival; (b) They belong to the Festival and cannot be brought after the Festival.
- (34) Thus Beth Shammai maintain that peace-offerings not connected with the Festival may not be brought on the Festival, which contradicts 'Ulla.
- (35) There is no need to amend the Baraitha
- (36) You quote the view of one Tanna (viz., R. Simeon b. Eleazar) while disregarding the possibility that another Tanna may have a different opinion.
- (37) Lit., 'come'.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 19b

but all agree that vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival.¹

And the following Tannaim [are engaged in the same controversy]² as these [aforementioned] Tannaim. For it was taught: One may not bring a thank-offering³ on the Feast of Unleavened Bread on account of the leaven which it contains;⁴ nor on Pentecost, because it is a Festival;⁵ but one may bring his thank-offering on the Feast of Tabernacles.⁶ R. Simeon says: Lo, Scripture says, on the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and on the Feast of Weeks, and on the Feast of Tabernacles,⁷ [teaching] whatever may be brought on the Feast of Unleavened Bread may [also] be brought on the Feast of Weeks and on the Feast of Tabernacles, and whatever may not be brought on the Feast of Unleavened Bread may not be brought on the Feast of Weeks and on the Feast of Tabernacles [either]. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon says: A man may bring his thank-offering⁸ on the Feast of Tabernacles and may therewith fulfil his obligation in respect of the joy [of the Festival],⁹ but does not fulfil his obligation therewith in respect of the Festival sacrifices.¹⁰ The Master said:¹¹ 'One may not bring a thank-offering on the Feast of Unleavened Bread on account of the leaven which it contains. This is obvious! — Said R. Adda son of R. Isaac, some say R. Samuel b. Abba: We are treating here of the fourteenth [of Nisan] and he holds: You must not bring consecrated meat to the place of disqualification.¹² 'Nor on Pentecost, because it is a Festival'; he is of the opinion [that] vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival.¹³

'But a man may bring his thank-offering on the Feast of Tabernacles'. When? If it should mean on the Festival itself, but you say, 'Nor on Pentecost because it is a Festival'. — Therefore [it must mean] on the intermediary days of the Festival.

R. Simeon says: Lo, Scripture says: 'on the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and on the Feast of Weeks, and on the Feast of Tabernacles', [teaching] whatever may be brought on the Feast of Unleavened Bread may [also] be brought on the Feast of Weeks and on the Feast of Tabernacles, and what may not be brought on the Feast of Unleavened Bread may [also] not be brought on the Feast of Weeks and on the Feast of Tabernacles.¹⁴ To this R. Zera demurred: Seeing that we may [even] gather firewood can there be a question about vows and freewill-offerings!¹⁵ — Said Abaye: None dispute that the offering [of the thank-offering] is permitted:¹⁶ they differ only as to whether he is subject to 'Thou shalt not delay'¹⁷ on its account. The first Tanna holds: The Divine Law said 'Three Festivals',¹⁸ even not in their order of sequence;¹⁹ while R. Simeon is of the opinion; only in their order of sequence [he transgresses] but not when they are not in order of sequence.

'R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon says: One may bring the thank-offering on the Feast of Tabernacles' — When? If [it means] on the Intermediary days of the Festival, then it is the same as the first Tanna. Therefore [it means] on the Festival [itself], and he is of the opinion that vows or freewill-offerings may be offered on Festivals.²⁰ And why does he teach this particularly of the Feast of Tabernacles? — R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon follows his view [expressed elsewhere]. For it was taught: R. Simeon Says: Scripture²¹ need not have mentioned 'the Feast of Tabernacles' for the passage is dealing with it.²² Why [then] is it mentioned? To teach that this is the last.²³ R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon Says: To teach that this [Festival of Tabernacles alone] brings it about.²⁴

'And may therewith fulfil his obligation concerning the joy [of the Festival], but does not fulfil his obligation therewith concerning the Festival sacrifices.' This is obvious; for this is indeed an obligatory sacrifice²⁵ and any obligatory sacrifice can only be brought of unconsecrated [animals or money]!²⁶ — It is necessary to teach this even if he explicitly stipulated.²⁷ As R. Simeon b. Lakish asked R. Johanan: What if one said, 'I vow a thank-offering that I may therewith fulfil my obligation of hagigah;' [or] 'I take upon myself to become a Nazirite

(1) This Tanna corroborates the statement of 'Ulla.

(2) With respect to vows and freewill-offerings

(3) V. Lev. VII, 12-15.

(4) The thank-offering requires leaven (V. Lev. VII, 13) and naturally cannot be offered on Passover.

(5) And a thank-offering like vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival.

(6) I. e., during the Intermediary days of the Festival.

(7) Deut. XVI, 16.

(8) I.e., one which he had previously vowed.

(9) It is obligatory to rejoice on the Festivals (v. Deut. XVI, 14), and this rejoicing requires meat (v. supra p. 97, n. 9). The thank-offering can be brought for this purpose.

(10) These are obligatory and such must be brought from unconsecrated animals (i.e., animals which are not due on account of a previous vow); hence the thank-offering is ineligible for this purpose.

(11) The Talmid proceeds to a discussion of the Baraita in the course of which there emerges the Tannaitic controversy referred to.

(12) For the ten loaves of leaven which accompany the thank-offering could hardly be eaten by about 10 a.m. when leaven becomes forbidden, and the rest would have to be burnt as nothar (v. Glos.).

(13) This is the statement referred to above of the Tanna who differs and maintains that vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on Festivals.

(14) It was wrongly assumed that the statement forbids the bringing of the thank-offering even on the Intermediary days of the Festival, hence the following objection.

(15) This certainly may be brought.

(16) On the Intermediary Days of the Festival of Tabernacles.

(17) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(18) Ex. XXIII, 14. In R.H. 4b it is deduced that one violates this if three festivals pass without his fulfilling his vow.

(19) If the vow to bring the thank-offering is made before Tabernacles, the first Tanna counsels the vower to bring it at the immediately following Feast of Tabernacles. Because, according to him, the three Festivals just mentioned need not be in order of sequence commencing with Passover. Therefore unless he brings it on the immediately following Tabernacles he will have to make a special journey to Jerusalem to offer it, since he cannot bring it either on Passover or the Pentecost, whilst he must not delay beyond them. R. Simeon, however, maintains that he transgresses only if three Festivals, taken in order of sequence starting from Passover, pass without his fulfilling the vow. Hence this is what he means: Whatever comes 'on the Feast of Unleavened Bread', i.e., whatever was vowed before the Feast of Passover, so that there was already an obligation by Passover, must be brought either at Pentecost or Tabernacles immediately following; but 'Whatever does not come on the Feast of Unleavened Bread, 'i.e., if there was no obligation then, as he vowed after Passover, need not be brought on the immediately following Festivals of Pentecost or Tabernacles, since he will still have till the Tabernacles of the following year without transgressing the prohibition of 'delaying'.

(20) V. supra p. 100, n. 3.

(21) Deut. XVI, 16.

(22) Viz., Tabernacles. V. verse 13.

(23) I.e., that the three Festivals must, for the transgression of 'delaying' follow in that order — Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles.

(24) The transgression of the Command. If he vowed before Tabernacles and did not fulfil the vow until Tabernacles elapsed he has transgressed. Cf. R.H. 4a.

(25) V. p. 99, n. 11.

(26) But not of second tithe money which is already consecrated, nor of animals already dedicated as vows and freewill-offerings. V. Pes. 71a.

(27) When he vowed the thank-offering he stipulated that it should take the place of the Festival sacrifice.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 20a

[on condition] that I shave with the second tithe money?¹ He replied to him: He is under a vow, but he cannot discharge [his hagigah obligation therewith]: he is a Nazirite, but he cannot shave [as he stipulated].²

A certain man declared,³ Give four hundred zuz to So-and-so and let him marry my daughter. R. Papa said: The four hundred zuz he receives, and as for the daughter, if he wishes he may marry [her] [and] if he wishes he need not marry [her].⁴ The reason is because he said: 'Give him and he shall marry;⁵ but if he had said, 'Let him marry and give him', [then] if he marries her, he receives [the money]; but if he does not marry [her], he does not receive [it].

Meremar was sitting and stated this ruling⁶ in his own name. Said Rabina to Meremar: You are teaching this thus,⁷ [but] we teach it as a question directed by Resh Lakish to R. Johanan.

A tanna recited before R. Isaac b. Abba: 'And he presented the burnt-offering; and offered it according to the ordinance',⁸ [i.e.,] according to the ordinance of a freewill burnt-offering;⁹ this teaches that the obligatory burnt-offering requires laying on of hands.¹⁰ Said he to him: He who told you this did so in accordance with Beth Shammai¹¹ who do not learn obligatory peace-offerings from freewill peace-offerings;¹² for it is according to Beth Hillel, since they learn obligatory peace-offerings from freewill peace-offerings, the obligatory burnt-offering too does not require a Scripture text, for they infer it from the freewill burnt-offering.¹³ But whence do you know that Beth Hillel¹⁴ learn obligatory peace-offerings from freewill peace-offerings; perhaps they learn it from the obligatory burnt-offering,¹⁵ while the obligatory burnt-offering itself requires a Scripture text?¹⁶ — Why [would you say that] they do not infer it from freewill peace-offerings: because they are frequent?¹⁷ Then they could not infer it from an obligatory burnt-offering either, since it is wholly consumed!¹⁸ — It is inferred from both of them.¹⁹ But does Beth Shammai maintain that obligatory peace-offerings do not require the laying on of hands. Surely it was taught: R. Joseph said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ about the laying on of hands itself, [both agreeing] that it is necessary;²⁰ they dispute only whether the [act of] slaughtering must immediately follow the laying on of hands, when Beth Shammai hold: It is not necessary,²¹ and Beth Hillel maintain: It is necessary! — He²² teaches according to the following Tanna. For it was taught: R. Jose son of R. Judah said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ that the slaughtering must immediately follow the laying on of hands, they dispute only about the laying on of hands itself,²³ Beth Shammai ruling: It is not necessary, while Beth Hillel maintain: It is necessary.

Our Rabbis taught: It once happened that Hillel the Elder brought his burnt-offering into the Temple Court on a Festival for the purpose of laying hands thereon. The disciples of Shammai the Elder gathered around him and asked: What is the nature of this animal? He replied to them: It is a female²⁴ and I brought it as a peace-offering. [Thereupon] he swung its tail for them²⁵ and they went away. On that day Beth Shammai got the upper hand over Beth Hillel²⁶ and wished to fix the halachah according to their ruling.²⁷ But an old man of the disciples of Shammai the Elder was there named Baba b. Buta, who knew that the halachah is as Beth Hillel²⁸ and he sent

- (1) I.e., that I purchase the sacrifice due on the day that I cut my hair (v. Num. VI, 13ff) with second tithing money.
 - (2) Although the condition on which he made his vow is invalid, he is still bound to fulfil his vow.
 - (3) As his last will and testament.
 - (4) This decision of R. Papa has some analogy with that ruling of the Baraita that precedes, hence its inclusion here.
 - (5) In this order.
 - (6) Supra 19b bottom and the ruling on same.
 - (7) In your own name.
 - (8) Lev. IX, 16. This verse refers, according to Rashi, to the obligatory burnt-offering brought by Aaron on the eighth day of his consecration (v. Lev. IX, 2), and according to Tosaf. to the communal burnt-offering (v. Lev. IX, 15).
 - (9) For the Bible does not state a rule about the obligatory burnt-offering. Hence this verse must mean that the same rules that apply to a freewill burnt-offering apply to an obligatory burnt-offering. V. Lev. I, 3ff.
 - (10) The law of laying on of hands is prescribed only for freewill-offerings v. Lev. I, 3ff (burnt-offerings), III, 2 (peace-offerings).
 - (11) In our Mishnah 19a.
 - (12) In regard to the necessity of laying on of hands (v. supra note 1). Similarly with respect to burnt-offerings Beth Shammai will not infer obligatory burnt-offerings from freewill burnt-offerings; hence a special Scripture text is required that obligatory burnt-offerings require laying on of hands. V. Lev. III, 2.
 - (13) The inference is as follows: Just as we find that a freewill burnt-offering, because it is a burnt-offering, requires laying on of hands, so also an obligatory burnt-offering, since it is likewise a burnt-offering. This principle of exegesis is called Binyan Ab, v. Glos. Beth Shammai, however, does not admit this difference as there is no analogy between freewill burnt-offerings that can be brought at any time and obligatory burnt-offerings which are only brought at stated times.
 - (14) Who permit the laying of hands on obligatory offerings on a Festival.
 - (15) Perhaps Beth Hillel too reject this inference (v. n. 4) of obligatory from freewill offerings.
 - (16) [I.e., Lev. IX, 16 from which is derived the law that the obligatory burnt-offering requires laying on of hands, so that the cited Baraita can be in accord with Beth Hillel as well as Beth Shammai.]
 - (17) I.e., they can be brought at any time.
 - (18) V. Lev. I, 9.
 - (19) So that if an objection is raised with regard to one that the rule of laying on hands applies there because of a certain characteristic which is not found in the case of obligatory peace-offerings, reference can be made to the other where the same characteristic is lacking and yet the rule of laying on hands is not dependent on the presence of that characteristic.
 - (20) Save that Beth Shammai maintain that the laying on of hands in the case of obligatory peace-offerings must be performed before the Festival and not on the Festival itself.
 - (21) Hence it can be done before the Festival, and therefore it may not be done on the Festival.
 - (22) The author of our Mishnah.
 - (23) In the case of obligatory peace-offerings.

(24) And such is not offered as a burnt-offering. V. Lev. I, 3. He wanted to avoid a quarrel and told them what was not true for the sake of peace.

(25) In order to make them believe it was a female.

(26) I.e., they forced the majority.

(27) Viz., that obligatory burnt-offerings do not require laying on of hands.

(28) I.e., that Beth Shammai's ruling is only a stringency, but not based on Biblical law.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 20b

and fetched all the sheep of Kedar¹ that were in Jerusalem and put them into the Temple Court and said: Whoever wishes to lay on hands let him come and lay on hands; and on that day Beth Hillel got the upper hand and established the halachah according to their opinion and there was no one there who disputed it.²

It happened again with a certain disciple of the disciples of Beth Hillel who brought his burnt-offering into the Temple Court for the purpose of laying hands thereon. A certain disciple of the disciples of Beth Shammai found him and said to him: Why the laying on of hands?³ He replied: Why [not keep] silence? He silenced him with a rebuke and he went away. Said Abaye: Therefore a young scholar to whom his colleague says anything should not answer back more than the former had spoken to him; for the one said to the other, Why the laying on of hands? and the other replied, [correspondingly] Why [not keep] silence?

It was taught; Beth Hillel said to Beth Shammai: If, when it is forbidden [to slaughter to provide food] for a layman,⁴ it is permitted [to slaughter] for the Most High,⁵ then where it is permitted on behalf of a layman,⁶ it is surely logical that it is permitted for the Most High.⁷ Beth Shammai replied to them: Let vows and freewill-offerings prove [the contrary], for they are permitted for a layman and yet forbidden for the Most High.⁸ Beth Hillel said to them: As for vows and freewill-offerings, that is because there is no fixed time for them; will you say [the same] with respect to a pilgrimage burnt-offering seeing that it has a fixed time!⁹ Beth Shammai replied to them: Even [for] this [sacrifice] there is no [strictly] fixed time. For we have learnt:¹⁰ He who did not bring his Festival offering on the first day of the Festival, may bring it during the whole of the remaining days of the Festival, even on the last day. Beth Hillel replied to them: Even [for] this there is indeed a time fixed, for we have learnt:¹⁰ If the Festival passes and he has not brought his Festival offering, he bears no [further] liability [on its account].¹¹ Beth Shammai said to them: Surely it is said 'That only may be done' for you,¹² [implying] but not for the most High God? Beth Hillel replied to them: Surely it is said: '[And ye shall keep it as a feast] unto the Lord',¹³ [implying] whatever is for the Lord! If so, why then does the text say: 'For you'? for you but not for heathens,¹⁴ for you, but not for dogs.

Abba Saul taught the same in another form: If when thy hearth is closed,¹⁵ the hearth¹⁶ of the Master is open,¹⁷ how much the more must the hearth of thy Master be open when thy hearth is open.¹⁸ And that is logical that thy table should not be full and the table of thy Master empty. In what do they differ?¹⁹ — One Master²⁰ holds: Vows and freewill-offerings may be offered on a Festival and the other Master holds they may not be offered on a Festival.

R. Huna said: On the view that vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival, say not, Biblically they are indeed permitted²¹ and only the Rabbis preventively forbade them lest one delay,²² but even Biblically they are not permitted; for the two loaves of bread²³ which are obligatory for that day²⁴ so that we need not apprehend delay, yet [their preparation] does not override either the Sabbath or a Festival.²⁵

The scholars asked: On the view that vows and freewill-offerings may not be offered on a Festival what is the law if one transgressed and did slaughter?²⁶ Raba says: He sprinkles the blood in order to permit the flesh to be eaten for food.²⁷ Rabbah son of R. Huna says: He sprinkles the blood in order to burn their inwards at eventide.²⁸ What [difference] is there between them? — They differ when the flesh was defiled or lost; according to Raba he must not sprinkle [the blood],²⁹ according to Rabbah son of R. Huna he does sprinkle.

An objection was raised: If one slaughters the lambs of the Feast of Weeks³⁰ for another purpose³¹ or if one slaughters them before or after their [fixed] time, the blood is to be sprinkled and the flesh is to be eaten; but if it was the Sabbath, he may not sprinkle³² and if he did sprinkle³³

It is acceptable¹ on condition that the inwards are burnt at eventide.² [Now] 'If he did sprinkle' indicates only if it was [already] done, but [it may] not [be done] at the outset. According to Raba it is well, but on Rabbah b. R. Huna's view there is a difficulty? — That is indeed a difficulty. Alternatively you can answer: The shebuth³ of Sabbath is different from the shebuth of a Festival.⁴

R. Awia the Elder asked R. Huna: Is it permissible to slaughter on a Festival an animal half of which belongs to a heathen and half to an Israelite? — He said to him: It is permitted. The other said: What difference is there between this [case] and the case of vows and freewill-offerings?⁵ — A raven flies,⁶ he retorted. When he left, his son Rabbah said to him: Was this not R. Awia the Elder whom you, sir, have praised as a great man?⁷ — What then was I to do with him? answered he; I am to-day [in the condition of the lover who said] ‘Stay ye me with dainties, refresh me with apples’,⁸ and he asked me things which require reasoning.⁹ And what is [really] the reason?¹⁰ — An animal half of which belongs to a heathen and half to an Israelite may be slaughtered on a Festival, because it is impossible [to eat] as much as an olive of flesh without slaughtering;¹¹ but vows and freewill-offerings may not be slaughtered on a Festival because when the priests receive their portion,¹² they receive it from the table of the Most High.¹³

R. Hisda said: An animal half of which belongs to a heathen and half to an Israelite is permitted to be slaughtered on a Festival, because as much as an olive of flesh is unattainable without slaughtering; [but] dough belonging half to a heathen and half to an Israelite may not be baked on a Festival for it is possible to divide it at the kneading. R. Hana b. Hanilai raised an objection: Dogs’ dough,¹⁴ if the shepherds eat of it, is subject to hallah,¹⁵ and one may prepare an ‘erub¹⁶ therewith, effect a partnership¹⁷ therewith, pronounce a blessing over it,¹⁸ and say grace after it,¹⁹ and it may be baked on a Festival,²⁰ and a man can fulfil his obligation therewith on Passover.²¹ But why [may it be baked on a Festival]? Surely it is possible for him to divide it during the kneading! — Dogs’ dough is different since it is possible to appease them [the dogs] with carrion.²²

Does then R. Hisda accept the argument of ‘Since’?²³ Surely it was stated: He who bakes on a Festival for the weekday, R. Hisda says: He is flagellated; whereas Rabbah maintains: He is not flagellated. R. Hisda says: He is flagellated, [for] we do not say, Since if visitors came to him, it is fit for him [on the festival], it is even now²⁴ [con sidered] fit for him; Rabbah maintains: He is not flagellated, [for] we do maintain [the argument of] ‘Since’?²⁵ — Rather, do not say, ‘Since it is possible [etc.]’, but when, for example, he [the shepherd] has a carcass, so that it is definitely possible to satisfy them [the dogs] therewith.²⁶ They asked of R. Huna: May the [Jewish] inhabitants of the valley²⁷ who are obliged to supply bread²⁸ for the troops, bake [it] on a Festival? — He replied to them: We see’ If they can give some bread [thereof] to a child and they [the soldiers] do not object, then every [loaf] is fit for a child; hence it is permitted; but if not,²⁹ it is forbidden. But surely it was taught: It once happened that Simeon the Temanite did not come to the Academy on the eve [of the Festival]. In the morning Judah b. Baba found him and asked: Why did you not attend yesterday [evening] at the Academy? He replied to him: A troop of soldiers came into our town and wished to plunder the entire city; so we killed a calf for them and fed them and let them depart in peace. Said [Judah] to him: I should be surprised if your gain is not counterbalanced by your loss,³⁰ for surely the Torah said ‘for you’³¹ but not for heathens. But why so: the [calf] was fit to be eaten [by them]?³² — Said R. Joseph: It was a trefa calf.³³ But it was fit for dogs? — Tannaim differ on this; for it was taught: ‘Save that which every soul³⁴ must eat, that only may be done by you’.³¹ From the implication of the expression ‘every soul’ I might assume also that the soul of cattle is included³⁵ as it is said, ‘And he that smiteth a soul of a beast mortally shall make it good’;³⁶ the text therefore says, ‘for you’

[intimating] but not for dogs. This is the opinion of R. Jose the Galilean. R. Akiba says: Even the soul of cattle is included; if so, then why does the text say 'for you'? For you, but not for heathens — And what reason do you see to include dogs and to exclude heathens? I include dogs, since you are responsible for their food, and I exclude heathens because you are not responsible for their food.¹

Abaye said to R. Joseph: Now according to R. Jose the Galilean who says 'for you' but not for dogs, how can we throw date stones [as fodder] to cattle on a Festival?² — Said he to him: Because they are fit for fuel. This is well when they are dry, but how is it to be explained when they are moist? — They are fit for a big fire.³ This is well on a Festival, but what will you say with respect to the Sabbath.⁴ — We may handle them in virtue of bread,⁵ in accordance with Samuel; for Samuel said: A man may do all he needs in virtue of bread.⁶

But he⁷ disagrees with R. Joshua b. Levi; for R. Joshua b. Levi said: One may invite a heathen [to a meal] on a Sabbath, but one may not invite a heathen on a Festival as a preventive measure, lest he may [cook] more on his [the heathen's] account. R. Aha b. Jacob says: Not even on a Sabbath, on account of what is left at the bottom of the cups.⁸ If so, even [the remains of] our own [wine] too?⁹ — Ours is fit for fowls.¹⁰ Theirs too is fit for fowls? — Theirs is forbidden for any use.¹¹ Let him remove them in virtue of the cups! Did not Raba say: You may remove the brazier on account of the ashes,¹² although it contains fragments of wood!¹³ — There¹⁴ they are not prohibited for use, but here¹⁵ they are prohibited for use. R. Aha b. Difti said to Rabina: Let it be like a vessel for excrement!¹⁶ — He answered him: May we make excrement at the outset?¹⁷ Raba accompanied¹⁸ Mar Samuel who lectured: One may invite a heathen [to a meal] on a Sabbath, but one may not invite a heathen on a Festival as a preventive measure lest he will [cook] more on his account. When a heathen visited Meremar and Mar Zutra on a Festival they would say to him: If you are content with that which we have prepared for ourselves it is well; but if not we cannot take extra trouble for your sake.

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: A MAN MAY NOT HEAT WATER FOR HIS FEET¹⁹ UNLESS IT IS ALSO FIT FOR DRINKING;²⁰ BUT BETH HILLEL PERMIT IT. A MAN MAY MAKE A FIRE AND WARM HIMSELF AT IT.

GEMARA. The scholars asked: Who taught this [ruling] about fire? Is it the opinion of all, Beth Shammai drawing a distinction between the benefit of the whole body²¹ and the benefit of a single limb,²² or does Beth Hillel teach this, while Beth Shammai do not differentiate?²³ — Come and hear: Beth Shammai say: A man may not make a fire to warm himself at it; but Beth Hillel permit it.

MISHNAH. IN THREE THINGS RABBAN GAMALIEL WAS STRINGENT, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE RULING OF BETH SHAMMAI: ONE MAY NOT STORE AT THE OUTSET WARM WATER ON A FESTIVAL [FOR THE SABBATH],²⁴ AND ONE MAY NOT SET UP²⁵ A CANDLESTICK ON A FESTIVAL, AND ONE MAY NOT BAKE BREAD IN LARGE LOAVES²⁶ BUT ONLY IN THIN WAFERS. RABBAN GAMALIEL SAID: NEVER DID MY FATHER'S HOUSEHOLD BAKE BREAD IN LARGE LOAVES BUT ONLY IN THIN WAFERS. SAID THEY TO HIM: WHAT CAN WE DO WITH YOUR FATHER'S HOUSEHOLD, WHO WERE STRINGENT TOWARDS THEMSELVES AND LENIENT TO ALL ISRAEL, [PERMITTING THEM] TO BAKE BREAD BOTH IN LARGE LOAVES AND THICK CAKES.

GEMARA. What are the circumstances? If he has set an 'erub tabshilin, what is the reason of Beth Shammai?²⁷ And if he had not set an 'erub tabshilin, what is the reason of Beth Hillel?²⁸ — Said R. Huna: In truth I can say that he did not set an 'erub tabshilin but the Rabbis²⁹ permitted him [to prepare]³⁰ what is necessary for his sustenance; and R. Huna follows his view: for R. Huna said: He who did not set an 'erub tabshilin, others³¹ may bake one loaf for him and cook one dish for him

- (1) Thus R. Akiba permits the preparation of animal's food, while R. Jose forbids it.
 - (2) Since they are not fit for human consumption, they should not be allowed to be handled.
 - (3) A big fire can burn even damp fuel.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 22a

and light [one] candle for him. It was said in the name of R. Isaac: They may also grill a small fish for him. It was taught likewise: He who did not set an erub tabshilin, one may bake one loaf for him and store one dish for him and light [one] candle for him and heat one jug of water for him, while some maintain: They may also grill a small fish for him.¹ Raba says: In truth it treats of a case where he did set [an 'erub tabshilin], but storing [hot water] is different for it is evident that he is doing it for the sake of the Sabbath.² Abaye raised an objection:³ Hananiah says [that] Beth Shammai maintain: One may bake only if he set an 'erub of bread and one may cook only if he set an 'erub of cooked food, and one may store only if he had already warm water stored on the eve of the Festival. But if he had stored water, it is [as implied] at any rate allowed, even though it is evident that he is doing it for the sake of the Sabbath! Therefore said Abaye: [It⁴ treats of a case] when for example he set an 'erub for the one⁵ and did not set an 'erub for the other,⁶ and the author is Hananiah according to Beth Shammai.

AND ONE MAY NOT SET UP A CANDLESTICK: What does he do?⁷ — Said R. Hinena b. Bisna: We are dealing with [a jointed] candlestick composed of parts, [the reason being] because it looks like building;⁸ for Beth Shammai hold:⁹ Building applies [also] to utensils and Beth Hillel maintain: Neither building nor pulling down apply to utensils. 'Ulla visited Rab Judah and his attendant arose and set up the lamp¹⁰ [on the Festival]. Rab Judah raised an objection to 'Ulla: He who puts oil in a [burning] lamp [on a Sabbath] is culpable on account of kindling, and he who draws supplies from it is culpable on account of extinguishing.¹¹ — He replied: I was not paying attention to it.

Rab said: Snuffing [the wick] is permitted [on a Festival]. Abba b. Martha asked Abaye: May one extinguish the lamp for something else?¹² — He replied: It is possible [to take place] in another room. What if he has no other room? — It is possible to make a partition. What if he has nothing wherewith to make a partition? — It is possible to cover it [the light] with a vessel. What if he has no vessel? — He replied: It is forbidden.¹³ He raised an objection: One may not extinguish a log in order to save it,¹⁴ but it is permitted [to extinguish it] so that a room or a pot does not become smoky!¹⁵ — He replied: This is the opinion of R. Judah,¹⁶ but I am speaking according to the view of the Rabbis.¹⁷ Abaye asked Rabbah: May one extinguish a conflagration on a Festival? When danger of life is involved I do not ask, for [this] is permitted even on a Sabbath; I only ask when a loss of money [alone] is involved: What is the law? — He replied: It is forbidden. He raised an objection: One may not extinguish a log in order to save it, but it is permitted [to extinguish it] so that the room or a pot does not become smoky!¹⁸ — This is the opinion of R. Judah, but I am speaking according to the view of the Rabbis.

R. Ashi asked Amemar: May one [medically] paint the eyes on a Festival? When there is a danger, for example of discharge, pricking [pain], congestion, watering, inflammation or the first stages of sickness, I do not ask, for [then] it is permissible even on the Sabbath;¹⁹ I only ask when the sickness is almost cured and it [the painting] is only to give brightness to the eyes.²⁰ What is the law? — He replied: It is forbidden. He raised the objection: ‘You may not extinguish a log [etc.]’ and he answered the same as we have answered.²¹

Amemar permitted the eye to be painted [medically] by a heathen on a Sabbath. Some say: Amemar himself allowed his eye to be painted by a heathen on a Sabbath. R. Ashi said to Amemar: What is your opinion, because ‘Ulla the son of R. Illai said: All that a sick man needs may be performed by a heathen on a Sabbath? And R. Hamnuna [further] said: In all cases where there is no danger one may tell a heathen to do it? But this is only when he does not himself help him, but you, Sir, assist him by closing and opening the eye! — He replied: R. Zebid made the same objection and I answered him: Helping is of no consequence.

Amemar permitted to paint the eyes on the second day of the New Year's Feast. R. Ashi said to Amemar: But Raba said: On the first day of a Festival Gentiles [only] may busy themselves with a corpse, [but] on the second day Israelites may do it, and even on the two Festival days of the New Year

(2) Whereas cooking, even when intended for the Sabbath, may nevertheless appear to be for the Festival.

(3) V. supra 17b.

(4) Our Mishnah which prohibits storing.

(5) I.e., he baked and cooked before the Festival for the purpose of ‘erub.

(6) I.e., he did not store any hot water before the Festival.

(7) Surely this is not a prohibited labour!

(8) If it is put together.

(9) V. supra 10a, 11b.

(10) [Alfasi and Rashi: He inclined it backwards so as to draw off the oil from the wick and caused the light to go out.]

(11) Because the light goes out sooner, and extinguishing is likewise forbidden on a Festival.

(12) A euphemism for marital intercourse.

(13) To put out the light.

(14) I.e., for the sake of thrift.

(15) Consequently we see that in order to derive benefit on a Festival, it is permissible to extinguish.

which how ever is not the case with respect to an egg?¹ — He replied: I hold as the Nehardeans who say: [The same holds good] even with respect to an egg; for what is in your mind: perhaps [the month of] Elul will be intercalated?² Surely R. Hinena b. Kahana said:³ From the days of Ezra and onward we do not find Elul ever intercalated.

AND ONE MAY NOT BAKE BREAD IN LARGE LOAVES BUT ONLY IN THIN WAFERS: Our Rabbis taught: Beth Shammai say: One may not bake thick bread on Passover,⁴ but Beth Hillel permit it; and how much is regarded as thick bread? — Said Rab Huna: A handbreadth, for so we find with respect to the Shewbread [that the loaves were] a handbreadth [in thickness].⁵ To this Rab Joseph demurred: If they allowed⁶ this for experts,⁷ did they also permit it to non-experts?⁸ If they allowed it in the case of well-kneaded bread,⁹ are they also to allow it with respect to bread which is not well-kneaded?¹⁰ If they allowed it in the case of dry wood,¹¹ would they allow it in the case of moist wood?¹² If they allowed it in the case of a hot oven,¹³ would they allow it in the case of a cold oven?¹⁴ If they allowed it in the case of a metal oven,¹⁵ would they allow it in the case of a clay oven?¹⁶ Said R. Jeremiah b. Abba: I asked my teacher (viz., Rab) privately, what is meant by ‘thick bread’ [and he replied:] a large quantity of bread.¹⁷ Others say: R. Jeremiah b. Abba said in Rab's name: I asked my teacher (viz., Rabbi the Holy),¹⁸ privately, what is meant by ‘thick bread’, [and he replied:] a large quantity of bread. And why do they call it ‘thick bread’? — Because there is more kneading to be done.¹⁹ Alternatively: In the district of this Tanna they called a large quantity of bread thick bread — Consider: [the reason is] that he labours unnecessarily.²⁰ [Then] why teach [particularly] about Passover, this should hold good of other Festivals as well? — It is even so, only the Tanna was dealing with Passover. It was taught likewise: Beth Shammai say: One may not bake a large quantity of bread on a Festival, but Beth Hillel permit it.

MISHNAH. HE²¹ FURTHERMORE GAVE THREE LENIENT RULINGS:²² ONE MAY SWEEP A DINING-ROOM²³ AND PUT THE SPICES²⁴ [ON THE FIRE] ON A FESTIVAL, AND ONE MAY PREPARE A ‘HELMETED’ KID ON PASSOVER NIGHT.²⁵ BUT THE SAGES FORBID THESE.²⁶

GEMARA. R. Assi said: The dispute is [only with respect] to perfuming [clothes],²⁷ but when it is for smelling all agree that it is permitted. An objection was raised: One may not sweep a dining-room on a Festival, but in the house of Rabban Gamaliel they did Sweep. R. Eleazar b. Zadok said: Frequently I accompanied my father to the house of Rabban Gamaliel and [observed that] they did not sweep the dining-room on a Festival but they swept it on the eve of the Festival and covered it with sheets. On the morrow when guests came they removed the sheets with the result that the room was automatically swept. They said to him: If so, it is permitted to do the same even on the Sabbath. And one may not put the spices [on the fire] on a Festival, but in the house of Rabban Gamaliel they did put. Said R. Eleazar b. Zadok: Frequently I accompanied my father to the house of Rabban Gamaliel and [observed that] they did not put the spices [on the fire] on a Festival, but they used to bring in iron censers and fill them with the perfume of the incense on the eve of the Festival and stop up the vent-holes on the eve of the Festival. On the morrow when guests came they opened the vent-holes with the result that the room was automatically perfumed. They said to him: If so, it is permitted to do the same even on a Sabbath.²⁸ But if stated it was thus stated: R. Assi said: The dispute is when it is for smelling, but when it is for perfuming [clothes] it is forbidden. The scholars asked: May one fumigate²⁹ [fruits] on a Festival? R. Jeremiah b. Abba in Rab's name says: It is forbidden;³⁰ but Samuel says: It is permissible. R. Huna says: It is forbidden because he extinguishes [the charcoal].³¹ Said R. Nahman to him: Let the Master say because he kindles³² [the spices]? — He answered him: At first he extinguishes and afterwards he kindles.³³ Rab Judah says: On charcoal fire it is forbidden,³⁴

(1) The egg laid on the first day may not be eaten on the second. V. supra 6a.

(2) In which case the New Year's Festival will begin on the second day.

(3) V. supra 6a where the words ‘in the name of Rab’ are added.

(4) It was presumed that the reason is lest the dough become leavened during its preparation.

(5) V. Men. 57a.

(6) Lit., ‘said’.

- (7) I.e., priests who were acquainted with the preparation of the Shewbread. Cf. Yoma 38a.
- (8) Inexperienced bakers might allow the thick dough to become leavened.
- (9) Such as was essential for the Shewbread (Men. 76a). Well-kneaded dough does not easily become sour.
- (10) There is no guarantee that the dough in private houses would be well-kneaded.
- (11) Such as was used in the Temple (v. Ta'an 31a) and which gives a clear fire and bakes quickly.
- (12) Which smoulders and does not give forth much heat.
- (13) The oven in the Temple was heated daily and never got quite cold.
- (14) I.e., an oven that was allowed to get cold and afterwards heated.
- (15) Such as was used in the Temple (v. Zeb. 95b) and which gives forth good heat and keeps the heat long.
- (16) Surely not! — In the Temple all these favourable conditions were present but they might be absent elsewhere.
- (17) More than is necessary for the Festival, thus doing more work than he should.
- (18) For this title of Rabbi Judah, the Prince, cf. Shab. p. 118b.
- (19) Lit., 'there is increase in kneading it'.
- (20) And not because the dough might become leaven as previously presumed.
- (21) Rabban Gamaliel.
- (22) Lit., 'said three things for leniency'.
- (23) Lit., 'couches' used as dining tables.
- (24) For the purpose of perfuming the room. V. Ber. (Cohen) p. 279 n. 6.
- (25) I.e., a kid roasted whole with its knees and inwards hanging outside. The Passover-offering was roasted in that manner in the days of the Temple; consequently the Sages forbade this after the destruction of the Temple, since sacrifices might not be brought then. Rabban Gamaliel, however, permits it.
- (26) They forbid sweeping because of the filling up of cavities, and they forbid spices because this only applies to epicureans or to people possessing repugnant odours, cf. Keth. 7a (Rashi).
- (27) It is then that the Sages prohibit because the perfuming of the clothes is not directly one's personal pleasure.
- (28) The Rabbis would never have disagreed in such a case. Since they do disagree, however, R. Gamaliel must have permitted the putting of spices on the fire on the Festival. They must then have assumed either that R. Eleazar b. Zadok's memory was at fault or that R. Gamaliel, while in truth holding that it was permitted, did not act on his view out of deference to the Sages who were in a majority. Incidentally we see that the Sages prohibit it even for smelling.
- (29) For eating purposes, by placing them over spices on burning coals.
- (30) Because it is only an epicurean luxury.
- (31) When sprinkling the spices over it.
- (32) And kindling is forbidden unless it is for the general preparation of food.
- (33) The first effect of his action is to extinguish (i.e. dim) the coals; that is followed by the spices catching fire; R. Nahman quoted the first only.
- (34) For there is both extinguishing and kindling.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 23a

on [hot] sherds¹ it is permitted;² but Rabbah maintains: On [hot] sherds it is also forbidden because he generates a fragrance [in the sherd].³ Rabba and R. Joseph both say: It is forbidden to invert a box [of aromatics] on silken garments on a Festival, because he is producing a fragrance [in the garments]. And why is [this case] different from [the Baraitha]: One may rub it [aromatic wood] and smell it and one may nip off a bit of it and smell it?⁴ — There the fragrance is indeed present and one only increases the smell, [whilst] here he produces a fragrance [in the garments].

Raba [however] says: On charcoal too it is permitted, [for it is] just as roasting meat on a charcoal [fire].⁵ R. Gebiha from Be Kathil⁶ expounded at the door of the Exilarch: Kittura⁷ is allowed. Amemar said to him: What [is meant by] Kittura? If it means the plaiting of sleeves, [creasing of garments] then it is a craftsman's work;⁸ and if [it means] to fumigate, it is [surely] forbidden for he indeed extinguishes! — Said R. Ashi to him: In truth [it means] to fumigate, but it is analogous to roasting meat on a charcoal fire. Some teach: Amemar said to him: What is [meant by] Kittura? If it means the plaiting of sleeves, then it is a craftsman's work; and if [it means] to fumigate, it is [surely] forbidden, for he produces a perfume! — Said R. Ashi: I told it to him, and in the name of a great man did I tell it to him: In truth [it means] to fumigate, but it is analogous to roasting meat on a charcoal fire.

AND ONE MAY PREPARE A 'HELMETED' KID: It was taught: R. Jose said Theodosius of Rome introduced among the community of Rome the practice of eating a helmeted kid on Passover night. They [the Rabbis] sent [word] to him: If you were not Theodosius, we would have condemned you to excommunication, for you are causing the children of Israel to eat consecrated [animals] outside of Jerusalem. Do you really mean consecrated [animals]?⁹ — Say rather: [That which is] similar to consecrated [animals].¹⁰

MISHNAH. THREE THINGS R. ELEAZAR B. AZARIAH PERMITTED AND THE SAGES FORBADE: HIS COW WAS LED OUT [ON A SABBATH] WITH A LEATHER STRAP BETWEEN HER HORNS,¹¹ AND [HE ALSO RULED THAT] ONE MAY CURRY CATTLE ON A FESTIVAL,¹² AND ONE MAY GRIND PEPPER IN A PEPPER MILL.¹³ R. JUDAH SAYS: ONE MAY NOT CURRY CATTLE ON A FESTIVAL BECAUSE IT MAKES A WOUND THEREBY, BUT ONE MAY COMB;¹⁴ BUT THE SAGES SAY: ONE MAY NEITHER CURRY NOR COMB.

GEMARA. Shall it be said that R. Eleazar b. Azariah had [only] one cow, surely Rab — some say, Rab Judah in Rab's name — said: R. Eleazar b. Azariah had given as tithe thirteen thousand calves yearly from his herd? — It was taught: It was not his cow but of a neighbouring lady, and because he did not restrain her, it [is referred to as his].¹⁵

AND ONE MAY CURRY CATTLE ON A FESTIVAL. Our Rabbis taught: What is currying and what is combing? Currying is done with a small toothed [comb] and causes wounds; combing is done with a large toothed [comb] and does not cause wounds; and there are three views with respect to this: R. Judah maintains: An unintentional act¹⁶ is forbidden, but currying is done with fine teeth and causes wounds, [while] combing is done with large teeth and does not cause wounds, and we do not preventively prohibit combing on account of currying. The Sages are likewise of R. Judah's opinion that an unintentional act is forbidden, but they preventively prohibit combing on account of currying;¹⁷ and R. Eleazar b. Azariah holds as R. Simeon who says: An unintentional act is permitted, [hence] both currying and combing is allowed.

Raba in the name of R. Nahman in the name of Samuel said: — some say, R. Nahman himself said — the halachah is as R. Simeon, since R. Eleazar b. Azariah agrees with him. Said Raba to R. Nahman: Let the Master say the halachah is as R. Judah since the Sages agree with him? — He replied to him: I hold as R. Simeon, and furthermore R. Eleazar b. Azariah agrees with him.

(1) Lit., 'on a fragment of pottery'.

(2) For extinguishing does not apply here and the kindling is performed in an unusual way, which is not prohibited Biblically (Rashi).

(3) I.e., he creates something new in the sherd which was absent before, and this the Rabbis forbade.

(4) Infra 33b.

(5) Which is permitted, although here too there is extinguishing and kindling while the odour of the meat enters the coals.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 23b

MISHNAH. A PEPPER-MILL IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO DEFILEMENT ON ACCOUNT OF [IT CONSISTING OF] THREE [SEPARATE] UTENSILS;¹ ON ACCOUNT OF A RECEPTACLE,² ON ACCOUNT OF A METAL UTENSIL³ AND ON ACCOUNT OF A SIFTING UTENSIL.⁴

GEMARA. It was taught: The lower part [becomes defiled] as a receptacle; the middle part as a sifting utensil; the upper part as a metal vessel.

MISHNAH. A CHILD'S GO-CART IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO THE DEFILEMENT OF MIDRAS,⁵ AND IT MAY BE HANDLED ON SABBATH,⁶ AND IT MAY BE PULLED ALONG ONLY ON MATTING.⁷ R. JUDAH SAYS: NO ARTICLES MAY BE DRAGGED [ALONG THE FLOOR] EXCEPT A WAGON BECAUSE IT [ONLY] PRESSES⁸ [THE EARTH] DOWN.

GEMARA. A CHILD'S GO-CART IS SUSCEPTIBLE TO THE DEFILEMENT OF MIDRAS, because he [the child] supports himself thereon;⁹ AND IT MAY BE HANDLED ON SABBATH, because it is considered a utensil;

AND IT MAY BE PULLED ALONG ONLY ON MATTING; only on matting but not on the earth. What is the reason? Because he makes a rut [furrow]:¹⁰ the author of this is [therefore] R. Judah who says: An unintentional act is forbidden; for if it were R. Simeon, surely he maintains: An unintentional act is permitted; for it was taught: R. Simeon says: A man may drag along a bed, stool or bench [on the floor], provided he has no intention of making a furrow. [But] read the last clause: R. JUDAH SAYS: NOTHING MAY BE DRAGGED [ALONG THE FLOOR] ON THE SABBATH EXCEPT A WAGON BECAUSE IT [ONLY] PRESSES [THE EARTH] DOWN; Only because it presses it down but it does not make a furrow? — There are two Tannaim¹¹ who differ as to the opinion of R. Judah.

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT CATCH FISH FROM A FISHPOND ON A FESTIVAL¹² NOR GIVE THEM FOOD,¹³ BUT ONE MAY CATCH VENISON OR GAME FROM ANIMAL ENCLOSURES AND ONE MAY PUT FOOD BEFORE THEM. RABBAN SIMEON R. GAMALIEL SAYS: NOT ALL ENCLOSURES ARE ALIKE. THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE:

- (1) So that even if one part were missing the rest counts as complete utensils and can become unclean (Rashi). Tosaf: if one part became defiled the other parts are not affected.
 (2) In contrast to flat wooden vessels which have no hollow for receiving and cannot become unclean. V. Kelim. XI, 1.
 (3) V. Kelim. XI, 2. Even a flat metal utensil can become unclean.
 (4) V. Kelim. XVI, 3, XVII, 4.
 (5) V. Glos.
 (6) Since it really is a utensil. That which does not rank as a utensil may not be handled.
 (7) In order not to make a rut. Their floors were earthen.
 (8) But does not turn it up into a furrow.
 (9) It is therefore considered a stool.

(10) I.e., he breaks the surface of the ground, being in the nature of ploughing.

(11) One holds that a go-cart is regarded as any other piece of furniture and may not be dragged along because it may skid and turn up the earth as a plough, and the other holds the wheels only press down the earth but do not make a rut.

(12) Because this could have been done before the Festival.

(13) Because they can look after themselves.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 24a

WHENEVER CHASING IS STILL NECESSARY¹ IT IS FORBIDDEN² BUT WHERE CHASING IS NOT STILL NECESSARY IT IS PERMITTED.

GEMARA. Now the scholars pointed out a contradiction: One may not catch [animals] from enclosures of venison and game on a Festival nor may one put food before them. Thus the rulings on venison are contradictory and those on game are contradictory. As for the rulings on venison, it is well and there is no difficulty, one agreeing with R. Judah, the other with the Sages. For we have learnt: R. Judah says: If [on a Sabbath] one hunts a bird into a tower-trap or a gazelle into a house he is culpable³ — (only [if he drives it] into a house is he culpable but not into an enclosure).⁴ But the Sages say: [If he drives] a bird into a tower-trap or a gazelle [even] into a garden, a court or an enclosure [he is culpable].⁵ But the rulings on game are contradictory! And if you say, this also presents no difficulty, for the one treats of a roofed enclosure and the other of an unroofed enclosure, — surely a house is like a roofed enclosure and [yet] according to both R. Judah and the Sages [he is liable] only [if he drove] a bird into a tower-trap but not into a house! — Said Rabbah b. Huna: We treat here⁶ of a wild bird which does not submit to taming.⁷ For the School of R. Ishmael taught: Why is it called free-bird, because it dwells in the house as in the fields.⁸ Now that you have come to this [explanation],⁹ there is no contradiction in the rulings on venison, [for] the one refers to a small enclosure; the other, to a large enclosure.¹⁰ What is 'a small enclosure' [and] what is 'a large enclosure'? — Said R. Ashi: Whenever one runs after it [the animal] and catches it with one lunge,¹¹ It is a small enclosure, otherwise it is a large enclosure. Alternatively: If there are many corners [whither it can escape] it is a large enclosure, otherwise it is a small enclosure. Alternatively: whenever the shadow of one wall falls upon the other,¹² it is a small enclosure, otherwise it is a large enclosure.

RABBAN SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAYS: NOT ALL ENCLOSURES ARE ALIKE etc. R. Joseph said in the name of Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel. Abaye said to him: 'The halachah is [etc.],' from which it would follow that they [the Sages] dispute it!¹³ — He said to him: What practical difference does it make to you?¹⁴ — He replied to him: Is a lesson to be recited as a sing-song?¹⁵

THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: WHENEVER CHASING IS STILL NECESSARY, etc.: What is meant by CHASING IS STILL NECESSARY? Said R. Joseph in the name of Samuel: Whensoever one has to say, 'Bring a trap so that we may catch it'.¹⁶ Said Abaye to him: But what of geese and hens where one [also] says, 'Bring a net so that we may catch it', and yet it was taught: He who catches geese, hens or Herodian doves¹⁷ he is free! Said Rabbah son of R. Huna in the name of Samuel: These come at night into their coops [for roosting],¹⁸ but those do not come at night into their coops. But what of doves of a dovecote and doves of a loft which [likewise] come at night into their coops, and yet it was taught: He who catches doves of a dovecote or doves of a loft or birds nesting in nests¹⁹ or in a residence²⁰ is liable? — Rather, said Rabbah son of R. Huna in the name of Samuel: These come at night into their coops and their feeding is your obligation,²¹ but those come at night into their coops but you are not obliged to feed them. R. Mari says: These are in the habit of fleeing, but those make no attempt to flee. But surely all of them make an attempt to flee! — I mean they are wont to flee to their nests.²²

MISHNAH. IF TRAPS FOR WILD ANIMALS, BIRDS OR FISH WERE SET ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL, ONE MAY NOT TAKE FROM THEM ON THE FESTIVAL UNLESS HE KNOWS THAT THEY WERE [ALREADY] CAUGHT ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL; AND IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT A CERTAIN GENTILE BROUGHT FISH TO RABBAN GAMALIEL WHO SAID: THEY ARE PERMITTED, BUT I HAVE NO WISH TO ACCEPT [THEM] FROM HIM.²³

GEMARA. You quote an incident to contradict [the teaching of the Mishnah]! — There is a lacuna in the text and learn thus: When a doubt prevails whether it is in mukan,²⁴ it is forbidden, but Rabban Gamaliel Permits it: AND IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT A CERTAIN GENTILE BROUGHT FISH TO RABBAN GAMALIEL, WHO SAID: THEY ARE PERMITTED BUT I HAVE NO WISH TO ACCEPT [THEM] FROM HIM.

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is not as Rabban Gamaliel. Some recited it [the statement of Samuel] with reference to the [following] teaching: When a doubt prevails whether it was mukan, Rabban Gamaliel permits and R. Joshua prohibits. Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as R. Joshua.

Some [again] recite it with reference to the following teaching:

- (1) Lit., 'whenever the hunting is wanting', i.e., if the enclosure is large and great effort in pursuing the game is requisite.
- (2) Because it is regarded as hunting.
- (3) For having transgressed the Sabbath because these are now quite caught. Hunting is forbidden on the Sabbath, but liability is not incurred unless the act of hunting is complete and the animal actually caught.
- (4) For there is still effort required to catch the animal.
- (5) V. Shab. 106a. Thus all agree that the chasing of a bird into a house does not involve liability, the bird not being regarded as caught.
- (6) With respect to chasing a bird on Sabbath.
- (7) Even when chased into a house it cannot easily be captured.
- (8) Even when in the house it is not domesticated.
- (9) That the apparent contradiction in the rulings on game may be reconciled without assuming a controversy of Tannaim.
- (10) And both rulings state the view of the Sages.
- (11) The space being too small to allow escape.
- (12) The walls were of ordinary height.
- (13) Which is not the case, for the Sages too draw a distinction between a large enclosure and a small one.
- (14) Since the halachah remains true.
- (15) Whether correct or not.
- (16) I.e., means are still required for catching it.
- (17) [Domesticated indoor doves, supposed to have been bred by Herod. V. Krauss, T.A. II, p. 138].
- (18) Where it is easy to catch them, and therefore they are regarded as permanently caught.
- (19) Lit., 'pitcher-shaped (vessels)' put up in walls or cornices as birds' nests. V. fast., s.v. טפיה .
- (20) [Var. lec. (a) 'or residences'; (b) 'or pits', v. infra p. 127, n. 16.]
- (21) Therefore they are regarded as any domestic animal which is always ready for food.
- (22) So that great effort is needed before they are caught.
- (23) Because he did not like the man.
- (24) I.e., prepared before the Festival. V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 24b

One may slaughter [animals] out of enclosures¹ on a Festival but not out of hunting-nets or gins;² R.

Simeon b. Eleazar says: If he came on the eve of the Festival and finds them [the nets or gins]³ damaged, [then] it is certain that they were caught on the eve of the Festival and [consequently] they are permitted; but if he came on the Festival and finds them damaged, it is certain that they were caught on the Festival and are [therefore] prohibited. Now this is self-contradictory. [First] you say: If he came on the eve of the Festival and finds them damaged it is certain that they were caught on the eve of the Festival. Hence it is only because he came and found them damaged; but if a doubt exists, they are forbidden. Consider then the latter clause: If he came on the Festival and finds them damaged, it is certain that they were caught on the Festival: Thus it is only because he came and found them damaged [on the Festival]; but if a doubt exists [then I say] they were caught on the eve of the Festival and are [therefore] permitted? — This is what he means: If he came on the eve of the Festival and found them damaged, it is certain that they were caught on the eve of the Festival and are permitted; but if a doubt exists it is regarded as if they had been caught on the Festival and they are forbidden. Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as R. Simeon b. Eleazar.

WHO SAID: THEY ARE PERMITTED. For what purpose are they permitted? — Rab says: They are permitted to be received,⁴ and Levi says: They are permitted to be eaten. Said Rab: A man should never absent himself from the Academy even for a single hour, for I and Levi were both present when Rabbi taught this lesson. In the evening he said: They are permitted to be eaten; but on the [following] morning he said: They are permitted to be received. I who was present in the Academy retracted, [but] Levi who was not present in the Academy did not retract.

An objection is raised: If a Gentile brings a present to an Israelite, even slimy fish or fruit [gathered] on the same day, they are permitted.⁵ This is well on the view that they are permitted to be received.⁶ But on the view that they are permitted to be eaten, is then fruit [picked] on the same day permitted to be eaten?⁷ — Now even according to your reasoning, is then fruit [gathered] on the same day permitted to be handled? But we treat here of fish that are red at the gills⁸ and of fruit preserved in leaves.⁹ And why does he call them ‘of the same day’? Because they are [as fresh] as [if they had been gathered] on the same day. R. Papa said: The law is: If a Gentile brought a present¹⁰ to an Israelite on a Festival, [then] if there is of that kind still attached to the ground it is prohibited,¹¹ and in the evening it is also prohibited for as long a time as it takes to gather;¹² but if there is nothing of the same kind attached to the earth, [then] within the tehum¹³ it is permitted,

(1) Since they are already there on the eve of the Festival, when they are regarded as fully caught. Lit., ‘dykes’, so called because they contain pools of water for the animals to drink.

(2) Because they may have been caught on the day of the Festival.

(3) [I.e., the long ropes or cords to which the nets proper are attached and which tend to become loosened when an animal is caught at the far distant end].

(4) I.e., to be handled, but not to be eaten.

(5) This teaching is evidently in accordance with Rabban Gamaliel.

(6) For although it is almost definite that they have been gathered on the Festival, yet he permits them only to be received.

(7) Surely not!

(8) They are fresh but have been caught for some time.

(9) To keep them fresh, but which had really been gathered before the Festival.

(10) Of freshly gathered fruit.

(11) Since they were possibly gathered on the Festival.

(12) In order not to benefit from work performed on the Festival.

(13) V. Glos. I.e., if the fruit were brought from within the Sabbath limit.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 25a

but outside the tehum it is prohibited. And what is brought [from outside the tehum] for one

Israelite¹ is permitted for another Israelite.² Rabbah son of R. Huna said in Rab's name: If one stops up a pond [from a stream] on the eve of a Festival³ and on the following morning he finds fish therein, they are permitted.⁴ Said R. Hisda: From the words of our Master⁵ we learn [that] if a wild beast takes up its abode in an orchard, predetermination [of the young for the Festival] is not necessary.⁶ Said R. Nahman: Our colleague has fallen among the great.⁷ (Some say: Rabbah son of R. Huna said: From the words of our Master we learn [that] if an animal takes up its abode in an orchard predetermination is not necessary. Said R. Nahman: The son of our colleague has fallen among the great — There he has not performed an action⁸ [whereas] here he did perform an action.)⁹ Does it¹⁰ then not require [special] predetermination?¹¹ Surely it was taught: If an animal takes up its abode in all orchard it requires predetermination, and a free bird¹² must be tied by her wings¹³ so that it should not be mistaken for its mother, and this they averred in the name of Shemaiah and Abtalion! — This is [indeed] a refutation.¹⁴ Does it then require predetermination? Surely it was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel agree that if he determined on doves within the nest and finds them in front of the nest they are forbidden;¹⁵ this only applies to doves of a dovecote or doves of a loft and birds nesting in nests and pits;¹⁶ but geese, hens and Herodian doves¹⁷ and animals having their abodes in orchards are permitted and do not require predetermination; and a free-bird must be tied by its wings so that it should not be mistaken for its mother; and those that were tied up and those that have been handled,¹⁸ [if found] in pits, houses, dykes or trenches are permitted,¹⁹ but [if] on trees they are forbidden lest he climb up and pluck [fruit at the same time]; and those that are tied and those that have been handled, wherever they are found²⁰ are forbidden on account of robbery!²¹ — Said R. Nahman: There is no difficulty: the one applies to the young bird,²² the other to its mother.²³ Is then determination [alone] sufficient for the mother-bird; it still requires to be caught?²⁴ Rather said R. Nahman b. Isaac: Both treat of the young, but the one refers to a garden near the city²⁵ and the other refers to a garden which is not situated near [the city].

MISHNAH. ONE MAY SLAUGHTER [ON A FESTIVAL] AN ANIMAL AT THE POINT OF DEATH ONLY IF THERE IS TIME ENOUGH ON THAT DAY TO EAT THEREOF AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE OF ROASTED FLESH.²⁶ R. AKIBA SAYS: EVEN [IF THERE IS ONLY TIME TO EAT] AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE OF RAW FLESH [TAKEN] FROM THE PLACE OF SLAUGHTER.²⁷ IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT²⁸ IN THE FIELD, HE MAY NOT BRING IT IN ON A POLE OR A BARROW,²⁹ BUT HE BRINGS IT IN PIECE BY PIECE IN HIS HAND.

GEMARA. Rami b. Abba said: Flaying and cutting up [is required] in the case of a burnt-offering,³⁰ and the same holds good with respect to butchers:³¹ the Torah teaches in this good breeding³² that one should not eat flesh before flaying and cutting up. What does he inform us?³³ If I were to say that it is to reject the opinion of R. Huna, who said: An animal, when alive, stands in the presumption of a forbidden object until you ascertain how it was slaughtered;³⁴ once it is slaughtered, it stands in the presumption of being permitted until it becomes known to you how it became trefa³⁵ — but surely we have learnt in our Mishnah as R. Huna, for we have learnt: R. Akiba Says: EVEN [IF THERE IS ONLY TIME TO EAT] AS MUCH AS AN OLIVE OR RAW FLESH [TAKEN] FROM THE PLACE OF SLAUGHTER; does it not mean literally 'from the place where it is slaughtered'?³⁶ — No, it [means] 'from the place where it digests the food'.³⁷ But R. Hiyya taught: [It means] literally 'from the place where it is slaughtered'? Rather, Rami b. Abba

(1) Who may not use it

(2) Since the law of tehum is only Rabbinical, the Rabbis were lenient (Rashi).

(3) So that no fish can come in.

(4) Although he did not know before the Festival that they had been trapped, for the fish in the pond are regarded as having been predetermined for use before the Festival.

(5) I.e., Rab.

(6) [They themselves are however forbidden since they need chasing, Asheri.]

- (7) He has made a statement about which there is great controversy.
- (8) The animal took up its abode of its own accord without the owner of the park enclosing it.
- (9) The act of stopping up. An action is a tacit predetermination.
- (10) An animal that took up its abode in an orchard.
- (11) As inferred by R. Hisda.
- (12) Living in a house as well as in a field.
- (13) [This kind of bird is very small so that the mother and its young are alike, hence a sign is necessary].
- (14) Of R. Hisda.
- (15) V. supra 11a.
- (16) So Rashi: Cur. edd.: 'And in a residence'.
- (17) V. supra p. 124, n. 1.
- (18) Before the Festival, and their owner recognizes them.
- (19) On the Festival.
- (20) On public property, even not on a Festival.
- (21) For the first person that handled them acquired ownership to them.
- (22) Which cannot escape.
- (23) Its mother, which is larger, requires predetermination.
- (24) And should be forbidden on the Festival.
- (25) The owner naturally would draw from that, and therefore he is regarded as having tacitly predetermined thereon.
- (26) Otherwise it would be preparing food on a Festival for the following day, which is forbidden.
- (27) I.e., from the neck without first having to flay the animal and cut it up.
- (28) Any animal.
- (29) This is not a way of paying due regard to the sanctity of the Festival.
- (30) Before the animal is placed on the altar; v. Lev. I, 6.
- (31) Before they sell the meat the animal must be flayed and cut up.
- (32) 'The way of the land'.
- (33) Does he merely teach good manners or state a prohibition? In the latter case, the reason would be that the animal might be found trefa (v. Glos.) when cut up, whence it follows that he regards an animal as a doubtful trefa even if nothing has been seen to cause this doubt.
- (34) The flesh is forbidden so long as it is not known that the animal was slaughtered according to prescribed ritual.
- (35) V. Glos. If a cause of trefa is discovered after shechitah, e.g., the lung is pierced, and it is not known whether this happened before shechitah or after, the animal is permitted. Cf. Hul. 9a. Thus he holds that we entertain no doubt at all once the animal is ritually slaughtered.
- (36) I.e., from the neck where flaying of the animal is not required. Hence we see that it is permissible to eat of the animal before it is flayed and cut up to discover any internal injury.
- (37) The word טובה has the wider significance 'to destroy and grind up', and under the term בית טביחתה the digestive organs are to be included, and in order to arrive at them, the animal must be cut up merely teaches us good manners, as it was taught:¹ A man should not begin to eat leek or onion from the top side, but from the leaves; and if he did eat, he is a glutton.² Likewise, a man should not drink his cup of wine in one draught; and if he did so drink, he is a swiller. Our Rabbis taught: He who drinks his beaker in one draught is greedy, in two [draughts] is well-mannered, in three [draughts] is haughty. Rami b. Abba further said: The ivy³ cuts off the feet⁴ of criminals;⁵ the [law concerning] young trees⁶ cuts off the feet of butchers⁷ and of those cohabiting with menstruous women;⁸ the lupine⁹ will cut off the feet of the enemies¹⁰ of Israel, for it is said: 'And the children of Israel again did that which has evil in the sight of the Lord, and served the Baalim, and the Ashtaroth, and the gods of Aram, and the gods of Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philistines, and they forsook the Lord, and served him not.'¹¹ From the implication of 'and they forsook the Lord', do I not know that 'they served Him not'? Then why does the text say, 'and they served him not'? Said R. Eleazar: The Holy One, blessed be He, said:

My children have not even treated Me like the lupine¹² which is boiled seven times and eaten as a dessert.

A Tanna taught in the name of R. Meir: Why was the Torah given to Israel? Because they are impetuous.¹³ The School of R. Ishmael taught: 'At His right hand was a fiery law unto them';¹⁴ the Holy One, blessed be He, said: These are worthy to be given the fiery law. Some say: The laws of these are like fire, for had not the Law been given to Israel no nation or tongue could withstand them. And this is what R. Simeon b. Lakish said: There are three distinguished in strength [fierce]: Israel among the nations,¹⁵ the dog among animals, [and] the cock among birds. Some say: Also the goat among small cattle. And some say: Also the caper-bush¹⁶ among shrubs.

IF HE SLAUGHTERED IT IN THE FIELD, HE MAY NOT BRING IT IN ON A POLE. Our Rabbis taught: A blind man may not go out [on a Festival] with his staff,¹⁷ nor a shepherd with his wallet, neither may a man or a woman go out in a palanquin. But it is not so! For R. Jacob b. Idi sent [word]: In our neighbourhood was an old man who was carried in his sedan-chair, and when they came and asked R. Joshua b. Levi [about this], he said: When a number of people need him it is permitted. And our Teachers relied on the words of Ahi Shakia who related: I brought¹⁸ R. Huna from Hini to Shili¹⁹ and from Shili to Hini; and R. Nahman b. Isaac narrated: I carried Mar Samuel from the sun into the shade and from the shade into the sun? — There it is as the reason stated: When a number of people need him it is permitted.

R. Nahman said to Hanna b. Adda, Zion's messenger:²⁰ When you go hither make a circuit and go over the Promontory of Tyre²¹ and visit R. Jacob b. Idi and ask him: What do you say with respect to a palanquin? Before he came there, R. Jacob b. Idi departed this life. When he arrived, he found R. Zerika. He asked him: How do you rule with respect to a palanquin? — He replied: Thus did R. Ammi say: [It is permissible] provided that he is not carried on the shoulders. What means 'provided that he is not carried on the shoulders'? — Said R. Joseph the son of Raba: By means of alanki.²² But it is not so, for R. Nahman permitted [his wife] Jaltha to be carried in a sedan-chair by means of alanki? — It is different with Jaltha for she was nervous.²³ Amemar and Mar Zutra were carried on the shoulders²⁴ on the Sabbath [preceding] the Festival²⁵ on account of nervousness, and some say, on account of troubling the public.²⁶

MISHNAH. IF A FIRSTLING²⁷ FELL INTO A PIT,²⁸ R. JUDAH SAYS: LET AN EXPERT GO DOWN AND INSPECT [IT];

- (1) For we find even Tannaim giving instructions with respect to good manners.
 - (2) Likewise he who eats from the animal before it is flayed is a glutton.
 - (3) Used for boundary marks. The ivy is used for landmarks because its roots go straight down and do not obtrude into neighbouring land.
 - (4) I.e., convicts.
 - (5) Who perpetrate the removal of such landmarks.
 - (6) V. Lev. XIX, 23.
 - (7) Who eat of the flesh before the animal has been flayed and cut up and examined.
 - (8) I.e., before the woman has taken the ritual bath. As patience is required until the fourth year before the fruit is eaten, so We are to have patience and wait until the proper time before enjoying meat or conjugal privilege.
 - (9) The lupine is so bitter that it is not edible until it has been cooked seven times. So Israel has worshipped the seven idols mentioned in the following verse and was seven times chastened without amending.
 - (10) A euphemism for Israel itself.
 - (11) Judg. X, 6.
 - (12) The lupine after seven boilings is sweet, but although Israel has repented seven times and been forgiven, they still rebel and make me bitter towards them again.
 - (13) The Law was to discipline them.

(14) Deut. XXXIII, 2.

(15) But the Law tempers their strength.

(16) Because of its rapid growing, for as soon as it is plucked it grows again. V. Shab. 30b.

(17) Because of the disrespect to the Festival, since this is his everyday practice.

(18) In a palanquin.

(19) Hini and Shili are places in Babylon near Sura situated very close to each other.

(20) He was so called because he frequently travelled to Palestine (Rash). Or, perhaps he was something like our modern משו"ק Palestine at this time was in a decaying state and needed support from abroad.

(26) Who would have to stand up and wait until these teachers made their way slowly through the crowd to the platform. But by being carried shoulder high (or by means of alanki) they were quickly carried through the gathering; cf., however, Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 30, n. 4.

(27) Which may be slaughtered in post-Temple days for consumption by priests only when it has a blemish which would disqualify it for the altar. V. Deut. XV, 19-22.

(28) On a Festival, before the condition of its blemish was exactly known, and it is feared lest it die there.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 26a

IF IT HAD A BLEMISH¹ HE MAY BRING IT UP AND SLAUGHTER IT,² BUT IF NOT, HE MAY NOT SLAUGHTER IT. R. SIMEON SAYS: WHENEVER ITS BLEMISH WAS NOT OBSERVED ON THE DAY BEFORE THE FESTIVAL, IT IS NOT MUKAN.³

GEMARA. Wherein do they differ?⁴ If we are to say that they differ as to whether one may examine blemishes [on a Festival], R. Judah holding: One may examine blemishes on a Festival, while R. Simeon maintains: One may not examine blemishes on a Festival, then let them dispute whether one may examine blemishes in general [on a Festival]!⁵ — It is especially necessary [to teach this] with respect to a firstling that fell into a pit; [for] you might have thought that on account of suffering of animals one might have recourse to an artifice and bring it up [from the pit] in accordance with R. Joshua,⁶ so he informs us [that it is not so]. If so, instead of HE MAY NOT SLAUGHTER IT, it should be stated, 'He may not bring it up⁷ and slaughter it!' — This [teaching] is necessary [only] where he transgressed and brought it [the animal] up; you might think that he may slaughter it, so he informs us [that it is not so]. [But how could he possibly] slaughter it? Surely it is without blemish! — This is necessary [concerning the case] where it received a blemish.⁸ But it is mukzeh!⁹ — Rather, [it treats of a case] where it received a temporary [transient] blemish on the eve of the Festival and now [on the Festival] it turned into a permanent blemish; you might have thought that he [the owner] had set his mind upon it¹⁰ and he may therefore slaughter it; so he informs us¹¹ [that it is not so]. Our Rabbis taught: A firstling without blemish that fell into a pit. R. Judah the Prince¹² says: Let an expert go down [the pit] and examine it; if it has sustained a blemish, he may bring [it] up and slaughter [it],¹³ but if not, he may not slaughter [it]. R. Simeon b. Menasia said to him: They [the Rabbis]¹⁴ indeed said: One may not examine blemishes on a Festival. How [is this¹⁵ to be explained]? If it received a blemish on the eve of the Festival,¹⁶ one may not examine it on the Festival;¹⁷ if it received a blemish

(1) Rashi: If the firstling sustained a defect before the Festival, but it was not known until now whether the defect was such as to disqualify it for the altar.

(2) For its owner probably intended before the Festival to slaughter it on the Festival.

(3) I.e., no expert may go down to examine it, because the pronouncing of the blemish by the expert is regarded by R. Simeon as preparing a vessel, since before the examination of the expert it could not be used on the Festival, or as sitting in judgment, which is not permitted on a Festival (Rashi), v. infra 36a.

(4) It cannot be that they are disputing here with respect to mukzeh, because we have previously learnt that R. Judah prohibits mukzeh and R. Simeon permits it.

(5) Why particularly about a firstling that has fallen into a pit.

(6) V. Shab. 117b.

(7) Since on the present hypothesis this is the main purpose of the teaching.

(8) Through its fall.

(9) Since the firstling had no blemish before the Festival it may not be slaughtered on the Festival on account of mukzeh. V. Glos.

(10) On account of its temporary blemish.

(11) Since the blemish was of a temporary nature, it is regarded as if the firstling had no blemish at all and cannot be intended to be slaughtered.

(12) [Not to be confused with R. Judah in our Mishnah who is R. Judah b. Ila'i].

(13) R. Judah the Prince does not regard the firstling as mukzeh (Rashi).

(14) Of former generations.

(15) [The views of the Rabbis of former generations in which R. Simeon b. Yohai the teacher of R. Simeon b. Menasia is included].

(16) And it is not known whether the blemish was of a temporary nature or permanent.

(17) At the outset. But if it was examined, it may be slaughtered, since on the eve of the Festival it only lacked the expert's examination.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 26b

on the Festival, R. Simeon [b. Yohai] says: This is not mukan.¹ But they agree that if it is born [on a Festival] with a blemish it is regarded as mukan.²

Rabbah son of R. Huna expounded: If it is born with a blemish one may examine it at the outset on a Festival. R. Nahman said to him: My father taught: If he transgressed and examined it, it is an examination,³ and you say one may examine it at the outset'!

Abaye said: The opinion of Rabbah son of R. Huna⁴ is more acceptable, for it [the previous Baraitha] teaches three cases: [viz.,] 'If it received a blemish on the eve of the Festival you may not examine it on the Festival'; it is only at the outset that you may not [examine], but if it has been done it is well and good; 'If it received a blemish on the Festival, R. Simeon says: This is not mukan'? i.e., even if it has been examined it still may not [be slaughtered]; and then it states, 'But they agree that if it is born [on a Festival] with a blemish it is regarded as mukan', [i.e.,] even at the very outset.⁵ But surely when R. Oshaia came he brought with him the following teaching: Whether it received the blemish on the eve of the Festival, or whether it received the blemish on the Festival, the Sages⁶ say: This is not regarded as mukan!⁷ But then there is a contradiction from the other [Baraitha]!⁸ — The author of that Baraitha is Adda b. Ucmi who blunders in his teaching.⁹ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Our Mishnah also proves this;¹⁰ for it states: R. Simeon says: WHENEVER ITS BLEMISH WAS NOT OBSERVED ON THE DAY BEFORE THE FESTIVAL IT IS NOT MUKAN. What means ITS BLEMISH WAS NOT OBSERVED? If I were to say that no blemish was visible at all,¹¹ [then] it is obvious; need this be taught?¹² Therefore [it means] that it was not examined by an expert on the eve of the Festival whether it was a passing blemish or a permanent blemish. Nevertheless it teaches IT IS NOT MUKAN;¹³ understand therefrom [that it is so]. [R.] Hillel¹⁴ asked Raba: Does the law of mukzeh apply to a part¹⁵ of the Sabbath or not? How can such a contingency arise? If they [the fruit] were fit at twilight¹⁶ they were fit;¹⁷ and if [at twilight] they were not fit, then they are not fit!¹⁸ — It applies to a case where [at twilight] they were fit¹⁹ but afterwards became unfit²⁰ and then again became fit.²¹ What is the law?²² He replied to him: The law of mukzeh applies. He raised an objection: 'But they agree that if it is born with a blemish it is regarded as mukan';²³ but why? Let us say: This firstling was originally²⁴ fit through its mother;²⁵ when it was born, it became debarred [from use];²⁶ on it being shown to an expert it became permitted!²⁷ — Answered Abaye — some say, R. Safra: It means for example that the experts were present there [at the time of birth].²⁸ Some teach: He replied to him: The law of mukzeh does not apply to a part of the Sabbath. Shall we say [the following] supports him? ‘But they agree that if it is born with a blemish it is regarded as mukan’; now this firstling was originally fit through its mother; when it was born, it became debarred [from use]; on its being shown to an expert it became permitted! — Answered Abaye — some say, R. Safra: It means for example that the experts were present there [at the time of birth].

Come and hear: If one was eating grapes [on a Sabbath] and left some over, which he carried up on the roof to make from them raisins; [or was eating] figs and left some over which he carried up on the roof to make from them dry figs, he may eat of them [on the Festival] only if he had designated them before the Festival;²⁹ the same is true of peaches, quinces and other kinds of fruit.³⁰ Now what are the circumstances? If they were fit,³¹ why must he designate [them]? If [on the other hand] they were not fit, [then] what even if he does designate them?³² And if you say that he did not know³³ whether they were fit or not,³⁴ surely R. Kahana said: [Fruits] set aside [for drying] which had dried [before the eve of the Festival] even if the owners did not know it, are permitted!³⁵ Hence it must surely treat [of a case] where they were fit but [afterwards] became debarred from use and then again became fit, now if you maintain the law of mukzeh does not apply [to such a case] why is it necessary to designate them? — What then: the law of mukzeh does apply? Then what if he does designate them?³⁶ — Rather it treats of a case where they were only half fit,³⁷ some people eating them³⁸ and some not; if he designated them, he made known his mind,³⁹ [but] if he did not designate them he did not make known his mind. R. Zera said: Come and hear [an argument] from beans and lentils; for beans and lentils are in their raw state⁴⁰ fit for chewing; by putting them in a pot [for cooking] they become inedible;⁴¹

(1) And even if an expert did examine it, it still may not be slaughtered. For the reason v. supra p. 132, n. 9.

(2) Since the firstling was never in a condition of prohibition but from its birth was ready for use.

(3) I.e., his decision is valid.

(4) That it may be examined at the outset.

(5) If it were otherwise this clause should have been coupled with the first clause.

(6) I.e., R. Simeon.

(7) So that it is still possible to maintain that the teaching with respect to the firstling being born with a blemish refers only to a case de facto. How could then Abaye support the opinion of Rabbah son of R. Huna in face of this Baraitha?

(8) Brought in support of Rabbah son of R. Huna. Which of these is the more authoritative?

(9) I.e., he is an unreliable authority.

(10) As supporting R. Oshaia.

(11) I.e., that it incurred no blemish at all.

(12) Even R. Judah, R. Simeon's disputant, would agree that it may not be slaughtered; for though he may hold that a blemish may be examined on a Festival, yet he maintains the law of mukzeh.

(13) Even in the case of de facto. Hence the last clause in the Baraitha ‘but they agree that if it is born with a blemish it is regarded as mukan’ also refers only to a case de facto.

(14) A fourth century Amora.

(15) מְצִי = moiety or a part.

(16) Just before the Sabbath commences.

(17) And there was no part of the Sabbath during which they became mukzeh.

(18) And are certainly forbidden. — The question whether something was fit or not is always decided by its state at twilight.

(19) When for example fruits such as figs or grapes have been set apart for drying, i.e., to become dry figs or raisins, (during which process they are not edible) but at the commencement of the Sabbath the drying process had finished.

(20) Being swollen and puffed up by rain.

(21) The sun having dried them before the end of the Sabbath.

(22) Does the unfitness of part of the day render them mukzeh for the rest of the day?

- (23) V. supra.
- (24) I.e., at twilight.
- (25) Through the slaughtering of the mother-animal the embryo, though a firstling, is permitted even if it is unblemished. V. Deut. XV, 19.
- (26) Until an expert will establish the permanency of its blemish.
- (27) Hence this animal too was forbidden for a part of the day, yet it is not accounted mukzeh for the rest of day.
- (28) And immediately affirmed that it was a permanent blemish; hence at no time of the day was it mukzeh.
- (29) That if he would set aside fruits on the Sabbath or Festival to be dried, he should be allowed to eat them after they were dried.

and when their cooking is finished they are [again] fit!¹ — Said Abaye to him: Then according to your reasoning,² cooked dishes in general present a difficulty; for usually dishes at twilight are seething³ and [yet] in the evening we eat them!⁴ But [the truth is] if they [can] become fit through human means, there is no question at all;⁵ our question⁶ is only when they become fit through heaven.⁷ R. Judah the Prince⁸ had a firstling and sent it [on the Festival] to R. Ammi.⁹ He however did not want to examine it. Said R. Zerika — some say, R. Jeremiah — to him: [In a dispute between] R. Judah and R. Simeon the halachah is as R. Judah!¹⁰ Afterwards he sent it to R. Isaac the Smith. He [too] did not want to examine it. Said R. Jeremiah — some say, R. Zerika — to him: [In a dispute between] R. Judah and R. Simeon the halachah is as R. Judah! Said R. Abba to him: Why did you not allow the Rabbis to act according to R. Simeon? He replied: What support have you?¹¹ — He said to him: Thus did R. Zera say: The halachah is as R. Simeon. A certain person exclaimed: May it fall to my lot to go thither [Palestine] and learn this teaching from the mouth of the Master. When he came thither he met R. Zera and asked him: Did you, Sir, say the halachah is as R. Simeon? — He replied to him: No, I [only] said, his view is to be preferred; for since our Mishnah states: R. SIMEON SAYS: WHENEVER ITS BLEMISH WAS NOT OBSERVED BEFORE THE FESTIVAL IT IS NOT MUKAN; and the Baraitha teaches the same in the name of the Sages,¹² it follows that his opinion is to be preferred. How then does the law stand? — Said R. Joseph: Come and hear; for it hangs on strong ropes;¹³ for R. Simeon b. Pazzi said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi in the name of R. Jose b. Saul in the name of Rabbi in the name of the Holy Congregation of Jerusaiem:¹⁴ R. Simeon [b. Menasiah] and his contemporaries have said: The halachah is as R. Meir. They¹⁵ have said! But these¹⁶ are much older¹⁷ than he!¹⁸ — Therefore [say], They taught it according to the opinion of R. Meir.¹⁹ For we have learnt: If one slaughtered a firstling and [only] afterwards showed its blemish [to an expert], R. Judah permits²⁰ [it], but R. Meir says: Since it was slaughtered without the permission of an expert it is forbidden.²¹ Consequently R. Meir holds [that] the examination of a firstling is not like the examination of a trefa; [for] the examination of a firstling [must take place] during life, [but] the examination of a trefa [is done] after slaughtering. Hence [it follows that] the examination of a trefa [takes place] even on a Festival, [but] the examination of a firstling [must take place only] on the eve of the Festival.²² Abaye said to him: Do they²³ then dispute there on the examining of blemishes [on a Festival]; [surely] they dispute whether he is to be penalized!²⁴ For Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: In the case of a cataract,²⁵ all agree that it [the animal] is forbidden, because it changes²⁶ [after slaughter]. They differ only with respect to a blemish in the body,²⁷ when R. Meir holds: We preventively prohibit a blemish in the body out of regard to a blemish in the eye;²⁸ while R. Judah is of the opinion: We do not preventively prohibit! Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: The Mishnah also proves [this]. For it states: R. Meir says, Since it was slaughtered without the permission of an expert it is forbidden; conclude therefrom that [R. Meir merely] penalizes [him]. It is thus concluded.

Ammi of Wardena²⁹ used to examine the firstlings in the household of the Prince;³⁰ one [a blemish] occurred on a Festival, and he did not examine it. They came and told [this] to R. Ammi, who told then, He did right in not examining it. But it is not so! For R. Ammi himself did examine? — R. Ammi indeed examined it on the day before³¹ and on the day of the Festival he only asked how it [the blemish] had come about; just as a certain man¹ brought a firstling before Raba on the eve of a Festival towards evening. Raba was sitting and combing his head; he lifted up his eyes and looked at the blemish and said to him: Go now, and come to-morrow. When he came on the following day, he asked him: How did it happen? He replied: Barley was strewn on the one side of the hedge and it [the firstling] was on the other side. As it wanted to eat thereof, it stuck its head [through the hedge] and the hedge tore its lip.² Said he to him: Perhaps you caused this intentionally? — He replied to him: No. And whence do you know that the intentional causing [of a blemish] renders it forbidden? — For it was taught: There shall not be any blemish therein,³ I only know that no blemish may be therein.⁴ Whence do I know that one may not indirectly cause [a blemish] to it through something, [for example] that he may not bring dough or pressed figs and put them on the ear in order that a dog may come and take it?⁵ The text says: 'Not any blemish'. It says 'blemish' and it says 'any blemish'.⁶

MISHNAH. IF A BEAST DIED [ON A FESTIVAL] IT MAY NOT BE MOVED FROM ITS PLACE. IT HAPPENED THEY ONCE ASKED R. TARFON CONCERNING THIS AND CONCERNING HALLAH⁷ THAT BECAME DEFILED;⁸ HE WENT INTO THE ACADEMY AND INQUIRED, AND THEY ANSWERED HIM: THEY MAY NOT BE MOVED FROM THEIR PLACE.

GEMARA. Shall it be said that we have learnt anonymously not as R. Simeon; for we have learnt: R. Simeon says: One may cut up gourds for cattle and a carcass⁹ for dogs. R. Judah says: If the animal was not yet dead on the eve of the Sabbath it is forbidden.¹⁰ — You can say it [the Mishnah] can even be as R. Simeon, [for] R. Simeon admits that living animals¹¹ that died [on the Sabbath] are forbidden.¹² This is all very well according to Mar b. Amemar in the name of Raba, who said: R. Simeon admits that living animals that died [on the Sabbath] are forbidden.¹³ But according to Mar the son of R. Joseph in the name of Raba, who says: R. Simeon disputes even in the case of living animals which died [on the Sabbath, maintaining] that they are permitted, what is there to be said? — Ze'iri explained it with respect to a consecrated animal.¹⁴ [Our Mishnah] also proves this; for it teaches CONCERNING THIS AND CONCERNING HALLAH THAT BECAME DEFILED; just as hallah is consecrated, so is the animal [one that is] consecrated. Then the reason is that it was consecrated; but if [the animal was] not consecrated it is permitted;¹⁵ this is all very well according to Mar the son of R. Joseph in the name of Raba, who says: R. Simeon disputes even in the case of living animals which died [on the Sabbath, maintaining] that they are permitted. But according to Mar b. Amemar in the name of Raba who says: R. Simeon agrees that living animals which died [on the Sabbath] are forbidden, what is there to be said?¹⁶ — It treats here of an [animal] that had been in a dangerous condition [on the eve of the Festival], and it is according to the opinion of all.¹⁷

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT ON THE FESTIVAL BE COUNTED IN AS HAVING A SHARE IN THE ANIMAL¹⁸ AT THE OUTSET, BUT [PEOPLE] MAY BE COUNTED IN ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL AS HAVING A SHARE IN THE ANIMAL, AND THEY SLAUGHTER IT¹⁹ AND DIVIDE IT BETWEEN THEM.²⁰ GEMARA. What means ONE MAY NOT BE COUNTED IN AS HAVING A SHARE? — Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: One may not on a Festival, at the outset, arrange about the price of an animal.²¹ How should he do it?²² Said Rab: Let him²³ bring two animals²⁴ and place them side by side and say: 'This one is like the other one'.²⁵ It was Likewise taught:²⁶ One may not say to his neighbour: 'I want to go shares with you [in your animal] to the value of a sela', I want to go shares with you to the value of two sela's'; but he may say. 'I want to go shares with you for a half or for a third or for a fourth'.

I.e., the Mishnah which implies that the carcass of a non-consecrated animal that has been in a dangerous condition may be cut up on the Festival is in accordance with R. Simeon, v. Rashi. On the reading of cur. edd., the Mishnah can be also in accordance with R. Judah; for he would agree that, where it had been in a dangerous condition before the Festival, it may be cut up on the Festival, his dispute with R. Simeon concerning only an animal that had been ill but not dangerously so, v. R. Nissim.]

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 28a

MISHNAH. R. JUDAH SAYS: A MAN MAY WEIGH MEAT [ON A FESTIVAL] AGAINST A UTENSIL OR AGAINST A BUTCHER'S CHOPPER;¹ BUT THE SAGES SAY: ONE MAY NOT LOOK ON THE PAIR OF SCALES AT ALL.

GEMARA. What means [NOT] AT ALL? — Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: even to protect it [the flesh] from mice² Said R. Idi b. Abin: This only applies if it [the scales] hang on a hook.³ Rab Judah in the name of Samuel further said: A skilled butcher may not weigh meat [on a Festival] even by hand.⁴ Rab Judah in the name of Samuel further said: A skilled butcher may not weigh meat [on a Festival] in water.⁵ Rab Hiyya b. Ashi said: One may not cut a handle in the meat.⁶ Said Rabina: But with the hand⁷ it is permitted [to make a handle]. R. Huna said: It is permitted to make a mark on the meat,⁸ just as Raba son of R. Huna was wont to cut it [the meat] in a triangular shape.⁹ R. Hiyya and R. Simeon b. Rabbi weighed one portion against [another] portion¹⁰ on the Festival.¹¹ According to whom? It is neither according to R. Judah nor according to the Rabbis! For if according to R. Judah, Surely he says: A MAN MAY WEIGH MEAT [ON A FESTIVAL]

AGAINST A UTENSIL OR AGAINST A BUTCHER'S CHOPPER; only against a utensil but not against any other thing!¹² And if according to the Rabbis, surely they say: ONE MAY NOT LOOK ON THE PAIR OF SCALES AT ALL! — They acted as R. Joshua. For it was taught: R. Joshua says: One may weigh one portion [against] another portion on a Festival. Said R. Joseph: The halachah is as R. Joshua, since we learnt in [Tractate] Bekoroth in accordance with his view. For we have learnt: As to consecrated animals that became disqualified, the benefit of them belongs to the Temple,¹³ and one may weigh [the meat] portion against portion in the case of the firstling.¹⁴ Said Abaye to him: Perhaps it is not so?¹⁵ [Perhaps] R. Joshua says this¹⁶ only here¹⁷ where there is no disrespect to consecrated animals, but not there¹⁸ where there is a disrespect to consecrated animals. Alternatively, [perhaps] the Rabbis said this¹⁶ only there¹⁸ because it does not appear as everyday practice,¹⁹ but not here²⁰ which appears like an ordinary transaction.²¹ Shall it be said that they²² were very particular [with each other]; but there were seven fishes brought to the house of Rabbi and [although] five of them were found in the house of R. Hiyya, yet R. Simeon b. Rabbi did not mind? — Answered R. Papa: Link a [different] person with each of them,²³ either it was R. Hiyya and R. Ishmael son of R. Jose or it was R. Simeon b. Rabbi and Bar Kappara.

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT WHET A KNIFE ON A FESTIVAL,²⁴ BUT ONE MAY DRAW IT OVER ANOTHER KNIFE²⁵ [TO SHARPEN IT].

GEMARA. R. Huna said: They only taught this of a whet-stone, but it is permitted on a knife-board. Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: That which you say that on a [whet-]stone it is forbidden, applies only to sharpening it, but to remove its grease is permitted; whence it follows that on a knife-board even sharpening is permitted. Some taught this²⁶ on the concluding part: 'it is permitted on a [knife-]board'. — Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: That which you said that on a [knife-]board it is permitted, applies only to the removal of its grease, but to sharpen it is forbidden; whence it follows that on a whet-stone even to remove its grease is forbidden. Some taught this on our Mishnah: ONE MAY NOT WHET A KNIFE ON A FESTIVAL. Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: They only taught this with respect to sharpening it, but to remove its grease is permitted; whence it follows that to draw it over another knife is permitted even for the purpose of sharpening it. And others taught this on the concluding part [of our Mishnah]: BUT ONE MAY DRAW IT OVER ANOTHER KNIFE. Said Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: They only taught this with respect to removing its grease, but to sharpen it, is prohibited; whence it follows that on a whet-stone even to remove its grease is prohibited.

Who is the authority [of our Mishnah] that on a whet-stone it is forbidden? Said R. Hisda: It is not as R. Judah; for it was taught: The Festival is distinguished from the Sabbath only with respect to the preparing of food alone. R. Judah permits [on a Festival] even the preliminaries for the preparing of food.²⁷ Raba said to R. Hisda: May we lecture in your name that the halachah is as R. Judah? — He replied to him: May it be [God's] will that you lecture all good things of this sort in my name. R. Nehemiah the son of R. Joseph said: I was standing [on a Festival] before Raba who

- (10) When they used to divide meat between them.
- (11) In the two pans of a scale. This is not an everyday practice, therefore they held it is permitted.
- (12) Such as one portion against another portion which he regards as an everyday practice.
- (13) And therefore they may be sold even by weight.
- (14) Though it may not be weighed with ordinary weights, because the benefit belongs not to the Temple but to the owner, yet weighing portion against portion is permitted. This proves that weighing portion against portion is not an everyday practice.
- (15) Perhaps the two cases are not analogous, as has been assumed.
- (16) That one may weigh portion against portion.
- (17) In the case of a Festival.
- (18) In the case of a firstling.
- (19) Because one does not usually sell meat by employing another piece of meat as the weight, and the law of disqualified sacred animals refers to the sale of their meat.
- (20) With respect to the division of the meat between the two Rabbis.
- (21) For it is not unusual for divisions to be made in this manner and therefore they would forbid this on a Festival.
- (22) R. Hiyya and R. Simeon b. Rabbi who divided the meat exactly between them.
- (23) Do not say it was these two who were particular about having an equal share, but bring in somebody else.
- (24) On a whet-stone.
- (25) Because such a method is different from the everyday practice.

was stropping a knife on the edge of a basket and I asked him: Do you, Sir, want to sharpen it or do you want to remove its grease? And he replied to me: To remove its grease. But it was clear to me that he was engaged in sharpening, only he was of the opinion: Thus is the halachah but one does not teach it [publicly].¹

Abaye also related: I was standing before the Master² who was stropping a knife on the edge of a mill and I asked him: Do you, Sir, want to sharpen it or do you want to remove its grease? — And he replied to me: To remove its grease. But it was clear to me that he was engaged in sharpening, but he was of the opinion, Thus is the halachah but one does not teach it [publicly]. The scholars asked: May one show a knife on a Festival to a sage?³ — R. Mari the son of R. Bizna permits, and the Rabbis forbid [it]; but R. Joseph says: A scholar may examine [a knife] for himself⁴ and lend it to another. R. Joseph further said: If a knife became blunt⁵ it may be sharpened on a Festival; and this applies only in the case when it can cut with difficulty.⁶ R. Hisda — some say, R. Joseph — lectured: With respect to a knife dented⁷ and a spit with the point broken off⁷ and the sweeping out of a stove and a pot range⁸ on a Festival we come to the dispute between R. Judah and the Rabbis. For it was taught: The Festival is distinguished from the Sabbath only with respect to the preparing of food alone. R. Judah permits even the preliminaries for the preparing of food. What is the reason of the first Tanna?⁹ Scripture says, ‘that alone may be done for you,’¹⁰ [only] ‘that’ but not the preliminaries [for the preparation]. And R. Judah? — The text says, ‘for you’ for you [means] for all your needs. And the first Tanna; surely it says ‘for you’?¹¹ — He will reply to you: That [text] ‘for you’ [signifies] but not for a heathen. And the other;¹² surely it also says ‘that [alone]’? — He will reply to you: ‘That’ is written and ‘for you’ is written, yet there is no contradiction; the one applies to preliminaries which can be performed before the Festival,¹³ and the other to preliminaries which cannot be performed before the Festival.¹⁴ Rab Judah in the name of Samuel said: One may not repair a bent spit on a Festival. This is obvious! — It [the teaching] is necessary even when one can straighten it with the hand.¹⁵

Rab Judah in Samuel's name further said: A spit which was used for roasting meat may not be handled on the Festival.¹⁶ R. Adda b. Ahabah said in the name of Malkio: He pulls it out [of the joint] and puts it in a corner.¹⁷ Said R. Hiyya b. Ashi in R. Huna's name: Providing there is as much as an olive of meat on it. Rabina says: It [the spit] may be handled even though there is no meat on it at all, for it is analogous to the case of a thorn in a public ground.¹⁸ R. Hanina¹⁹ son of R. Ikka said: [The teachings on] a spit,²⁰ bondmaids,²¹ and hair-pits²² are by R. Malkio; whereas those on belorith-tresses,²³ wood-ashes²⁴ and cheese²⁵ are by R. Malkia.²⁶ R. Papa says: If referring to a Mishnah or a Baraitha²⁷ it is [by] R. Malkia, [but] independent teachings²⁸ are by R. Malkio; and as a mnemonic make use of: The Mishnah is queen.²⁹ Wherein do they differ? They differ in regard to bondmaids.³⁰ MISHNAH. A MAN MAY NOT SAY TO A BUTCHER, 'WEIGH ME A DINAR'S WORTH OF MEAT',³¹ BUT HE SLAUGHTERS [THE ANIMAL] AND SHARES IT AMONG THEM.³²

- (1) So that people might not treat Festivals lightly.
 - (2) Rabbah.
 - (3) Before slaughtering the animal, the knife must be examined by a sage or an expert to assure that it is free from the slightest notch.
 - (4) At home.
 - (5) But there was no sign before the Festival that the knife needed sharpening.
 - (6) I.e., it was not badly blunt so that it would not require much sharpening; otherwise it is forbidden.
 - (7) On the Festival.
 - (8) I.e., sweeping out plaster which had fallen from its walls before the Festival, but which was only just noticed.
 - (9) I.e., the Rabbis.
 - (10) Ex. XII, 16. E.V. 'by you'.
 - (11) Signifying 'for all your needs'.
 - (12) R. Judah.
 - (13) Such 'are forbidden as implied in 'that'.
 - (14) Such are permitted as implied in 'for you'.
 - (15) Without beating it on an anvil. I might think that that does not constitute work.
 - (16) I.e., it may not be taken out of the joint but the meat is carved from it on the spit; for the spit becomes mukzeh on account of its unseemliness.
 - (17) Thrust out of harm's way, but not taken there (Rashi).
 - (18) Which one may remove on a Sabbath, to prevent danger to the public, by carrying it repeatedly short distances, each of which is to be less than four cubits. Similarly the spit may be taken to a place where it can do no harm,. Cf. Shab. 42a.
 - (19) In the parallel passage in Mak. 21a. It is R. Nahman.
 - (20) Quoted above, allowing the greasy spit to be put into a corner.
 - (21) R. Eliezer says (in a Mishnah), even if a wife brought with her one hundred maids of her own, the husband can still insist on her doing work with wool on the ground that idleness is demoralizing. On this R. Malkio comments, the halachah is as R. Eliezer. V. Keth. 59b and 61b.
 - (22) In Nid. 52a R. Huna says that the two hairs proving puberty must be set in pitlets. On this R. Malkio comments that the pitlets alone even without the hairs are sufficient indication of puberty.
 - (23) In A.Z. 29a a Baraitha teaches that when an Israelite cuts the hair of a heathen, he should refrain from touching the top-tresses (or crown-lock) because these were usually consecrated to some deity. On this R. Malkia comments that the Israelite should begin to withdraw his hand at a distance of three fingers breadth on every side. On belorith V. Krauss. T.A. I., 645. Cf also Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 114, n. 5.
 - (24) In Mak. 21a. R. Malkia says that it is prohibited to powder one's wound with burnt wood ash, because it gives the appearance of an incised imprint which is forbidden according to Lev. XIX, 28.
 - (25) In A.Z. 35b, R. Malkia, in a discussion why the cheese of a heathen is forbidden (in the Mishnah) says that it is forbidden because its surface is smeared with lard.
 - (26) The two names Malkio and Malkia can easily be interchanged, hence these two groups were given to assist the memory.

(27) Heb. Mathnitah.

(28) I.e., opinions and dicta heard from eminent teachers and reported by their disciples or visiting scholars as distinguished from what is taught in Mishnah and Baraita.

(29) The name of the one associated with a Mishnah (and Baraita) is R. Malkia which name closely resembles the Aramaic word for 'queen'-malketha.

(30) According to R. Hanina it is attributed to R. Malkio, while according to R. Papa, since it has a reference to a Mishnah, it is attributed to R. Malkia.

(31) The mentioning of money is disallowed.

(32) Without mentioning money.

MISHNAH. A MAN MAY SAY [ON A FESTIVAL] TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'FILL ME THIS VESSEL', BUT NOT IN A MEASURE. R. JUDAH SAYS: IF IT WAS A MEASURING-VESSEL HE MAY NOT FILL IT. IT IS RELATED OF ABBA SAUL B. BATNITH THAT HE USED TO FILL UP HIS MEASURES ON THE EVE OF A FESTIVAL AND GIVE THEM TO HIS CUSTOMERS ON THE FESTIVAL. ABBA SAUL SAYS: HE USED TO DO SO DURING THE INTERMEDIARY DAYS OF A FESTIVAL⁶ TOO, ON ACCOUNT OF THE CLEARNESS OF MEASURE;⁷ BUT THE SAGES SAY: HE USED ALSO TO DO SO⁸ ON AN ORDINARY DAY FOR THE SAKE OF THE DRAINING OF THE MEASURES.⁹ GEMARA. What means BUT NOT IN A MEASURE? — Said Rab Judah in Samuel's name, But not in a vessel set aside as a measure; but one may fill a vessel held in reserve¹⁰ for measuring.¹¹ Whereupon R. Judah said: One may not fill even a vessel held in reserve as a measure. This proves that where the joy of the Festival is concerned R. Judah is stringent and the Rabbis are lenient; but we know of them to the contrary! For we have learnt: R. Judah says: A man may weigh meat [on a Festival] against a utensil or a butcher's chopper, but the Sages say: One may not look on the pair of scales at all;¹² which proves [that] R. Judah is lenient and the Rabbis are stringent! [Hence] there is a contradiction [in the rulings] of R. Judah and a contradiction [in the rulings] of the Rabbis! — R. Judah is not self-contradictory, [for] there¹³ [it treats of a vessel] not held in reserve as a measure,¹⁴ whereas here [it treats of a vessel] which is held in reserve as a measure. The Rabbis too are not self-contradictory, [for] there¹³ he acts as one acts on an ordinary day,¹⁵ [but] here he does not act as one acts on an ordinary day.¹⁶ Raba says: What means BUT NOT IN A MEASURE? [It is] that he may not mention to him the name of the measure;¹⁷ but one may fill a vessel appointed as a measure. Whereupon R. Judah said: One may not fill a vessel appointed as a measure. This proves that where the joy of the Festival is concerned R. Judah is stringent and the Rabbis are lenient, but we know of them to the contrary! For we have learnt: R. Judah says: A man may weigh meat [on a Festival] against a utensil or a butcher's chopper, but the Sages say: You may not look on the pair of scales at all, which [proves that] R. Judah is lenient and the Rabbis are stringent! [Hence] there is a contradiction [in the rulings] of R. Judah and a contradiction [in the rulings] of the Rabbis! — R. Judah is not self-contradictory, [for] there it is not appointed as a measure, [but] here it is appointed as a measure. The Rabbis too are not self-contradictory, [for] there he acts as one acts on an ordinary day, [but] here he does not act as one acts on an ordinary day; for People are accustomed to pass wine in a measuring-vessel and drink [therefrom].¹⁸

IT IS RELATED OF ABBA SAUL B. BATNITH. A Tanna taught: He also used to act thus during [the Intermediary Days of] a Festival on account of disturbing [study] in the Academy.¹⁹ Our Rabbis taught: He collected three hundred jugs of wine from the foam of the measures,²⁰ and his associates collected three hundred jugs of oil from the drops of the measures,²¹ and they brought them to the treasurers [of the Temple] in Jerusalem,²² who said to them: There is no need for you to [do] this.²³ They replied to them: We too will have none of it. They said to them: Since you act so stringently with yourselves then apply it to public purposes; for it was taught: If one robbed and he does not know whom he robbed,²⁴ he must apply it to public purposes. What are such? — Said R. Hisda: Wells, ditches and grottos.²⁵ R. Hisda took Rabana Ukba about and lectured:²⁶ A man may not measure barley on a Festival and give it to his animal, but he may scoop up [with his hand] a kab-full or two kabs-full and give it to his animal without fear.²⁷ And the baker may measure spices and put them in his pot so as not to spoil the dish.²⁸ R. Jeremiah b. Abba said in Rab's name: A woman may measure flour on a Festival and make it up into dough in order that she may separate hallah²⁹ generously, but Samuel says: It is forbidden. But the School of Samuel taught:³⁰ It is permitted! — Said Abaye: Now that Samuel says: It is forbidden, and the School of Samuel taught: It is permitted,

 - (18) Therefore the filling of such a vessel has not at all the appearance of a sale.

then Samuel's purpose is to inform us the halachah for actual practice.¹ Our Rabbis taught: One may not [sift] flour a second time² on a Festival. In the name of R. Papeus and R. Judah b. Bathyra they said: One may [sift it] a second time;³ but they agree that if a pebble or a splinter fell in, one may sift it again.

A tanna recited in the presence of Rabina: One may not [sift] flour a second time on a Festival, but if a pebble or a splinter fell in, he may pick it out with his hand. He said to him: All the more this is forbidden, because it is in the nature of selecting.⁴ Raba⁵ the son of R. Huna Zuti expounded at the gate of Nehardea: One may [sift] flour a second time on a Festival. R. Nahman said to them [his disciples]: Go and say to Abba,⁶ 'Take your favours and throw them on thorns';⁷ come and see how many sieves are being used in Nehardea. The wife of R. Joseph sifted flour on an inverted sieve.⁸ He said to her: Take notice that I want good bread.⁹ The wife of R. Ashi sifted flour on the top side of the table. Said R. Ashi: This my [wife] is the daughter of Rami b. Hama, and Rami b. Hama was a man of [pious] deeds, and unless she had seen this in the home of her parents, she would not have done it.

MISHNAH. A MAN MAY GO TO A SHOPKEEPER WHOM HE GENERALLY PATRONIZES¹⁰ AND SAY TO HIM: 'GIVE ME [SO MANY] EGGS AND NUTS, AND STATING THE NUMBER; FOR THIS IS THE WAY OF A HOUSEHOLDER TO RECKON IN HIS OWN HOME.'¹¹

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: A man may go to a cattledealer whom he generally patronizes and say to him: Give me one kid or one lamb; to a butcher whom he generally patronizes and say to him: Give me one shoulder or one leg; to a poultry breeder whom he generally patronizes and say to him: Give me one dove or one pigeon; to a baker whom he generally patronizes and say to him: Give me one loaf or one roll; and to a shopkeeper whom he generally patronizes and say to him: Give me twenty eggs, or fifty nuts, or ten peaches, or five pomegranates, or one Ethrog; provided that he does not mention any measure.¹² R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: Provided that he does not mention any sum of money.

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. WHEN ONE TAKES JARS OF WINE FROM PLACE TO PLACE, HE MAY NOT CARRY THEM IN A BASKET OR IN A HAMPER,¹³ BUT HE MAY CARRY [THEM] ON HIS SHOULDER OR IN FRONT OF HIM. LIKEWISE, ONE WHO CARRIES STRAW MAY NOT LET THE BUNDLE [OF STRAW] HANG DOWN OVER HIS BACK, BUT MUST CARRY IT IN HIS HAND; AND ONE MAY START [USING] A HEAP OF STRAW,¹⁴

(1) Although theoretically it is permitted, still one should not decide accordingly. Cf. supra 28b.

(2) For this could have been done before the Festival.

(3) The sifting a second time is not considered work.

(4) Which is forbidden on Sabbaths and Festivals. Cf. Shab. 73a.

(5) Var. lec.: Rabbah.

(6) I.e., to my colleague (Rashi). [Abba is a familiar appellation of Raba (Rabbah), whereby he could be addressed only by a colleague. As R. Nahman could hardly have been his colleague, preference is to be given to MS. M. which reads R. Hama, the head of the Nehardea School at the time; v. Hyman, Toledoth p. 1074].

(7) All know without this that it is allowed. Cf. B.K. 83a; B.M. 63b. V. Keth., Sonc. ed. p. 313, n. 7.

- (8) In an unusual way.
- (9) You can therefore sift it in the usual way.
- (10) Who would trust him to settle the reckoning after the Festival. Lit., 'with whom he is often'.
- (11) Hence mentioning the number does not particularly give it the appearance of purchase.
- (12) E.g., pints, quarts or gallons.
- (13) For this is the usual way of carrying it.
- (14) On a Festival even though he did not designate it before the Festival.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 30a

BUT [ONE MAY] NOT [START USING WOOD] FROM A PENT-HOUSE.¹

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: If it is impossible [to carry it] in an unusual way,² it is permitted [to carry in a basket or hamper]. Raba enacted in Mehuza: Whatever [load] one [usually] carries with a great effort,³ must be carried [on a Festival] on a carrying pole;⁴ whatever is [usually] carried on a carrying-pole is to be carried [on a Festival] by a yoke;⁴ whatever is [usually] carried by a yoke, is to be carried [on a Festival] by a hand-barrow;⁴ whatever is [usually] carried by a hand-barrow [on a Festival] a cloth is to be spread over it;⁵ but if it is impossible [to vary the usual procedure] it is permitted, for a Master said: If it is impossible [to carry it] in an unusual way it is permitted. R. Hanan b. Raba⁶ said to R. Ashi: Did the Rabbis say that on a Festival [every work] as far as possible should be done in an unusual way? But these [our] women fill their pitchers with water on a Festival without any alteration and we do not say anything to them! He replied to him: Because it is impossible [in any other way]. [For] how should it be done? If [a woman], who usually draws water in a large pitcher, should have to draw in a small pitcher, then she would have to do more walking!⁷ If [a woman], who [usually] draws in a small pitcher, should have to draw in a large pitcher, then you would increase her burden! Should she cover the vessel with a [wooden] lid, it might fall off and she will have to carry it!⁸ Should she bind it fast, it might become unfastened and she would be caused to tie it up again!⁹ Should she spread a cloth over it,¹⁰ it might become soaked in water and she be led to wring it out!¹¹ Therefore, it is impossible [otherwise]. Raba son of R. Hanin said to Abaye: We have learnt: You may not clap the hands or slap the thighs or dance;¹² and yet we indeed see that [people] do this and we do not take them to task! — He replied to him: And according to your opinion, that which Rabbah said: A man may not sit down at the entrance of the lehi¹³ lest an object should roll away and he come to carry it [four cubits in a public thoroughfare];¹⁴ yet there are these women who take their waterugs and go and sit at the entrance of an alley and we do not say anything to them! But let Israel [go their way]: it is better that they should err in ignorance than presumptuously;¹⁵ here also [I say], Let Israel go their way: it is better that they should err in ignorance than presumptuously. This, however, applies only to a Rabbinical [prohibition] but not to a Biblical [prohibition]. But it is not so; whether it [the prohibition] is Biblical or Rabbinical we do not tell them anything; for the additional time to the Day of Atonement is a Biblical injunction,¹⁶ yet people eat and drink until dusk and we do not say anything to them.

AND ONE MAY START [USING] A HEAP OF STRAW. Said R. Kahana: This proves that one may start using [wood] for the first time from a store [on a Festival]. With whom does that agree? With R. Simeon who does not hold [the law of] mukzeh. Then consider the last clause: BUT [ONE MAY] NOT [START USING STORED] WOOD FROM A PENT-HOUSE; this is in accordance with R. Judah who holds [the prohibition of] mukzeh. — We treat here of cedar and cypress wood which are mukzeh on account of monetary loss,¹⁷ where even R. Simeon agrees. Some recite this in reference to the last clause [thus]: BUT NOT FROM WOOD FROM A PENT-HOUSE. Said R. Kahana: This proves that one may not start using [wood] for the first time from a store [on a Festival]. With whom does that agree? With R. Judah who holds the prohibition of mukzeh. Then consider the first clause: ONE MAY START [USING] A HEAP OF STRAW; this is in accordance with R. Simeon who does not hold mukzeh! — There it speaks of rotted straw.¹⁸ Rotted straw is indeed capable of being used for clay!¹⁹ — When there are thorns in it.²⁰

(1) Lit., 'which is in the mukzeh (stored away)'. The wood stored there is usually for building purposes and not for fuel, hence it is mukzeh.

(2) If e.g., he needs a great quantity.

(3) On a handspike.

(4) Commentators disagree about these terms. Cf. D.S. ad loc.

(5) Some kind of deviation, so that what is being carried is not seen.

(6) [R. Hanan b. Raba was no contemporary of R. Ashi and hence read with MS.M.: Raba b. Hanin said to Abaye.]

(7) She would have to go several times to draw the water to the amount she requires.

(8) [Var. lec.: It might break and she will carry the fragments, v. Ronsburg, Glosses].

(9) And it is forbidden to make a knot on a Festival, when the knot is in the nature of a repair.

(10) V. supra p. 153, n. 7.

(11) Which is forbidden.

(12) These are forbidden on a Festival as a preventive measure lest he fit up instruments of music. V. infra 36b.

(13) The post of an alley.

(14) Carrying in the alley is permitted, the post converting it by a legal fiction into a private residence. But carrying in the public thoroughfare is of course forbidden.

(15) And therefore we do not tell them this, since in any case they would go on doing the same thing.

(16) The injunction against eating, etc. commences a little before evening, and in Yom. 81b (q.v.) it is deduced that this addition is required by Scriptural law.

(17) They are too good to be used as fire-wood and are only intended for building purposes.

(18) Which being unfit for fodder is automatically intended as fuel, and therefore is not mukzeh.

(19) For building; hence it cannot be regarded as automatically intended for fuel.

(20) Which render it unfit for kneading into clay.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 30b

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT TAKE WOOD FROM A HUT BUT ONLY FROM [WHAT IS] ADJACENT TO IT.¹

GEMARA. Why may he not [take wood] from the hut?² because he thereby demolishes a tent!³ Then [if he takes it] from what is adjacent thereto he likewise demolishes a tent!⁴ — Said Rab Judah in Samuel's name: By the term adjacent understand adjacent to the walls.⁵ R. Menasiah says: You can even say that they are not adjacent to the walls,⁶ but this was taught with respect to [tied] bundles.⁷

R. Hiyya son of Joseph recited in the presence of R. Johanan: One may not take wood [on a Festival] from a hut but only from what is adjacent to it, and R. Simeon permits it. They agree, however, with respect to a Tabernacle on the Feast of Tabernacles that it is forbidden;⁸ but if he stipulated concerning it,⁹ everything depends upon his reservation.

'And R. Simeon permits it;' but surely he is pulling down a tent! — Answered R. Nahman b. Isaac: We treat here of a collapsed hut and R. Simeon follows his opinion, for he does not hold the prohibition of mukzeh.¹⁰ For it was taught: The oil left over in a lamp or in a dish¹¹ is forbidden [to be used on Sabbath], but R. Simeon permits it.¹² But what comparison is it? There the man sits and waits for the going out of the lamp,¹³ but here does then a man sit and wait for his hut to collapse? — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: We treat here of a tottering hut, so that he had his mind set upon it since the day before.¹⁴

'They agree, however, with respect to a Tabernacle on the Feast of Tabernacles that it is forbidden; but if he stipulated concerning it everything depends upon his reservation.' Is then a stipulation concerning it of any avail? Surely R. Shesheth said on the authority of R. Akiba: Whence do we know that the wood of the Tabernacle is forbidden [for use] the entire seven days [of the Festival]? From the verse: [On the fifteenth day of the seventh month is] the feast of Tabernacles for seven days unto the Lord.¹⁵ And it was taught R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Whence do we know that just as the Festival offering bears the name of Heaven so also the Sukkah [Tabernacle] bears the name of Heaven: Because the text says ‘the feast [hag]¹⁶ of tabernacles for seven days unto the Lord’,¹⁵ just as the Festival offering is for the Lord¹⁷ so is the Sukkah for the Lord!¹⁸ Said R. Menasiah the son of Raba:¹⁹ The concluding clause²⁰ refers to an ordinary hut,²¹ but the stipulation with respect to a Festival booth²² is of no avail. Yet is it not [valid] in the case of a Festival booth? Surely it was taught: If one covered it [the Festival booth] according to law and decorated it with hand-made carpets and tapestries, and hung therein nuts, almonds, peaches, pomegranates and bunches of grapes, vines, oils,²³ and fine meal, and wreaths of ears of corn, it is forbidden to make use of them until the termination of the last day of the Festival; and if he stipulated thereon, everything depends upon his stipulation!²⁴ — Abaye and Raba both say: This refers to one who says [before the Festival] ‘I will not stand aloof from them²⁵ right through the period of twilight,’ so that the sanctity [of the Festival] did not fall upon them;²⁶ but as to the wood of the Festival booth, since sanctity did fall upon it²⁷ it becomes mukzeh for the entire seven days. But in what respect is this different from what was stated: If one set aside seven Ethrogim²⁸ for the seven days of the Festival,²⁹ Rab says, [After] fulfilling his obligation with each one [of them], they may be eaten immediately;³⁰ and R. Assi says: [After] fulfilling his obligation with each one [of them] they may be eaten on the morrow?³¹ — There where the nights are separated from the days,³² each day is a separate obligation; but here where the nights are not separated from the days,³³ all the [seven] days are regarded as one long day.

(1) The meaning of this is discussed in the Gemara.

(2) I.e., from its roof.

(3) Technically, removing part of a building is regarded as demolishing it.

(4) I.e., to the roof lying on top of it, The removal of that too or of part thereof also constitutes demolishing.

(5) But not built into and part of them; but the wood that lies on the roof, even though not built into the roof, is regarded as part of the covering of the roof.

(6) But adjacent to the roof, i.e., lying on the roof.

(7) Since they were not untied, we see that they were put there for storage, and not to form part of the roof.

(8) Even during the Intermediary days of the Festival.

(9) Before the Festival.

(10) The hut collapsed on the Festival. Now since it was standing just before the Festival commenced, it was then regarded as mukzeh, as it was forbidden then to remove part of it on account of the prohibition of demolishing. Hence the first Tanna holds that even when it collapses it remains forbidden as mukzeh. R. Simeon, however, does not accept the prohibition of mukzeh at all, hence it is permitted.

(11) I.e., a dish of oil placed near a lamp to act as a feed thereto.

(12) For while it was burning one might not remove any of the oil, as technically that constituted extinguishing. Hence the oil is regarded as mukzeh on account of a prohibition and remains forbidden even after the light goes out. R. Simeon permits it, because he rejects the prohibition of mukzeh. Shab. 44a.

(13) Lit., ‘when will his lamp go out’. He knows it will finally go out and therefore he intended to use the residue from the very beginning; hence R. Simeon does not regard it as mukzeh.

(14) I.e., He intended before the Festival that, should the hut collapse on the Festival, he would use its wood; hence it is quite analogous to the residue of the oil in the lamp or dish.

(15) Lev. XXIII, 34. I.e., the entire seven days, it is consecrated ‘unto the Lord’.

(16) The word הג is taken as הגיה.

(17) The animal becomes holy as soon as it was dedicated for a Festival offering.

(18) And may not be used. Hence this is a Biblical prohibition: surely a stipulation cannot nullify such!

(19) [Var. lec. Said R. Menasiah in the name of Samuel.]

(20) ‘If he stipulated, everything depends upon his reservation.’

- (21) Which has collapsed on a Festival.
- (22) Lit., 'a booth of a precept' — i.e., one erected in fulfilment of the scriptural law; v. Lev. XXIII, 42.
- (23) I.e., decanters containing wine and oil.
- (24) Here we see that the stipulation holds good.
- (25) I.e., I accept no interdict in respect of them.
- (26) Technically a Festival prohibition falls on an object at the immediately preceding twilight. Hence here he expressly stipulated that this should not happen; therefore it does not become mukzeh.
- (27) The preceding stipulation would be of no avail here, since he could not take it at twilight on account of the prohibition of demolishing.
- (28) V. Glos. s.v. Ethrog.
- (29) One to be used for each day.
- (30) Without having to wait till the end of the day. Cf. Suk. 46b. He holds that it was made mukzeh only in respect of that particular duty, and since that has been fulfilled, it is no longer mukzeh.
- (31) Thus both agree that their prohibition does not extend to the entire Festival.
- (32) The command to take an ethrog (v. Lev. XXIII, 40) has reference only to the day.
- (33) Since the precept of dwelling in booths applies to the nights just as well as to the days.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 31a

MISHNAH. ONE MAY BRING IN FROM THE FIELD [FIRE-] WOOD THAT IS GATHERED TOGETHER,¹ AND FROM A KARPIF [AN ENCLOSURE] EVEN THOUGH IT IS SCATTERED ABOUT.² WHAT IS A KARPIF? ANY [ENCLOSURE] ADJOINING THE TOWN; THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. JUDAH. R. JOSE SAYS: ANY [ENCLOSURE] WHICH ONE ENTERS WITH A KEY,³ EVEN IF IT IS [ONLY JUST] WITHIN A SABBATH TEHUM. GEMARA. Rab Judah said in Samuel's name: You may take wood only from a collected pile in an enclosure. But we have learnt: FROM AN ENCLOSURE EVEN THOUGH IT IS SCATTERED ABOUT! — Our Mishnah represents the opinion of an individual; for it was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel do not differ [both agreeing] that one may not take in [wood] that was scattered in the field, and that one may take in [wood] that was piled up in an enclosure; they differ only with respect to scattered [wood] in an enclosure and collected [wood] in a field, when Beth Shammai say: He may not take thereof, and Beth Hillel say: He may take thereof.⁴

Said Raba: Leaves of shrubs and leaves of the vine-shoots even though they lie in a heap are forbidden, for since if a wind rises it scatters them, they are regarded as if they are scattered. But if he laid a garment over them the previous day,⁵ it is well.⁶

WHAT IS A KARPIF etc.? The scholars asked: What does it mean? [Does it mean], 'Any [enclosure] adjoining the town providing, however, it has a way of entering by a key; whereas R. Jose comes to teach: Since it has a way of entering by a key, even if [only just] within a Sabbath tehumi, it is still [a karpif]; or this is perhaps what it means: 'Any [enclosure] adjoining the town whether it has a way of entering by a key or not; and R. Jose comes to teach: Even if [only just] within a Sabbath tehumi [it is a karpif] but only if it has a way of entering by a key; if, however, it has no way of entering by a key it is not [a karpif] even though [the enclosure] adjoins the town? — Come and hear: Since it [the Mishnah] teaches: 'R. JOSE SAYS: ANY [ENCLOSURE] WHICH ONE ENTERS WITH A KEY, EVEN IF [ONLY JUST] WITHIN A SABBATH TEHUM', understand therefrom that R. Jose teaches a twofold leniency.⁷ R. Salla said in the name of Jeremiah: The halachah is as R. Jose in the direction of leniency. MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT CHOP UP FIREWOOD FROM BEAMS NOR FROM A BEAM WHICH WAS BROKEN ON A FESTIVAL;⁸ AND ONE MAY NOT CHOP EITHER WITH AN AXE OR WITH A SAW OR WITH A SICKLE BUT ONLY WITH A [BUTCHER'S] CHOPPER.

- (1) The wood was piled up before the Festival for that purpose, so that strangers might not take it away.
 - (2) For even then we may assume that he intended to use it, but did not trouble to collect it because it was enclosed and so guarded.
 - (3) Lit., 'a padlocked entrance'.
 - (4) But the majority of the Rabbis differ and hold that Beth Hillel forbids the taking of scattered wood even from an enclosure.
 - (5) To keep the wind from scattering them.
 - (6) For it shows that he intended before the Festival to use them for firewood.
 - (7) If the enclosure is adjacent to the city there is no need to have an entrance by a key, and if it can be entered by means of a key it is regarded as a karpif even though it is distant from the city to the extent of a tehum.
 - (8) V. supra 2b.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 31b

But you say [in] the first clause, ONE MAY NOT CHOP UP [WOOD] at all! — Answered Rab Judah in the name of Samuel: There is a lacuna and must be taught thus: ONE MAY NOT CHOP UP FIREWOOD FROM a layer of BEAMS¹ NOR FROM A BEAM WHICH WAS BROKEN ON A FESTIVAL; but one may chop up [firewood] from a beam which was broken before the Festival; and when one chops up, ONE MAY NOT CHOP EITHER WITH AN AXE OR WITH A SAW OR WITH A SICKLE BUT ONLY WITH A [BUTCHER'S] CHOPPER.

We have likewise learnt: One may not chop up firewood from a layer of beams nor from a beam which was broken on a Festival, because it was not mukan..

BUT NOT WITH AN AXE. R. Hinena b. Salmia said in Rab's name: They taught this only of its broad end; but with its narrow end² it is permitted. This is obvious: we have learnt: [BUT ONLY] WITH A [BUTCHER'S] CHOPPER!³ — You might say: This applies to a chopper only, but as for a combined axe and chopper,⁴ I might say, Since this side is forbidden the other side too is forbidden, so he informs us [that it is not so].

Some teach this with respect to the latter clause: BUT ONLY WITH A [BUTCHER'S] CHOPPER. R. Hinena b. Salmia said in Rab's name: They taught this only of its narrow end, but with its broad end it is prohibited. This is obvious; we have learnt: ONE MAY NOT [CHOP] WITH AN AXE! — You might say: This applies only to an axe alone; but as for a combined chopper and axe, I might say: Since this end is permitted, the other end too is permitted,' so he informs us [that it is not so].

MISHNAH. IF A [CLOSED] ROOM FULL OF PRODUCE WAS BURST OPEN⁵ [ON A FESTIVAL] HE MAY TAKE [THE PRODUCE] OUT THROUGH THE BREACH.⁶ R. MEIR SAYS: HE MAY MAKE A HOLE AT THE OUTSET AND BRING OUT [THE PRODUCE].

GEMARA. Why so? He is indeed pulling down a tent! — Said R. Nahumi b. Adda in the name of Samuel: It treats here of a layer of bricks.⁷ But it is not so, for R. Nahman said: Bricks left over from a building may be moved on Sabbath, because they are fit for sitting on;⁸ but if he put them in layers one upon the other, he has certainly determined them for something else! Said R. Zera: They said this⁹ with respect to a Festival but not with respect to Sabbath. We have likewise learnt: R. Meir says: He may make a hole at the outset and take out; they said this with respect to a Festival but not with respect to Sabbath. Samuel said: One may loosen the knots¹⁰ in the ground¹¹ but one may not unravel nor cut¹² [the rope]; [the knots in the doors] of utensils, one may loosen and unravel and cut,¹³ whether on a Sabbath or a Festival. They raised an objection: One may loosen the knots in the ground on the Sabbath but one may not unravel nor cut; but on a Festival one may loosen and unravel and cut! — This represents the view of R. Meir, who says: He may make a hole at the outset and bring out [the produce] but the Rabbis dispute with him, and I say this according to the Rabbis. Do then the Rabbis dispute with him with respect to knots in the ground? Surely it was taught: The Sages agree with R. Meir with respect to knots in the ground that on Sabbath one may loosen but one may not unravel nor cut, while on a Festival one may loosen and unravel and cut!

- (1) Because the beams were stored for building purposes and not for firewood.
 - (2) Lit., 'its feminine side' . . . 'its masculine side'.
 - (3) This usually has no broad, sharp side.
 - (4) I.e., where one side is broad, like an axe, and the other narrow, like a butcher's chopper — presumably the choppers were made thus, not like ours nowadays.
 - (5) I.e., some of the bricks fell out through the pressure.
 - (6) The produce is not regarded as mukzeh though he would not have been able to get at them had the room not burst open.
 - (7) Lying loose one upon the other and not built in with mortar.
 - (8) Hence rank as utensils. — An object not ranking as a utensil may not be handled on the Sabbath.
 - (9) Viz., the law in our Mishnah.
 - (10) Lit., 'seals'.
 - (11) I. e., the knot in the cord which fastens the door to the rafter to keep it tight and which also points out the trap-door in the floor.
 - (12) For this would be in the nature of pulling down.
 - (13) For the law of pulling down does not apply to utensils.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 32a

— He¹ ruled as the following Tanna. For It was taught: One may loosen the knots in the ground, but one may not unravel nor cut, whether on a Sabbath or on a Festival; but as to those of utensils — on a Sabbath one may loosen but one may not unravel nor cut; on a Festival one may loosen and unravel and cut. You have justified the first clause; but there is a contradiction from the concluding clause!² — This represents the opinion of R. Nehemiah who says: All utensils may not be handled except for their normal use.³ If it is R. Nehemiah, why particularly the Sabbath; the same holds good even on a Festival! And if you say that R. Nehemiah makes a distinction between a shebuth⁴ of the Sabbath and a shebuth of a Festival,⁵ [I would object], Does he then make a distinction? For one [Baraitha] teaches: One may kindle a fire [on a Festival] with utensils,⁶ but one may not kindle a fire with fragments of utensils;⁷ and another [Baraitha] teaches: One may kindle a fire with both utensils and fragments of utensils; and [still] another [Baraitha] teaches: One may not kindle either with utensils or with broken pieces of utensils; and we explained, there is no contradiction: One is according to R. Judah, the other is according to R. Simeon, and the third is according to R. Nehemiah!⁸ — Two Tannaim dispute about the opinion of R. Nehemiah.⁹ MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT HOLLOW OUT A LAMP¹⁰ [ON A FESTIVAL], BECAUSE HE WOULD BE MAKING A UTENSIL; AND ONE MAY NOT MAKE CHARCOAL¹¹ ON A FESTIVAL, NOR CUT A WICK IN TWO. R. JUDAH SAYS: ONE MAY SEVER IT WITH A FLAME.

GEMARA. Who teaches that the hollowing out of a lamp constitutes [making] a utensil?¹² — Said R. Joseph: It is R. Meir; for it was taught: When is a clay vessel susceptible to defilement? As soon as its form is finished;¹³ this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Joshua says: As soon as it is baked in the furnace. Said Abaye to him: Whence does this follow? Perhaps R. Meir is of this opinion only there, because they [the vessels] are fit for receiving things;¹⁴ but here¹⁵ for what is it fit? — For receiving copper coins.

Some say: Said R. Joseph: It is R. Eliezer son of R. Zadok: For we have learnt: Ironian¹⁶ stewpots do not contract defilement when under the same roof as a corpse, but they become defiled if they are carried by one who has an issue.¹⁷ R. Eliezer son of R. Zadok says: They are undefiled even if they are carried by one who has an issue, because they are not yet finished in the making.¹⁸ Said Abaye to him: Perhaps R. Eliezer son of R. Zadok is of this opinion only there, because they [the stewpots] are fit for receiving things;¹⁹ but here for what is it fit? — For receiving copper coins.

Our Rabbis taught: One may not hollow out a lamp and one may not make Ironian stewpots on a Festival. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel permits Ironian stewpots. What means Ironian? — Said Rab Judah: Provincial. What means 'provincial'? — Said Abaye: Peasants' trenchers.²⁰

AND ONE MAY NOT MAKE CHARCOAL. This is obvious; for what is it fit?²¹ — R. Hiyya taught: This is necessary to be taught only with respect to handing them over to the bath attendants on the same day.²² Is it then permissible [for such use] on that day?²³ — As Raba explained [elsewhere]: Where it is for perspiring,²⁴ and before the prohibition,²⁵ so also here [it treats of a case] of perspiring and before the prohibition.

NOR CUT A WICK IN TWO [etc.]: Why not with a knife —

(1) R. Samuel who forbids unravelling even on a Festival.

(2) According to the concluding clause one may in the case of vessels only loosen on a Sabbath, whereas Samuel permits even unravelling and cutting too.

(3) Hence, though the cutting is permitted in itself, a knife may not be handled for that purpose. But Samuel disagrees with R. Nehemiah in this.

(4) V. Glos.

- (5) Treating the latter less rigorously than the former and consequently the said restriction does not apply to a Festival.
- (6) Since being utensils they may be handled, they may also be used for burning.
- (7) Being fragments, they may not be handled normally; and though fit for fuel (which under other circumstances would permit them to be handled), this is discounted, since they were not intended for this before the Festival.
- (8) R. Judah who holds the prohibition of mukzeh, forbids fragments as fuel; R. Simeon who rejects this prohibition, permits them, while R. Nehemiah, holding that utensils may be handled for their normal use only, forbids even whole utensils. This proves that R. Nehemiah's ruling applies to Festivals too.
- (9) One holding that he draws a distinction in respect of his ruling between the Sabbath and Festivals; the other, that he does not.
- (10) By pressing in the finger into a lump of clay.
- (11) This too is technically regarded as a utensil for goldsmiths.
- (12) Although the clay is not yet baked in the furnace.
- (13) I.e., hollowed out, even before it is hardened in the furnace.
- (14) I.e., dry objects, even though they were unfit for liquids.
- (15) Being unbaked, it cannot take oil for lighting, as it will soak into it; while it is too small for ordinary dry objects.
- (16) For V.L. cf. D.S. The correct reading as well as the exact meaning of this term is uncertain. The Talmud (infra) explains it in the sense of provincial, coarse and unfinished. V. 'Ed., Sonc. ed. p. 12, n. 9. According to the Commentaries, this stewpot was fashioned like a hollow ball and thus baked in the kiln and afterwards cut into two. Undivided it cannot become unclean through a dead body because the inner space is enclosed and a clay vessel must have a hollow before it can receive defilement. (Cf. Num. XIX, 15).
- (17) Cf. Lev. XV, 4 and 12, where a hollow in the vessel is not required.
- (18) Viz., their hollowing out, and are therefore not considered utensils. 'Ed. II, 5. Hence we see that the hollowing out constitutes the making of a utensil, and the same holds good in the Mishnah.
- (19) When they are hollowed out.
- (20) Which are coarse and unfinished.
- (21) They can only be used on the same day for manufacturing works which are forbidden on a Festival.
- (22) For the preparation of the bath water.
- (23) The Rabbis distinctly forbade taking baths both on Sabbath and Festivals. Cf. Shab. 38a.
- (24) Not actually bathing.
- (25) Of such perspiring on Sabbath and Festivals. Cf. Shab. 40a.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 32b

because he thereby makes an article;¹ then by [severing it] with fire he is also making an article? — R. Hiyya taught: He may sever it with fire [when the wick is] in two lamps.²

Said R. Nathan b. Abba in the name of Rab: One may trim the wick on a Festival. What is meant by trimming? Said R. Hanina b. Salmia [in Rab's name]: To remove the snuff.

Bar Kappara taught: Six things have been taught with respect to a wick, three restrictions and three leniencies. The restrictions are: One may not plait it at the outset on a Festival, and one may not singe it with fire,³ and one may not cut it in two. Leniencies: One may rub it by hand,⁴ and one may soak it in oil, and one may sever it with fire when it is in two lamps.

R. Nathan b. Abba further said in the name of Rab: The rich men of Babylon will go down to Gehenna; for once Shabthai b. Marinos came to Babylon and entreated them to provide him with facilities for trading and they refused this to him; neither did they give him any food. He said: These are the descendants of the 'mixed multitude',⁵ for it is written, And [He will] show thee mercy and have compassion upon thee,⁶ [teaching that] whoever is merciful to his fellow-men is certainly of the children of our father Abraham, and whosoever is not merciful to his fellow-men is certainly not of the children of our father Abraham.⁷

R. Nathan b. Abba further said in the name of Rab: He who is dependent on another's table, the world is dark to him, for it is said: He wandereth abroad for bread. 'Where is it?' He knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at his hand.⁸ R. Hisda says: Also his life is no life.

Our Rabbis taught: There are three whose life is no life and they are: He who is dependent on the table of his neighbour; he whom his wife rules; and he whose body is subject to suffering. And some say: Also he who possesses only one shirt.⁹ And the first Tanna? — It is possible to examine his garment.¹⁰

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT BREAK UP A POTSHERD OR CUT PAPER IN ORDER TO ROAST THEREON SALT-FISH;¹¹ NOR MAY ONE RAKE OUT AN OVEN OR A POT RANGE,¹² BUT ONE MAY PRESS [THE ASHES] DOWN;¹³ NOR MAY ONE PLACE TWO JARS SIDE BY SIDE IN ORDER TO SET A SAUCEPAN ON THEM.¹⁴ NOR MAY ONE PROP UP A POT WITH A WOODEN WEDGE AND THE SAME APPLIES TO A DOOR; NOR MAY ONE DRIVE CATTLE WITH A STAFF ON A FESTIVAL, BUT R. ELEAZAR SON OF R. SIMEON PERMITS IT.

GEMARA. What is the reason [that one may not break Up a potsherd]? — Because he is making a [new] article.¹⁵

NOR MAY ONE RAKE OUT AN OVEN OR A POT RANGE. R. Hiyya b. Joseph recited in the presence of R. Nahman: If it is impossible to bake unless it is raked out it is permitted. A brick fell down in R. Hiyya's wife's oven on a Festival. [So] R. Hiyya said to her: Take notice that I want good bread.¹⁶ Raba said to his attendant: Roast a duck for me and mind it does not get burnt.¹⁶ Rabina said to R. Ashi: R. Aha from Huzal¹⁷ told that they pasted up the oven¹⁸ for you, Sir, on a Festival!¹⁹ He replied to him: We use²⁰ [the clay from] the bank of the Euphrates,²¹ and even then only when one had marked out [the clay] on the previous day. Said Rabina: Ashes are permitted.²²

NOR MAY ONE PLACE TWO JARS SIDE BY SIDE: Said R. Nahman: It is permissible to arrange the stones of a privy side by side on a Festival.²³ Rabbah raised an objection to R. Nahman: ONE MAY NOT PLACE TWO JARS SIDE BY SIDE AND ON THESE SET A SAUCEPAN! — He replied to him: It is different there, for he is making a tent.²⁴ Rabbah Zuta said to R. Ashi: Accordingly it should also be permitted to build a seat²⁵ on a Festival, since he is not making a tent! — He replied to him: There the Torah forbade a permanent building but not a temporary building, but the Rabbis forbade a temporary building on account of a permanent building; but here²⁶ the Rabbis did not enact this prohibition, for the sake of his dignity.

Rab Judah said: It is permitted [to build] a fireheap from above downwards but not from beneath upwards.²⁷

(1) Out of one wick he makes two.

(2) If the two ends of the wick are two lamps he may light it in the middle, since his purpose does not appear to be to divide it but rather to get a light.

(3) To remove any threads or fibres.

(4) To soften it.

(5) Cf. Ex. XII, 38.

(6) Deut. XIII, 18.

(7) The verse ends: as He hath sworn unto thy fathers. Now he translates the part quoted thus: and He will give thee (the spirit of) mercy — i.e., to be merciful to others. Hence, of the person who possesses that, it can be said . . . 'unto thy fathers', viz., the Patriarchs; but if one lacks it, 'Unto thy fathers' cannot be said of him, and so he must be a descendant of the mixed multitude.

(8) Job XV, 23.

- (9) Because he is distressed by vermin.
- (10) To cleanse it from vermin.
- (11) Which must not lie on the metal of the tripod, as it would be burnt.
- (12) If some of its plaster peeled and fell into it. It must not be raked out, as that would constitute the repairing of a utensil.
- (13) So that the dough which was pressed to the side of the oven (this was the ancient method of baking) should not come into contact with the old ashes or earth.
- (14) Because it looks like setting up a tripod and is in the nature of building.
- (15) The broken potsherd is now to serve as a utensil for preventing burning.
- (16) I.e., have the oven raked out.
- (17) A place between Nehardea and Sura; Obermeyer op. cit. p. 299. V. Keth., Sonc. ed. p. 716, n. 7.
- (18) I.e., they filled up the cracks in the oven making it airtight.
- (19) But surely mixing the cement for that purpose is forbidden, as a derivative of kneading. V. Shab. 73a.
- (20) Lit., 'we rely'.
- (21) The alluvial soil of the bank of the Euphrates is like clay and no further preparation is required. [R. Ashi's home was Matha Mehasia on the right bank of the Euphrates.]
- (22) To be mixed with water and used for making the oven airtight, because 'kneading' does not apply to ashes.
- (23) Two large stones were put side by side, thus forming a kind of seat.
- (24) In a technical sense.
- (25) סבבא is a solid seat standing on the ground. Since there is no empty space beneath its top, it does not constitute a tent.
- (26) In the case of a privy.
- (27) I.e., one may not lay two logs of wood near one another and lay a third above it, since this resembles the building of a tent. He must therefore hold up one log and lay two underneath.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 33a

The same is true also of an egg, a pot, a bed and a jug.¹

NOR MAY ONE PROP UP A POT WITH A WOODEN WEDGE AND LIKEWISE WITH A DOOR. Can you possibly mean WITH A DOOR?² — Say rather: And the same applies to a door.³

Our Rabbis taught: One may not prop up a pot with a wooden wedge and the same applies to a door, for wood is meant [as a rule] only for heating;⁴ but R. Simeon permits it. Nor may one drive cattle with a staff on a Festival, but R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon permits it. Shall it be said that R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon agrees with his father in rejecting [the prohibition of] mukzeh? — No; in this case even R. Simeon agrees,⁵ for it looks as though he were going to market.⁶

Bamboo-cane, R. Nahman forbids⁷ and R. Shesheth permits. When it is moist none dispute that it is forbidden;⁸ they [only] dispute when it is dry; he who forbids it says: Wood is made to serve only for kindling;⁹ he who permits it says, It is one and the same thing whether roasting with it [used as a spit] or whether roasting with its coal.¹⁰ Some say: When it is dry none dispute that it is permitted; they [only] dispute when it is moist; he who forbids [it,] it is because it is not fit for fuel,¹¹ and he who permits [it] says, It is fit for a big fire. And the law is: When it is dry it is permitted, when it is moist it is forbidden.

Raba lectured: A woman may not go into a wood-shed to fetch therefrom a brand;¹² and a log of wood that was broken [on a Festival] may not be burnt on the Festival, for one may heat with utensils but one may not heat with broken utensils. Shall it be said that Raba is of the same opinion as R. Judah who holds the rule of mukzeh? But surely Raba said to his attendant: Roast me a duck and throw its inwards to the cat!¹³ — There [it is different]; since they [the inwards] turn putrid, he had intended them [for the cat] from the day before.¹⁴ MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER SAYS: A MAN

MAY TAKE A CHIP FROM THAT WHICH IS LYING BEFORE HIM¹⁵ TO PICK HIS TEETH WITH IT, AND HE MAY COLLECT [CHIPS] FROM THE COURT YARD AND MAKE A FIRE, FOR EVERYTHING IN A COURT IS MUKAN. BUT THE SAGES SAY: HE MAY COLLECT ONLY FROM THAT WHICH IS BEFORE HIM AND MAKE A FIRE. ONE MAY NOT PRODUCE FIRE EITHER FROM WOOD,¹⁶ OR FROM STONES,¹⁷ OR FROM EARTH,¹⁸ OR FROM TILES,¹⁹ OR FROM WATER;²⁰ NOR MAY ONE MAKE TILES RED-HOT IN ORDER TO ROAST ON THEM.

GEMARA. Rab Judah said:

(1) When an egg is to be placed on a tripod for baking, the tripod must not be placed on the fire and the egg on it, but it must be held in the hand, the egg placed on it, and then the whole on the fire. — A pot was placed on two barrels with a fire burning underneath. These barrels, however, must not be placed in position first, but the pot must be held in the air and then the barrels put underneath. — Folding beds are likewise: instead of the supports being placed first and then the canvas or skin overlay, as usual, the canvas must be stretched out first and the supports fitted in to it. Finally, when barrels are being stored away, One on top of two, the top one must be held and the other two pushed under it. In each case the usual mode of setting would constitute making a tent.

(2) It was presumed that it means 'the door may not be used as a prop'.

(3) Viz., a door may not be propped up with a chip. The Mishnah therefore must be translated: And it is likewise so in the case of a door.

(4) Hence it is mukzeh in respect of any other purpose.

(5) That it is prohibited.

(6) Lit., 'to a dance', so called because of the crowds assembled at the market.

(7) To be used as a spit on a Festival, on account of mukzeh, for it was not intended before the Festival to use it as a spit.

(8) For it cannot then be used even for eating.

(9) Hence it is mukzeh in respect of any other purpose.

(10) For it is permissible to burn it and use its charcoal for roasting.

(11) Hence it cannot be handled for its natural purpose, and therefore it must not be handled for any other purpose either.

(12) To be used for a poker. For wood can only be employed for kindling and cannot be used as a utensil unless it was so intended before the Festival.

(13) Whereas according to R. Judah the inwards should be forbidden to be handled as mukzeh. Cf. supra 2a, 27b.

(14) Hence R. Judah would agree that the inwards are not mukzeh.

(15) I.e., in the house.

(16) By rubbing two sticks together, because this would be bringing into existence something which was not already made.

(17) By striking flint with steel,

(18) Sulphur or phosphorus.

(19) This clause is omitted in the Mishnayoth.

(20) By using the water in a glass as a mirror to focus the rays of the sun.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 33b

[The prohibition] of making a utensil does not apply to cattle fodder.¹ R. Kahana raised an objection to Rab Judah: One may carry about spice-wood for smelling or in order to fan a sick person with it; and he may rub it and smell it but he may not cut off [a piece] in order to smell it;² and if he did cut off [a piece] he is not culpable, although it is forbidden; he may not cut off [a piece] in order to pick his teeth, but if he did cut off he is liable to a sin-offering!³ — He replied to him: If [the Baraitha had taught that] 'he is not culpable, yet it is forbidden', even that would contradict me; how much more so when it states 'he is liable for a sin-offering'; but that [Baraitha] was taught with respect to hard [spice-wood].⁴ But is hard [spicewood] capable of being rubbed! — There is a lacuna and must be taught as follows: 'He may rub it and smell it and he may cut off [a piece] and smell it'. This only applies to soft spice-wood, but he may not cut hard [spice-wood], and if he does cut it, he is not culpable, although it is forbidden; he may not cut off [a piece] in order to pick his teeth, but if he does cut off he is liable to a sin-offering. One [Baraita] teaches: He may cut off [a piece] and smell it; and another [Baraita] teaches: He may not cut off in order to smell thereof? — Said R. Zera in the name of R. Hisda: There is no contradiction; one refers to soft [spice-wood]; the other, to hard. To this R. Aha b. Jacob demurred: Why [may he] not [cut off] from hard [spice-wood]?⁵ In what respect is this different from what we learnt: A man may break open a cask in order to eat of its dry figs, provided that he does not intend to make a utensil [of it].⁶ And furthermore, Raba son of R. Adda and Rabin son of R. Adda have both related: When we were staying with Rab Judah he broke a branch off⁷ and gave us each a piece of aloe-wood, although they were [so hard that they were] capable of being used as a handle for a bill or an axe!⁸ — There is no contradiction; the one is according to R. Eliezer, and the other is according to the Rabbis; for it was taught: R. Eliezer says: A man may take a chip from [wood] lying before him to pick his teeth with it, but the Sages say: He may take [it] only out of a cattle-crib;⁹ but they both agree that he may not cut off [a piece], and if he did cut off to pick his teeth or to open a door with it,¹⁰ if he did it unwittingly on a Sabbath, he is liable to a sin-offering, and if he did it deliberately on a Festival he is liable to receive forty lashes: this is the opinion of R. Eliezer. But the Sages say: Both the one and the other are forbidden only as a shebuth.¹¹ [Now] R. Eliezer¹² who says there,¹³ ‘he is liable to a sin-offering’, [will hold] here [that] he is not culpable, although it is forbidden; the Rabbis who say there, ‘he is not culpable although it is forbidden’ [maintain] here [that] it is permitted at the outset. But does not R. Eliezer accept the teaching, A man may break open a cask in order to eat of its dry figs provided that he does not intend to make a utensil? — Said R. Ashi: That was taught with respect to a barrel whose parts are stuck together with pitch.¹⁴

AND HE MAY COLLECT FROM THE COURT: Our Rabbis taught: He may collect from the court and make a fire, for every thing in the court is mukan, provided that he does not make many heaps; but R. Simeon permits [even this]. In what do they differ? — One is of the opinion: It looks as though he were gathering for the morrow and the day after;¹⁵ and the other is of the opinion: His pot bears testimony for him.¹⁶

ONE MAY NOT PRODUCE FIRE. What is the reason? Because he is creating [something new] on a Festival.

NOR MAY ONE MAKE TILES RED-HOT. What does he do?¹⁷ — Said Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan: We are dealing here with new bricks [and the prohibition is] because

- (1) I.e., straw or stubble and the like may be used as a tooth-pick.
 - (2) By cutting off a piece, he produces a new surface which yields greater fragrance.
 - (3) Although some spice-wood can be used as fodder. This contradicts Rab Judah.
 - (4) Which is unfit for fodder. Hence it does not contradict me at all.
 - (5) In order to smell. Did then the Rabbis preventively forbid it lest he might cut it off as a utensil?
 - (6) I.e., he must not break open the bung in such a way as to make a permanent mouth. This we see that no such preventative decree exists.
 - (7) On a Sabbath in order to smell thereof. The branch was, of course, detached.
 - (8) Cf. Shab. 146a.
 - (9) Since it is definitely food, it can therefore be used for any purpose.
 - (10) I. e. , to use it as a latch.
 - (11) V. Glos.
 - (12) The explanation of there being no contradiction is now continued.
 - (13) With respect to cutting spice-wood.
 - (14) Therefore it cannot afterwards again be used as a vessel. Cf. Jast. s.v. מוסתקי
 - (15) Which is certainly forbidden.
 - (16) I.e., it is quite obvious that he wants the fuel for the Festival.

(17) What forbidden action is there in this?

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 34a

he has yet to examine them.¹ Others explain it: Because he has yet to harden them.² We have learnt elsewhere:³ If one trod upon it [poultry] or knocked it against a wall, or if cattle trampled over it and it still moves convulsively and continues alive for a full day of twenty-four hours, and he then slaughters it, it is ritually fit. Said R. Eleazar b. Jannai in the name of R. Eleazar b. Antigonus: It still has to be examined.⁴ R. Jeremiah asked of R. Zera: May one slaughter it on a Festival? Should we assume an unsoundness On a Festival⁵ or not? He replied to him: We have learnt it: NOR MAY ONE MAKE TILES RED-HOT IN ORDER TO ROAST ON THEM; and we raised the point: What does he do? And Rabbah b. Bar Hana in the name of R. Johanan said: We are dealing here with new bricks [and they must not be heated] because he has yet to examine them.⁶ He said to him: We teach: Because he has yet to harden them.⁷ It was taught: If one brings the fire [on a Sabbath] and another brings the wood and another puts the pot on the fire and another brings the water and another puts in the seasoning and another stirs, they are all liable.⁸ But surely it was taught: The last one is liable and the rest are exempt! — There is no contradiction. The one speaks of a case where the fire was brought first; and the other, where the fire was brought last.⁹ As for all the others, it is well, for they perform an action;¹⁰ but he who puts the pot on the fire, what does he do?¹¹ — Said R. Simeon b. Lakish: We treat here of a new pot and they applied here the prohibition of making tiles red-hot. Our Rabbis taught: A new oven and a new pot range are like all other utensils which may be carried about in a court; but one may not smear them with oil or polish them with a rug or cool them with cold water in order to harden them; but if [it is done] for the purpose of baking,¹² it is permitted.

Our Rabbis taught: One may scald the head and the feet [of a fowl or animal] or singe them with fire; but one may not cover them, with potter's clay or with earth or with lime,¹³ nor may one cut off [their hair] with scissors; and one may not cut round vegetables with their [garden] shears,¹⁴ but one may trim the artichoke and the cardoon;¹⁵ one may heat and bake in a large oven¹⁶ and one may warm up water in an antiki¹⁷ vessel; but one may not bake in a new large oven lest it crack¹⁸.

Our Rabbis taught: One may not blow up [the fire] with bellows [on a Festival] but one may blow it up with a tube [reed]; one may not condition a spit nor may one sharpen it.

Our Rabbis taught: One may not split a reed in order to roast a salt fish thereon, but one may crack a nut in a rag and we do not apprehend lest it be torn.¹⁹

MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER FURTHER²⁰ SAID: A MAN MAY STAND NEAR HIS DRYING FIGS²¹

(1) Whether they can stand burning, for if they crack they cannot be used and all his labour has been in vain.

(2) By burning; hence when he makes them red-hot he completes their manufacture, and this may not be done on Festival.

(3) Hul. 57a and 57b.

(4) Whether the injury did not make it trefa.

(5) I.e., on account of its stringency and therefore not kill it.

(6) To see if they crack. Hence we see that we do assume an unsoundness on account of the stringency of the Festival.

(7) So that this has no bearing on our problem.

(8) For various breaches of the Sabbath.

(9) In the former case all are liable, for all have committed a breach of the Sabbath; in the latter only the last person performed a culpable act.

(10) As one carries the fire he creates a draught which fans it into a stronger blaze; hence his action technically constitutes kindling. Similarly, he who adds fuel. Pouring in the water and the condiments and stirring all constitute cooking.

(11) He puts it on empty; hence he does not cook at all.

(12) That the bread should not burn.

(13) In order to remove the hair.

(14) The shears with which they are cut from the soil. The prohibition is because one might suspect that the person had only on that day cut them from the ground.

(15) These plants require a good deal of care in their preparation.

(16) Though it involves much labour.

(17) [אַנְטִיכִי A water-heating vessel with a fuel compartment (v. Shab. 41a). Though it retains its heat for a long time, extending even beyond the needs of the Festival day on which it is heated, it is nevertheless permitted, v. R. Nissim. The derivation of the word is obscure. Krauss TA, I, p. 73 connects it with Grk, GR.  v. op. cit. p. 411.]

(18) And the whole labour will be in vain. Unnecessary labour is forbidden on a Festival.

(19) For even if it does get torn it is of no consequence, for one is liable only if the tearing is for the purpose of sewing it up again.

(20) Cf. supra p. 33a.

(21) Heb. mukzeh. Which require designation for the Sabbath.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 34b

ON THE EVE OF A SABBATH IN THE SABBATICAL YEAR¹ AND SAY: FROM THIS PART WILL I EAT TO-MORROW.² BUT THE SAGES SAY: ONLY IF HE MARKS IT OUT AND SAYS, 'FROM HERE UNTO THERE.'

GEMARA. We have learnt elsewhere.³ If children put away figs⁴ [in the field] on the eve of Sabbath [for the Sabbath] and they forgot and did not tithe them, [before the Sabbath], they may not be eaten after the Sabbath until they have been tithed.⁵ And we have also learnt:⁶ If one was carrying figs through his court for drying,⁷ his children and the members of his household may make a light meal of them and are exempt [from tithes].⁸ Raba asked R. Nahman: Does the Sabbath establish a liability to tithes in the case of drying figs,⁹ seeing that they were not completely ready [for eating]?¹⁰ Do we say, Since it is written, And [thou shalt] call the Sabbath a delight,¹¹ it [the Sabbath] establishes a liability even where the commodity is not completely ready [for tithing], or perhaps it [the Sabbath] establishes liability only where the commodity is completely ready [for tithing], but not where the commodity is not yet completely ready? — He replied to him: The Sabbath establishes liability whether the commodity is completely ready [for tithing] or not. He said to him: Say [perhaps] that the Sabbath is like a court? Just as a court establishes liability only where the commodity is completely ready [for tithing],¹² so also the Sabbath does not establish liability save where the commodity is completely ready? — He replied to him: We have a distinct teaching that the Sabbath establishes liability both where the commodity is completely ready and where the commodity is not completely ready [for tithing]. Mar Zutra son of R. Nahman said: We have likewise learnt: R. Eliezer further said: A MAN MAY STAND NEAR HIS DRYING FIGS ON THE EVE OF A SABBATH IN THE SABBATICAL YEAR etc.: Thus it is only in the Sabbatical year, when it is free from tithe; but in the other years of the septennate it would be forbidden;¹³ [and] for what reason? Is it not because the Sabbath establishes liability! — No, there it is different; since he says, FROM THIS PART WILL I EAT TO-MORROW, he established liability for himself.¹⁴ If so, why particularly the Sabbath; this holds good even on a weekday? — This is what he informs us, [namely] that tebel¹⁵ is regarded as mukan

(1) V. Lev. XXV, 1-7. In the Sabbatical year fruit is tithe-free.

(2) Such designation is sufficient for he holds the rule of retrospective selection, i.e., a selection made subsequently is of legal effect retrospectively, as though it were made earlier—here, as though he expressly designated the particular figs to-morrow.

(3) Ma'as. IV, 2.

- (4) Which were ready for eating and therefore liable for tithing.
- (5) Although a light meal of untithed fruit is permitted before it has been brought into the house or the court (v. B.M. 88a), appointing these figs for the Sabbath marks the end of their ingathering and they become liable to tithe.
- (6) Ma'as. III, 1.
- (7) The preparation of which is not yet complete.
- (8) Although they have been brought into the court.
- (9) Heb. mukzeh.
- (10) Lit., 'its work (of storing) is not finished'. This clause is explanatory of the word mukzeh, Rashi.
- (11) Isa. LVIII, 13.
- (12) Cf. Mishnah, Ma'as. III, I cited supra.
- (13) To eat the fruit without tithing.

with respect to Sabbath, so that if one transgressed and tithed it, it is fit for use.¹ But is not the remainder put back; and we know R. Eliezer to hold that whenever the remainder can be put back, it does not establish liability?² For we have learnt: If one took olives out of the vat he may dip them in salt one at a time and eat them [untithed]; but if he dipped ten³ [in salt] and placed them before him he is liable.⁴ R. Eliezer says: [If he takes them] from a clean vat he is liable; from an unclean vat, he is exempt, because he can put back what remains over.⁵ And we argued on this: What is the difference between the first clause and the last clause?⁶ And R. Abbahu answered: The first clause treats of a clean vat and an unclean person, so that he cannot put the remainder back;⁷ the last clause treats of an unclean vat and an unclean person, so that he can put it back! — Our Mishnah too treats of clean drying figs and an unclean person who cannot put it back. But surely they are de facto put back?⁸ — Rather said R. Simi b. Ashi:⁹ You speak of R. Eliezer? R. Eliezer follows his opinion [expressed elsewhere]; for he says that [separating] terumah¹⁰ establishes liability, how much more so the Sabbath.¹¹ For we have learnt: If terumah had been separated from fruits before they were completely ready [for tithing],¹² R. Eliezer forbids a light meal to be made of it, but the Sages permit.¹³

Come and hear [a support] from the second clause: BUT THE SAGES SAY: ONLY IF HE MARKS IT OUT AND SAYS: FROM HERE UNTO THERE. Thus it is only on the eve of a Sabbath in the Sabbatical year, when it is free from tithe; but in other years of the septennate, it would be forbidden. What is the reason? Surely because the Sabbath establishes liability? — No, there it is different; since he says, FROM HERE UNTO THERE WILL I EAT TOMORROW, he made it liable for tithing. If so, why particularly of Sabbath: this holds good even on a weekday? This is what he informs us, [namely] that tebel is mukhan with respect to Sabbath, so that if one transgressed and separated the tithe, it is fit for use. But the following contradicts this: If one was eating a cluster of grapes¹⁴ and entered from the garden into the court,¹⁵ R. Eliezer says: He may finish [eating it without tithing], [but] R. Joshua maintains: He may not finish. If it was getting dark towards the Sabbath,¹⁶ R. Eliezer says: He may finish [eating the cluster of grapes], [but] R. Joshua maintains: He may not finish.¹⁷ — There [it is different] as the passage is explained:¹⁸ R. Nathan says: When R. Eliezer said, 'He may finish', he did not mean that he may finish [eating it] in the court, but he must leave the court and finish [it in his garden]; and when R. Eliezer said, 'He may finish', he did not [mean] that he may finish [it] on the Sabbath, but he waits until the termination of the Sabbath and finishes [it]. When Rabin came [from Palestine], he said in the name of R. Johanan: Neither the Sabbath nor [the separating of] terumah nor [bringing the fruit into the] court, nor [the act of] purchasing establish liability save where it was [otherwise] completely ready [for tithing]. 'The Sabbath', to reject the opinion of Hillel; for it was taught: if one carries fruit from one place to another¹⁹ and the holiness of the [Sabbath] day came upon him, said R. Judah: Hillel alone forbids

- (1) On the Sabbath, for the designation of the day before is valid; and the tithing too is valid, since the prohibition of the tithing on a Sabbath is only Rabbinical.
- (2) How much more so is it not liable for tithing when he merely said, 'From here will I eat to-morrow'.
- (3) 'Ten' is absent in the Mishnayoth: it thus means, if he dipped a fair number, etc.
- (4) By thus placing them all in front of him and not eating each as he dips it into the salt, he shows that he wishes to make a proper meal of them, not a mere snack, and a proper meal is forbidden before tithing.
- (5) Ma'as. IV, 3. When he can put the remainder back, even if he takes many he does not mean to make a proper meal, as he may eat a few only; hence he is not liable. But when he cannot put the remainder back, and he takes a number, he evidently intends to eat them all now, and this intention establishes liability to tithes because it will constitute a full and proper meal.
- (6) Even in a clean vat one can put back the fruit left over.
- (7) Because he renders what he touches unclean, and so this in turn will defile the olives in the vat if he puts it back.
- (8) Since they have never been taken out; he merely designated them by word of mouth.
- (9) In truth it is not his speech but the Sabbath that establishes liability; nevertheless our Mishnah does not support R. Nahman, because it only quotes the view of R. Eliezer, but the Sages differ.
- (10) V. Glos.
- (11) But the Sages who differ with respect to terumah differ also with respect to Sabbath.
- (12) I.e., before their preparation was complete and therefore not yet liable to tithe.
- (13) Ma'as. II, 4. — R. Eliezer holds that the separating of terumah though it was as yet unnecessary, has established a liability to tithes too, though it is not yet completely ready. But the Sages dispute this.
- (14) The grapes are tithe-free until they are brought within the owner's court. When yet in the vineyard, the owner may eat of them a slender meal, for their preparation for tithing is regarded complete only when made into wine.
- (15) Which makes the grapes liable to tithe, without which even a light meal is now forbidden.
- (16) When it is forbidden to tithe. — This is a separate case and does not refer to when he entered the court.
- (17) Ter. VIII, 3. Hence it is to be inferred that R. Eliezer does not hold that the Sabbath establishes liability for tithing.
- (18) In Tosef. Ter. VII.
- (19) This follows the text of the Tosefta, which is preferable to that of our edd. [The Fruit was evidently taken for drying; v. Wilna Gaon Ma'as. III and cf. R. Hananel a.l. Assuming that לקצור 'to harvest' in cur. edd. is a scribal error for לקצות 'to dry', the reading of cur. edd. yields equally good sense.]
- (20) But all the other scholars allow.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 35b

'Court', to reject the opinion of R. Jacob, for we have learnt: If one was carrying figs into his court for drying, his children and the members of his household may eat of them a light meal and are exempt [from tithes]; and with respect to this, it was taught: R. Jacob makes him liable for tithing and R. Jose son of R. Judah exempts [him].

'Terumah', to reject the opinion of R. Eliezer; for we have learnt: If one separated terumah from fruits before they were completely ready [for tithing] R. Eliezer forbids a light meal to be made of it, but the Sages permit.¹

'Purchasing', as it was taught: If one bought figs from an 'am ha-arez² in a district where the majority of the people press [them], he may eat thereof a light meal and he tithes them as demai.³ Infer from this three things; infer from this [that] 'purchasing' establishes liability only where it was completely ready [for tithing]; infer from this also [that] the majority of the 'amme ha-arez do tithe [their produce]; and [further] infer from this [that] one should tithe the demai of an 'am ha-arez even of a commodity whose preparation has not yet been completed. And it⁴ is to reject that which we have learnt: If one exchanges fruit with his neighbour, the one intending to eat them [as they are] and the other intending to eat them, or the one intending to dry them and the other intending to dry them, or the one intending to eat them and the other intending to dry them, they are both liable.⁵ R. Judah says: He who intends eating it is liable,⁶ but he who intends drying it is exempt.⁷

CHAPTER V

MISHNAH. ONE MAY LET DOWN FRUIT⁸ THROUGH A TRAP-DOOR ON A FESTIVAL BUT NOT ON A SABBATH, AND COVER UP FRUIT WITH VESSELS ON ACCOUNT OF THE RAIN; AND LIKEWISE JARS OF WINE AND JARS OF OIL; AND [EVEN] ON A SABBATH ONE MAY PLACE A VESSEL BENEATH THE DROPS OF RAIN.

GEMARA. It was stated: Rab Judah and R. Nathan [dispute]; one recites MASHILLIN⁹ and the other teaches MASHHILLIN. Said Mar Zutra: The one that recites MASHILLIN does not teach wrongly and the other who recites MASHHILLIN does not teach wrongly. The one that recites MASHILLIN does not teach wrongly for it is written, For thine olives shall drop off, [yishshal];¹⁰ and the other who recites MASHHILLIN does not teach wrongly for we have learnt: [If the firstling is a] shahol or a kasol [it may be slaughtered]; ‘shahol’ [means an animal] whose hip has become dislocated¹¹ and ‘kasol’ [means an animal] one of whose hips is higher than the other.¹² R. Nahman b. Isaac said: The One that recites MASHIRIN does not teach wrongly and the one that recites MASHHIRIN does not teach wrongly, and the one that recites MANSHIRIN does not teach wrongly. The one that recites MASHIRIN does not teach wrongly, for we have learnt: R. Ishmael says: A Nazirite may not shampoo his head with clay because it makes the hair fall out [mashir];¹³ and the one that recites MASHHIRIN does not teach wrongly, for we have learnt: The hair-clip [shahor] and the barber's scissors are susceptible to defilement even though they [the two parts] are separated;¹⁴ and the one that recites MANSHIRIN does not teach wrongly, for we have learnt: If one's clothes fell [nashru] in the water [on a Sabbath], he may walk in them without fear.¹⁵ Alternatively, from the following teaching: What is leket?¹⁶ That which was let fall [nashar] at the time of harvesting.¹⁷ We have learnt: YOU MAY LET DOWN FRUIT THROUGH A TRAPDOOR ON A FESTIVAL? How much?¹⁸ — Said R. Zera in the name of R. Assi — some say, R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: Like that which we have learnt: One may clear away [on Sabbath as much as] four or five bundles of straw or grain¹⁹ on account of guests or to avoid disturbance of study.²⁰ But perhaps it is different there where study would [otherwise] be disturbed, but here where there is no disturbance of study it is not so!²¹ Or perhaps there [as many as] four or five bundles are allowed [to be cleared away] because the Sabbath is stringent and [people] will not come to treat it lightly, but on a Festival, which is less stringent and people might come to treat it lightly, he may not [move any at all]! Or [argue] in the reverse: There [only four or five are allowed] because no monetary loss is involved, but here where monetary loss is involved²² even more is allowed!

(3) ‘Suspect produce’, i.e. produce regarding which it is not known whether the prescribed tithes have been duly set apart by the vendor before selling.

(4) The statement of Rabin in the name of R. Johanan above.

(5) For exchange is a purchase, and this Tanna holds that purchase establishes liability even when the commodity is not completely ready.

(6) For it is ready as far as he is concerned.

(7) For it is not ready for him, and R. Judah holds that purchase itself does not establish liability.

(8) Spread out on the roof for drying.

(9) This and all the following verbs have the significance of letting down.

(10) Deut. XXVIII, 40. Mashillin is from the same root (nashal).

(11) I.e., dropped, and mashhillin therefore has the same sense.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 36a

[Moreover] we have learnt there:¹ But [one may] not [clear away] the store-house; and Samuel said: What means 'but [one may] not [clear away] the storehouse'? [It means,] But one may not clear away the entire store² lest he come to level out hollows.³ Now what is the law here?⁴ [Do I say that] it is forbidden there, on the Sabbath, because it is stringent, but on a Festival which is less stringent it is permitted; or perhaps [I can argue], if there where there is disturbance of study, you say that it is forbidden, here where there is no disturbance of study how much the more? [Furthermore] we have learnt here: ONE MAY LET DOWN FRUIT THROUGH A TRAP-DOOR ON A FESTIVAL; and R. Nahman said: They taught this only with respect to the same roof, but not from one roof to another. And it was likewise taught: One may not move [things] from one roof to another even when the roofs are level with each other.⁵ Now how is it there [on the Sabbath]?⁶ [Do I say that] here only it is forbidden, because a Festival is less stringent and [people] might come to treat it lightly, but on a Sabbath which is stringent and [people] will not come to treat it lightly, it is allowed; or perhaps [I can argue], if here, where loss of fruit is involved, you say that it is not [permitted] there, where no damage of fruit is involved, how much the more? [Again] it was taught here:⁷ He may not let them [the bundles] down through windows with ropes, nor may he bring them, down by means of ladders. How is it there?⁸ [Do I say that] only here, on a Festival it is forbidden, because no disturbance of study is involved, but [there] on the Sabbath, where there is a disturbance of study, it is allowed: or perhaps [I can argue], if here where damage of fruit is involved, you say that it is forbidden, there where no damage of fruit is involved, how much the more? The questions remain undecided.

AND ONE MAY COVER UP FRUIT. 'Ulla said: Even a stack of loose bricks.⁹ R. Isaac said: [Only] fruits which are useable [may be covered]. And R. Isaac follows his opinion [expressed elsewhere]; for R. Isaac said: A utensil may be handled [on Sabbath] only for the benefit of a thing which itself may be handled on the Sabbath.¹⁰

We have learnt: ONE MAY COVER UP FRUIT WITH VESSELS; only fruit but not a stack of loose bricks! — The same is true even of a stack of loose bricks; but because he teaches in the first part [of the Mishnah], ONE MAY LET DOWN FRUIT,¹¹ he teaches also in the concluding part, ONE MAY COVER UP FRUIT.

We have learnt: AND LIKEWISE JARS OF WINE AND JARS OF OIL!¹² — We are dealing here with tebel.¹³ This too is logical: for if you maintain [that we are dealing with] jars of wine and oil which are permitted, surely this he already teaches in the first clause, viz., FRUITS!¹⁴ — It is especially necessary to teach this with respect to jars of wine and oil; for I might have thought that the Rabbis took into consideration only a great loss,¹⁵ but a small loss they did not take into consideration, so he informs us [that it is not so].

We have learnt: ON A SABBATH YOU MAY PLACE A VESSEL BENEATH THE DROPS OF RAIN!¹⁶ — [It deals here] with respect to rain fit for use.¹⁷ Come and hear: One may spread a mat over bricks on a Sabbath!¹⁸ — [It treats of bricks] that were left over from a building and which are fit to sit on.

Come and hear: You may spread a mat over stones on a Sabbath!¹⁹ — [It treats] of smoothly pointed stones which are fit for a privy.

Come and hear: One may spread a mat over a beehive on a Sabbath,²⁰ in sunny weather on account of the sun and in rainy weather on account of the rain, provided that he does not intend to capture [the bees]! — There likewise [it treats of a case] where it contains honey.²¹ R. Ukba of Meshan²² said to R. Ashi: This is well in summer when there is honey [in the hive], but in winter how is it to be explained? — It is especially necessary to teach this with respect to the two honeycombs.²³ But these two honeycombs are mukzeh!²⁴ — We deal here with a case where he reserved them [for his use]. But what if he did not reserve them for his use? [It is] forbidden! Then instead of teaching, 'provided that he does not intend to capture [the bees]', he should teach a distinction with respect to [the first case] itself,²⁵ [viz.], This applies only when he has reserved them for his use, but if he did not reserve them for his use it is forbidden? — This is what he means to say; even though he has reserved them, [for his use he may cover them with a mat] provided always that he does not intend to capture [the bees]. How have you explained it:²⁶ according to R. Judah who holds the law of mukzeh?²⁷ But say the concluding part: provided that he does not intend to capture [the bees]: this is in accordance with R. Simeon, who says, An unintentional act is permitted!²⁸ — Do you then think [the concluding clause] is according to R. Simeon? Surely Abaye and Raba both said: R. Simeon agrees [that it is forbidden] in the case of 'Cut off his head but let him not die'.²⁹ — In point of fact, the whole [Mishnah there] is according to R. Judah, and we are dealing here with a case where it [the beehive] has a little window;³⁰ and do not say, according to R. Judah provided that he does not intend to capture [the bees]

(7) With respect to clearing bundles on a Festival.

(8) On the Sabbath, may one remove for the sake of guests or the study of the Law?

(9) May be covered up, even though the bricks themselves may not be moved.

(10) Since the bricks may not be handled, nothing else (e.g., a tarpaulin) may be handled to cover them.

(11) I.e. only that which is fit for use on the Sabbath or Festival and hence may be handled.

(12) Implying, but not bricks.

(13) Which, like the bricks, are not useable on a Festival and therefore may not be moved, yet they may be covered. Hence bricks are the same.

(14) For obviously they are alike.

(15) The rain can cause greater damage to fruit than to the jars of wine or oil.

(16) The rain-drops are likewise not useable, and therefore may not be handled, and yet a vessel may be handled for receiving them.

(18) To protect them from rain, although the bricks are for building purposes and may not be moved; cf. Shab. 43a.

(27) For otherwise you could have answered that it agrees with R. Simeon, who rejects the law of mukzeh.

(28) Provided that the act he is doing is permitted, he is not made to refrain because he may unintentionally also do something forbidden. V. Shab. 50b. Whereas R. Judah is of the opinion that all unintentional act is prohibited.

(29) This is an idiom describing the inevitable result of an unintentional act; i.e., where an unintentional act must inevitably result in a forbidden act, R. Simeon agrees that it is forbidden. Here too, he inevitably captures the bees, so that even R. Simeon should forbid it. V. Keth., Sonc. ed. p. 20, n. 8.

but say rather, provided that he does not make it [the beehive] a trap.¹ [But] this is obvious! — You might say [that] catching is forbidden only in respect of a kind of creature which one usually catches, but with respect to the sort which one does not usually catch,² it is permitted; so he informs us [that it is not so]. R. Ashi says:³ Does he then teach ‘in summer and in winter’? He teaches ‘in sunny weather on account of the sun and in rainy weather on account of the rain’, [i.e.,] in the days of Nisan and in the days of Tishri⁴ when there is both sun and rain as well as honey present.

ON SABBATH ONE MAY PLACE A VESSEL BENEATH THE DROPS OF RAIN. It was taught: If the vessel became full, he may keep on pouring it out as it fills and put it back again without restraint. In the mill-room of Abaye rain trickled through.⁵ He came before Rabbah who said to him: Go, bring in your bed there, so that it [the mill] may be regarded by you like a commode⁶ and [so] take it out. Abaye sat and put himself the question: May then one make of anything a commode at the outset?⁷ In the meantime Abaye's mill fell to pieces. He said: I well deserve it, for I have transgressed the words of my Master.⁸ Samuel said. The commode and the chamber-pot may be taken out to the dung-heap [for emptying], and when he brings them back, he is to pour water therein and [then] take them back.⁹ From this they [the disciples] concluded that one may carry out [the contents of] the commode by means of the vessel but not the ordure itself;¹⁰ [but] come and hear [to the contrary]: Once a mouse was found in a scent-box belonging to R. Ashi. R. Ashi said to them: Take it by the tail and bring it out.¹¹

MISHNAH. EVERY [ACT] THAT IS CULPABLE¹² ON A SABBATH AS A SHEBUTH,¹³ [OR] AN OPTIONAL ACT [RESHUTH], [OR] A RELIGIOUS ACT,¹⁴ IS ALSO CULPABLE ON A FESTIVAL. THE FOLLOWING ACTS ARE CULPABLE AS A SHEBUTH: ONE MAY NOT CLIMB A TREE, NOR RIDE A BEAST, NOR SWIM IN WATER, NOR CLAP THE HANDS, NOR SLAP [THE THIGHS], NOR DANCE. THE FOLLOWING ARE CULPABLE AS OPTIONAL SECULAR ACTS: ONE MAY NOT JUDGE,¹⁵ NOR BETROTH A WIFE, NOR PERFORM HALIZAH,¹⁶ NOR PERFORM YIBBUM [CONSUMATE A LEVIRATE MARRIAGE].¹⁷ THE FOLLOWING ARE CULPABLE AS RELIGIOUS ACTS: ONE MAY NOT DEDICATE [ANYTHING TO THE TEMPLE], NOR VOW A PERSONAL VALUATION,¹⁸ NOR MAKE A VOW OF HEREM,¹⁹ NOR SET ASIDE TERUMAH OR TITHES. ALL THESE THINGS THEY [THE RABBIS] PRESCRIBED [AS CULPABLE] ON A FESTIVAL, HOW MUCH MORE [ARE THEY CULPABLE] ON SABBATH. THE FESTIVAL, DIFFERS FROM THE SABBATH ONLY IN RESPECT OF THE PREPARATION OF FOOD ALONE.

GEMARA. ONE MAY NOT CLIMB A TREE; it is a preventive measure lest he pluck [fruit]. NOR RIDE A BEAST; it is a Preventive measure lest he might go without the tehum.²⁰ Then this proves that the law of tehum is Biblical?²¹ — Rather say, it is a preventive measure lest he cut off a switch.²²

NOR SWIM IN WATER; it is a preventive measure lest he might make a swimming bladder.

NOR CLAP THE HANDS, NOR SLAP THE THIGHS, NOR DANCE; it is a preventive measure lest he might repair musical instruments.

THE FOLLOWING ARE CULPABLE AS OPTIONAL SECULAR ACTS: ONE MAY NOT JUDGE: But is he not discharging a religious act?²³ — This holds good only where a more capable person is available.²⁴

NOR BETROTH A WIFE. Is he not discharging a religious obligation?²⁵ — It treats of one who [already] has a wife and children.¹

NOR PERFORM HALIZAH, NOR PERFORM YIBBUM. Is he not performing a religious act? — It treats of a case where there is an elder [brother] and it is a [prior] obligation for the elder [brother] to consummate a levirate marriage. And on account of what are all these [forbidden]? — It is a preventive measure lest he write.²

THE FOLLOWING ARE CULPABLE AS RELIGIOUS ACTS: ONE MAY NOT DEDICATE, NOR VOW A PERSONAL VALUATION, NOR MAKE A VOW OF HEREM; [they are forbidden] as preventive measures lest one transact business.³

NOR SET ASIDE TERUMAH OR TITHES. This is obvious!⁴ R. Joseph taught: It is necessary [to teach this] even in the case of giving them to the priest on the same day [of the Festival].⁵ This, however, applies only to produce which was tebel⁶ since the day before; but with respect to produce which is only just now become tebel, as for example to set aside hallah from dough, he may set them [tithes] aside and give them to the priest. Are then these acts⁷ culpable only as reshuth and not as shebuth?⁸ And are those acts⁹ culpable only as religious acts and not as shebuth? Said R. Isaac: He proceeds to a climax;¹⁰ not only is an act which is purely a shebuth¹¹ forbidden, but even a shebuth which partakes of an optional [meritorious] act¹² is also forbidden; and not only is a shebuth partaking of an optional [meritorious] act forbidden, but even a shebuth partaking of a religious obligation¹³ is also forbidden.

ALL THESE THINGS THEY FORBADE ON A FESTIVAL [etc.]. But the following contradicts this. One may let down fruit through a trap-door on a Festival but not on a Sabbath!¹⁴ — Said R. Joseph: There is no contradiction: the one¹⁵ is according to R. Eliezer, the other is according to R. Joshua. For it was taught: If it [an animal] and its young fell into a pit,¹⁶ R. Eliezer says: He may bring up one of them in order to slaughter it and must slaughter it; and as for the other, he feeds it in the very place [it fell], so that it should not die. R. Joshua says: He brings up one in order to slaughter it but does not slaughter it, and he uses subtlety¹⁷ and again brings up the second [animal]; and he may slaughter whichever he desires.¹⁸ Abaye said to him: Whence [do you know that it is so]? Perhaps R. Eliezer said so only there where one can feed the animal,¹⁹ but not here where no feeding is possible.²⁰ Or [perhaps] R. Joshua ruled thus only there, where one can make use of subtlety, but not here where it is not possible to make use of subtlety?²¹ — Rather said R. Papa: There is no contradiction: the one²² is according to Beth Shammai, the other is according to Beth Hillel. For we have learnt: Beth Shammai say: One may not carry out an infant or a lulab or a Scroll of the Law into public ground; but Beth Hillel permit it.²³ But perhaps it is not so! [Perhaps] Beth Shammai ruled thus only there, with respect to carrying out, but not with respect to handling?²⁴ — Is not handling needed for carrying out?²⁵

MISHNAH. CATTLE AND UTENSILS ARE [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE FEET OF THE OWNERS.²⁶ IF ONE GIVES HIS COW OVER TO HIS SON OR TO A HERDSMAN [TO TEND], THEY²⁷ ARE [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE FEET OR THE OWNER. [ANY] UTENSILS WHICH HAVE BEEN SET APART FOR [THE USE OR] ONE OF THE BRETHREN IN A HOUSE, ARE [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS HIS FEET; BUT [THOSE UTENSILS] WHICH HAVE NOT BEEN SO SET APART, CAN BE TAKEN [ONLY] WHERE [ALL THE BRETHREN] MAY GO.²⁸ IF ONE BORROWS A VESSEL FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR ON THE EVE OF A FESTIVAL, [IT IS RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE FEET OF THE BORROWER; [BUT IF HE BORROWED IT] ON THE FESTIVAL, IT IS AS THE FEET OR THE LENDER. LIKEWISE A WOMAN THAT BORROWED FROM HER NEIGHBOUR CONDIMENTS, WATER OR SALT FOR HER DOUGH, THESE ARE [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE FEET OF THEM BOTH.²⁹ R. JUDAH EXEMPTS IN THE CASE OF WATER,³⁰ BECAUSE IT IS NOT SUBSTANTIAL.³¹

GEMARA. Our Mishnah

(1) V. Mishnah. Yeb. 61b.

- (2) The betrothal or marriage contracts.
- (3) Since these partake somewhat of that nature.
- (4) [It is not quite obvious, and Rashi seems to omit the question as well as 'It is necessary' in the reply, reading, 'R. Joseph taught: Even in the case etc.'. V. D.S. a.l.]
- (5) Although it is not then evident that the setting aside of the tithes was for his own benefit; rather has it the appearance that he is doing it in the interest of the priest.
- (6) V. Glos.
- (7) Not judging, etc.
- (8) Surely they too are forbidden on account of shebuth for the reason stated supra.
- (9) Not dedicating, etc.
- (10) Lit., "He says it is unnecessary" etc.'.
- (11) Which have no semblance of religious merit in them, such as climbing a tree, etc.
- (12) Such as are enumerated in the middle list.
- (13) Such as are enumerated in the last list.
- (14) Whereas from the end of our Mishnah it is to be inferred that no difference exists between Sabbaths and Festivals except in the preparation of food alone.
- (15) Our Mishnah which teaches that every action forbidden on a Sabbath on account of shebuth is also forbidden on a Festival, implying even though it entails a monetary loss.
- (16) On a Festival, when one may bring up the animals for slaughtering only. On the other hand, it is forbidden to slaughter an animal together with its young on the same day. Lev. XXII, 28.
- (17) By preferring the other animal for slaughter.
- (18) V. Shab. 117b, 124a.
- (19) So that no monetary loss is incurred.
- (20) Perhaps in such a case even R. Eliezer would permit it on a Festival, and yet not on the Sabbath.
- (21) I.e., where it is impossible to give the pretence that the proposed action is entirely permissible in itself, even R. Joshua may forbid it.
- (22) Our Mishnah.
- (23) V. supra 12a. [It is assumed that just as Beth Shammai forbid carrying into the public ground anything not connected with preparation of food, so they would forbid the handling of such things even when money loss is involved].
- (24) I.e., moving it from one part of the house to another.
- (25) Before an article can be carried out it must be moved and handled, and it was only on that account that handling is forbidden (Rashi). Hence where carrying out is forbidden, handling and moving are likewise.
- (26) They may be taken on a Festival only where the owner may go. [On Sabbath and Festivals it is permitted to walk within two thousand cubits in all directions from the boundaries of the town where one lives. Should one wish to walk beyond that limit, he can do so by depositing an 'erub at the end of the two thousand cubits in the direction he wishes to go, from which point he may again walk another two thousand cubits. Having however gained the two thousand cubit limit in one direction, he forfeits his right of movement in the opposite direction outside the town boundary].
- (27) Such animals — the plural is used generically.
- (28) I.e., if each brother has a different Sabbath limit, their common utensils are restricted to the area common to them all.
- (29) The dough may only be brought to that place where both may go.
- (30) I.e., the ownership of the water does not affect the dough.
- (31) I.e., it is not noticeable as a separate ingredient and therefore does not affect the status of the dough.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 37b is not as R. Dosa, for it was taught: R. Dosa says — some say, Abba Saul says: If one buys a beast from his neighbour on the eve of the Festival, even though he did not deliver it to him until the Festival, it is [restricted to the same limits] as the feet of the purchaser; and if one handed over a beast to a herdsman, even though he did not deliver it to him until the Festival, it is [restricted to the same limits] as the feet of the herdsman! — You can even say, it is as R. Dosa, and there is no contradiction: Here it treats of one herdsman and there of two herdsmen.¹ This call also be proved; for it teaches TO HIS SON ON TO A HERDSMAN;² infer from this [that it is so]. Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: The halachah is as R. Dosa. Did then R. Johanan say thus? But surely R. Johanan has said: The halachah is as an anonymous Mishnah, and we have learnt: CATTLE AND UTENSILS ARE AS THE FEET OF THE OWNERS [etc.!] — Have we not already explained, here it treats of one herdsman and there of two herdsmen! Our Rabbis taught: If two people borrowed one garment jointly,³ one to wear it⁴ in the morning at the Academy and the other to wear it in the evening⁵ at a banquet, the one setting an 'erub on the north [side of the town] and the other on the south [side], [then] the one who set the 'erub on the north [side] may walk in it to the north [side] only as far as the other who set his 'erub on the south [side] is allowed to go; and the one who set the 'erub on the south may wear it to the south only as far as the other who set the 'erub on the north may go; and if they measured the Sabbath limit exactly,⁶ then it [the garment] may not be moved from its place.⁷ It was stated: If two [men] bought a barrel and an animal⁸ in partnership, Rab says: The barrel is permitted⁹ but the animal is forbidden;¹⁰ Samuel, however, says: The barrel too is forbidden. What is Rab's opinion? If he holds that selection is retrospective,¹¹ then the animal too should be permitted; and if he holds that selection is not retrospective, then the barrel too should be forbidden! In reality he holds that selection is retrospective, but the case of an animal is different, because the territories draw their vitality from one another.¹² R. Kahana and R. Assi said to Rab: They [the partners] do not take into account the prohibition of mukzeh, but they do take into account the prohibition of boundary limits!¹³ Rab was silent. How does the law stand? R. Oshaia says, Selection is retrospective, and R. Johanan maintains: Selection is not retrospective. Does then R. Oshaia hold the law of bererah? But surely we have learnt:¹⁴ If a corpse [lay] in a room which has many doors they are all unclean; if one of these [doors] was opened, it alone is unclean and all the others are clean. If he formed the intention to take it [the corpse] out through one of them, or through a window which [measures] four handbreadths square, this gives protection to all the other doors. Beth Shammai Say: Providing that he had formed his intention to take it out before the person died; but Beth Hillel Say: [It holds good] even [if his intention was formed] after the person died. And it was stated thereon: R. Oshaia said: [The statement of Beth Hillel is] with respect to the cleansing of the doors from now and onwards. Only 'from now and onwards' but not retrospectively! — Reverse [the authorities]; R. Oshaia Says, selection is not retrospective and R. Johanan maintains: Selection is retrospective. Does then R. Johanan hold that selection is retrospective? Surely R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan: Brothers who have divided [an inheritance] are considered as purchasers¹⁵ and must restore [their shares] to one another in the year of Jubilee!¹⁶ And if you answer that R. Johanan does not hold that Selection is retrospective in the case of a Biblical [law]¹⁷ but with respect to a Rabbinical [law]¹⁸ he does hold, [I would object] does he then hold in the case of a Rabbinical [law], but Ayyo taught:¹⁹ R. Judah says: A man cannot conditionally reserve for himself two contingencies simultaneously; but if a scholar comes to the East, his 'erub to the East is valid: if to the West, his 'erub to the West is valid.²⁰ However, he cannot [stipulate] when there are two scholars coming on different sides.

(1) If there are in the town several herdsmen, the owner cannot know which will take over the beast and therefore it is restricted to the feet of the owner. But if there is only one, it is tacitly assumed that it will be entrusted to him, and therefore it automatically takes his status.

(2) Since the Mishnah states an alternative, we see that the circumstances are such that he is not restricted to one person only, and that is the same as where there are several herdsmen in the town.

(3) Before the Festival.

(4) Lit., 'to go out in it'.

(5) Of the Festival.

(6) I.e., if each set his 'erub at the extreme limit of his boundary.

(7) It may not be taken without the town at all (cf. supra p. 188, n. 10).

(8) On the eve of the Festival to be divided on the Festival.

(9) To be carried by each according to his territory limit.

- (10) To be carried save in the area where they may both go.
- (11) I.e., what each was to receive on the Festival is assumed as having been determined before the Festival.
- (12) I.e., the animal is one indivisible whole before it is killed, and the portion which subsequently falls to one could not at the beginning of the Festival be accounted as cut off from the other.
- (13) Rashi: We can see that each partner did not put the portion of his other partner so much out of his mind that his own should be forbidden because it drew vitality from his partner's, (for if he had put it out of mind, his partner's portion would be forbidden to him as mukzeh, and his own too, on the present hypothesis, since it draws vitality from the other). Why then should we assume that he does take his partner's portion into account in respect of boundaries? Tosaf. explains this differently.
- (14) V. supra 10a, for notes.
- (15) I.e., the portion chosen by each brother for himself cannot be considered as having thus retrospectively become the very inheritance designated for him, v. B.K., Sonc. ed. p. 399 and notes.
- (16) Because there is no fictitious understanding that the father had given that part to one brother and the other part to the other. Purchased property returns in the year of Jubilee to the former owners. V. Lev. XXV, 8ff. V. B.K. 69b, Git. 25a and 48a.
- (17) As for example the law of Jubilee.
- (18) As for example the law of tehum.
- (19) In 'Err. 36b a Mishnah teaches that if two scholars were coming near to him, one to the East and one to the West, he may place two 'erubs and on the Sabbath choose to which of these two he should go. R. Judah, according to Ayyo, disputes this.
- (20) I.e., if only one scholar was coming and it was not definite whether he would be coming to the East or to the West.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 38a

And we raised the question: Why is it that he cannot [stipulate] when there are two scholars coming on different sides? Because we do not hold that selection is retrospective; then even [if a scholar came] to the East or to the West we should likewise not maintain that selection is retrospective! And R. Johanan answered: It treats of a case where the scholar had already come.¹ Consequently [we see that] R. Johanan does not hold that selection is retrospective! But in reality do not reverse [the authorities]; but R. Oshaia does not hold that selection is retrospective [only] in respect of a Biblical [law], but in respect to a Rabbinical [law] he does hold it. Mar Zutra lectured: The halachah is as R. Oshaia. Samuel said: The ox of a cattle breeder is as the feet of all;² the ox of a herdsman is as the feet [of the people] of that town.³

IF ONE BORROWS A VESSEL FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL [etc.]. This is obvious! — This is necessary respecting the case when it was not delivered to him until the Festival; you might think that he [the owner] did not place it in his [the borrower's] possession, so he informs us [that it is not so]. This supports R. Johanan; for R. Johanan said: If one borrows a vessel from his neighbour on the eve of a Festival, even though he did not hand it over to him until the Festival, it is as the feet of the borrower.

BUT ON THE FESTIVAL IT IS AS THE FEET OF THE LENDER. This is obvious! — This is necessary respecting the case when he is wont to borrow frequently from him; you might think that he [tacitly] puts it into his [the borrower's] possession, so he informs us [that it is not so]; for he [the owner] might say,⁴ he will probably find another person and go and borrow from him.

LIKEWISE A WOMAN THAT BORROWED FROM HER NEIGHBOUR: When R. Abba went up [to Palestine], he said: May it be the will [of God] that I may say something which is acceptable. When he came up [to Palestine] he met R. Johanan and R. Hanina b. Pappi and R. Zera — some say, R. Abbahu and R. Simeon b. Pazzi and R. Isaac the Smith; and they were sitting and saying: Why so? Let the water and the salt be nullified in relation to the dough!⁵ — R. Abba said to them:

- (1) So that the selection had already been made for him before Sabbath, though he was not aware where.
- (2) Since it may be bought by any man, it may go wherever the purchaser goes.
- (3) A cattle breeder sells to people of all districts, whereas a herdsman, though he does not generally sell, does so occasionally to people in the immediate vicinity.
- (4) Since he had not asked him.
- (5) Hence the dough would be permitted to be carried without reference to the ownership of the water and the salt!

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 38b

If one kab of wheat of one person got mixed up with ten kabs of wheat of another, should the latter eat and be happy?¹ They laughed at him. Said he to them: Have I taken away your coats [that you laugh at me]?² They again laughed at him. Said R. Oshaia: They were right in laughing at him. Why did he not say to them [as an example] of a case of wheat that got mixed up with barley? Because they are of different kinds, and in a mixture of different kinds the rule of neutralization takes effect; then the same is true of wheat that got mixed up with wheat: granted that according to R. Judah it does not become neutralized, but according to the Rabbis it indeed becomes neutralized.³ R. Safra said to him:⁴ By Moses!⁵ Is it well what you say?⁶ Did they not hear what R. Hiyya of Ktesifon⁷ said in the name of Rab: If one picks out pebbles from his neighbour's threshing floor he must pay him the value of wheat.⁸ Consequently [it is because] he lessened the measure [of his wheat];⁹ likewise in this case he has lessened the quantity.¹⁰ Said Abaye to him: Does not the Master make a distinction between money which is being claimed and money which is not being claimed?¹¹ — He replied to him: And according to your opinion, that which R. Hisda said: Nebelah¹² is neutralized in ritually slaughtered meat,¹³ because the slaughtered cannot assume the character of nebelah,¹⁴ but ritually slaughtered meat is not neutralized in nebelah, because nebelah can assume the character of ritually slaughtered meat.¹⁵ Would you likewise [assume that], if it¹⁶ has an owner, it does not become neutralized? And if you say it is even so, surely it was taught: R. Johanan b. Nuri said: Ownerless articles acquire their [Sabbath] rest;¹⁷ although they had no owner, it is the same as if they had an owner!¹⁸ — He replied to him: [Still]¹⁹ can you compare the case of a ritual prohibition with a monetary case! In the case of a ritual prohibition, it [the less] is neutralized [in the majority]; but with respect to a monetary case, it is not neutralized [in the majority]. What is now the reason?²⁰ Abaye says: It is a preventive measure lest the dough be made in partnership.²¹ Raba says: Condiments are used for seasoning and whatever is used for seasoning does not become neutralized.²²

(1) Obviously not! Similarly, the salt and water do not lose their identity in spite of the greater value of the flour.

(2) Surely I have said or done nothing absurd.

(3) Cf. Men. 22a. Hence the very basis of his answer was incorrect.

(4) To R. Oshaia (Rashi), cf. however infra p. 194, n. 1.

(5) So Rashi. Or, Moses, well hast thou spoken, 'Moses' being a title of honour, as one might say, 'O great scholar'.

(6) [Aliter 'It is well what you say'; R. Safra addressing R. Abba.]

(7) On the eastern bank of the Tigris.

(8) Corresponding to the measure of the stones picked out, since these stones are measured up with the wheat for sale.

(9) By taking out the pebbles.

(10) Through the water the quantity of the dough is enlarged and without the water the measure of the dough would be less. Hence if the pebbles, which have no intrinsic value, can nevertheless not be disregarded, surely we cannot disregard the water and the salt.

(11) The pebbles cannot be disregarded and retain their separate identity because their owner claims their value, since a loss has been inflicted upon him. In the Mishnah no such claim is made on the Festival, therefore owing to their lesser value the salt and the water may well be disregarded.

(12) V. Glos.

(13) If of three pieces of flesh, two are from a ritually slaughtered animal and one from a nebelah, then that which is touched by one of these three is not unclean, for we assume that contact has taken place with one of the pieces of the ritually slaughtered animal.

(14) Hence there are two different kinds and the rule of majority prevails.

(15) If the nebelah flesh putrefies, it loses the characteristic of nebelah flesh and does not defile.

(16) The nebelah.

(17) He who finds them may carry them two thousand cubits in every direction but not to the place for which he has set an 'erub, for that would be beyond two thousand cubits.

(18) This proves that the absence of an owner to claim a thing does not destroy the status of an object in regard to its movements on Sabbaths and Festivals.

(19) Even granted that no distinction is made between objects that have an owner and such as have none, the difficulty presented by our Mishnah still remains.

(20) For the teaching of our Mishnah that condiments, water, and salt do not become neutralized, seeing that here too we are concerned merely with a matter of ritual prohibition — moving beyond the tehum.

(21) And each carry it to his own limit, which is certainly forbidden.

(22) By its very nature.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 39a

And R. Ashi says: Because it is an object which can become [otherwise] permitted;¹ and any object which can become [otherwise] permitted is not neutralized even in two thousand [times its quantity].²

R. JUDAH EXEMPTS IN THE CASE OF WATER. Only water and not the salt? But surely it was taught: R. Judah says: Water and salt become neutralized both in dough as well as in cooked food!³ — There is no difficulty; the one treats of salt of Sodom⁴ and the other of salt of Istria.⁵ But it was taught: R. Judah says: Water and salt become neutralized in dough but do not become neutralized in cooked food, because of its fluidity!⁶ — There is no difficulty; the one treats of a thick mass, the other of clear soup.

MISHNAH. A LIVE COAL IS [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS ITS OWNER, BUT A FLAME⁷ CAN BE TAKEN ANYWHERE.⁸ ONE INCURS A TRESPASS-OFFERING IN RESPECT OF A LIVE COAL OF HEKDESH;⁹ BUT AS FOR A FLAME [OF HEKDESH], ONE MAY NEITHER BENEFIT FROM IT, NOR INCUR A TRESPASS-OFFERING.¹⁰ IF ONE CARRIES OUT A LIVE COAL INTO PUBLIC GROUND [ON A SABBATH] HE IS CULPABLE, BUT [IF HE DOES THE SAME] WITH A FLAME HE IS EXEMPT.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: Five things were said in respect to a live coal: A live coal is [restricted to the same limits] as its owner, but a flame can be taken anywhere; one incurs a trespass-offering in respect to a live coal of hekdesch, but with respect to a flame, one may not benefit from it, nor incur a trespass-offering. A live coal used in idolatrous service is forbidden but a flame is permitted; if one carries out a live coal into public ground [on a Sabbath] he is culpable, but [if he does the same] with a flame he is exempt; he who is under a vow not to benefit from his neighbour, may not make use of his coal but may make use of his flame. Now why is the flame used in idolatrous service permitted and that of hekdesch forbidden? — Idolatrous service is repugnant and people hold themselves very aloof from it, therefore the Rabbis have taken no measures against it; but as hekdesch is not repugnant and people do not hold themselves aloof from it, the Rabbis enacted a preventive measure on its account.¹¹

IF ONE CARRIES OUT A LIVE COAL INTO PUBLIC GROUND [ON A SABBATH] HE IS CULPABLE, BUT [IF HE DOES THE SAME] WITH A FLAME HE IS EXEMPT. But it was taught:¹² He who takes out a flame of whatever size is culpable! — Answered R. Shesheth: This treats of a case when he brings it [the flame] out on a chip. Then he should be liable on account of the chip! — When it is less than the standard required; for we have learnt: He who carries out wood

[is culpable only] if it is sufficient to cook therewith a small egg.¹³ Abaye says: When he smears a vessel with oil and kindles it. Then he should be liable on account of the vessel! — [We are treating] of a potsherd. Then he should be liable on account of the potsherd! — When it is less than the standard required; for we have learnt: [He is culpable that takes out] a potsherd big enough to place between one board and another;¹⁴ this is the opinion of R. Judah.¹⁵ But that which we have learnt: ‘If one carries out a flame [on a Sabbath] he is exempt’, how can it occur?¹⁶ — If, for example, he brandishes the object [that is burning so that the flame projected] into public ground.¹⁷

MISHNAH. [THE WATER FROM] A PRIVATE WELL IS [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS ITS OWNER;¹⁸ AND [THE WATER FROM A WELL] BELONGING TO THE INHABITANTS OF THAT TOWN IS [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE PEOPLE OF THAT TOWN; AND [THE WATER FROM A WELL] BELONGING TO THOSE WHO RETURNED FROM BABYLON¹⁹ IS [RESTRICTED TO THE SAME LIMITS] AS THE ONE THAT DRAWS.

GEMARA. Raba pointed out a contradiction to R. Nahman: We have learnt: [The water from] a private well is [restricted to the same limits] as its owner; but the following contradicts this: Flowing streams and bubbling springs [have the same restrictions] as anyone!²⁰ — Answered Rabbah: Our Mishnah treats of collected [water].²¹ It was likewise stated: R. Hiyya b. Abin said in the name of Samuel: [It treats] of collected [water].

AND [THE WATER FROM A WELL] BELONGING TO THOSE WHO RETURNED FROM BABYLON IS AS THE ONE THAT DRAWS. It was stated: If one draws [water] and gives it to his neighbour, R. Nahman says: [It is restricted to the same limits] as the one for whom it was drawn; [but] R. Shesheth maintains: As the one who drew. In what are they disputing? — One is of the opinion that the well is ownerless,²² while the other is of the opinion that the well is held jointly.²³

Raba raised the [following] objection to R. Nahman: If one says to his neighbour, Behold, I am herem to you,²⁴ he against whom the vow is made is forbidden;²⁵

(1) After the Festival it can be taken anywhere.

(2) This is a general rule; cf. supra 3b.

(3) [Var. lec., ‘R. Judah exempts in the case of water and salt’.]

(4) The salt of Sodom was thick and hard. V. Krauss op. cit. I, 499ff. Hence it is not neutralized as its presence is always discernable.

(5) A town in Pontus.

(6) Whereas R. Judah's exemption in our Mishnah in the case of water applies also to cooked food with which the condiments mentioned are used.

(7) I.e., if one for example lights a taper at another's flame.

(8) Within the restricted areas belonging to those who carry it.

(9) I.e., belonging to the Sanctuary. V. Lev. V, 14ff.

(10) If one does benefit from it.

(11) If people are permitted to use that, they will also put other articles of hekdesch to secular use, which is forbidden.

(12) V. Ber. 53a.

(13) I.e., the egg of a hen. Shab. 89b.

(14) To keep boards rigid and to avoid warping (Rashi).

(15) Shab. 82a.

(16) For a flame must be carried in something else.

(17) Lit., he throws’, while retaining the thing to which the flame clings.

(18) Like the individual.

(19) The wells that were dug for the use of the exiles who returned from Babylon and hence were regarded as the property of the whole nation.

(20) I.e., one may take them wherever he himself may go.

(21) I.e., a cistern.

(22) The water accordingly belongs to the one that draws, on the principle that a man cannot act as agent to acquire ownerless property on behalf of another person; v. infra p. 199, n. 9.

(23) I.e., it belongs to the whole nation, which includes him for whom the water was drawn, and the drawer of the water merely acts as his agent.

(24) I.e., I am to you as a thing that is banned.

(25) To benefit from the vower.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 39b

[if he said,] Behold, thou art herem, to thee, the vower is forbidden;¹ [if he said,] Behold, I am [herem] to thee, and thou to me, both are forbidden to benefit from one another; but [to both] is permitted the use of things that belong to them that came up from Babylon, but the use of things that belong to the citizens of that town is forbidden to both.² And the following are the things which belong to them that came up from Babylon: The Temple Mount, the [Temple] Chambers, the [Temple] Courts, and a well in the middle of the road.³ The following belong to [the citizens of] that town: The market-square, the Synagogue, and the bath-house.⁴ Now if you say that a well is held jointly, then why is it permitted? Surely we have learnt: Partners who vowed not to derive benefit from one another may not enter their [common] court-yard to bathe in the well!⁵ — To bathe in it is indeed [not allowed], but we are treating here of drawing [water]; the one draws of his own and the other draws of his own.⁶ Does then R. Nahman hold the rule of bererah, but we have learnt: Brothers who are [also] partners,⁷ when they are liable to surcharge⁸ they are exempt from cattle-tithe, and when they are liable to cattle-tithe⁹ they are exempt from the surcharge.¹⁰ And in this connection R. ‘Anan said: This¹¹ was taught only in the case when they divided goats for lambs and lambs for goats;¹² but if they divided goats for goats and lambs for lambs,¹³ we say, each receives his share which was designated for him at the very beginning.¹⁴ While R. Nahman said: Even if they divided goats for goats and lambs for lambs, we do not say each receives his share which was designated for him at the very beginning!¹⁵ — Rather, all agree that the well is ownerless, but they dispute here with respect to the case of one who picks up a lost article on behalf of his neighbour; one is of the opinion that he [the neighbour] acquires title [to it], and the other is of the opinion that he does not acquire [it].¹⁶ MISHNAH. IF ONE HAS HIS PRODUCE IN ANOTHER TOWN, THE INHABITANTS OF WHICH HAVE MADE AN ‘ERUB IN ORDER TO BRING TO HIM SOME OF HIS PRODUCE, THEY MAY NOT BRING IT TO HIM;¹⁷ BUT IF HE HIMSELF MADE AN ‘ERUB, HIS PRODUCE IS LIKE HIMSELF.¹⁸

(1) To benefit from the other.

(2) Because they are both shareholders therein.

(3) Made for the exiles who returned from Babylon to Jerusalem.

(4) Ned. 47b.

(5) [V. Ned. 45b. The words ‘to bathe in the well’ do not occur there, and are omitted here in MS.M.]

(6) I.e., what each draws is regarded as though it had retrospectively been assigned to him, so that the other never had any claim therein. This answer therefore assumes the law of bererah, v. Glos.

(7) partners are exempt from cattle-tithe (cf. Bek. 56b); brothers, on the other hand, who have come into the inheritance of their father, are liable to tithe those cattle that were born when their goods were still undivided.

(8) Every Israelite had to give half a shekel annually to the Temple for the communal sacrifices; this was augmented by an agio, i.e., a kind of premium or surcharge to cover a possible deficiency in the value of the half shekel, since the value of coins depended on their weight. If two partners combine to pay a whole shekel, they still each have to pay the extra agio. On the other hand, a father can give a whole shekel for his two sons without any extra agio. If two brothers have come into the inheritance of their father, they are regarded as brothers, i.e., as successors of a property belonging to one individual, so that they would be liable for cattle-tithe and exempt from the agio, as their father would have been. If they divide the inheritance and afterwards become partners, they are regarded as partners both in respect of the cattle-tithe and of the agio.

(9) I.e., if they have not yet divided the inheritance.

(10) Shek. 1,7; Hul. 25b; Bek. 56b.

(11) I.e., the teaching 'when they are liable to surcharge they are exempt from cattle-tithe', indicating that by dividing the estate the brothers are no longer regarded as heirs.

(12) When they deal with each other in a purely business manner, it is then that they are not regarded as heirs but as partners.

(13) I.e., if they are not so strict about the exact monetary value.

(14) I.e., the portion chosen by each brother for himself is considered as having thus retrospectively become the very inheritance designated for him, so that they are still regarded as heirs with respect to the estate though it had been divided.

(15) And therefore by dividing the estate the brothers cease to be regarded any longer as heirs. Thus R. Nahman rejects the law of bererah.

(16) V. B.M. 10a. According to one opinion the water belongs to the one on whose behalf it was drawn, and according to the other opinion it belongs to the drawer. For since the well has the legal status of being ownerless, water drawn from it is like something found.

(17) Because the produce, being his private property, lay under the same restrictions as the owner. Bah emends: whose inhabitants set an 'erub in order to visit him, they must not bring him of his fruit.

(18) I.e., he may bring his produce home, where his 'erub permitted him to go to that town.

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 40a

IF ONE INVITED GUESTS TO HIS HOME, THEY MAY NOT TAKE AWAY WITH THEM [ANY] PORTIONS UNLESS HE [THE HOST] HAD ASSIGNED FOR THEM THEIR PORTIONS ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL.

GEMARA. It was stated: If one deposits produce with his neighbour, Rab says: [The produce has the same restrictive limits] as the one with whom they were deposited; but Samuel says: [They have the same restrictive limits] as the one who deposited them. Shall it be said that Rab and Samuel follow their opinions [expressed elsewhere]? For we have learnt: If he brought in¹ with permission, the owner of the court-yard is liable. Rabbi says: He is liable only when the owner has undertaken to guard it.² And R. Huna said in Rab's name: The halachah is according to the opinion of the Sages; whereas Samuel said: The halachah is as Rabbi. Shall it be said that Rab is of the opinion of the Rabbis and Samuel is of the opinion of Rabbi?³ — Rab will say to you: My opinion is even in accordance with Rabbi; for Rabbi holds his opinion there⁴ because without an explicit declaration he does not undertake supervision,⁵ but here⁶ he definitely undertook to look after it. [Also] Samuel will reply [to you]: My opinion is even in accordance with the Rabbis; for the Rabbis hold their opinion there⁷ because a man wishes it, that his ox should be in the possession of the owner of the court, so that if it does damage he should not be liable; but here,⁸ does a man then wish that his produce should be in the possession of his neighbour!⁹ We have learnt: BUT IF HE HIMSELF MADE AN 'ERUB, HIS PRODUCE IS LIKE HIMSELF. Now if you say [that the produce has the same restrictive limits] as the one with whom it was deposited, even if he himself set an 'erub, of what avail is it to him?¹⁰ — R. Huna replied: In the Academy they declared [that it treats of a case] where he assigned a corner [of his house] to him.¹¹

Come and hear: IF ONE INVITED GUESTS TO HIS HOME, THEY MAY NOT TAKE AWAY WITH THEM PORTIONS UNLESS HE HAD ASSIGNED FOR THEM THEIR PORTIONS ON THE EVE OF THE FESTIVAL. Now if you say [that the produce has the same restrictive limits] as the one with whom it was deposited, even if he assigned [the portions] for them through another person of what avail is it? — Here also, since he assigned [the portions] for them through another person, it is as if he assigned a corner [of his house] to them. Alternatively say: Assignment is different.¹² R. Hana b. Hanilai hung up meat¹³ On the door-bolt.¹⁴ He came before R. Huna who said to him: If you yourself hung it up, go and take it away; but if they¹⁵ hung it up for you, you may not take it away.¹⁶ And even if he himself hung it up, may he then take it away? Surely R. Huna was a disciple of Rab and Rab said: [The produce has the same restrictive limits] as the one with whom it was deposited! — It is different [when he himself hung it up on] the door-bolt, for it is as if he¹⁷ assigned for him a corner [of the house]. R. Hillel said to R. Ashi: And if they hung it up for him, may he not take it away? Surely Samuel said: The ox of a cattle-breeder is as the feet of anyone!¹⁸ Rabina said to R. Ashi: And if they hung it up for him may he not take it away? Surely Rabbah the son of R. Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: The halachah is as R. Dosa!¹⁹ R. Ashi said to R. Kahana: And if they hung it up for him, may he not take it away? Surely we have learnt: Cattle and utensils have the same restrictive limits as the feet of the owners!²⁰ — Rather it is different in the case of R. Hana b. Hanilai, for he was an important man²¹ and was deeply occupied in his study, and he [R. Huna] said this to him: If you yourself hung it up, then you have an identification mark on it, and you did not let it out of your mind; therefore go and take it away; but if they hung it up for you, then you let it pass out of your mind and you may not take it away.²²

MISHNAH. ONE MAY NOT GIVE DRINK AND SLAUGHTER PASTURE ANIMALS,²³ BUT ONE MAY GIVE DRINK AND SLAUGHTER HOUSEHOLD ANIMALS. THE FOLLOWING ARE HOUSEHOLD ANIMALS: THEY THAT PASS THE NIGHT IN TOWN. PASTURE ANIMALS ARE SUCH AS PASS THE NIGHT IN [MORE DISTANT] PASTURE GROUND.²⁴

GEMARA. Why does he teach ‘GIVE DRINK AND SLAUGHTER’?²⁵ — He incidentally informs us that a man should water his animal before slaughter on account of the adhesiveness of the skin.²⁶

Our Rabbis taught: The following are pasture animals and the following are household animals. Pasture animals are such as are led out about [the time of] Passover²⁷ and graze in [more distant] meadows, and who are led in at the time of the first rainfall.²⁸ The following are household animals: Such as are led out and graze outside the city-border²⁹ but return and spend the night inside the city-border. Rabbi says: Both of these are household animals; but pasture animals are such as are led out and graze in [more distant] meadows and who do not return to the habitation of men either in summer or in winter. Does then Rabbi accept the prohibition of mukzeh?³⁰ Surely R. Simeon b. Rabbi asked of Rabbi: What is the law, according to R. Simeon, with respect to dates which are set aside for ripening?³¹ [And] he replied to him: According to R. Simeon

(1) His ox or other objects through which damage was caused in a stranger's court-yard.

(2) B.K. 47b.

(3) I.e., in the present instance, Rab rules that the produce suffers the same restrictions as their trustee, because he holds as the Rabbis that it belongs to the trustee in respect of guardianship, and therefore it also belongs to him in respect of ritual restrictions.

(4) In B.K.

(5) He merely permitted him to bring in his ox, but did not undertake to guard it.

(6) In the case of the produce.

(7) In B.K.

(8) In the case of the produce.

(9) [MS.M. adds ‘so that the use of them should be prohibited to him (on the Festival)’.]

(10) Since the produce is still in the possession of his trustees in the other town.

(11) I.e., the trustee lent him the corner of his house where the produce was kept; therefore it remained legally in his (the depositor's) possession.

(12) Since its very purpose thereby is that the object so assigned should pass into the assignee's ownership. [MS.M. omits this last passage.]

(13) Given to him by the butchers before the Festival. He was visiting the town on the Festival to deliver a discourse, and was returning to his own place after the lecture.

- (14) Of the house of his host.
- (15) The host's household.
- (16) The reason is soon explained.
- (17) His host with whom the meat was left.
- (18) Likewise here too, since the butchers naturally have in mind that it is to belong to any purchaser as from the eve of the Festival.
- (19) Cf. supra 37b. Similarly here the movements of the meat should be determined by his limits.
- (20) V. supra 37a.
- (21) I.e., a great scholar.
- (22) Because meat (temporarily) hidden from sight is forbidden unless it is recognized by an identification mark. Such an identification mark would however have been noticed only by him himself, and not by the host's household who were not immediately concerned with the meat].
- (23) On account of mukzeh.
- (24) And so cannot come within the definition of 'what is set in readiness'.
- (25) Surely the whole question is only about slaughtering, since even pasture animals may be given drink on Festivals.
- (26) In order that the skin may more easily be flayed.
- (27) The month of Nisan, i.e., March-April.
- (28) October-November.
- (29) In the environs and suburbs of the town.
- (30) For the prohibition of slaughtering pasture animals on a Festival is due to mukzeh, and therefore it is assumed that since Rabbi defines pasture animals, he accepts this prohibition.
- (31) Lit., 'burst dates'. May they be eaten on Festivals?

Talmud - Mas. Beitzah 40b

only dry figs and raisins¹ come under the category of mukzeh! — If you like, say: These² also are like dry figs and raisins. And if you like, say: He [Rabbi] answered him³ according to the opinion of R. Simeon, but he himself is not of this opinion.⁴ Alternatively, say: He [Rabbi] said this according to the opinion of the Rabbis. According to my view, there is [absolutely] no mukzeh; but even on your view, you should agree with me at all events that such [animals] as are led out and graze about the time of Passover and who are led in at the time of the first rainfall are household animals. And the Rabbis replied to him: No, such are pasture animals.

- (1) Because they were formerly edible and have been set aside for drying.
- (2) Animals which shun the habitation of men.
- (3) His son.
- (4) He himself extended the law of mukzeh even to these.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 2a

CHAPTER I

MISHNAH. THERE ARE FOUR NEW YEARS.¹ ON THE FIRST OF NISAN² IS NEW YEAR FOR KINGS³ AND FOR FESTIVALS.⁴ ON THE FIRST OF ELUL⁵ IS NEW YEAR FOR THE TITHE OF CATTLE.⁶ R. ELEAZAR AND R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, PLACE THIS ON THE FIRST OF TISHRI.⁷ ON THE FIRST OF TISHRI⁸ IS NEW YEAR FOR YEARS,⁴ FOR RELEASE AND JUBILEE YEARS,⁹ FOR PLANTATION¹⁰ AND FOR [TITHE OF] VEGETABLES.¹¹ ON THE FIRST OF SHEBAT¹² IS NEW YEAR FOR TREES,¹³ ACCORDING TO THE RULING OF BETH SHAMMAI; BETH HILLEL, HOWEVER, PLACE IT ON THE FIFTEENTH OF THAT MONTH.

GEMARA. FOR KINGS. Why this law?¹⁴ — R. Hisda said: For dealing with documents,¹⁵ as we have learnt: 'Bonds if antedated are invalid,¹⁶ but if postdated are valid'.

Our Rabbis learnt: If a king ascended the throne on the twenty-ninth of Adar, as soon as the first of Nisan arrives¹⁷ he is reckoned to have reigned a year. If on the other hand he ascended the throne on the first of Nisan, he is not reckoned to have reigned a year till the next first of Nisan comes round.

The Master has said, 'If a king ascends the throne on the twenty-ninth of Adar, as soon as the first of Nisan arrives he is reckoned to have reigned a year.'

(1) I.e., the year is reckoned to commence at different dates for different purposes, as the Mishnah goes on to specify.

(2) The first month of the Jewish calendar (in Biblical times known as 'the month of Abib', or the springing corn), commencing in the latter half of March or the earlier part of April.

(3) If a document is dated with a certain year in a king's reign, the year is reckoned to have commenced in Nisan, no matter in what month the king came to the throne. The Gemara discusses what kinds of kings are meant — whether Israelitish or other.

(4) The meaning of this is discussed infra in the Gemara.

(5) The sixth month of the Jewish calendar.

(6) For purposes of tithe it was necessary to specify the year in which cattle were born, because cattle born in one year could not be given as tithe for cattle born in another, v. Lev. XXVII, 32.

(7) So that according to these authorities there were only three New Years.

(8) The seventh month.

(9) I.e., from the first of Tishri in these years ploughing and similar operations were forbidden. V. Lev. XXV, 4, 11.

(10) For reckoning the years of 'uncircumcision'. V. Lev. XIX, 23.

(11) I.e., those gathered after this date could not be used as tithe for those gathered before. Cf. n. 6.

(12) The eleventh month.

(13) For tithing the fruit. V. notes 6 and 11.

(14) Why should we not be content to reckon the year of the king from the day on which he ascended the throne?

(15) I.e., to enable us to determine which are antedated.

(16) If a man borrowed money in Tishri and the bond was dated in Tammuz (the fourth month of the Jewish calendar) the bond is invalid and does not give the lender any right to seize property which the borrower may have sold even subsequent to Tishri. This is a fine for having conspired to seize by means of the bond property which had been sold prior to the making of the loan. Now if the reigning king came to the throne some time between Tammuz and Tishri, then if we reckoned his years from the date of his accession, Tishri would always come before Tammuz, and the document should therefore be valid. To prevent this leading to confusion, it was consequently ordained that the king's year should always be regarded as commencing with Nisan. Tosaf. point out that it is very difficult to conceive of an instance where this might actually lead to confusion, as scribes can usually be trusted to remember the year of the reign; the example Tosaf. give is where the king came to the throne on the first of Nisan and a scribe has to write a document on the first of Nisan in the following year. In such a case the scribe might easily think that the king came to the throne on the second of Nisan, and so, but for the regulation, might date the document a whole year wrong.

(17) I.e., on the next day.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 2b

This teaches us that Nisan is the New Year for kings, and that one day in a year is reckoned as a year. 'But if he ascended the throne on the first of Nisan he is not reckoned to have reigned a year till the next first of Nisan comes round'. This surely is self-evident? — It had to be stated in view of the case where his election to the throne was determined upon¹ in Adar. You might think that in that case we should reckon him [by the next first of Nisan] to have reigned two years. We are therefore told [that this is not so].

Our Rabbis learnt: If [a king] died in Adar and was succeeded by another in Adar, we can designate [the rest of] the year [up to the first of Nisan] as belonging to either.² If he died in Nisan and was succeeded by another in Nisan, we can date the year by either.³ If he died in Adar and was succeeded by another in Nisan, the earlier year is dated by the first and the later by the second.

The Master has here said, 'If he died in Adar and was succeeded by another, we can date the year by either'. Surely this is obvious? — You might think that we never date the same year by two kings;⁴ hence we are told [that this can be done]. 'If the first died in Nisan and was succeeded by another in Nisan, the year may be dated by either'. This also seems to be obvious? — You might think that when we lay down that a day in the year is reckoned as a year we mean only at the end of the year but not at the beginning;⁵ therefore we are told [that this is not so]. 'If the first died in Adar and he was succeeded by another in Nisan, the earlier year is dated by the first and the later by the second'. This surely is obvious? — It had to be stated in view of the case where his election was determined upon from Adar and he is succeeding his father.⁶ In that case you might think that we should reckon two years to him. We are therefore told [that this is not so].

R. Johanan said: How do we know [from the Scripture] that the years of kings' reigns are always reckoned as commencing from Nisan? Because it says, And it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, in the month of Ziv which is the second month.⁷ Here Solomon's reign is put side by side with the exodus from Egypt,⁸ [to indicate that] just as [the years from] the exodus from Egypt are reckoned from Nisan, so [the years of] Solomon's reign commenced with Nisan.

But how do we know that the years from the exodus from Egypt itself are reckoned as commencing with Nisan? Perhaps we reckon them from Tishri?⁹ — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, And Aaron the priest went up into Mount Hor at the commandment of the Lord, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fifth month,¹⁰ on the first day of the month,¹¹ and it is further written, And it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month,¹² on the first day of the month, that Moses spoke, etc.¹³ Now since the text when referring to Ab places it in the fortieth year and again when referring to [the following] Shebat places it also in the fortieth year, we may conclude that Tishri is not the beginning of the year.¹⁴ [This, however] is not conclusive. I grant you that the former text states explicitly that [the year spoken of was] 'from the going forth from Egypt'; but how do we know that [the year mentioned in] the latter text is reckoned from the exodus?¹⁵ Perhaps it is from the setting up of the Tabernacle?¹⁶ — [We may reply to this] on the model of R. Papa, who said [in another connection]¹⁷ that the occurrence of the expression 'twentieth year' in two contexts provides us with a gezerah shawah:¹⁸ so here, [I may say that the occurrence of] the expression 'fortieth year' in the two contexts provides us with a gezerah shawah, [showing that] just as in the one case¹⁹ [the date is reckoned] from the Exodus, so in the other case²⁰ also.

But how do you know that [in respect of these two incidents] that of Ab was prior? Perhaps that of Shebat was prior?²¹ — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written [in connection with the latter], ‘After he had smitten Sihon’;²² and when Aaron died Sihon was still alive, as it is written

And the Canaanite the king of Arad heard.¹ What was the report that he heard? He heard that Aaron had died and that the clouds of glory had departed, and he judged that it was now permitted to attack Israel; and this is intimated in the verse, And all the congregation saw [wa-yirur] that Aaron was dead,² [commenting on which] R. Abbahu said, Do not read wayirur, but wa-yerau [and they were seen],³ [the next word⁴ being translated] in accordance with the dictum of Resh Lakish; for Resh Lakish said, Ki has four significations — ‘if’, ‘perhaps’, ‘but’ ‘for’.⁵ [In objection to this it may be asked], Are the two things alike?⁶ [The verse] there speaks of Canaan, whereas [here] it [speaks of] Sihon? — It has been taught: Sihon, Arad, and Canaan are all one. He was called Sihon as resembling a sayyah [foal] of the wilderness, he was called Canaan after his kingdom; and as for his real name, this was Arad. According to other authorities, he was called Arad as resembling an ‘arad [wild ass] of the wilderness, and Canaan after his kingdom, while as for his real name, this was Sihon.

But can I not suppose that New Year is in Iyar?⁷ — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, And it came to pass in the first month in the second year on the first day of the month that the tabernacle was reared up,⁸ and it is written elsewhere, And it came to pass in the second year in the second month . . . that the cloud was taken up front over the tabernacle of the testimony.⁹ Seeing that the text when referring to Nisan places it in the second year and when referring to Iyar places it also in the second year, we may conclude that Iyar is not New Year. Can I suppose then that New Year is in Sivan?¹⁰ — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, In the third month after the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt;¹¹ and if Sivan is New Year, it should say, ‘In the third month in the second year after the children of Israel etc.’ But why not say that New Year is in Tammuz,¹² in Ab,¹³ in Adar?¹⁴ — Rather, said R. Eleazar, we learn [that Nisan is New Year] from here: And he began to build in the second month in the second¹⁵ in the fourth year of his reign.¹⁶ What [is here meant by] ‘in the second’? Does not [the superfluous word] mean the second by which his reign is reckoned? Rabina strongly demurred to this. Why not, [he said], suppose it to mean the second day of the month? — In that case it would have said distinctly, ‘on the second day of the month’.¹⁷ But may I not suppose it means on the second day of the week? [This cannot be for two reasons.] One is that we never find the second day of the week mentioned in Scripture, and the other is that the second ‘sheni’ [second] is put on the same footing as the first sheni, [indicating that] just as the first sheni refers to a month, so the second sheni refers to a month.

It has been taught in accordance with R. Johanan: How do we know [from the Scripture] that the years of kings’ reigns are always reckoned as commencing from Nisan? Because it says, ‘And it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt etc.’ and it is further written, ‘And Aaron the priest went up to Mount Hor at the commandment of the Lord, etc.’ and it is further written, And it came to pass in the fortieth year in the eleventh month’,¹⁸ and it is further written, ‘After he had smitten Sihon etc.’ and it is further written, And all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead etc., and it is further written, ‘And it came to pass in the first month in the second year etc., and it is further written, ‘And it came to pass in the second year in the second month etc.’ and it is further written, ‘In the third month after the children of Israel were gone forth out of the land of Egypt etc.’ and it is further written, ‘And he began to build etc.’

R. Hisda said: The rule [that New Year for kings is in Nisan] was only meant to apply to the kings of Israel, but the years of non-Israelitish kings are reckoned from Tishri,¹⁹ as it says, The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. Now it came to pass in the month of Kislev,²⁰ in the twentieth year²¹ etc., and it is written further, And it came to pass in the month of Nisan in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes.²² Now since when speaking of Kislev he places it in the twentieth year and when speaking of Nisan he places it also in the twentieth, we may conclude that New Year is not in Nisan. [This, however, is not conclusive]. In the latter text, it is true, it is expressly stated that [it was the twentieth year] of Artaxerxes, but in the former how do we know that the reign of Artaxerxes is referred to? Perhaps some other system of dating is adopted? — R. Papa replied: The occurrence in each text of the expression 'twentieth year' provides us with a gezerah shawah,¹ [indicating that] just as in the latter case it means 'of the reign of Artaxerxes', so in the former. But how do you know that the incident of Kislev was prior? Perhaps the incident of Nisan was prior?² — Do not imagine such a thing, since it has been taught: The things that Hanani told Nehemiah in Kislev were related by Nehemiah to the king in Nisan. 'The things that Hanani told Nehemiah', as we read, The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. Now it came to pass in the month of Kislev, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan the castle, that Hanani, one of my brethren, came out of Judah, he and certain men; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, that were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. And they said unto me: The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach; the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.³ These things 'were related by Nehemiah to the king in Nisan,' as we read, And it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, when wine was before him, that I took up the wine and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetimes sad in his presence. And the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? This is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid. And I said unto the king, Let the king live for ever; why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste and the gates thereof are consumed with fire? Then the king said to me: For what dost thou make request? So I prayed to the God of heaven. And I said unto the king: If it please the king and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldst send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it. And the king said unto me, the queen also sitting by him, For how long will thy journey be and when wilt thou return? So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time.⁴

R. Joseph sought to disprove [the statement that the years of non-Israelitish kings are reckoned from Tishri, as follows]: [It is written], In the four and twentieth day of the month, in the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king,⁵ and it is further written, In the seventh month in the second year in the one and twentieth day of the month.⁶ Now if it is [as you say], then we should have here 'in the seventh month in the third year'! — R. Abbahu replied: Cyrus was a worthy king,⁷ and therefore they reckoned his years like those of the kings of Israel.⁸

R. Joseph demurred strongly against this [last notion]. For one thing [he said, if this is so,] then there is a contradiction between two biblical texts. For it is written, And the house⁹ was finished on the third day of the month of Adar, which was the sixth year of Darius the king,¹⁰ and in connection with this it has been taught: 'At that period, in the year following,¹¹ Ezra went up from Babylon along with his band of exiles'. Now it is written further, And he [Ezra] came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king; and if it is [as you say], it should be 'in the eighth year'? Further, is there any connection [between your answer and the question]? You speak of Cyrus and the text¹² speaks of Darius! — It has been taught: 'Cyrus,¹³ Darius, and Artaxerxes¹⁴ were all one. He was called Cyrus because he was a worthy king;¹⁵ Artaxerxes after his realm;¹⁶ while Darius was his own name. All the same, the contradiction still remains?¹⁷ — There is no contradiction. The one verse¹⁸ speaks of him before he degenerated,¹⁹ the other after he degenerated.

R. Kahana strongly demurred to this [saying], Did he indeed degenerate? Is it not written,

And that which they have need of, both young bullocks and rams and lambs, for burnt-offerings to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine and oil, according to the word of the priests that are in Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail?¹ — Said R. Isaac to him: [Here is something] out of your own package:² That they may offer sacrifices of sweet savour unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king and of his sons.³ But even so, is not the action still a meritorious one, seeing that it has been taught: 'If a man says, I offer this sela' for charity in order that my children may live and in order that through it I may merit the future world, he may still be a wholly righteous man?' — There is no contradiction; this statement applies to Israelites, there we speak of heathens.⁴

Alternatively I may say that we know he deteriorated because it is written, with three rows of great stones and a row of new timber, and let the expenses be given out of the king's house.⁵ Why did he make these conditions? He thought to himself, If the Jews revolt against me, I will burn it with fire. But did not Solomon do the same thing, as it is written, three rows of hewn stone and a row of cedar beams?⁶ — Solomon placed the wood above and he placed it below; Solomon sunk it in the building and he did not sink it in the building; Solomon plastered it over and he did not plaster it over.

R. Joseph, (or, as some say, R. Isaac) said: Whence do we know that he deteriorated? From here: And the king said unto me, the shegal also sitting by hint.⁷ What is 'shegal'? Rabbah b. Lema said In the name of Rab, a she-dog.⁸ But if that is so, what are we to make of the verse, But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven, and they have brought the vessels of His house before thee, and thou and thy lords, thy shegaloth and thy concubines have drunk wine in them.⁹ Now how can 'shegal' here be a dog? Do dogs drink wine? — This is no difficulty, as [we can suppose that] it was taught to drink. But what of the verse where it is written, Kings' daughters are among thy favourites, at thy right hand doth stand the shegal in gold of Ophir?¹⁰ Now if 'shegal' is a dog, what promise is the prophet bringing to Israel? — What he means is this: Because the Torah is as dear to Israel as a 'shegal' to the heathens, you have earned as your reward the gold of Ophir. Alternatively I may say that 'shegal' does as a rule mean 'queen', but in this case Rabbah b. Lema had a tradition [that it means 'dog'], and the reason why [in the text] it is called 'shegal' is because it was as dear to him¹¹ as a queen; or, possibly, because he put it on the queen's seat.

Alternatively I may say that we know he deteriorated from here: Unto a hundred talents of silver and to a hundred measures of wheat and to a hundred baths of wine and salt without prescribing how much.¹² At first there was no limit, but now he made a limit. But perhaps at first he simply had not decided on the limit? The truth is that the best explanation is that which was given first.

AND FOR FESTIVALS. How can [New Year] for the festivals be on the first of Nisan? It is surely on the fifteenth of Nisan?¹³ — R. Hisda said: What it means is that the festival which occurs in it is the New Year for the festivals. The legal import of this rule is for determining when one who makes a vow transgresses the precept of 'not delaying'.¹⁴ and R. Simeon is here followed, as it has been taught: Whether a man makes a vow, or sanctifies,¹⁵ or makes a valuation,¹⁶ as soon as three festivals elapse [before he carries out his word], he transgresses the precept of 'not delaying'. R. Simeon says: The three festivals must be in order, with Passover first. So too R. Simeon b. Yohai used to say: The festivals [referred to] are sometimes three [in number], sometimes four, sometimes five. For instance, if a man made a vow before Passover, they are three, if before Pentecost five, if before Tabernacles four.

Our Rabbis taught: Those who are liable for a money valuation,¹⁷ for a valuation,¹⁸ for a herem,¹⁹ for consecrations,²⁰ for sin-offerings, trespass-offerings, burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, charity contributions, tithes, firstborn and tithe of cattle, paschal lamb, gleanings, forgotten sheaves and corners of the field,¹ as soon as three festivals have elapsed transgress the precept of 'not delaying'. R. Simeon said: The three festivals must be in order, with Passover first. R. Meir said: As soon as one festival has passed, he transgresses the precept of 'not delaying'. R. Eliezer b. Jacob said: As soon as two festivals have elapsed, he transgresses the precept of 'not delaying'. R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon said: As soon as the feast of Tabernacles has passed, he transgresses the precept of 'not delaying'.

What is the reason of the First Tanna?² — Let us see, [he says]: The text³ has been speaking of them⁴ [the three festivals]. Why then does it repeat,⁵ on the feast of unleavened bread, on the feast of weeks, and on the feast of tabernacles? We must understand it to be laying down the rule for 'not delaying'.⁶ R. Simeon again says that there was no need [even so] to repeat 'on the feast of tabernacles', of which the text was just speaking.⁷ Why then was it mentioned? To show that this one must be the last. What is R. Meir's reason?⁸ — Because it is written, And thither thou shalt come and thither ye shall bring.⁹ What do the Rabbis [say to this]? — They say that this constitutes only a positive injunction.¹⁰ What has R. Meir [to say to this]? — [He says that] since the All-Merciful told him to bring and he did not bring, automatically he has transgressed the precept of 'not delaying'. What is the reason of R. Eliezer b. Jacob?¹¹ Because it is written, These ye shall offer unto the Lord in your appointed seasons;¹² the minimum of 'seasons' is two. What do the Rabbis [say to this]? — [They say] that this word is required for the exposition of R. Jonah; for R. Jonah said,¹³ All the festivals are put on the same footing with one another, to show that all¹⁴ atone for the uncleanness of the Sanctuary and its holy things.¹⁵ What is the reason of R. Eleazar son of Simeon?¹⁶ As it has been taught: R. Eleazar son of Simeon said: There was no need for the feast of Tabernacles to be mentioned in this verse,¹⁷ as the text was already speaking of it. Why then was it mentioned? To show that this one is the determining factor. What exposition then do R. Meir and R. Eliezer b. Jacob give of the words 'on the feast of unleavened bread and on the feast of weeks and on the feast of tabernacles'? — They require them for the same purpose as R. Eleazar b. Oshaia. For R. Eleazar b. Oshaia said: How do we know that [a sacrifice due but not brought on] Pentecost¹⁸ can be made up for during the next seven days? Because it says, On the feast of unleavened bread and on the feast of weeks and on the feast of tabernacles. Just as [a sacrifice not brought on the first day of] the feast of Passover can be made up for during the next seven days,¹⁹ so [a sacrifice not brought on] the Feast of Weeks can be made up for during the next seven days.

But why should not the Feast of Weeks be put on the same footing [in this respect] as the feast of Tabernacles, so that just as in that case [the duration of the festival is] eight days, so here eight days [should be allowed]? — The eighth day [of Tabernacles] is a separate festival.²⁰ I can still say that we call the eighth day a separate festival in respect of P'Z'R' K'SH'B',²¹ but that in the matter of compensation all agree that this can be made on it for the first day, as we have learnt: If one did not bring his festival sacrifice on the first day of Tabernacles, he can bring during the whole of the festival, including the last day of the festival? — If you grasp a lot you cannot hold it, if you grasp a little you can hold it.²²

But what injunction then²³ did the All-Merciful indicate by mentioning the festival of Tabernacles [in this verse]? — [It is mentioned] in order to be put on the same footing as the feast of Passover [in this respect]:

(1) If an owner took these, he has to restore them to the poor.

R == regel (festival); the eighth day is no longer termed ‘Tabernacles’ but is known as ‘the eighth day of solemn assembly’. K == Korban (offering); the sacrifice of the day (one bullock, one ram and seven sheep) was quite different from that of the days of Tabernacles. SH == shir (song); the psalm chanted by the Levites was not the same as that for Tabernacles. B == berakah (blessing); on this day, in the time of the Monarchy, a blessing was said for the king, in memory of the dedication of the Temple, when, as we read, on the eighth day the people blessed the king (I Kings, VIII, 66) Cf. just as on the feast of Passover [the celebrant is] required to stay overnight¹ [in Jerusalem], so on the feast of Tabernacles he is required to stay overnight. How do we know this in the case of Passover? — Because it is written,² And thou shalt turn in the morning and go unto thy tents.³

But whence then do the First Tanna and R. Simeon⁴ derive the rule of compensation for the Feast of Weeks? — They derive it from the statement of Rabbah b. Samuel; for Rabbah b. Samuel stated: The Torah said, Count days⁵ and sanctify the new moon,⁶ count days and sanctify the Feast of Weeks,⁷ [indicating that] just as the new moon [is sanctified for the period corresponding with the unit of time] by which it is counted,⁸ so the Feast of Weeks [is sanctified for the period corresponding with the unit of time] by which it is counted.⁹ [In that case] I should say that [the compensation period of] the Feast of Weeks is only one day?¹⁰ — Raba replied: Do we count only days to the Feast of Weeks and not weeks [also]? Has not a Master said, It is a mizwah to count days and it is also a mizwah to count weeks?¹¹ And further, we read in the text, ‘the feast of weeks’.¹²

But can the paschal lamb¹³ be offered on any of the festivals? The paschal lamb [surely] has a fixed date:¹⁴ if it is brought then, well and goods but if not, it is rejected?¹⁵ — R. Hisda replied: The paschal lamb is mentioned incidentally. R. Shesheth said: ‘Paschal lamb’ here means the peace-offering [brought] in lieu of the paschal lamb.¹⁶ But if that is so, this is covered by the term peace-offerings'?¹⁷ — Our authority mentions the peace-offering [which is brought] in lieu of the paschal lamb and he also mentions the peace-offerings which are brought for their own sake. You might be inclined to think that [the former] being brought in lieu of the paschal lamb is on the same footing as the paschal lamb.¹ Therefore we are told [that this is not so].

What is the authority [in the Scripture] for these rules? — As our Rabbis have taught: 'When thou shalt vow a vow:² this tells me only [the rule for] a vow; how do I know that a freewill-offering³ is also included? We have here the term 'vow' and in another place⁴ we find the expression if a vow or a free will-offering; just as there a freewill-offering goes with the vow, so here, a freewill-offering goes with it. To the Lord thy God: this indicates money valuations, valuations, devoted things, and consecrated things.⁵ Thou shalt not be slack to pay it: it, but not its substitute.⁶ For he will surely require it: this indicates sin-offerings, trespass-offerings, burnt-offerings and peace-offerings.⁷ The Lord thy God: this indicates charity contributions, tithes and firstborn.⁸ From thee: this indicates gleanings, forgotten sheaves and corners of the field. And it will be sin in thee; but not sin in thy offering.⁹

The Master has [just] said: "'Thou shalt not be slack in paying it"; It and not its substitute'. Substitute for what? If the substitute for a burnt-offering or a peace-offering is meant, this is actually offered.¹⁰ If the substitute for a sin-offering, this is allowed to perish.¹¹ How then are we to understand 'its substitute'? — The substitute for a thanksgiving-offering, as R. Hiyya taught: If a thanksgiving offering became mixed up with its substitute and one of them died, there is no remedy for the other,¹² For what is he [the owner] to do? Shall he offer it and offer the bread¹³ with it? Perhaps it is the substitute.¹⁴ Shall he offer it without the bread? Perhaps it is the original thank-offering. But [if that is so,] seeing that it cannot be offered, why do I require a text to exclude it? — R. Shesheth replied: In point of fact, [the intention of the verse is] to exclude the substitutes for burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, and we are dealing here with the case of one which was kept over during two festivals and then became blemished and the owner made it profane by substituting another and this was kept over one festival. You might imagine in this case that since it takes the place of the first, it is as if it had been kept over for three festivals; therefore we are told that this is not so. But on the view of R. Meir who said that as soon as one festival has been allowed to elapse there is a transgression of the precept 'not to delay', what can be said? — Raba replied: Here we are dealing with a case where the animal became blemished during the festival and he declared it profane [by substituting another], and this was kept over the festival. You might imagine that since it takes the place of the first it is as if it had been kept over during the whole of the festival.¹⁵ Therefore we are told [that this is not so].

"And it will be sin in thee," but not sin in thy offering'. Do we derive this lesson from here? Surely it is derived from the text adduced by the 'Others', as it has been taught: 'Others say, I might say that a firstling after a year has passed¹⁶ is like consecrated things that have become disqualified¹⁷ and so is disqualified. Therefore it says, And thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God the tithe of thy corn and of thy wine and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herd and of thy flock.¹⁸ Here firstling is mentioned alongside of tithe, [to indicate that] just as tithe is not disqualified by being kept from one year to another,¹⁹ so a firstling is not disqualified by being kept from one year to another.' — It was still necessary [to learn the lesson in the other way]. For you might have imagined that this applies only to a firstling, which is not for appeasement, but consecrated²⁰ things which are for appeasement²¹ will not appease [if kept over]. Therefore I am told that this is not so.

But still [I may object that]

 - (2) Deut. XXIII, 22.
 - (3) In making a vow a man said, 'I undertake to bring such-and-such an offering'; in making a freewill-offering he said, 'I undertake to bring this animal as an offering'.

 - (5) V. supra p. 11 nn. 5-8. Because all these went for the repair of the Temple and not to the priests.
 - (6) This is explained below.
 - (7) All these as distinct from the vow and freewill-offerings were an obligation the fulfilment of which could be demanded. The burnt-offerings and peace-offerings referred to are those which were brought as an additional offering on the festival. If they had been already set aside, they could be brought on a subsequent festival (V. Tosaf., s.v. לשם).
 - (8) The words 'the Lord thy God' here are strictly speaking superfluous, and can therefore be used for an exposition.
 - (9) I.e., the offering is not disqualified thereby.
 - (10) If the original animal was lost and another substituted and then the first was found, both are offered and the substitute also comes under the rule of 'not delaying'.
 - (11) And never offered.
 - (12) I.e., it must be allowed to perish.
 - (13) V. Lev. VII, 12, 13.
 - (14) And according to Men. 79b, bread was not to be brought with the substitute of a thanksgiving-offering.
 - (15) And thus, according to R. Meir, is the rule of 'not delaying' transgressed.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 6a

the lesson is derived from the exposition of Ben 'Azzai, as It has been taught: Ben 'Azzai said: What is the point of the word otho [it]?¹ Since it says, Thou shalt not be slack in paying it,² I might think that a vow which is delayed also fails to appease. Therefore it says, 'it': this one fails to appease, but a delayed vow does not fail to appease! — No; [what we must say is], “in thee a sin”, but not in thy wife a sin’. For you might think that, since R. Johanan [or, as some say, R. Eleazar] has said, ‘A man’s wife dies only because money is [rightfully] demanded of him and he has it not,’³ as it says, Why should he take thy bed from under thee?’⁴ and so I would say that his wife will die also because of this transgression of ‘not delaying’. We are therefore told [that this is not so].

Our Rabbis taught: ‘That which is gone out of thy lips:⁵ this is an affirmative precept.⁶ Thou shalt observe: this is a negative precept. And do: this is an injunction to the Beth din to make thee do, According as thou hast vowed: this means a vow. To the Lord thy God: this means sin-offerings and trespass-offerings, burnt-offerings and peace-offerings.⁷ A freewill-offering:⁸ this has its literal meaning. Even that which thou hast promised: this means things sanctified for the repair of the Temple. With thy mouth: this means charity.’

The Master has here said that “that which is gone out of thy lips” implies an affirmative precept’. Why do I require the words for this purpose? This lesson can be derived from the words, and thither thou shalt come and thither ye shall bring.⁹ “Thou shalt observe”; this implies a negative precept’. Why do I require these words? This lesson can be derived from ‘thou shalt not be slack in paying it’.¹⁰ “And do”: this is an injunction to the Beth din to make thee do’. Why do I require these words? This lesson can be derived from he shall bring it,¹¹ as it has been taught: He shall bring it: this teaches us that he is to be constrained¹² [if necessary]. I might say, even against his will. Therefore it says, of his own will.¹³ What is to be done then? We constrain him until he says ‘I am willing’. [What is the answer?] — The one [set of texts¹⁴ deal with the case] where he had pledged himself but had not yet set aside the animal, the other with the case where he had set it aside but had not yet offered it. And both are required. For if the rule had been laid down only for the case where he had pledged himself but had not yet set aside the animal, [I might say that the reason is] because he has not yet carried out his word, but where he has set it aside but not yet offered it I might argue that wherever it is, it is in the treasury of the All-Merciful. These texts therefore were necessary. And if again the rule had been laid down only for the cases where he has set the animal aside but not yet offered it, I might say that the reason is because he is keeping it by him, but if he has pledged himself without having yet set it aside I might argue that his mere word counts for nothing. Therefore these texts are also necessary.

But how can you say that [one set of texts is] where he has pledged himself but not yet set aside, seeing that ‘freewill-offering’ is mentioned, and we have learnt, What is a vow? When a man says, I pledge myself to bring a burnt-offering. What is a freewill-offering? Where a man says, I declare this to be a burnt-offering. What is the difference [in practice] between a vow and a freewill-offering? If [an animal set aside to perform] a vow dies or is stolen, he has to replace it, but if a freewill-offering dies or is stolen he is not bound to replace it! — Raba replied: You can find a freewill-offering of this kind¹⁵ in the case where he said, ‘I pledge myself to bring a burnt-offering on condition that I shall not be obliged to replace it’.

“With thy mouth”: this is charity’. Raba said: For [paying] charity-offerings one becomes liable at once. What is the reason? Because the poor are waiting.¹⁶ Surely this is obvious? — [Not so, since] you might think that, as charity is mentioned in the passage dealing with offerings, [it need not be paid] till three festivals have elapsed, as in the case of offerings. We are therefore told that this is not so. Only the others [the offerings] were made by the All-Merciful dependent on the festivals, but this [charity] is not so, because the poor are waiting.¹⁷

Raba said: As soon as one festival has elapsed, he transgresses an affirmative precept. The following objection was raised:¹⁸ R. Joshua and R. Pappias testified regarding the offspring of a peace-offering¹⁹ that it should also be brought as a peace-offering. R. Pappias said: I testify that we had a heifer which was sacrificed as a peace-offering, and we ate it on Passover, and we ate its young as a peace-offering on the Festival.²⁰ Now I can understand why it was not offered on Passover, the ground being that it was still too short-lived.²¹ But how could the young be kept over Pentecost, which would involve the transgression of an affirmative precept? — R. Zebid said in the name of Raba: It may have been that it was sick on Pentecost. R. Ashi said: What is meant by the statement 'we ate its young as a peace-offering on the Festival'? it means, the Feast of Weeks. What says the other to this? — [He says that] wherever [Pentecost] is mentioned in connection with Passover, it is called 'Assembly' ['azereth].¹

Raba said: As soon as three festivals have elapsed, he transgresses every day the precept of 'not delaying'. The following was cited in objection to this: [The rule] both for a firstling and for all consecrated animals is that so soon as they have been kept back a year [even] without three festivals,² or three festivals even it less than a year, the precept of 'not delaying' is transgressed. What objection is there here?³ — R. Kahana said: The objection is a sound one.⁴ See now: the Tanna is looking for prohibitions; let him then state, 'he transgresses the precept of "not delaying" every day'.⁵ What says the other to this? — [He says that] the Tanna is only anxious to stamp the act as forbidden;⁶ he does not look for extra prohibitions.⁷

[To revert to] the [above] text: '[The rule] both for a firstling and for all consecrated animals is that so soon as they have been kept back a year even without three festivals or three festivals even if less than a year, the precept of "not delaying" is transgressed'. I grant that three festivals without a year are possible; but how is a year possible without three festivals? And I still grant that this is possible for one who requires the three festivals to be in order, but for one who does not require them to be in order how is it possible? And I still grant that this is possible for Rabbi in a leap year, since it has been taught, [It is written] 'a complete year'⁸: Rabbi says, he [the seller] reckons three hundred and sixty-five days, which is the number of days in the solar year, while the Sages say that he reckons twelve months from day to day,⁹ and if it is a leap year he gets the benefit.¹⁰ — It is possible for Rabbi [to have a year without three festivals] in the case where one sanctified the animal after¹¹ the festival of Passover, since when the end of the next second Adar¹² comes round the year is completed but the number of festivals is not completed. But for the Rabbis how is it possible? — [It is possible] on the basis of what R. Shemaiah learnt: Pentecost is sometimes on the fifth of the [third] month, sometimes on the sixth, and sometimes on the seventh. For instance, if both of them¹³ are full,¹⁴ it is on the fifth;¹⁵ if both of them are defective.,¹⁶ it is on the seventh; if one is full and the other defective, it is on the sixth.¹⁷ Who is the Tanna who takes a different view from R. Shemaiah?¹⁸ It is the ‘Others’, as it has been taught: Others say that between Pentecost and Pentecost, between New Year and New Year there is always an interval of four days [of the week],¹⁹ or, in a leap year, five.²⁰

R. Zera asked: Does the rule of ‘not delaying’ apply to an heir?²¹ [Do we reason that] the All-Merciful has said ‘When thou shalt vow a vow’, and he has not made a vow, or [perhaps we apply the text], and thither thou shalt come and thither shall ye bring,²² and he also is liable?²³ — Come and hear, since R. Hiyya has taught: ‘From thee [me'imak]’:²⁴ this excludes the heir. But this ‘me'imak’ is required to bring under the rule gleanings, forgotten sheaves, and corners of the field?²⁵ — I expound ‘imak, and I expound me'imak.’²⁶

R. Zera also asked: Does the rule of ‘not delaying’ apply to a woman? Do we reason that she is not obliged to appear [at Jerusalem on the festivals]²⁷ or perhaps do we reason that she is enjoined to rejoice?²⁸ — Abaye replied: Is not the answer provided by the fact that she is enjoined to rejoice? But could Abaye say this, seeing that Abaye has said that a woman is made joyful by her husband?²⁹ Abaye was answering R. Zera on his own premises.

The question was raised: From what day is the year of the firstling reckoned? — Abaye said, From the hour of its birth; R. Aha b. Jacob said, From the time when it can be used for appeasement.³⁰ Nor is there any conflict of opinion between them; one speaks of an animal without blemish,³¹

(10) The year in this case being 383 days.

(18) And would not count a year without three festivals.

, the other of an animal with a blemish.¹ Can a blemished animal be eaten [on the day of birth]?² [We speak of one] of which we know for certain that it has not been born prematurely.³

Our Rabbis taught: On the first of Nisan is New Year for months,⁴ for leap-years,⁵ and for the offering of shekalim;⁶ some say, also for the renting of houses.⁷

'New Year for months': whence do we know this? — Because it is written, This month shall be unto you the beginning of months, it shall be the first month of the year to you. Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take unto then: every man a lamb, according to their fathers' houses, a lamb for a household. . . and ye shall keep it until the fourteenth day of the same month, and they shall kill it⁸ etc. It is also written [elsewhere],⁹ Observe the month of Abib¹⁰ [springing corn]. Now which is the month in which there is springing corn? You must say this is Nisan; and this is called 'first'. But cannot I say that it is Iyar? — We require springing corn', and there is none. But cannot I say that it is Adar? — We require the bulk of the springing corn, and this we have not [in Adar]. But does the text say, 'the bulk of the springing corn'? Rather, said R. Hisda; we learn it from here: Howbeit on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have gathered in the fruits of the land.¹¹ What is the month in which there is 'gathering in'?¹² You must say that this is Tishri, and the text calls it 'seventh'. But cannot I say that it is Marheshvan, and by 'seventh' is meant the seventh to Iyar? — We require 'gathering in', and this we have not [in Marheshvan]. But cannot I say that it is Elul, and by seventh' is meant seventh to Adar? — We require the bulk of the ingathering, which we have not [in Elul]. But does the text say, 'the bulk of the ingathering'? — The fact is, said Rabina, that we cannot learn this from the Torah of Moses our teacher, but we have to learn it from the later Scriptures,¹³ [viz.,] Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Shebat.¹⁴ Rabbah b. 'ulla said, [We learn it] from here: So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus into his house royal in the tenth month which is the month Tebeth.¹⁵ R. Kahana said: [We learn it] from here, In the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Kislev.¹⁶ R. Aha b. Jacob said, [We learn it] from here: Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the third month which is the month of Sivan.¹⁷ R. Ashi said, [We learn it] from here: They cast pur, that is, the lot, before Haman from day to day and from month to month to the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.¹⁸ If you prefer, I can learn it from here: In the first month which is the month Nisan.¹⁹ Why did not all the others derive it from here?²⁰ — Perhaps 'first' here means, 'first in relation to his [Haman's] affair'.²¹

Why did not our Tanna²² [reckon the first of Nisan as the New Year for months]? — Our Tanna speaks only of years, he does not speak of months.

‘For leap years’. Do we reckon [a New Year] for leap years from Nisan?²³ Has it not been taught: ‘A leap year is not decreed²⁴ before New Year,²⁵ and if such a decree is issued it is not effective. In cases of emergency,²⁶ however, the decree may be issued immediately after New Year, and even so the intercalary month must be [the second] Adar’!²⁷ — R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: What is meant here by ‘leap years’? The closing of a leap year, as we have learnt: ‘They’s testified that the year may be declared a leap year throughout the whole of Adar, since others asserted that this could be done only until Purim.’²⁸ What was the reason of those who held that this could be done only until Purim? — Since a Master has stated that ‘enquiries are made regarding the laws of Passover for thirty days before Passover,²⁹ People might be led into neglecting the rules of leaven.’³⁰ What says the other to this? — He says that people know that a leap year depends on calculation, and they say to themselves that the Rabbis have only now got the calculation right.³¹

What of our Tanna?³² — He speaks only of commencements, not of terminations.

‘And for the offering of shekalim’.³³ How do we know this [from Scripture]? — R. Josiah said: The Scripture says, This is the burnt-offering of each month in its month throughout the months of the year.³⁴ The Torah here enjoins:³⁵ ‘Renew [the year] and bring an offering from the new contributions’. That the ‘year’ here commences with Nisan is learnt by analogy with the text,³⁶ It is the first to you of the months of the year.³⁷ But why not suppose it is Tishri from the analogy of, From the beginning of the year?³⁸ — To a year with which months are mentioned we apply the analogy of a year with which months are mentioned, but to a year with which months are not mentioned, we do not apply the analogy of a year with which months are not mentioned.

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: It is proper to bring the congregational sacrifices that are offered on the first of Nisan from the new contributions. If, however, they are brought from the old, the duty has been performed,³⁹ but not in the most appropriate manner.⁴⁰ It has been taught to the same effect: ‘It is proper to bring the congregational sacrifices which are offered on the first of Nisan from the new contributions; if, however, they were brought from the old, the duty has been performed, but not in the most appropriate manner. If a private person has offered them from his own property, they are unexceptionable, provided he hands them over to the congregation’. Surely this is self-evident? — You might think that we should have some scruples [in accepting them], in case he has not transferred them with all his heart.¹ We are told therefore [that this is not necessary].

Why does our Tanna [not reckon New Year for shekalim]? — Since it is laid down that if the sacrifices are brought [from the old contributions] the duty is still performed, he was not certain [whether this should be counted a New Year].

'Some say, Also for the renting of houses'. Our Rabbis have taught: 'If a man lets a house to another for a year, he reckons it as twelve months from day to day.² If, however, he stipulates "for this year", then even if the tenant only entered into occupation³ on the first of Adar, as soon as the first of Nisan arrives,⁴ a year has been completed.' And even according to those who say that one day in the year is reckoned as a year, this does not apply here, because a man would not trouble to rent a house for less than thirty days. But why should I not say that Tishri [is the New Year for letting houses]?⁵ — It is taken for granted that when a man takes a house [in Tishri], he takes it for the whole of the rainy season. Why do the first Tanna of the Baraitha and our Tanna [not reckon the renting of houses]? — In Nisan also there is often cloudy weather.⁶

ON THE FIRST OF ELUL IS NEW YEAR FOR THE TITHE OF CATTLE. Who is the authority for this? — It is R. Meir, as it has been taught: 'R. Meir says, On the first of Elul is New Year for the tithe of cattle'. Who is the authority in respect of festivals? It is R. Simeon,⁷ Now look at the succeeding clause: R. ELEAZAR AND R. SIMEON SAY, ON THE FIRST OF TISHRI. [Am I to say that] the first and third statements here follow the authority of R. Simeon and the middle one that of R. Meir? — R. Joseph said: The authority here is Rabbi, and he decides now in accordance with one, now with another Tanna. In respect of festivals he concurs with R. Simeon, and in respect of tithe of cattle he concurs with R. Meir. If that is so, how can he say FOUR [New Years]? There are five?⁸ — Raba replied: There are four according to all authorities. There are four according to R. Meir, excluding the festivals,⁹ and four according to R. Simeon, excluding the tithe of cattle.¹⁰ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [The meaning of our Mishnah is], There are four months in which there are a number of New Years.¹¹

An objection was raised: ‘The sixteenth of Nisan is the New Year for the ‘Omer;¹² the sixth of Sivan is the New Year for the two loaves’.¹³ Now [this being so], according to Raba the Mishnah should say six, and according to R. Nahman b. Isaac five? — R. Papa said: In fixing the number, [the Tanna] reckons only such [New Years] as commence with the evening,¹⁴ he does not reckon those that do not commence with¹⁵ the evening.¹⁶ But what of festivals which [in respect of vows] do not commence with the evening¹⁷ and yet are reckoned? — Since he has to bring [his vow], he becomes guilty [of ‘delaying’] from the very commencement [of the festival].¹⁸ But what of Jubilees which do not commence with the evening,¹⁹ and yet are reckoned in? — This follows the view of R. Johanan b. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka, who said that the Jubilee commences with the New Year. R. Shisha the son of R. Idi said: In fixing the number, [the Tanna] reckoned only New Years that are not inaugurated with some ceremony,²⁰ but he does not reckon those that are inaugurated with a ceremony.²¹ But what of festivals, which [in respect of vows] are inaugurated with a ceremony,²² and yet are not reckoned? — The [transgression of] ‘not delaying’ comes automatically.²³

(1) Lit., ‘very well’.

(2) I.e., from a date in one month to the same date in the same month next year.

(3) Lit., ‘stood’.

(4) I.e., as soon as thirty days have passed.

(5) So that, if a man rents a house on the first of Elul for a year, he takes it only to the first of Tishri.

(6) And therefore at no time would a man if he took a house for a year mean merely thirty days.

(7) As explained above, that R. Simeon requires three festivals in order in the matter of vows, and he is therefore the authority for the first statement in the Mishnah, that there is a New Year for festivals.

(8) The New Year for festivals being on the fifteenth of Nisan.

(9) Since R. Meir is of the view that the transgression is involved after the lapse of one festival. V. supra 4b.

(10) I.e., the first of Elul as a separate New Year; since R. Simeon places it on the first of Tishri which is in any case a new year.

(11) There being two in Nisan, and these are counted as one.

(12) I.e., for making permissible the new corn. Lev. XXIII, 14.

(13) For bringing meal-offerings from the new corn. Ibid. 17.

(14) E.g., the New Year for kings commences with the evening of the first of Nisan.

(15) Lit., ‘full’.

(16) As instanced presently.

(17) It being assumed that the precept of ‘not delaying’ is not transgressed till the hour arrives when the animal vowed may be offered, i.e., till the perpetual offering of the morning is brought.

(18) Even though he is unable to bring the sacrifice till the morning.

(19) But which are ushered in with a blast of the shofar on the Day of Atonement, in the daytime.

(20) Lit. ‘depend on an act’. I.e., the New Years which begin with the advent of the day itself.

(21) The prohibition of the new corn for personal consumption and for offerings respectively is raised only by the offering of the Omer and the two loaves.

(22) No sacrifice could be offered before the bringing of the daily morning sacrifice.

(23) As soon as the Festival sets in.

But what of Jubilees?¹ — This follows the authority of R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka. R. Ashi said: [The meaning of our Mishnah is,] There are four New Years which fall on four firsts of the month.² [Do you then reckon] the first of Shebat [as one and so] follow Beth Shammai?³ — He [R. Ashi] meant it in this way: There are three according to all authorities; with regard to the first of Shebat there is a difference of opinion between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel.

R. ELEAZAR AND R. SIMEON SAID, ON THE FIRST OF TISHRI. R. Johanan said: They both based their opinions on the same verse, viz., The rams have mounted the sheep⁴ and the valleys also are covered over with corn, they shout for joy, yea, they sing.⁵ R. Meir reasoned: When do the rams mount the sheep? At the time when the valleys are covered over with corn. And when are the valleys covered over with corn? In Adar. The sheep conceive in Adar and bear in Ab,⁶ and their New Year is in Elul. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon said: When do the rams mount the sheep? At the time when they [the ears of corn] shout for joy and sing.⁷ When do the ears of corn burst into song? In Nisan. They conceive in Nisan and bear in Elul, and their New Year is in Tishri. How then does the other [R. Meir] account for the words, ‘they shout for joy, yea they sing’? — This refers to the late ones, whose conception takes place in Nisan. But how then does the other [R. Eleazar] account for the words, the valleys are covered with corn? — That refers to the early ones, whose conception takes place in Adar. Now according to R. Meir, there is no difficulty; the text says, ‘The rams mount the sheep’, to wit at the time when ‘the valleys are covered with corn’, but there are some also [which do not conceive till] they shout aloud and sing’. But on the view of R. Eleazar and R. Simeon, the clauses should be reversed, thus: ‘The rams mount the sheep’, to wit, at the time when the ears of corn ‘shout for joy and sing’, but there are some which do so [already] ‘when the valleys are covered with corn’? — The fact is, said Raba, that all authorities hold that the rams mount the sheep at the time when the valleys are covered with corn, which is in Adar, but where they differ is in the exposition of the following text, viz., Thou shalt surely tithe,⁸ [in regard to which we have learnt that] the Scripture speaks of two tithes, the tithe of cattle and the tithe of corn. Now R. Meir was of opinion that the tithe of cattle is put on the same footing as the tithe of corn in this way: just as corn becomes liable to tithe, soon after it reaches completion,⁹ so cattle becomes liable to tithe soon after it reaches completion.¹⁰ R. Eleazar and R. Simeon again held that the tithe of cattle is put on the same footing as the tithe of corn in this way: just as the New Year for the tithe of corn is in Tishri, so the New Year for the tithe of cattle is in Tishri.

ON THE FIRST OF TISHRI IS NEW YEAR FOR YEARS. What legal bearing has this? — R. Papa said: For [determining the validity of] documents, as we have learnt, ‘Bonds if antedated are invalid, but if postdated are valid’.¹¹ But we have learnt, ON THE FIRST OF NISAN IS NEW YEAR FOR KINGS, and we asked, What is the legal bearing of this, and R. Hisda replied, For [determining the validity of] documents?¹² — There is no contradiction; the one statement refers to kings of Israel, the other to kings of other nations. What then of the dictum of R. Hisda, ‘This statement refers only to the kings of Israel, but for the kings of other nations we reckon from Tishri’; was R. Hisda telling us only something that we already know from a Mishnah? — No; R. Hisda wanted to tell us the import of some Scriptural verses.¹³ If you like I can say that R. Hisda explains the Mishnah here in the same way as R. Zera, since R. Zera said [that it¹⁴ means], for reckoning cycles,¹⁵ in this following the view of R. Eleazar, who said that the world was created in Tishri.¹⁶ R. Nahman b. Isaac [explained the Mishnah to refer] to the Divine judgment ‘as it is written, From the beginning of the year to the end of the year,¹⁷ [which means], From the beginning of the year sentence is passed as to what shall be up to the end of it. How do we know that this takes place in Tishri? — Because it is written, Blow the horn at the new moon, at the covered time [keseh]¹⁸ for our feastday.¹⁹ Which is the feast on which the moon is covered over [mithkaseh]? You must say that this is New Year;¹ and it is written [in this connection], For it is a statute for Israel, an ordinance for the God of Jacob.²

Our Rabbis taught: 'For it is a statute for Israel, an ordinance for the God of Jacob': this teaches that the heavenly Beth din does not assemble for judgment until the Beth din on earth has sanctified the month'.

Another [Baraita] taught: 'For it is a statute for Israel'; this tells me only that Israel [are judged]; how do I know that this applies also to the [other] nations of this world? Because it is written, an ordinance for the God of Jacob'. If that is the case, what is the point of saying, For it is a statute for Israel?³ — It teaches that Israel are brought up for trial first. And this is in harmony with the [following] saying of R. Hisda. For R. Hisda said: Where a king⁴ and a community appear together, the king is brought up for judgment first, as it says, the judgment of his servant [Solomon] and the judgment of his people.⁵ What is the reason? — If you like I can say, because it is not seemly that the king should stand outside, and if you like I can say, [the king is tried] before [the Divine] wrath becomes really fierce.⁶

FOR RELEASE YEARS. How do we know this [from the Scripture]? — Because it is written, And in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of solemn rest for the land,⁷ and that this commences with Tishri we learn from the analogy with the word 'year'⁸ in from the beginning of the year.⁹ But let us learn that it is Nisan from analogy with the word 'year' in the text, it is the first to you of the months of the year?¹⁰ — We draw an analogy to a year with which months are not mentioned from a year with which months are not mentioned, but we do not draw an analogy to a year with which months are not mentioned from a year with which months are mentioned.¹¹

AND FOR JUBILEE YEARS. [is the New Year for] Jubilees on the first of Tishri? Surely [the New Year for] Jubilees is on the tenth of Tishri, as it is written, on the day of atonement shall ye make proclamation with the horn?¹² — What authority is here followed? R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka, as it has been taught: And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year.¹³ What is the point of these words? [It is this]. Since it says, On the day of atonement [ye shall make proclamation],¹² I might think that the year is sanctified only from the Day of Atonement onwards. Therefore it says, And ye shall sanctify the fiftieth year. This teaches that it is sanctified from its inception. On this ground R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka laid down that from New Year to the Day of Atonement slaves were neither dismissed to their homes nor subjected to their masters, but they ate and drank and made merry, wearing garlands on their heads.¹⁴ When the Day of Atonement came, the Beth din sounded the horn; slaves were dismissed to their homes and fields returned to their original owners. And the Rabbis [— what do they make of this verse]? — [They say it teaches that] you are to sanctify years but not months.¹⁵

Another [Baraitha] taught: ‘It is a Jubilee.¹⁶ What is the point of these words? — Since it says, And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year,¹³ I might think that, just as it is sanctified from its inception onwards, so it remains sanctified [for a time] after its termination. And there would be nothing to wonder at in this, seeing that we [regularly] add from the profane on to the holy.¹⁷ Therefore it says, it is a Jubilee to you, the fiftieth year, [to show that] you are to sanctify the fiftieth year, but not the fifty-first year.¹⁸

And the Rabbis [— what do they make of these words]?¹ — [They say]: You are to count the fiftieth year, but you are not to count the fifty-first,² to exclude the view of R. Judah, who said that the fiftieth year is reckoned both ways.³ We are here told that this is not so.

And how do we know [from the Scripture] that we add from the profane on to the holy?⁴ — As it has been taught: In plowing time and in harvest time thou shalt rest.⁵ R. Akiba, [commenting on this,] said: There was no need [for Scripture] to specify the ploughing and harvest of the Sabbatical year, since this has already been mentioned [in] thy field thou shalt not sow etc.⁶ What must be meant therefore is the ploughing of the year before the seventh which is passing into the seventh,⁷ and the harvest of the seventh year which is continuing into the period after the seventh year.⁸ R. Ishmael said: Just as ploughing is optional,⁹ so the harvest [here referred to] is an optional one, excluding the harvesting of the ‘Omer, which is a religious duty.¹⁰ Whence then does R. Ishmael derive the rule that an addition is to be made from the profane on to the holy? — From what has been taught: And ye shall afflict your souls on the ninth day:¹¹ I might think [literally] on the ninth day. It therefore says, In the evening.¹² if in the evening, I might think, after dark? It therefore says, 'or, the ninth day'.¹³ What then am I to understand? That we begin fasting while it is yet day; which shows that we add from the profane on to the holy. I know this [so far] only in regard to the inception [of the holy day]; how do I know it in regard to its termination? Because it says, from evening to evening.¹² So far I have brought only the Day of Atonement under the rule; how do I know that it applies to Sabbaths also? Because it says, ye shall rest.¹⁴ How do I know that it applies to festivals? Because it says, your Sabbath.¹⁴ How am I to understand this? That wherever there is an obligation to rest, we add from the profane on to the holy.

What then does R. Akiba make of this, 'and ye shall afflict your souls on the ninth day'? — He requires it for the lesson learnt by R. Hiyya b. Rab from Difti.¹⁵ For R. Hiyya b. Rab from Difti learnt: 'And ye shall afflict your souls on the ninth day'. Do we then fast on the ninth day? Is it not on the tenth day that we fast? [We do]; but [the use of this word] indicates that if a man eats and drinks on the ninth day, the Scripture accounts it to him

(1) They have no need of this lesson, seeing that they do not consider the year sanctified from its inception. (Cf. Tosaf. s.v. גרבנין 8b).

(2) Lit. 'the year fifty and first'. So our texts, the meaning being, according to Rashi, that you are not to reckon the fiftieth year as fiftieth to the Jubilee and first to the next septennate. Tosaf., by a slight change of wording, renders: 'You are to count the fiftieth year (as fiftieth to the Jubilee), but you are not to count the fiftieth year as one (to the following septennate)', which is a smoother reading.

(3) As fiftieth to the Jubilee and first to the next septennate.

(4) I.e., add a little from the ordinary week-day on to the holy day.

(6) Lev. XXV, 4.

(7) Ploughing under trees in the sixth year which will benefit them in the seventh.

as if he fasted on both the ninth and the tenth days.¹

Our Rabbis taught: It is a Jubilee² — 'A Jubilee'³ even though they did not observe the release of fields, even though they did not observe the blowing of the trumpet.⁴ I might say [that it is still a Jubilee] even though they did not observe the dismissal of slaves. Therefore it says, 'it is'.⁵ So R. Judah. R. Jose said: 'It is a Jubilee', — 'A Jubilee'³ even though they did not release fields, even though they did not dismiss slaves. I might think [that it is still a Jubilee] even if they did not blow the trumpet. It therefore says, 'it is'. Now⁶ since one text brings some cases under the rule and another text excludes others from it, why should I expound: 'A Jubilee',⁷ even though they did not dismiss, but it is not a Jubilee unless they blew the trumpet'? Because it is possible that there should be no [opportunity for]⁸ dismissing slaves, but it is not possible that there should be no [opportunity for] blowing the trumpet.⁹ Another explanation is that the performance of the latter depends on the Beth din, but the performance of the former does not depend on the Beth din.¹⁰ What need is there for the alternative explanation? — Because you might argue that it is impossible that there should not be someone in some part of the world who has not a slave to dismiss. Therefore I say that the one depends on the Beth din but the other does not depend on the Beth din.

I understand R. Jose's point of view, his reason being as he stated. But what is R. Judah's reason? — The text says, And ye shall proclaim liberty throughout the land,¹¹ and he holds that a text may be expounded in connection with the clause immediately preceding it, but not with the one before that.¹²

All authorities agree that the word *deror*¹³ means freedom. What does this tell us? — As it has been taught: The word deror means freedom. R. Judah said: What is the significance of the word deror? [The freedom of] one who dwells [medayyer] where he likes¹⁴ and can carry on trade in the whole country.

R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan: The views given above are those of R. Judah and R. Jose, but the Sages say that [the neglect of] any of these three ceremonies renders the Jubilee inoperative. Their view was that a text can be expounded in connection both with the clause immediately preceding it and with the one before that and with the one that follows it.¹⁵ But it is written 'Jubilee'¹⁶ — This is to show that it must be kept even outside of Palestine. But it is written 'throughout the land'¹⁷ — This means that when liberation is carried out in the land it is carried out abroad, and when it is not carried out in the land it need not be carried out abroad.

AND FOR PLANTATION. How do we know this [from the Scripture]? — Because it is written, Three years [it shall be] uncircumcised,¹⁸ and it is written, and in the fourth year,¹⁹ and we learn that this year commences with Tishri from the analogy of the word 'year' in the text from the beginning of the year.²⁰ But why not conclude that it commences with Nisan from the analogy of the word 'year' in It is the first to you of the months of the year? — We draw an analogy to a year with which months are not mentioned from a year with which months are not mentioned, but we do not draw an analogy to a year with which months are not mentioned from a year with which months are mentioned.

Our Rabbis taught: 'If one plants or bends over²¹ or grafts a tree in the year before²² the Sabbatical year thirty days before New Year — in all three cases, [by New Year] a year has passed for him,²³ and he can preserve the growth during the seventh year. [If he does so] less than thirty days before New Year, the interval [up to New Year] does not count as a year for him and he may not preserve the growth in the Sabbatical year

(1) Because the eating and drinking on the ninth day is called in the text 'fasting'.

(2) Lev. XXV, 11.

(3) Added by Bah.

(4) The superfluous word 'Jubilee' shows that even in these cases the year is observed as a Jubilee for the abstaining from sowing etc.

(5) וְיָרָם This word having a limiting force.

(6) This is a continuation of R. Jose's statement.

(7) So Bah; cur. edd. 'It is a Jubilee'.

(8) Lit., 'it is possible for the world'. E.g., if no Israelite had a slave.

(9) It is hardly possible that there should be no trumpet.

(10) Because the Beth din may not be able to compel all persons to dismiss their slaves.

(11) Just before the words 'it is a Jubilee'.

(12) Hence we apply the limiting force of the words 'it is' to the dismissal of slaves, but not to the blowing of the trumpet, which does not immediately precede.

(13) In Lev. XXV, 10. E.V. 'liberty'.

- (16) This should cancel the limiting force of ‘it is’.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 10a

. The fruit of such a plantation is forbidden until the fifteenth of Shebat,¹ whether as "uncircumcised" in [the year of] "uncircumcision", or as fourth year fruit in the fourth year,² What is the ground for this ruling? — R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan (though some trace it back to the authority of R. Jannai): Scripture says, And in the fourth year. . . and in the fifth year.³ There are occasions when fruit appears in the fourth year and it is still forbidden on account of 'uncircumcision', and there are occasions when fruit appears in the fifth year and it is still forbidden on account of 'fourth year'.

Shall I say that that is not [in agreement with] R. Meir,⁴ since R. Meir has affirmed⁵ that one day in the year is reckoned as a year, as it has been taught: ‘Par [bullock] is mentioned in the Torah without further qualification and means an animal twenty-four months and one day old. So R. Meir. R. Eleazar says, it means an animal twenty-four months and thirty days old. For R. Meir used to say: Wherever ‘egel [calf] is mentioned in the Torah without further qualification, it means of the first year; [‘egel]⁶ ben bakar [young ox] means, of the second year; par [bullock] means, of the third year’! — You may still say [it is in agreement with] R. Meir. When R. Meir said that one day in a year is counted as a year, he meant at the end of a period,⁷ but not at the beginning.⁸

Raba said: Cannot we apply here an argument a fortiori,⁹ [to wit]: Seeing that in the case of a niddah,¹⁰ though the beginning of the [seventh] day is not reckoned as concluding her period,¹¹ the end of the [first] day yet counts for the beginning of her period,¹² in the case of [a period of] years where one day is counted [as a whole year] at the end,¹³

[The reference here is to Niddah who according to Biblical law was allowed to cleanse herself when seven days had passed from her first menstrual flow, provided it ceased on the seventh day before sunset. This law was later replaced by the more stringent Rabbinic rule necessitating a period of seven clean days after a single blood issue.]

does it not follow that one day should be counted [as a year] at the beginning? — What then? Will you say [that the passage quoted¹ follows] R. Eleazar? [How can this be, seeing that] R. Eleazar requires thirty days and thirty days,² as we have learnt: ‘It is not allowed to plant nor to bend over nor to graft in the year before the Sabbatical year less than thirty days before New Year, and if one did plant or bend over or graft, he must uproot the plant. So R. Eleazar. R. Judah said: If a grafting does not take within three days, it will not take at all. R. Jose and R. Simeon said that it takes two weeks’,³ and [commenting on this] R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: On the view that thirty days are the period [for taking] we require thirty days and thirty;⁴ on the view that three days are the period, thirty-three days are required; on the view that two weeks are the period, two weeks and thirty days are required. Now even if [we accept the view of] R. Judah, thirty-three days are required? — The truth is [that the statement in question follows] R. Meir, and when it says thirty days, it means the thirty days of taking. In that case it should say thirty-one days?⁵ — He held that the thirtieth day counts both ways.

R. Johanan said: Both of them [R. Meir and R. Eleazar] based their views on the same verse, viz., And it came to pass in the one and six hundredth year, in the first month, on the first day of the month.⁶ R. Meir reasoned: Seeing that the year was only one day old and it is still called a year, we can conclude that one day in a year is reckoned as a year. What says the other to this? — [He says that] if it were written, ‘In the six hundred and first year’, then it would be as you say. Seeing, however, that it is written, ‘In the one and six hundredth year’, the word ‘year’ refers to ‘six hundred’, and as for the word ‘one’, this means ‘the beginning of one’.⁷ And what is R. Eleazar’s reason? — Because it is written, ‘In the first month on the first day of the month. Seeing that the month was only one day old and it is yet called ‘month’, we can conclude that one day in a month is reckoned as a month; and since one day in a month is reckoned as a month, thirty days in a year are reckoned as a year, a month being reckoned by its unit and a year by its unit.

(We infer from what has just been said that both [R. Meir and R. Eleazar] were of opinion that the world was created in Nisan.)⁸

It has been taught: R. Eliezer says: In Tishri the world was created; in Tishri the Patriarchs⁹ were born; in Tishri the Patriarchs died; on Passover Isaac was born; on New Year Sarah, Rachel and Hannah were visited;¹⁰ on New Year Joseph went forth from prison

; on New Year the bondage of our ancestors in Egypt ceased;¹ in Nisan they were redeemed and in Nisan they will be redeemed in the time to come. R. Joshua says: In Nisan the world was created; in Nisan the Patriarchs were born; in Nisan the Patriarchs died; on Passover Isaac was born; on New Year Sarah, Rachel and Hannah were visited; on New Year Joseph went forth from prison; on New Year the bondage of our ancestors ceased in Egypt; and in Nisan they will be redeemed in time to come.

It has been taught: 'R. Eliezer says: Whence do we know that the world was created in Tishri? Because it says, And God said, Let the earth put forth grass, herb yielding seed, and fruit-tree.² Which is the month in which the earth puts forth grass and the trees are full of fruit? You must say that this is Tishri. That time was the season of rainfall,³ and the rain came down and the plants sprouted, as it says, And a mist went up from the earth.⁴

R. Joshua says: Whence do we know that the world was created in Nisan? Because it says, And the earth brought forth grass, herb yielding seed after its kind, and tree bearing fruit.⁵ Which is the month in which the earth is full of grass and trees [begin to] produce fruit? You must say that this is Nisan. That time was the period when cattle, beasts and fowls copulate with one another, as it says, The rains have mounted the sheep etc.⁶ And how does the other explain the text, 'tree bearing fruit'? — This signifies a blessing for future generations. And what does the other make of the words 'fruit-tree'? — This is to be explained in accordance with the dictum of R. Joshua b. Levi; for R. Joshua b. Levi said: All creatures of the creation were brought into being with their full stature, their full capacities, and their full beauty, as it says, And the heaven and the earth were finished, and all the host of them [zeba'am]. Read not zeba'am, but zibyonam [their beauty].

R. Eliezer said: Whence do we know that the Patriarchs were born in Tishri? Because it says, And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto King Solomon, at the feast in the month Ethanim;⁷ that is, the month in which the mighty ones [ethanim] of the world were born. How do you know that this word ethan means 'mighty'? — Because it is written, Thy dwelling-place is firm [ethan],⁸ and it also says, Hear, ye mountains, the Lord's controversy, and ye mighty rocks [ethanim] the foundations of the earth.⁹ It also says, The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh, leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills,¹⁰ [where] 'leaping upon the mountains' means, for the merit of the patriarchs, and 'skipping upon the hills' means, for the merit of the matriarchs.

R. Joshua said: Whence do we know that the patriarchs were born in Nisan? Because it says, and it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year in the month of Ziv¹¹ — that is, the month in which the brilliant ones [zewthane] of the world were born. But how does he explain the expression 'month of Ethanim'? — It means, [the month] which is strong in religious duties.¹² What does the other make of the expression 'in the month of Ziv'? — It means, the month in which there is splendour for the trees, for so Rab Judah has said: When a man goes abroad in the days of Nisan and sees trees blossoming, he should say, 'Blessed is He that hath not left His world short of anything and has created therein goodly creatures and goodly trees to rejoice mankind'.

He who holds that they were born in Nisan holds that they died in Nisan, and he who holds that they were born in Tishri holds that they died in Tishri, as it says, I am a hundred and twenty years old this day.¹³ The word 'this day' seems here superfluous. What then is the point of it? [As much as to say], This day my days and years have reached full measure, which teaches that the Holy One, blessed be He, sits and completes the years of the righteous from day to day and from month to month, as it says, The number of thy days I will fulfil.¹⁴

Whence do we know that Isaac was born on Passover? — Because it is written, On the [next] festival¹⁵ I will return unto thee.¹⁶ Now when was he [the angel] speaking?¹⁷ Shall I say [he was speaking] on Passover and referring to Pentecost? Could she bear in fifty days?¹⁸ Shall I say then that [he was speaking on] Pentecost and was referring to Tishri? Even in five months could she bear? I must suppose then that he was speaking on Tabernacles and referring to Passover.¹⁹ Even so, could she bear in six months? — It has been taught that that year was a leap year. All the same, if the Master deducts the days of uncleanness,²⁰ the time is too short? — Mar Zutra replied: Even those who hold that when a woman bears at nine months she does not give birth before the month is complete²¹ admit that if she bears at seven months she can give birth before the month is complete, as it says, And it came to pass after the cycle of days;²² the minimum of cycles is two, and the minimum of days is two.

‘On New Year Sarah, Rachel and Hannah were visited’. Whence do we know this? — R. Eliezer said: We learn it from the two occurrences of the word ‘visiting’, and the two occurrences of the word ‘remembering’. It is written concerning Rachel, And God remembered Rachel,²³ and it is written concerning Hannah, And the Lord remembered her,²⁴ and there is an analogous mention of ‘remembering’ in connection with New Year, as it is written, a solemn rest, a remembering of the blast of the trumpet.²⁵ The double mention of visiting [is as follows]. It is written concerning Hannah, For the Lord had visited Hannah,²⁶ and it is written concerning Sarah, And the Lord visited Sarah.²⁷

‘On New Year Joseph went forth from the prison’. Whence do we know this? — Because it is written, Blow the horn on the new moon, on the covering day for our festival . . .

(1) Six months before the redemption.

(3) Lit., ‘fructification’.

(4) Gen. II, 6. This is supposed to have been at the time of the creation, and is therefore a proof that the world was created in Tishri.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 11b

He appointed it for Joseph for a testimony when he went forth¹ etc.

‘On New Year the bondage of our ancestors ceased in Egypt’. It is written in one place, and I will bring you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians,² and it is written in another place, I removed his shoulder from the burden.³ ‘In Nisan they were delivered’, as Scripture recounts. ‘In Tishri they will be delivered in time to come’. This is learnt from the two occurrences of the word ‘horn’. It is written in one place, Blow the horn on the new moon,⁴ and it is written in another place, In that day a great horn shall be blown.⁵ ‘R. Joshua says, In Nisan they were delivered, in Nisan they will be delivered in the time to come’. Whence do we know this? — Scripture calls [the Passover] ‘a night of watchings’,⁶ [which means], a night which has been continuously watched for from the six days of the creation. What says the other to this? — [He says it means], a night which is under constant protection against evil spirits.⁷

R. Joshua and R. Eliezer are herein consistent [with views expressed by them elsewhere], as it has been taught: ‘In the sixth hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month.’⁸ R. Joshua said: That day was the seventeenth day of Iyar, when the constellation of Pleiades sets at daybreak and the fountains begin to dry up, and because they [mankind] perverted their ways, the Holy One, blessed be He, changed for them the work of creation and made the constellation of Pleiades rise at daybreak and took two stars from the Pleiades and brought a flood on the world. R. Eliezer said: That day was the seventeenth of Marheshvan, a day on which the constellation of Pleiades rises at daybreak, and [the season] when the fountains begin to fill

, and because they perverted their ways, the Holy One, blessed be He, changed for them the work of creation, and caused the constellation of Pleiades to rise at daybreak and took away two stars [from it] and brought a flood on the world’.¹ Now accepting the view of R. Joshua, we can understand why the word ‘second’ is used;² but on R. Eliezer's view, what is meant by ‘second’? — [It means], the second to [the day of] judgment.³ Again, on R. Joshua's view we see what change there was in the work of creation; but on R. Eliezer's view what change was there?⁴ — The answer is found in the dictum of R. Hisda; for R. Hisda said: With hot liquid they sinned and with hot liquid they were punished. ‘With hot liquid they sinned’, namely, in [sexual] transgression. ‘With hot liquid they were punished’: it is written here⁵ , and the waters assuaged,⁶ and it is written elsewhere, and the wrath of the king was assuaged.⁷

Our Rabbis taught: ‘The wise men of Israel follow R. Eliezer in dating the Flood⁸ and R. Joshua in dating the annual cycles,⁹ while the scholars of other peoples follow R. Joshua in dating the Flood also’.

AND FOR VEGETABLES. A Tanna taught: 'For vegetables and for tithes and for vows'. What is meant by vegetables? The tithe of vegetables? But this is the same as 'tithes'? — [The Tanna] mentions first a tithe prescribed by the Rabbis and then those prescribed by the Torah.¹⁰ But let him mention those prescribed by the Torah first? — Since he was specially pleased with the others,¹¹ he mentions them first. And our Tanna [— why does he not mention tithes]? — He mentions a tithe prescribed by the Rabbis,¹² and [leaves us to infer] a fortiori those prescribed by the Torah. Why does not the Tanna here say simply 'tithe' [in the singular]? — He desires to include both the tithe of cattle and the tithe of cereals. Then why does he not say 'vegetable' [in the singular]? — He refers to two kinds of vegetables, as we have learnt: '[Tithe is to be given from] vegetables which are commonly made up into bundles, from the time they are so made up, and from those which are not commonly so made up, from the time when he fills a vessel with them.

Our Rabbis taught: If one¹³ gathered herbs on the eve of New Year before sunset, and then gathered some more

(1) There seems to be some confusion in the text here. To make it astronomically correct we should read (with the Seder Olam) in the dictum of R. Joshua, 'When Pleiades rises at daybreak', and in the dictum of R. Eliezer, 'sets at daybreak'.

(2) Because we find Nisan called the first month in the Torah.

(3) Which is also recognized by Scripture as the beginning of a year in the text, 'The eyes of the Lord are upon it (the Land of Israel) from the beginning of the year'.

(12) I.e., tithes for vegetables.

(13) Apparently a non-Jew is meant (Tosaf.).

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 12b

after sunset, terumah¹ and tithe are not given from one lot for another, because terumah and tithe are not given from the new for the old nor from the old for the new. If it was at the meeting point of the second and third years² [of the septennial cycle], from that [which is plucked in] the second year first and second tithe³ [have to be given], [and from that which was plucked in] the third year, first tithe and the tithe of the poor.

Whence this rule? — R. Joshua b. Levi says: [It is written], When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithe of thine increase in the third year, which is the year of the tithe.⁴ This means the year in which there is only one tithe.⁵ How is then one to act? [He gives] the first tithe and the tithe of the poor, and the second tithe is omitted. Is this correct, or should the first tithe also be omitted? — [Not so], because it says, Moreover thou shalt speak unto the Levites and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithe which I have given you from them for your inheritance.⁶ The text here compares the tithe [of the Levites] to an inheritance, [to signify that] just as an inheritance is to be held uninterrupted, so their tithe is to be given without interruption. It has been taught to the same effect: 'When thou hast made an end of tithing etc.' [This means] a year in which there is only one tithe. How is one to act? [He gives] first tithe and tithe of the poor, and the second tithe is omitted. Should perhaps the first tithe also be omitted? — [Not so], because it says, and the Levite shall come,⁷ which means to say, every time he comes give him.⁸ So R. Judah. R. Eliezer b. Jacob says:

We have no need [to appeal to this text].⁹ It says, Moreover thou shalt speak unto the Levites and say unto them, When ye take from the children of Israel the tithe which I have given you from them for your inheritance.¹⁰ The text here compares the tithe to an inheritance, to signify that just as an inheritance is held uninterruptedly, so the tithe is to be given without interruption.

AND FOR VOWS. Our Rabbis taught: If one is interdicted by vow to have no benefit from another person for a year, he reckons twelve months from day to day. If he said 'for this year', then even if he made the vow on the twenty-ninth of Elul, as soon as the first of Tishri arrives a year is completed for him; and this even on the view of those who say that one day in a year is not counted as a year. For he undertook to mortify himself, and he has mortified himself. But why not say [that his year ends in] Nisan? — In respect of vows, follow the ordinary use of language.¹¹

We have learnt elsewhere: 'Fenugrec¹² [becomes liable to tithe] from the time when it grows;¹³ produce¹⁴ and olives, from the time when they have grown a third'. What is meant by 'from the time when it grows'? — From the time when it grows sufficiently for resowing.¹⁵ 'Produce and olives from the time when they are a third grown'. Whence this rule? — R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan (some trace it back to the name of R. Jose the Galilean): Scripture says: At the end of every seven years, in the set time of the year of release, in the feast of Tabernacles.¹⁶ Now how comes the year of release to be mentioned here? The feast of Tabernacles is already the eighth year? It is in fact to intimate to us that if produce has grown a third in the seventh year before New Year, the rules of the seventh year are to be applied to it in the eighth year.¹⁷

Said R. Zera to R. Assi:

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Lit., 'if the second entered into the third'. In the second year a tithe was taken to Jerusalem to be consumed there; in the third year a tithe was given to the poor, but not taken to Jerusalem. The first tithe which went to the Levites was given every year. v. infra.

(3) I.e., tithe of the Levites and tithe for Jerusalem.

(4) Deut. XXVI, 12.

(5) I.e., one of the two regular tithes.

(6) Num. XVIII, 26.

(7) Deut. XIV, 29.

(8) In the third year also.

(9) R. Eliezer apparently was not completely satisfied with the proof from this text, because it speaks of the Levite as in the category of the poor.

(10) Num. XVIII, 26.

(11) And men ordinarily talk of the year as beginning in Tishri.

(12) Or 'fenugreek', a leguminous plant allied to clover.

(13) I.e., its year is determined by the time of its growth and not of its gathering, as in the case of vegetables.

(14) התבואה It is a question whether this includes grapes or not. V. Tosaf.

(15) Cf. Tosaf. s.v. משתצמח .

(16) Deut. XXXI, 10.

(17) Tosaf. (s.v. מנהג) points out that this would seem to come under the rule already given above of adding from the profane on to the holy, and answers that from this verse we should learn only that the produce if harvested must be treated as seventh-year produce e.g.. in respect of trading interest, but not that it is forbidden to harvest it.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 13a

But perhaps even though it has not begun to ripen at all, the All-Merciful has still laid down that it is to be left alone until the feast of Tabernacles? — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, and the feast of ingathering [asif] at the end of the year.¹ Now what is 'ingathering'? Shall I say it means the feast which comes at the time of ingathering? This is already signified in the words when thou gatherest in.² What then must be meant here by asif? Harvesting;³ and the Rabbis take it for granted that all produce which is harvested by Tabernacles must have grown to a third by New Year, and Scripture applies to it the words at the end of the year.⁴ Said R. Jeremiah to R. Zera: And were the Rabbis certain that there is this distinction between a third and less than a third?⁵ He replied to him: Am I not always telling you not to let yourself go beyond the established rule? All the measurements laid down by the Sages are of this nature. In forty se'ahs [of water] a ritual bath may be taken; in forty se'ahs less a kurtub⁶ it may not be taken. [A quantity of food equal to the] size of an egg can be rendered unclean as foodstuff; if it is short of that quantity by a grain it cannot be rendered unclean. [A piece of cloth] three handbreadths by three can be rendered unclean by being trodden on,⁷ less than this quantity by one hair is not so rendered unclean. R. Jeremiah subsequently said: What I said is of no account. For R. Kahana was asked by members of the college, Whence did the Israelites bring the omer which they offered on their entry into the Land [of Israel]? If you say, it grew⁸ while still in the possession of the heathen, [this cannot be, since] the All Merciful prescribed your harvest⁹ and not the harvest of the stranger. (But how do we know that they [the Israelites] offered it at all? Perhaps they did not offer it at all? — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, And they did eat of the produce of the land on the morrow after the Passover.¹⁰ On the morrow after the Passover they ate, but not before, [which shows that] they brought the omer and only then ate. Whence then did they obtain it?) — He [R. Kahana] replied to them: All that had not grown to a third while in the possession of the stranger [was fitting for their use]. Now [it might be argued here also that] perhaps it had grown [in the possession of the stranger] and they were not certain. The fact, however, [that they ate it] shows that they were certain. So here,¹¹ the Rabbis are certain. But perhaps [the Israelites brought the omer from] corn which had not commenced to grow [when they entered the land], but where it had grown to a quarter they were not certain about the difference between a third and less than a third?¹² — Do not imagine such a thing. For it is written, And the people went up from the Jordan on the tenth of the month.¹³ Now if you assume that by then the corn had not grown at all, could it become ripe in five days? But [on your assumption] that it had grown to a fourth or a fifth, could [such corn] become ripe in five days? What you consequently have to answer [even on this assumption] is that the land of Canaan is called 'the land of the hind';¹⁴ so [on the other assumption] you can answer that it is called 'the land of the hind'.

R. Hanina objected strongly to the statement made above. Can you, he said, maintain that this 'asif' is 'harvesting', seeing that it is written, when thou gatherest in from thy threshing floor and from thy wine press,¹⁵ and [commenting on this] a Master has said, The verse speaks of the waste of the threshing floor and the wine press?¹⁶ Said R. Zera: I thought I was sure of this,¹⁷ and now R. Hanina has come and put a spoke in my wheel.¹⁸ How then do we know [this rule about a third]? — As it has been taught: R. Jonathan b. Joseph says: And it shall bring forth produce for the three years;¹⁹

(1) Ex. XXIII, 16.

(2) Ibid.

(3) The verse meaning that the harvest gathered in at this season belongs to the year going out.

(4) Which shows that it is regarded as belonging to the year which is going out.

(5) Viz., that what is grown to a third belongs to one year, and what is less grown to another year. This seems to R. Jeremiah rather arbitrary.

read not lishlosh [for three], but lishlish [to a third].¹ But this text is required for its literal meaning?² It is written in another verse, And ye shall sow for the eighth year and eat of the produce, the old store, until the ninth year.³

We have learnt elsewhere:⁴ 'Rice, millet, hanie⁵ and sesame,⁶ if they have taken root by New Year, are for purposes of tithe counted⁷ as belonging to the year before [the New Year],⁸ and are permitted in the seventh year.⁹ Otherwise they are forbidden in the seventh year,⁹ and are reckoned for tithe as belonging to the next year.¹⁰ Rabbah said: The Rabbis have laid down that [the tithe year of] a tree is determined by its blossoming, that of produce and olives by their becoming a third grown, that of vegetables by their ingathering. In which class have these been placed by the Rabbis? — Rabbah answered himself by saying: Since they are gathered for shelling as required,¹¹ the Rabbis made the taking root the determining factor.¹²

Said Abaye to him: Can he not collect the whole crop in a heap,¹³ so that ex post facto he will have set aside from the new crop in it for the new crop in it, and from the old crop in it for the old crop?¹⁴ Has it not been taught:¹⁵ 'R. Jose b. Kippar says in the name of R. Simeon Shezuri: If Egyptian beans have been sown for seed and part takes root before New Year and part after, terumah and tithe must not be given from one lot for another, because terumah and tithe are not given from the new for the old nor from the old for the new. How then is one to manage? He collects the whole crop in a heap, so that in the end he gives terumah and tithe from the new crop in the heap for the new crop in the heap, and from the old crop in the heap for the old crop in the heap! — He replied to him: You cite R. Simeon Shezuri. R. Simeon Shezuri held that mixing can be relied on,¹⁶ whereas the Rabbis held that mixing cannot be relied on.

R. Isaac b. Nahmani said in the name of Samuel: The halachah follows the ruling given by R. Jose b. Kippar in the name of R. Simeon Shezuri. R. Zera strongly demurred to this. Did Samuel, he asked, really say this? Has not Samuel said: Mixing is not relied on for anything save wine and oil? — R. Zera overlooked the following dictum of Samuel: The determining factor is in all cases the full ripening.¹⁷

(1) Meaning that it is considered ripe when it has grown a third.

(2) And how therefore can you use it for a deduction?

(3) Ibid. 22. This shows that the produce of the sixth year will last three years, and therefore the other verse is not required to tell us this and may be used for a deduction.

(4) Sheb. II, 7.

(5) A species of millet.

(6) These are all counted as varieties of pulse.

(7) In an ordinary year.

(8) Second or third as the case may be. V. p. 44, n. 6.

(9) Viz., those that take root in the sixth.

(10) V. Sheb. II, 7.

(11) I.e., some before New Year and some after. [The phrase עשויין פרכין פרכין is difficult. Rashi renders: They (their gathering) are made (as they are needed) for shelling. R. Hananel reads פרגין ('beds') and renders, They ripen (at different times) in different beds, even though they may 'take' at the same time].

(12) Because otherwise it would be difficult to keep the old and the new separate for tithing purposes without great inconvenience.

(13) Lit., 'heap up his threshing-floor in the middle of it'.

(14) Abaye holds that if the whole crops old and new, is well mixed together, then when he sets aside terumah and tithe from it, the proportion of old and new in the terumah and tithe will be the same as the proportion of old and new in the whole crop.

(15) Tosef. Sheb. II.

(16) To produce old and new in proper proportions in the tithe. Lit., 'there is mixing'.

(17) And therefore in fact tithe is given from Egyptian beans all together, whether they took root in the outgoing or in the incoming year, which is as R. Simeon Shezuri said, in so far that the two crops can be tithed together, although according to each for a different reason. For on the view of Samuel the whole is regarded as belonging to the incoming year, which is not what R. Simeon said.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 14a

And all three dicta of Samuel are necessary.¹ For if he had told us only that the law follows R. Simeon b. Shezuri, I should have said that his reason was because we can rely on mixing; he tells us therefore that mixing is not to be relied on for anything. And if he had told us that mixing is not to be relied on for anything, I should have said that he holds with the Rabbis;² therefore he tells us that the halachah follows R. Simeon Shezuri. If again we had only these two dicta, I should have said that Samuel contradicts himself;³ he therefore tells us that the determining factor is in all cases the full ripening.⁴ And if he had told us [only] that the determining factor is in all cases the full ripening, I should have said that this applies also to produce and olives. Therefore he tells us that the halachah follows R. Simeon Shezuri where he expresses a different view.⁵ [But if so], let him indicate [only] these two points; why does he tell us that mixing is not in all cases to be relied on? — His object is to tell us that for wine and oil mixing is to be relied on.

It has been taught: R. Jose the Galilean says: After that thou hast gathered in from thy threshing-floor and from thy wine press:⁶ [this tells us that] just as the [produce brought to the] threshing floor and the wine press have this special feature, that they are nurtured by the waters⁷ of the outgoing year and are [consequently] tithed for the outgoing year, so all products which are nurtured by the waters of the outgoing year are tithed for the outgoing year. This excludes vegetables, which are nurtured by the waters of the current year⁸ and are [consequently] tithed for the current year. R. Akiba said: 'After that thou hast gathered it, from thy threshing-floor and thy wine press:' just as [the products brought to the] threshing-floor and wine press have this special feature that they are nurtured by rain water⁹ and [consequently] are tithed for the outgoing year, so all products that are nurtured by rain water are tithed for the outgoing year. This excludes vegetables, which are nurtured by all kinds of water¹⁰ and are consequently tithed for the current year. Where do they [R. Jose and R. Akiba] differ in practice? — R. Abbahu said: They take different views with regard to seedless onions and Egyptian beans, as we have learnt:¹¹ Seedless onions and Egyptian beans which have been kept without water for thirty days before New Year [and are gathered after New Year] are tithed for the outgoing year and are permitted in the Sabbatical year. Otherwise they are forbidden in the Sabbatical year and are tithed for the current year.¹²

ON THE FIRST OF SHEBAT IS NEW YEAR FOR TREES. What is the reason? — R. Eleazar said in the name of R. Oshaia: Because [by then] the greater part of the year's rain has fallen¹³ and the greater part of the cycle¹⁴ is still to come. What is the sense of this? What it means is this: 'Although the greater part of the cycle is still to come, yet since the greater part of the year's rain has fallen, [therefore etc.]’.

Our Rabbis taught: ‘It is recorded of R. Akiba that he once plucked a citron tree on the first of Shebat and gave two tithes from

(1) For making clear to us his point of view.

(2) So that if old and new have become mixed together, tithe for both parts of the mixture must proportionately be given from some other quarter.

(3) By saying on the one hand that the law follows R. Simeon, which would imply that mixing can be relied on, and on the other that mixing cannot be relied on.

(4) And this is the reason why the law follows R. Simeon.

(5) From the Rabbis. That is, only in the case of beans etc. but not of produce, where Samuel would hold that the decisive factor is the growth of a third. [R. Hananel reads ‘where they (R. Simeon b. Shezuri and the Rabbis) differ’].

(6) Deut. XVI, 13.

(7) This apparently includes both rain water and irrigation.

(8) Lit., ‘the year that covers’. The year in which they are gathered.

(9) Lit., ‘most (kinds of) water’.

(10) Including irrigation.

(11) Sheb. II, 9.

(12) Rashi gives two views as to what is implied in this. According to one opinion, if these vegetables have been kept without water for the last thirty days of the outgoing year, then R. Jose would hold that they must have been nurtured by the rain water of that year, and so are to be tithed for that year; whereas R. Akiba would hold that their growth is due in part to irrigation. and so they would be tithed for the next year; and the Mishnah quoted follows R. Jose. The other opinion is that as they have not been irrigated for thirty days, it is R. Akiba and not R. Jose who would hold that they have been nurtured by the rain of the outgoing year, and the Mishnah therefore follows R. Akiba. It was customary to withhold water from these two species for thirty days before plucking them so as to harden them.

(13) And the trees now begin to blossom.

it,¹ one² in accordance with the ruling of Beth Shammai and one³ in accordance with the ruling of Beth Hillel.⁴ R. Jose b. Judah said: He did not follow the [two] rulings of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel, but the [two] rulings of Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer, as we have learnt:⁵ ‘A citron tree follows the rule of a tree in three respects and of a vegetable in one respect. It follows the rule of a tree in three respects — for ‘uncircumcision,’⁶ for fourth-year fruit, and for the Sabbatical year. It follows the rule of a vegetable in one respect, its tithe [year] being determined by its plucking. So Rabban Gamaliel. R. Eliezer, however, says that a citron follows the rule of a tree in all respects.’⁷

But is it right to adopt the harder rule from both sides?⁸ Has it not been taught: ‘As a general principle, the halachah follows Beth Hillel. If one prefers, however, to adopt the rule of Beth Shammai, he may do so, and if he desires to adopt the rule of Beth Hillel he may do so. One, however, who adopts the more lenient rulings of both Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel [on the same subject] is a bad man, while to one who adopts the more stringent rulings of both Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel may be applied the verse, But the fool walketh in darkness.’⁹ No; either one must follow Beth Shammai both where they are more severe and more lenient or Beth Hillel both where they are more severe and more lenient? — [The answer is that] R. Akiba was doubtful about the tradition, and did not know whether Beth Hillel fixed [the New Year for trees] on the first of Shebat or on the fifteenth of Shebat.¹⁰

‘R. Jose b. Judah said: He did not adopt the two rulings of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel, but of Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer [But would R. Jose hold that] in respect of the first of Shebat he adopted the ruling of Beth Shammai?¹¹ — R. Hanina (or some say R. Hananiah) said: The case here is one of a citron which had blossomed before the fifteenth of Shebat of the previous year,¹² and R. Akiba might equally well have done the same thing at all earlier date,¹³ but this happened to be the actual date. Rabina said: Combine¹⁴ the two statements. It was not the first of Shebat but the fifteenth of Shebat,¹⁵ and he [R. Akiba] did not adopt the two rulings of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel but of Rabban Gamaliel and R. Eliezer.

Rabbah son of R. Huna said: Seeing that Rabban Gamaliel has said that the tithe year of a citron tree is determined by its plucking like that of a vegetable, its New Year [like that of a vegetable] must be the first of Tishri. The following was cited in objection to this: 'R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: If a man plucked the fruit of a citron tree on the eve of the fifteenth of Shebat before sunset, and then plucked some more after sunset, terumah and tithe must not be given from one lot for the other because terumah and tithe are not given from the new for the old nor from the old for the new. [If it was at the meeting point of the third and] fourth years, [from the fruit of] the third year he gives first tithe and the tithe of the poor, and from the fruit of the fourth year the first tithe and the second tithe'.¹⁶

 - (8) Where two authorities give each two rulings with regard to a certain subject, one being more stringent in respect of one point and the other in respect of the other. For instance, Beth Shammai rule that the lack of one vertebra in a human spine still leaves it capable of defiling by 'overshadowing' (v. Glos. s.v. ohel) but does not make an animal trefa (v. Glos.) whereas Beth Hillel says that it makes an animal trefa but leaves it incapable of defiling by overshadowing. Here Beth Shammai are more stringent in the matter of defilement and Beth Hillel in the matter of trefa (v. 'Er. 6b). So here, R. Akiba took on himself two burdens when one would have sufficed.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 15a

Now which authority is reported to make plucking the determining factor? Rabban Gamaliel; and he says here Shebat?¹ — The statement should have been reported differently,² [thus]: Rabbah b. bar Huna said: Although Rabban Gamaliel said that [the tithe-year of] a citron tree is determined by its plucking like [that of] a vegetable, yet its New Year is Shebat.

Why in the former statement³ is the expression used, 'if it was the meeting point of the second and third years', and in this statement the expression, 'if it was the meeting point of the third and fourth years'? — This points out to us incidentally that the citron tree suffers from being handled, and since everybody handles it in the seventh year,⁴ it does not yield fruit till the third year [after blossoming].

R. Johanan inquired of R. Jannai: When is the New Year of the citron tree? — He replied: In Shebat. Do you mean [he asked further] Shebat of the calendar⁵ or Shebat of the cycle?⁶ — He replied: Shebat of the calendar.⁷

Raba inquired of R. Nahman (or, according to others, R. Johanan inquired of R. Jannai): Suppose it was a leap year, what is the rule?⁸ — He replied: Do as in ordinary years.⁹

Rabbah said: A citron tree which has blossomed in the sixth year and ripened in the seventh¹⁰ is not liable to tithe and not liable to clearance;¹¹ while one which has blossomed in the seventh year and produced fruit in the eighth is not liable to tithe but is liable to clearance. Said Abaye to him: Your second clause is unobjectionable, because [you can say that] you take the more stringent view.¹² But your first clause [surely involves a contradiction]? [For you say], 'It is not liable to clearance'. Why so? Because we say, Make the blossoming the determining factor.¹³ But if so, it should surely be liable to tithe? — He replied to him: Everybody handles it, and you say it should be liable to tithe! R. Hamnunah, however, said: A citron tree which blossoms in the sixth year and ripens in the seventh is always reckoned as belonging to the sixth, and one which blossoms in the seventh and ripens in the eighth is always regarded as belonging to the seventh. The following was cited in objection: 'R. Simeon b. Judah said in the name of R. Simeon: A citron tree which blossoms in the sixth year and ripens in the seventh is not liable to tithe and not liable to clearance, since no fruit is liable to tithe which has not both grown and been plucked in a period of liability.¹⁴ A citron tree which blossoms in the seventh year and ripens in the eighth year is not liable either to tithe or to clearance, since no fruit is liable to clearance which has not both grown and been plucked in the seventh year'. Now the first part of this statement seems to contradict R. Hamnunah,¹⁵ and the second part both Rabbah and R. Hamnunah?¹⁶ — There is a difference of Tannaim on this point,¹⁷ as it has been taught: 'R. Jose said: Abtolmus testified in the name of five elders that a citron is determined by its plucking in the matter of tithe. Our teachers, however, took a vote in Usha and decided that it is determined by its plucking for purposes both of tithe and of Sabbatical year'. How does Sabbatical year come to be mentioned here? —

(1) And not Tishri.

(2) Lit., 'if the statement was made it was stated thus'.

(3) In the Tosef. quoted on 12a ad fin.

(4) Since, like all other trees, it is common property in that year.

(5) I.e., the lunar month Shebat-thirty days from the first of Tebeth.

(6) Thirty days from the cycle of Tebeth (Winter Solstice, usually Dec. 22).

(7) In spite of the fact that fructification is due to the action of the sun.

(8) Do we make the New Year in Shebat which comes next to Tebeth, or in First Adar which takes the place of Shebat in this year?

(9) Lit., 'follow most of the years'. I.e., adhere to Shebat.

(10) Lit., 'the daughter of the sixth which enters into the seventh'.

(11) In the third and sixth years of the Septennate. V. Deut. XXVI, 13.

(12) I.e., the view which is more stringent in this case, viz., that we go by the blossoming and not by the plucking. And since we do this for purposes of clearance, we also do it for purposes of tithes, although this means taking the more lenient view. (V. Tosaf s.v. בשלמא).

(13) And so it belongs to the sixth year.

(14) And the seventh year is not a period of liability for tithe.

(15) Who holds that if it blossoms in the sixth it is liable to tithe.

(16) Who both hold that if it blossomed in the seventh year it is liable to clearance.

(17) As to whether we go by the plucking or the blossoming for purposes of the Sabbatical year.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 15b

There is an omission in the statement, which should read as follows: '[Abtolmus testified that] a citron tree is determined by its plucking for purposes of tithe and by its blossoming for purposes of the Sabbatical year.¹ Our teachers, however, took a vote in Usha and decided that it is determined by its plucking for purposes both of tithe and of Sabbatical year'.

It has been stated: R. Johanan and Resh Lakish both lay down that a citron tree which blossoms in the sixth year and ripens in the seventh year is always reckoned as belonging to the sixth year.² When Rabin came [from Palestine], he said in the name of R. Johanan: A citron which blossomed in the sixth year and ripened in the seventh, even though [at the beginning of the seventh] it was no bigger than an olive and it subsequently became as big as a loaf, can render one guilty of breaking the rule of tebel.³

Our Rabbis taught: If the fruit of a tree blossoms before the fifteenth of Shebat, it is tithed for the outgoing year; if after the fifteenth of Shebat, it is tithed for the incoming year. R. Nehemiah said: This rule applies only to trees which produce two broods in a year.⁴ (Two broods,⁵ do you say? — He should say, as it were two broods).⁶ Trees, however, which produce only one brood, like date trees, carob trees and olive trees, even though they blossom before the fifteenth of Shebat are tithed for the incoming year.

R. Johanan said: In regard to carob trees, it has become the general custom to follow the rule of R. Nehemiah. Resh Lakish sought to confute R. Johanan from the following: 'As regards wild fig-trees, their seventh year is the second year [of the Septennate] because [after blossoming] their fruit takes three years to grow'.⁷ — He made no answer.⁸ Said R. Abba the priest to R. Jose: Why did he make no answer? He could have said to him, I give the view of R. Nehemiah, and you bring against me the view of the Rabbis! — [He could not have answered him thus], because Resh Lakish could have retorted: Do you abandon the Rabbis and follow R. Nehemiah? — But he could have said to him, I speak to you of the general custom, and you speak to me of a prohibition?⁹ — [He could not answer thus], because he could have said to him: Where a prohibition applies, even if there is a general custom, do we allow it? — But he could have said to him: I speak to you of the tithe of carobs, which is Rabbinical, and you speak to me of the Sabbatical year, which is Pentateuchal! — The truth is, said R. Abba the priest, I wonder whether Resh Lakish put this question. Whether he put this question? But we are distinctly told that he did so! — What R. Abba should say is, whether he [R. Johanan] admitted the difficulty or not.¹⁰

(1) And this is the view taken by Rabbah and R. Hamnunah in respect of the law of clearance. For the purposes of tithes, however, Rabbah is of the opinion that although Abtolmus makes the plucking the decisive factor, he would nevertheless exempt from tithe a citron tree which blossomed in the sixth year and ripened in the seventh, for the reason that it is handled by everybody (Rashi)].

(2) Whether for purposes of the Sabbatical year or tithes.

(3) V. Glos. If it was consumed before tithe was given for it, R. Johanan being of the opinion that we go by the blossoming.

(4) R. Nehemiah's statement is here interrupted while the use of the strange word 'broods' is explained.

(5) Heb. בְּרִיכוֹת, a word strictly applicable only to broods of birds.

(6) I.e., their fruit is not all gathered at one time; e.g., figs; cf. supra 13b, the rule in the case of beans.

(7) Sheb. V, 1. Which would show that the blossoming is the determining factor in all trees, even those which are all plucked at one time.

(8) Lit. 'he was silenced'.

(9) The prohibition to determine the year by the plucking.

(10) I.e., whether his silence was due to the fact that he had no answer, or to the fact that he thought it obvious that tithe of carobs, which is Rabbinical, could not be put on the same footing as produce of the Sabbatical year which is

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 16a

MISHNAH. AT FOUR SEASONS [DIVINE] JUDGMENT IS PASSED ON THE WORLD:¹ AT PASSOVER IN RESPECT OF PRODUCE; AT PENTECOST IN RESPECT OF FRUIT; AT NEW YEAR ALL CREATURES PASS BEFORE HIM [GOD] LIKE CHILDREN OF MARON,² AS IT SAYS, 'HE THAT FASHIONETH THE HEART OF THEM ALL, THAT CONSIDERETH ALL THEIR DOINGS';³ AND ON TABERNACLES JUDGMENT IS PASSED IN RESPECT OF RAIN.

GEMARA. Which produce is referred to? Shall I say, the produce which is already grown?⁴ If so, then when were the hardships decreed which it has already suffered? It must be then the produce which is to be sown later.⁵ You assume then that only one judgment is passed. But it has been taught: 'If some calamity or misfortune⁶ happens to produce before Passover, it is in virtue of a judgment passed on the previous Passover, if after Passover, of a judgment passed at the Passover which has just gone.⁷ If a calamity or misfortune happens to a man before the Day of Atonement, it is in virtue of a judgment passed on the last Day of Atonement, if just after the Day of Atonement, of a judgment passed on the one just gone'! — Raba replied: This shows that two judgments are passed on the produce.⁸ Abaye remarked: Therefore if a man sees that the slow-maturing seed⁹ is doing well he should sow the quick-maturing seed¹⁰ in good time, so that it may be well grown before the time comes to judge it.¹¹

Our Mishnah seems to agree neither with R. Meir nor with R. Judah nor with R. Jose nor with R. Nathan. For it has been taught: 'All are judged¹² on New Year and their doom is sealed on the Day or Atonement. So R. Meir. R. Judah says: All are judged on New Year and the separate dooms are sealed each in its time — on Passover in respect of produce, on Pentecost in respect of fruit, on Tabernacles judgment is passed in respect of rain, and man is judged on New Year and his doom is sealed on the Day of Atonement. R. Jose says: Man is judged every day, as it says, And thou dost visit him every morning.¹³ R. Nathan says: Man is judged every moment, as it says, Thou dost try him every moment'.¹⁴ Should you maintain that it is after all in accordance with Rabbi Judah, [the seasons] mentioned in our Mishnah referring to the final doom, we may retort that if so there is a difficulty with the case of man!¹⁵ — Raba replied: This Tanna [of our Mishnah] follows the Tanna of the school of R. Ishmael, since it has been taught in the school of R. Ishmael: 'At four seasons judgment is passed on the world, on Passover in respect of produce, on Pentecost in respect of fruit, on Tabernacles judgment is passed in respect of rain, and man is judged on New Year and his doom is sealed on the Day of Atonement'. The statements of the Mishnah must then be taken to refer to the preliminary judgment.

R. Hisda said: What is the reason of R. Jose? — [How can you ask this?] Surely it is as he has stated, [viz., the text], 'And thou dost visit him every morning'! — What we mean is this: What is his reason for not taking the same view as R. Nathan? — 'Trying' merely means scrutinizing. But 'visiting' also merely means scrutinizing? The truth is, said R. Hisda, that R. Jose's reason is to be found in this text: To do the judgement of his servant and the judgement of his people Israel, as every day shall require.¹⁶

R. Hisda further said: If a king and a people present themselves together, the king stands his trial first, as it says, To do the judgement of his servant and the judgement of his people Israel.¹⁶ What is the reason? — If you like, I can say, because it is not proper that a king should remain outside, or if you like I can say, [so that he may be judged] before the [divine] anger waxes hot.¹⁷

R. Joseph said: Whose authority do we follow nowadays in praying [daily] for the sick and for the ailing?¹⁸ — Whose authority? That of R. Jose.¹⁹ Or if you like I can say that it is after all that of the Rabbis,²⁰ but that at the same time we follow the counsel of R. Isaac. For R. Isaac said: Supplication²¹ is good for a man whether before the doom is pronounced or after it is pronounced.²²

It has been taught: R. Judah said in the name of R. Akiba: Why did the Torah enjoin on us to offer an 'Omer on Passover? Because Passover is the season of produce. Therefore the Holy One, blessed be He, said, Bring before Me an 'Omer' on Passover so that your produce in the fields may be blessed.²³ Why did the Torah enjoin on us to bring two loaves on Pentecost? Because Pentecost is the season for fruit of the tree. Therefore the Holy One, blessed be He, said: Bring before Me two loaves on Pentecost so that the fruit of your trees may be blessed.²⁴ Why did the Torah enjoin on us to pour out water on Tabernacles?²⁵ The Holy One, blessed be He, said, Pour out water before Me on Tabernacles, so that your rains this year may be blessed. Also recite before Me on New Year [texts making mention of] kingship, remembrance, and the shofar-kingship, so that you may proclaim Me king over you; remembrance, so that your remembrance may rise favourably before Me; and through what? Through the shofar.²⁶

R. Abbahu said: Why do we blow on a ram's horn? The Holy One, blessed be He, said: Sound before Me a ram's horn so that I may remember on your behalf the binding of Isaac the son of Abraham,²⁷ and account it to you as if you had bound yourselves before Me.

R. Isaac said: Why do we sound the horn on New Year? — [You ask], why do we sound? The All-Merciful has told us to sound!²⁸ — What he means is, why do we sound a teru'ah?²⁹ [You ask] why do we sound a teru'ah? The All-Merciful has proclaimed 'a memorial of teru'ah!³⁰ — What he means is, why do we sound a teki'ah and teru'ah!³⁰ — sitting and then again sound a teki'ah and teru'ah standing? — It is so as to confuse the Accuser.¹

R. Isaac further said: If the shofar is not sounded² at the beginning of the year, evil will befall at the end of it. Why so? Because the Accuser has not been confused.

R. Isaac further said: Every year which is poor³ at its opening becomes rich before it ends, as it says, From the beginning of the year — where the word is spelt meroshith⁴ — 'unto the end'; such a year is destined to have a 'latter end'.⁵

R. Isaac further said: Man is judged only according to his actions up to the time of judgment,⁶ as it says, God hath heard the voice of the lad as he is there.⁷

R. Isaac further said: Three things call a man's iniquities to mind, namely, a shaky wall,⁸ the scrutinizing of prayer,⁹ and calling for [Divine] judgment on one's fellow man. For R. Abin said: He who calls down [Divine] judgment on his neighbour is himself punished first [for his own sins], as it says, And Sarai said unto Abram, My wrong be upon thee,¹⁰ and it is written later, And Abraham came to mourn for Sarah and to weep for her.¹¹

R. Isaac further said: Four things cancel the doom of a man, namely, charity, supplication, change of name and change of conduct. Charity, as it is written, And charity delivereth from death.¹² Supplication, as it is written, Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses.¹³ Change of name, as it is written, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be;¹⁴ and it continues, And I will bless her and moreover I will give thee a son of her. Change of conduct, as it is written, And God saw their works, and it continues, and God repented of the evil which he said he would do unto them and he did it not.¹⁵ Some say that change of place [also avails], as it is written, Now the Lord said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and it proceeds, and I will make of thee a great nation.¹⁶ And the other [— why does he not reckon this]? — In that case it was the merit of the land of Israel which availed him.

R. Isaac further said: It is incumbent on a man to go to pay his respects to his teacher on festivals, as it says, Wherefore wilt thou go to him today? It is neither new moon nor sabbath,¹⁷ from which we infer that on New Moon and Sabbath¹⁸ one ought to go.¹⁹

R. Isaac further said: A man should purify himself for the festival, as it says, and their carcasses ye shall not touch.²⁰ It has been taught to the same effect: 'And their carcasses ye shall not touch'. I might think that [ordinary] Israelites are cautioned not to touch carcasses. Therefore it says, Say unto the priests the sons of Aaron;²¹ [which shows that] the sons of Aaron are cautioned but ordinary Israelites are not cautioned. May we not then argue a fortiori: Seeing that in the case of a serious uncleanness,²² while the priests are cautioned Israelites are not cautioned, how much less [are they likely to be cautioned] in the case of a light uncleanness!²³ What then am I to make of the words, 'and their carcasses ye shall not touch'? — On the festival.

R. Kruspedai said in the name of R. Johanan: Three books are opened [in heaven] on New Year, one for the thoroughly wicked,²⁴ one for the thoroughly righteous, and one for the intermediate. The thoroughly righteous are forthwith inscribed definitively in the book of life; the thoroughly wicked are forthwith inscribed definitively in the book of death;²⁵ the doom of the intermediate is suspended from New Year till the Day of Atonement; if they deserve well, they are inscribed in the book of life; if they do not deserve well, they are inscribed in the book of death. Said R. Abin, What text tells us this? — Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.²⁶ ‘Let them be blotted out from the book — this refers to the book of the wicked. ‘Of life — this is the book of the righteous. ‘And not be written with the righteous’ — this is the book of the intermediate. R. Nahman b. Isaac derives it from here: And if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book which thou hast written,²⁷ ‘Blot me, I pray thee’ — this is the book of the wicked. ‘Out of thy book’ — this is the book of the righteous. ‘Which thou has written’ — this is the book of the intermediate.

It has been taught: Beth Shammai say, There will be three groups at the Day of Judgment²⁸ — one of thoroughly righteous, one of thoroughly wicked, and one of intermediate. The thoroughly righteous will forthwith be inscribed definitively as entitled to everlasting life; the thoroughly wicked will forthwith be inscribed definitively as doomed to Gehinnom, as it says. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to reproaches and everlasting abhorrence.²⁹ The intermediate will go down to Gehinnom

[The Shofar on New Year is blown twice: once at the close of the morning prayer and the reading of the Law when the congregation is seated, and again during the Musaf prayers while the people stand. According to J.R.H. IV, 8 the Shofar was originally blown only at the morning service, whence it was transferred to a later hour in the Musaf because their enemies on one occasion took the Shofar blasts early in the morning as a call to arms, whereupon they attacked the Jews. The custom of blowing the Shofar at Musaf service was retained even after the rite had been restored to the morning service].

and squeal¹ and rise again, as it says, And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried. They shall call on my name and I will answer them.² Of them, too, Hannah said, The Lord killeth and maketh alive, he bringeth down to the grave and bringeth up.³ Beth Hillel, however, say: He that abounds in grace inclines [the scales] towards grace,⁴ and of them David said, I love that the Lord should hear my voice and my supplication,⁵ and on their behalf David composed the whole of the passage, I was brought low and he saved me.⁶

Wrongdoers of Israel who sin with their body⁷ and wrongdoers of the Gentiles who sin with their body go down to Gehinnom and are punished there for twelve months. After twelve months their body is consumed and their soul is burnt and the wind scatters them under the soles of the feet of the righteous as it says, And ye shall tread down the wicked, and they shall be as ashes under the soles of your feet.⁸ But as for the minim⁹ and the informers and the scoffers,¹⁰ who rejected the Torah and denied the resurrection of the dead, and those who abandoned the ways of the community,¹¹ and those who 'spread their terror in the land of the living',¹² and who sinned and made the masses sin, like Jeroboam the son of Nebat and his fellows — these will go down to Gehinnom and be punished there for all generations, as it says, And they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have rebelled against me¹³ etc. Gehinnom will be consumed but they will not be consumed, as it says, and their form shall wear away the nether world.¹⁴ Why all this? Because they laid hands on the habitation [zebul], as it says, that there be no habitation [zebul] for Him,¹⁵ and zebul signifies the Temple, as it says, I have surely built thee a house of habitation [zebul].¹⁶ Of them Hannah said, They that strive with the Lord shall be broken to pieces.¹⁷ R. Isaac b. Abin said: And their faces shall be black like the sides of a pot. Raba added: Among them are the most handsome of the inhabitants of Mahuza, and they shall be called 'sons of Gehinnom'.¹⁸

The Master said [above]: 'Beth Hillel say, He that abounds in grace inclines [the scales] towards grace'. [How can this be], seeing that it is written, And I shall bring the third part through the fire?¹⁹ That refers to wrongdoers of Israel who sin with their body. Wrongdoers of Israel who sin with their body! But you said that there is no remedy for them?²⁰ — There is no remedy for them when their iniquities are more numerous [than their good deeds]. We now speak of those whose iniquities and good deeds are evenly balanced, but whose iniquities include that which is committed by sinners of Israel with their body. In that case they cannot escape the doom of 'I shall bring the third through the fire', but otherwise, [in regard to them], 'He that is abundant in grace inclines towards grace', and of them David said, I love that the Lord should hear. [On this verse] Raba discoursed as follows: What is meant by the words, 'I love that the Lord should hear'? The Community of Israel exclaimed before the Holy One, blessed be He: Sovereign of the Universe, when am I beloved in thy sight? At the time when thou hearest the voice of my supplications. 'I was brought low [dalothi] and he saved me': although I am poor (dallah) in the performance of religious duties, yet it is fitting to save me.

What is meant by 'wrongdoers of Israel who sin with their body'? — Rab said: This refers to the cranium which does not put on the phylactery.²¹ Who are 'the wrongdoers of the Gentiles who sin with their body'? — Rab said: This refers to [sexual] sin. 'Who have spread their terror in the land of the living': [who are these]? — R. Hisda said: This is a communal leader²² who makes himself unduly feared by the community for purposes other than religious.²³ Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Any communal leader who makes himself unduly feared by the community for purposes other than religious will never have a scholar for a son, as it says, Therefore if men fear him, he shall not see [among his sons] any wise of heart.²⁴

'Beth Hillel say: He that abounds in grace inclines [the scales] to grace'. How does He do? — R. Eliezer²⁵ says: He presses down [the scale of merit], as it says, He will again have compassion on us, he will press down our iniquities.²⁶ R. Jose b. Hanina says: [He does so] by raising [the scale of iniquities], as it says, Raising²⁷ iniquity and passing by transgression.²⁸ In the school of R. Ishmael they taught: He puts aside every first iniquity;²⁹ and herein lies the attribute [of grace]. Raba said: The iniquity itself is not obliterated, and if there is an excess of iniquities³⁰ [God] reckons it with the others.³¹

Raba said: He who forgoes his right [to exact punishment]³² is forgiven all his iniquities, as it says, Forgiving iniquity and passing by transgression. Who is forgiven iniquity? One who passes by transgression [against himself]. R. Huna the son of R. Joshua was once ill. R. Papa went to inquire about him. He saw that he was very ill³³ and said to those present, Make ready provisions for his [everlasting] journey.³⁴ Eventually, however, he [R. Huna] recovered, and R. Papa felt ashamed to see him. He said to him, What did you see [in your illness]? He replied, It was indeed as you thought, but the Holy One, blessed be He, said to them [the angels]: Because he does not insist upon his rights, do not be particular with him, as it says, Forgiving iniquity and passing by transgression. Who is forgiven iniquity? He who passes by transgression. [The verse continues], 'to the remnant of his heritage'. R. Aha son of R. Hanina said: We have here a fat tail with a thorn in it.³⁵ 'for the remnant of his inheritance', but not for all his inheritance.

Abin said, And their faces (that is, of the intermediate class) shall (on rising from Gehinnom) be black like the sides of the pot. Raba added, And yet (despite this disfigurement) they shall be more beautiful than the most handsome men of Mahuza who shall be called the sons of Gehinnom'. V. D.S. a.l.].

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 17b

[What it means is], for him who makes himself a mere remnant.¹

R. Huna contrasted [two parts of the same verse]. It is written, The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and then it is written, and gracious in all his works.² [How is this]?³ — At first righteous and at the end gracious.⁴ R. Eleazar [similarly] contrasted two texts. It is written, Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy, and then it is written, For thou renderest to every man according to his work.⁵ [How is this]? — At first, 'Thou renderest to every man according to his work', but at the end, 'unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy'.

Ilfi (or, as some report, Ilfa) [similarly] contrasted two texts: It is written, abundant in goodness, and then it is written, and in truth.⁶ [How is this]? — At first, 'truth', and at the end 'abundant in goodness'.

And 'the Lord passed by before him and proclaimed [etc.]⁷ R. Johanan said: Were it not written in the text, it would be impossible for us to say such a thing; this verse teaches us that the Holy One, blessed be He, drew his robe round Him like the reader⁸ of a congregation and showed Moses the order of prayer. He said to him: Whenever Israel sin, let them carry out this service before Me,⁹ and I will forgive them.

'The Lord, the Lord': I am the Eternal¹⁰ before a man sins and the same¹⁰ after a man sins and repents. 'A God merciful and gracious:' Rab Judah said: A covenant has been made with the thirteen attributes¹¹ that they will not be turned away empty-handed,¹² as it says, Behold I make a covenant.¹³

R. Johanan said: Great is the power of repentance that it rescinds¹⁴ a man's final sentence, as it says, Make the heart of this people fat and make their ears heavy and shut their eyes, lest they seeing with their eyes and hearing with their ears and understanding with their heart return and be healed.¹⁵ Said R. Papa to Abaye: Perhaps this was before the final sentence? — He replied: It is written, 'and he be healed'. What is that which requires healing? You must say, the final sentence.

An objection [against this view] was raised [from the following]: 'If one repents in the interval,¹⁶ he is forgiven; if he does not repent in the interval, should he even offer [subsequently] all the rams of Nebayoth,¹⁷ he is not forgiven'! — There is no contradiction: the latter statement refers to an individual, the former to a community.

A further objection was raised [from the following]: ‘The eyes of the Lord thy God are upon it [the land of Israel],¹⁸ sometimes for good, sometimes for evil. How sometimes for good? Suppose Israel were [in the class of] the thoroughly wicked at New Year,¹⁹ and scanty rains were decreed for them, and afterwards they repented. [For God] to increase the supply of rain is impossible, because the decree has been issued. The Holy One, blessed be He, therefore sends down the rain in the proper season on the land that requires it,²⁰ all according to the district. How sometimes for evil? Suppose Israel were [in the class of] the thoroughly virtuous on New Year, and abundant rains were decreed for them, but afterwards they backslided. To diminish the rains is impossible, because the decree has been issued. The Holy One, blessed be He, therefore sends them down not in their proper season and on land that does not require them’.²¹ Now, [if the decree can be rescinded], for good at any rate, let the decree be rescinded and let the rains be increased? — There is a special reason there, namely, that this²² is sufficient.

Come and hear [a further objection]: ‘They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters, they saw the works of the Lord . . . For he commanded and raised the stormy wind which lifted up the waves thereof . . . they reeled to and fro and staggered like a drunken man . . . They cried unto the Lord in their trouble . . . let them give thanks unto the Lord for his mercy²³ etc. [The Psalmist] inserted here signs²⁴ having the same force as the ‘buts’ and ‘onlys’ of the Torah,²⁵ to indicate that if they cried before the final sentence they were answered, but if they cried after the final sentence they were not ‘answered’! — These also are on the same footing as individuals.

Come and hear [again]: ‘Bluria²⁶ the proselyte put this question to Rabban Gamaliel: It is written in your Law, [she said], who lifteth not up the countenance,²⁷ and it is also written, The Lord shall lift up his countenance upon thee.²⁸ R. Jose the priest joined the conversation and said to her: I will give you a parable which will illustrate the matter.²⁹ A man lent his neighbour a maneh and fixed a time for payment in the presence of the king, while the other swore to pay him by the life of the king. When the time arrived he did not pay him, and he went to excuse himself to the king. The king, however, said to him: The wrong done to me I excuse you, but go and obtain forgiveness from your neighbour. So here: one text speaks of offences committed by a man against God, the other of offences committed by a man against his fellow man. [This explanation was generally accepted] until R. Akiba came and taught

: One text speaks of God's attitude before the final sentence, the other of his attitude after the final sentence!' — Here too the case is that of an individual.

On the question of the final sentence of an individual there is a difference between Tannaim, as it has been taught: R. Meir used to say: Two men take to their bed suffering equally from the same disease, or two men are before a criminal court to be judged¹ for the same offence; yet one gets up² and the other does not get up, one escapes death and the other does not escape death. Why does one get up and the other not? Why does one escape death and the other not? Because one prayed and was answered, and the other prayed and was not answered. Why was one answered and the other not? One prayed with his whole heart³ and was therefore answered, the other did not pray with his whole heart and was not answered. R. Eleazar, however, said: The one man was praying before his final sentence had been pronounced [in heaven], the other after his final sentence had been pronounced.

R. Isaac said: Supplication⁴ is good for a man whether before the final sentence has been pronounced or after.

But can the final sentence on a community be rescinded? Have we not one text which says, Wash thy heart from wickedness,⁵ and another which says, For though thou wash thee with nitre and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me,⁶ and does not the one text apply before the final sentence is pronounced and the other after? — No; both apply after the final sentence has been pronounced, yet there is no contradiction; in the one case the final sentence has been accompanied by an oath, in the other it has not been accompanied by an oath. This accords with the dictum of R. Samuel b. Ammi. For R. Samuel b. Ammi (or, as some say R. Samuel b. Nahmani) said in the name of R. Jonathan: How do we know that a final sentence accompanied by an oath is never rescinded? Because it says, Therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli that the iniquity of Eli's house shall not be expiated with sacrifice nor offering.⁷ Raba said: With sacrifice and offering it cannot be expiated, but it can be expiated with Torah. Abaye said: With sacrifice and offering it cannot be expiated, but it can be expiated with Torah and charitable deeds. Rabbah⁸ and Abaye were of the house of Eli. Rabbah who devoted himself to the Torah lived forty years, Abaye who devoted himself both to the Torah and to charitable deeds lived sixty years.⁹

The Rabbis taught: There was a family in Jerusalem the members of which used to die at the age of eighteen. They came and told Rabban Johanan b. Zaccai. He said to them, Perhaps you are of the family of Eli, to whom it was said, and all the increase of thy house shall die young men.¹⁰ Go and study the Torah and you may live. They went and studied the Torah and lived, and they used to call that family the family of Rabban Johanan after his name.

R. Samuel b. Inia said in the name of Rab: Whence do we know that the final sentence on a community is never sealed? — Never sealed, [you say]? Is it not written, Thine iniquity is marked before me?¹¹ What he should say is, [How do we know that] although it is sealed it can yet be rescinded? Because it says, as the Lord our God is whenever we call upon him.¹² But it is written, Seek ye the Lord while he may be found?¹³ — This verse speaks of an individual, the other of community. When can an individual [find God]? — Rabbah b. Abbuha said: These are the ten days between New Year and the Day of Atonement.

And it came to pass after the ten days that the Lord smote Nabal.¹⁴ How come these ten days here? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: They correspond to the ten dishes which Nabal gave to the servants of David.¹⁵ R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: These are the ten days between New Year and the Day of Atonement.

ON NEW YEAR ALL MANKIND PASS BEFORE HIM LIKE CHILDREN OF MARON.¹⁶ What is the meaning of the expression 'like children of Maron'? — In Babylon it was translated, 'like a flock of sheep'.¹⁷ Resh Lakish said: As [in] the ascent of Beth Maron.¹⁸

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: Like the troops of the house of David.¹⁹ Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in the name of R. Johanan: [All the same] they are all viewed with a simple glance. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We also have learnt the same idea: He that fashioneth the hearts of them all, that considereth all their doings.²⁰ What does this mean? Shall I say that it means this, that [God] has created all creatures and unites all their hearts together? But we see that this is not so! No; what it means is this: 'The Creator sees²¹ their hearts together and considereth all their doings'.

seeing that R. Hanah b. Bizna has said in the name of R. Simeon the Saint: 'What is the meaning of the verse, Thus had said the Lord of Hosts: The fast of the fourth month and the fast of the fifth and the fast of the seventh and the fast of the tenth shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness?'¹ The prophet calls these days both days of fasting and days of joy, signifying that when there is peace they shall be for joy and gladness, but if there is not peace they shall be fast days'! — R. Papa replied: What it means is this: When there is peace they shall be for joy and gladness; if there is persecution,² they shall be fast days; if there is no persecution but yet not peace, then those who desire may fast and those who desire need not fast.³ If that is the case, the ninth of Ab also [should be optional]? — R. Papa replied: The ninth of Ab is in a different category, because several misfortunes happened on it, as a Master has said: On the ninth of Ab the Temple was destroyed both the first time and the second time, and Bethar was captured⁴ and the city [Jerusalem] was ploughed.⁵

It has been taught: R. Simeon said: There are four expositions among those given by R. Akiba with which I do not agree. [He said]:⁶ 'The fast of the fourth month' — this is the ninth of Tammuz, on which a breach was made in the walls of the city,⁷ as it says, On the fourth month on the ninth of the month the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land, and a breach was made in the city.⁸ Why is it called fourth? As being fourth in the order of months. 'The fast of the fifth month': this is the ninth of Ab, on which the House of our God was burnt. Why is it called fifth? as being fifth in the order of months. 'The fast of the seventh month': this is the third of Tishri on which Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was killed.⁹ Who killed him? Ishmael the son of Nethaniah killed him; and [the fact that a fast was instituted on this day] shows that the death of the righteous is put on a level with the burning of the House of our God. Why is it called the seventh? As being the seventh in the order of months. 'The fast of the tenth month': this is the tenth of Tebeth on which the king of Babylon invested Jerusalem, as it says, And the word of the Lord came unto me in the ninth year in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, saying, Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this selfsame day; this selfsame day the king of Babylon hath invested Jerusalem.¹⁰ Why is it called the tenth? As being the tenth in the order of months. [It might be asked], should not this have been mentioned first?¹¹ Why then was it mentioned in this place [last]? So as to arrange the months in their proper order. I, however, [continued R. Simeon], do not explain thus. What I say is that ‘the fast of the tenth month, is the fifth of Tebeth on which news came to the Captivity that the city had been smitten, as it says, And it came to pass in the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, that one who had escaped out of Jerusalem came to me saying, The city is smitten,¹² and they put the day of the report on the same footing as the day of burning. My view is more probable than his, because I make the first [mentioned by the prophet] first [chronologically] and the last last,¹³ whereas he makes the first last and the last first, he, however, following [only] the order of months I [also follow] the order of calamities.

It has been stated [elsewhere]: Rab and R. Hanina hold that the Megillath Ta'anith¹⁴ has been annulled,¹⁵ whereas R. Johanan and Resh Lakish hold that the Megillath Ta'anith, has not been annulled. Rab and R. Hanina hold that the Megillath Ta'anith has been annulled, interpreting the words of the prophet thus: ‘When there is peace, these days¹⁶ shall be for joy and gladness, but when there is no peace, they shall be fasts’, and placing the days mentioned in the Megillath Ta'anith, on the same footing. R. Johanan and Resh Lakish hold that the Megillath Ta'anith has not been annulled, maintaining that it was those others [mentioned by the prophet] that the All-Merciful made dependent on the existence of the Temple,¹⁷ but these [mentioned in Megillath Ta'anith] remain unaffected.

R. Kahana cited the following in objection: ‘On one occasion a fast was decreed in Lydda on Hanukah¹⁸ and R. Eliezer went down there and bathed and R. Joshua had his hair cut,¹⁹ and they said to the inhabitants, Go and fast in atonement for having fasted [on this day]!’²⁰ — R. Joseph said: Hanukah is different, because there is a religious ceremony [attached to it]²¹ Said Abaye to him: Let it be abolished and its ceremony with it?²² — R. Joseph thereupon [corrected himself and] said: Hanukah is different because it commemorates publicly a miracle.²³

R. Aha b. Huna raised an objection [from the following]: ‘On the third of Tishri the mention [of God] in bonds was abolished:²⁴ for the Grecian²⁵ Government had forbidden the mention of God's name²⁶ by the Israelites, and when the Government of the Hasmoneans became strong and defeated them, they ordained that they should mention the name of God even on bonds, and they used to write thus: ‘In the year So-and-so of Johanan, High Priest to the Most High God’, and when the Sages heard of it they said, ‘To-morrow this man will pay his debt and the bond will be thrown²⁷ on a dunghill’, and they stopped them, and they made that day a feast day.²⁸ Now if you maintain that the Megillath Ta'anith has been annulled, [is it possible that] while the former [prohibitions of fasting] have been annulled, new ones should be added? — With what are we here dealing? With the period when the Temple was still standing

. But [if that is so], cannot the prohibition [of the third of Tishri] be derived from the fact that it was the day on which Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was killed?¹ — Rab replied: Its [insertion in the Megillath Ta'anith] was required only to prohibit the day before it also.² But the prohibition of the day before it can also be derived from the fact that it is the day after New Moon?² — New Moon is ordained by the Written Law, and the ordinances of the Written Law do not require reinforcement, as it has been taught: 'These days which are mentioned in Megillath Ta'anith are forbidden [for fasting on] along with both the day before them and the day after them. As to Sabbaths and New Moons, they themselves are forbidden, but the days before and after them are permitted. What is the difference between one set and the other? The one set are ordained by the Torah,³ and the words of the Torah require no reinforcement, whereas the other are laid down by the Scribes, and the words of the Scribes require reinforcement'.⁴ But cannot the prohibition [of the second of Tishri] be derived from the fact that it is the day before the day on which Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was killed?⁵ — R. Ashi replied: The fast of Gedaliah the son of Ahikam is laid down in the later Scriptures,⁶ and the words of the later Scriptures are on the same footing as those of the Torah.

R. Tobi b. Mattenah raised the following objection [against the statement that Megillath Ta'anith has been annulled]: "On the twenty-eighth thereof [of Adar] came glad tidings to the Jews that they should not abandon the practice of the Law". For the Government [of Rome] had issued a decree that they should not study the Torah and that they should not circumcise their sons and that they should profane the Sabbath. What did Judah b. Shammu'a and his colleagues do? They went and consulted a certain matron whom all the Roman notables used to visit.⁷ She said to them: "Go and make proclamation [of your sorrows] at night time". They went and proclaimed at night, crying, "Alas, in heaven's name, are we not your brothers, are we not the sons of one father and are we not the sons of one mother? Why are we different from every nation and tongue that you issue such harsh decrees against us?" The decrees were thereupon annulled, and that day was declared a feast day'.⁸ Now if you maintain that the Megillath Ta'anith⁹ was annulled, [is it possible that] after the earlier prohibitions had been annulled they should add new ones? And should you reply that this also was in the period when the Temple was still standing, [this cannot be], because Judah b. Shammu'a was the disciple of R. Meir, and R. Meir was after the destruction of the Temple. We know [that R. Judah was R. Meir's disciple] because it has been taught: 'If holes were made in a vessel of glass and filled up with lead, R. Simeon b. Gamaliel reports that R. Judah b. Shammu'a in the name of R. Meir declares it unclean,¹⁰ whereas the Sages declare it clean'! — There is a difference of opinion between Tannaim [as to whether the Megillath Ta'anith, has been annulled], as it has been taught: 'These days which are mentioned in the Megillath Ta'anith are prohibited [to be kept as fast days] whether in the period when the Temple is standing or in the period when the Temple is not standing. So R. Meir. R. Jose says: In the period when the Temple is standing they are prohibited, because they [Israel] have cause for rejoicing; in the period when the Temple is not standing they are permitted, because they have cause for mourning'. The law is that these prohibitions are annulled and the law is that they are not annulled. There is a contradiction, is there not, between these two laws? — There is no contradiction: the one¹ relates to Hanukah and Purim, the other to the other days.

OF ELUL ON ACCOUNT OF NEW YEAR, OF TISHRI FOR THE ADJUSTMENT OF THE FESTIVALS. Once the messengers have gone forth to report [the new moon of] Elul, why should they be required to do so for Tishri? Should you reply that [the reason is because] perhaps Elul has been prolonged,² [this cannot be], because R. Hinena b. Kahana has said in the name of Rabbi: 'From the days of Ezra onwards we have found no instance of Elul being prolonged'! — [Exactly so]: 'We find no instance', because there was no reason [to prolong it]; where, however, there is a special reason,³ we do prolong it. But in that case New Year is interfered with?⁴ — It is better that New Year should be interfered with than that all the festivals should be interfered with. There is also an indication [that this view is correct in the language of the Mishnah], which states, OF TISHRI FOR THE ADJUSTMENT OF THE FESTIVALS. This is clear proof.

OF KISLEV ON ACCOUNT OF HANUKAH AND OF ADAR ON ACCOUNT OF PURIM. [The Mishnah], however, does not say, 'When the year is prolonged,⁵ messengers go forth to report [the new moon of] the second Adar also on account of Purim'. [This shows that] our Mishnah does not agree with Rabbi, since it has been taught: 'Rabbi says that if the year has been prolonged, messengers go forth to report also regarding the second Adar on account of Purim'. Shall we say that the point on which they join issue is this, that one authority holds that all the ceremonies observed in the second Adar⁶ are observed also in the first,⁷ while the other holds that the ceremonies observed in the second are not observed in the first?⁸ — No. Both hold that the ceremonies observed in the second are not observed in the first, and here they differ on the question of the prolongation of the year,⁹ as it has been taught: 'How long is the period of the prolongation of the year? Thirty days. Simeon b. Gamaliel, however, says a month'.¹⁰ But why should only [the one who says] thirty days [require no messengers to be sent]? Because, you say, people in this case know when the month ends?¹¹ If the period is a month, they also know! — R. Papa said: The one who said 'a month' holds that [the Beth din may prolong the year] either by thirty days or by a month at their option.¹²

R. Joshua b. Levi testified on behalf of the holy community of Jerusalem concerning the two Adars, that they are sanctified on the day of their prolongation.¹³ This is equivalent to saying that we make them defective but we do not make them full, and excludes the statement made in a discourse by R. Nahman b. Hisda; [for R. Nahman b. Hisda stated in a discourse]: 'R. Simai testified in the name of Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi concerning the two Adars that if they [the Beth din] desired they could make both of them full, and if they desired they could make both of them, defective, and if they desired they could make one full and the other defective; and such was their custom in the Diaspora. In the name of our teacher,¹⁴ however, they said: One is always to be full and the next defective, unless you have been informed that New Moon has been fixed at its proper time'.¹⁵

They sent [from Palestine] to Mar 'Ukba to say: The Adar which precedes Nisan is always defective. R. Nahman raised an objection [from the following]: 'For the fixing of two New Moons the Sabbath may be profaned,¹⁶ for those of Nisan and of Tishri'. Now if you say that [the Adar before Nisan] is sometimes full and sometimes defective, I can understand how occasions arise for profaning the Sabbath

(1) That fasting is prohibited.

(2) I.e., made to last thirty days, and therefore the Diaspora may make a mistake about the Day of Atonement and Tabernacles.

(3) The 'special reason' is discussed infra, 20a.

(4) Lit., 'spoilt'. The Diaspora will keep it one day too soon.

(5) I.e., made to consist of thirteen months, by the insertion of a second Adar.

(6) Including in particular Purim.

(7) And therefore the observance of Purim in the first Adar is really sufficient for religious purposes, and so there is no need to send out messengers to fix the date of the second.

(8) And therefore it is important that Purim in the second Adar should be kept on the right day, v. Meg. 6b.

(9) I.e., the [days of the month of the first Adar which is inserted to prolong the year (Rashi)].

(10) I.e., twenty-nine days. This is apparently the opinion of Rabbi also.

(11) When the first Adar ends and the second Adar begins.

(12) And therefore it is necessary to keep the public informed. (9) [Regarded by some as a survival of an Essene community, v. J.E V. p. 226].

(13) The thirtieth day is known as the day of prolongation (יום עיבור) as it is the day which is added to make the preceding month full (v. supra p. 21, n. 7). In the case of the two Adars the thirtieth day of each is sanctified as the New Moon of the next month.

(14) Rab.

(15) I.e., that the Beth din in Jerusalem fixed the New Moon of Adar II on the thirtieth day of the first Adar, the thirtieth day always being regarded as the 'proper time' of New Moon.

(16) By the watchers for the new moon, who are allowed to exceed the two thousand cubit limit in order to report their observation to the Beth din in Jerusalem. V. infra 23b.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 20a

. But if it is always defective, why should they profane it?¹ — Because it is a religious duty to sanctify [the New Moon] on the strength of actual observation.² According to another version, R. Nahman said: We also have learnt: ‘For the fixing of two New Moons the Sabbath may be profaned, for those of Nisan and of Tishri’. Now if you say that the Adar which precedes Nisan is always defective, there is no difficulty; the reason why Sabbath may be profaned is because it is a religious duty to sanctify [the New Moon] on the strength of actual observation. But if you say that it is sometimes full and sometimes defective, why should [the Sabbath] be profaned? Let us prolong [the month] today and sanctify [the New Moon] to-morrow?³ — If the thirtieth day happens to be on Sabbath, that is actually what we do. Here, however, we are dealing with the case where the thirty-first day happens to fall on Sabbath [and we allow the Sabbath to be profaned because] it is a religious duty to sanctify on the strength of actual observation.⁴

R. Kahana raised [against the instruction sent to Mar ‘Ukba] the following objection: ‘When the Temple stood, Sabbath was profaned for the fixing of all the months, for the sake of the adjustment of the sacrifice’.⁵ Now since the reason [for allowing the profanation of the Sabbath] was not in the case of all the other [months] because it is a religious duty to sanctify on the strength of actual observation, neither is the reason in the case of Nisan and Tishri because it is a religious duty to sanctify on the strength of actual observation.⁶ Now if you say that the Adar preceding Nisan is sometimes full and sometimes defective, there is no difficulty: for the reason mentioned we allow the profanation of the Sabbath. But if you say that it is always defective, why should we allow the profanation?⁷ — This is unanswerable.⁸

When ‘Ulla came [from Palestine to Babylon], he said: They have prolonged Elul.⁹ Said ‘Ulla thereupon: Do our Babylonian colleagues recognize what a boon we are conferring on them? What was the boon? — ‘Ulla said: On account of the vegetables;¹⁰

R. Aha b. Hanina said: On account of the [unburied] dead.¹¹ What difference does it make [in practice which view we adopt here]? — There is a difference, in the case of a Day of Atonement coming just after Sabbath. According to him who says that the reason is because of the [unburied] dead, we prolong Elul [so as to prevent this], but according to him who says that it is because of vegetables, [we do not do so, because] when are the vegetables required? For the evening [after the Day of Atonement]; and in the evening we can get fresh ones. But even if we accept the view that the reason is because of vegetables, we should still prolong Elul because of the unburied dead? — We must therefore say that the practical difference is in the case of a festival which comes just before or just after Sabbath. In such a case, according to him who says the reason is because of vegetables,¹² we prolong Elul [to prevent this], but according to him who says it is because of the [unburied] dead, [we do not do so], because they can be attended to by heathens. But even if we accept the view that it is because of the [unburied] dead, let us still prolong Elul on account of the vegetables? — Vegetables can be [freshened by being put] in hot water. If that is the case, why is it a boon only for us [in Babylon]? Why not also for them [in Palestine] — We suffer from oppressive heat, they do not suffer from oppressive heat.¹³

Is all this correct,¹⁴ seeing that Rabbah b. Samuel has learnt: I might think that just as the year is prolonged in case of emergency,¹⁵ so the month may be prolonged to meet an emergency; therefore it says, This month is for you the head of months,¹⁶ [which implies], See [the moon] like this and then sanctify!¹⁷ — Raba replied: There is no contradiction: in the once case we speak of prolonging the month, in the other of sanctifying it,¹⁸ and what [the above teaching] meant is this: I might say that just as the year is prolonged to meet an emergency, so the month may be sanctified to meet an emergency, therefore it says, ‘This month is for you’; See [the moon] like this, and then sanctify. This is illustrated by the dictum of R. Joshua b. Levi: ‘Witnesses¹⁹ can be intimidated [to withhold the report of] the new moon which has appeared in its due time²⁰ in order that the month may be prolonged,²¹ but they may not be intimidated into reporting the new moon which has not appeared in its proper time in order that a New Moon may be sanctified [on the thirtieth]'. Is this so? Did not R. Judah the Prince²² send to R. Ammi a message saying: Know that when R. Johanan was alive he used to teach us that witnesses may be intimidated into reporting [on the thirtieth day] the new moon which has not appeared in its due time, in order that the New Moon may be sanctified, and even though they have not seen it they may say, We have seen it? — Abaye said: There is no contradiction: the one rule²³ holds good for Nisan and Tishri, the other for the other months of the year.²⁴ Raba said: This teaching which Rabbah b. Samuel learnt follows the 'Others', as it has been taught: 'Others say that between one Pentecost and another and between one New Year and 'another there are always four days [of the week] difference, or, if it was a leap year, five'.²⁵ R. Dimi from Nehardea reports the teaching in the reverse form: 'Witnesses can be intimidated to report [on the thirtieth day] the appearance of the moon which has not appeared in its proper time, in order that the month may be sanctified, but they may not be intimidated to withhold the report of the new moon which has been seen at its proper time in order that the month may be prolonged. What is the reason?

- (1) Since the New Moon can be fixed without actual observation.
 - (2) Even though the observation is not necessary for the purpose.
 - (3) I.e., in all such cases we can make Adar thirty days, and if the watchers have seen the new moon on Sabbath, they need not report till the next day.
 - (4) Hence we do not make New Moon on the thirtieth day, the new moon not yet having been observed, and it is not permitted to make it on the thirty-second.
 - (5) I.e., so that the sacrifice for New Moon should be offered at the proper time.
 - (6) But, as in the case of all the others, to secure that the New Moon offering should be brought on the proper day.
 - (7) Seeing that the observation makes no difference.
 - (8) Lit., 'this is a confutation'.
 - (9) So as to prevent Sabbath and a festival falling on successive days.
 - (10) Which would become stale if kept over two days. Vegetables eaten raw are referred to, and of course, there could be no plucking on Sabbath or Festivals.
 - (11) Which would commence to decompose if kept over two days.
 - (12) Which would be required on the second of the holy days.
 - (13) Lit., 'the world is oppressive for us'. In Palestine vegetables or dead bodies could be kept for two days.
 - (14) That a month may be prolonged to prevent inconvenience to the public. Lit. 'It is not so?'
 - (15) E.g., to make Passover fall in the season of new corn., v. Sanh. 11b.
 - (16) Ex. XII, 2.
 - (17) The word 'this' is interpreted to mean that God showed Moses the new moon as a model for all future time
 - (18) V. infra.
 - (19) Men sent out by the Beth din to watch for the appearance of the new moon from points of vantage.
 - (20) I.e., on the thirtieth day.
 - (21) Over the thirtieth day and the next New Moon declared on the thirty-first, which shows that the month can be prolonged in case of need.
 - (22) The grandson of Rabbi.
 - (23) That the month may be sanctified to meet a special need.
 - (24) A 'special need' might arise in the other months of the year if, for instance, eight months in a year (which was the maximum) had already been made 'full' and in the next month the moon did not appear on the thirtieth: v. 'Ar. 8b.
 - (25) V. p. 21, nn. 12, 13, and note. For this to happen the months would have to follow the moon strictly.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 20b

— The latter statement would be seen to be false,¹ the former statement is not seen to be false.²

Samuel said: I am quite able to make a calendar³ for the whole of the Diaspora. Said Abba the father of R. Simlai to Samuel: Does the Master know [the meaning] of this remark which occurs in

[the Baraitha known as] the secret of the Calendar?⁴ ‘If the new moon is born before midday or after midday?’ — He replied: I do not. He then said to him: Since the Master does not know this, there must also be other things which the Master does not know. When R. Zera went up [to Palestine], he sent back word to them [in Babylon]: It is necessary that there should be [on New Moon] a night and a day of the new moon.⁵ This is what Abba the father of R. Simlai meant: ‘We calculate [according to] the new moon's birth. If it is born before midday, then certainly it will have been seen shortly before sunset. If it was not born before midday, certainly it will not have been seen shortly before sunset’. What is the practical value of this remark? — R. Ashi said: To [help us in] confuting the witnesses.⁶

R. Zera said in the name of R. Nahman: The moon is invisible for twenty-four hours [round about new moon]. For us [in Babylon] six of these belong to the old moon and eighteen to the new;⁷ for them [in Palestine] six to the new and eighteen to the old.⁸ What is the practical value of this remark? — R. Ashi said: To confute the witnesses.

The Master has just said: It is necessary that there should be [on New Moon] a night and a day of the new moon. Whence is this rule derived? — R. Johanan said: [From the text]. From evening to evening;⁹ Resh Lakish said: [From the text], Until the twenty-first day of the month in the evening.¹⁰ What practical difference is there between them? — Abaye said: The difference between them is only one of exegesis.¹¹ Raba said: They differ in regard to [the hours up to] midnight.¹²

R. Zera said in the name of R. Nahman: Wherever [an extra day is kept] out of doubt, we make it the succeeding day.¹³ This means to say that we keep [Passover and Tabernacles] on the fifteenth and sixteenth but not on the fourteenth.¹⁴ But should not the fourteenth also be kept, in case both Ab and Elul¹⁵ have been declared short?¹⁶

(1) Because other people might have seen the new moon.

(2) Because it could not be proved that they had not seen it (Rashi). R. Hananel: Provided they had seen a semblance of the new moon].

(3) Heb. עָבַר lit., ‘taking across’: the word used for the prolonging of the year and the month.

(4) This was a Baraitha made up of enigmatic sentences like the one which follows.

(5) I.e., that there should be no appearance of the old moon in this period, viz., after the closing of the twenty-ninth day; otherwise New Moon cannot be proclaimed on the thirtieth.

(6) Because if the conjunction is calculated to have been after midday and they claim to have seen the new moon before nightfall, they are not telling the truth.

(7) Which would imply that in Babylon the new moon is not visible till eighteen hours after its birth (Rashi).

(8) Which would imply that in Palestine the new moon is visible six hours after its birth (Rashi).

(9) Lev. XXIII, 32, in connection with fasting on the Day of Atonement. This shows that the day follows the night in reference to the festivals.

(10) Ex. XII, 18, in connection with eating unleavened bread on Passover. This shows that the festivals end at even.

(11) Lit., ‘the interpretation of exegeses’.

(12) According to R. Johanan, the ‘night’ referred to is on the same footing as the night of the Day of Atonement which commences at nightfall. But according to Resh Lakish, it is on a par with the first night of Passover, which, in relation to the Paschal lamb, was a continuation of the afternoon before. Hence Resh Lakish holds that even if the old moon was seen in the early part of the evening, the next day may still be declared New Moon.

(13) Lit., ‘wherever there is a doubt, we cast it forward’.

(14) I.e., that we reckon fifteen days from the thirtieth day, and also from the thirty-first day of the previous Adar or Elul, out of doubt, but in no case from the twenty-ninth. This dictum would seem to be superfluous, as in no circumstances was New Moon proclaimed on the twenty-ninth day after the previous New Moon.

(15) Rashi reads ‘Shebat’.

(16) And in this case, what we suppose to have been the twenty-ninth day of Adar or of Elul would really have been the first of Nisan or of Tishri.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 21a

— If two [successive] months¹ are declared short, the thing becomes known.

Levi once arrived in Babylon on the eleventh of Tishri.² He said [to the people there]: How good and sweet is the dish of the Babylonians on the great day of the West.³ They said to him, Testify [that this is the tenth day].⁴ He replied: I did not [personally] hear the Beth din [in Jerusalem proclaim] ‘sanctified’.⁵

R. Johanan issued a proclamation: ‘In all those places which can be reached by the messengers sent out in Nisan but not by those sent out in Tishri,⁶ two days should be kept [on Passover],⁷ Nisan being included so that there should be no mistake as to Tishri’.⁸

R. Aibu b. Nagri and R. Hiyya b. Abba once arrived at a certain place which had been reached by the messengers sent out in Nisan but not by those sent out in Tishri, and though the inhabitants kept only one day [of Passover] they did not reprove them. When R. Johanan heard this he was annoyed and said to them: Did I not tell you that in places which have been reached by the messengers sent out in Nisan but not by those sent out in Tishri they should keep two days, Nisan being included so that no mistake should be made in Tishri?

Rabbah was accustomed to fast two days [on the Day of Atonement].⁹ Once he was found to be right.¹⁰ R. Nahman had once fasted the whole of the Day of Atonement, when in the evening a man came and told him, To-morrow is the great day in the West. He said to him, Whence are you? He replied, From Damharia.¹¹ ‘Blood will be his latter end’¹² he ejaculated, applying to himself the verse, Swift were our pursuers.¹³

R. Huna b. Abin sent an instruction to Raba: When you see that the cycle of Tebeth¹⁴ extends to the sixteenth of Nisan,¹⁵ declare that year¹⁶ a leap year and have no scruples,¹⁷ since it is written, Observe the month [hodesh] of Abib,¹⁸ which signifies, See to it that the Abib of the cycle¹⁹ should commence in the earlier half [hodesh]²⁰ of Nisan.

R. Nahman said to those who were going to sea: As you will not know when New Moon is fixed, [I will tell you what to do]. When you see the moon ceases shining with daylight,²¹ clear away leaven [for Passover]. When does it so shine? On the fifteenth [of the month]. But we clear away leaven on the fourteenth? — For them, as they had a clear view,²² the moon commenced to shine into the day from the fourteenth.

(1) Viz., (apparently) Ab and Elul, or Tebeth and Shebat. Rashi: Tebeth and Tammuz are always, according to the principles of fixed calendar, defective, and if Shebat’ which follows Tebeth, Ab and Tammuz were also to be defective, it would have become known to the Diaspora before the advent of the festivals.

(2) I.e., according to the reckoning of the Babylonians who were not aware that the previous month had been prolonged in Palestine by one day. He either came from near the frontier or just before nightfall, before they had broken their fast (v. Tosaf. s.v. וי).

(3) I.e., this is the Day of Atonement in Palestine, and you are eating, or you are ready to break your fast, cf. p. 86, n. 10.

(4) And we will keep this day too.

(5) I.e., that the day was sanctified as New Moon and therefore he could not testify, although he knew from independent sources that this was only ten days before, v. infra 21b. [MS.M.: ‘(proclaim)’, ‘prolonged’ מעובר instead of מקודש].

(6) The messengers sent out from Jerusalem to announce the New Moon of Nisan would be able to travel further by Passover than the messengers sent out in Tishri would be able to travel by Tabernacles, because the latter would lose two days on New Year and the Day of Atonement, when it was forbidden to travel.

- (7) Although the inhabitants would know when the New Moon of Nisan had been proclaimed.
- (8) I.e., if they kept Passover only one day, they might come to keep Tabernacles only one day.
- (9) Being uncertain whether the month of Elul, which normally consisted of twenty-nine days, had not been prolonged by the Beth din in Jerusalem.
- (10) Lit., 'it was found (to be) according to him'.

- (13) Lam. IV, 19.
- (14) V. supra p. 30, n. 5.
- (15) Inclusive. V. Tosaf. s.v.
- (16) In other words, if the vernal equinox is known by calculation to fall after the sixteenth of Nisan a leap year is proclaimed.
- (17) Although this follows the view only of an individual authority, as recorded in Sanh. 13b.
- (18) Deut. XVI, 1.
- (19) I.e., the beginning of the vernal equinox. The day on which the vernal equinox begins is called Abib because on that day the corn begins to ripen by the effects of the sun (Rashi). V. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 60 notes.

- (22) Lit., 'as the world was revealed to them'.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 21b

MISHNAH. FOR THE SAKE OF TWO MONTHS SABBATH MAY BE PROFANED,¹ NAMELY, NISAN AND TISHRI, SINCE IN THEM MESSENGERS GO FORTH TO SYRIA AND IN THEM THE DATES OF THE FESTIVALS ARE FIXED.² WHEN THE TEMPLE WAS STANDING THEY USED TO PROFANE SABBATH FOR ALL THE MONTHS, IN ORDER THAT THE SACRIFICE [OF NEW MOON] MIGHT BE OFFERED ON THE RIGHT DAY.³

GEMARA. [Do messengers go forth] for two months only? The following was cited as conflicting with this: 'Messengers go forth to proclaim six months'!⁴ — Abaye replied: What is meant is this: For all [the other months] the messengers set out while it is still night,⁵ but for Nisan and Tishri they do not set out till they have heard the Beth din proclaim, 'sanctified'.⁶

It has been taught to the same effect: 'For all [the other months] they [the messengers] went forth while it was still night, but for Nisan and Tishri not until they had heard the Beth din proclaim 'sanctified'.

Our Rabbis taught: How do we know [from the Scripture] that Sabbath may be profaned on account of these? Because it says, These are the appointed seasons of the Lord . . . which ye shall proclaim in their appointed season.⁷ I might say then that just as it may be profaned until they [the months] are sanctified, so it may be profaned [further] until they are promulgated?⁸ Not so, since it says, 'which ye shall proclaim:' for their proclamation you may profane the Sabbath, but not for their promulgation.⁹

WHEN THE TEMPLE WAS STANDING THEY USED TO PROFANE SABBATH FOR ALL THE MONTHS, IN ORDER THAT THE SACRIFICE MIGHT BE OFFERED ON THE RIGHT DAY. Our Rabbis taught : Originally the Sabbath could be profaned for all of them. When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Johanan b. Zakkai said to them [the Beth din], Is there then a sacrifice [waiting to be brought]? They therefore ordained that Sabbath should not be profaned save for Nisan and Tishri alone.¹⁰

MISHNAH. WHETHER [THE NEW MOON] HAS BEEN SEEN CLEARLY¹¹ OR HAS NOT

BEEN SEEN CLEARLY, SABBATH MAY BE PROFANED ON ACCOUNT OF IT. R. JOSE SAYS, HOWEVER, THAT IF IT HAS BEEN SEEN CLEARLY SABBATH IS NOT TO BE PROFANED ON ACCOUNT OF IT.¹² IT HAPPENED ONCE THAT MORE THAN FORTY PAIRS OF WITNESSES WERE ON THEIR WAY¹³ [TO JERUSALEM] AND R. AKIBA DETAINED THEM IN LYDDA. R. GAMALIEL THEREUPON SENT TO HIM SAYING: IF YOU PREVENT THE MULTITUDE [FROM COMING TO GIVE EVIDENCE] YOU WILL PROVE TO BE THE CAUSE OF THEIR STUMBLING IN THE TIME TO COME.¹⁴

GEMARA. How do we know that the word 'alil here means 'clear'? — R. Abbahu replied: Because the Scripture says, The words of the Lord are pure words, as silver tried in the clear sight [ba-'alil] of the earth, refined seven times.¹⁵

Rab and Samuel [gave different interpretations of a certain text]. One said: Fifty gates of understanding were created in the world, and all were given to Moses save one, as it says, Yet thou hast made him but little lower than a God,¹⁶ Now, Koheleth sought to find out words of delight.¹⁷ [That is to say,] Koheleth sought to be like Moses, but a bath kol¹⁸ went forth and said to him, It is written uprightly even words of truth,¹⁹ 'There arose not a prophet again in Israel like Moses'.²⁰ The other said: Among the prophets there arose not, but among the kings there did arise. How then do I interpret the words, Koheleth sought to find out words of delight? Koheleth sought to pronounce verdicts from his own insight,²¹ without witnesses and without warning,²² whereupon a bath kol went forth and said, It is written uprightly even words of truth, 'At the mouth of two witnesses' etc.²³

(1) By witnesses who have seen the new moon, in order that they may give information in Jerusalem at the earliest possible moment. V. supra.

(2) It is difficult to see what reason this furnishes for allowing the witnesses to break the Sabbath. Rashi explains that if the witnesses are not allowed to bring the news on Sabbath, the New Moon will not be sanctified till Sunday, and so the messengers instead of setting out as soon as Sabbath is over will not set out till several hours later, and this might make them late in some places in giving notice of the date of Passover. V. Rashi and Tosaf.

(3) Lit., 'for the proper adjustment of the sacrifice'.

(4) I.e., whenever the month is lengthened to thirty days.

(5) On the thirty-first day, since it is already certain that New Moon will be on this day.

(6) Which would be at some hour in the daytime.

(7) Lev. XXIII, 4. Stress is laid on the words 'in their appointed season'.

(8) I. e., to the Diaspora, by the messengers.

(9) I. e., the witnesses may profane, but not the messengers.

(10) On account of their extra sanctity.

(11) Lit., 'in an 'alil'. V. Gemara infra.

(12) There being no necessity, as many people will have seen it.

(13) Lit., 'were passing'.

(14) As people will be reluctant to come to give evidence.

(15) Ps. XII, 7. E.V. 'in a crucible'.

(16) Ps. VIII, 6. E.V. 'than the angels'.

(17) Eccl. XII, 10.

(18) A voice from heaven, V. Glos.

(19) Ibid.

(20) Deut. XXXIV, 10.

(21) Lit., 'that are in the heart'. [Omitted in MS.M.].

(22) The forewarning required by law for the punishment of an offender.

(23) Deut. XIX, 15.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 22a

IT HAPPENED ONCE THAT MORE THEN FORTY PAIRS [OF WITNESSES] WERE ON THEIR WAY [TO JERUSALEM] AND R. AKIBA DETAINED THEM etc. It has been taught: R. Judah said: Far be it from us to think that R. Akiba detained them. It was Shazpar the head of Geder¹ who detained them, and Rabban Gamaliel thereupon sent and they deposed him from his office.²

MISHNAH. IF A FATHER AND A SON HAVE SEEN THE NEW MOON, THEY SHOULD BOTH GO [TO JERUSALEM], NOT THAT THEY CAN ACT AS JOINT WITNESSES³ BUT SO THAT IF ONE OF THEM IS DISQUALIFIED⁴ THE OTHER MAY JOIN WITH SOME OTHER WITNESS. R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, SAYS THAT A FATHER AND SON AND ALL RELATIVES ARE ELIGIBLE TO TESTIFY TO THE APPEARANCE OF THE NEW MOON. R. JOSE SAID: IT HAPPENED ONCE WITH TOBIAH THE PHYSICIAN THAT HE SAW THE NEW MOON IN JERUSALEM ALONG WITH HIS SON AND HIS EMANCIPATED SLAVE, AND THE PRIESTS ACCEPTED HIS EVIDENCE AND THAT OF HIS SON AND DISQUALIFIED HIS SLAVE, BUT WHEN THEY APPEARED BEFORE THE BETH DIN THEY ACCEPTED HIS EVIDENCE AND THAT OF HIS SLAVE AND DISQUALIFIED HIS SON.

GEMARA. R. Levi said: What is the reason of R. Simeon? — Because it is written, and the Lord spoke unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, This month shall be unto you the beginning of months,⁵ which implies, ‘this testimony shall be valid [when given] by you’.⁶ And the Rabbis? — [It implies], this evidence shall be entrusted to you.⁷

R. JOSE SAID, IT HAPPENED ONCE WITH TOBIAH THE PHYSICIAN etc. R. Hanan b. Raba said: The law⁸ is as stated by R. Simeon. Said R. Huna to R. Hanan b. Raba, We have R. Jose and an incident [on the other side], and you say that the law is as stated by R. Simeon! — He replied: Many times I said in the presence of Rab, ‘The law is as stated by R. Simeon’, and he did not correct me.⁹ He then asked him, How did you repeat [the Mishnah]? — He [R. Hanan] replied [I repeated it to him with the names] reversed.¹⁰ He [R. Huna] thereupon said to him, That was the reason why Rab did not correct you. Tabi said in the name of Mari Tabi who had it from Mar ‘Ukba: The law is as stated by R. Simeon.

MISHNAH THE FOLLOWING ARE INELIGIBLE: GAMBLER,¹¹ USURERS, PIGEON-FLYERS,¹² THOSE WHO TRAFFIC IN PRODUCE OF THE SABBATHICAL YEAR,¹³ AND SLAVES. IT IS A GENERAL RULE THAT FOR ANY TESTIMONY FOR WHICH A WOMAN IS DISQUALIFIED THESE ALSO ARE DISQUALIFIED.

GEMARA. I infer from this that any testimony which a woman is qualified to give¹⁴ they are also qualified to give. R. Ashi said: This is equivalent to saying that one who is Rabbinically¹⁵ accounted a robber is qualified to give the same evidence as a woman.

MISHNAH. IF ONE WHO HAS SEEN THE MOON IS NOT ABLE TO GO ON FOOT, HE MAY BE BROUGHT ON AN ASS OR EVEN IN A LITTER [ON SABBATH]. IF THEY [THE WITNESSES] ARE LIKELY TO BE WAYLAID,¹⁶ THEY MAY TAKE CUDGELS [TO DEFEND THEMSELVES].¹⁷ IF THE DISTANCE IS GREAT [TO JERUSALEM], THEY MAY TAKE PROVISIONS WITH THEM, SINCE FOR AS MUCH AS A NIGHT AND A DAY'S JOURNEY¹⁸ THEY WERE ALLOWED TO PROFANE SABBATH AND GO FORTH TO TESTIFY TO THE APPEARANCE OF THE NEW MOON, AS IT SAYS: THESE ARE THE APPOINTED SEASONS OF THE LORD . . . WHICH YE SHALL PROCLAIM IN THEIR APPOINTED SEASON.¹⁹

MISHNAH. IF THAT ONE²⁰ IS NOT KNOWN TO THEM [THE BETH DIN IN JERUSALEM], THEY [THE BETH DIN OF HIS OWN PLACE] SEND ANOTHER WITH HIM TO CERTIFY

HIM [AS RELIABLE]. ORIGINALLY TESTIMONY WITH REGARD TO [THE APPEARANCE OF] THE NEW MOON WAS RECEIVED FROM ANYONE. WHEN, HOWEVER, THE BOETHUSIANS²¹ ADOPTED EVIL COURSES, IT WAS ORDAINED THAT TESTIMONY SHOULD BE RECEIVED ONLY FROM PERSONS KNOWN [TO THE BETH DIN].

GEMARA. What is meant by ANOTHER? [I would naturally suppose], one other person.

- (1) [Gederah in Judah. V. Josh. XV, 36].
- (2) Lit., 'greatness'.
- (3) Near relatives being disqualified from offering evidence together.
- (4) I.e., found by the Beth din to be unreliable.
- (5) Ex. XII, 1, 2.
- (6) Even if you are near relatives.
- (7) The communal leaders, to sanctify the month on the strength of it. Nothing, however, is implied about relatives.
- (8) [MS.M. 'the Halachah' and so in all other cases in this passage].
- (9) Lit., 'he did not say anything to me'.
- (10) I.e., saying that R. Jose declared a father and son to be eligible, and that R. Simeon related the incident.
- (11) Lit., 'those who play with dice'.
- (12) For wagers.
- (13) V. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 142, nn. 3-5.
- (14) E.g., to testify the death of a husband so as to enable the widow to remarry.
- (15) Like those mentioned above, who are not accounted robbers according to the strict letter of the Pentateuch, since although they acquire money wrongfully they do not take anything by force: v. Yeb. 25a
- (16) Lit., 'if there are liars-in-wait for them'.
- (17) Although it was forbidden to carry on Sabbath.
- (18) If the distance was much larger there would be no point in their evidence since in the absence of witnesses the New Moon is on the first day.
- (19) Lev. XXIII, 4. V. supra, p. 89. n. 5.
- (20) V. Gemara, infra.
- (21) The followers of a certain Boethus, who seems to have lived in the second century B.C.E. Like the Sadducees, they rejected the Oral Law and opposed the Rabbis. [MS.M. 'Minim' (v. Glos. s.v. Min.)]

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 22b

But [is the word of] one person to be taken? Has it not been taught, 'On one occasion he came accompanied by the witnesses¹ who were to testify to his bona fides'? — R. Papa replied: What is meant by ANOTHER? Another pair. This view too is borne out by an examination [of the language of the Mishnah]. For should you hold otherwise, [consider the words] IF THAT ONE [OTHO] IS NOT KNOWN TO THEM. Now what is referred to by THAT ONE? Shall I say, a single person? But is [the word of] one person accepted,² seeing that the word judgment³ is used in connection with it? But in fact what is meant by THAT ONE? That pair. So here, what is meant by ANOTHER? Another pair.

But is not the word of one witness taken [in this matter]? Has it not been taught, 'On one occasion R. Nehorai accompanied the witness to testify to his bona fides on Sabbath in Usha'⁴ — I can reply that there was another witness along with R. Nehorai, and the reason why he was not mentioned was out of respect for R. Nehorai.⁵ R. Ashi said: In R. Nehorai's case there was [already] another witness in Usha,⁶ and R. Nehorai went to join his testimony with his. If that is the case, what is the point of the statement?⁷ — You might think that we do not allow the Sabbath to be profaned [by one witness] where there is any doubt [about the other].⁸ Hence we are told [that this is not so].

When 'Ulla came [to Babylon], he announced that they had sanctified the New Moon [on a certain day] in the West [Palestine]. Said R. Kahana: Not only [in such a case] do we take the word of 'Ulla who is a great man, but we take the word of any ordinary man. What is the reason? Because whenever a thing is bound to come to light later on, men do not lie about it. It has been taught to the same effect: If a man comes from the other end of the world and says, The Beth din have sanctified the New Moon, his word is taken.

ORIGINALLY TESTIMONY WITH REGARD TO THE APPEARANCE OF THE NEW MOON WAS RECEIVED FROM ANYONE. Our Rabbis taught: What evil course did the Boethusians⁹ adopt? Once the Boethusians sought to mislead the Sages.¹⁰ They hired two men for four hundred zuzim, one belonging to our party and one to theirs. The one of their party gave his evidence and departed. Our man [came and] they said to him: Tell us how you saw the moon. He replied: I was going up the ascent of Adumim¹¹ and I saw it couched between two rocks, its head like [that of] a calf, its ears like [those of] a hind, and its tail lying between its legs, and as I caught sight of it I got a fright and fell backwards, and if you do not believe me, why, I have two hundred zuzim tied up in my cloak. They said to him: Who told you to say all this?¹² He replied: I heard that the Boethusians were seeking to mislead the Sages, so I said [to myself], I will go myself and tell them, for fear lest untrustworthy men should come and mislead the Sages. They said: You can have the two hundred zuzim as a present,¹³ and the man who hired you shall be laid out on the post.¹⁴ There and then they ordained that testimony should be received only from persons who were known to them.

MISHNAH. ORIGINALLY THEY USED TO LIGHT¹⁵ BEACONS.¹⁶ WHEN THE CUTHEANS [SAMARITANS] ADOPTED EVIL COURSES,¹⁷ THEY MADE A RULE THAT MESSENGERS SHOULD GO FORTH. HOW DID THEY LIGHT THE BEACONS? THEY USED TO BRING LONG POLES OF CEDAR AND REEDS AND OLIVE WOOD AND FLAX FLUFF WHICH THEY TIED TO THE POLES WITH A STRING, AND SOMEONE USED TO GO UP TO THE TOP OF A MOUNTAIN AND SET FIRE TO THEM AND WAVE THEM TO AND FRO AND UP AND DOWN UNTIL HE SAW THE NEXT ONE DOING THE SAME THING ON THE TOP OF THE SECOND MOUNTAIN; AND SO ON THE TOP OF THE THIRD MOUNTAIN. WHENCE DID THEY CARRY THE [CHAIN OF] BEACONS? FROM THE MOUNT OF OLIVES [IN JERUSALEM] TO SARTABA, AND FROM SARTABA TO GROFINA, AND FROM GROFINA TO HAURAN, AND FROM HAURAN TO BETH BALTIN.¹⁸ THE ONE ON BETH BALTIN DID NOT BUDGE FROM THERE BUT WENT ON WAVING TO AND FRO AND UP AND DOWN UNTIL HE SAW THE WHOLE OF THE DIASPORA¹⁹ BEFORE HIM LIKE ONE BONFIRE.²⁰

GEMARA. How do we know that the word *massi'ir*²¹ connotes 'burning'? — Because it is written in the Scripture, wa-yisa'em, David and his men,²² and we translate²³ 'and David burnt them'.

Our Rabbis taught 'Beacon fires are lit only for the new moon which has been seen at its proper time,²⁴ [to announce that] it has been sanctified. When are they lit? On the night following its announcement.²⁵ This means to say that we light beacons for defective months but not for full months. What is the reason? — R. Zera said: It is a precaution on account of a defective month which ends on Friday. [In that case] when do we light? On the termination of Sabbath; and if you were to insist that we should light up also for full months, this might give rise

(1) This would show that at least two were required.

(2) In giving evidence regarding the New Moon.

(3) In the verse, For it is a statute for Israel, a judgment for the God of Jacob. Ps. LXXXI, 5. 'Judgment' could be delivered only on the evidence of at least two witnesses.

(4) At the time when the Beth din was in Usha.

(5) I.e., so as not to put him on the same footing as R. Nehorai. Cf. Git. 5b for a similar incident.

(6) This witness may have been either one who had seen the new moon, or one who could testify to the bona fides of the man who has seen it. V. Tosaf. s.v. סדרא.

(7) What reason was there why R. Nehorai should not have gone on Sabbath, seeing that the Mishnah permits this?

(8) Who might disappear in the interval.

(9) [MS.M.: Minim, v. supra p. 94, n. 2].

(10) By making them believe that the new moon had been seen on the thirtieth of Adar, which was a Sabbath, when in fact it had not, so that the second day of Passover might be on a Sunday and the counting of the 'Omer might commence literally 'on the morrow of the Sabbath', according to their interpretation of the words (Rashi).

(11) V. Josh. XV, 7.

(12) Lit., 'who compelled you to all this'.

(13) Beth din having the right to expropriate. [On the reading Minim, if the reference is to Jewish Christians, their desire to have the first day of Passover fall on Friday and Pentecost on Sunday as was the case in the year of the crucifixion, would supply them with a reason for tampering with the Calendar, V. Herford, Christianity in the Talmud, p. 330.]

(14) For a flogging.

(15) The Hebrew word is massi'in, which literally means 'raise up'.

(16) To convey the news of the New Moon to the diaspora in Babylon.

(17) And lit beacons on the thirtieth day, so as to mislead the Babylonians.

(18) [There is no general agreement about the identification of these places. Obermeyer (p. 17ff) locates them as follows: Sartaba == Karn Sartaba, five km from the western bank of the Jordan; Grofina (or 'Agrufina, v. D.S.) 'Arafun, a hill situated among the Gilead range of mountains; Hauran south of Damascus, cf. Ezek. XLVII, 18. Beth Baltin == Beiram (v. infra) some miles N.W. of Pumbeditha. For other views, v. Horowitz Palestine, p. 125].

(19) I.e., the district of Pumbeditha. V. Gemara. [Rashi omits 'the whole of'.]

(20) Because, as explained infra in the Gemara, the inhabitants on seeing the beacon fire used to light torches.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 23a

to confusion, since people would say: This month may be defective, and the reason why beacons were not lit yesterday is because it was impossible,¹ or perhaps it is full and they are lighting up at the proper time. But why should we not light up whether for a full month or a defective month, and when New Moon is on Friday not light up at all, so that since we do not light at the termination of Sabbath, in spite of the fact that we usually light for a full month, people will know that it is defective? — This nevertheless may lead to errors, since people will say, This month is full, and the reason why they have not lit up is because they have been prevented.² But why not light up for the full months and not at all for the defective months? — Abaye replied: So as not to deprive the public of two working days.³

HOW DID THEY LIGHT THE BEACONS? THEY USED TO BRING LONG POLES etc. Rab Judah said: There are four kinds of cedar — cedar, kedros,⁴ pinewood⁵ and cypress [What is] kedros? — R. Idra stated that in the school of R. Shila it was defined as mabliga,⁶ though others held that it is gulmish. He [Rab Judah] differs herein from Rabbah son of R. Huna; for Rabbah son of R. Huna reported that in the school of Rab it was stated that there are ten kinds of cedar, as it says, I will plant in the wilderness erez, shitah, and hadas and oil-tree, I will set in the desert berosh, tidhor and teashur together.⁷ 'Erez' is cedar; 'shitah' is pine; 'hadas' is myrtle; 'oil-tree' is balsam; berosh is cypress; tidhor is teak;⁸ teashur is larch.⁹ This makes seven. When R. Dimi came, he said: To these were added alonim, almonim, and almugim. 'Alonim' are terebinths; almonim are oaks; almugim are coral-wood. According to others it should be aronim, 'armonim, and almugim. Aronim are bay-trees; 'armonim are planes; almugim are coral-wood.

Neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.¹⁰ Rab said: This refers to the great ship.¹¹ How is it carried out?¹² They bring there six thousand men for twelve months (or according to others twelve thousand men for six months) and load the boat with sand until it rests on the sea-bottom.¹³ Then a diver goes down and ties a rope of flax to the coral while the other end is tied to the ship, and the sand is then taken and thrown overboard, and as the boat rises it pulls up the coral with it. The coral is worth twice its weight in silver. There were three ports, two belonging to the Romans¹⁴ and one belonging to the Persians. From the Roman side they brought up coral, from the Persian side pearls. This [the Persian] one was called the port of Mashmahig.¹⁵

R. Johanan said: Every acacia tree that was taken by the invaders from Jerusalem will be restored to it by the Holy One, blessed be He, in time to come, as it says, I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the acacia tree,¹⁶ and ‘wilderness’ means Jerusalem, as it is written, Zion is become a wilderness¹⁷ etc.

R. Johanan further said: One who studies the Torah but does not teach it is like the myrtle in the wilderness.¹⁸ Others report [the saying thus]: One who studies the Torah and teaches it in a place where there is no [other] talmid hakam¹⁹ is like the myrtle in the wilderness, which is precious.

R. Johanan also said: Alas for the idol-worshippers since they have no means of remedy,²⁰ as it says, For brass I will bring gold, and for iron I will bring silver, and for wood brass and for stones iron.²¹ But what can they bring to replace R. Akiba and his companions? Of them the Scripture says, Though I cleanse them [of other transgressions] from their blood I shall not cleanse them.²²

WHENCE DID THEY CARRY THE CHAIN OF BEACONS etc.? FROM BETH BALTIM. What is Beth Baltin? — Rab said: This is

(1) On account of Sabbath.

(2) Through having drunk too much on Sabbath, and become intoxicated (Rashi).

(3) It was customary to abstain from work on New Moon (v. Tosaf. s.v. מישום). In this case the thirtieth day would always be kept as New Moon from doubt, and if the actual day fixed was the thirty-first, there would be two days New Moon.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 23b

Biram.¹ What is meant here by DIASPORA [GOLAH]? — R. Joseph said: This is Pumbeditha. What is meant [then] by LIKE ONE BIG BONFIRE? — A Tanna taught: ‘Every inhabitant [of Pumbeditha] takes a torch in his hand and goes up on to his roof’.² It has been taught: ‘R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: [Beacon fires were lit] also on Harim and Kayir and Geder and the neighbouring places’.³ Some say that these places are between [those mentioned in the Mishnah].⁴ Others say that they are on the further side from the Land of Israel, and that one authority [the Mishnah] reckons the places on one side,⁵ and the other reckons the places on the other.⁶ R. Johanan said: Between each one and the next⁷ there were eight parasangs.⁸ How many [parasangs] then were there altogether? Thirty-two.⁹ But to-day there is much more? — Abaye said: The [direct] roads have been closed,¹⁰ as it is written, Therefore behold, I will hedge up thy way with thorns [etc.].¹¹ R. Nahman b. Isaac said: It is stated in this verse, viz., He hath made my paths crooked.¹²

MISHNAH. THERE WAS A LARGE COURT IN JERUSALEM CALLED BETH YA'AZEK. THERE ALL THE WITNESSES USED TO ASSEMBLE AND THE BETH DIN USED TO EXAMINE THEM. THEY USED TO ENTERTAIN THEM LAVISHLY THERE¹³ SO THAT THEY SHOULD HAVE AN INDUCEMENT¹⁴ TO COME. ORIGINALLY THEY USED NOT TO LEAVE THE PLACE THE WHOLE DAY,¹⁵ BUT RABBAN GAMALIEL THE ELDER INTRODUCED A RULE THAT THEY COULD GO TWO THOUSAND CUBITS FROM IT IN ANY DIRECTION. THESE WERE NOT THE ONLY ONES [TO WHOM THIS CONCESSION WAS MADE]. A MIDWIFE WHO HAS COME [FROM A DISTANCE] TO HELP IN CHILDBIRTH OR ONE WHO COMES TO RESCUE FROM A FIRE OR FROM BANDITS OR FROM A RIVER IN FLOOD OR FROM A BUILDING THAT HAS FALLEN IN — ALL THESE ARE ON THE SAME FOOTING AS THE RESIDENTS OF THE TOWN, AND MAY GO TWO THOUSAND CUBITS [ON SABBATH] IN ANY DIRECTION.

GEMARA. The question was raised: Do we read here Beth Ya'azek or Beth Ya'zek? Do we read Beth Ya'azek, regarding the name as an elegancia¹⁶ based on the Scriptural expressions, And he ringed it round and cleared it of stones?¹⁷ Or do we read Beth Ya'zek, taking the name to connote constraint,¹⁸ as it is written, being bound in chains?¹⁹ — Abaye said: Come and hear [a proof that it is the former]: THEY USED TO ENTERTAIN THEM LAVISHLY THERE SO THAT THEY SHOULD HAVE AN INDUCEMENT TO COME. [This is not conclusive], as perhaps they treated them in both ways.²⁰

MISHNAH. HOW DO THEY TEST THE WITNESSES? THE PAIR WHO ARRIVE FIRST ARE TESTED FIRST. THE SENIOR OF THEM IS BROUGHT IN AND THEY SAY TO HIM, TELL US HOW YOU SAW THE MOON — IN FRONT OF THE SUN OR BEHIND THE SUN?²¹ TO THE NORTH OF IT OR THE SOUTH? HOW BIG WAS IT, AND IN WHICH DIRECTION WAS IT INCLINED?²² AND HOW BROAD WAS IT? IF HE SAYS [HE SAW IT] IN FRONT OF THE SUN, HIS EVIDENCE IS REJECTED.²³ AFTER THAT THEY WOULD BRING IN THE SECOND AND TEST HIM. IF THEIR ACCOUNTS TALLIED, THEIR EVIDENCE WAS ACCEPTED, AND THE OTHER PAIRS WERE ONLY QUESTIONED BRIEFLY,²⁴ NOT BECAUSE THEY WERE REQUIRED AT ALL, BUT SO THAT THEY SHOULD NOT BE DISAPPOINTED, [AND] SO THAT THEY SHOULD NOT BE DISSUADED FROM COMING.²⁵

GEMARA. ‘IN FRONT OF THE SUN’ is surely the same as ‘TO THE NORTH OF IT’, and ‘BEHIND THE SUN’ is surely the same as TO THE SOUTH OF IT’?²⁶ — Abaye said: [It means], whether the concavity of the moon is in front of the sun or behind the sun.²⁷ If he says, in front of the sun, his evidence is rejected, since R. Johanan has said: What is meant by the verse, Dominion and fear are with him, He maketh peace in his high places?²⁸ Never did the sun behold the concavity of the new moon nor the concavity of the rainbow. It never sees the concavity of the moon, so that she should not feel humiliated.²⁹ It never sees the concavity of the rainbow so that the worshippers of the sun should not say,

- (2) To spread the news throughout Babylon.
- (3) [These places are likewise difficult to identify. For various attempts v. Horowitz loc. cit. Graetz, Geschichte p. 67, n. 1 emends on the basis of the Tosef. a.l. חרים וכייר וגדר into הרי מכור וגדר the mountains of Macherus (in the south) and Gedera in the north. 'The neighbouring places' will include Tabor which is also mentioned in the Tosef.]

- (6) Perhaps those nearer to Babylon. This reference in both cases is uncertain; v. Horowitz, Palestine, loc. cit.

- (8) About forty miles.
- (9) [Apparently from Mount of Olives to Beth Baltin, the last station in Palestine.]
- (10) And travellers are obliged to take a round about route.

- (15) If they came on Sabbath, as they had already exceeded the limit of two thousand cubits.
- (16) Lit., 'an elevated' or 'refined expression', i.e., not belonging to the language of everyday life.
- (17) Isa. V, 2. E.V. 'and he digged it and cleared it'. The Heb. is ויעזקהו which the Talmud connects with the Aramaic עזקה 'a ring', so that Beth Ya'azek would refer to the stone wall round the court.

- (24) Lit., 'with heads of subjects'.
- (25) Lit., 'so that they should (still) be accustomed to come'.
- (26) The new moon can be seen only about sunset, close to the sun, when the sun is travelling towards the north. We should therefore naturally take 'in front of the sun' to mean 'to the north of the sun', and 'behind the sun' to mean 'to the south of the sun'.
- (27) I.e., whether the rim of the moon visible from the earth is concave or convex in relation to the sun. By 'in front of' Abaye understands 'turned towards', and by 'behind', 'turned away from'.
- (28) Job XXV, 2.
- (29) And in this way God keeps the peace between the sun and the moon.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 24a

He is shooting arrows [at those who do not worship him].¹

HOW HIGH WAS IT AND IN WHICH DIRECTION WAS IT INCLINED. One Tanna taught: [If he says], To the north, his evidence is accepted; [if he says], To the south, his evidence is rejected.² But it has been taught to the opposite effect: [If he says], To the south, his evidence is accepted; [if he says], To the north, his evidence is rejected'? — There is no contradiction; one statement speaks of the dry season,³ the other of the rainy season.⁴

The Rabbis taught: If one⁵ says that it was two ox-loads high⁶ and the other three,⁷ their evidence is accepted. If one, however, says that it was three and the other five, their evidence is nullified, only each of them can be joined with another witness.⁸

Our Rabbis taught: '[If they say], We saw it in water, we saw it in a mirror, we saw it through the clouds, they are not allowed to testify concerning it. [If they say], We saw half of it in water, half of it through the clouds, half of it in a mirror, they are not allowed to testify concerning it'. Since you disallow them [when they see] the whole, can there be any question [when they see] only half? — In fact the statement should run as follows: '[If they say they saw] half of it in water and half in the sky, half of it through the clouds and half in the sky, half of it in a mirror and half in the sky, they are not allowed to testify.'

Our Rabbis taught: [If they say], We saw it [once], but did not see it again, they are not allowed to testify concerning it. [Why so?] Are they to go on seeing it the whole time? — Abaye replied: What is meant is this. [If they say], We saw it by chance,⁹ but when we came to look for it deliberately¹⁰ we could not see it, they are not allowed to testify concerning it. What is the reason? Because I might say, they saw only a circular disc in the clouds.

MISHNAH. THE HEAD OF THE BETH DIN SAYS, SANCTIFIED', AND ALL THE PEOPLE REPEAT AFTER HIM, SANCTIFIED, SANCTIFIED. WHETHER THE NEW MOON IS SEEN AT ITS PROPER TIME¹¹ OR NOT AT ITS PROPER TIME, IN EITHER CASE [THE NEW MOON] IS SANCTIFIED.¹² R. ELEAZAR B. ZADOK, HOWEVER, SAYS THAT IF IT IS NOT SEEN AS ITS PROPER TIME [THE NEW MOON] IS NOT [FORMALLY] SANCTIFIED, BECAUSE HEAVEN HAS ALREADY SANCTIFIED IT.

GEMARA. THE HEAD OF THE BETH DIN etc. What is the Scriptural warrant for this? — R. Hiyya b. Gamda said in the name of R. Jose b. Saul, who had it from Rabbi: The Scripture says, And Moses declared the appointed seasons of the Lord;¹³ from this we learn that the head of the Beth din says, 'sanctified'.

AND ALL THE PEOPLE REPEAT AFTER HIM, 'SANCTIFIED, SANCTIFIED'. Whence do we learn this? — R. Papa said: Scripture says, which ye shall proclaim [them].¹⁴ [For otham] read attem.¹⁵ R. Nahman b. Isaac said, [we learn it from here]: Even these [hem] are my appointed seasons;¹⁶ [which implies], they shall say, my seasons.¹⁷

SANCTIFIED, SANCTIFIED: why twice? — Because it is written, holy convocations.¹⁸

R. ELEAZAR B. ZADOK SAYS THAT IF IT IS NOT SEEN AT ITS PROPER TIME IT IS NOT SANCTIFIED. It has been taught: Polemo says: If seen at its time is is not sanctified,¹⁹ if seen out of its time it is sanctified. R. Eleazar b. Simeon says: in either case it is not sanctified, since it says, And ye shall sanctify the fiftieth year,²⁰ which shows that you are to sanctify years, but are not to sanctify months.

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as laid down by R. Eleazar b. Zadok. Abaye said: We have also learnt to the same effect: 'If the Beth din and all Israel saw it,²¹ and if the witnesses had been tested, but they had no time to say 'sanctified' before it grew dark, the month is prolonged', which implies that it is prolonged²² but that [the new month] is not sanctified [later in the day]. [This is not conclusive, since] there was a special reason for mentioning the prolonging. You might think that since the Beth din and all Israel saw it [the new moon] everyone knew that it had appeared and therefore the month should not be prolonged. Therefore we are told [that this is not so].

MISHNAH. R. GAMALIEL USED TO HAVE A DIAGRAM OF PHASES OF THE MOON ON A TABLET [HUNG] ON THE WALL OF HIS UPPER CHAMBER, AND HE USED TO SHOW THEM TO THE UNLEARNED AND SAY, DID IT LOOK LIKE THIS OR THIS?

GEMARA. Is this allowed, seeing that it is written, Ye shall not make with me,²³ which we interpret, 'Ye shall not make the likeness of my attendants'? — Abaye replied: The Torah forbade only those attendants of which it is possible to make copies,²⁴ as it has been taught: A man may not make a house in the form of the Temple, or an exedra in the form of the Temple hall,²⁵ or a court corresponding to the Temple court, or a table corresponding to the [sacred] table or a candlestick corresponding to the [sacred] candlestick, but he may make one

- (1) The rainbow in this case having the appearance of a bow bent by the sun against the earth.
 - (2) Reading this sentence in its present context, we must suppose it to mean, 'if he says, (it was inclined) to the north' etc. This is very difficult to understand, and it is much more natural to suppose that the words to be supplied are 'that he saw it', and that this sentence is to be connected with the words in the Mishnah TO THE NORTH OF IT OR TO THE SOUTH. So apparently it is taken by Rashi. V. Maharsha, ad loc.

with five or six or eight lamps, but with seven he should not make, even of other metals.¹ R. Jose b. Judah said: He should not make one even of wood, this being the way in which the kings of the house of the Hasmoneans made it.² They said to him: Can you adduce this as a proof? The spits³ were of iron and they overlaid them with tin.⁴ When they grew richer they made them of silver.

When they grew richer still, they made them of gold.

But is it allowed [to make likenesses] of attendants of which it is impossible to make copies, seeing that it has been taught: 'Ye shall not make with me': [this implies], ye shall not make the likeness of My attendants who minister before Me on high?' — Abaye replied: The Torah forbade only the likeness of the four faces⁵ all together. If that is so, the portrait of a human being by himself should be allowed; why then has it been taught: All portraits are allowed, save the portrait of man? — R. Huna the son of R. Idi replied: From a discourse of Abaye I learnt: 'Ye shall not make with me' [implies], ye shall not make Me.⁶

Still, are the other attendants permitted, seeing that it has been taught: "'Ye shall not make with me": ye shall not make the likeness of My attendants who serve before Me on high, such as Ofanim and Seraphim and holy Hayyoth and ministering angels'? — Abaye replied: The Torah forbade only the attendants in the upper sphere.⁷ But are those in the lower sphere⁸ permitted? Has it not been taught: 'Which are in the heaven:⁹ this brings under the rule the sun, the moon, the stars and constellations; "above":¹⁰ this brings under the rule the ministering angels?' — That statement refers to the prohibition of [making a likeness] for serving them.

If for serving, then the tiniest worm should also [be prohibited]? — Yes, that is so, as it has been taught: Which are in the earth:¹¹ this brings under the rule mountains, hills, seas, rivers, streams and valleys. Beneath:¹² this brings under the rule the tiniest worm.

But is the mere making allowed? Has it not been taught: "'Ye shall not make with me": ye shall not make a likeness of My attendants who minister before Me, such as the sun, the moon, the stars and constellations'? — R. Gamaliel's case was different, because others¹³ made for him. But what of Rab Judah who [had a figure on a seal which] others had made for him, and yet Samuel said to him, Shinena,¹⁴ put out that fellow's eye?¹⁵ — In that case the seal was projecting, and [Samuel forbade it] so that it should not arouse suspicion,¹⁶ as it has been taught: 'A ring of which the seal projects must not be worn on the finger, but it is permitted to sign with it. If the seal is sunk in, it is permitted to wear it but forbidden to sign with it'. But does it matter if we do arouse suspicion? Was there not a synagogue which 'moved and settled' in Nehardea¹⁷ and in it was a statue [of a king] and Rab and Samuel and the father of Samuel used to go in there to pray, and were not afraid of arousing suspicion? — Where a whole body of persons is concerned it is different. But Rabban Gamaliel was an individual? — Since he was the Nasi,¹⁸ a large company was always with him. If you like I can say that it was [drawn] in sections,¹⁹ or if you like I can say that he did it for purposes of study, and it is written, Thou shalt not learn to do,²⁰ which implies that you may learn to understand and to teach.

AND IN THE EVENING IN THE WEST.¹ R. JOHANAN B. NURI THEREUPON SAID, THEY ARE FALSE WITNESSES.² WHEN, HOWEVER, THEY CAME TO JABNEH RABBAN GAMALIEL ACCEPTED THEM. ON ANOTHER OCCASION TWO WITNESSES CAME AND SAID, WE SAW IT AT ITS PROPER TIME,³ BUT ON THE NIGHT WHICH SHOULD HAVE BEEN NEW MOON⁴ IT WAS NOT SEEN, AND RABBAN GAMALIEL [HAD ALREADY] ACCEPTED THEIR EVIDENCE.⁵ RABBI DOSA B. HARKINAS SAID: THEY ARE FALSE WITNESSES. HOW CAN MEN TESTIFY THAT A WOMAN HAS BORN A CHILD WHEN ON THE NEXT DAY WE SEE HER BELLY STILL SWOLLEN?⁶ SAID R. JOSHUA TO HIM: I SEE [THE FORCE OF] YOUR ARGUMENT. THEREUPON RABBAN GAMALIEL SENT TO HIM TO SAY, I ENJOIN UPON YOU TO APPEAR BEFORE ME WITH YOUR STAFF AND YOUR MONEY ON THE DAY WHICH ACCORDING TO YOUR RECKONING SHOULD BE THE DAY OF ATONEMENT.⁷ R. AKIBA WENT [TO R. JOSHUA] AND FOUND HIM IN GREAT DISTRESS.⁸ HE SAID TO HIM: I CAN BRING PROOF [FROM THE SCRIPTURE] THAT WHATEVER RABBAN GAMALIEL HAS DONE IS VALID, BECAUSE IT SAYS, THESE ARE THE APPOINTED SEASONS OF THE LORD, HOLY CONVOCATIONS, WHICH YE SHALL PROCLAIM IN THEIR APPOINTED SEASONS,⁹ [WHICH MEANS TO SAY THAT] WHETHER THEY ARE PROCLAIMED AT THEIR PROPER TIME OR NOT AT THEIR PROPER TIME, I HAVE NO APPOINTED SEASONS SAVE THESE.¹⁰ HE [R. JOSHUA] THEN WENT TO R. DOSA B. HARKINAS, WHO SAID TO HIM: IF WE CALL IN QUESTION [THE DECISIONS OF] THE BETH DIN OF RABBAN GAMALIEL, WE MUST CALL IN QUESTION THE DECISIONS OF EVERY BETH DIN WHICH HAS EXISTED SINCE THE DAYS OF MOSES UP TO THE PRESENT TIME. FOR IT SAYS, THEN WENT UP MOSES AND AARON, NADAB AND ABIHU AND SEVENTY OF THE ELDERS OF ISRAEL.¹¹ WHY WERE NOT THE NAMES OF THE ELDERS MENTIONED? TO SHOW THAT EVERY GROUP OF THREE WHICH HAS ACTED AS A BETH DIN OVER ISRAEL IS ON A LEVEL WITH THE BETH DIN OF MOSES.¹² HE [R. JOSHUA] THEREUPON TOOK HIS STAFF AND HIS MONEY AND WENT TO JABNEH TO RABBAN GAMALIEL ON THE DAY ON WHICH THE DAY OF ATONEMENT FELL ACCORDING TO HIS RECKONING. RABBAN GAMALIEL ROSE AND KISSED HIM ON HIS HEAD AND SAID TO HIM: COME IN PEACE, MY TEACHER AND MY DISCIPLE — MY TEACHER IN WISDOM AND MY DISCIPLE BECAUSE YOU HAVE ACCEPTED MY DECISION.

GEMARA. It has been taught: Rabban Gamaliel said to the Sages: This formula has been handed down to me from the house of my father's father: Sometimes it [the moon] traverses [the heavens]¹³ by a long course and sometimes by a short course.¹⁴ R. Johanan said: What is the reason of the house of Rabbi?¹⁵ Because it is written, Who appointest the moon for seasons, the sun knoweth his going down.¹⁶ It is the sun which knows its going down, but the moon does not know its going down.¹⁷

R. Hiyya once saw the [old] moon in the heavens on the morning of the twenty-ninth day.¹⁸ He took a clod of earth and threw it at it, saying, Tonight we want to sanctify you,¹⁹ and are you still here! Go and hide yourself.²⁰ Rabbi thereupon said to R. Hiyya, Go to En Tob²¹ and sanctify the month,²² and send me the watchword, 'David king of Israel is alive and vigorous'.²³

Our Rabbis taught: Once the heavens were covered with clouds and the likeness of the moon was seen on the twenty-ninth of the month. The public were minded to declare New Moon, and the Beth din wanted to sanctify it, but Rabban Gamaliel said to them: I have it on the authority of the house of my father's father that the renewal of the moon takes place after not less than twenty-nine days and a half and two-thirds of an hour and seventy-three halakin.²⁴ On that day the mother of Ben Zaza died, and Rabban Gamaliel made a great funeral oration over her, not because she had merited it, but so that the public should know that the Beth din had not sanctified the month.²⁵

R. AKIBA WENT AND FOUND HIM²⁶ IN GREAT DISTRESS. The question was asked, Who was in distress? Was R. Akiba in distress or was R. Joshua in distress? — Come and hear, since it has been taught: 'R. Akiba went and found R. Joshua while he was in great distress. He said to him, Master, why are you in distress? He replied: Akiba, it were better for a man²⁷ to be on a sick-bed for twelve months than that such an injunction should be laid on him.²⁸ He said to him, [Master,] will you allow me to tell you something which you yourself have taught me? He said to him, Speak. He then said to him: The text says, 'you', 'you', 'you', three times,²⁹ to indicate that 'you' [may fix the festivals] even if you err inadvertently, 'you', even if you err deliberately, 'you', even if you are misled.³⁰ He replied to him in these words: 'Akiba, you have comforted me, you have comforted me'.³¹

HE THEN WENT TO R. DOSA B. HARKINAS etc. Our Rabbis taught: Why were not the names of these elders mentioned? So that a man should not say, Is So-and-so like Moses and Aaron? Is So-and-so like Nadab and Abihu? Is So-and-so like Eldad and Medad?³² Scripture also says, And Samuel said to the people, It is the Lord that made Moses and Aaron,³³ and it says [in the same passage], And the Lord sent Jerubaal and Bedan and Jephthah and Samuel.³⁴ Jerubaal is Gideon. Why is he called Jerubaal? Because he contended with Baal. Bedan is Samson. Why is he called Bedan? Because he came from Dan. Jephthah is Jephthah

(1) We should naturally suppose this to mean that they saw the old moon in the morning and the new moon in the evening.

(2) Presumably because according to what has been stated above (20b) the old moon is never visible for twenty-four hours before the new appears. But v. infra at the beginning of the Gemara and notes.

(3) Apparently this must have been on the thirtieth day shortly before nightfall.

(4) Lit., 'the night of its carry-over', i.e., after the nightfall with which the thirty-first day begins, when it should have been clearly visible.

(5) And declared the thirtieth day New Moon.

(6) Lit., 'between her teeth'. Similarly the old moon would still be 'between the teeth' of the new.

(7) The New Moon in question was that of Tishri, and consequently the Day of Atonement according to R. Joshua would fall a day later than according to R. Gamaliel.

(8) Because he had been ordered to profane the Day of Atonement.

(9) Lev. XXIII, 4.

(10) V. supra. 89.

(11) Ex. XXIV, 9.

(12) Seeing that most of the members of that Beth din also bore no names of distinction.

(13) Lit., 'it comes (to its setting place)'.

(14) This would seem to show that (in the first case mentioned in the Mishnah) the witnesses said that they saw the new moon on both occasions, and R. Johanan b. Nuri rejected them, on the ground that it could not go from, east to west so quickly, while R. Gamaliel held that it could. V. Rashi s.v. עדי שקר in the Mishnah.

- (15) Rabbi was a descendent of Rabban Gamaliel.
- (16) Ps. CIV, 19.
- (17) I.e., its speed varies.
- (18) Which was a sign that the new moon would not appear for at least twenty-four hours.
- (19) So that the Day of Atonement should not be on Sunday.
- (20) [Before nightfall, so that there should be no appearance of the old moon after the closing of the twenty-ninth day, which would prevent the thirtieth day from being proclaimed New Moon (Rashi); v. supra p. 85, n. 5].
- (21) A place in Judah where the Beth din [used to meet to sanctify the month. V. Tosaf. s.v. בית].
- (22) Disregarding what you have seen.
- (23) I.e., the moon is reborn. The expression is based on Ps. LXXXIX, 38.
- (24) Lit., 'parts' (sc. of one hour), 73/1080 X 60 m == 4 m 3 1/3 sec. The new moon, therefore, could not be seen on the twenty-ninth day.
- (25) As a funeral oration would not be delivered on New Moon, which was regarded as a holy day.
- (26) [MS.M. omits 'HIM' which explains the question which follows].
- (27) [Var. lec. 'me'. V. Maharsha.]
- (28) Var. lec. 'on me'. V. Maharsha.
- (29) I.e., the word אתם (them) in Lev. XXII, 31, XXIII, 2 and XXIII, 4 is read את (you) for homiletical purposes.
- (30) By the witnesses.
- (31) By showing me that Rabban Gamaliel was within his rights. V. Maharsha ad loc.
- (32) I.e., if a man does say so about the Beth din in his own time, we can answer him that they may be at least like the seventy elders who are unknown by name.
- (33) 1 Sam. XII, 6.
- (34) Ibid. 11. These are here put on a par with Moses and Aaron.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 25b

. It says also: Moses and Aaron among his priests and Samuel among them that call on his name.¹ [We see therefore that] the Scripture places three of the most questionable characters² on the same level as three of the the most estimable characters,³ to show that Jerubaal in his generation is like Moses in his generation, Bedan in his generation is like Aaron in his generation, Jephthah in his generation is like Samuel in his generation, [and] to teach you that the most worthless, once he has been appointed a leader⁴ of the community, is to be accounted like the mightiest of the mighty. Scripture says also: And thou shalt come unto the priests the Levites and to the judge thou shall be in those days.⁵ Can we then imagine that a man should go to a judge who is not in his days? This shows that you must be content to go to the judge who is in your days. It also says; Say not, How was it that the former days were better than these.⁶

HE TOOK HIS STAFF AND HIS MONEY IN HIS HAND. Our Rabbis taught: When he [Rabban Gamaliel] saw him, he rose from his seat and kissed him on his head, saying, Peace to thee my teacher and my disciple — my teacher, because thou hast taught me Torah publicly, my disciple because I lay an injunction on thee and thou dost carry it out like a disciple. Happy is the generation in which the greater defer to the lesser, and all the more so the lesser to the greater! [You say] 'All the more so'! It is their duty!⁷ — What it means is that because the greater defer to the lesser, the lesser apply the lesson to themselves with all the more force.⁸

MISHNAH. IF THE BETH DIN AND ALL ISRAEL SAW IT,⁹ IF THE WITNESSES WERE TESTED¹⁰ AND THERE WAS NO TIME LEFT TO SAY 'SANCTIFIED' BEFORE IT GREW DARK, THEN THE MONTH IS PROLONGED.¹¹ IF THE BETH DIN¹² ALONE HAVE SEEN IT,¹³ TWO OF THEM SHOULD COME FORWARD AND TESTIFY BEFORE THEM, AND THEN THEY CAN SAY, 'SANCTIFIED, SANCTIFIED'. IF THREE PERSONS SAW IT, THEY [THEMSELVES] CONSTITUTING THE BETH DIN, TWO [OF THEM] SHOULD COME FORWARD AND THEY SHOULD ASSOCIATE SOME OF THEIR COLLEAGUES WITH THE ONE LEFT, AND THEY [THE TWO] SHOULD TESTIFY BEFORE THEM AND THEY CAN THEN SAY, 'SANCTIFIED, SANCTIFIED'. [THIS MUST BE DONE] BECAUSE AN INDIVIDUAL IS NOT AUTHORIZED [TO SAY 'SANCTIFIED'] BY HIMSELF.

GEMARA. What need is there to state IF THE BETH DIN AND ALL ISRAEL SAW IT?¹⁴ — It is necessary. You might think that since the Beth din and all Israel have seen it everyone knows about it and therefore they should not prolong the month.¹⁵ Therefore we are told [that this is not so].

But when once it has been stated IF THE BETH DIN AND ALL ISRAEL SAW IT, why should it further say, IF THE WITNESSES HAVE BEEN TESTED?¹⁶ — What it means is, 'Or if the witnesses had been tested and there was no time left to say "sanctified" before it grew dark, then the month must be prolonged'.

But when once it has been stated if IT GREW DARK THEN THE MONTH IS PROLONGED, why should the testing of the witnesses be mentioned at all?¹⁷ — It is necessary. For you might suppose that the testing of the witnesses is regarded as the commencement of a suit in court, and the pronouncement of 'sanctified', 'sanctified' as the end of the suit, and therefore they should sanctify at night, on the analogy of money suits, as we have learnt, 'Money suits are heard by day and concluded [if necessary] at night'; so here we should sanctify at night. Therefore we are told [that this is not so]. But cannot I say that this actually is the case?¹⁸ — Scripture says, For it is a statute for Israel, a judgment for the God of Jacob.¹⁹ When does the word 'statute'²⁰ apply? To the conclusion of the suit; and the All-Merciful calls it 'judgment'. [Therefore we reason], Just as judgment is delivered by day,²¹ so here [the pronouncement must be] by day.

IF THE BETH DIN [ALONE] HAVE SEEN IT, TWO OF THEM SHOULD COME FORWARD AND TESTIFY BEFORE THEM. Why so? Surely hearing should not carry greater weight than seeing?²² — R. Zera said, [It is necessary if] for instance, they saw it at night.²³

IF THREE PERSONS SAW IT, THEY [THEMSELVES] CONSTITUTING THE BETH DIN, TWO [OF THEM] SHOULD COME FORWARD AND THEY SHOULD ASSOCIATE SOME OF THEIR COLLEAGUES WITH THE ONE LEFT. Why so? Here too we can argue that hearing should not carry greater weight than seeing? And should you reply that here too [it is necessary] if, for instance, they saw it at night, then this is the same case as the one [preceding]? — It was necessary to state the last clause²⁴

[VIZ.]: BECAUSE AN INDIVIDUAL IS NOT AUTHORIZED [TO SAY 'SANCTIFIED'] BY HIMSELF. For you might have thought that since it has been taught, 'Money suits must be tried before three, but one who is a recognized legal expert²⁵ can try them even alone', so here too one might sanctify the month single-handed. Therefore we are told [that this is not so]. But cannot I say that this actually is the case?²⁶ — There was no more universally recognized expert in Israel than Moses, and yet the Holy One, blessed be He, said to him, [Do not sanctify the month] until Aaron is with thee, as it is written, And the Lord said unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt saying, This month is to you.²⁷

This implies that a witness²⁸ may act as judge. Shall we say then that our Mishnah does not agree with R. Akiba, since it has been taught: 'If the Sanhedrin saw a man slay a person

, some of them act as witnesses and some as judges. This is the view of R. Tarfon. R. Akiba says: They all act as witnesses, and a witness cannot act as a judge'? — You may say that our Mishnah agrees even with R. Akiba. R. Akiba meant this rule to apply only to capital cases, in regard to which the All-Merciful enjoined, the congregation shall judge . . . and the congregation shall deliver¹ and since they have seen him slay a person, they cannot find any defence for him. But in this case even R. Akiba would agree [that a witness may act as judge].

MISHNAH. ALL KINDS OF SHOFAR² MAY BE USED EXCEPT [ONE MADE FROM THE HORN] OF A COW, BECAUSE IT IS [PROPERLY] KEREN.³ SAID R. JOSE: ARE NOT ALL SHOFARS CALLED 'KEREN' AS IT SAYS, WHEN THEY MAKE A LONG BLAST WITH THE RAM'S KEREN [HORN]?⁴

GEMARA. R. Jose was surely quite right. What can the Rabbis reply? — That all shofars are called both shofar and keren, whereas that of a cow is called keren but is not called shofar, as it is written, His firstling bullock, majesty is his, and his horns [karnaw] are as the horns of a re'em.⁵ What says R. Jose to this? — He can reply that that of a cow is also called shofar as it is written, And it shall please the Lord better than a bullock [shor par]⁶ that hath horns and hoofs.⁷ Now if 'shor' is mentioned here why 'par', and if 'par' why 'shor'?⁸ The fact is that shor par is equivalent to shofar.⁹ And the Rabbis? — They adopt the explanation of R. Mattenah; for R. Mattenah said: What is meant by shor par? A shor which is as full-grown as a par.¹⁰ 'Ulla said: The reason of the Rabbis is to be found in the saying of R. Hisda; for R. Hisda said: Why does not the High Priest enter the inner precincts¹¹ in garments of gold¹² to perform the service there? Because the accuser may not act as defender.¹³ Is that so? What of the blood of the bullock?¹⁴ — Seeing that this has been transformed,¹⁵ the objection to it is removed.¹⁶ But what of the ark, with the mercy-seat and the cherub?¹⁷ — What we say is that the sinner should not bring near the offering. But what of the spoon and the censer?¹⁸ — What we say is that the sinner should not adorn himself. But what of the garments of gold [which he wore] in the outer sanctuary? — We speak of [ministrations In the] inner precincts. The shofar also is [used] in the outer precincts? — Since its purpose is to awaken remembrance, it is as if it were [used] within.

But the Tanna says BECAUSE IT IS [PROPERLY] KEREN? — He mentioned [only] an additional reason:¹⁹ one reason is because the accuser cannot act as defender, and the other is because it is keren. What says R. Jose to this? — His answer is: Your statement that the accuser cannot act as defender applies only to the inner precincts, and this shofar is [used] in the outer precincts. And as for your statement that this shofar is keren, all shofars are likewise called keren.

Abaye said: The reason of the Rabbis is that the All-Merciful prescribed ‘a shofar’, and not two or three shofars, and the one made from a cow's horn being in layers²⁰ looks like two or three shofars. But the Tanna says, BECAUSE IT IS PROPERLY KEREN? — He stated [only] an additional reason:¹⁹ one reason is that the All-Merciful prescribed one shofar, and not two or three shofars, and another reason is that it is keren. What then says R. Jose to this? — He can reply: With regard to your statement that the All-Merciful prescribed one shofar and not two or three shofar, since the layers are closely joined together, it is really one, and as for your statement that it is keren, all shofars are likewise called keren.

What proof is there that the word yobel here²¹ means ram? — As it has been taught: R. Akiba said: When I went to Arabia, they used to call a ram yobla. R. Akiba further said: When I went to Gallia, they used to call a niddah²² ‘galmudah’.²³ How galmudah? — [As much as to say], gemulah da [this one is isolated] from her husband. R. Akiba further said: When I went to Africa, they used to call a ma'ah²⁴ ‘kesitah’. What is the practical importance of this? — For explaining [the Scriptural expression] a hundred kesitah;²⁵ it means, a hundred danki.²⁶

Rabbi said: When I went to the sea-ports, they called mekirah [selling] ‘kirah’. What is the practical importance of this? — To explain [the Scriptural expression] asher karithi.²⁷ R. Simeon b. Lakish said: When I went to the district of Ken Nishraya,²⁸ they used to call a bride ninfe and a cock sekvi. ‘A bride ninfe’:²⁹ where do we find this in Scripture? Yefeh nof,³⁰ the joy of the whole earth.³¹ ‘A cock sekvi’: Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, or, if you prefer,³² of R. Joshua b. Levi: Where do we find this in the Scripture? Who hath put wisdom in the tuhoth,³³ or who hath given understanding to the sekvi?³⁴ ‘Who hath put wisdom in the tuhoth’ — these are the reins; ‘or who hath given understanding to the sekvi’ — this is the cock.

In a certain place which Levi happened to visit, a man came before him and said

(1) Num., XXXV, 25, 26. The word ‘deliver’ is taken by R. Akiba to mean ‘find a defence for’.

(2) A kind of trumpet made of the horn of certain animals. Scripture prescribes (Lev. XXV, 9) that a shofar should be used for proclaiming the Jubilee. The Psalmist also says (Ps. LXXXI, 4), Blow ye the shofar on the new moon.

(3) I.e., all kinds of horns may be used for making a shofar except that of a cow, because an instrument made from a cow's horn, though similar to a shofar in all respects, is properly called keren (lit. ‘horn’)

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 26b

, So-and-so has kaba'ed¹ me. He did not know what he meant, so he went and enquired in the Beth Hamidrash. They said to him: He wanted to say to you, 'has robbed me', as it is written, Will man rob [yikba'] God?² Raba from Barnish³ said to R. Ashi: Had I been there, I should have said to him, How did he kaba' you, in what did he kaba' you, why did he kaba' you, and so I should have found out [from his answers]. The other [Levi], however, thought that he meant some kind of offence.⁴

The Rabbis did not know what was meant by serugin⁵ till one day they heard the maidservant of Rabbi's household, on seeing the Rabbis enter at intervals, say to them, How long are you going to come in by serugin?

The Rabbis did not know what was meant by haluglugoth⁶ till one day they heard the handmaid of the household of Rabbi, on seeing a man peeling portulaks, say to him, How long will you be peeling your haluglugoth?

The Rabbis did not know what was meant by 'salselehah' and it shall exalt thee.⁷ One day they heard the handmaid of the household of Rabbi say to a man who was curling his hair, How long will you be mesalseh⁸ with your hair?

The Rabbis did not know what was meant by we-tetethia bematate of destruction,⁹ till one day they heard the handmaid of the household of Rabbi say to her companion, Take the tatitha [broom] and tati [sweep] the house.

The Rabbis did not know what was meant by Cast upon the Lord thy yehab and he shall sustain thee.¹⁰ Said Rabbah b. Bar Hanah: One day I was travelling with an Arab¹¹ and was carrying a load, and he said to me, Lift up your yehab and put it on [one of] the camels.¹²

MISHNAH. THE SHOFAR USED ON NEW YEAR¹³ WAS OF AN ANTELOPE'S HORN AND STRAIGHT, AND ITS MOUTH WAS OVERLAID WITH GOLD. THERE WERE TWO TRUMPETS, ONE ON EACH SIDE OF IT. THE SHOFAR GAVE A LONG BLAST AND THE TRUMPETS A SHORT ONE, SINCE THE PROPER CEREMONY OF THE DAY WAS WITH THE SHOFAR.¹⁴ ON [COMMUNAL] FAST DAYS THEY USED [TWO] CURVED SHOFARS OF RAMS, THE MOUTHS OF WHICH WERE OVERLAID WITH SILVER. THERE WERE TWO TRUMPETS BETWEEN THEM; A SHORT BLAST WAS MADE WITH THE SHOFARS AND A LONG ONE WITH THE TRUMPETS, BECAUSE THE RELIGIOUS DUTY OF THE DAY WAS [TO BE PERFORMED] WITH THE TRUMPETS.¹⁵ THE JUBILEE IS ON A PAR WITH NEW YEAR FOR BLOWING THE HORN AND FOR BLESSINGS.¹⁶ R. JUDAH SAYS: ON NEW YEAR THE BLAST IS MADE WITH A SHOFAR OF RAMS AND ON JUBILEES WITH ONE OF ANTELOPES.

GEMARA. R. Levi said: The religious duty of New Year and of the Day of Atonement is performed with a curved shofar, and on other days in the year with a straight shofar. But we learn, THE SHOFAR OF NEW YEAR WAS A STRAIGHT ONE OF ANTELOPE'S HORN? — Levi followed the view of the following Tanna, as it has been taught: 'R. Judah says, On New Year they used to blow with curved shofars of rams' horns and on jubilees with shofars of antelopes' horns'. Why then did not he [Levi] say that the law¹⁷ follows the view of R. Judah?¹⁸ — If you were to say that the law follows R. Judah, I should say that in the case of the Jubilee also he was of the same opinion as R. Judah. Now we know [that this is not so]. What is the ground of the difference [between R. Judah and the First Tanna]? — One authority [R. Judah] holds that on New Year the more a man [so to speak] bends his mind the more effective [is his prayer], while on the Day of Atonement [of the Jubilee] the more a man elevates¹⁹ his mind the better is the effect.²⁰ The other authority holds that on New Year the more a man elevates his mind the better the effect, and on fast days the more he bends his mind the better the effect.

AND ITS MOUTH WAS OVERLAID WITH GOLD. But has it not been taught: 'If it was overlaid with gold at the place where the mouth is applied, it is not valid;¹ if not at the place where the mouth is applied, it is valid'? — Abaye replied: When this state ment is made in our Mishnah, it also refers to the place where the mouth is not applied.

THERE WERE TWO TRUMPETS, ONE ON EACH SIDE OF IT. But can two distinct sounds be caught at once?² Has it not been taught:³ "Remember" and "observe" were spoken in a single utterance,⁴ a thing which transcends the capacity of the [human] mouth to utter and of the [human] ear to hear'? — It was for this reason that the blast of the shofar was prolonged. This implies that if one heard the end of the blast without the beginning he has performed his duty;⁵ and from this it would follow that if he heard the beginning of the blast without the end he has equally performed his duty. Come now and hear [a refutation of this idea]: 'If he blew teki'ah at the beginning [of the service] and prolonged the second so as to make it equal to two, this only counts as one'.⁶ Why should this be? Why should not it [the second blast] be counted as divided into two?⁷ — We do not divide a teki'ah into two.

Come and hear [another objection]: If one blew into a pit or a cistern or a barrel, if the sound of the shofar came out [pure], he has performed his duty, but if an echo came out [with it], he has not performed his duty.⁸ Why should this be? Cannot he have performed his duty [by hearing] the beginning of the blast, before the sound is confused [with the echo]? — The truth is that two utterances proceeding from one man cannot be distinguished, but proceeding from two men they can be distinguished.⁹ But if they proceed from two men can they be distinguished? Have we not learnt: 'In the recital of the Torah [in synagogue] one may read and another translate;¹⁰ what is not allowed is that¹¹ one should read¹² and two translate'.¹³ — The fact is that our case resembles that mentioned in the next clause [of this quotation]: 'In the recital of Hallel and the Megillah¹⁴ even ten may read'.¹⁵ This shows that since an interest is taken in these,¹⁶ the hearer pays close attention. So here, since an interest is taken, he pays close attention and hears [the two sounds]. Why then is the blast of the shofar prolonged? — So that people should know that the proper ceremony of the day is with the shofar.

ON FAST DAYS THEY USED CURVED SHOFARS OF RAMS' HORNS THE MOUTHS OF WHICH WERE OVERLAID WITH SILVER. Why in the other case should gold have been used and here silver? — If you like I can reply that for all public gatherings silver is used, as it is written, Make thee two trumpets of silver,¹⁷ or if you like I can say that the Torah wished to spare Israel unnecessary expense.¹⁸ [If that is so], we should use silver in the other case also? — Even so, this consideration is outweighed by that of paying respect to the holyday.

R. Papa b. Samuel was minded to follow the instructions of the Mishnah,¹⁹ but Raba said to him, These instructions were laid down only for the Sanctuary. It has been taught to the same effect: Where do these rules apply? To the Sanctuary; but in the provinces, where the trumpets are in place²⁰ there is no shofar, and where the shofar is in place²¹ there are no trumpets. R. Halafta adopted the same custom in Zepphoris and R. Hananiah b. Teradion in Sikni,²² and when this was reported to the Sages they said: This was not the practice save only in the gates of the East and the Mount of the Temple.²³ Said Raba — or it may be R. Joshua b. Levi: What is the Scriptural warrant for this? — Because it is written, With trumpets and the sound of the shofar shout ye before the king, the Lord:²⁴ before the king, the Lord,²⁵ we require trumpets and the sound of the shofar, but elsewhere not.

THE JUBILEE IS ON A PAR WITH THE NEW YEAR FOR BLOWING THE HORN AND FOR BLESSINGS. R. Samuel b. Isaac asked: What authority do we follow in saying nowadays [on New Year] the prayer, 'This day is the beginning of thy works, the commemoration of the first day'?²⁶ What authority? R. Eliezer, who said that the world was created in Tishri. R. 'Ena raised an objection [against this view]: [It is stated], THE JUBILEE IS ON A PAR WITH THE NEW YEAR FOR BLOWING THE TRUMPET AND FOR BLESSINGS. [Now how can this be on your view] seeing that there is [the prayer], 'This day is the beginning of thy works, the commemoration of the first day'?²⁷ — The statement of the Mishnah refers to the other [features]. R. Shisha the son of R. Idi reported the discussion thus. 'R. Samuel b. Isaac said: This statement of our Mishnah, THE JUBILEE IS ON A PAR WITH THE NEW YEAR FOR BLOWING THE HORN AND FOR BLESSINGS. — which authority does it follow? Not that of R. Eliezer. For if you were to say it follows R. Eliezer, seeing that he holds that the world was created in Tishri, what would you make of "This day is the commencement of thy works, the commemoration of the first day", which is said on New Year and is not said on the Jubilee? — [The answer is that] the Mishnah speaks only of the other [features]'.

MISHNAH. A SHOFAR WHICH HAS BEEN SPLIT AND STUCK TOGETHER IS NOT VALID.²⁸ IF FRAGMENTS OF SHOFARS

ARE STUCK TOGETHER [TO MAKE ONE], IT IS NOT VALID.

 - (4) In the version of the Ten Commandments in Ex. XX, the fourth commandment commences with the words Remember the Sabbath day, whereas in Deut. V it commences with 'Observe'; and the Rabbis explain the discrepancy in this way.
 - (5) Seeing that in this case he hears distinctly only the end of the shofar blast, after the trumpets have ceased.
 - (6) This is a quotation from the Mishnah on 33b, where an explanation will be found in the notes.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 27b

IF A HOLE IN A SHOFAR HAS BEEN STOPPED UP, IF IT INTERFERES WITH THE BLOWING IT IS NOT VALID, BUT OTHERWISE IT IS VALID.¹ IF ONE BLOWS INTO A PIT OR A CISTERN² OR A BARREL, IF HE CAN HEAR THE SOUND OF THE SHOFAR [PURE] HE HAS PERFORMED HIS DUTY, BUT IF HE HEARS THE ECHO [ALSO], HE HAS NOT PERFORMED HIS DUTY. SIMILARLY IF ONE WAS PASSING BEHIND A SYNAGOGUE OR IF HIS HOUSE WAS ADJOINING THE SYNAGOGUE AND HE HEARD THE SOUND OF THE SHOFAR OR OF THE MEGILLAH³ [BEING READ], IF HE LISTENS WITH ATTENTION⁴ HE PERFORMS THE RELIGIOUS PRECEPT [BY SO HEARING], BUT OTHERWISE HE DOES NOT; ALTHOUGH ONE HEARS EQUALLY WITH THE OTHER, [YET THERE IS A DIFFERENCE, BECAUSE] THE ONE LISTENED WITH ATTENTION WHILE THE OTHER DID NOT LISTEN WITH ATTENTION.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: 'If the horn was too long and it has been shortened, it is valid. If it has been scraped till it becomes thin like a wafer,⁵ it is valid. If it is overlaid at the spot where the mouth is applied, it is not valid, if not at the spot where the mouth is applied,⁶ it is valid. If it is overlaid with gold on the inside, it is not valid,⁷ if on the outside, if the sound is thereby changed from what it was before, it is not valid, but otherwise it is valid. If it had a hole which has been stopped up, if this interferes with the blast it is not valid, but otherwise it is valid.⁸ If one shofar is put inside another shofar, if one can hear the sound of the inner one he thereby performs his religious duty, but if he hears the sound of the outer one he does not thereby perform his religious duty.⁹

Our Rabbis taught: If it was scraped whether on the inside or the outside, it is valid. If it was scraped till it became [thin like] a wafer, it is valid. If one shofar is placed within another, if one hears the sound of the inner one he thereby performs his religious duty, but if he hears the sound of the outer one he does not thereby perform his religious duty. If he turns it inside out¹⁰ and blows it, he does not thereby perform his religious duty. Said R. Papa: Do not take this to mean [merely], 'if he turned it inside out like a coat', but even if he widened the narrow part and narrowed the wide part. What is the reason? — As stated by R. Mattenah; for R. Mattenah said: And thou shalt carry along:¹¹ we require [the horn to be] of the shape in which it is carried along.¹²

Our Rabbis taught: 'If the least quantity is added to it whether of its own material or of another material, it is not valid. If there was a hole in it and it is stopped up, whether with its own material or another material, it is not valid. R. Nathan, however, says, if with its own material it is valid, but if with another material it is not valid'.¹³ 'If with its own material it is valid': Said R. Johanan: This is the case only if the greater part of the original is left. From this we infer that if it is stopped with another material, even though the greater part of the original was left it may not be used. Some attach R. Johanan's remark to the latter clause: 'If with another material it is not valid': Said R. Johanan: This is the case only if the greater part of the original was removed. From this we infer that if the stoppage is made with the same material, even though the greater part of the original is gone it is valid.¹⁴ 'If it was overlaid with gold on the inside it is not valid, if on the outside, if its sound becomes different from what it was before, it is not valid, but otherwise it is valid. If it is split lengthwise it is not valid, but if breadthwise, if enough is left to produce a blast it is valid, but otherwise it is not valid.'¹⁵ How much is enough to produce a blast? — R. Simeon b. Gamaliel explained: Enough to allow of it being held in the hand and leaving something showing on either side. 'If its sound is thin or thick or dry, it is valid, since all sounds emitted by a shofar can pass muster',¹⁶

They sent to inform the father of Samuel: If one pierced it [the horn] and blew with it, he has performed his religious duty. Is not this obvious? All shofars are pierced!¹⁷ — R. Ashi explained: [It means], if he pierced the inset bone.¹⁸ You might think that although it is of the same material it makes a partition; we are therefore told [that this is not so].

IF ONE BLOWS INTO A PIT OR A CISTERN etc. R. Huna said: This rule applies only to those standing on the edge of the pit, but those standing in the pit perform their religious duty thereby. It has been taught to the same effect: 'If one blows into a pit or a cistern, he performs his religious duty'. But have we not learnt, HE DOES NOT PERFORM HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY? You must therefore understand it in the sense of R. Huna's dictum. Some put the two statements in opposition, [thus]: We have learnt, IF ONE BLOWS INTO A PIT OR A CISTERN HE DOES NOT PERFORM HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY. But has it not been taught, 'He does perform his religious duty'? — R. Huna replied: There is no contradiction; the one statement speaks of those standing on the edge of the pit, the other of those standing in the pit.

Rabbah¹⁹ said:

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 28a

If one heard part of the blast in the pit and part of the blast on the edge of the pit,¹ he has performed his religious duty. If he heard part of the blast before the dawn² and part of the blast after dawn he has not performed his religious duty. Said Abaye to him: Why this difference? Because in the latter case we require the whole of the blast [which he hears] to be obligatory and this requirement is not fulfilled?³ In the former case also we require the whole of the blast to be obligatory, and this requirement is not fulfilled!⁴ — Are the two cases parallel? In the latter, night is a time to which the obligation does not apply at all, but in the former, the pit is a place to which the obligation does apply for those who are in the pit.⁵

I infer from this that Rabbah was of opinion that if one heard the end of a blast without the beginning he has performed his religious duty,⁶ and that from this it follows that if he heard the beginning without the end, he has likewise performed his religious duty. Come now and hear [an objection to this]: ‘If one blew a teki’ah at the beginning [of the series] and prolonged the second one so as to be equal to two, it still counts as only one’. Why should this be? Let it be counted as divided into two? — We do not divide teki’ahs.⁷ Come and hear [another objection]: ‘If one blows into a pit or a cistern or a barrel, if he hears the sound of the shofar [pure] he has performed his religious duty, but if he hears the echo he has not performed his religious duty’. Why should this be? Let him have performed his religious duty with the beginning of the blast, before the sound is confused [with the echo?] — Rabbah was speaking of one who blows [for himself] and as he blows steps out of the pit.⁸ If that is so, what is the point of his remark?⁹ — You might argue that sometimes he puts his head out while the shofar is still in the pit and so the sound is confused. We are therefore told [that this makes no difference].

Rab Judah said: One should not blow with a shofar taken from a burnt-offering,¹⁰ but if he did so¹¹ he has performed his religious duty. One should not blow with a shofar taken from a peace-offering, and if he did so he has not performed his religious duty. What is the reason? A burnt-offering is subject to the rule of trespass,¹² and once trespass has been committed with it, it becomes unhallowed. Peace-offerings, on the other hand, not being subject to the rule of trespass,¹³ are still saddled with their prohibition,¹⁴ (and do not become unhallowed).¹⁵ Raba strongly demurred to this. When [he said], is the trespass committed? After he has blown; but when he blows, he does so with something prohibited.¹⁶ No, said Raba: alike in one case and the other, he has not performed his religious duty. Later, however, he said: Alike in one case and in the other he has performed his religious duty, because religious precepts are not meant to provide physical enjoyment.¹⁷

Rab Judah said: One should not blow with a shofar which has been used for idolatrous purposes,¹⁸ but if he does so, he has performed his religious duty.¹⁹ One should not blow with a shofar from a devoted city,²⁰ and if he does so he has not performed his religious duty. What is the reason? In a devoted city nothing is [presumably] left of proper size.²¹

Raba said: If one is interdicted by vow to have any benefit²² from his neighbour, the other may yet perform the ritual blowing of the shofar for him.²³ One, too, who is interdicted by vow to have any enjoyment from a shofar may yet perform with it the ritual blowing. Raba further said: If one is interdicted by vow to have any benefit from his neighbour, the other may yet sprinkle on him the water of the sin-offering²⁴ in the rainy season, but not in the summer time. One who has vowed to have no enjoyment from a fountain may take a ritual bath in it in the rainy season²⁵ but not in the summer time.

They sent to inform the father of Samuel: If a man is compelled by force to eat unleavened bread [on Passover], he thereby performs his religious duty.²⁶ Compelled by whom? Shall I say, by an evil spirit? But has it not been taught, ‘If a man is sometimes in his sound senses and sometimes crazy, when he is in his senses he is regarded as a sane man in all particulars, and when he is crazy he is regarded as insane in all particulars’?²⁷ — R. Ashi said: [It means], if the Persians compelled him. Said Raba:²⁸ This would imply that if one blew the shofar simply to make music, he has performed his religious duty. Is not this obvious?²⁹ This is just what has been said!³⁰ — You might argue that in the previous case the All-Merciful has prescribed that unleavened bread should be eaten, and he has eaten³¹

(1) We naturally suppose this to speak of one who steps out of the pit while he hears someone else blowing in the pit.

(2) [Lit., ‘before the pillar of the dawn went up’. This is the legal dividing line between night and day.]

(3) It is obligatory to hear the shofar only by day but not by night.

, whereas in this case it is written a memorial of blowing the trumpet¹ and this man is merely amusing himself.² Therefore we are told [that this argument does not apply].

We conclude from this that in Raba's opinion religious precepts do not need to be performed with deliberate intention. The following objection was raised against this view: 'If a man was reading the [passage of the shema] in the Torah and the time of reading [the shema] arrived, if he put his mind to it, he has performed his religious duty'. Does this not mean, 'put his mind to perform his religious duty'? — No; it means, [put his mind] to read [distinctly]. To read? But he is reading! — We speak of one who is reading to correct [the scroll].³

Come and hear: 'IF HE WAS PASSING BEHIND THE SYNAGOGUE, OR IF HIS HOUSE WAS ADJOINING THE SYNAGOGUE, AND HE HEARD THE SOUND OF THE SHOFAR OR OF THE READING OF THE MEGILLAH, IF HE PUT HIS MIND TO IT HE THEREBY PERFORMED HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY, BUT IF NOT HE DID NOT PERFORM HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY'. Does not this mean, 'if he put his mind to perform his religious duty'? — No; [it means, if he put his mind] to hear. To hear? But he is hearing! — He may think, it is merely an ass braying. The following objection was raised against this view: 'If the hearer [of the shofar] put his mind to the act but not the performer,⁴ or the performer put his mind but not the hearer, he did not perform his religious duty; [he does not do so] until both hearer and performer put their minds to the act'. I understand the case where the performer put his mind but not the hearer, as the latter may have thought it was merely an ass braying. But that the hearer should put his mind and not the performer — how can this happen? Is it not where the latter blows merely to make music?⁵ — Perhaps [it refers to a case] where he merely [as it were] barks.⁶ Said Abaye to him:⁷ But if that is so, then one who sleeps in the Sukkah⁸ on the eighth day should be flogged?⁹ — He replied: [Not so], because I maintain that commandments cannot be transgressed [by adding to them] save in their proper season.

R. Shaman b. Abba raised the following objection against this view: 'Whence do we learn that a priest who mounts the platform¹⁰ should not say, "Because the Torah has given me permission to bless Israel, I will add a blessing of my own, as for instance, The Lord, the God of your fathers, add unto you"?¹¹ Because it says, Ye shall not add unto the word'.¹² Now here, since he has finished blessing them,¹³ the time of the precept has passed, and yet it states that he transgresses? — Here we are dealing with the case where he has not yet finished the blessings. But the statement runs, 'he has finished'? — That means, he has finished one blessing.¹⁴ But it states, 'he finished all his blessings'? — There is a special reason in this case; seeing that, if he comes across another congregation, he may bless again, the whole day is reckoned as the proper time.¹⁵ But what is your ground for saying so? — Because we have learnt: If blood which has to be sprinkled [on the altar] once¹⁶ has been mixed with other blood which had to be sprinkled once, the whole should be sprinkled once. If blood which has to be sprinkled four times¹⁷ has been mixed with other blood which has to be sprinkled four times, the whole must be sprinkled four times. If blood which has to be sprinkled four times is mixed with blood which has to be sprinkled once, R. Eleazar says the whole should be sprinkled four times. R. Joshua says it should be sprinkled once. Said R. Eleazar to him: By doing so he transgresses the precept of 'thou shalt not diminish'.¹⁸ To which R. Joshua retorted, By doing your way, he transgresses the precept of thou shalt not add.¹⁹ Said R. Eleazar to him: The precept 'thou shalt not add' applies only when the act is repeated on the same subject.²⁰ To which R. Joshua replied: The precept 'thou shalt not diminish' applies only where the act is withheld from the same subject.²⁰ R. Joshua said further to him: If you do not sprinkle [four times], you transgress the rule of 'thou shalt not diminish', but you do not perform any positive action,²¹ When you do sprinkle, you transgress the rule of 'thou shalt not add' and you do perform a positive action.²² Now here, as soon as he has made one sprinkling for the firstborn, its time is past, and yet it says that he transgresses the precept of 'thou shalt not add'; and is not the reason for this because we say that since, if he gets hold of another firstborn he can sprinkle its blood, the whole day is reckoned its proper time? — [No.] Perhaps R. Joshua was of opinion that precepts may be transgressed even out of their proper time.²³ We argue thus.²⁴ Why does R. Shaman b. Abba leave the Mishnah and bring his objection from the Baraitha? Let him bring his objection from the Mishnah! What is the reason why he does not adduce the Mishnah? On the ground that, if he [the priest] gets hold of another firstborn he can sprinkle its blood, the whole day is its proper time. But in the case mentioned in the Baraitha also, seeing that, if he comes across another congregation he may bless again, the whole day is the proper time! What says R. Shaman b. Abba to this? — In that case [of the blood], he is bound to sprinkle;²⁵ in this case, if he likes he may bless, and if he likes he need not bless.

Raba says: For the performance of his religious duty, he does not require to put his mind to it. For transgression [by adding to the precept], he does require to put his mind. But what of the sprinkling of blood, where, according to R. Joshua, he transgresses though he does not put his mind to it?²⁶ Raba therefore [corrected himself and] said: For the performance of the religious duty he does not require to put his mind to it; for [being accounted to have committed a] transgression [by adding to the precept] if [the act is done] in proper time, he does not require to put his mind to it; if it is not done in its proper time he does require to put his mind to it.

R. Zera said to his attendant:

- (1) Lev. XXIII, 24.
- (2) Lit., 'occupying himself'. And we are told infra that one who blows merely to pass the time does not fulfil his obligation.
- (3) And only mumbles the words.
- (4) Lit., 'he who causes to hear'.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 29a

Put your mind to it and blow [the shofar] for me. I gather from this that in his opinion the performer requires to put his mind to it.¹ The following was raised in objection against this view: IF HE WAS PASSING BEHIND THE SYNAGOGUE, OR IF HIS HOUSE WAS ADJOINING THE SYNAGOGUE AND HE HEARD THE SOUND OF THE SHOFAR OR THE READING OF THE MEGILLAH, IF HE PUT HIS MIND TO IT HE THEREBY PERFORMED HIS RELIGIOUS DUTY, BUT IF NOT HE DID NOT. And if he did put his mind to it, what difference does it make [on your theory], seeing that the other [the performer] was not consciously performing for him? — We are here speaking of a congregational reader who performs consciously for all.

Come and hear: 'If the hearer put his mind to it but not the performer, or if the performer put his mind to it but not the hearer, he did not perform his religious duty; [he does not do so] until both the hearer and the performer put their mind to it'. Here he mentions the performer in the same breath with the hearer, [to indicate that] just as the hearer hears for himself, so the performer performs for himself, and [in such a case] he states that 'he did not perform his religious duty'² — There is a difference on this point between Tannaim, as it has been taught: The hearer hears for himself, and the performer performs for all and sundry.³ R. Jose said: This applies only to a congregational reader, but an ordinary individual does not perform his religious duty until both the hearer and the performer put their mind to it.

MISHNAH. [IT IS WRITTEN] AND IT CAME TO PASS, WHEN MOSES HELD UP HIS HAND THAT ISRAEL PREVAILED, ETC.⁴ NOW DID THE HANDS OF MOSES WAGE WAR OR CRUSH THE ENEMY?⁵ NOT SO; ONLY THE TEXT SIGNIFIES THAT SO LONG AS ISRAEL TURNED THEIR THOUGHTS ABOVE AND SUBJECTED THEIR HEARTS TO THEIR FATHER IN HEAVEN THEY PREVAILED, BUT OTHERWISE THEY FELL. THE SAME LESSON MAY BE TAUGHT THUS. [IT IS WRITTEN], MAKE THEE A FIERY SERPENT AND SET IT UP ON A POLE, AND IT SHALL COME TO PASS THAT EVERYONE THAT IS BITTEN, WHEN HE SEETH IT, SHALL LIVE.⁶ NOW DID THE SERPENT KILL OR DID THE SERPENT KEEP A LIVE? NO; [WHAT IT INDICATES IS THAT] WHEN ISRAEL TURNED THEIR THOUGHTS ABOVE AND SUBJECTED THEIR HEARTS TO THEIR FATHER IN HEAVEN, THEY WERE HEALED, BUT OTHERWISE THEY PINED AWAY.⁷

A DEAF-MUTE, A LUNATIC AND A MINOR CANNOT PERFORM A RELIGIOUS DUTY ON BEHALF OF A CONGREGATION.⁸ THIS IS THE GENERAL PRINCIPLE: ONE WHO IS NOT HIMSELF UNDER OBLIGATION TO PERFORM A RELIGIOUS DUTY CANNOT PERFORM IT ON BEHALF OF A CONGREGATION.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: 'All [males] are under obligation to blow the shofar, Priests, Levites and lay Israelites, proselytes and emancipated slaves, tumtum⁹ and androgynus,¹⁰ and one who is half slave and half free.¹¹ A tumtum cannot perform [a religious duty] either for a fellow-tumtum or for anyone else.¹² An androgynus can perform [a religious duty] for a fellow-androgynus¹³ but nor for anyone else. One who is half a slave and half free can perform [a religious duty] neither for one in the same condition nor for anyone else'.¹⁴

The Master has here said, 'All are under obligation to blow the shofar, Priests, Levites and lay Israelites'. Is not this self-evident? If these have not the duty, who has? — This had to be stated. For you might have argued, Seeing that it is written, A day of blowing the trumpet it shall be to you,¹⁵ this obligation devolves upon those who have not to blow save on one day a year, but since these priests participate in the blowings all through the year, as it is written, And ye shall blow with your trumpets over your burnt-offerings,¹⁶ I might think that they are not bound [to observe this blowing]. Therefore we are told [that this is not so]. Is there any analogy? You cite trumpets and we speak of shofar! No; [what you must say is], This had to be stated. For I might argue that since we have learnt, 'The Jubilee is on the same footing as New Year in respect of blowing the shofar and blessings',¹⁷ those to whom the injunction of the Jubilee applies have to keep the precept of New Year, and since these priests do not come under the obligations of the Jubilee, as we have learnt, 'Priests and Levites may sell at any time and redeem at any time',¹⁸ therefore they are not bound to keep the precept of New Year. Therefore we are told [that this is not so].

'One who is half a slave and half free can perform [a religious duty] neither for one who is in the same condition nor for anyone else'. R. Huna said: He may, however, perform [the duty] for himself. Said R. Nahman to R. Huna: What is the reason why he may not perform [it] for others? Because the side of slavery [in himself] cannot perform [the duty] for the side of freedom [in others]. In regard to himself similarly, the side of slavery should not be able to perform [the duty] for the side of freedom in himself? No, said R. Nahman; he cannot perform [the duty] for himself either. It has been taught to the same effect: One who is half slave and half free cannot perform the [religious duty] even for himself.

Ahabah the son of R. Zera learnt: Any blessing which one has already recited on behalf of himself, he can recite again on behalf of others,¹⁹ save the blessing over bread and the blessing over wine.²⁰ These if he has not yet recited on behalf of himself²¹ he may recite on behalf of others,²² but if he has already recited them for himself he cannot recite them on behalf of others.²³ Raba inquired:

- (1) I.e., to perform consciously for the benefit of the hearer.
- (2) [This is difficult, v. Marginal Glosses, Bezaleel Ronsburg. Read with MS.M.: ‘and it states (in such a case, i.e., where the performer performs for himself provided the hearer puts his mind to it) he performed his duty.]
- (3) Lit., ‘according to his way’; i.e., he need not consciously perform for the benefit of the listener.
- (4) Ex. XVII, 11.
- (5) Lit., ‘break war’.
- (6) Num. XXI, 8.
- (7) This disquisition in the Mishnah is suggested by the references above to ‘religious intention’ (v. Maharsha).
- (8) Lit., ‘cannot take the public out of the power of their obligation’.
- (9) One of uncertain sex.
- (10) A hermaphrodite.
- (11) E.g., a slave of two masters, one of whom has released him.
- (12) Because possibly the tumtum is a female and as no obligation. Lit., ‘either for his own species or not for his own species’.
- (13) In virtue of the male part common to both of them.
- (14) As the slave side of the performer cannot delegate for the free side of the hearer.
- (15) Num. XXIX, 1.
- (16) Ibid. X, 10.
- (17) V. supra 26b.
- (18) ‘Ar. 33b. A better reading is, ‘may sanctify at any time and redeem etc’. (v. Tosaf. s.v. דַּתְנִי), the reference being to the right of a priest or Levite to sanctify or redeem at any time a field even if it has been sold by the treasurer of the sanctuary, which was not permissible to a lay Israelite; v. ‘Ar. 26b and 33b.
- (19) Lit., ‘in respect of all other blessings, though he emerged from his responsibility, he can bring (others) forth’. The blessings referred to are those said over the performance of religious precepts, and the reason is that all Israelites are responsible for one another in regard to the performance of religious precepts.
- (20) This includes blessings over food and scents generally, which are only said because it is forbidden to enjoy the goods of this world without a blessing, not because the partaking is a religious duty.
- (21) Lit., ‘if he does not emerge (from his responsibility)’.
- (22) Lit., ‘he brings forth (from their responsibility)’.
- (23) Because, as there is no religious duty involved, he is not responsible for their partaking.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 29b

What is the rule with regard to the blessing for bread said over the mazzah and the blessing for wine said in the sanctification?¹ Do we say that since [the partaking of these] is obligatory, he can perform [the duty] for others, or have we here perhaps only an [optional] blessing, not an obligation?² — Come and hear, since R. Ashi said: When we were at the house of R. Papi, he used to say the sanctification for us, and when his tenants came from the fields he used to make the sanctification for them.³

Our Rabbis taught: A man should not break bread⁴ for visitors unless he eats with them, but he may break bread for his children and the members of his household so as to train them in the performance of religious duties. In the reciting of [the blessing over] Hallel and the Megillah, even though he has already performed [the duty] for himself, he may perform it for others.

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. IF THE FESTIVE DAY OF NEW YEAR FELL ON A SABBATH, THEY USED TO BLOW THE SHOFAR IN THE TEMPLE BUT NOT IN THE COUNTRY:⁵ AFTER THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE, RABBAN JOHANAN BEN ZACCAI ORDAINED THAT IT SHOULD BE BLOWN [ON SABBATH] IN EVERY PLACE WHERE THERE WAS A BETH DIN. R. ELIEZER SAID: RABBAN JOHANAN BEN ZACCAI LAID DOWN THIS RULE FOR

JABNEH ONLY.⁶ THEY SAID TO HIM: IT APPLIES EQUALLY TO JABNEH AND TO ANY PLACE WHERE THERE IS A BETH DIN. JERUSALEM HAD THIS FURTHER⁷ SUPERIORITY OVER JABNEH, THAT IN EVERY CITY FROM WHICH IT COULD BE SEEN OR HEARD AND WHICH WAS NEAR AND FROM WHICH IT WAS ACCESSIBLE THEY USED TO BLOW [ON SABBATH],⁸ WHEREAS IN JABNEH THEY USED TO BLOW IN THE BETH DIN ONLY.⁹

GEMARA. Whence [in the Scripture] is this rule¹⁰ derived? — R. Levi b. Lahma said: One verse says, a solemn rest, a memorial of blast of horns,¹¹ while another verse says, it is a day of blowing the horn unto you!¹² [Yet] there is no contradiction, as one refers to a festival which falls on Sabbath¹³ and the other to a festival which falls on a weekday. Raba said: If the prohibition [on Sabbath] is from the Written Law, how comes the shofar to be blown in the Temple? And besides, [the blowing] is no work¹⁴ that a text should be needed to except it.¹⁵ For it was taught in the school of Samuel:¹⁶ [When it says], Ye shall do no servile work [on New Year],¹⁷ this excludes the blowing of the shofar and the taking of bread from the oven,¹⁸ these being kinds of skill and not work! — No, said Raba. According to the Written Law it is allowed, and it is the Rabbis who prohibited it as a precaution; as stated by Rabbah; for Rabbah said, All are under obligation to blow the shofar but not all are skilled in the blowing of the shofar. [Hence] there is a danger that perhaps one will take it in his hand [on Sabbath] and go to an expert to learn and carry it four cubits in public domain.¹⁹ The same reason applies to the lulab and the same reason to the Megillah.²⁰

AFTER THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE RABBAN JOHANAN BEN ZACCAI ORDAINED etc. Our Rabbis taught: Once New Year fell on a Sabbath [and all the towns assembled],²¹ and Rabban Johanan said to the Bene Bathyra,²² Let us blow the shofar. They said to him, Let us discuss the matter.²³ He said to them, Let us blow and afterwards discuss. After they had blown they said to him, Let us now discuss the question. He replied: The horn has already been heard in Jabneh, and what has been done is no longer open to discussion.²⁴

R. ELIEZER SAID: RABBAN JOHANAN BEN ZACCAI LAID DOWN THIS RULE FOR JABNEH ONLY. THEY SAID TO HIM: IT APPLIES EQUALLY TO JABNEH AND TO ANY PLACE WHERE THERE IS A BETH DIN. [What] THEY SAID TO HIM is the same as the dictum of the first Tanna?²⁵ — There is a difference between them, namely, in the case of a temporary Beth din.²⁶

THEY SAID TO HIM: IT APPLIES EQUALLY TO JABNEH AND TO ANY PLACE WHERE THERE IS A BETH DIN. R. Huna said

(1) The eating of unleavened bread on the first night of Passover and the sanctification of Sabbaths are religious duties and as such have to be prefaced with blessings. In addition, the ordinary blessing is said over the mazzah and the wine as articles of physical enjoyment. Raba's question relates to these latter blessings.

(2) I.e., is the blessing on this occasion on a par with the blessing on other occasions when the partaking is optional?

(3) This would show that in this case the one who recites the blessing over bread and wine, though he had already recited it for himself, can recite it again for others.

(4) I.e., recite the blessing.

(5) Including Jerusalem (Rashi). [Maim.: excluding Jerusalem].

(6) Where there was a 'Great Beth din' or Sanhedrin of seventy-two members. [A small town on the N.W. border of Judah, the Jabneel of Josh. XV, 11. It was a seat of learning as early as the days of R. Gamaliel the Elder. At the request of R. Johanan b. Zaccai it was spared by Vespasian at the time of the destruction of the Temple. when the Great Sanhedrin removed there and was presided over by R. Johanan b. Zaccai.]

(7) The meaning of this expression is discussed in the Gemara.

(8) After the destruction of the Temple.

(9) And not in the surrounding towns.

- (25) That R. Johanan b. Zaccai ordained that the shofar should be blown on Sabbath wherever there was a Beth din.
- (26) The latter authority requires that the Beth din should be a permanent one like that of Jabneh.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 30a

, [The shofar on Sabbath is blown only] with the Beth din. What is meant by 'with the Beth din'? — In the presence of the Beth din, [and he means] to except [from the permission] any blowing [on Sabbath] not in the presence of the Beth din.

Raba raised the following objection against this view: JERUSALEM HAD THIS FURTHER SUPERIORITY OVER JABNEH etc. What does THIS FURTHER imply? Shall I say that [the text] is to be taken as it stands?¹ Then it should have said THIS simply!² Again, should it imply that in Jerusalem private individuals used to blow and in Jabneh private individuals did not blow, [I would ask,] but did not private individuals blow in Jabneh? When R. Isaac b. Joseph came, did he not report that when the congregational reader had finished blowing in Jabneh, a man could not hear his own voice³ for the noise of the blowing [of individuals]?⁴ What then must be said is that in Jerusalem the shofar was blown whether during the hours when the Beth din sat⁵ or the hours when they did not sit, but in Jabneh it was blown during the hours when they sat but not when they did not sit. You admit then that during the hours when the Beth din sat at any rate they blew away from the Beth din?⁶ — No; [what it implies⁷ is that] in Jerusalem they blew whether in the presence of the Beth din or not in their presence, but in Jabneh they did blow in the presence of the Beth din, but otherwise not.

Some attach R. Huna's dictum to [the exposition of] the text, On the day of Atonement ye shall cause a shofar to pass through all your land,⁸ [thus]: This teaches that every individual is under obligation to blow. R. Huna said: It must be with the Beth din. What is meant by 'with the Beth din'? At the time when the Beth din sits,⁹ to exclude [from the permission] the time when the Beth din does not sit. Raba raised the following objection: The blowing of the shofar on New Year and Jubilee overrides Sabbath in the country¹⁰ [for] a man and his house. What is meant by 'a man and his house'? Shall I say it means a man and his wife? Has then a woman to perform this duty, seeing that it is a duty for which there is a specific time,¹¹ and women are not liable to perform any duties for which there is a specific time? What it therefore must mean is, every man in this house', and even [I presume] during the hours when the Beth din does not sit? — No; it means in fact during the hours when the Beth din does sit.

R. Shesheth raised the following objection [against this view]: 'The Jubilee is on the same footing as New Year for blowing the shofar and for blessings, only on the Jubilee they blew [on Sabbath] alike in a Beth din in which the New Moon had been sanctified and in a Beth din in which the New Moon had not been sanctified, and every individual was under obligation to blow, whereas on New Year they blew only in a Beth din in which the New Moon had been sanctified and private individuals were not under obligation to blow'. What is meant by 'private individuals were not under obligation to blow'? Shall I say that on the Jubilee individuals used to blow a shofar and on New Year individuals did not blow? [This cannot be], because when R. Isaac b. Joseph came he said that when the congregational reader in Jabneh finished blowing a man could not hear his own voice for the noise [of the blowings] of individuals. It must mean then that on the Jubilee they blow both during the hours when the Beth din sits and also when the Beth din does not sit, but on New Year they blow when the Beth din sits but not when the Beth din does not sit. Now it states here at any rate that on the Jubilee [it is blown] whether when the Beth din is sitting or when it is not sitting?¹² — No; what indeed is meant is, when the Beth din sits, and the statement should be understood thus: On the Jubilee [it is blown] during the hours when the Beth din sits whether in the presence of the Beth din or not in the presence of the Beth din; but on New Year it is blown only when the Beth din sits and in the presence of the Beth din. It has also been stated [elsewhere]: R. Hiyya b. Gamda said in the name of R. Jose b. Saul, who had it from Rabbi: The shofar is blown only during the hours that the Beth din sits.

R. Zera inquired: If they have made ready¹³ to rise, what is the rule? Is it necessary that the Beth din should be still seated, and this condition is fulfilled, or is it necessary that it should be during the sitting of the Beth din, and this condition is not fulfilled? — This question is left undecided.

JERUSALEM HAD THIS FURTHER SUPERIORITY OVER JABNEH etc. FROM WHICH IT COULD BE SEEN: this excludes one situated in a valley. OR HEARD: this excludes one situated on the top of a mountain. OR NEAR: this excludes one situated beyond the Sabbath limit.¹⁴ OR FROM WHICH IT WAS ACCESSIBLE: this excludes one separated from it by a river.

MISHNAH. ORIGINALLY THE LULAB WAS SHAKEN¹⁵ IN THE SANCTUARY DURING SEVEN DAYS AND IN THE COUNTRY ONLY ONE DAY.¹⁶ WHEN THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED RABBAN JOHANNAN B. ZACCAI ORDAINED THAT THE LULAB SHOULD BE SHAKEN IN THE COUNTRY SEVEN DAYS, IN REMEMBRANCE OF THE SANCTUARY. [HE] ALSO [ORDAINED] THAT DURING

THE WHOLE OF THE DAY OF THE WAVING [OF THE 'OMER]¹⁷ THE NEW CORN SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN.

GEMARA. What is our warrant for doing things in remembrance of the Temple? — Because the Scripture says, For I will restore health unto thee and I will heal thee of thy wound, saith the Lord, because they have called thee an outcast, 'she is Zion, there is none that inquireth after her'.¹⁸ From this we gather that she ought to be inquired after.

THAT THE WHOLE OF THE DAY OF WAVING THE 'OMER THE NEW CORN SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN. What is the reason? — The Temple, [let us hope], will speedily be rebuilt, and [the Jews] will [then] say, 'Last year did we not eat [the new corn] from daybreak?¹⁹ Now too let us eat', they not knowing that last year when there was no [waving of the] 'omer it was daybreak which rendered the new corn permissible, but now that there is the 'omer it is the 'omer which renders it permissible. When [are we supposing] it will be built? Shall I say it will be built on the sixteenth [of Nisan]? Then daybreak [of the sixteenth] will render the new corn permissible.²⁰ Shall I say then that it will be built on the fifteenth?²¹ Then let [the new corn] become Permissible from midday [on the sixteenth], since we have learnt: 'Those who are at a distance [from the Temple] are allowed to eat [the new corn] from midday, because the Beth din do not procrastinate [with the 'omer]'²² -The rule is necessary in case the Temple will be built on the fifteenth shortly before sunset,²³ or also in case it will be built by night.²⁴

R. Nahman b. Isaac [however] said: Rabban Johanan b. Zaccai

- (2) Because no superiority has so far been mentioned.
- (3) Lit., 'ears'. [MS.M.: voice in his ears'.]
- (4) In the text the words 'of individuals' are in brackets.
- (5) I.e., till six hours (midday) — Rashi.
- (6) Which refutes R. Huna's statement that in Jabneh the permission to blow on Sabbath was only in the presence of the Beth dill.
- (7) As to the superiority of Jerusalem.

- (10) Lit., 'the borders', i.e., outside the Sanctuary.
- (11) Lit., 'which time causes (its observance)'.]
- (12) Which is contrary to the opinion of R. Huna as explained above.
- (13) Lit., 'shaken themselves'.
- (14) I.e., more than two thousand cubits from the wall of Jerusalem.
- (15) Lit., 'taken', 'lifted up'. On lulab v. Glos.

- (17) I.e., the sixteenth of Nisan; v. Glos. s.V.
- (18) Jer. XXX, 17.
- (19) The text says, Ye shall not eat bread . . . until this selfsame day, until ye have brought the offering (of the 'omer). — Lev. XXIII, 14. The Rabbis learn from this (Men. 68), that when the 'omer is brought the new corn may be eaten as soon as it is brought, and when it is not brought the new corn may be eaten from daybreak on the sixteenth of Nisan.
- (20) The Temple not yet having been built.
- (21) [I.e., it will have been built by the fifteenth so that there would be time to make all the preparation necessary for the offering of the 'omer v. Rashi Suk. 41a.]
- (22) And it may be safely assumed that they have brought it by midday.
- (23) [The law that the building of the Temple does not override the Sabbath (v. Sheb. 15b) does not apply to the future Temple which will be wrought by the hands of Heaven (Rashi). MS.M. (v. also Tosaf. Suk. 41a S.V. י) omit fifteenth, the reference being to the fourteenth day before sunset when there would not be ample time to provide for many of the preliminaries to the offering of the 'omer, which had to be attended to on the eve of the Festival (v. Men. 65a).]
- (24) And in such a case there will not be time to bring the 'omer by midday, and if the Jews should eat the new corn then they will transgress.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 30b

based his rule on the view enunciated [later] by R. Judah, who said: [Ye shall neither eat bread . . .] until this selfsame day:¹ this means, until the termination² of the day, and he was of the opinion that the expression 'until' is inclusive [of its object]. But did Rabban Johanan concur with him [R. Judah]? Did he not join issue with him, as we have learnt:³ 'When the Temple was destroyed, Rabban Johanan b. Zaccai ordained that during the whole of the day of waving the 'omer the new corn should be forbidden. Said R. Judah: Is it not forbidden from the Torah, [as it is written, until this selfsame day]?⁴ — On that occasion it was R. Judah who made a mistake. He thought that Rabban Johanan b. Zaccai declared it only Rabbinically forbidden, but this is not the case: he declared it forbidden from the Pentateuch. But it is stated that 'he ordained'?⁵ — What is meant [here] by 'ordained'? It means, he expounded [the text] and ordained'.⁶

MISHNAH. ORIGINALLY THEY USED TO ACCEPT TESTIMONY WITH REGARD TO THE NEW MOON DURING THE WHOLE OF THE DAY. ON ONE OCCASION⁷ THE WITNESSES WERE LATE IN ARRIVING, AND THE LEVITES WENT WRONG IN THE DAILY HYMN.⁸ IT WAS THEREFORE ORDAINED THAT TESTIMONY SHOULD BE ACCEPTED [ON NEW YEAR] ONLY UNTIL

THE AFTERNOON SACRIFICE, AND THAT IF WITNESSES CAME AFTER THE AFTERNOON SACRIFICE THAT DAY⁹ SHOULD BE KEPT AS HOLY¹⁰ AND ALSO THE NEXT DAY. AFTER THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE RABBAN JOHANAN B. ZACCAI ORDAINED THAT TESTIMONY WITH REGARD TO THE NEW MOON SHOULD BE RECEIVED DURING THE WHOLE OF THE DAY.

GEMARA. How did the Levites go wrong in the daily Psalm?¹¹ — Here [in Babylon] it was explained that they did not say any psalm at all.¹² R. Zera, however, said that they recited the weekday psalm along with the regular sacrifice of the afternoon.¹³ Said R. Zera to Ahabah his son: Go and cite to them [the Babylonians] [the following Baraitha]: ‘They made a rule that testimony with regard to the new moon should not be received unless there was still time left to offer the regular sacrifices and the additional sacrifices and their drink-offerings and to recite the psalm without confusion’.¹⁴ Now if you hold that they said the weekday psalm, we understand how there is a possibility of confusion, but if they did not say any psalm at all, how could there be confusion? — Since they did not say a psalm at all, there could be no confusion¹⁵ greater than this.

R. Aha b. Huna raised the following objection [against this latter view]: The regular morning sacrifice on New Year is offered in the usual way.¹⁶ Over the additional sacrifice what psalm is said? [The one commencing], Sing aloud unto God our strength, make a teru'ah¹⁷ unto the God of Jacob.¹⁸ At the afternoon sacrifice what did they say? [The psalm containing the words], The voice of the Lord shaketh the wilderness.¹⁹ When New Year fell on a Thursday, for which the regular psalm is ‘Sing aloud unto God our strength’,²⁰ they did not say ‘Sing aloud’ at the morning service because the same section was afterwards repeated. What then did they say? I removed his shoulder from the burden.²¹ If, however, witnesses came after the regular morning sacrifice,²² they said ‘Sing aloud’, although the verse might afterwards have to be repeated’. Now if you hold that wherever there is a doubt we say the weekday psalm, we understand the statement here that ‘it might be repeated’. But if you hold that they said no psalm at all, what is meant by repeating it? —

(1) Lev. XXIII, 14.

(2) Heb. עצמו של יום lit., ‘the very self of the day’.

(3) Men. 68b.

(4) These words in the text are bracketed.

(5) Heb. התקין a term usually applied to ordinances of the Rabbis not derived from the written text.

(6) That henceforth they should be forbidden to eat the new corn the whole of the sixteenth, this being an injunction of the Scripture.

(7) On the occasion of a New Year (Rashi).

(8) The meaning of this is discussed infra in the Gemara.

(9) I.e., the thirtieth day of the month.

(10) In point of fact it had already been kept as holy from the previous sunset, out of doubt. The rest of it was now to be kept as holy, although the New Moon would not be sanctified till to-morrow, the thirty-first day, which naturally would also be holy. The reason why the rest of the thirtieth day was declared holy was as a precaution lest, if the public were allowed to keep this part as a weekday, they might in future years keep the whole day as a weekday on the assumption that after all the witnesses would not come, or not come till late (Rashi).

(11) Lit., ‘song’. It was the custom for the Levites to chant a psalm while the drink-offering accompanying the daily sacrifices was being offered, as explained in the Gemara infra.

(12) Being in doubt whether to recite the festival psalm or that of the weekday, V. infra.

- (13) Whereas, since the day was eventually declared holy, they should have recited the festival psalm. [No special psalm was instituted to be recited in connection with the morning sacrifice on New Year as witnesses rarely came so early.]
- (14) The Hebrew word is שִׁבּוּשׁ which R. Zera apparently understands in the sense of 'gabbling'.
- (15) The word שִׁבּוּשׁ being taken in the sense of 'error'.
- (16) I.e., it is accompanied by the weekday psalm, v. p. 144, n. 5.
- (17) E.V. 'shout'.
- (18) Ps. LXXXI, 2. The words 'make a teru'ah' were of course appropriate to the day of teru'ah, — New Year.
- (19) Ps. XXIX, 8. This verse is reminiscent of the shofar blown at the giving of the Law.
- (20) V. infra, in the list of the daily psalms.
- (21) Ps. LXXXI, 7. This verse was said because it refers to Joseph who was supposed to have been liberated on New Year (v. supra 11a). Apparently the latter half of this psalm was said with the morning sacrifice and the first half with the additional sacrifice.
- (22) So that at the time of the sacrifice they did not yet know if the day would be holy.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 31a

There the case is different, because it is the psalm of the day.¹

It has been taught: 'R. Judah said in the name of R. Akiba: On the first day [of the week] what [psalm] did they [the Levites] say? [The one commencing] The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof,² because He took possession and gave possession³ and was [sole] ruler in His universe.⁴ On the second day what did they say? [The one commencing], Great is the Lord and highly to be praised,⁵ because he divided His works⁶ and reigned over them like a king.⁷ On the third day they said, God standeth in the congregation of God,⁸ because He revealed the earth in His wisdom and established the world for His community.⁹ On the fourth day they said, O Lord, Thou God, to whom vengeance belongeth,¹⁰ because He created the sun and the moon and will one day punish those who serve them. On the fifth day they said, Sing aloud to the God of our strength,¹¹ because He created fishes and birds to praise His name.¹² On the sixth day they said, The Lord reigneth, He is clothed in majesty,¹³ because He completed His work and reigned over His creatures. On the seventh day they said, A psalm a song for the Sabbath day,¹⁴ to wit, for the day which will be all Sabbath.¹⁵ Said R. Nehemiah: What ground had the Sages¹⁶ for making a difference between these sections?¹⁷ No. On the first day [the reason for the psalm said is] because He took possession and gave possession and was [sole] ruler in His world; on the second day because He divided and ruled over them; on the third day because He revealed the earth in His wisdom and established the world for His community; on the fourth day, because He created the sun and the moon and will one day punish those who serve them; on the fifth day because He created birds and fishes to praise His name; on the sixth day because He completed His work and reigned over His creatures; on the seventh day, because He rested. The point at issue between them¹⁸ is whether to accept or not the dictum of R. Kattina; for R. Kattina said: The world is to last six thousand years, and one thousand it will be desolate, as it says, And the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.¹⁹ Abaye, however, said: It will be desolate two thousand, as it says, After two days He will revive us.²⁰

At the additional sacrifice of Sabbath what did they say? — R. Anan²¹ b. Raba said in the name of Rab: Hazyw Lak.²² R. Hanan b. Raba said also in the name of Rab: As these sections are divided here, so they are divided [when read on Sabbath] in the synagogue.²³ At the afternoon sacrifice of Sabbath what did they say? — R. Johanan said: Then sang,²⁴ and Who is like thee,²⁵ and Then sang.²⁶

The question was raised: Were all these portions said on each Sabbath, or was only one said on every Sabbath? — Come and hear, since it has been taught: 'R. Jose said: By the time the first of these sections²⁷ has come round once, the second has come round twice'.²⁸ This shows that each Sabbath one portion was said: and this may be taken as proved.

R. Judah b. Idi said in the name of R. Johanan: The Divine Presence [so to speak] left Israel by ten stages²⁹ — this we know from references in Scripture — and the Sanhedrin correspondingly wandered to ten places of banishment³⁰ — this we know from tradition. ‘The Divine Presence left Israel by ten stages — this we know from references in Scripture’: [it went] from the Ark-cover to the Cherub³¹ and from the Cherub to the threshold [of the Holy of Holies], and from the threshold to the court, and from the court to the altar,³² and from the altar to the roof [of the Temple], and from the roof to the wall, and from the wall to the town, and from the town to the mountain, and from the mountain to the wilderness, and from the wilderness it ascended and abode in its own place,³³ as it says, I will go and return to my place.³⁴ ‘From the Ark-cover to the Cherub³⁵ and from the Cherub to the threshold’, as it is written, And there will I meet with thee . . . from above the ark-cover,³⁶ and it is written, And the glory of the Lord was gone up from the cherub whereupon it was to the threshold of the house.³⁷ ‘And from the threshold to the court’, as it is written, And the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was full of the brightness of the Lord's glory,³⁸ ‘From the court to the altar’, as it is written, I saw the Lord standing on the altar.³⁹ ‘And from the altar to the roof’, as it is written, It is better to dwell it, a corner of the housetop [than in a house in common with a contentious woman].⁴⁰ ‘From the roof to the wall’, as it is written, Behold, the Lord stood by a wall made by a plumbline.⁴¹ ‘From the wall to the town’, as it is written, The voice of the Lord crieth unto the city.⁴² ‘And from the city to the mountain’, as it is written, And the glory of the Lord went up from the midst of the city and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.⁴³ ‘And from the mountain to the wilderness as it is written, It is better to dwell in a desert land [than with a contentious woman].⁴⁴ ‘And from the wilderness it went and abode in its own place’, as it is written, I shall go and return to my place until they acknowledge their guilt.⁴⁵

R. Johanan said: The Divine Presence tarried for Israel in the wilderness six months in the hope that they would repent. When [it saw that] they did not repent, it said, Let their soul expire, as it says, But the eyes of the wicked shall fail and they shall have no way to flee and their hope shall be the expiry of the soul.⁴⁶

‘Correspondingly the Sanhedrin wandered to ten places of banishment, as we know from tradition’, namely, from the Chamber of Hewn Stone⁴⁷ to Hanuth,⁴⁸ and from Hanuth to Jerusalem, and from Jerusalem to Jabneh,⁴⁹

Eleazar says: There were six banishments, as it says, For he hath brought down them that dwell on high, the lofty city, laying it low, laying it low even to the ground, bringing it even to the dust.⁶ Said R. Johanan: And from there they are

MISHNAH. R. JOSHUA B. KORHA SAID: THIS FURTHER

REGULATION DID R. JOHANAN B. ZACCAI MAKE, THAT SHOULD THE HEAD OF THE BETH DIN BE IN SOME OTHER PLACE THE WITNESSES SHOULD STILL PROCEED ONLY TO THE PLACE OF THE ASSEMBLY.⁸

GEMARA. A certain woman was summoned to appear before Amemar in Nehardea. Meanwhile Amemar went to Mahuza, but she did not follow him. He accordingly wrote out a summons [under the penalty of the ban]⁹ against her. Said R. Ashi to Amemar: [Is this right] seeing that we have learnt: SHOULD THE HEAD OF THE BETH DIN BE IN SOME OTHER PLACE THE WITNESSES SHOULD STILL PROCEED ONLY TO THE PLACE OF THE ASSEMBLY? — He replied: This refers only to the testimony with regard to the new moon, and [the reason for it is that] if this¹⁰ [were to be insisted on], the result might be to put a stumbling block in their way for the future;¹¹ but in this case, the borrower is a servant to the lender.¹²

Our Rabbis have taught: ‘The priests are not permitted to ascend the duchan¹³ in their sandals, and this is one of the nine regulations laid down by Rabban Johanan b. Zaccai’. [What are these nine?] — Six mentioned in this chapter¹⁴ and one in the preceding chapter¹⁵ and the following one, as it has been taught: ‘One who becomes a proselyte at the present time¹⁶ must set aside a quarter¹⁷ for a nest of pigeons’.¹⁸ Said R. Simeon b. Eleazar: Rabban Johanan took a vote on it and annulled this rule, because it may lead to wrongdoing.¹⁹ As to the last,²⁰ there is a difference of opinion between R. Papa and R. Nahman b. Isaac. R. Papa said it was [the regulation] regarding a vine of the fourth year, whereas R. Nahman b. Isaac said it was the one regarding the thread²¹ of scarlet. ‘R. Papa said it was the regulation regarding the vine of the fourth year’, for we have learnt: [The fruit of] a vine in the fourth year was taken to Jerusalem from any point within a day's journey on all sides.²² The boundary of this area was as follows: Elath on the north, Akrabath on the south,²³ Lydda on the west, and Jordan on the east’. [In reference to this] ‘Ulla (or as some say, Rabbah b. ‘Ulla) said in the name of R. Johanan: What was the reason? To decorate the streets of Jerusalem with fruit.²⁴ It has been further taught: ‘R. Eliezer had a vine in its fourth year east of Lydda²⁵ at the side of Kefar Tabi, and R. Eliezer had a mind to declare it free to the poor,²⁶ but his disciples said to him, Rabbi, your colleagues have already taken a vote on it and declared it permitted’.²⁷ Who are his ‘colleagues’? — Rabban Johanan b. Zacca.

‘R. Nahman b. Isaac said it was the tongue of scarlet’, as it has been taught: ‘Originally they used to fasten the thread of scarlet on the door of the [Temple] court on the outside.²⁸ If it turned white the people used to rejoice,²⁹ and if it did not turn white they were sad. They therefore made a rule that it should be fastened to the door of the court on the inside. People, however, still peeped in and saw, and if it turned white they rejoiced and if it did not turn white they were sad. They therefore made a rule that half of it should be fastened to the rock and half between the horns of the goat that was sent [to the wilderness]’. Why did not R. Nahman b. Isaac accept the view of R. Papa? — He could reply: If you assume that it was R. Johanan b. Zaccai [who made the rule about the vine], was he the colleague of R. Eliezer? He was his teacher! [What replies] the other [to this]? — Since they were his disciples [who reported the rule to him], it was not polite of them to say to their teacher, ‘your teacher’. Why did not R. Papa accept the view of R. Nahman b. Isaac? — He could reply: If you assume It was R. Johanan b. Zaccai [who made the rule], was there in the days of R. Johanan b. Zaccai a thread of scarlet [which turned white]? Has it not been taught: ‘R. Johanan b. Zaccai lived altogether a hundred and twenty years. For forty years he was in business, forty years he studied, and forty years he taught’, and it has further been taught: ‘For forty years before the destruction of the Temple the thread of scarlet never turned white but it remained red’.³⁰ Further, the statement of the Mishnah is, ‘After the destruction of the Temple R. Johanan b. Zaccai made a rule’.³¹ [What says] the other [to this]? — During those forty years that he studied³² his status was that of a disciple sitting before his teacher, and he would offer a suggestion and make good his reasons

(1) This was in the time of Rabban Gamaliel II.

(2) The last three in the time of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel. [The Sanhedrin met at Usha mostly after the Hadrianic persecutions, and apparently ceased functioning during the reign of Verus, and re-established in Shefar'am under Marcus Aurelius; v. Horowitz, Palestine, p. 34.]

(3) The last three were in the time of Rabbi.

(4) Being on Lake Galilee below sea-level. This is a figurative way of saying that at Tiberias the authority of the Sanhedrin sank to its lowest level.

(5) Isa. XXIX, 4.

(6) Ibid. XXVI, 5. The six are (i) he hath brought down, (ii) laying it low, (iii) laying it low, (iv) even to the ground, (v) bringing it, (vi) even to the dust.

(7) Ibid. LII, 2.

(8) And the Beth din should declare the New Moon hallowed without the head, though by rights this was his privilege, v. sura 24a.

(9) Heb. פתיחה lit., 'opening' of legal proceedings.

(10) Viz., that they should go after the head.

(11) As the messengers will refrain from going to all this trouble in order to give evidence.

(12) Quoted from Prov. XXII, 7.

(13) V. Glos.

(14) Viz., (i) that the shofar should be blown on Sabbath wherever there is a Beth din, (ii) that the lulab should be taken in the provinces seven days, (iii) that new corn should be forbidden the whole of the sixteenth of Nisan, (iv) that testimony with regard to the new moon should be received the whole day, (v) that witnesses should go only to the place of assembly, (vi) and that the priests should not ascend the duchan in their sandals. [Read with R. Hananel: 'One, the one (first stated), five in this chapter'.]

(15) That the witnesses should be allowed to profane Sabbath only for Nisan and Tishri, v. supra 21b.

(16) I.e., when there is no Temple.

(17) It is not certain whether this means a quarter of a shekel (= half a denar) or a quarter of a denar. V. Tosaf. s.v. רובע .

(18) While the Temple stood a new convert had to bring a sacrifice (v. Ker. 9a), a couple of pigeons being the smallest, and after the destruction of the Temple the Rabbis still insisted on his bringing them in case the Temple should be rebuilt.

(19) Because the money set aside might be used for secular purposes.

(20) Lit., 'and the other'.

(21) Lit., tongue'. The explanation follows immediately.

(22) According to Lev. XIX, 24 fruit produced by a tree in its fourth year was to be 'holy for giving praise to the Lord' and the Rabbis interpreted this to mean that it was to be consumed in Jerusalem. If, however, the tree was not in the Jerusalem district, the money value of the fruit could be taken to Jerusalem instead of the fruit itself.

(23) [Mishnah M.Sh. V, 2 reverses: Elath on the south, Akrabath on the north. Akrabath is perhaps the modern Akrabah twenty-five miles north of Jerusalem, and Elath is identified with (a) Eleutheropolis (Horowitz, Palestine, p. 41) (b) Beth Elonim near Hebron (Klein, D.J. s.v.).]

(24) Hence all this area was put by the Rabbis under the same rule as Jerusalem itself.

(25) I.e., between Lydda and Jerusalem.

(26) So as not to have the trouble of taking it to Jerusalem.

(27) Because as there was no longer a Temple, there was no point any more in decorating the streets of Jerusalem.

(28) After the High Priest had performed the service on the Day of Atonement. V. Yoma, 67a.

(29) This being a sign that their sins had been forgiven.

(30) When then could R. Johanan have had an opportunity of making this rule?

(31) This applies presumably to all his rules and regulations.

(32) While the Temple still existed.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 32a and his teacher would make it a definite rule in his name.

MISHNAH. THE ORDER OF BLESSINGS [IN THE MUSAF 'AMIDAH¹ IS AS FOLLOWS]: [THE READER SAYS THE BLESSING OF] THE PATRIARCHS,² [THAT OF] MIGHTINESS³ AND THAT OF THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE NAME⁴ AND INCLUDES THE KINGSHIP-VERSES⁵ WITH THEM AND DOES NOT BLOW THE SHOFAR. HE THEN SAYS THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE DAY⁶ AND BLOWS, THE REMEMBRANCE-VERSES⁵ AND BLOWS, AND THE SHOFAR-VERSES⁵ AND BLOWS; AND HE THEN SAYS THE BLESSING OF THE TEMPLE SERVICE⁷ AND THE ONE OF THANKSGIVING⁸ AND THE BLESSING OF THE PRIESTS.⁹ THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. JOHANAN B. NURI. SAID R. AKIBA TO HIM: IF HE DOES NOT BLOW THE SHOFAR FOR THE KINGSHIP-VERSES, WHY SHOULD HE SAY THEM? NO; [THE RULE IS AS FOLLOWS]. HE SAYS [THE BLESSING OF] THE PATRIARCHS AND OF THE RESURRECTION AND OF THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE NAME, AND SAYS THE KINGSHIP-VERSES ALONG WITH THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE DAY AND BLOWS THE SHOFAR, THEN HE SAYS THE REMEMBRANCE-VERSES AND BLOWS, AND THE SHOFAR-VERSES AND BLOWS. THEN HE SAYS THE TEMPLE SERVICE BLESSING AND THE THANKSGIVING AND THE BLESSING OF THE PRIEST.

GEMARA. SAID R. AKIBA TO HIM, IF HE DOES NOT BLOW THE SHOFAR FOR THE KINGSHIP-VERSES, WHY DOES HE SAY THEM? [He asks], Why does he say them! But the All-Merciful enjoined that they should be said!¹⁰ — What he really means is, why say ten verses? Why not only nine,¹¹ because if there is a difference [in one particular]¹² so there may as well be a difference [in another]?¹³

Our Rabbis taught: Whence do we learn in the Scripture that we are to say [the blessing of] the Patriarchs? Because it says, Ascribe unto the Lord, O ye sons of might.¹⁴ And whence do we learn that we say the blessing of mightiness? Because it says, Ascribe unto the Lord glory and strength.¹⁵ And whence that we say sanctifications? Because it says, Ascribe unto the Lord the glory of his name, worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness.¹⁶ Whence do we learn that we are to say kingship, remembrance and shofar¹⁷ [verses]? R. Eliezer says: Because it is written, a solemn rest, a memorial proclaimed with the blast of trumpets, a holy convocation.¹⁸ 'A solemn rest': this indicates the sanctification of the day. 'A memorial': this indicates remembrance verses. 'Proclaimed with the blast of horns': this indicates shofar verses. 'A holy convocation': sanctify it by [abstaining from] the doing of work. Said R. Akiba to him: Why should we not interpret 'a solemn rest' to apply to the abstention from work, seeing that the text placed this first?¹⁹ No; [we should interpret thus]: 'A solemn rest': sanctify it by [abstaining from] the doing of work — 'A memorial': this indicates the remembrance verses. 'Proclaimed with the blowing of horns': this indicates shofar-verses. 'A holy convocation': this indicates the sanctification of the day. Whence [then] do we learn that we say kingship-verses? — It has been taught: Rabbi says, I am the Lord your God,²⁰ [and immediately afterwards], In the seventh month,²¹ this [juxtaposition]²² indicates kingship-verses. R. Jose b. Judah said: There is no need [of such an interpretation]. For Scripture says, And they [the trumpets] shall be to you for a memorial before your God.²³ This makes superfluous [the succeeding words], I am the Lord your God. What then is the point of the words, I am the Lord your God? This creates a general pattern²⁴ for all places where we say remembrance verses, [to show] that kingship verses should accompany them.

Where is the blessing of the sanctification of the day to be said? — It has been taught: Rabbi says, It should be said with the kingship verses. For just as on every other occasion²⁵ we find that it comes fourth [in the order of blessings], so here it should come fourth. Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel says: It should be said with the remembrance verses. Just as we find that on all other occasions it is said in the middle,²⁶ so here it should be in the middle.²⁷

When the Beth din sanctified the New Moon in Usha, R. Johanan b. Beroka went down [before the ark]²⁸ in the presence of Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel, and read as prescribed by R. Johanan b. Nuri.²⁹ Rabban Simeon said to him: That was not the way they used to do in Jabneh.³⁰ On the second day, R. Hanina the son of R. Jose the Galilean went down and read as prescribed by R. Akiba.³¹ Rabban Simeon b. Gamaliel said: So they used to do in Jabneh. This would seem to show that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel was of the same opinion as R. Akiba. But [how can this be seeing that] R. Akiba said that the kingship verses are to be joined with the sanctification of the day, whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said that the sanctification of the day is to be joined with the remembrance verses? — R. Zera replied: What it indicates is that [in R. Simeon's opinion] the shofar is blown with the kingship verses.

‘On the second day R. Hanina went down’. What is meant by second? Shall I say, the second day of the holyday, which would imply that Elul had been prolonged?³² [But this cannot be] seeing that R. Hanina b. Kahana has said that from the time of Ezra there has been no case known of Elul being prolonged? R. Hisda replied: What is meant by ‘second’? It means the same holyday in the next year.

MISHNAH. THERE SHOULD BE RECITED NOT LESS THAN TEN KINGSHIP VERSES, TEN REMEMBRANCE VERSES, AND TEN SHOFAR VERSES. R. JOHANAN B. NURI SAID: IF THE READER SAYS THREE FROM EACH SET³³ HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.

GEMARA. To what do these ten kingship verses correspond? — R. Levi said, To the ten praises that David uttered in the book of Psalms. But there are a large number of praises there? — It means, those among which occurs, Praise him with the blowing of the shofar.³⁴ R. Joseph said: To the ten commandments that were spoken to Moses on Sinai.³⁵ R. Johanan said: To the ten Utterances by means of which the world was created.³⁶ Which are they? The phrase ‘and he said’ occurs in the account of the creation only nine times? — The words ‘in the beginning’ are also an utterance, as it is written, By the word of the Lord the heavens were made.³⁷

R. JOHANAN B. NURI SAID: IF HE SAYS THREE OF EACH SET HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION. The question was raised: How is this to be understood? Three from the Pentateuch, three from the Prophets and three from the Writings, which would make nine [for each set], so that there is a difference of one between the two authorities, or is it one from the Pentateuch, one from the Prophets and one from the Writings,³⁸ making three for each set, so that they differ considerably? — Come and hear, since it has been taught: ‘There must be recited not less than ten kingship verses, ten remembrance verses, and ten shofar verses, but one who said seven of all of them has fulfilled his obligation, these corresponding to seven firmaments. R. Johanan b. Nuri said: The lowest number one should say is seven,³⁹ but if he said [even] three of them he has fulfilled his obligation, these corresponding to the Torah, the Prophets and the Writings, or, as others report, to Priests, Levites, and lay Israelites’. R. Huna said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is as laid down by R. Johanan b. Nuri.

MISHNAH. NO MENTION IS MADE OF KINGSHIP, REMEMBRANCE AND SHOFAR VERSES THAT SIGNIFY PUNISHMENT. IT IS PROPER TO BEGIN WITH THE TORAH⁴⁰ AND CONCLUDE WITH THE PROPHETS. R. JOSE SAID: IF ONE CONCLUDES WITH THE TORAH HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION.

- (39) Obviously this means seven altogether in each set.
- (40) Pentateuch.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 32b

GEMARA. [What are] KINGSHIP VERSES [signifying punishment]? — For instance, As I live, saith the Lord God, surely with a mighty hand and with an outstretched arm and with fury poured out will I be king over you,¹ and although R. Nahman said, Let the Holy One, blessed be He, be as furious as all this with us so only that He [finally] redeem us, yet since this was spoken in wrath, we do not call wrath to mind at the beginning of the year. REMEMBRANCE VERSES, as for instance, And he remembered that they were flesh² etc. SHOFAR VERSES, as for instance, Blow ye the horn in Gibeah³ etc. If, however, he desires to recite kingship, remembrance and shofar verses mentioning the punishment of idolaters, he may do so. 'Kingship verses', as for instance, The Lord reigneth, let the peoples tremble,⁴ or, The Lord is king for ever and ever, the nations are perished out of his land.⁵

'Remembrance verses', as for instance, Remember, O Lord, against the children of Edom⁶ etc. 'Shofar verses', as for instance, And the Lord God will blow the horn and will go with whirlwinds of the south,⁷ and the text continues, The Lord of hosts will defend them.⁸ [On the other hand] a verse mentioning the remembrance of an individual is not recited, even if it is for good, as for instance, Remember me, O Lord, when thou favourest thy people,⁹ or, Remember unto to me, O my God, for good.¹⁰ 'Visitation' is equivalent to 'remembrance', as, for instance, in the verse, And the Lord visited Sarah,¹¹ or, I have surely visited you.¹² This is the view of R. Jose; R. Judah, however, says that 'visitation' is not equivalent to 'remembrance'. Now on R. Jose's view, even granting that 'visitation' is equivalent to 'remembrance', the text, 'And the Lord visited Sarah' refers to the visitation of an individual,¹³ [does it not]? — Since a multitude issued from her,¹⁴ it is as good as a multitude.

[In the text], Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, that the king of glory may come in. Who is the king of glory? The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle, Lift up your heads, O ye gates, yea, lift them up, ye everlasting doors, that the king of glory may come in. Who is the king of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the king of glory,¹⁵ the first [apostrophe] contains two mentions [of God's kingship]¹⁶ and the second three. So R. Jose; R. Judah, however, says that the first contains one and the second two.¹⁷ [In the text], Sing praises to God, sing praises; sing praises unto our king, sing praises. For God is the king of all the earth,¹⁸ there are two mentions [of God's kingship]; so R. Jose. R. Judah, however, says there is only one.¹⁹ They agree, however, that in the verse, God reigneth over the nations, God sitteth upon his holy throne,²⁰ there is only one.

A remembrance verse which also mentions blowing [teru'ah], as for instance, a memorial proclaimed with the blast of horns, a holy convocation may be recited either with the remembrance verses or with the shofar verses; so R. Jose. R. Judah, however, says that it may be recited only with the remembrance verses.²¹ A kingship verse which also contains mention of blowing, as, for instance, The Lord his God is with him and the shouting [teru'ath] for the king is among them,²² may be recited either with the kingship verses or with the shofar verses; so R. Jose. R. Judah, however, says that it may be recited only with the kingship verses.²³ A verse mentioning simply blowing of the trumpet, as for instance, it is a day of blowing the horn [teru'ah] unto you,²⁴ may be recited with the shofar verses; so R. Jose. R. Judah, however, says that it may not be recited at all.²⁵

IT IS PROPER TO BEGIN WITH THE TORAH AND CONCLUDE WITH THE PROPHETS. R. JOSE SAID: IF ONE CONCLUDES WITH THE TORAH HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION. 'IF ONE CONCLUDES' [HE HAS FULFILLED]: that is to say, the deed having been done; but he should not do so in the first instance. [Is this correct] seeing that it has been taught: 'R. Jose says, He who concludes with the Torah verses, he is to be commended'? — Read, 'He concludes'. But it states [distinctly], IF HE CONCLUDES [etc.], [which implies that] what is done is done, but in the first instance it should not be done? — What is meant is this: 'It is proper to commence with the Torah and conclude with the Prophets. R. Jose said: It is proper to conclude with the Torah, but if one concluded with the Prophets, he has fulfilled his obligation'. It has been taught to the same effect: 'R. Eleazar b. R. Jose said: The wethikin,²⁶ used to conclude with the Torah'.

We can understand this being done with the remembrance and shofar verses, because there are numbers of them [in the Pentateuch], but of kingship verses there are only three, viz., The Lord his God is with him and the shouting for the King is among them,²⁷ And he was king in Jeshurun,²⁸ and The Lord shall reign for ever and ever,²⁹ and we require ten verses [in all]³⁰ and [in this way] we cannot find them?³¹ — R. Huna replied: Come and hear. Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God the Lord is one;³² this is a kingship verse according to R. Jose, though R. Judah says it is not a kingship verse. And thou shalt know on that day and lay it to thy heart that the Lord he is God, there is none else,³³ is a kingship verse according to R. Jose, though R. Judah says it is not a kingship verse, Unto thee it was shown, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God, there is none else beside him³⁴ is a kingship verse according to R. Jose, though R. Judah says it is not a kingship verse.

MISHNAH. OF THOSE WHO PASS BEFORE THE ARK³⁵ ON THE HOLYDAY OF NEW YEAR, THE SECOND³⁶ BLOWS³⁷ THE SHOFAR. ON DAYS WHEN HALLEL IS SAID,³⁸ THE FIRST³⁹ READS ALOUD THE HALLEL.⁴⁰

GEMARA. What special reason is there for the second to blow? [You must say], because of the maxim, In the multitude of people is the king's glory.⁴¹ But if that is so, Hallel should also be recited by the second because 'in the multitude of people is the king's glory'? Should you say, however, that there is a special reason why Hallel is said by the first, because the zealous come early for the performance of religious duties, then let the blowing of the shofar be performed by the first because the zealous come early for the performance of religious duties! — R. Johanan replied: They made this rule at a time when the Government had forbidden [the blowing of the shofar].⁴²

Since it says, ON DAYS WHEN HALLEL IS SAID, we infer that on New Year Hallel is not said. What is the reason? — R. Abbahu replied: The ministering angels said in the Presence of the Holy One, blessed be He: Sovereign of the Universe, why should Israel not chant hymns of praise before Thee on New Year and the Day of Atonement? He replied to them: Is it possible that the King should be sitting on the throne of justice with the books of life and death open before Him, and Israel should chant hymns of praise?

MISHNAH. [FOR THE SAKE OF] THE SHOFAR OF NEW YEAR IT IS NOT ALLOWED TO DISREGARD THE DISTANCE LIMIT⁴³ NOR TO REMOVE DEBRIS NOR TO CLIMB A TREE NOR TO RIDE ON AN ANIMAL NOR TO SWIM ON THE WATER. IT MUST NOT BE SHAPED⁴⁴ EITHER WITH AN IMPLEMENT THE USE OF WHICH IS FORBIDDEN ON ACCOUNT OF SHEBUTH⁴⁵ OR WITH ONE THE USE OF WHICH IS FORBIDDEN BY EXPRESS PROHIBITION.⁴⁶ IF ONE, HOWEVER, DESIRES TO POUR WINE OR WATER INTO IT HE MAY DO SO.⁴⁷ CHILDREN NEED NOT BE STOPPED FROM BLOWING; ON THE CONTRARY, THEY MAY BE HELPED⁴⁸ TILL THEY LEARN HOW TO BLOW. ONE WHO BLOWS MERELY TO PRACTISE⁴⁹ DOES NOT THEREBY FULFIL HIS RELIGIOUS OBLIGATION, NOR DOES ONE WHO HEARS THE BLAST MADE BY ANOTHER WHEN PRACTISING.

GEMARA. What is the reason [why these things may not be done]? — The blowing of the shofar is [based on] a positive precept,⁵⁰ whereas the observance of the holyday is [based both on] a positive⁵¹ and a negative precept,⁵² and a positive precept cannot override both a positive and a negative precept.

NOR TO CLIMB A TREE NOR TO RIDE ON AN ANIMAL etc, Seeing that you have not allowed even Rabbinical [prohibitions to be broken],⁵³ need you mention Pentateuchal ones?⁵⁴ — The Mishnah adopts the style of 'A, and needless to say B'.

(52) Ibid. 25: Ye shall do no manner of servile work.

(53) The prohibitions to exceed the Sabbath limit and to remove debris are purely Rabbinical, without basis in the Pentateuch. (Rashi).

(54) Riding and climbing are forbidden because they might lead to the cutting or plucking of a branch, which is forbidden by the Pentateuch. The argument is very forced, and Rashi is inclined to regard the whole sentence as spurious. [R. Hananel takes the prohibitions regarding the Sabbath limit and removing the debris to be the Biblical prohibitions referred to.]

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 33a

IT MUST NOT BE SHAPED EITHER WITH AN IMPLEMENT THE USE OF WHICH IS FORBIDDEN ON ACCOUNT OF SHEBUTH OR WITH ONE THE USE OF WHICH IS FORBIDDEN BY EXPRESS PROHIBITION. 'An instrument the use of which is forbidden on account of shebuth' — as for instance, a sickle.¹ 'An implement which is forbidden by express prohibition' — as for instance, a knife. Seeing that you disallow an implement prohibited on account of shebuth, need you mention one disallowed by express prohibition?² — The Mishnah adopts the style of 'A and needless to say B'.

IF ONE, HOWEVER, DESIRES TO POUR WINE OR WATER INTO IT HE MAY DO SO. Wine or water he may, but urine he may not. Which authority does our Mishnah follow? — That of Abba Saul, as it has been taught: 'Abba Saul says, Wine or water is permissible, these serving to clean it, but urine is forbidden, as showing disrespect'.³

CHILDREN NEED NOT BE STOPPED FROM BLOWING. This would imply that women are stopped. [But how can this be], seeing that it has been taught: 'Neither children nor women need be stopped from blowing the shofar on the Festival'? — Abaye replied: There is no discrepancy; the one statement follows R. Judah, the other R. Jose and R. Simeon, as it has been taught: 'Speak unto the children [bene] of Israel:⁴ [this indicates that] the "sons" [bene] of Israel lay on hands but not the "daughters" of Israel. So R. Judah, R. Jose and R. Simeon say that women also have the option of laying on hands'.⁵

ON THE CONTRARY, THEY MAY BE HELPED UNTIL THEY LEARN HOW TO BLOW. R. Eleazar said: Even on Sabbath. it has been taught to the same effect: 'They may be helped till they learn how to blow even on Sabbath, and children are not stopped from blowing on Sabbath, and needless to say on a [weekday] holyday'. This statement itself involves a contradiction. You say first, 'They may be helped till they learn how to blow, even on Sabbath', from which I should infer that we may actually tell them in the first instance to blow. Then it states, 'They are not stopped', which would indicate that we do not go so far as to stop them, but we do not tell them in the first instance to blow! — There is no contradiction: In the one case we speak of

(1) To cut ordinary articles with a scythe or sickle on Sabbath is not regarded legally as 'work' because the implement is not being used for its proper purpose. The Rabbis, however, forbade it on account of shebuth.

(2) The sanction for which is Pentateuchal and not merely Rabbinical.

(3) Lit., 'because of respect'.

(4) Lev. I, 2, introducing the regulations of the sacrifice.

(5) Similarly R. Jose and R. Simeon hold that although women are not commanded to blow the shofar (this being a precept for which a definite time is fixed), they have the option of doing so, and therefore may practise.

a child old enough to be trained [in the performance of religious precepts],¹ in the other of one not yet old enough to be trained.

ONE WHO BLOWS MERELY TO PRACTISE DOES NOT THEREBY FULFIL HIS RELIGIOUS OBLIGATION:² I infer that one who blows to make musical sounds³ does thereby fulfil his religious obligation. May we say that this supports Raba, for Raba said that one who blows to make musical sounds fulfils his religious obligation?⁴ — Perhaps our authority includes ‘making music’ also under the head of ‘practising’.

NOR ONE WHO HEARS THE BLAST MADE BY ANOTHER WHEN PRACTISING. But one who hears the blast from another who is blowing for himself, we are to assume, does fulfil his obligation? If so, this would be a refutation of R. Zera; for R. Zera said to his attendant, ‘Blow with intent to clear me⁵ also’!⁶ — Perhaps our authority having mentioned ‘practising’ in the first clause used the same expression in the second.⁷

MISHNAH. THE ORDER OF THE BLASTS CONSISTS OF THREE SETS⁸ OF THREE EACH.⁹ THE LENGTH OF A TEKI'AH IS EQUAL TO THREE TERU'AHS,¹⁰ AND THE LENGTH OF A TERU'AH TO THREE YEBABOTH.¹¹ IF ONE BLEW THE FIRST TEKI'AH¹² [AS USUAL] AND PROLONGED THE SECOND SO AS TO MAKE IT EQUAL TO TWO, IT COUNTS ONLY AS ONE.¹³ IF ONE HAS SAID THE [NINE] BLESSINGS¹⁴ AND THEN PROCURES¹⁵ A SHOFAR, HE SOUNDS A TEKI'AH TERU'AH TEKI'AH THREE TIMES!¹⁶ JUST AS THE CONGREGATIONAL READER IS UNDER OBLIGATION, SO EVERY INDIVIDUAL IS UNDER OBLIGATION.¹⁷ RABBAN GAMALIEL, HOWEVER, SAID THAT THE CONGREGATIONAL READER CLEARS THE WHOLE CONGREGATION OF THEIR OBLIGATION.

GEMARA. [THE LENGTH OF THE TEKI'AH IS EQUAL TO THREE TERU'AHS]. But it has been taught that the length of a teki'ah is equal to a teru'ah? — Abaye replied: Our Tanna reckons the teki'ahs of all the sets and the teru'ahs of all the sets,¹⁸ whereas the external Tanna¹⁹ was reckoning one set and no more.²⁰

THE LENGTH OF THE TERU'AH IS EQUAL TO THE LENGTH OF THREE YEBABOTH. But it has been taught, ‘The length of the teru'ah is equal to three shebarim’?²¹ — Abaye said: Here there is really a difference of opinion. It is written, It shall be a day of teru'ah unto you,²² and we translate [in Aramaic], a day of yebaba, and it is written of the mother of Sisera, Through the window she looked forth,²³ [wa-teyabab]. One authority thought that this means drawing a long sigh,²⁴ and the other that it means uttering short piercing cries.

Our Rabbis taught: ‘Whence do we know [that the blowing on New Year must be] with a shofar? Because it says, Thou, shalt make proclamation, with a shofar of teru'ah.²⁵ I know this so far only of the Jubilee; how do I know it of New Year? The text says significantly, In the seventh month,²⁶ when there is no real occasion for the expression, in the seventh month.²⁷ Why then does it say, in the seventh month? To show that all the teru'ahs of the seventh month should be of the same character. How do we know that there must be a plain blast²⁸ before it? Because it says, Thou, shalt make proclamation with a shofar of teru'ah.²⁹ How do we know that there must be a plain blast³⁰ after it? Because it says, Ye shall make proclamation with the shofar.³¹ I know this only of the Jubilee; how do I learn it of New Year also? It says significantly, in the seventh month³² when there is no real occasion for the expression, "in the seventh month". Why then does it say, "in the seventh month"? To indicate that all the teru'ahs of the seventh month should be of the same character. How do we know that there must be three sets of three each? Because it says, Thou shalt make proclamation with the shofar of teru'ah,¹ and again, a solemn rest, a memorial of teru'ah,² and again, a day of teru'ah it shall be to you.³ And how do we know that we can utilize what is said in connection with one for purposes of the other and vice versa?⁴ The word "seventh" occurs twice⁵ to provide a gezerah shawah.⁶ How then is it carried out? There are three [sets] which are nine [blasts]. The length of the teki'ah is equal to that of the teru'ah. The length of the teru'ah is equal to three shebarim'.

This Tanna first derives his inference from an analogy⁷ and now he derives it from a gezerah shawah!⁸ — He reasons thus: 'If there were no gezerah shawah, I would derive the inference from analogy; now, however, that there is a gezerah shawah, I do not require the analogy'.

The following Tanna derives the same lesson from a gezerah shawah [with the blowing of the horn ordained] in the wilderness, as it has been taught: And ye shall blow a teru'ah:⁹ this indicates that there shall be a separate teki'ah¹⁰ and a separate teru'ah. You say, there shall be a separate teki'ah and a separate teru'ah! But can it not be interpreted differently, namely, that the teki'ah and teru'ah are all one?¹¹ When you come to the text, But when the assembly is to be gathered together ye shall blow a teki'ah but not a teru'ah,¹² you must conclude that teki'ah and teru'ah are separate. And how do we know that a plain blast is to precede it [the teru'ah]? Because it says, And ye shall blow a teru'ah.' And how do we know that a plain blast follows it? Because it says, a teru'ah shall they blow.¹³ R. Ishmael the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka said: This¹⁴ is not necessary. For the text says, And ye shall blow a teru'ah a second time.¹⁵ Here the words a second time' are unnecessary.¹⁶ Why then are the words 'a second time' inserted? This furnishes a general rule¹⁷ that wherever teru'ah is mentioned a teki'ah should follow it.¹⁸ So far I know this only of the wilderness.¹⁹ On what ground can I apply it to New Year also? Because we find teru'ah [in one place] and teru'ah [in another place]²⁰ to provide a gezerah shawah. Three teru'ahs are mentioned in connection with New Year — 'a solemn rest, a memorial proclaimed with teru'ah'; 'a day of teru'ah', and 'thou shalt make proclamation with the shofar of teru'ah'. Each teru'ah is accompanied with two teki'ahs. We thus learn that three teru'ahs and six teki'ahs were prescribed for New Year. Two of these are ordained by the Torah and one by the Soferim:²¹ [The teru'ahs mentioned in] 'a solemn rest, a memorial of teru'ah,' and in 'thou shalt make proclamation with the shofar of teru'ah' are ordinances of the Torah; the text 'a day of teru'ah it shall be to you' is required for its own lesson.²² R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: One is ordained by the Torah and two by the Soferim: [That mentioned in] 'and thou shalt make proclamation with the shofar of teru'ah' is ordained by the Torah. [The texts] 'a solemn rest, a memorial of teru'ah' and, 'a day of teru'ah it shall be to you', are required for their own lessons. What is meant by saying that 'it [the latter] is required for its own lesson'?²³ — It is required to show that [the blowing must be] in the daytime and not at night. Whence does the other authority derive the rule that the blowing must be by day and not by night? — He derives it from the expression On the Day of Atonement.²⁴ But if he learns it from 'On the Day of Atonement', let him also learn from this text the rule that there is to be a plain blast before the teru'ah and a plain blast after it?²⁵ — He does not accept the implication of the expressions 'and thou shalt proclaim', 'ye shall proclaim'. How then does he expound these words? — [He expounds] 'and thou shalt proclaim' in the same way as R. Mattenah; for R. Mattenah said: 'And thou shalt proclaim': this means, in the usual manner of proclamation.²⁶ The words 'Ye shall proclaim' mentioned by the All-Merciful indicate that the shofar should be taken in the hand,²⁷ and the other, [what says he to this?] — The lesson of R. Mattenah you can learn from the fact that the text uses an unusual expression,²⁸ but that the word means 'taking in the hand' you could not maintain, for one can compare the expression 'passing' here with the expression 'passing' used in connection with Moses.²⁹ It is written here, And ye shall cause to pass a shofar of teru'ah, and it is written elsewhere, And Moses commanded, and they caused a voice to pass.³⁰ Just as there the passing was of a sound, so here it is of a sound.

And to the Tanna who derives the rule [regarding the teki'ah] from [the blowing commanded] in the wilderness, [it may be objected that] just as there trumpets were to be used, so here [on New Year] trumpets should be used? — Therefore it is written, Blow ye the shofar at the New Moon, at the concealment for the day of our festival.³¹ Which is the festival on which the moon is concealed? You must say that this is New Year; and the All-Merciful prescribed the shofar [to be used on it].

R. Abbahu prescribed in Caesarea that there should be a teki'ah, three shebarim, a teru'ah and a teki'ah. How can this be justified?³² If [the sound of teru'ah] is a kind of wailing, then there should be teki'ah, teru'ah³³ and teki'ah, and if it is a kind of groaning, there should be teki'ah, three shebarim, and teki'ah? — He was in doubt whether it was a kind of wailing or a kind of groaning.³⁴ R. 'Awira strongly demurred against this procedure, saying, Perhaps it is a kind of wailing, and the three shebarim make an interruption between the teru'ah and the [first] teki'ah? — We assume that he afterwards blows teki'ah, teru'ah, teki'ah. Rabina strongly demurred against this, saying, Perhaps it is a kind of sighing and the teru'ah makes an interruption between the shebarim and the [second] teki'ah? — We suppose that he afterwards blows teki'ah, shebarim, teki'ah. What then is the point of R. Abbahu's regulation?³⁵ If it is a groaning sound, it has already been made,³⁶ and if it is a wailing sound it has already been made?³⁷ — He was in doubt whether it does not include both groaning and wailing. If so, the reverse should also be carried out, namely, teki'ah, teru'ah, three shebarim, teki'ah, since perhaps it is wailing and groaning? — Ordinarily when a man has a pain, he first groans and then wails.

 - (37) In teki'ah, shebarim, teki'ah. We then have a set containing four blasts.

nine blasts at nine different times of the day, he has performed his religious obligation. It has been taught to the same effect: 'If one heard nine blasts at nine different times of the day, he has performed his religious obligation. If, however, he heard nine different people at once, he has not performed his obligation.¹ If he hears a teki'ah from one and a teru'ah from another, he has fulfilled his obligation, even if the intervals extended over the whole day'.

But could R. Johanan have said this,² seeing that R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadok: If in the midst of reciting Hallel and the Megillah³ one paused long enough to say the whole, he must go back to the beginning? — There is no contradiction: in one case he was giving his own opinion, in the other that of his teacher. But does not his own opinion [conflict with the above statement]? Was not R. Abbahu once following after R. Johanan reciting the shema',³ and when he came to some dirty alley-ways he stopped, and after they had passed them he asked R. Johanan whether he should finish, and he replied, If you paused long enough to say the whole, you must start again from the beginning? What he meant to say to him was this: 'I do not hold this view,⁴ but according to you who do hold it,⁵ if you have paused long enough to say the whole, you must start afresh'.

Our Rabbis taught: '[On most days]⁶ the omission of one blast is no bar to another, and the omission of one blessing⁷ is no bar to another, but on New Year and the Day of Atonement the omission of one blast or one blessing is a bar to the others'.⁸ What is the reason? — Rabbah said: God proclaimed: Recite before Me on New Year kingship, remembrance and shofar verses; kingship verses to declare Me king over you; remembrance verses, that the remembrance of you may come before Me for good; and through what? Through the shofar.

IF ONE HAS SAID THE [NINE] BLESSINGS AND THEN PROCURES A SHOFAR, HE SOUNDS A TEKI'AH, TERU'AH, TEKI'AH. The reason is that he had no shofar to begin with. This shows that if he had a shofar to begin with, when he hears the blasts he must hear them during the recital of the blessings.⁹ R. Papa b. Samuel rose to say his prayer, and at the same time said to his attendant, When I give you a sign,¹⁰ blow the shofar for me. Said Raba to him:¹¹ This rule¹² was laid down only for a congregation.¹³ It has been taught to the same effect: 'When he hears the blasts, he must hear them in order, and during the recital of the blessings.¹⁴ When does this hold good? In a congregation; but when not praying with the congregation he must hear them in order but not necessarily during the recital of the blessings. If an individual has not blown [the shofar], another may blow it for him, but if an individual has not said the blessings another may not say them for him. It is a greater act of piety to hear the shofar than to say the blessings. Hence¹⁵ if there are two towns in one of which the shofar is being blown and in the other of which the blessings are being said, one should go rather to the place where they are blowing than to the place where they are saying the blessings'. Surely this is self-evident: the former precept is of Pentateuchal sanction, the latter [only] of Rabbinic! — It was necessary to state the rule, [to show that it still applies] even though he is certain of [finding an opportunity for] the latter and not certain of [finding an opportunity for] the former.¹⁶

JUST AS THE CONGREGATIONAL READER IS UNDER OBLIGATION, SO EVERY INDIVIDUAL etc. It has been taught: 'They said to Rabban Gamaliel: Accepting your view,¹⁷ why do the congregation [first] say the ['Amidah] prayer? He replied, So as to give the reader time to prepare his prayer.¹⁸ Rabban Gamaliel then said to them: Accepting your view,¹⁹ why does the reader go down [and stand] before the Ark?²⁰ They replied: So as to clear from his obligation one who is not familiar [with the prayers]. He said to them: Just as he clears one who is not familiar, so he clears one who is familiar'.²¹

Rabbah b. bar Hanah said in the name of R. Johanan: The Sages gave Rabban Gamaliel right. Rab, however, said: The difference of opinion still remains.²² Hiyya the son of Rabbah b. Nahmani heard the argument [reported] and went and repeated it before R. Dimi b. Hinnena. He said to him: Thus said Rab: The difference of opinion still remains. The other said to him: This is what Rabbah b. bar Hanah also said, that when R. Johanan made this statement, Resh Lakish joined issue with him, saying: The difference of opinion still remains. But did R. Johanan say this? Has not R. Hanah of Sepphoris stated that R. Johanan said that the law²³ follows the view of Rabban Gamaliel, and since he said the law is so, we infer that there is a difference of opinion?

- (1) According to Tosaf. the reason is because he does not hear a teru'ah preceded and followed by a teki'ah. Rashi, however, reads: 'If he heard nine people at once, a teki'ah from one and a teru'ah from another, he has fulfilled his obligation, and even if he heard at intervals' etc. He points out that it has already been laid down above that two different sounds from two different persons can be discerned at once.

Talmud - Mas. Rosh HaShana 35a

. When R. Ammi returned from a sea-voyage,¹ he explained it thus: 'The Sages give Rabban Gamaliel right' in regard to the blessings of New Year and the Day of Atonement; and 'the halachah is so', which implies that they differ in regard to the blessings of the rest of the year.² But is this so? Did not R. Hanah of Sepphoris say in the name of R. Johanan, 'The halachah follows Rabban Gamaliel in regard to the blessings of New Year and the Day of Atonement'³ — No, said R. Nahman b. Isaac. Who is it that gave [Rabban Gamaliel] right? R. Meir;⁴ and the halachah is so', which shows that the Rabbis⁵ refer to [the others]. For it has been taught: 'In regard to the blessings of New Year and the Day of Atonement, the reader can clear the congregation of their obligation to say them'.

Why should a difference be made in respect of these [blessings]? Should you say it is because they contain many scriptural texts, has not R. Hananel said in the name of Rab, As soon as one has said, 'And in thy Law it is written saying',⁶ he need not recite any more [texts]? — No; the reason is because there is an extra large number of blessings.⁷

[To revert to] the [above] text — R. Hananel said in the name of Rab, As soon as one has said, "And in thy Law it is written saying", he need not recite any more [texts]'. It was presumed [in the Academy] that this applies only to an individual but not to a congregation. It has been stated, however, [elsewhere]: R. Joshua b. Levi said: [The rule] alike for an individual or a congregation is that as soon as they have said 'And in thy Law it is written saying', they need not recite any more [texts].

R. Eleazar said: A man should always first prepare himself for his prayer⁸ and then say it. R. Abba said: The dictum of R.

Eleazar appears to be well founded in respect of the blessings of New Year and the Day of Atonement and periodical [prayers]⁹ but not of the rest of the year. Is that so? Did not Rab Judah use always to prepare himself for his prayer before praying? — Rab Judah was exceptional; since he prayed only every thirty days,¹⁰ it was [to him] like a periodical [prayer].

R. Aha b. 'Awira said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious: Rabban Gamaliel used to allow even the people in the fields to be cleared [by the reader in the synagogue], and needless to say those in town.¹¹ On the contrary, [we should have expected the opposite, because] the former are prevented from coming and the latter are not prevented, in the same way as Abba the son of R. Benjamin b. Hiyya has stated, 'The People who stand behind the priests are not included in the [priestly] benediction'! — The fact is that when Rabin came [from Palestine] he stated in the name of R. Jacob b. Idi that R. Simeon the Pious said: Rabban Gamaliel allowed only the people in the fields to be cleared [by the reader]. What is the reason? Because they are prevented by their work from coming [to synagogue]. Those in the town, however, are not cleared.¹²

MISHNAH. WHEN DO WE [BEGIN TO] MAKE MENTION OF THE POWER OF RAIN?¹ R. ELIEZER SAYS: ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FEAST.² R. JOSHUA SAYS: ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST. R. JOSHUA SAID TO HIM: SEEING THAT RAIN ON THE FEAST IS A SIGN OF [GOD'S] ANGER³ WHY MAKE MENTION OF IT? THEREUPON R. ELIEZER SAID TO HIM: I ALSO DID NOT SAY TO PRAY⁴ BUT TO MAKE MENTION [IN THE WORD] 'HE CAUSETH THE WIND TO BLOW AND THE RAIN TO FALL'⁵ -IN ITS DUE SEASON. HE [R. JOSHUA] REPLIED TO HIM: IF THAT IS SO ONE SHOULD AT ALL TIMES MAKE MENTION OF IT.

WE PRAY FOR RAIN ONLY CLOSE TO THE RAINY SEASON. R. JUDAH SAYS: THE LAST TO STEP BEFORE THE ARK⁶ ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST MAKES MENTION, THE FIRST DOES NOT; ON THE FIRST DAY OF PASSOVER THE FIRST MAKES MENTION, THE LAST DOES NOT.

GEMARA. What has the Tanna [in mind] when he teaches WHEN etc.?⁷ -The Tanna refers to [a Mishnah] elsewhere which teaches: We make mention of the Power of Rain in the [benediction of] the Revival of the Dead,⁸ and we pray for [rain] in the Benediction of the Years⁹ and [we insert] the Habdulah¹⁰ in [the benediction] 'Thou favourest man with knowledge'.¹¹ [With that passage in mind] the Tanna now teaches: When do we [begin] to make mention of the Power of Rain? Would it not have been more appropriate to teach it there, why did he leave it until now? — [Say] rather, because the Tanna had just completed [learning the Tractate] Rosh Hashanah¹² where we have learnt: And on the Feast [the world] is judged through water. And, [as there] he taught: 'And on the Feast [the world] is judged through water,' therefore there he teaches: When do we [begin] to make mention of the Power of Rain. But let him teach: When do we [begin] to make mention of Rain: why, the Power of Rain?-R. Johanan said: Because Rain comes down by the Power [of God], as it is said, Who doeth great things und unsearchable, marvellous things without number.¹³ And it is [further] written, Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the fields.¹⁴ Where [in these verses is this idea] implied? — Rabbah b. Shila replied: It is derived from the analogous use of the word heker in verses treating of Creation. Here it is written, 'Who doeth great things and unsearchable'. And there it is written, 'Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, The Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? His discernment is past searching out.¹⁵ And [of Creation] it is [also] written, Who by Thy strength settest fast the mountains, Who art girded about with might.¹⁶ Whence do we know that mention of Rain is to be made in the Prayer?¹⁷ - It has been taught: To love the Lord your God and to serve Him with all your heart.¹⁸ What is Service of Heart? You must needs say, Prayer. And the verse following reads, That I will give the rain of your land in its season, the former rain and the latter rain.¹⁹

R. Johanan said: Three keys the Holy One blessed be He has retained in His own hands and not entrusted to the hand of any messenger, namely, the Key of Rain, the Key of Childbirth, and the Key of the Revival of the Dead. The Key of Rain, for It is written, The Lord will open unto thee His good treasure, the heaven to give the rain of thy land in its season,²⁰ The Key of Childbirth, for it is written, And God remembered Rachel, and God hearkened

(1) The term 'power of Rain' is applied to the phrase 'He causeth the wind to blow and the rain to fall' inserted in the second benediction of the prayer known as 'the Eighteen Benedictions' — The Tefillah (v. Glos.) On the expression POWER OF RAIN v. infra.

- (2) The Feast, הַחַג, the name by which the festival of Tabernacles is referred to in Mishnah and Talmud. Cf. I Kings VIII, 2, 65; Neh. VIII, 14, 15.

- (6) To step before the Ark (tebah), a technical term denoting the recitation of the tefillah or the Amidah by the reader. V. R.H., Sonc. ed. p. 160, n. 9.
- (7) What is the Tanna's authority that the power of rain has to be mentioned at all?
- (8) The second benediction.
- (9) The ninth benediction.
- (10) Additional prayer inserted in the fourth benediction in the evening service at the termination of Sabbath and festivals.
- (11) Ber. 33a.
- (12) The order of the tractates of the Mishnah mentioned here is the same as given by the Gaon Sherira of Pumbeditha (968 C.E.) in the letter addressed by him to the community of Kairwan. (V. Neubauer Med. Jew. Chronicles, p. 13). The same sequence is given by Maimonides in the Introduction to his Commentary on the Mishnah.
- (13) Job V, 9-10. The Gemara cites IX, 10, but the commentators substitute for it V, 9 which makes the sequence of ideas clearer.
- (14) V. supra n. 5.
- (15) Isa. XL, 28.
- (16) Ps. LXV, 7. Rabbah b. Shilah infers from the analogous use of the word קִיּוֹן, in Job (where it speaks of rain) and Isaiah (where it refers to Creation) that just as God displayed 'Power' at Creation so too 'Power is a concomitant of rain. Hence the expression, POWER OF RAIN.

to her, and opened her womb.¹ The Key of the Revival of the Dead, for it is written, And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves.² In Palestine they said: Also the Key of Sustenance, for it is said, Thou openest thy hand etc.³ Why does not R. Johanan include also this [key]? — Because in his view sustenance is [included in] Rain.⁴

R. ELIEZER SAYS: ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE FEAST etc. The question was asked, Whence did R. Eliezer derive this? Did he learn it from Lulab⁵ or from the Libation of Water?⁶ If he learnt it from Lulab, then just as the obligation of the use of the Lulab comes into force on the [first] day of Tabernacles, so too should we begin to make mention of rain on that day. Or perhaps he learnt it from Libation. [If so, then] just as Water Libation may be [carried out] on the evening [preceding the first day] — (for a Master [interpreting the verse], And the meal-offering thereof and their drink-offerings,⁷ said, Even by night)-so too should one begin to make mention of rain on that evening!⁸ — Come and hear: R. Abbahu said: R. Eliezer deduced it from Lulab only. Some there are who say: R. Abbahu had a tradition. Whilst others say: He based it on a Baraitha. Which is the Baraitha? — It has been taught: 'When do we [begin to] make mention of Rain? R. Eliezer says: From the time of the taking up of the Lulab; R. Joshua says, From the time when the Lulab is discarded.⁹ Said R. Eliezer: Seeing that these Four Species are intended only to make intercession for water,¹⁰ therefore as these cannot [grow] without water so the world [too] cannot exist without water. R. Joshua said to him: Is not rain on the Feast a sure sign of [God's] anger? R. Eliezer replied: I too did not say to pray but to make mention. And just as one makes mention of the Revival of the Dead all the year round¹¹ although it will take place only in its proper time, so too should mention be made of the Power of Rain all the year round although it comes only in its due season. Therefore if one desires to make mention all the year round he may do so. Rabbi says: I hold the view that when one ceases to pray [for rain]¹² one should also no longer make mention of it. R. Judah b. Bathyra says: On the second day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention. R. Akiba says: On the sixth day of the Feast. R. Judah says in the name of R. Joshua: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention, the first does not; on the first day of Passover the first makes mention, the last does not. Did not then R. Eliezer reply well to R. Joshua?— R. Joshua can answer you: It is quite in order to make mention of the Revival of the Dead [all the year round], since any day may be its time, but is rain seasonable at all times? Have we not learnt: Should Nisan terminate and then rain fall it is a sign of [God's] anger, for it is said, Is it not wheat harvest to-day etc.?¹³

‘R. Judah b. Bathyra says: on the second day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention’. What is R. Judah b. Bathyra's reason? — It has been taught: R. Judah b. Bathyra says, Of the second day of the Feast, Scripture Says, we-niskehem,¹⁴ [‘and their drink-offerings’] and of the sixth day, u-nesakeah¹⁵ [‘and its drink-offerings’] and of the seventh day, kemishpatam¹⁶ [according to their rule]. Note [the letters] Mem, Yod, Mem which form the word mayim [‘water’].¹⁷ Here you have the biblical allusion to the Libation of Water. And what makes him [R. Judah b. Bathyra] fix it on the second day? — Because [the first of the allusions to the Water Libation] is found in connection [with the order for] the second day. Hence why we should [begin] to make mention on the second day. R. Akiba says: On the sixth day of the Feast one [begins] to make mention, for of the sixth day Scripture says, And its drink-offerings.¹⁸ Scripture thus speaks of two libations,¹⁹ the Libation of Water and the Libation of Wine. Perhaps both Libations must be of wine? — He [R. Akiba] is of the same opinion as R. Judah b. Bathyra who said, There is an allusion to water.²⁰

(7) Num. XXIX, 18.

(8) [On this first interpretation of Rashi this verse is irrelevant and is to be omitted, v. Rashi. On the second interpretation the argument will run as follows: Should R. Eliezer deduce his opinion from the Water Libation, the mention of rain would have to be mentioned in the evening, seeing that the evening is a time at which drink-offerings (of wine) may be offered. Once, however, it is granted that the mention of rain starts on the evening, it will have to be the preceding, so as to be on the same day as the Water Libation (the night always being counted with the following day). V. Tosaf, s.v. איבעיא. On this interpretation the text should read as ‘Libation (not ‘Water Libation’) may be on the evening’, v. Me’iri a.I. where also other interpretations of this difficult passage are given.]

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 3a

If he accepts the view of R. Judah b. Bathyra let him also agree with him [that one begins to make mention on the second day of the Feast]? — R. Akiba holds the view that the additional Libation occurs in the text¹ on the sixth day.

It has been taught: R. Nathan says, In the holy place shalt thou pour out a drink-offering of strong drink unto the Lord.² Scripture [here] speaks of two Libations, the Libation of Water and the Libation of Wine.³ Perhaps both are of wine? — If it were so, he should have said, either hassek hassek or nasok nesek. What is the force [of the words] hassek nesek? — From this is to be inferred, that one points to the Libation of Water, and the other to the Libation of Wine.⁴

Who is the authority for that which we have learnt, The Libation of Water [is performed] throughout the seven days [of the Feast]? Is it R. Joshua? He would have stated on one day only!⁵ Is it R. Akiba? According to him it is performed on two days!⁶ Is it R. Judah b. Bathyra? According to him it is performed on six days?⁷ — I can still say, It is R. Judah b. Bathyra and he will hold the same opinion as R. Judah of the following Mishnah. For we have learnt: R. Judah says, A vessel of a log⁸ capacity was used for Libation throughout the eight days [of the Feast]; but he [R. Judah b. Bathyra] excludes the first day and includes the eighth day.⁹ Why does he exclude the first day? Is it because the [first of the] biblical allusions to water [is to be found] on the second day? Then the eighth day too should be excluded seeing that the last [of the] allusions to water is on the seventh day! — It must then be R. Joshua, and as for the Libation of Water being performed throughout the seven days [of the Feast] this is founded on a tradition;¹⁰ for R. Ami said in the name of R. Johanan, in the name of R. Nehunia a native¹¹ of the Plain of Beth-Hawartan,¹² the laws concerning the Ten Young Trees,¹³ the Willow of the Brook,¹⁴ and the Libation of Water are laws [communicated] to Moses from Sinai.¹⁵

‘R. Judah in the name of R. Joshua says: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention [of rain], the first does not; on the first day of Passover the first makes mention, the last does not. Which R. Joshua? Is it R. Joshua of our Mishnah? Surely he said, ON THE LAST DAY OF THE FEAST ONE MAKES MENTION? Or, is it R. Joshua of the Baraitha? Surely he said: From the day that the Lulab is discarded? And further, when it is taught: R. Judah says in the name of Ben Bathyra: The last to step before the Ark on the last day of the Feast makes mention. Which Ben Bathyra [is meant]? Is it R. Judah b. Bathyra? Surely he said: On the second day of the Feast one makes mention? — R. Nathan bar Isaac replied: [In both passages cited] it is R. Joshua b. Bathyra. Sometimes he is called by his own name and some times he is referred to by his father's name; by the one before his ordination, and by the other after his ordination.

It has been taught: The Sages did not make it obligatory on one to make mention of dew and winds, but if one desires to make mention he may do so. What is the reason? — R. Hanina said: Because they are never withheld. And how do we know that dew is never withheld? — For it is written, And Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the settlers of Gilead, said to Ahab: As the Lord the God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years but according to my word.¹⁶ And it is written further, Go, show thyself unto Ahab, and I will send rain upon the land.¹⁷ Of dew, however, Scripture does not speak. Why?

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 3b

Because it is never withheld. But if it is never withheld, why did Elijah take an oath on it? — This is what he conveyed to him [Ahab]. The dew of blessing also would not fall. Then the dew of blessing should also have been restored? — Because the difference would not have been discernable. How do we know that winds are not withheld? R. Joshua b. Levi said: Scripture says, For I have spread you abroad as the four winds of heaven, saith the Lord.¹ What does the prophet desire to convey? Shall we say that the Holy One, blessed be He, spoke thus to Israel, 'I have scattered you to the four corners of the world'. If so, Scripture should have said not 'as the four' but 'to the four'. But this is what he meant: 'As the world cannot endure without winds, so too the world cannot exist without Israel'. R. Hanina said: Therefore, if in the summer one inserted [in the Tefillah the words], 'He causeth the wind to blow', he is not compelled to repeat [the Tefillah]; if, however, he said, 'He causeth the rain to fall', he is compelled to repeat [it]. Similarly, if in winter one did not insert, 'He causeth the wind to blow', he is not compelled to repeat; if, however, he did not say, 'He causeth the rain to fall', he is compelled to repeat. And furthermore, even if he said, 'He causeth the wind to pass and the dew to disappear',² he is not compelled to repeat.

A Tanna taught: The Sages did not make it obligatory to make mention of clouds and winds, but if one desires to make mention he may do so. What is the reason? Is it because they are never withheld? But are they never withheld? Did not R. Joseph learn, 'And He will shut up the heaven',³ means, in respect of clouds and winds. You say that this verse is in respect of clouds and winds, perhaps it is not so but means in respect of rain? When Scripture adds, So that there shall be no rain, rain is thus already referred to. What then is the force of [the words], And He will shut up the heaven? [It must mean] in respect of clouds and winds'. There will then be a contradiction between 'winds and winds' and between 'clouds and clouds'? — There is really no contradiction between clouds and clouds'. In the one case [the reference is] to early clouds⁴ and in the other to late clouds.⁵ Between winds and winds' too there is no contradiction; in the one case they are normal winds and in the other extraordinary winds.⁶ But are not extraordinary winds suitable for⁷ [winnowing] in the barn? — This can be done with sieves [independently of the wind].

A Tanna taught: The clouds and the winds are secondary to rain.⁸ Which are they? 'Ulla said, or as some say, R.⁹ Judah said: Those that come after the rain. Can we then say that these are beneficial? Is it not written, The Lord will make the rain of thy land powder and dust,¹⁰ and on this 'Ulla, or as some say, R. Judah commented, [This refers to] the wind following the rain?¹¹ — There is no contradiction; in the one case [it speaks] of when the rain comes down gently and in the other when it comes down with vehemence.¹² In the latter it throws up dust, and in the former it does not.

Rab Judah further said: Wind after rain is as beneficial as rain, clouds after rain as beneficial as rain, sunshine after rain as beneficial as twofold rain. What does this exclude? — The glow after sunset and sunshine between clouds.

Raba said: Snow is beneficial to the mountains as fivefold rain to the earth, as it is said, For he saith to the snow, 'Fall thou on the earth'; likewise to the shower of rain and to the showers of His mighty rain.¹³

Raba further said: Snow is beneficial to the mountain, heavy rain to the trees, gentle rain to the fruits of the field, drizzling rain ['urpila] even to the seeds under a hard clod. What is 'urpila? 'Uru pili ['Wake up ye cracks'].

Raba further said: A young scholar may be likened to the seeds under a hard clod; once he has sprouted he soon shoots forth.

Raba further said: If a young scholar gets into a rage it is because the Torah inflames him, as it is said, Is not my word like a fire? said the Lord.¹

R. Ashi said:² A scholar who is not as hard as iron is no scholar, as it is said, And like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces.³ R. Abba said to R. Ashi: You have learnt this from that verse but we have learnt it from the following verse: A land whose stones are iron.⁴ Do not read, abanaha [stones] but boneha [builders].⁵ Rabina said: Despite this, a man should train himself to be gentle, for it is said, Therefore remove vexation from thy heart, etc.⁶

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Three [men] made haphazard requests,⁷ two of them were fortunate in the reply they received and one was not, namely, Eliezer, the servant of Abraham; Saul, the son of Kish; and Jephtha the Gileadite. Eliezer, the servant of Abraham, as it is written, So let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, ‘Let down thy pitcher etc.’⁸ She might have been lame or blind, but he was fortunate in the answer given to him in that Rebecca chanced to meet him. Saul, the son of Kish, as it is written, And it shall be, that the man who killeth him, the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter.⁹ [He] might have been a slave or a bastard. He too was fortunate in that it chanced to be David. Jephtha, the Gileadite, as it is written, Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth out of the doors of my house etc.¹⁰ It might have been an unclean thing. He, however, was fortunate in that it so happened that his own daughter came to meet him. This is what the prophet had in mind when he said to Israel, Is there no balm in Gilead? Is there no physician there?’’ And it is further written, Which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it to my mind.¹¹ ‘Which I commanded not’: This refers to the sacrifice of the son of Mesha, the king of Moab, as it is said, Then he took his eldest son that should have reigned in his stead and offered him for a burnt-offering.¹² ‘Nor spake it’; This refers to the daughter of Jephtha.¹³ ‘Neither came it to my mind’: This refers to the sacrifice of Isaac, the son of Abraham.

R. Berekiah said: The Congregation of Israel also made a thoughtless request, yet God granted that request,¹⁴ as it is said, And let us know, eagerly strive to know the Lord. His going forth is sure as the morning: and He shall come to us as the rain.¹⁵ The Holy One, blessed be He, said to her [Israel]: My daughter, thou askest for something¹⁶ which at times is desirable and at other times is not desirable, but I will be unto thee something which is desirable at all times, as it is said, I will be as dew unto Israel.¹⁷ She further made another thoughtless request. She said before Him,: O God, Set me as a seal upon thy heart,- as a seal upon thine arm.¹⁸ Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, replied to her: My daughter, thou askest for something which at times can be seen and at other times cannot be seen. I, however, will make of thee something which can be seen at all times, as it is said, Behold I have graven thee upon the palms of My hands.¹⁹

WE PRAY FOR RAIN ONLY etc. [The scholars] were of the opinion that ‘praying’ and ‘making mention’ are one and the same thing. Who is the authority for this?-Raba replied: It is R. Joshua, who said, [We begin to make mention of rain] from the time when the Lulab is discarded —²⁰ Abaye said to him: You can even say, that it is R. Eliezer; ‘praying’, however, is one thing and ‘making mention’ is another. Others have the reading:

Shall we say it is R. Joshua, who said, From the time when the Lulab is dis-

R. JUDAH SAYS: THE LAST TO STEP BEFORE THE ARK etc. The following was cited in contradiction to this: Until when do we [continue] to pray for rain? R. Judah says: Until Passover is over; R. Meir says, Until the end of Nisan! — R. Hisda replied: The two statements [of R. Judah] are not contradictory; the one refers to 'praying' and the other to 'making mention'; 'praying'¹ one continues [until] the end of Passover] but 'making mention' is discontinued on the first day [of Passover]. 'Ulla said: This [solution of the contradiction] by R. Hisda is as difficult as vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke for the eyes. If one makes mention of rain at such times when it is not permissible to pray for² [it], how much more so should one make mention of rain when it is permissible to pray for it? — It must be, says 'Ulla, that [there is a dispute] between two Tannaim as to the opinion of R. Judah. R. Joseph said: What is the meaning of, 'Until Passover is over'? Until the first reader on the first day of Passover is over [with his prayers].³ Said Abaye to him: Is there then a place in the Festival [Tefillah] for inserting the prayer for rain? He replied to him: Yes, the Meturgeman⁴ 'prays' — Does then the Meturgeman ever pray for something of which the community has no need? Therefore, the better solution is that of 'Ulla.

Rabbah said: What is the meaning of, 'Until Passover is over'? Until the time limit for the slaughtering of the Paschal offering has passed;⁵ and as at its beginning⁶ so at its end; just as at its beginning one makes mention [of rain] although one has not yet [begun] to pray,⁷ so too at its end he makes mention although he no longer has to pray.⁸ Abaye replied: I can understand that one should make mention at the beginning, seeing that making mention is a form of propitiation [prefatory to prayer] but as for the end, what place is there for such propitiation? Therefore, the better solution is that of 'Ulla.

R. Assi said in the name of R. Johanan, The halachah is according to R. Judah. Thereupon R. Zera asked R. Assi: Could then R. Johanan [really] have said so? Have we not learnt: We [begin] to pray for rain on the third of Marcheshvan; Rabban Gamaliel said: On the seventh of the same month — And with reference to this R. Eleazar declared: The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel. He [R. Assi] replied to him: You set one authority against another!⁹ Moreover, if you like I will say there is no contradiction; the one [case] speaks of 'praying' and the other of 'making mention'.¹⁰ But did not R. Johanan say: Whenever one prays one should also make mention? That [rule] applies only to the discontinuation [of 'praying'].¹¹ But did not R. Johanan say: When one begins to make mention one should also [begin] to pray; when one discontinues to pray one should also cease to make mention? — There is really no contradiction; one statement refers to us [Babylonians] and the other to them [Palestinians],¹² Why should we be different? — Is it because we have produce in the field?¹³ They also have Pilgrims?¹⁴ -R. Johanan speaks [of con — ditions] after Temple times.¹⁵ Now that you have arrived at this conclusion [I can say], Both teachings apply equally to them [Palestinians] and there is no contradiction; the one speaks [of conditions] in Temple times and the other [of conditions] after Temple times. But as for us who observe two days [of the festival],¹⁶ what shall our practice be? — Rab says: He begins [to make men-tion] in the Additional Service of the Eighth Day of the Feast, he discontinues in the Afternoon Service and in the Evening Service and in the Morning Service but resumes in the Additional Service of the second day. Samuel said to them [to the scholars]: Go and say to Abba:¹⁷ After you have declared the day holy¹⁸ can you declare it again a weekday?¹⁹ — Therefore Samuel said: He begins [to make mention] in the Additional Service and in the Afternoon Service and discontinues in the Evening Service and in the Morning Service [of the following day], and resumes it in the Additional Service

(4) The translator or interpreter. The function of this official in Talmudic times was to interpret to the audience in the Synagogue in a popular manner and to enlarge upon the theme of the rabbi lecturing. Rashi, feeling that in our passage no such official could be referred to, explains that here the lecturing rabbi and interpreter are one and the same person, he who lectures on the first day of Passover, and that he included in his address a prayer for rain. (12) [In Babylonia the harvest was gathered later than in Palestine and consequently the prayer for rain would also begin later].

(13) And therefore rain was not opportune as long as the harvest had not been gathered in.

(14) And therefore mention of rain should be put off as late as possible to enable the Pilgrims to reach home in comfort before the rains set in. MISHNAH. UNTIL WHEN DO WE PRAY FOR RAIN? R. JUDAH SAYS: UNTIL THE PASSOVER IS OVER. R. MEIR SAYS: UNTIL

. Raba said: Once he has begun [to make mention] he should not discontinue. And so said R. Shesheth: Once he has begun he should not discontinue. Rab also retracted his statement. For R. Hananel said in the name of Rab: One counts twenty-one days from New Year¹ and begins to make mention in the same way as one counts Ten Days [of Penitence] from the New Year until the Day of Atonement; and once he has begun he should not discontinue. And the law is, once he has begun he should not discontinue.

THE END OF NISAN, AS IT IS SAID: AND HE CAUSETH TO COME DOWN FOR YOU THE RAIN, THE FORMER RAIN AND THE LATTER RAIN, AT THE FIRST.²

GEMARA. R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: Does then the former rain [fall] in Nisan? The former rain surely [falls] in Marcheshvan. It has been taught: Former rain, [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, This verse³ was fulfilled in the days [of the prophet] Joel, the son of Pethuel, That which the palmer-worm hath left hath the locust eaten etc.⁴ In that year, although Adar had passed yet no rain had fallen, and it was not until the first of Nisan that the first rain, came down. Thereupon the prophet said to Israel, ‘Go and sow’ — They replied, If a man has a kab⁵ of wheat or two kabim of barley, should he eat them and keep himself alive, or sow them and die? He answered: ‘Despite this, go and sow’ — A miracle happened for them and they discovered whatever [grain] which was hidden [in the chinks of] the walls and in the ant-holes; they proceeded to sow on the second, on the third, and on the fourth and the second rain came down on the fifth of Nisan; on the sixteenth of Nisan they offered the ‘Omer’;⁶ and thus it so came about that the grain which should take six months to ripen ripened in eleven days.⁷ To that generation was applied the scriptural verses, They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. Though he goeth on his way weeping that beareth the measure of seed etc.⁸ What is the meaning of, ‘Though he goeth on his way weeping that beareth the measure etc.’? — Rab Judah said: When the ox is ploughing, on his forward journey he weeps, but on his return journey he eats the young green from the furrows — And this is the force of the words, ‘He shall come home with joy’ — What is the meaning of, ‘Bearing his sheaves’? — R. Hisda said: Others say it was taught in a Baraita: The stalk was then one span and the ear two spans.

R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the scriptural verse, For the Lord hath called for a famine, and it shall also come upon the land seven years?⁹ What had they to eat during these seven years? — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, In the first year they ate what was stored up in the houses, in the second what was in the fields, in the third the flesh of clean animals, in the fourth the flesh of unclean animals, in the fifth the flesh of forbidden animals and reptiles, in the sixth the flesh of their sons and daughters and in the seventh the flesh of their own arms and thus the verse of Scripture was fulfilled, They eat every man the flesh of his own arms.¹⁰

Further, R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the scriptural verse, The Holy One in the midst of thee and I will not come in to the city?¹¹ [Surely it cannot be that] because the Holy One is in the midst of thee I shall not come into the city! He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: The Holy One, blessed be He, said, ‘I will not enter the heavenly Jerusalem until I can enter the earthly Jerusalem’. Is there then a heavenly Jerusalem?—Yes; for it is written, Jerusalem thou art builded as a city that is compact together.¹²

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, But they are altogether brutish and foolish; the vanities by which they are instructed are but a stock?¹³ — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan, There is one thing that brings about the perdition of the wicked in Gehenna¹⁴ and that is, idolatrous worship. Here it is written, ‘The vanities by which they are instructed’ and elsewhere [of the idols] it is written, They are a vanity, a work of delusion.¹⁵

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, For my people have committed two evils?¹⁶ Were they only two? Has he then ignored the fact that they were twenty-four?¹⁷ — He [R. Isaac] replied: There is one [evil] which is equal to two, and that is, idolatrous worship, for it is written, For my people have committed two evils: they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns.¹ And further it is written, For pass over to the isles of the Kittites, and see, and send unto Kedar, and consider diligently etc. Hath nation changed its gods, which are yet no gods? But my people hath changed its glory for that which doth not profit.²

A Tanna taught: The Kittites worship fire and the Kedarites water, and although they know that water extinguishes fire they have yet not changed their gods but my people hath changed their God for that which doth not profit.

R. Nahman further said to R. Isaac: What is the meaning of the verse, And it came to pass when Samuel was old.³ Did Samuel ever reach old age? He lived only for fifty-two years. For a Master said: If a man dies in his fifty-second year he is said to have died at the age reached by Samuel, the Ramathite?⁴ — He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: Old age came prematurely upon him, for it is written, It repenteth Me that I have set up Saul to be king.⁵ Samuel complained before Him: Sovereign of the Universe! You have made me equal to Moses and Aaron, for it is written, Moses and Aaron are amongst His priests, and Samuel among them that call upon His name.⁶ As in the case of Moses and Aaron the work of their hands did not come to nought in their lifetime, so too let not the work of my hands come to nought in my lifetime. The Holy One, blessed be He, replied: How shall I act? Shall Saul die? Of this Samuel will not approve. Shall Samuel die young? People will speak ill of him.⁷ Shall neither Saul nor Samuel die? The time has come for David to reign and one reign may not encroach on another even by a hair's breadth. Thereupon the Holy One, blessed be He, said: I will make him prematurely old and this is what is written, Now Saul was sitting in Gibeah, under the Tamarisk tree in Ramah.⁸ How comes Gibeah to Ramah?⁹ This is to teach you that it was the prayer of Samuel the Ramathite that was the cause of Saul's two and a half years'¹⁰ sojourn as king in Gibeah? Should then one man be put aside because of another? — Yes, for R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: What is the meaning of the verse, Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets, I have slain them by the words of my mouth?¹¹ Scripture does not say, by their works,' but, 'by the words of my mouth', this proves that one may be put aside because of another.

R. Nahman and R. Isaac were sitting at a meal and R. Nahman said to R. Isaac: Let the Master expound something. He replied: Thus said R. Johanan: One should not converse at meals lest the windpipe acts before the gullet and his life will thereby be endangered. After they ended the meal he added: Thus said R. Johanan: Jacob our patriarch is not dead. He [R. Nahman] objected: Was it then for nought that he was bewailed and embalmed and buried?—The other replied: I derive this from a scriptural verse, as It is said, Therefore fear thou not, O Jacob, My servant, saith the Lord; neither be dismayed, O Israel,- for, lo, I will save thee from afar and thy seed from the land of their captivity.¹²

The verse likens him [Jacob] to his seed [Israel]; as his seed will then be alive so he too will be alive.

R. Isaac said: Whosoever repeats [the name] Rahab, Rahab, becomes immediately subject to an onset of issue.¹³ Thereupon R. Nahman said to him: I have repeated it and was not in any way affected. R. Isaac replied: I speak only of one who knew her intimately (and recalls her likeness).¹⁴ When they were about to part, [R. Nahman] said: Pray Master, bless me. He replied: Let me tell you a parable — To what may this be compared? To a man who was journeying in the desert; he was hungry, weary and thirsty and he lighted upon a tree the fruits of which were sweet, its shade pleasant, and a stream of water flowing beneath it; he ate of its fruits, drank of the water, and rested under its shade. When he was about to continue his journey, he said: Tree, O Tree, with what shall I bless thee? Shall I say to thee, 'May thy fruits be sweet'? They are sweet already; that thy shade be pleasant? It is already pleasant; that a stream of water may flow beneath thee? Lo, a stream of water flows already beneath thee; therefore [I say], 'May it be [God's] will that all the shoots taken from thee be like unto thee'. So also with you. With what shall I bless you? With [the knowledge of the Torah?] You already possess [knowledge of the Torah]. With riches? You have riches already. With children? You have children already. Hence [I say], 'May it be [God's] will that your offspring be like unto you'.

Our Rabbis have taught: ['Former rain is termed] 'yoreh',¹ because it warns² people to plaster their roofs and to gather in their fruits and to attend to all their needs.³ Another explanation: It saturates⁴ the ground and waters it right down to its depths, as it is said, Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof, thou makest her soft with showers; thou blessest the growth thereof.⁵ Another explanation: [It is termed] 'yoreh' because it comes down⁶ gently and not heavily. Or perhaps [it is termed] 'yoreh' because it causes the fruit to fall⁷ and it washes away the seed, and the trees? The text [therefore] adds 'malkosh' ['latter rain'];⁸ just as latter rain is a blessing, so too is former rain. Or perhaps [it is termed] 'malkosh',⁹ because It razes the houses to the ground and it shatters the trees and brings up the crickets? The text [therefore] adds 'yoreh'; just as former rain is a blessing so too is latter rain. How do we know that 'yoreh' itself is a blessing? — For it is written, Be glad then ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God; for He giveth you the former rain [moreh] in just measure and He causeth to come down for you the rain, the former rain and the latter rain, at the first.¹⁰

Our Rabbis have taught: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. You say, Former rain in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan; perhaps it is otherwise, former rain in Tishri and latter rain in Iyar? The text [therefore] adds, in its due season.¹¹ R. Nehilai b. Idi said in the name of Samuel: [‘Latter rain’ is termed] ‘malkosh’ because it is a thing that removes the stiff-neckedness of Israel.¹² The school of R. Ishmael taught: It is something that fills the stalks with grain.¹³ In a Baraitha it has been taught: [It is] something which falls both upon the ears and upon the stalks.¹⁴

Our Rabbis have taught: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan. You say, Former rain in Marcheshvan; perhaps, on Kislev? The text [therefore] adds, ‘in its due season, former rain and latter rain, as latter rain is that which comes in due season (since should Nisan pass and no rain fall, it is not a sign of blessing)¹⁵ so too former is that which comes in due season.

Another [Baraitha] teaches: Former rain [falls] in Marcheshvan and latter rain in Nisan; this is the opinion of R. Meir; but the Sages say: Former rain [falls] in Kislev. Who are the Sages? R. Hisda replied: It is R. Jose. For it has been taught: Which is the first rainfall?¹⁶ The early [rain] falls on the third of Marcheshvan, the intermediate on the seventh, the late on the seventeenth; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: On the seventh, on the seventeenth, and on the twenty-third. R. Jose says: On the seventeenth, on the twenty-third and on the first of Kislev. And likewise R. Jose used to say: The individuals do not begin to fast until the first day of Kislev. R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to the opinion of R. Jose.

Amemar reported R. Hisda's statement in the following version: On the third day of Marcheshvan we pray for rain; Rabban Gamaliel says, On the seventh of the month. R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to Rabban Gamaliel. In accordance with whose view then is the following which has been taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: If rain falls on seven days in succession you may consider it as the combination of the first, the second [or the second] and the third rainfall?¹⁷ — It is in accordance with the opinion of R. Jose.¹⁸ R. Hisda said: The halachah is according to R. Jose. The reason for giving a date for the first rainfall is evident seeing that from that date we begin to pray for rain; likewise the date of the third rainfall is given because from that date we begin to fast; but what may be the reason for giving the date of the second rainfall?—R. Zera replied: It has to do with Vows. For we have learnt:

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 6b

If one interdicts himself by a vow [from the enjoyment of anything] until the rainy season or until rain has fallen, then his vow remains operative until the second rainfall.¹ R. Zebid said: It has to do with Olives — We have learnt: When is it permissible for any man to take of the gleanings² [of the field] and of the forgotten sheaves³ and of the corners of the field?⁴ After the nemushot have departed. When [is it permissible to take] of the grapes that have fallen off the branches and of the gleanings of the vine?⁵ After the poor have left the vineyard and have come back again. When of the olives?⁶ After the second rainfall.⁷ Who are the nemushoth?- R. Johanan said: Old People who walk on a staff⁸. Resh Lakish said: Those who glean behind the gleaners.⁹

R. Papa said: [The date of the second rainfall is necessary] so that travellers should know whether they may walk on private paths¹⁰ [across the fields]. For a Master said:¹¹ It is permissible for any one to walk on private paths until the second rainfall. R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [The date is necessary] for the disposal of the produce grown during the sabbatical year. For we have learnt: Until when is it permissible to derive benefit from the burning of straw and stubble grown in the sabbatical year? Until the second rainfall.¹² Why? Because it is written, And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land;¹³ so long as there is food for the beast in the field you may feed your cattle in the house, but when there is no more food in the field for the beast to eat, you must withhold food that is in your house from the cattle.

R. Abbahu said: What is the meaning of rebi'ah?¹⁴ That which fructifies the ground — This is according to the teaching of Rab Judah who said: Rain is the husband of the soil, for it is written, For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither except it water the earth, and make it bring forth and bud.¹⁵

R. Abbahu further said: The first rainfall [to be beneficial] should be sufficient to penetrate the soil one handbreadth deep, the second should be sufficient to make of it a stopper for a cask.

R. Hisda said: When it has rained sufficient to make [of the soil] a stopper for a cask then [the curse contained in the words 'and He will shut up'¹⁶ does not apply.

R. Hisda further said: If rain came down before [the time for reciting in the Shema'], 'and He will shut up' then the curse contained in these words does not apply.¹⁷ Abaye thereupon interjected: This only holds good when the rain fell before [the time for the recital of the words,] 'and He will shut up' in the evening [Shema'], but if rain fell before [the time for their recital in] the morning [Shema'] then the curse can still be said to apply.¹⁸ For R. Judah b. Isaac said: The morning clouds have no significance, for it is written, O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? For your goodness is as the morning cloud, etc.¹⁹ Said R. Papa to Abaye: But people say, if it rains when the gates are opened [in the morning], 'lay down thy sack ass-driver and sleep'²⁰ — This is no contradiction. In the one case the heavens are overcast with thick clouds and the other with light clouds.²¹

Rab Judah said: Happy is the year wherein [the month of] Tebeth is widowed.²² Some say it is so because the gardens do not lie waste²³ [or, because the schools are not empty]; others say, Because the grain will not become subject to blast. Is that so? Did not R. Hisda say: Happy is the year wherein [the month of] Tebeth is muddy!²⁴ — This is no contradiction. The former is the case when rain had already fallen [in the previous months] and the latter when it had not yet fallen.

R. Hisda further said: If rain falls on some parts of the country and not on others then [the curse contained in the words], ‘and He will shut up’ cannot be said to apply. Is that so? Is it not written, And I also have withholden the rain from you, when there were three months to the harvest: and I caused it to rain upon one city and caused it not to rain upon another city; one piece was rained upon etc.²⁵ And referring to this verse, Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Both are a curse! — There is no contradiction. In the one case [Scripture speaks of] abnormal rain and in the other of normal rain . R. Ashi said: This can in fact be proved from the use of the word timoter in the verse, that is to say, it will be a place [flooded by] rain.²⁶ And thus [the interpretation] is proved.

R. Abbahu said: When do we [begin to] recite the benediction over rain?²⁷ When the bridegroom goes forth to meet the bride.²⁸ What benediction should one recite? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: ‘We give thanks unto Thee, O Lord, our God for every single drop which thou hast caused to fall upon us’. And R. Johanan concluded the benediction thus: ‘Though our mouths were full of song as the sea, and our tongues of exultation as the multitude of its waves, etc.!’ until, ‘Let not Thy mercies forsake us O Lord, our God, even as they have not forsaken us . Blessed art Thou to Whom abundant thanksgivings are due’. ‘Abundant thanksgivings’ and not ‘all the thanksgivings’? — Raba replied: Read, ‘The God to Whom thanksgivings are due’. R. Papa said: Therefore Abbahu said: The day when rain fails is greater than [the day of] the Revival of the Dead, for the Revival of the Dead is for the righteous only whereas rain is both for the righteous and for the wicked. And he differs from the opinion of R. Joseph who said: As [rain] is equal to the Revival of the Dead the mention of it has therefore been inserted in the section of the Revival of the Dead.¹

Rab Judah said: The day when rain falls is as great as the day when the Torah was given, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain:² and by 'doctrine' surely, Torah is meant as it is said, For I give you good doctrine, forsake ye not my Torah.³ Raba said: It is even greater than the day when the Torah was given, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain.⁴ Who is dependent upon whom? You must needs say, the lesser upon the greater.⁵

Raba pointed out a contradiction. It is written 'My doctrine shall drop as the rain', and immediately on this follows, My speech shall distil as dew.⁶ [The implication here is]. if the scholar is a worthy person then he is like unto dew, but if he is not then drop him like rain.⁷

It has been taught in a Baraita: R. Banna'ah used to say: Whosoever occupies himself with the Torah for its own sake his learning becomes an elixir of life to him, for it is said, It is a tree of life to them that grasp it;⁸ and it is further said, It shall be as health to thy navel;⁹ and it is also said, For whoso findeth me findeth life.¹⁰ But, whosoever occupies himself with the Torah not for its own sake, it becomes to him a deadly poison, as it is said, My doctrine shall drop as the rain, and 'arifa surely means, death, as it is said, And they shall break [we'arfu] the heifer's neck there in the valley.¹¹

R. Jeremiah said to R. Zera: Pray, Master, come and teach. The latter replied: I do not feel well enough¹² and am not able to do so. [Then said R. Jeremiah] Pray, Master, expound something of an aggadic character, and he replied: Thus said R. Johanan: What is the meaning of the verse, For is the tree of the field man?¹³ Is then man the tree of the field? [This can only be explained if we connect the verse with the words immediately before it] where it is written, For thou mayest eat of them, but thou shalt not cut them down; but then again it is written, 'It thou shalt destroy and cut down'?¹⁴ How is this to be explained?-If the scholar is a worthy person learn [eat] from him and do not shun [cut] him, but if he is not destroy him and cut him down.

R. Hama b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the verse, Iron sharpneth iron? -¹⁵ This is to teach you that just as in the case of one [iron] iron sharpeneth the other so also do two scholars sharpen each others mind by halachah.

Rabbah b. Hanah said: Why are the words of the Torah likened to fire, as it is said, Is not my word like as fire? saith the Lord?¹⁶ This is to teach you that just as fire does not ignite of itself so too the words of the Torah do not endure with him who studies alone. This is in agreement with what R. Jose b. Hanina said: What is the meaning of the verse, A sword is upon the lonely,¹⁷ and they shall become fools?¹⁸ This means, destruction comes upon the enemies¹⁹ of such scholars who confine themselves to private study; and what is even more they become stultified, as it is said, And they shall become fools; and what is more they are guilty of sin. For here it is written, And they shall become fools, and there it is written, For that we have done foolishly and for that we have sinned.²⁰ If you wish, you can infer it from the following verse, The princes of Zoan are become fools . . . they have caused Egypt to go astray.²¹

R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Why are the words of the Torah likened to a tree, as it is said, It is a tree of life to them that grasp it? This is to teach you. just as a small tree may set on fire a bigger tree so too it is with scholars, the younger sharpen the minds of the older. This will be in agreement with what R. Hanina said: I have learnt much from my teachers, and from my colleagues more than from my teachers, but from my disciples more than from them all.

R. Hanina b. Papa pointed out a contradiction . It is written, Unto him that is thirsty bring ye water;²² and it is also written Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water.²³ If he is a worthy disciple, then, ‘Unto him that is thirsty bring ye water’, but if he is not, then, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water’.

R. Hanina b. Hama pointed out a contradiction. It is written, Let thy springs be dispersed abroad,²⁴ and it is also written, Let them be only thine own!²⁵ If he is a worthy disciple. ‘Let thy springs be dispersed abroad,’²⁶ but if not, ‘Let them be thine own’.

R. Hanina b. Ida said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto water-as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye for water’? This is to teach you, just as water flows from a higher level to a lower, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded. R. Oshaia said: Why are the words of the Torah likened unto these three liquids, water, wine and milk — as it is written, ‘Ho, everyone that thirsteth come ye for water’; and it is written, Come ye, buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without money, and without price?²⁷ This is to teach you, just as these three liquids can only be preserved in the most inferior of vessels, so too the words of the Torah endure only with him who is meekminded. This is illustrated by the story of the daughter of the Roman Emperor²⁸ who addressed R. Joshua b. Hanania, ‘O glorious Wisdom in an ugly vessel’. He replied, ‘Does not your father keep wine in an earthenware vessel?’ She asked, ‘Wherein else shall he keep it?’ He said to her, ‘You who are nobles should keep it in vessels of gold and silver’. Thereupon she went and told this to her father and he had the wine put into vessels of gold and silver and it became sour. When he was informed of this he asked his daughter, ‘Who gave you this advice?’ She replied. ‘R. Joshua b. Hanania’ — Thereupon the Emperor had him summoned before him and asked him, ‘Why did you give her such advice?’ He replied, ‘I answered her according to the way that she spoke to me’. But are there not good-looking people who are learned?

— If these very people were ugly they would be still more learned.¹ Another explanation: Just as these three liquids can become unfit for consumption only through inattention,² so too the words of the Torah are forgotten only through inattention.

R. Hania b. Hanina said: The day when rain falls is as great as the day on which heaven and earth were created, as it is said, Drop down, ye heavens from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, that they may bring forth salvation, and let her cause righteousness to spring up together; I the Lord have created it.³ It is not said, 'I created them', but I have created it.⁴

R. Oshaia said: The day when rain falls is great for on it even salvation springs forth and waxes great, as it is said, 'Let the earth open, that they may bring forth salvation'.

R. Tanhum b. Hanilai said, No rain falls unless the sins of Israel have been forgiven, as it is said, Lord, Thou hast been favourable unto Thy land, Thou hast turned the Captivity of Jacob. Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of Thy people, Thou hast pardoned all their sins. Selah.⁵ Ze'iri of Dahabath⁶ said to Rabina: You have learnt it from this verse, but we have learnt from the following verse, Then hear Thou in heaven and forgive the sin etc.⁷

R. Tanhum the son of R. Hiyya of Kefar Acco⁸ said: Rain is withheld only when the enemies of Israel⁹ have merited destruction as it is said, Drought and heat consume the snow waters; so doth the nether world those that have sinned.¹⁰ Ze'iri of Dahabath said to Rabina: You have learnt from this verse, but we have learnt it from the following verse, And He will shut up the heaven . . . and ye perish quickly.¹¹

R. Hisda said: Rain is withheld only because of the neglect to bring heave-offerings and tithes, as it is said, Drought and heat¹² consume the snow waters. How is this derived from the verse? — In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: Because you have not performed in the summer the things I have commanded you, you shall be denied snow waters in the winter.

R. Simeon b. Pazzi said: Rain is withheld only because of those who talk slander, as it is said, The north wind bringeth forth rain, and a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.¹³

R. Salla said in the name of R. Hamnuna: Rain is withheld only because of the insolent, as it is said, Therefore the showers have been withheld, and there hath been no latter rain; yet thou hadst a harlot's forehead etc.¹⁴

R. Salla further said in the name of R. Hamnuna: Any man who is insolent stumbles in the end into sin, for it is said, 'Thou hadst a harlot's forehead'. R. Nahman said: It is evident that he [actually] stumbled into sin, for it is said 'Thou hadst' and not, 'thou wilt have'. Rabbah the son of R. Huna said: It is permissible to call 'wicked' any one who is insolent, as it is said, A wicked man hardeneth his face.¹⁵ R. Nahman the son of R. Isaac said: One may even hate him, as it is said, And the boldness of his face is changed.¹⁶ Do not read yeshuneh [changed] but yesuneh [hated].

R. Kaltina said: Rain is withheld only because of the neglect of the Torah, as it is said, By slothfulness the rafters sank in [yimak].¹⁷ Because of the sloth displayed by Israel in not occupying themselves with the Torah the enemy of the Holy One, blessed be He,¹⁸ becomes Poor. Mak, actually means, poor, as it is said, But if he be too poor [mak] for thy valuation.¹⁹ Mekoreh actually denotes God, as it is said, Who layest [ha-mekoreh] the beams of Thine upper chambers in the waters.²⁰ R. Joseph derived it from the following verse, And how men see not the light which is bright in the skies; but the wind passeth and cleanseth them.²¹ And 'light' surely means Torah, as it is said, For the commandment is a lamp and the teaching [Torah] is light.²² 'Which is bright in the skies': [With reference to this] it was taught In the school of R. Ishmael: Even when the heavens are full of white spotted clouds ready to cause dew and rain to fall a wind passes and cleanses them.²³

R. Ammi said: Rain is withheld only because of the sin of violent robbery, as it is said, He covereth His hands with the lightning;²⁴ that is to say, for the sin [of violent robbery committed by] their hands He covereth the light. And 'hands' surely signifies, violent robbery, as it is said, And from the violence that is in their hands,²⁵ and 'light' Surely [stands for] rain, as it is said, He spreadeth abroad the cloud of His lightning.²⁶ What is then his remedy? — Let a man make many prayers, as it is said, And giveth it a charge that it strike the mark [be-mafgi'ah],²⁷ and pegi'ah is prayer, as it is said, Therefore pray not thou for this people . . . neither make intercession [tifga'] to me.²⁸

R. Ammi further said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the iron be blunt, and one do not whet the edge?²⁹ If you see the sky hard as iron so that neither dew nor rain fall, this is to be attributed to the deeds of the generation which are corrupt, as it is said, And one do not whet the edge. What then shall be their remedy? Let them make many prayers [for mercy], as it is said, Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct.³⁰ [The latter words indicate,] how much more [efficacious their prayer would prove] if their deeds had originally been righteous.³¹ to whom his studies are as hard as iron,¹ it is because he has failed to systematize his studies, as it is said, And one do not whet the edge.² What is his remedy? Let him attend the school even more regularly, as it is said, Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct. [The latter words indicate] how much more profitable would his efforts be if he had originally systematized his studies. Thus for example, Resh Lakish made it his practice to repeat in systematic order his studies forty times corresponding to the forty days³ during which the Torah was given, and only then would he come before R. Johanan. R. Adda b. Abbahu made it his practice to repeat in systematic order his studies twenty-four times corresponding to the [twenty-four books⁴ which embody] the Torah, the Prophets and the Hagiographa, and only then would he come before Raba.

(29) Eccl. X, 10. R. Ammi recalling the words ונתתי את שמיכם כברזל in Lev. XXVI, 19 endeavours to find an allusion in ברזל in the verse quoted. to the hardness of the heavens. He takes the negative לא as לו 'to it', 'of it' and interprets the word קלקל 'to whet', in the later Hebrew sense of, 'to be corrupt', thus rendering the face of it (of the generation) is corrupt.

Raba said: If you see a student who finds his studies as hard as iron, it is because his teacher does not encourage him,⁵ as it is said, 'and one do not whet the edge'.⁶ What is his remedy? Let him seek many companions [to intercede for him with his teacher], as it is said. 'Then must he put to more strength; but wisdom is profitable to direct.' [The latter words indicate,] how much more successful he would have been had his efforts originally found favour with his teacher.

R. Ammi further said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the serpent bite before it is charmed, then the charmer hath no advantage?⁷ If you see a generation over whom the heavens are rust coloured⁸ like copper so that neither dew nor rain falls, it is because that generation is wanting in men who pray softly.⁹ What then is their remedy? Let them go to one skilled in the art of praying softly, as it is written, The noise thereof telleth concerning it.¹⁰ 'Then the charmer hath no advantage' [means]: 'As to him who is skilled in the art of praying softly and does not do so what benefit has he?'¹¹ But if he has prayed softly and was not answered, what is his remedy? Let him go to the most pious man of that generation that he may intercede abundantly for him, as it is said, And giveth it a charge that it strike the mark [be-mafgia'h]. and striking the mark [pegi'ah] is prayer, as it is said, Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up cry nor prayer for them, neither make intercession [tifga'] to Me.¹² But if he did pray softly and proved successful and on account of this he becomes overproud he thereby brings divine displeasure upon the world, as it is said, The cattle also concerning the storm that cometh up.¹³

Raba said: Two scholars who reside in the same city but are intolerant of each other in matters of halachah provoke anger and bring it upon themselves, as it is said, The cattle also concerning the storm that cometh up.¹⁴

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the verse, If the serpent bite before it is charmed, then the charmer hath no advantage? In the Messianic age all animals will assemble and come to the serpent and say to him, ‘The lion claws [his victim] and devours him, the wolf tears him and devours him, but as for thee what benefit dost thou derive? His reply will be, The charmer hath no advantage.¹⁵

R. Ammi said: A man's prayer is only answered if he takes his heart into his hand,¹⁶ as it is said, Let us lift up our heart with our hands.¹⁷ [But it is not so. Surely]¹⁸ Samuel appointed an amora¹⁹ to act for him and his exposition ran thus: But they beguiled Him with their mouth, and lied unto Him with their tongue. For their heart was not steadfast with Him, neither were they faithful in His covenant; and yet, But He being full of compassion, forgiveth iniquity etc.²⁰ — This is no contradiction. The one refers to the individual, and the other to the community.²¹

R. Ammi said: Rain falls only for the sake of Men of Faith,²² as it is said, Truth springeth out of the earth and righteousness hath looked down from heaven.²³

R. Ammi further said: Come and see how great the Men of Faith are as is evidenced from the episode of the Weasel²⁴ and the Well. If this is the case with one who trusts in the Weasel and the Well how much more so if one trusts in the Holy One blessed be He!

R. Johanan said: He who leads a righteous life [on earth below]²⁵ is judged strictly [in heaven] above, as it is said, Truth springeth out of the earth and righteousness hath looked down from heaven. R. Hiyya b. Abin in the name of R. Huna [adduced this lesson] from this verse, And Thy wrath according to the fear that is due unto Thee.²⁶ Resh Lakish said: [It may be adduced] from this verse, Thou didst take away him that joyfully worked righteousness, those that remembered Thee in Thy ways — behold Thou wast wroth, and we sinned-upon them have we stayed of old, that we might be saved.²⁷

R. Joshua b. Levi said: He who joyfully bears the chastisements that befall him brings salvation to the world as it is said, ‘Upon them have we stayed of old, that we might be saved’.

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the verse, And He will shut up the heaven?²⁸ — When the heavens are shut up so that neither dew nor rain falls it is like to a woman who is in labour but who cannot give birth. This is in keeping with what Resh Lakish said in the name of Bar Kappara: ‘Withholding’ is applied to rain, and ‘withholding’ is applied to a woman;

(13) Job XXXVI, 33- The verse is generally interpreted, that the cattle through their greater sensitiveness to atmospheric conditions feel in advance the coming of the storm. The Gemara reads מקנה (for מקנה of the Massoretic Text) in the sense of, acquire, and it takes אף to be a noun meaning anger; and עולה exalted or elated (with pride). The meaning of the verse according to this interpretation would be: He brings upon the world divine displeasure who is overbearing with pride because his prayer was answered.

(14) Raba takes מקנה=...התקנא ב to provoke; אף as previously, and על יעולה= that cometh up.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 8b

'withholding' is applied to a woman, as it is said, For the Lord had fast closed up all the wombs;¹ and 'withholding' is applied to rain, as it is written, 'And He will shut up the heaven.' 'Bearing' is applied to a woman, and 'bearing' is applied to rain; 'bearing' is applied to a woman, as it is written, And she conceived and bore a son;² and 'bearing' is applied to rain, as it is written, And make it bear³ and bud.⁴ 'Remembering' is applied to a woman and 'remembering' is applied to rain; 'remembering' is applied to a woman, as it is written, And the Lord remembered Sarah;⁵ and 'remembering' is applied to rain, as it is written, Thou hast remembered the earth, and watered her, greatly enriching her, with the river of God that is full of water.⁶ What is the meaning of, 'With the river of God that is full of water'? — A Tanna taught: There is in heaven a kind of chamber from which the rain issues.

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: What is the meaning of the verse, Whether it be for correction, or for His earth, or for mercy, that He cause it to come?⁷ If the rain is 'for correction,' [then it falls] upon the mountains and upon the hills; if it is 'for mercy', He causes it to come upon His earth, upon the fields and upon the vineyards;⁸ if it is 'for correction', upon the trees; if it is upon His earth, upon the seeds [in the ground]; if it is 'for mercy', He causes it to come for cisterns, pits and caves.

In the days of R. Samuel b. Nahmani there was a famine and pestilence. People asked, What shall we do? Shall we pray for [the removal] of the two? That is not possible. Let us then pray for [the removal of] the pestilence and we will endure the famine. Thereupon R. Samuel b. Nahmani said to them: Let us rather pray [for the removal of] the famine, because when the All-Merciful gives plenty, He gives it for the living, as it is said, Thou openest Thy hand, and satisfiest every living thing with favour.⁹ How do we know that it is not fitting to pray for two things [at the same time]? — Because it is written, So we fasted and besought our God for this.¹⁰ ‘This’ would indicate that there were other things to pray for. In the West [Palestine] it was reported in the name of R. Haggai that it could be adduced from this verse, That they might ask mercy of the God of heaven concerning this secret.¹¹ ‘This would indicate that there were other things too [to pray for]. In the days of R. Zera there was a religious persecution and fasting was also prohibited. R. Zera said to his colleagues: Let us now resolve to fast and when the decree is rescinded we will observe these fasts. His colleagues asked him: What is your authority for this? He replied: Because it is written, Then said he unto me, ‘Fear not, Daniel, for from the first day when thou didst set thy heart to understand, and to humble thyself before thy God, thy words were heard’.¹²

R. Isaac said: If rain falls on the eve of Sabbath then though the years be [years of drought] as in the days of Elijah¹³ it is yet none-the-less but a sign of [divine] anger.¹⁴ This is in agreement with the statement of Rabbah b. Shila who said: The day when rain falls is as hard [to bear]¹⁵ as a day of Judgment.¹⁶ Amemar said: Were it not that mankind must have rain we would pray and have it cease.

R. Isaac further said: Sunshine on the Sabbath is an act of kindness towards the poor, as it is said, But unto you that fear My name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings.¹⁷

R. Isaac further said: The day when rain falls is great for thereon even the peruta¹⁸ in one's purse is blessed, as it is said, To give the rain of Thy land in its season, and to bless all the work of thy hands.¹⁹

R. Isaac further said: Blessing is only possible in things hidden from sight, as it is said, The Lord will command the blessing with thee in thy barns.²⁰ In the school of R. Ishmael it was taught: Blessing is only possible in things not under the direct control of the eye, as it is said, ‘The Lord will command the blessing with thee in thy barns.’

Our Rabbis have taught: On entering the barn to measure the new grain one shall recite the benediction, ‘May it be Thy will O Lord, our God, that Thou mayest send blessing upon the work of our hands’. Once he has begun to measure he says, ‘Blessed be He who sends blessing into this heap’. If, however, he first measured the grain and then recited the benediction then his prayer is in vain, because blessing is not to be found in anything that has been already weighed or measured or numbered, but only in a thing hidden from sight.

(Mnemonic: Gathering of Armies, Charity, Tithes, Sustenance.)

R. Johanan said: The day on which rain falls is as great as the day of the Gathering of exiled [Israel,] as it is said, Turn our captivity: O Lord, as the streams in the dry land.²¹ By ‘streams’ rain is meant, as it is said, And the channels of the sea appeared.²²

R. Johanan further said: The day when rain falls is great, for thereon even warring armies cease [fighting], as it is said, Watering her ridges abundantly, settling down the furrows thereof.²³

R. Johanan further said: Rain is withheld only on account of those who subscribe to charity in public and fail to pay, as it is said, As vapours and wind without rain, so is he that boasteth himself of a false gift²⁴

R. Johanan further said: What is the meaning of the verse

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 9a

, Thou shalt surely tithe?¹ Give tithes that you may be enriched.² R. Johanan met the young son³ of Resh Lakish and said to him, 'Recite to me the Bible verse [you have learnt to-day]. The latter replied, 'Thou shalt surely tithe', at the same time asking, 'What may be the meaning of these words?' R. Johanan answered, 'Give tithes that you may be enriched'. The boy then asked, 'Whence do you adduce this?' R. Johanan replied: 'Go test it [for yourself]'. The boy thereupon asked: Is it permissible to try the Holy One, blessed be He, seeing that it is written, Ye shall not try the Lord?⁴ -R. Johanan replied: Thus said R. Oshaia: The case of tithe-giving is excepted [from the prohibition], as it is said, Bring ye the whole tithe unto the storehouse, that there may be food in My house, and try Me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall be more than sufficiency.⁵ (What is the meaning [of the words], 'That there shall be more than sufficiency?' — R. Rami b. Hama said in the name of Rab: Until your lips grow weary from saying, 'It is enough'.) The boy thereupon exclaimed, Had I reached this verse [in my Bible studies] I should need neither you nor R. Oshaia, your teacher. On another occasion R. Johanan met the young son of Resh Lakish sitting and reciting the verse, The foolishness of man perverteth his way; and his heart fretteth against the Lord.⁶ R. Johanan thereupon⁷ exclaimed in amazement: Is there anything written in the Hagiographa to which allusion cannot be found in the Torah? The boy replied: Is then this verse not alluded to in the Torah, seeing that it is written, And their heart failed them, and they turned trembling one to another, saying: 'What is this that God hath done unto us?'⁸ R. Johanan lifted up his eyes and stared at him, whereupon the boy's mother came and took him away, Saying to him, 'Go away from him, lest he do unto you as he did unto your father'.⁹

R. Johanan further said: Rain may fall even for the sake of an individual but sustenance [is granted] only for the sake of the many. [That] rain [may fall] for the sake of even one man may be learnt from the verse where it is written, The Lord will open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven to give the rain of thy land;¹⁰ sustenance for the sake of the many, as it is written, Behold I will cause to rain bread for you.¹¹

An objection was raised: R. Jose the son of R. Judah says: Three good leaders had arisen for Israel, namely. Moses, Aaron and Miriam, and for their sake three good things were conferred [upon Israel], namely, the Well,¹² the Pillar of Cloud and the Manna; the Well, for the merit of Miriam; the Pillar of Cloud for the merit of Aaron; the Manna for the merit of Moses. When Miriam died the well disappeared, as it is said, And Miriam died there,¹³ and immediately follows [the verse], And there was no water for the congregation; and it returned for the merit of the [latter] two. When Aaron died the clouds of glory disappeared, as it is written, And the Canaanite, the king of Arad heard.¹⁴ What news did he hear? He heard that Aaron had died, and that the clouds of glory had disappeared; he thought that he was free to make war on Israel. Therefore it is written, And all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead.¹⁵ With reference to which R. Abahu said: Do not read, 'they saw' [wayir-u] but 'they were seen' [wayyero-u].¹⁶ This is also in accordance with the view of Resh Lakish who said: [The word] ki may be used in four different senses, namely, 'if' 'perhaps'. 'but', 'because'.¹⁷ The two [the Well and the Cloud] returned because of the merit of Moses, but when Moses died all of them disappeared, as it is said, And I cut off the three shepherds in one month.¹⁸ Did they then all [three] die in one month? Did not Miriam die in Nisan, Aaron in Ab and Moses in Adar? This therefore is meant to teach you that the three good gifts which were given because of their merit were nullified and they all disappeared in one month. Thus we find that sustenance¹⁹ may be granted for the sake of one individual! — The case of Moses is exceptional; as he prayed on behalf of the many, he himself is regarded as a multitude.

R. Hunah b. Manoah and R. Samuel b. Idi and R. Hiyya of Wastanya²⁰ were wont to attend the discourses of Raba. When Raba died they came to those of R. Papa and whenever he expounded to them a law which did not appeal to them they winked at one another, and thus hurt him greatly.

R. Shimi b. Ashi was wont to frequent [the discourses] of R. Papa and used to annoy him, very much with questions. One day he observed that R. Papa fell on his face² [in prayer] and he heard him saying. 'May God preserve me from the insolence of Shimi'. The latter thereupon vowed silence and annoyed him no more [with questions].

Resh Lakish too held the view that rain may fall even for the sake of an individual, for Resh Lakish said: Whence do we adduce that rain may fall even for the sake of an individual? Because it is written, Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain, even of the Lord that maketh lightnings, and He will give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.³ You might have thought, only when all need [it]. therefore Scripture says. 'to everyone'. Further, it has been taught: Had Scripture said, 'to everyone' [only] you might have thought [rain would fall] only when one needs it for all his fields, therefore Scripture adds, 'field'. Had the word 'field' [been used] you might have thought only when the whole field needs [rain] Scripture therefore adds, 'grass'. This is borne out by the case of Daniel b. Kattina who had a garden which he was in the habit of inspecting daily and he would exclaim, 'This bed needs water and that one does not'; and rain would fall on those beds that needed water.

What is the meaning of the verse, 'Even the Lord that maketh hazizim [lightnings]? — R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: This teaches that God provides a haziz for each righteous man. What are hazizim? Rab Judah said: Porehoth.⁴ R. Johanan said: Porehoth are a sign of [coming] rain. What are porehoth? — R. Papa said: A thin cloud under a thick cloud. Rab Judah said: Should fine rain come down before the heavy rain then the rain will continue for some time; should it follow a heavy downpour of rain then the rain will soon cease. If before the rain, the rain will continue, of this the sieve serves as a reminder; if after a heavy rain, the rain will cease, of this goats' excrement serves as a reminder.⁵

'Ulla chanced to be in Babylon and observing light clouds [porehoth] he exclaimed, 'Remove the vessels for rain is now coming'. No rain however fell and he exclaimed, As the Babylonians are false, so too is their rain.

'Ulla chanced to be in Babylon and observing that a basketful of dates was being sold for a zuz⁶ he exclaimed, 'A basketful of honey for a zuz and yet the Babylonians do not occupy themselves with the study of the Torah'. During the night he was in agony [from eating the dates] and he then exclaimed, 'A basketful of knives for a zuz and yet the Babylonians occupy themselves with the study of the Torah.

It has been taught: R. Eliezer said: The whole world draws its water supply from the waters of the ocean, as it is said, But there went up a mist from the earth and watered the whole of the ground.⁷ Thereupon R. Joshua said to him: But are not the waters of the ocean salty? He replied: They are sweetened by the clouds. R. Joshua said: The whole world drinks from the upper waters, as it is said, And drinketh water as the rain of heaven cometh down.⁸ If so, what is the force of the verse, 'But there went up a mist from the earth'? This teaches that the clouds grow in strength as they rise towards the firmament and then open their mouth as a flask and catch the rain water, as it is said, Which distil rain from His vapour,⁹ they are perforated like a sieve and they slowly distil [mehashroth] waters on the ground. as it is said, Distilling [hashroth] of waters, thick clouds of the skies;¹⁰ there is but one hand-breadth space between one drop and another, in order to teach you that the day on which rain falls is as great as the day whereon heaven and earth were created, as it is said, Who doeth great things past finding out;¹¹ and it is written, Who giveth rain upon the earth;¹² and it is also written, Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, the Lord . . . His discernment is past finding out?¹³

Whose view is supported by the verse, Who waterest the mountains from Thine upper chambers,¹⁴ which R. Johanan interprets to mean the upper chambers of the Almighty? Whose view? — It is that of R. Joshua. And R. Eliezer's¹⁵ view?—As [the waters] ultimately find their way above [Scripture] aptly terms them, 'from Thine upper chambers'¹⁴ For if it were not so, how will you explain, Powder and dust from heaven?¹⁶ What you must [say is] that as these rise upwards [from the ground] the words, 'from heaven' are quite aptly applied to them. Likewise as the waters eventually find their way above Scripture aptly refers to them as, from Thine upper chambers'. Whose view supports R. Hanina who said this, He gathereth the waters of the sea together as a heap; He layeth up the deeps in storehouses,¹⁷ [as meaning,] Who caused the storehouses to be filled with grain? The deeps—the view of R. Eliezer. And what of R. Joshua's [view]?¹⁸ — That [verse] refers to Creation of the world.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 10a

Our Rabbis have taught: Palestine was created first and then the rest of the world, as it is said, While as yet He had not made the earth, nor the fields.¹ Palestine is watered by the Holy One, blessed be He, and the rest of the world is watered by a messenger, as it is said, Who giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the fields.² Palestine is watered by the rain and the rest of the world is watered by the residue,³ as it is said, 'Who giveth rain upon the earth, etc'.⁴ Palestine is watered first and then the rest of the world, as it is said, 'Who giveth rain upon the earth, etc'. This may be compared to a man making cheese; he removes first what is edible and discards the refuse.

The Master said: '[The waters of the ocean] are sweetened by the clouds' — Whence does he learn this? R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: It is written, Darkness of waters, thick clouds of the skies,⁵ and it is also written, Distilling of waters, thick clouds of the skies,⁶ take away the kaf and add it to the [word written with] resh and read haksharath.⁷ As for R. Joshua what use does he make of these verses? — He is of the opinion that these verses are the basis for the statement made by R. Dimi when he came [to Babylon] and he reported that in Palestine people say, If the clouds are bright they contain little water, but if they are dark they contain much water.⁸ In keeping with whose view is the teaching which has been taught: The upper waters remain suspended by Divine command, and their fruit is the rain-water, as it is said, The earth is full of the fruit of Thy works?⁹ This is according to R. Joshua. And as for R. Eliezer?-[He is of the opinion] that this [verse] refers to the other handiwork of God.

R. Joshua b. Levi said: The whole world is watered by the residue of the Garden of Eden, as it is said, And a river went out of Eden, etc.¹⁰ A Tanna taught: The residue of a kor¹¹ is enough to irrigate a tarkab.¹²

Our Rabbis taught: Egypt is four hundred parasangs by four hundred, and it is one sixtieth of the size of Ethiopia; Ethiopia is one sixtieth of the world, and the world is one sixtieth of the Garden [of Eden].¹³ and the Garden is one sixteenth of Eden, and Eden is one sixtieth of Gehenna;¹⁴ thus the whole world compared with the Gehenna is but as a lid to the pot. Some say that Gehenna has no limit in size; others say that Eden is without limit. R. Oshaia said: What is the meaning of the verse, O thou that dwellest upon many waters, abundant in treasures?¹⁵ What has brought it about that Babylon's treasures are full of corn? Because it dwells by many waters.¹⁶ Rab said: Babylon is rich because it harvests without rain. Abaye said: We have a tradition, Better is a flooded land than an arid land.

MISHNAH. ON THE THIRD OF MARCHESHVAN WE [BEGIN TO] PRAY FOR RAIN. R. GAMALIEL SAYS: ON THE SEVENTH, [THAT IS.] FIFTEEN DAYS AFTER THE FEAST SO THAT THE LAST ISRAELITE¹⁷ MAY REACH THE RIVER EUPHRATES.

GEMARA. R. Eleazar said: The halachah is according to R. Gamaliel. It has been taught: Hananiah says: In the Diaspora¹⁸ [we do not begin to pray] until the sixtieth day after the [Tishri] cycle.¹⁹ R. Huna b. Hiyya said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is according to Hananiah. Is it really so? Was not a question asked of Samuel: When do we begin to make mention [of the words] 'and give dew and rain'? and he replied, 'When wood is brought into the house of Tabut,²⁰ the fowler'? — Perhaps the two time limits are identical. A question was asked in the school: Is the sixtieth day counted with those that precede it or with those that follow it?²¹ -Come and hear:²² Rab said: The sixtieth day is counted with those that follow it; and Samuel said: With those that precede it.²³ R. Nahman said: The mnemonic for this is, the highlands need water, but the lowlands do not.²⁴ R. Papa said: The halachah is that the sixtieth day is counted with those that follow it.²⁵

MISHNAH. IF THE SEVENTEENTH OF MARCHESHVAN CAME AND NO RAIN FELL THE YEHDIM²⁶ [INDIVIDUALS] BEGIN TO FAST THREE FASTS; THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK AFTER IT GETS DARK²⁷ [AND ON THESE FASTS] IT IS PERMISSIBLE FOR THEM TO DO WORK, TO BATHE, TO ANOINT THEMSELVES WITH OIL, TO WEAR SHOES, AND TO HAVE

of Tabernacles may reach home without being inconvenienced by the rain. MARITAL RELATIONS. IF THE NEW MOON OF KISLEV CAME AND NO RAIN FELL THE BETH DIN ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY THREE FASTS; [ON THESE] THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK WHILST IT IS STILL DARK AND IT IS PERMISSIBLE TO DO WORK, TO BATHE, TO ANOINT ONESELF WITH OIL, TO WEAR SHOES, AND TO HAVE MARITAL RELATIONS.

GEMARA. Who are the yehidim? R. Huna said: The rabbis. R. Huna further said: The yehidim fast three fasts, [that is to say, on] Monday, Thursday and Monday. What new fact does he teach us? Has it not already been taught to us:²⁸ No fast is ordained upon the community to begin on a

Thursday in order to prevent a rise in food prices.²⁹ Hence the order of the first three fasts must be, Monday, Thursday, Monday? You might have thought that this applies only to public fasts but not to those of individuals therefore he teaches us [that it applies] equally to those of individuals. The same has been taught us elsewhere: When the yehidim begin to fast they fast on Monday, Thursday and Monday, and they interrupt³⁰ their fasts on New Moon and on such festive days as are enumerated in the Scroll of Fasts.¹

The Rabbis have taught: Let not a man say, 'I am but a disciple and I am therefore not worthy to consider myself a yahid', since all Disciples of the Wise are accounted yehidim. Who is a yahid? And who is a disciple? A yahid is one worthy to be appointed Leader of the Community; a disciple is one who is asked any question of halachah connected with his studies and can answer it — even though it is on a subject dealt with in the Tractate Kallah.² Our Rabbis have taught: Not everyone desirous to consider himself a yahid may do so;³ a disciple however may do so; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Jose says: Anyone may do so, and may he be remembered for good, because it is not an advantage to him but a hardship. Another [Baraitha] teaches: Not everyone desirous to consider himself a yahid may do so; a disciple however may do so; this is the opinion of R. Simeon son of R. Eliezer. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: This only applies to things which are to his distinction⁴ but in things which cause him hardship any one may do so and may he be remembered for good, because it is not an advantage to him but a hardship.

Our Rabbis have taught: If one fasted on account of some visitation and it passed, or for a sick person and he recovered, he should nevertheless complete his fast. If one journeys from a place where they do not fast to a place where they do, he should fast with them; from a place where they do fast to a place where they do not, he should nevertheless complete his fast. If he forgot and ate and drank let him not make it patent in public nor may he indulge in delicacies, as it is written, And Jacob said to his sons: Why should you show yourself?⁵ Jacob conveyed thereby to his sons' 'When you are fully sated do not show yourselves either before Esau or before Ishmael that they should not envy you'. See that ye fall not out by the way. R. Eleazar said: Joseph said to his brethren, 'Do not busy yourselves with questions of law lest the road become uncertain for you [you lose the way]'.⁶ Is it really so; did not R. Elia b. Berackiah say: Two scholars who are journeying on the road and they do not discuss words of Torah merit to be devoured by fire, as it written, And it came to pass, as they still went on and talked, that behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, which parted them asunder?⁷ — [They parted asunder] only because they talked [of Torah] but if they had not talked they would have merited to be devoured by fire! — There is no contradiction. The latter case speaks of repeating one's studies, and the former of cogitation.

A Tanna taught: [Joseph said to his brethren] 'Do not take big strides and bring the sun into the city'. 'Do not take big strides': For a Master said: Big strides rob a man of one five-hundredth part of his eyesight. 'And bring the sun into the city': As Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Let a man always leave [the city by 'daylight',⁸ and enter it by 'daylight, as it is said, As soon as the morning was light, the men were sent away.⁹ Rab Judah said¹⁰ in the name of R. Hiyya: He who journeys on the road should not eat more than one eats in years of famine. Why? Here [in Babylonia] they explained the reason to be in order to prevent digestive troubles¹¹ but in Palestine they said, in order [to make] his provisions last [throughout the whole journey]. What is the difference between the two [reasons]? — The difference is apparent in the case of a man on board ship¹ or of a man journeying from one inn to another.² R. Papa ate a piece of bread at every parasang; he was therefore of the opinion that the reason is in order to prevent digestive troubles.³

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab:⁴ He who starves himself in years of famine escapes unnatural death, as it is said, In famine He will redeem thee from death.⁵ [Scripture should have said] 'from famine'. This is therefore what [Scripture] meant to convey. As a reward for starving himself in years of famine one will escape unnatural death. Resh Lakish said: A man may not have marital relations during years of famine, as it is said, And unto Joseph were born two sons before the year of famine came.⁶ A Tanna taught: Childless people may have marital relations in years of famine. Our Rabbis have taught: When Israel is in trouble and one of them separates himself from them, then the two ministering angels who accompany every man come and place their hands upon his head and say, 'So-and-so who separated himself from the community shall not behold the consolation of the community'. Another [Baraita] taught: When the community is in trouble let not a man say, 'I will go to my house and I will eat and drink and all will be well with me'. For of him who does so Scripture says, And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen and killing sheep, eating flesh and drinking wine — 'Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die'.⁷ What follows after this [verse]? — And the Lord of Hosts revealed Himself in mine ears; surely this iniquity shall not be expiated by you till ye die. This is the conduct of the ordinary man, but what does Scripture say of the conduct of the wicked? Come ye, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day.⁸ What follows after this [verse]? The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart . . . that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.⁹ But rather a man should share in the distress of the community, for so we find that Moses, our teacher, shared in the distress of the community, as it is said, But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone and put it under him, and he sat thereon.¹⁰ Did not then Moses have a bolster or a cushion to sit on? This is then what Moses meant [to convey], 'As Israel are in distress I too will share with them. He who shares in the distress of the community will merit to behold its consolation'.¹¹ Perhaps a man will say, 'Who is there to testify against me?' The very stones of his house and its beams testify against him, as it is written, For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it.¹² In the school of R. Shila it was taught: The two ministering angels who accompany every man testify against him, as it is said, For He will give His angels charge over thee.¹³ R. Hidka says: A man's own soul testifies against him, as it is said, Keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.¹⁴ And some say: A man's own limbs testify against him, as it is said, Ye are my witnesses saith the Lord.¹⁵

A God of faithfulness and without iniquity.¹⁶ 'A God of faithfulness': Just as punishment will be exacted of the wicked in the world to come even for a slight transgression which they commit, So too is punishment exacted in this world of the righteous for any slight transgression which they commit. 'And without iniquity': Just as the righteous will receive their reward in the world to come, even for the least meritorious act which they do, so too are the wicked rewarded in this world even for the least meritorious act which they do. Just and right is He:¹⁷ They [the Rabbis] said: When a man departs to his eternal home all his deeds are enumerated before him and he is told, Such and such a thing have you done, in such and such a place on that particular day. And he replies, 'Yes'. Then they say to him. 'Sign' — And he signs, as it is said, He sealeth up the hand of every man.¹⁸ And what is even more, he acknowledges the justice of the verdict and he says. 'You have judged me well', in order that the words of Scripture may be fulfilled, That thou mayest be justified when Thou speakest.¹⁹

Samuel said: Whosoever fasts [for the sake of self-affliction] is termed a sinner. He is of the same opinion as the following Tanna. For it has been taught: Eleazar ha-Kappar Berabbi²⁰ Says: What is Scripture referring to when it says [of the Nazirite] , And make atonement for him, for that he sinned by reason of the soul.²¹ Against which soul did he sin?²² [It must refer to the fact that] he denied himself wine. We can now make this inference from minor to major: If this man [Nazirite] who denied himself wine only is termed, Sinner, how much more so he who denies himself the enjoyment of ever so many things. R. Eleazar says: He is termed, Holy. as it is said, He shall be holy, he shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow long.²³ If this man [Nazirite] who denied himself wine only is termed, Holy. how much more so he who denies himself the enjoyment of ever so many things — How will then Samuel explain the verse wherein he is termed, Holy? — That refers to the locks growing long. And how will R. Eleazar explain the statement that he is termed, Sinner?—That is because he defiled himself [by contact with the dead]. But did R. Eleazar say so? Did he not say: Let a man always consider himself as if the Holy One dwells within him, as it is said, The Holy One in the midst of thee, and I will not come in fury?¹ — This is no contradiction. The one speaks of him, who is able to bear self-affliction and the other of one who is not able. Resh Lakish says: He is termed, Pious, as it is said, The Pious man² weans his own soul but he that is cruel etc.³ R. Shesheth, said: The young scholar who would afflict himself by fasting let a dog devour his meal.⁴

R. Jeremiah b. Abba said: There are no public fasts⁵ in Babylonia except [the Fast of] the Ninth of Ab.⁶ R. Jeremiah b. Abba further said in the name of Resh Lakish: A scholar may not afflict himself by fasting because he lessens thereby his heavenly work.⁷

THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK AFTER IT GETS DARK etc. R. Ze'ira said in the name of R. Hanina: An individual who has undertaken to fast though he may have eaten and drunk the whole of the [preceding] night, yet on the morrow he should recite the [special] prayer for fast days; if, however, he has continued his fast throughout the following night he may not recite the prayer for fast days [on the next day].⁸ R. Joseph asked: What view does R. Huna take? Does he take the view that one cannot [undertake a] fast for a matter of hours? Or perhaps one can undertake a fast for hours, but if one does so he should not recite the [special] prayer for fast days?⁹ — Abaye replied to him: It is quite definite R. Huna may hold the opinion that one can undertake a fast for a matter of hours and if one does so he may recite the [special] prayer for fast days, but here the case is different since he did not previously take upon himself¹⁰ [to fast]. Mar 'Ukba¹¹ chanced to come to Ganzaka¹² and he was asked: Is fasting for a matter of hours considered a fast or not? and he was unable to answer. [They then asked him] are wine-jars belonging to idolaters prohibited for use or not and he was unable to answer; [he was then asked] in which [garments] did Moses perform the service [in the Tabernacle] during the seven days of consecration¹³ and he was unable to answer. He went and inquired in the House of Learning and he was told, the law is that fasting for a matter of hours is considered a fast and we do recite the [special] prayer for fast days [if one has completed the fast].¹⁴ Further the law is that wine-jars belonging to idolaters may be used after twelve months; Moses performed the service during the seven days of consecration dressed in a white frock. R. Kahana taught: In a white frock without a border.¹⁵

With reference to what you said that one may fast for a matter of hours this only applies if [the man concerned] had not tasted anything until the evening. Abaye said to him: This is then a full fast! — This speaks of a case where the fast was only an after thought.¹

R. Hisda further said: A fast over which the sun has not set cannot be deemed a fast. An objection was raised against this. The men of the Mishmar fast but do not complete [the day]. [There fasting] is merely in order to afflict themselves [in sympathy with the community].²

Come and hear: R. Eleazar b. Zadok said: I am a descendant of Sena'ah³ of the tribe of Benjamin; once the [fast of] the ninth of Ab fell on the Sabbath and we postponed it until the day after the Sabbath and we fasted but did not complete the fast because it was our festive day!⁴ — There too the fasting was merely in order to afflict themselves [in sympathy with the community].

Come and hear: R. Johanan [once] said: 'I will fast until I return home'! — There he said this merely in order to evade the hospitality of the house of the Nasi.⁵

Samuel said: A fast which one does not undertake before sunset on the previous day is not deemed to be a fast. But what if a man does observe such a fast? — Rabbah b. Shila replied: It may be compared to a pair of bellows filled with wind.⁶ At what time should one undertake such a fast? — Rab said: During the time that one may read the Afternoon Service, and Samuel said, In the course of the Afternoon Tefillah. R. Joseph said: The view of Samuel appears the more reasonable, since it is written in the Scroll of Fasts: Therefore any man who has been subject to a fast previous to this [i.e., the incidence of these festive days] should build himself⁷ [by an undertaking]. Does this not refer to an undertaking made during prayer?⁸ — No; this only denotes that he is forbidden [to break his fast because of his previous undertaking]. R. Hiyya and R. Simeon b. Rabbi differ on this question. One reads⁹ *yesar*¹⁰ ['he should bind himself by his under-taking'] and the other reads, *yeaser*¹¹ [he is forbidden, i.e., to break his fast]. The one who reads, yesar, justifies his view in the way we have just stated, but the one who reads, yeaser, what does this mean? — It has been taught in the Scroll of Fasts: Any man who is subject to a fast previous to this [incidence of these festive days] is forbidden [to break his fast]. How is this to be understood? If a man undertook to fast on Mondays and Thursdays throughout the year and any of the festive days enumerated in the Scroll of Fasts happens to fall on those days, then if his vow was made previous to our decree his vow overrides our decree, but if our decree was made before his vow then our decree overrides his vow.

Our Rabbis taught: Until when may one eat and drink [on the night preceding a fast]? Until the rise of dawn; this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Eliezer b. Simeon says: Until cock crow. Abaye said: This only holds good where a man had not yet finished his meal, but if he had finished his meal he may not eat again.

Raba raised an objection against this: If one had completed his meal and rose from the table, he may eat further! — There it speaks of the case where he had not yet removed the [table].¹² Some say, Raba said: This holds good only when he has not gone to sleep, but if he has gone to sleep he may not eat again. Abaye raised an objection against this: If one had gone to sleep and then got up he may eat again! — There it speaks of the case where he was merely dozing. What constitutes dozing?—R. Ashi replied:

(1) R. Hisda's interpretation of fasting for a matter of hours is this. A man was too occupied for the first half of the day to have a meal and decides that he would end the day without food so as to make it constitute a fast. In such special circumstances the fast is a valid one, though the man had not explicitly undertaken it on the day previous (V. Rashi).

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 12b

A sleep which is no sleep, a wakefulness which is no wakefulness, he answers when he is called, but cannot recall an argument; when, however, he is reminded of something he remembers it.

R. Kahana said in the name of Rab: An individual who has undertaken a fast is forbidden to wear shoes because we fear that perhaps he has undertaken a public fast.¹ How shall he declare his vow [to be able to wear shoes]?-Rabbah b. Shila said: He should make the following declaration, 'To-morrow I shall observe before Thee a private fast'. The Rabbis said to R. Shesheth: We have seen Rabbis who come to an Assembly on a fast day wearing their shoes. Thereupon he became angry and asked them, Perhaps they even eat? Abaye and Raba used to come [to the Assembly] wearing shoes² without soles. Meremar and Mar Zutra used to change the right [shoe] to the left [foot] and the left to the right.³ The scholars of the school of R. Ashi wore their shoes as usual; they were of the same opinion as Samuel who said: In Babylonia except for the Fast of the Ninth of Ab there are no public fasts.⁴

Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: One may borrow a fast and repay it [on another day]; When I repeated this [statement] before Samuel he said to me, Did he then take a vow upon himself that he must pay it?-He merely undertook to afflict himself, if he is able he afflicts himself, if not he does not do so. Some say, Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: One may borrow his fast and repay it. When I repeated this before Samuel he said to me, This is self-evident; even if it is merely a vow, would he not have to pay a vow on the next day or on a later day?

R. Joshua, the son of R. Idi chanced to be with R. Assi, and after they had prepared in his honour a three-year-old calf⁵ they said to him, 'Will the Master partake of it?' He replied. 'I am fasting'. They said to him, 'Let the Master borrow and repay [the fast later]'. Is the Master not in agreement with the view of Rab Judah, who said in the name of Rab: One may borrow a fast and repay it? — He replied: [Mine] is a fast for a [bad] dream, and Rabbah b. Mehasiah said in the name of R. Hama b. Guriah, in the name of Rab: Fasting is as efficacious for the bad dream as fire is for tow, and upon this R. Hisda commented: And [the fast must be] on the same day; and R. Joseph added: Even if [the day] is the Sabbath. What amends shall he make [for having fasted on the Sabbath]? — He should observe an additional fast.⁶

MISHNAH. IF THESE FAST DAYS PASSED AND THERE WAS NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS, THE BETH DIN ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY THREE FURTHER FASTS; [ON DAYS PRECEDING THESE FASTS] THEY MAY EAT AND DRINK [ONLY] WHILST IT IS STILL DAY, AND THEY MAY NOT [ON THESE FAST DAYS] DO WORK, NOR BATHE, NOR ANOINT THEMSELVES WITH OIL, NOR WEAR SHOES, NOR HAVE MARITAL RELATIONS; AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED. IF THESE [DAYS] PASSED AND THERE WAS [STILL] NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS THE BETH DIN ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FURTHER SEVEN [FASTS]. MAKING THIRTEEN IN ALL. [IN THIS RESPECT ARE] THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER⁷ IN THAT ON THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. ON MONDAYS THE

SHUTTERS [OF THE SHOPS] ARE OPENED A LITTLE WHEN IT GETS DARK, BUT ON THURSDAYS THEY ARE PERMITTED⁸ [THE WHOLE DAY]⁹ IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH. IF THESE PASSED AND THERE WAS [STILL] NO ANSWER TO THEIR PRAYERS THEN BUSINESS IS RESTRICTED AS ALSO IS BUILDING, PLANTING, BETROTHAL AND MARRIAGE; AND MEN GREET ONE ANOTHER AS PEOPLE LABOURING UNDER DIVINE DISPLEASURE. THE YEHDIM¹⁰ BEGIN THEIR FASTING ANEW AND CONTINUE UNTIL THE END OF NISAN; IF NISAN PASSES AND RAIN FALLS THIS IS A SIGN OF DIVINE ANGER, AS IT IS WRITTEN, IS IT NOT WHEAT HARVEST TO-DAY, etc.¹¹

GEMARA. It is reasonable that all the other restrictions [should be forbidden] because they give pleasure, but why work which is a source of pain? — R. Hisda replied in the name of R. Jeremiah b. Abba: Scripture says. Sanctify ye a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the elders.¹² This means that [the fast day is to be treated] like a solemn assembly. Just as it is not permissible to do work on a solemn assembly it is likewise not permissible to do work on a fast day. Perhaps just as on the solemn assembly work is forbidden from the preceding evening so too on a fast day work should close on the preceding evening? — R. Zeira replied: R. Jeremiah b. Abba explained the matter to me thus: Scripture says, Gather the elders'; it is to be like a gathering of elders, as the elders foregather by day so too the fast commences on the day. Perhaps [it commences] from noon? — R. Shisha b. Idi replied: This is a support for R. Huna who said: The assembly [of the community on a fast day] takes place in the morning. How do they spend [the day]?-Abaye replied: From morning to midday they look into the affairs of the city;¹³ from then onwards they read for a quarter of the day from the Torah and the Prophets and the rest of the day [is spent] in praying for mercy, as it is said, And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the Law of the Lord their God a fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed and prostrated themselves before the Lord their God.¹⁴

Perhaps the order of the day is to be reversed? — This cannot possibly be so, seeing that it is written, Then were assembled unto me everyone that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the faithlessness of them of the captivity etc.;¹ and then follows, And at the evening offering I arose from my fasting . . . and spread out my hands unto the Lord.²

Rafram b. Papa said in the name of R. Hisda: On any fast ordained on account of mourning, as for example the Ninth of Ab and a mourner, it is forbidden to bathe in warm or in cold water, but on any fast ordained merely to prevent indulgence in pleasure, as for example, a public fast day, bathing in warm water is forbidden but permissible in cold water. R. Idi b. Abin said: We too have learnt: AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED? Abaye said to him: If it were forbidden to bathe even in cold water, then it should have stated, 'and the rivers are stopped up'! — R. Shisha the son of R. Idi replied: This was the difficulty which my father felt. [He argued]. Let us see: the Mishnah already states, IT IS NOT PERMISSIBLE TO BATHE, why does it add AND THE BATHS TOO ARE CLOSED? Evidently from this is to be concluded that [bathing] in warm water is forbidden but permissible in cold water.

Shall we say that the following supports [R. Hisda]: 'All those who have to take the ritual bath³ immerse in the usual way both on the Ninth of Ab and on the Day of Atonement'. In what [water is here meant]? Is it in warm [water]? Is then [ritual] immersion in warm water permissible, seeing that such water must of a necessity be drawn⁴ [and is therefore unfit for immersion]? It must therefore be in cold [water]; and yet it is only those who have to take the ritual bath who may [immerse] but others may not?⁵ — Said R. Hana b. Kattina [No:] This [passage] has special reference to the hot springs of Tiberias. If this is so how is the concluding statement to be understood? R. Hanina, the Deputy High Priest said: Our House of God merits that a man should for its sake forego an immersion once a year.⁶ Now should you say that bathing in cold water is permissible, let him then bathe in cold water! — R. Papa replied: [It speaks] of a place where cold water is not available.

Come and hear: When the Rabbis declared that it is not permissible to do work [on a public fast day] this applies only to the day but not to the night [preceding]; and when they declared that it is not permissible to wear shoes, this applies only within the city, but on the road it is permissible. How should a man act? When he sets out on a journey he puts his shoes on, but when he enters the city he removes them. And when they declared that it is not permissible to bathe they meant the whole body but he may wash his face, hands or feet. You will find that the same applies to one placed under the ban and also to the mourner. Now does not [this last statement] imply that they are subject to all [the restrictions mentioned previously]? This being so, of what [water does the Baraita] speak? Shall we say warm water? Is it then permissible [for a mourner] to wash his face, hands or feet [in warm water]? Did not R. Shesheth say: The mourner may not put even his finger into warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water!⁷ — No; it refers indeed to warm water, and as for your difficulty in interpreting, 'and the same applies to one placed under the ban and also to the mourner', [you must take] this to refer only to the remaining restrictions⁸ [and not to bathing].

Come and hear: R. Abba the Priest said in the name of R. Jose the Priest: It happened that the sons of R. Jose b. Hanina died and he bathed in cold water throughout the seven days [of mourning]! — In his case one bereavement followed close on the other. For it has been taught: Where a man suffers one bereavement close upon another and his hair weighs heavy upon him he may thin them out with a razor and he may also wash his clothes in water. R. Hisda said: With a razor but not with scissors, in water but not in natron nor in sand.

Raba said: A mourner may bathe in cold water all the seven days in the same way as he may partake of meat and wine. An objection was raised against this:

(1) Ezra IX, 4.

(2) Ezra IX, 5.

(3) E.g. a woman after menstruation or confinement. (V. Num. XIX, 17.)

(4) Ritual immersion takes place only either in running water i.e., in a stream, or in a natural spring or in a ritual bath the waters of which are directly connected with them. To be warmed, waters would have to be 'drawn', and this is not permissible.

(5) This supports R. Hisda.

(6) On the ninth of Ab because of national mourning.

(7) [This shows that on a public fast day, as in the case of a mourner, bathing in cold water is forbidden in opposition to

R. Hisda.]

(8) I.e., working and wearing shoes.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 13b

A girl who has reached adolescence¹ may not make herself unsightly during the days of mourning for her father.² This implies that a girl who has not reached adolescence may [make herself unsightly]. And in which respect [may she neglect herself]? By not bathing. [This being so], in what water? Shall I say in warm? [Then how can you say that] a girl who has not reached adolescence may not neglect herself [in this respect]? Did not R. Hisda say: A mourner may not put even his finger in warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water!³ — No; [it speaks of] painting the eyelids and dyeing the hair.

Shall we say that the following supports Raba: R. Abba the Priest said in the name of R. Jose the Priest: It happened that the sons of R. Jose b. Hanina died and he bathed in cold water throughout the seven days [of mourning]. The answer is, in his case one bereavement followed close on the other. For it has been taught: Where a man suffers one bereavement close upon another and his hair weighs heavy upon him he may thin them out with a razor and he may also wash his clothes in water. R. Hisda said: With a razor, but not with scissors, In water, but not in natron, nor in sand nor in aloë.

Some say. Raba said: The mourner may not [bathe] in cold water all the seven days. Why this differentiation [between bathing in cold water] and partaking of meat and wine?⁴ — Of these [the mourner] may partake in order to counteract his fear.⁵ Shall we say that support may be adduced from the following passage: A girl who has reached adolescence may not make herself un-sightly [during the days of mourning for her father]. This implies that one who has not reached adolescence may? And in what respect may she neglect herself? [By not bathing]. [This being so], in what water? Is it in warm water? Then how can you say that a girl who has reached adolescence may not neglect herself in this respect? Did not R. Hisda say: A mourner may not put even his finger in warm water? Therefore [it must speak of] cold water! — No; it speaks of painting the eyelids and dyeing the hair. R. Hisda said this proves⁶ that a mourner is forbidden to wash his clothes throughout the seven days of mourning.⁷ The law is, a mourner is forbidden to bathe his whole body either in warm or in cold water all the seven days; his face, hands and feet he may not [wash] in warm water but in cold water he may; anointing is not permitted at all; if, however, it is to remove the dirt it is permissible.

Where is the prayer for the fast day⁸ inserted?⁹ Rab Judah brought his son R. Isaac [to the school]¹⁰ and he expounded as follows: An individual who has taken upon himself a fast should recite the prayer for the fast day. And where does he insert it? Between the benediction for 'Redemption' and the benediction for 'Healing'.¹¹ R. Isaac demurred to this [saying]: Is it proper that an individual should insert [in his prayers] a special benediction for himself? Therefore said R. Isaac: [He includes it] in the benediction 'Thou hearkenest to the prayer'.¹² And so, too, said R. Shesheth: [In the benediction] 'Thou hearkenest to the prayer'. An objection was raised [against this]: The only difference between [the Order of Prayer] of an individual on a fast day and a community is that the former recites eighteen benedictions and the latter recite nineteen. Now what is [meant by] an 'individual' and what by a 'community'? Shall we say that [by] an 'individual' [is meant] literally and [by] 'community' the Representative of the community [leading in prayer]?¹³ If so, are the benedictions [recited by the latter] nineteen? Are they not rather twenty-four?¹⁴ Therefore the [Baraita quoted] should read thus: The only difference between an individual who has undertaken a private fast and an individual who has undertaken a public fast is that the former recites eighteen [benedictions] and the latter nineteen.¹⁵ From which one may infer that an individual may insert a special benediction for himself.¹⁶ No; [by 'community' is definitely meant], the Representative of the Community and as to your difficulty, that the Representative recites twenty-four benedictions [and not nineteen]. [this refers] to the first three fasts when the twenty-four are not [recited]. But is this so? Is it not stated that the only difference between the first three [fasts] and the middle three [fasts] is that work is permissible on the former and forbidden on the latter? Does this not imply that with regard to the recital of the twenty-four [benedictions] both are alike?—The Tanna [of the Baraitha] has stated only one [difference] and has left out [others] — What other differences has he left out besides this one?¹⁷ And further, does he not explicitly state: The only difference etc.? — The Tanna speaks only of differences with regard to things forbidden on the fast days and not [of differences with regard to] prayers. And if you like, I can say that even on the middle three fasts the twenty-four benedictions are also not recited. But is this so? Has it not been taught: ‘The only difference between the second three [fasts] and the last seven is that on the latter the alarm is sounded and the shops are closed.’ Does this not imply that in all other respects they are alike? And should you reply that here too [the Tanna] stated one difference only and left out [others], I would object on the ground that it explicitly states, ‘The only difference’! — Do you assume the expression, ‘The only difference etc.’

to denote the absolute exclusion of any other differences? Has he not left out [mention of the taking out of] the Ark?¹ — [As for the taking out of the] Ark this cannot be considered an omission because [the Baraitha] enumerates only things done in private but not things done in public. R. Ashi said: This² may also be deduced from our Mishnah where it is learnt: IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER?³ IN THAT ON THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. This would imply that in all other respects they are alike. And should you reply that here too [the Mishnah] has stated only one [difference] and left out [others]. I would object, the Mishnah explicitly states, IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER etc.’!⁴ — Do you assume the expression, ‘IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER etc. literally? Has he not also left out [mention of the taking out of] the Ark?— [As for the taking out of] the Ark this cannot be considered an omission because he mentions it in the next chapter. If now that you have arrived at this conclusion [the difference in respect of the recital of] the twenty-four benedictions is also no omission since he mentions it [also] in the next chapter. What is the final decision [with regard to the insertion of the special benediction for fast days]?⁵ R. Samuel b. Sasartai said, and so too R. Hiyya b. Ashi in the name of Rab: [He inserts it] between 'Redemption' and 'Healing'. R. Ashi said in the name of R. Jannai, the son of R. Ishmael: In [the benediction] 'Who hearkenest unto prayer.

One Baraitha teaches: Pregnant women and nursing mothers fast on the first fasts but not on the last; another teaches: They fast on the last but not on the first; and yet another teaches: They fast neither on the first nor on the last! — R. Ashi said: Take it that they fast on the middle set of fasts and in this way all [three Baraithas] will be reconciled.⁶

IN WHAT RESPECT ARE THE LATTER MORE STRINGENT THAN THE FORMER? IN THAT ON THEM THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AND THE SHOPS ARE CLOSED. How do we sound the alarm? — Rab Judah said: By the shofar.⁷ Rab Judah the son of R. Samuel b. Shilath in the name of Rab said: By [the recital of the] 'anenu.⁸ The scholars assumed that the authority who said by the 'anenu was opposed to the sounding of the alarm by the shofar and that the one who said by the shofar was opposed to the recital of the 'anenu. But has it not been taught: No less than seven fasts are ordained upon the community upon each of which the alarm is sounded eighteen times; [as] a sign to remember this take Jericho. Now at Jericho the shofar [was used to give the alarm]. This would be a refutation of him who said: By 'anenu [only]! Hence [we must conclude] that all are agreed that the sounding of the shofar constitutes the sounding of an alarm, and that they differ only with regard to [the recital of] the 'anenu; one takes the view that it constitutes the sounding of an alarm, and the other that it does not. The authority who says that the recital of the 'anenu constitutes the sounding of an alarm [will hold] how much more so does the sounding of the shofar, but the authority who says, 'by the shofar', would exclude the recital of the 'anenu. But has it not been taught: In the case of all other visitations that break out [in the world], as for example. Itch, Locusts, Flies, Hornets, Gnats and the invasion by Snakes and Scorpions they did not sound the alarm, but they cried aloud? And as crying can only be by mouth, the sounding of the alarm must consequently be by the shofar! — This forms a subject of dispute amongst the Tannaim, for it has been learnt: In the case of these [calamities] they sound the alarm even on the Sabbath; when a city is surrounded by a ravaging troop, or is in danger of inundation by a river or when a ship is foundering on the sea, R. Jose said: [We may sound the alarm to summon] help but not for intercession! Now with what [is the alarm sounded]? Shall we say by the shofar? Is then the sounding of the shofar on the Sabbath permissible? It must therefore be by the recital of the 'anenu, and this is termed: 'Sounding the alarm'. This proves it.

In the time of R. Judah the Prince⁹ there was distress¹⁰

(2) That the twenty-four benedictions are recited also during the middle three fasts.

(3) ['THE FORMER' means those immediately preceding the middle three fasts which, taken together with what follows, seems to imply that the difference is limited to the points enumerated.

(4) [Where as explained in the Gemara infra 15b it applies only to the last fast days (Rashi). R. Hananel explains differently.]

(5) I.e., by an individual (Rashi).

(6) The reconciliation of the conflicting Baraithas is arrived at in the following manner. Call the three groups of fasts A (the first three), B (the middle three) and C (the last seven). In the first Baraitha B is first with regard to C; in the second B is last with regard to A; and in the third B is the middle one.

; he ordained thirteen fast days and their prayer was not answered. He thought of ordaining additional fasts but R. Ammi said to him, 'Did not [the Sages] declare we should not trouble the community unduly'. Said R. Abba the son of R. Hiyya b. Abba, 'R. Ammi [in saying this] was studying his own interests',¹ for thus did R. Hiyya b. Abba say in the name of R. Johanan: The statement [cited by R. Ammi] holds good only so far [as fasts for] rain are concerned, but in the case of other forms of visitation the fasts are continued until their prayers are answered from heaven. It has been taught to the same effect: When they [the Sages] instituted the order of fasts for [twice] three days, and then a further seven days, they intended these to be applicable only in the case of fasts for rain, but in all other forms of visitation the fasts are to be continued until their prayers are answered from heaven. Shall we say that this will be a refutation of R. Ammi? — R. Ammi can answer you: The Tannaim are divided on this question. For it has been taught: Not more than thirteen fasts are ordained upon the community because we should not trouble the community unduly; this is the opinion of Rabbi. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: This is not the real reason² [why no additional fasts are ordained] but it is because after these thirteen fasts the time of rainfall has gone.

The inhabitants of Nineveh³ sent to enquire of Rabbi: How should we who need rain even in the Tammuz cycle act?⁴ Are we to consider ourselves individuals and [insert the special prayer for rain] in 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. or shall we consider ourselves a community and [insert it] in the 'Blessing of the Years'?⁵ He sent [word] back to them: Consider yourselves individuals and [insert the prayer] in, 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. An objection was raised [against this]: R. Judah said: When did this order of fasts apply? Only at such times when the seasons of the year were normal⁶ and Israel dwelt in their own land, but to-day all depends upon the years, the countries and the seasons! He replied:⁷ You cite a Baraitha in refutation of Rabbi; Rabbi is a Tanna and has the right to differ [from a Baraitha]. What is the final decision [with regard to this matter]? — R. Nahman said: [The blessing is inserted] in the Blessing of the Years. R. Shesheth said: In 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'. The Law is [it is inserted in]. 'Who hearkenest unto prayer'.

ON MONDAYS THE SHUTTERS [OF THE SHOPS] ARE OPENED A LITTLE WHEN IT GETS DARK; BUT ON THURSDAYS THEY ARE PERMITTED⁸ THE WHOLE DAY IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH. The question was raised: How did [the Mishnah] teach? Was it that on Mondays the shutters are opened a little when it gets dark and on Thursdays they are opened [a little] during the whole day in honour of the Sabbath, or perhaps, that on Mondays they are open a little and on Thursdays they are open wide for the whole day? — Come and hear: It has been taught: On Mondays they are opened slightly till the evening and on Thursdays they remain wide open the whole day in honour of the Sabbath; should there be two doors then one is kept open and the other remains closed; should there be a stand⁹ in front of the door he may open [the door] in the usual way without any compunction.

IF THESE 'PASSED WITHOUT THEIR PRAYER BEING ANSWERED THEN BUSINESS DEALINGS ARE RESTRICTED AS WELL AS BUILDING AND PLANTING. It has been taught: By BUILDING [is to be understood] building for joyous purposes, and by PLANTING planting for joyous purposes. What is 'building' for joyous purposes? — Building a house for the marriage-feast of one's own son. What is 'planting' for joyous purposes? When one erects a royal banqueting hall.¹⁰

AND GREETING. Our Rabbis taught: Scholars do not greet one another at all; the greetings of the ignorant are reciprocated in an undertone in a solemn manner; people are seated covered in mourner's fashion and like those placed under the ban, and like men labouring under Divine displeasure, until mercy is shown to them from heaven.

R. Eleazar said: A prominent man should not fall upon his face¹¹ unless he is confident that he will be answered like Joshua. as it is said, And the Lord said unto Joshua. 'Get thee up; wherefore now art thou fallen upon thy face?’¹² R. Eleazar further said: A prominent man should not put on sackcloth unless he is confident that he will be answered like Jehoram, the Son of Ahab, as it is said, And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes — now he was passing by upon the wall — and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh, etc.¹³

R. Eleazar further said: Not everyone [is answered] through rending his garments nor is everyone [answered] through falling [on his face]. Moses and Aaron [were answered] through falling [on the face], Joshua and Caleb through rending [their] garments. Moses and Aaron through falling [on the face]; for it is written, Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces.¹⁴ Joshua and Caleb through rending [their] garments, for it is written, And Joshua the son of Num and Caleb ... rent their clothes.¹⁵ R. Ze'ira and some say, R. Samuel b. Nahmani demurred to this. Had it been written [in the verse] ‘Joshua’. it would be as you say, but seeing that the verse reads ‘And Joshua’, they may have done both.¹⁶

R. Eleazar further said: Not all [will in the Messianic era] rise [before Israel], nor will all prostrate themselves; kings will rise and princes prostrate themselves; ‘Kings will rise’, for it is written, Thus saith the Lord, the Redeemer of Israel, his Holy One to him who is despised of men, to him who is abhorred of nations, to a servant of rulers; kings shall see and arise;¹ ‘and princes will prostrate themselves,’ for it is written, Princes and they shall prostrate themselves. R. Ze'ira and some say R. Samuel b. Nahmani demurred to this. Had it been written in the verse, ‘And princes shall prostrate themselves’, it would be as you say, but seeing that the verse reads, ‘Princes and they shall prostrate themselves,’ they will perhaps do both.

R. Nahman b. Isaac declared: I say furthermore, Not all are destined to share in the light nor all in the gladness. Light shall be for the righteous and gladness for the upright. ‘Light for the righteous’, for it is written, Light is sown for the righteous;² And gladness for the upright’. for it is written, And gladness for the upright in heart.²

MISHNAH. WHAT IS THE ORDER [OF SERVICE] FOR FAST DAYS?³ THE ARK IS TAKEN OUT TO THE OPEN SPACE⁴ OF THE CITY, WOOD ASHES ARE PLACED ON THE ARK, ON THE HEAD OF THE NASI⁵ AND ON THE HEAD OF THE AB-BETH-DIN.⁶ EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES ON HIS OWN HEAD; THE ELDER AMONG THEM ADDRESSES THEM WITH WORDS OF ADMONITION [TO REPENTANCE] THUS, OUR BRETHREN, SCRIPTURE DOES NOT SAY OF THE PEOPLE OF NINEVEH, AND GOD SAW THEIR SACKCLOTH AND THEIR FASTING, BUT, AND GOD SAW THEIR WORKS, THAT THEY TURNED FROM THEIR EVIL WAY;⁷ AND IN THE PROPHETS IT IS SAID, AND REND YOUR HEART AND NOT YOUR GARMENTS.⁸ WHEN THEY STAND UP TO PRAY THEY PLACE [AS READER] BEFORE THE ARK AN OLD MAN CONVERSANT [WITH THE PRAYERS], WHO HAS CHILDREN AND WHOSE HOUSE IS EMPTY [OF FOOD], SO THAT HIS HEART IS CONCENTRATED ON HIS PRAYER; HE RECITES BEFORE THEM TWENTY-FOUR BENEDICTIONS, THE EIGHTEEN RECITED DAILY, TO WHICH HE ADDS SIX AS FOLLOWS, ZIKRONOTH,⁹ SHOFAROTH,¹⁰ AND [THESE PSALMS]: IN MY DISTRESS I CALLED UNTO THE LORD;¹¹ I WILL LIFT UP MINE EYES UNTO THE MOUNTAINS ETC.;¹² OUT OF THE DEPTHS HAVE I CALLED THEE, O LORD;¹³ A PRAYER OF THE AFFLICTED WHEN HE FAINTETH.¹⁴ R. JUDAH SAYS: HE NEED NOT RECITE THE ZIKRONOTH AND SHOFAROTH, BUT INSTEAD HE SHOULD RECITE THE FOLLOWING SCRIPTURAL, PASSAGES, IF THERE BE IN THE LAND FAMINE, IF THERE BE PESTILENCE;¹⁵ THE WORD OF THE LORD THAT CAME TO JEREMIAH CONCERNING THE DROUGHTS;¹⁶ AND HE ENDS EACH [OF THE ADDITIONAL SIX] SECTIONS WITH ITS APPROPRIATE CONCLUDING BENEDICTION. THE FIRST HE CONCLUDES WITH, 'HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM ON MT. MORIAH, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEARKEN THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. BLESSED ART THOU O LORD WHO REDEEMEST ISRAEL. IN THE DAYS OF R. HALAFTA AND R. HANINA B. TRADYON THAT A MAN STEPPED BEFORE THE ARK AND COMPLETED THE ENTIRE BENEDICTION AND THEY DID NOT RESPOND, 'AMEN'.¹ [THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT CALLED OUT], SOUND A TEKI'AH, PRIESTS, SOUND A TEKI'AH.² [THEN THE READER EXCLAIMED], HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM OUR FATHER ON MT. MORIAH, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU, AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. [THE SYNAGOGUE ATTENDANT CONTINUED], SOUND A TERU'AH,³ CHILDREN OF AARON, SOUND A TERU'AH. [THEN THE READER EXCLAIMED], HE WHO ANSWERED OUR FATHERS AT THE RED SEA, HE SHALL ANSWER YOU AND HEarken THIS DAY TO THE VOICE OF YOUR CRY. AND WHEN THE MATTER CAME UP BEFORE THE WISE, THEY DECLARED, THIS⁴ WAS OUR ORDER OF PROCEDURE ONLY AT THE EASTERN GATES AND ON THE TEMPLE MOUNT.⁵

ON THE FIRST THREE [RAIN]⁶ FASTS THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR⁷ FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST, AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB⁸ DO NOT FAST AT ALL. ON THE SECOND THREE [RAIN FASTS]⁹ THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST; ON THE LAST SEVEN⁹ BOTH FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST; THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. JOSHUA. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, SAY: ON THE FIRST THREE FASTS NEITHER FAST AT ALL, ON THE SECOND THREE, THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST; BUT THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB DO NOT FAST AT ALL; ON THE LAST SEVEN, THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR FAST AND COMPLETE THEIR FAST, AND THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST.

THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR ARE PERMITTED TO DRINK WINE IN THE EVENINGS BUT NOT DURING THE DAY,¹⁰ BUT THE MEN OF THE BETH-AB MAY NOT [DRINK WINE] EITHER ON THE DAY OR ON THE PRECEDING EVENING. BOTH THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR AND THE MEN OF THE MA'AMAD¹¹ MAY NOT CUT THEIR HAIR NOR WASH THEIR CLOTHES, BUT ON A THURSDAY THEY MAY IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH.

THE RESTRICTION AGAINST MOURNING ON THE DAYS ENUMERATED IN THE SCROLL OF FASTS¹² APPLIES EQUALLY TO THE PRECEDING DAY BUT NOT TO THE DAY FOLLOWING. R. JOSE SAYS: IT IS FORBIDDEN [TO MOURN] BOTH ON THE PRECEDING DAY AND) THE DAY FOLLOWING. AS FOR FASTING IT IS PERMITTED ON THE PRECEDING DAY AND ON THE DAY FOLLOWING. R. JOSE SAYS: IT IS FORBIDDEN ON THE PRECEDING DAY BUT PERMITTED ON THE DAY FOLLOWING.

WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FAST TO COMMENCE ON A THURSDAY IN ORDER NOT TO CAUSE A RISE IN THE MARKET PRICES. HENCE THE FIRST THREE FASTS ARE HELD [IN THIS ORDER], MONDAY, THURSDAY, AND MONDAY; THE SECOND THREE, THURSDAY, MONDAY, AND THURSDAY; R. JOSE SAYS: JUST AS THE FIRST THREE [FASTS] SHOULD NOT COMMENCE ON A THURSDAY SO TOO NEITHER THE SECOND [THREE] NOR THE LAST [SEVEN].

WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FAST ON NEW MOON, ON HANUKKAH, OR ON PURIM, BUT IF THEY HAD ALREADY BEGUN [A SERIES OF FASTS AND ONE OF THESE FESTIVE DAYS INTERVENED] THEY DO NOT INTERRUPT [THEIR FASTS]; THIS IS THE OPINION OF RABBAN GAMALIEL. R. MEIR SAID: EVEN THOUGH R. GAMALIEL IS OF THE OPINION THAT THE [FASTS] SHOULD NOT BE INTERRUPTED HE YET AGREES THAT THEY SHOULD NOT COMPLETE THEIR FASTS. AND THE SAME APPLIES TO THE NINTH OF AB SHOULD IT FALL ON A FRIDAY.

GEMARA. WHAT IS THE ORDER [OF SERVICES] FOR FAST DAYS? THE ARK IS TAKEN out etc. Does all this apply to the first six fasts? If so, is there not a contradiction raised against this? [For it has been taught]: On the first three and also on the second three [fasts] they enter the synagogue and pray there in the same way as they pray all the year round, but on the last seven the Ark is taken to the open space of the city and ashes are placed on the Ark and also upon the head of the Ab-Beth-din, and everyone else puts ashes upon his own head. R. Nathan says: They take wood-ashes!¹³ — R. Papa replied: Our Mishnah also refers to the last seven fasts.

AND ON THE HEAD OF THE NASI: And afterwards [the Mishnah] states, EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES UPON HIS OWN HEAD. But is it so? Has it not been taught: Rabbi says: Where it is a case of doing honour we begin at the most distinguished, but where it is a case of censuring we begin at the least important; as it is said, And Moses said unto Aaron, and unto Eleazar and unto Ithamar;¹⁴ but where it is a case of censuring we begin at the least important, (for a Master said:) First the serpent was cursed, and afterwards Eve and [only] then Adam?—Here [in our Mishnah] it is also a case of doing honour, because [by this act] the people convey to them¹⁵ [the thought] you are worthy to entreat for mercy on behalf of us all.

EVERYONE ELSE PUTS ASHES ON HIS OWN HEAD: R. Adda said: Seeing that everyone else puts the ashes on his own head let also the Nasi and the Ab-Beth-din themselves take ashes and place them on their own heads! Why should someone else take ashes and put them on their head? — R. Aba of Caesarea replied: To humiliate oneself is not the same as being humiliated by others.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 16a

And where [on the head] does he put [the ashes]?-R. Isaac said: On the place of the phylacteries, as it is said, To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them a garland for ashes.¹ (Mnemonic: open space, Ark, sackcloth, wood-ashes, dust, cemetery, Moriah.)

Why do they go out to the open space [of the city]?R. Hiyya b. Abba said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We have prayed in private but we have not been answered; we will [therefore] humiliate ourselves in public. Resh Lakish said: We have exiled ourselves [from the House of God] may our exile atone for us. What is the difference between the two explanations? — The difference is when they move from one synagogue to another.²

And why do they take out the Ark to the open space of the city? — R. Joshua b. Levi said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We had a vessel which we kept hidden and now because of our sins it has been rendered common.

And why do they clothe themselves in sackcloth? — R. Hiyya b. Abba said: In order to express thereby [the idea], We consider ourselves animals³ [before God].

And why do they place wood-ashes upon the Ark? — R. Judah b. Pazzi said: As if to say, I will be with him in trouble.⁴ Resh Lakish said: [As if to say] In all their afflictions He was afflicted.⁵ R. Zera said: When I first saw the rabbis placing wood-ashes on the Ark my whole body shook.

And why does everyone else put ashes on his head?- With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina. One says: [To signify thereby], We are merely like ashes before Thee; and the other says: That [God] may remember for our sake the ashes of Isaac.⁶ What is the difference between them? — The difference is with regard to [the use of] ordinary dust.⁷

Why do they go to the cemetery? — With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina. One says: [To signify thereby], We are as the dead before Thee; and the other says: In order that the dead should intercede for mercy on our behalf. What is the difference between them? — The difference is with regard to going to the cemetery of Gentiles.⁸ What is [the meaning of] 'Mount Moriah'?⁹ — With regard to this there is a difference of opinion between R. Levi b. Hama and R. Hanina.¹⁰ [One says] because from this mountain instruction went forth unto Israel;¹¹ and the other says: Because it is the mountain whence fear¹² came upon the heathens.

THE ELDER AMONG THEM ADDRESSES THEM WITH WORDS OF ADMONITION. Our Rabbis have taught: If there is an elder present he addresses them; if not, then a scholar addresses them; and if there is no scholar present then a distinguished looking man addresses them. Does the term ‘elder’ here used denote one who is not a scholar? — Abaye replied: This is what is meant: If there is present an elder who is also a scholar then he addresses them, and if not, then a [younger] scholar addresses them, and if not, a distinguished looking man addresses them. [And this is what he says], ‘Our brethren, neither sackcloth nor fastings are effective but only penitence and good deeds, for we find that of the men of Nineveh Scripture does not say, And God saw their sackcloth and their fasting, but, God saw their works that they turned from their evil way.’

But let them be covered with sackcloth, both man and beast.¹³ How did they act? — They separated the animals from their young and they said, Master of the Universe, if Thou wilt not have mercy upon us we will not show mercy to these.

And let them cry mightily unto God.¹⁴ What did they say? — They said, Master of the Universe, If one is submissive and the other is not, if one is righteous and the other is not, who of them should yield?¹⁵

Let them turn everyone from his evil way and from the violence that is in their hands.¹⁶ What is the meaning of, ‘From the violence that is in their hands’? — Samuel said: Even if one had stolen a beam and built it into his castle he should raze the entire castle to the ground and return the beam to its owner.

R. Adda b. Ahaba said: One who has sinned and confesses his sin but does not repent may be compared to a man holding a dead reptile in his hand, for although he may immerse himself in all the waters of the world his immersion is of no avail unto him; but if he throws it away from his hand then as soon as he immerses himself in forty se'ahs of water,¹⁷ immediately his immersion becomes effective, as it is said, But whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall obtain mercy.¹⁸ And it is further said, Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.¹⁹

WHEN THEY STAND UP TO PRAY THEY PLACE BEFORE THE ARK [AS READER] AN OLD MAN etc. Our Rabbis have taught: When they stand up to pray, although there may be present an elder and a scholar, they place before the Ark [as Reader] only a man conversant with the prayers. (Who is considered conversant with prayers)?²⁰ — R. Judah says: One having a large family²¹ and has no means of support, and who draws his subsistence from [the produce of] the field,²² and whose house is empty, whose youth was unblemished, who is meek and is acceptable to the people; who is skilled in chanting, who has a pleasant voice, and possesses a thorough knowledge of the Torah, the Prophets and the Hagiographa, of the Midrash, Halachoth and Aggadot and of all the Benedictions. Thereupon the Rabbis gazed on R. Isaac b. Ammi.²³

(1) Isa. LXI, 3. The Gemara takes the word פאר, garland, to refer to the phylacteries. So Ber. 11a in interpreting Ezek. XXIV, 17.

(2) This would constitute an ‘exile’ but not a humiliation.

(3) Because sackcloth is woven of the hair of animals (Rashi).

(4) Ps. XCI, 15.

(5) Isa. LXIII, 9. The thought implied is that though God punishes people He yet does not fail to have sympathy with them.

(6) This refers to the sacrifice of Isaac. Cf. Gen. XXII.

(7) For humiliation ordinary dust or earth could be used, but for recalling the sacrifice of Isaac only ashes would do.

(8) In the former case any cemetery would be used but in the latter case only a Jewish cemetery.

(9) The mount on which the Temple was built.

(10) The difference of opinion between R. Levi and R. Hama b. Hanina also in the matter accounts for the inclusion here of this passage.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 16b

Is not one having a large family with no means of support the same as one whose house is empty? — R. Hisda replied: The latter refers to a man whose house is free from sin.¹

Whose youth was unblemished. Abaye said: This is one against whom no evil reputation had gone forth in his youth.

My heritage is become unto Me as a lion in the forest; she hath uttered her voice against Me; therefore have I hated her.² What is the meaning of, 'She hath uttered her voice against Me'? — Mar Zutra b. Tobiah said in the name of Rab, some say R. Hama said in the name of R. Eleazar: This refers to an unfit person who steps down before the Ark [to act] as Reader.

AND HE RECITES BEFORE THEM TWENTY-FOUR BENEDICTIONS, THE EIGHTEEN RECITED DAILY TO WHICH HE ADDS SIX MORE. Are there only six? Are they not actually seven, as we have learnt: THE SEVENTH [BENEDICTION] HE CONCLUDES WITH BLESSED BE HE WHO HAS MERCY UPON THE EARTH! — R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: [Do you know] which is THE SEVENTH? it is the seventh of the longer benedictions.³ As it has been taught: [The benediction], 'Who redeemest Israel,' is prolonged and at its conclusion [the Reader] adds, He who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He shall answer you and hearken this day unto the voice of your cry. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel, and the congregation respond, Amen. The synagogue attendant⁴ calls out unto them, 'Blow a Teru'ah, ye children of Aaron, blow a Teru'ah, and [the Reader] resumes with, 'He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea, He shall answer you and hearken this day to the cry of your voice. Blessed art Thou O Lord who rememberest forgotten things'; and the congregation responds, Amen. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, O ye children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah. And likewise [he does] with the other benedictions, at one he calls out, sound a Teki'ah, and another, sound a Teru'ah. The order of service⁵ [in which the congregation responds, Amen] holds good for the country generally but not for the Temple, because the response, Amen' is not made use of in the Temple.⁶ And whence can it be adduced that the response, Amen, was not made use of in the Temple? — For it is said, Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting; and let them say: Blessed be Thy glorious Name, that is exalted above all blessing and praise.⁷ You might have thought that there shall be only one form, of praise after all Benedictions, therefore the text adds, 'Exalted above all blessing and praise'; that is to say, Give him 'praise' after every blessing. 'What then was said in the Temple? Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of his glorious kingdom for ever and ever.⁸ The synagogue attendant calls out unto them, Blow a Teki'ah, O Priests, sons of Aaron, blow a Teki'ah, and [the Reader] resumes with, he who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He will answer you and hearken to the voice of your cry. Blessed art Thou, O Lord God of Israel, who remembers forgotten things; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, O Priests, children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah etc. And likewise [he does] with the other benedictions; at one he calls out, Blow a Teki'ah, and at another, Sound a Teru'ah, until he completes them all. R. Halafta made this order of procedure the custom of Sepphoris and R. Hananya b. Tradyon made it the custom of Siknin. When however the matter came to the notice of the Sages they declared that this custom was observed only at the eastern gates and on the Temple mount.

Some report [the passage just cited] in the form taught in the following Baraitha: [The Reader] recites before them twenty-four benedictions; the eighteen recited daily, to which he adds six more. 'Where are those six included? Between the benedictions for redemption and Healing the Sick,⁹ the latter benediction being prolonged and the congregation respond, 'Amen', after every benediction. This was the custom in the country generally, but in the Temple they said, Blessed be the Lord, God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou O Lord who redeemest Israel and there was no response, 'Amen', after it. And why all this [long response]? Because it was not customary to respond 'Amen', in the Temple. And whence can it be adduced that they did not respond, 'Amen', in the Temple? For it is said, 'Stand up and bless the Lord your God from everlasting to everlasting, and let them say: Blessed be Thy glorious name that is exalted above all blessing and praise'; that is to say, Give Him praise after every benediction.

Our Rabbis have taught: When concluding the first benediction he says: Blessed be the Lord, God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who redeemest Israel. And the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant calls out, Sound a Teki'ah, Priests, Sound a Teki'ah, and [the Reader] then resumes, He who answered Abraham on Mt. Moriah, He will answer you and hearken this day to the voice of your cry. And they blow a Teki'uh and sound a Teru'ah, and blow a Teki'ah [again]. When concluding the second benediction he says: Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting. Blessed art Thou who rememberest forgotten things; and the congregation respond, Blessed be the name of His glorious kingdom for ever and ever. The synagogue attendant then calls out, Sound a Teru'ah, children of Aaron, sound a Teru'ah, and the reader resumes, He who answered our fathers at the Red Sea, He will answer you and hearken this day to the voice of your cry. They then sound a Teru'ah and blow a Teki'ah and sound a Teru'ah [again]; and likewise he [does] after every benediction, at one he calls out, Blow a Teki'ah, and at another, Sound a Teru'ah, until all the benedictions are concluded. R. Halafta made this order of procedure the custom of Sepphoris and R. Hananya b. Tradyon made it the custom of Siknin. When, however, the matter was brought to the notice of the Sages, they declared that this custom was observed only at the eastern gate and on the Temple mount.

Graetz, MGWJ 1872 pp. 492ff suggests that this does not mean that the response, Amen, was not allowed in the Temple, but that the solemnity of the service, heightened by the pronunciation of the Tetragrammaton as written, demanded a more extensive and impressive formula. and on the [Day of Atonement of] the Jubilee year and in the time of war.¹ THE FIRST HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED ABRAHAM etc.: A Tanna taught: Some reverse the order of the words and attribute 'crying' to Elijah and 'praying' to Samuel. True, of Samuel Scripture uses the words 'praying' and 'crying'.² but of Elijah Scripture uses only [the word] 'praying' but never 'crying'. [When Elijah says], Hear me, O Lord, hear me;³ that is an expression of 'crying'.

THE SIXTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED JONAH etc.; THE SEVENTH HE CONCLUDES WITH, HE WHO ANSWERED DAVID etc. Let us see, Did not Jonah live after David and Solomon, why then is he placed first? — Because it was desired to conclude [the prayers] with, Blessed art Thou, O Lord who hast mercy upon the earth.⁴ A Tanna taught: It was reported in the name of Symmachos, [that the prayers were concluded] with, Blessed art Thou who humblest the proud.

ON THE FIRST THREE [RAIN] FASTS THE MEN OF THE MISHNAH FAST BUT DO NOT COMPLETE THEIR FAST etc. Our Rabbis have taught: Why have the Sages ruled that the Men of the Mishmar are permitted to drink wine by night and not by day, lest the work weigh too heavily on the men of the Beth-ab and then they will be called upon to help them; why have the Sages ruled that the men of the Beth-ab are forbidden [to drink] both by day and by night because they are continuously at work [in the Temple]. Hence the Sages have declared that any priest who can identify his Mishmar and his particular Beth-ab and who also knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab were participating in the service of the Temple⁵ is forbidden to drink wine on the whole of that day.⁶ If, however, he can identify only his Mishmar but not his particular Beth-ab and yet he knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab were participating in the service of the Temple, he is forbidden to drink wine the whole of that week.⁷ If he cannot identify his Mishmar nor his particular Beth-ab, but he knows definitely that the members of his Beth-ab were participating in the service of the Temple, he is forbidden to drink wine all the year round. Rabbi says: I declare [priests] should not at any time drink wine, but what can I do seeing that his misfortune turned out to be an advantage to him.⁸ Abaye said: According to whose opinion do priests drink wine? According to that of Rabbi.

BOTH THE MEN OF THE MISHMAR AND THE MEN OF THE MA'AMAD MAY NOT CUT THEIR HAIR NOR WASH THEIR CLOTHES, BUT ON A THURSDAY THEY MAY OUT OF RESPECT FOR THE SABBATH. What is the reason? — Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: In order that they should not enter on their week of duty in an unkempt state.

Our Rabbis have taught: A king cuts his hair every day, a high priest on the eve of every Sabbath, all ordinary priest once in thirty days. Why has a king to cut his hair every day? — R. Abba b. Zabda said: Scripture says, Thine eyes shall see the king in his beauty.⁹ Why has a high priest [to cut his hair] on the eve of every Sabbath? — R. Samuel b. Isaac said: Because the Mishmar changes every week. Whence can it be adduced that an ordinary priest [must cut his hair] once in thirty days? — It is to be adduced from the analogous use of the word pera' in connection with the Nazirite [and the priests]. Of the priests [it is written], Neither shall they shave their heads, 'nor suffer their locks [pera'] to grow long;¹⁰ and of the Nazirite it is written, He shall be holy. he shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow long [pera'];¹¹ as in the case of the Nazirite the period of growing his hair is thirty days so too must it be in the case of the ordinary priest. But whence do we know this to be the requirement of the Nazirite himself? R. Mattena said: A Nazirite's unspecified [term of] vow is thirty days. Whence is this to be adduced? — Scripture uses the word yihyeh the numerical value of which is thirty.¹² R. Papa said to Abaye: Perhaps Scripture means [that the priests] should not let their hair grow at all? — The latter replied: Had Scripture written, 'nor suffer to grow long their locks', it might be as you suggest, but since Scripture has written, 'Nor suffer their locks to grow long,' this implies, they may grow their hair but they may not suffer their locks to grow long. If that is so, this restriction should be valid even at the present time! — [This restriction is] on the same lines as that of the drinking of wine; just as the restriction of drinking wine applied only to the time when they might enter [the Temple]¹³ to do service, so too with regard to the restriction of letting the locks grow long. But has it not been taught: Rabbi says, I declare that [a priest] should not at any time drink wine, but what can I do, seeing that his misfortune turned out to be an advantage to him. And on this Abaye commented: At the present time according to whom do priests drink wine? According to Rabbi.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 17b

From this may be inferred that the Rabbis forbid [priests to drink wine], why? Perhaps the Temple may speedily be rebuilt and the need will arise for priests to do service therein and there will be none available; and so here too [in the case of letting the hair grow long] the Temple may speedily be rebuilt and the need will arise for priests fit for service and there will be none available? — [This difficulty cannot arise] here [in this latter case] since it is always possible for a priest to cut his hair and then enter [the Temple]. If that is so, then priests who are intoxicated could first sleep a little and then enter [the Temple], in accordance with the statement of Rami b. Abba who said: A mile walk or a little sleep drives away the effects of drink? — Has it not been stated in connection with this [statement]: This only holds good where a man has drunk a quarter of a log, but where he has drunk more than a quarter of a log walking renders him all the more tired, and sleep all the more drunk. R. Ashi replied: The Rabbis have decreed against those who are drunk because they profane [thereby] the service, but against those who perform the service with their hair long they did not decree because they do not [thereby] profane the service.

An objection was raised against this: The following [priests] incur the penalty of death, those who are intoxicated with wine and those whose hair has grown long. With regard to those who are intoxicated with wine, it is expressly stated, Drink no wine nor strong drink,¹ but whence do we adduce that this also applies to those who grow their hair long? For it is written, Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long,² and the next verse states, Neither shall any priest drink wine when they enter into the inner court; thus, those who grow their hair long are likened to those who are drunk with wine, just as those who are drunk with wine incur the penalty of death so too those who grow their locks long. Now can we not carry the comparison even further [and say] that just as those who are drunk with wine profane the service, so too should those who grow their hair long profane the service?³ — (No; [the two] are likened only with regard to the penalty of death but not with regard to the rendering of the service profane).⁴

Rabina asked R. Ashi:⁵ Who taught it⁶ before Ezekiel's time? — He replied: And according to your reasoning how will you explain the statement of R. Hisda, who said: The rule forbidding an uncircumcised priest⁷ to do service we have learnt not from the Law of Moses but from the prophets [where it is written], No alien uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter My sanctuary.⁸ But who stated it? It must therefore [be assumed] that it was a tradition and then Ezekiel came and gave it a Scriptural basis. Here too [of long hair profaning the service] there was a tradition and then Ezekiel came and gave it a Scriptural basis. (The tradition was with regard to the death penalty only but not with regard to the profaning of the service).⁹

THE RESTRICTION AGAINST MOURNING ON THE DAYS ENUMERATED IN THE SCROLL OF FASTS APPLIES TO THE PRECEDING DAY BUT NOT TO THE DAY FOLLOWING. Our Rabbis have taught:¹⁰ These are the days on which fasting is not permissible, and on some of them mourning also is forbidden. From the New Moon of Nisan until the eighth of the month mourning is not permissible because the Daily offering was established;¹¹ from the eighth day of the same month until the end of the festival [of Passover] mourning is not permissible since the date of the observance of the Feast of Weeks was then definitely fixed.¹²

The Master said: From the New Moon of Nisan until the eighth of the month mourning is not permissible because the Daily offering was established. Why does it state, 'from the New Moon'? Let it state from the second of Nisan and as New Moon itself is a festive day mourning is in any case forbidden thereon! — Rab replied: This is necessary in order to extend the restriction to the preceding day. But should not the restriction in any case apply to it seeing that it is the day before New Moon? — New Moon is a biblical ordinance, and a biblical ordinance needs no [additional] strengthening. For it has been taught: Mourning is forbidden before and after the days enumerated in the Megillath Ta'anith; as for Sabbaths and Festivals mourning is forbidden on the day before their incidence but not after their incidence. Why this differentiation between the two? The latter are biblical ordinances and need no [additional] strengthening, but the former are ordinances of the Soferim and ordinances of the Soferim need [additional] strengthening.

The Master said: 'From the eighth of the same month until the end of the festival [Passover] mourning is not permissible since the date of the observance of the Feast of Weeks was then definitely fixed.' Why does it state, 'until the end of the festival'? Let it state 'until the festival' and the festival itself being a holiday will ipso facto be a forbidden period for mourning? — R. Papa replied: [The answer is] as Rab who said: This was necessary

Accepting, however, the reading of MS.M. cited supra p. 83, n. 5, these words conclude R. Ashi's argument which runs thus: Since Ezekiel merely provides here a basis for laws that are essentially based on tradition, there is no warrant for the suggested analogy between intoxicated priests and those with long hair. While the former do profane the service, there is no tradition for this to apply to the latter.]

(11) A dispute lasting from the first to the eighth day of Nisan took place between the Pharisees and the Sadducees with regard to the Daily offering (Num. XXVIII, 3). The Pharisees were of the opinion that it could be brought only out of public funds (i.e., from the Temple treasury) and the Sadducees maintained it might also be defrayed by private funds. The Pharisees gained the day. V. Megillath Ta'anith, ch. 1; Men. 65a.

(12) There was also a dispute between the Pharisees and Sadducees with regard to the fixing of the date of Pentecost. The dispute turned on the interpretation of the words ממחרת השבת (Lev. XXIII, 15). The Pharisees took the view that the 'Omer had to be brought on the second day of Passover, while the Sadducees maintained that these words meant the morrow of the first Sabbath of the Passover week and from that day forty-nine days had to be counted to Pentecost. V. Megillath Ta'anith, ch. 1; Men. 65a.

in order to extend the restriction to the preceding day, so here also it was necessary in order to extend the restriction to the following day. With whose view will this agree? Is it with that of R. Jose,¹ who declared that the restriction applies equally to the day before and the day after it? If so, with regard to the twenty-ninth Adar, why need you base your restriction on the ground that it is the day before the Daily offering was established;² deduce it rather from the fact that it is the day after the twenty-eighth concerning which it has been taught: On the twenty-eighth of the month [Adar] the good news reached the Jews that they were no longer to be kept back from the study of the Torah.³ For once it was decreed that the Jews should not occupy themselves with the study of the Torah nor circumcise their children and that they should desecrate the Sabbath. What did Judah b. Shammua' and his colleagues do? They went and took counsel with a Roman Matron with whom all the prominent Romans were wont to associate. She advised them, 'Arise and raise an alarm by night'. They went and raised the alarm by night thus, 'O ye heavens, are we not your brethren? Are we not the children of one Father? Are we not the children of one mother? Wherein are we different from every other nation and tongue that ye make harsh decrees against us?' Thereupon the decrees were annulled and that day was declared a festive day!⁴ -Abaye replied: It was necessary to state the restriction in this way in order to cover the case of a full month [where Adar has thirty days].⁵ R. Ashi said: The same would be the case even when the month [of Adar] is deficient,⁶ because on a day following on a festive day fasting alone is forbidden but mourning is permissible; but as for this day [the twenty-ninth Adar] seeing that it is placed between two festive days it was considered as if it were a festive day itself, and therefore mourning too was forbidden thereon.

The Master said: 'From the eighth day of the month until the end of the festival mourning is forbidden since then the date of the observance of the Feast of Weeks was definitely fixed.' Why does he say, 'from the eighth of the same month'? Let him say, 'from the ninth of the same month' and the eighth day would ipso facto be forbidden because it is the day on which the Daily offering was established?⁷ — The reason why it is stated 'the eighth day' is this, should it ever come to pass that the seven festive days be abolished,⁸ even then on the eighth day it would still be forbidden to mourn, because it is the first day on which the date of the Feast of Weeks was definitely fixed. Now that you have arrived at this conclusion the same will apply also to the twenty-ninth Adar because should it ever come to pass that the twenty-eighth Adar be abolished as a festive day, even then the twenty-ninth would be forbidden seeing that it is the day before the Daily offering was established.

It has been taught: R. Hiyya b. Asi said in the name of Rab, the halachah is in accordance with the view of R. Jose.⁹ Samuel said, The halachah is in accordance with the view of R. Meir.¹⁰ But did Samuel actually say so? Has it not been taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: Why does the text [in the Scroll of Fasts] repeat the word 'behon' [on them] twice?¹¹ This is to teach you that the restriction applies to these days but not to the days immediately preceding or following the days enumerated in the Scroll of Fasts. On which Samuel's comment was that the halachah is in accordance with the view of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel! — At first he thought that as there was no other authority who took a lenient view as R. Meir did he decided that the halachah was according to R. Meir, but when he heard that Rabbi Simeon took an even more lenient view he decided that the halachah was according to R. Simeon b. Gamaliel. And so too said Bali in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba, in the name of R. Johanan: The halachah is according to R. Jose. Thereupon R. Hiyya said to Bali: I will explain to you that when R. Johanan said that the halachah was in accordance with R. Jose, he meant only with regard to the prohibition of fasting.¹² But did R. Johanan actually say so? Did not R. Johanan say that the halachah is in accordance with the anonymous opinion of a Mishnah,¹³ and it has been learnt: Although the Rabbis said that [the Megillah of Esther] could be read earlier¹⁴ but not later, yet

(3) R.H. 19a; cf. Megillath Ta'anith, ch. 12.

(4) For notes v. R.H., Sonc. ed. 19a. Why then state that the restriction on the twenty-ninth Adar was due to the matter of the Tamid.

(5) In that case the thirtieth Adar would be the last day of the month and it could only be included in the restriction on the ground that it precedes the first Nisan and not that it follows the twenty-ninth Adar, seeing that a day (the twenty-eighth) intervenes.

(6) I.e., it has twenty-nine days.

(7) I.e., one of the eight festive days.

(8) Because of some misfortune that befalls Israel and it would be necessary to fast on these days.

(9) Who holds that the restriction applies both to the day before and the day after the festive days.

(10) Who holds that the restriction applies only to the day following the festive day but not to the day before it. This view is anonymously stated in the Mishnah and in accordance with the accepted tradition that every anonymous statement in the Mishnah goes back to R. Meir. Hence the statement in our Mishnah is taken, to be the view of R. Meir.

mourning and fasting are permitted.¹ Now to what does this apply? Shall we say that it applies to those [who should read the Megillah] on the fifteenth [Adar] and they read it on the fourteenth? Is then mourning permissible [for them on that day]?² Is it not written in the Scroll of Fasts, 'The fourteenth day and the fifteenth day [of Adar] are the days of Purim and no mourning is permissible thereon,' and Raba's comment on this was: It was necessary [to mention both these dates] in order to make it clear that what was forbidden on the one day was equally forbidden on the other! Again, should it refer to [those who should read the Megillah] on the fourteenth and they read it on the thirteenth [Adar];³ [the question arises] that is Nicanor's Day.⁴ Or again, if it refers to those [who should read it] on the fourteenth and read it on the twelfth? But then that is Trajan's Day!⁵ Hence it can only have reference [to those who should read it on] the fourteenth and they read it on the eleventh, and yet it is stated that mourning and fasting are permitted thereon!⁶ — No; it has reference to those who should read it on the fourteenth and they read it on the twelfth, and as to your objection that it is Trajan's Day, this [festive] day was subsequently abolished because Shemaiah and his brother Ahijah⁷ were killed thereon. Thus R. Nahman once ordained a public fast for the twelfth of Adar and the Rabbis objected to this because it was Trajan's Day. Thereupon R. Nahman replied: This [festive] day has been abolished because Shemaiah and his brother Ahijah were killed thereon. Let, however, the restrictions [aforementioned] remain valid for the day seeing that it is the day before Nicanor's Day? — R. Ashi replied: If the festive character of the day had been once abolished [is it then feasible] that fasting should be forbidden thereon because it is the day before Nicanor's

Day?

What is Nicanor's Day? And what is Trajan's Day? It has been taught: Nicanor was one of the Greek generals; every day he waved his hand against Judah and Jerusalem and exclaimed, 'When shall it fall into my hands that I may trample upon it?' But when the Hasmonean Rulers proved victorious and triumphed over him they cut off his thumbs and his great toes and suspended them from, the gates of Jerusalem, as if to say of the mouth that spake arrogantly, of the hands that were waved against Jerusalem, May vengeance be exacted.

What is Trajan's [Day]?⁸ It was said: When Trajan⁹ was about to execute Lulianus and his brother Pappus in Laodicea [Lydia] he said to them, 'If you are of the people of Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah, let your God come and deliver you from my hands, in the same way as he delivered Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah from the hands of Nebuchadnezzar; and to this they replied: 'Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah were perfectly righteous men and they merited that a miracle should be wrought for them, and Nebuchadnezzar also was a king worthy for a miracle to be wrought through him, but as for you, you are a common and wicked man and are not worthy that a miracle be wrought through you; and as for us, we have deserved of the Omnipresent that we should die, and if you will not kill us, the Omnipresent has many other agents of death. The Omnipresent has in His world many bears and lions who can attack us and kill us; the only reason why the Holy One, blessed be He, has handed us over into your hand is that at some future time He may exact punishment of you for our blood'. Despite this he killed them. It is reported that hardly had they moved from there when two officials¹⁰ arrived from Rome and split his skull with clubs.

WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY FASTS TO COMMENCE ON A THURSDAY etc.; WE DO NOT ORDAIN UPON THE COMMUNITY A FAST ON NEW MOON etc. What constitutes a beginning?¹¹ — R. Aha said: Three fasts. R. Assi said: One. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: The view [that one should not complete the fast] is in accordance with R. Meir who reported it in the name of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, but the Sages say: He should complete the fast. Mar Zutra expounded in the name of R. Huna: The halachah is, one should complete the fast.

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. THE ORDER OF PUBLIC FASTS AFOREMENTIONED IS OBSERVED ONLY IN CONNECTION WITH [THE WITHHOLDING OF] THE FIRST RAIN,¹² BUT IF THE CROPS HAVE UNDERGONE [AN UNUSUAL] CHANGE THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AT ONCE. THE SAME TOO IS DONE IF FORTY DAYS ELAPSED BETWEEN THE FIRST AND THE SECOND RAINFALL¹³ BECAUSE IT IS THEN A PLAGUE DUE TO DROUGHT. IF [RAIN] FALLS FOR CROPS BUT NOT FOR THE TREES, FOR THE TREES BUT NOT FOR CROPS, FOR BOTH OF THESE BUT NOT FOR CISTERNS, DITCHES AND CAVES THE ALARM IS SOUNDED AT ONCE. AND SO TOO IF NO RAIN FALLS UPON A PARTICULAR CITY, AS IT IS WRITTEN, AND I CAUSED IT TO RAIN UPON ONE CITY, AND CAUSED IT NOT TO RAIN UPON ANOTHER CITY; ONE PIECE WAS RAINED UPON ETC.¹⁴

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 19a

IN SUCH A CASE THAT CITY FASTS AND SOUNDS THE ALARM, BUT THOSE [IN THE PLACES] AROUND IT FAST BUT DO NOT SOUND THE ALARM. R. AKIBA SAYS: THEY SOUND THE ALARM BUT DO NOT FAST. AND SO TOO IF A PLAGUE RAGES IN A CITY OR [ITS BUILDINGS] COLLAPSE¹ THEN THAT CITY FASTS AND SOUNDS THE ALARM, BUT THE PEOPLE [IN THE PLACES] AROUND IT FAST BUT DO NOT SOUND THE ALARM. R. AKIBA SAYS: THEY SOUND THE ALARM BUT DO NOT FAST. WHAT CONSTITUTES A PLAGUE? IF IN A CITY THAT CAN SUPPLY FIVE HUNDRED FOOT-SOLDIERS THREE DEATHS TAKE PLACE ON THREE CONSECUTIVE DAYS, THIS CONSTITUTES A PLAGUE; LESS THAN THIS IS NO PLAGUE.

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED EVERYWHERE ON ACCOUNT OF THE FOLLOWING [VISITATIONS]: BLAST, MILDEW, LOCUST, CRICKET, WILD BEASTS AND THE SWORD, AS THEY ARE ALL PLAGUES LIKELY TO SPREAD. IT HAPPENED THAT ELDERS WENT DOWN FROM JERUSALEM TO THEIR OWN CITIES AND ORDERED A FAST BECAUSE THERE WAS OBSERVED IN ASKELON BLAST WHICH AFFECTED AS MUCH GRAIN AS WOULD FILL AN OVEN [WITH LOAVES MADE THEREOF]. THEY ALSO ORDAINED A FAST BECAUSE WOLVES DEVoured TWO CHILDREN ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE JORDAN; R. JOSE SAID: NOT BECAUSE THEY DEVoured [THE CHILDREN] BUT [MERELY] BECAUSE THEY WERE SEEN.

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED ON THE SABBATH ON ACCOUNT OF THE FOLLOWING MISHAPS: IF A CITY IS BESIEGED BY HOSTILE TROOPS OR [INUNDATED BY] THE RIVER, OR IF A SHIP IS FOUNDERING ON THE SEA, R. JOSE SAYS: [THE ALARM IS SOUNDED] FOR HELP BUT NOT FOR A CALL TO PRAYERS. SIMEON THE TEMANITE SAYS: [THE ALARM IS SOUNDED] ON ACCOUNT OF PLAGUE, BUT THE SAGES DID NOT AGREE WITH HIM.

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED ON ACCOUNT OF ANY VISITATION, THAT COMES UPON THE COMMUNITY² EXCEPT ON ACCOUNT OF AN OVER-ABUNDANCE OF RAIN. IT HAPPENED THAT THE PEOPLE SAID TO HONI THE CIRCLE DRAWER, PRAY FOR RAIN TO FALL. HE REPLIED: GO AND BRING IN THE OVENS [ON WHICH YOU HAVE ROASTED] THE PASCHAL OFFERINGS SO THAT THEY DO NOT DISSOLVE.³ HE PRAYED AND NO RAIN FELL...WHAT DID HE DO? HE DREW A CIRCLE AND STOOD WITHIN IT AND EXCLAIMED, MASTER OF THE UNIVERSE, THY CHILDREN HAVE TURNED TO ME BECAUSE THEY BELIEVE ME TO BE AS A MEMBER OF THY HOUSEHOLD; I SWEAR BY THY GREAT NAME THAT I WILL NOT MOVE FROM HERE UNTIL THOU HAST MERCY UPON THY CHILDREN. RAIN THEN BEGAN TO DRIP, AND THEREUPON HE EXCLAIMED: IT IS NOT FOR THIS THAT I HAVE PRAYED BUT FOR RAIN [TO FILL]

CISTERNS, DITCHES AND CAVES. THE RAIN THEN BEGAN TO COME DOWN WITH GREAT FORCE, AND THEREUPON HE EXCLAIMED; IT IS NOT FOR THIS THAT I HAVE PRAYED BUT FOR RAIN OF BENEVOLENCE, BLESSING AND BOUNTY. RAIN THEN FELL IN THE NORMAL WAY UNTIL THE ISRAELITES IN JERUSALEM WERE COMPELLED TO GO UP [FOR SHELTER] TO THE TEMPLE MOUNT BECAUSE OF THE RAIN. THEY CAME AND SAID TO HIM: IN THE SAME WAY AS YOU HAVE PRAYED FOR [THE RAIN] TO FALL PRAY [NOW] FOR THE RAIN TO CEASE. HE REPLIED: GO AND SEE IF THE STONE OF CLAIMANTS⁴ HAS BEEN WASHED AWAY. THEREUPON SIMEON B. SHETAH SENT TO HIM [THIS MESSAGE]: WERE IT NOT THAT YOU ARE HONI I WOULD HAVE PLACED YOU UNDER THE BAN, BUT WHAT CAN I DO UNTO YOU WHO IMPORTUNE GOD AND HE ACCEDES TO YOUR REQUEST AS A SON THAT IMPORTUNES HIS FATHER AND HE ACCEDES TO HIS REQUEST; OF YOU SCRIPTURE SAYS, LET THY FATHER AND THY MOTHER BE GLAD, AND LET HER THAT BORE THEE REJOICE.⁵

IF WHILST THEY ARE FASTING RAIN FALLS, IF IT IS BEFORE SUNRISE THEY DO NOT COMPLETE THE FAST,⁶ IF AFTER SUNRISE, THEY DO COMPLETE THE FAST. R. ELIEZER SAYS: IF BEFORE NOON THEY DO NOT COMPLETE THE FAST, AFTER NOON THEY DO COMPLETE IT. IT HAPPENED THAT THE RABBIS ORDAINED A FAST IN LYDIA AND RAIN FELL BEFORE NOON. THEREUPON R. TARFON SAID TO THEM: GO, EAT AND DRINK AND OBSERVE THE DAY AS A HOLIDAY. THEY WENT AND ATE AND DRANK AND OBSERVED THE DAY AS A HOLIDAY AND AT EVENING TIME THEY CAME AND RECITED THE GREAT HALLEL.⁷

GEMARA. THE ORDER OF PUBLIC FASTS AFOREMENTIONED IS OBSERVED ONLY IN CONNECTION WITH [THE WITHHOLDING] OF THE FIRST RAIN. A contradiction was raised against this Mishnah: [If rain is withheld at the time of] the first and second rainfalls prayers are offered; if at the third rainfall, fasts are observed!⁸ Rab Judah replied: The Mishnah means this: The order of fasts aforementioned is observed only when the time for the first, second and third fructification rainfalls has passed and no rain fell, but if rain fell at the time for the first fructification rainfall and they sowed but nothing sprouted forth, or if the [plants] did sprout forth but they had undergone an unusual change the alarm is sounded at once.⁹

R. Nahman said: Only when they had undergone an unusual change, but not if they merely withered away. Is not this self-evident? We clearly learned, HAVE UNDERGONE A CHANGE[R. Nahman's statement] is needed to cover the case of seeds that have already shot up into stalks. You might have thought that this is a sign of recovery, he therefore informs us [that it is not].

THE SAME TOO IS DONE IF FORTY DAYS ELAPSED BETWEEN THE FIRST AND THE SECOND RAINFALLS AND NO RAIN FELL etc. What is the nature of the plague of drought? Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: A plague which leads to scarcity. R. Nahman said: When [grain] has to be transported by river

(1) If the collapse is caused by an earth-quake or by some other extraordinary natural phenomena.

(2) [Aliter: 'that may not come etc.' a euphemism for 'that may come etc.']

(3) These ovens were usually made of clay and were portable.

(4) Lit., 'a stone of the losers'. A stone in Jerusalem from which announcements of property lost and found were made. (Cf. B.M. 28b where the reading is אבן הטוען 'stone of claims or claimants'). [The meaning of Honi's statement becomes clear from the parallel passage in Tosef. Ta'an. III, We are confident that God will not bring a flood upon the world according to Gen. IX, 15. It was this assurance which made it impossible for the rain to be so strong as to dissolve the stones and which should allay the fear of the anxious people.]

(5) Prov. XXIII, 25. [With this story cf. Josephus, Ant. XVI, 2,1 and v. Buchler, Types, 198ff for a fine analysis of

Honi's prayer.]

(6) Because strictly speaking the fast had not yet begun.

(7) Ps. CXXXVI. Cf. Ber. 4b.

(8) Here it is stated that fasts are ordained after these three rainfalls had failed, whereas the Mishnah says that the fasts are observed immediately after the first expected rainfalls had failed.

(9) The phrase רביעה ראשונה does not denote, as it was assumed, the first fructification rain but the whole of the former rain season (יורה) which comprises three fructification rains as stated supra 6a.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 19b

[from one city to another] it is drought, but when it has to be brought [overland] from one province to another it is famine. R. Hanina said: If a se'ah of grain costs one sela' and is obtainable it is drought; but if four se'ahs cost a sela' but are not easily obtainable, then it is a famine. R. Johanan added: This holds good only when money is cheap and food dear, but if money is dear and food cheap then the alarm is sounded at once. For R. Johanan said: I remember well [the time] when four se'ahs cost one sela' and yet there were many in Tiberias swollen from hunger because there was not a coin to be had.

IF RAIN FALLS FOR CROPS BUT NOT FOR THE TREES. It is of course possible [for rainfall to be beneficial] for crops and not for the trees when [the rain] falls gently and not heavily; similarly, It can be beneficial for trees and not for crops when it falls heavily and not gently; similarly, it can be beneficial for both of them and yet not for cisterns, ditches and caves if it falls heavily and gently but yet not in great enough volume. But is it possible for rain to fall for cisterns, ditches and caves and yet not be beneficial for both of these [crops and trees] as has been taught in the Baraitha? — When the rain is torrential.

Our Rabbis have taught: The alarm [for rain] for the trees is sounded during the middle of the Passover [season],¹ and for the cisterns, ditches and caves even during² the middle of the Tabernacles [season]; and at any time should there be no water to drink the alarm is sounded at once. What is meant by 'at once'? — On the [following] Monday, Thursday and Monday. The alarm is sounded for all the aforementioned only in the particular province affected. In the case of croup the alarm is sounded only when deaths result from it, but if no deaths result the alarm is not sounded. In the case of locust the alarm is sounded no matter how small in number. R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: [The alarm is sounded] also in the case of grasshoppers.

Our Rabbis have taught: The alarm is sounded for the trees during the working years of the Sabbatical Cycle,³ but for the cisterns, ditches and caves even on the Sabbatical year. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: [The alarm is sounded] also for the trees during the Sabbatical year because the poor derive their livelihood from them.⁴

Another Baraitha taught: The alarm is sounded for trees during the six working years of the Sabbatical Cycle, but for the cisterns, ditches and caves even on the Sabbatical year. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel says: [The alarm is sounded] also for the trees. For what grows of itself the alarm is sounded even on the Sabbatical year because the poor derive their livelihood from them.

It has been taught: R. Eleazar b. Perata said: Ever since the day the Temple was destroyed the rains have become irregular;⁵ there are years in which rains are abundant, and there are other years when they are scanty; there are some years when the rains come in season, and there are other years when they do not. To what may be compared the years when the rains come in season? To a servant to whom his master gave his week's food allowance [in advance] on the first day of the week, with the result that the dough is baked well and eatable.⁶ To what may be compared the years when the rains do not come in season? To a servant to whom his master gave his week's food allowance on the eve of the Sabbath with the result that his dough is not well baked⁷ and uneatable. To what may be compared the years when the rains are abundant? To a servant to whom his master gave his [year's] food allowance in one lot so that the [waste of] the mill in grinding a kor⁸ is no more than [the waste] in grinding a kab⁹ and likewise the waste in kneading a kor is no more than in kneading a kab. To what may be compared the years when the rains are scanty? To a servant to whom his master gave his [year's] food allowance little by little, so that the waste in grinding a kab is no less than in grinding a kor, and likewise the waste in kneading a kab is no less than in kneading a kor. Another explanation: When the rains are plentiful they may be compared to a man kneading clay; if he has a plentiful supply of water then the clay is well kneaded without all the water being used up, but if the supply is scanty the water will give out and the clay is not well kneaded.

Our Rabbis have taught: Once it happened when all Israel came up on pilgrimage to Jerusalem that there was no water available for drinking. Thereupon Nakdimon b. Gurion approached a certain [heathen] lord and said to him: Loan me twelve wells of water for the Pilgrims and I will repay you twelve wells of water; and if I do not, I will give you instead twelve talents of silver, and he fixed a time limit [for repayment]. When the time came [for repayment] and no rain had yet fallen the lord sent a message to him in the morning: Return to me either the water or the money that you owe me. Nakdimon replied: I have still time, the whole day is mine. At midday he [again] sent to him a message, Return to me either the water or the money that you owe me. Nakdimon replied: I still have time to-day. In the afternoon he [again] sent to him a message, Return to me either the water or the money that you owe me. Nakdimon replied, I still have time to-day. Thereupon the lord sneeringly said to him, Seeing that no rain has fallen throughout the whole year

(1) פרום 'half'. This is explained by J. T. (Sheck. III, 47b) to mean half of the thirty days before the feast, i.e., within fifteen days before the feast.

(2) Though it is still summer season (Rashi). MS.M. omits 'even'.

(3) At any time within the six years of the seven years' cycle (Shemittah).

(4) The poor had equal rights with the owners to the produce of the seventh year. Cf. Ex. XXIII, 11 and Lev. XXV, 6.

(5) צימוקין Rashi explains the word to mean 'with difficulty'. Jastrow thinks the word to be a corruption of xenium, 'a host or king's gift, donation indefinite as to time and amount', hence, irregular.

(6) He has plenty of time to devote to its baking.

(7) It is baked hurriedly.

(8) Thirty se'ahs.

(9) One sixth of a se'ah.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 20a

will it then rain now? Thereupon he repaired in a happy mood to the baths. Meanwhile, whilst the lord had gone gleefully to the baths, Nakdimon entered the Temple depressed. He wrapped himself in his cloak and stood up to pray. He said, 'Master of the Universe! It is revealed and known before Thee that I have not done this for my honour nor for the honour of my father's house, but for Thine honour have I done this in order that water be available for the Pilgrims'. Immediately the sky became covered with clouds and rain fell until the twelve wells were filled with water and there was much over. As the lord came out of the baths Nakdimon b. Gurion came out from the Temple and the two met, and Nakdimon said to the lord, Give me the money for the extra water that you have received. The latter replied, I know that¹ the Holy One, blessed be He, disturbed the world but for your sake, yet my claim against you for the money still holds good, for the sun had already set and consequently the rain fell in my possession. Nakdimon thereupon again entered the Temple and wrapped himself in his cloak and stood up to pray and said, 'Master of the Universe! Make it known that Thou hast beloved ones In Thy world'. Immediately the clouds dispersed and the sun broke through. Thereupon the lord said to him, Had not the sun broken through I would still have had a claim against you entitling me to exact my money from you. It has been taught: His name was not Nakdimon but Boni and he was called Nakdimon because the sun had broken through [nikdera] on his behalf.

The Rabbis have taught: For the sake of three the sun broke through, Moses, Joshua and Nakdimon b. Gurion. Now of Nakdimon we know from the above tradition; of Joshua too we know from Scripture where it is written, And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed,² etc.; but of Moses whence do we know this?

R. Eleazar said: We deduce it from an inference from the analagous use of the word ahel.³ Here it is written, I will begin [ahel] to put the dread of thee,⁴ and elsewhere it is written, I will begin [ahel] to magnify thee.⁵ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: From an analogous use of the word teth.⁶ Here it is written, I will begin to put [teth] the the dread of thee, and elsewhere it is written, In the day when the lord delivered [teth] up the Amorites etc.⁷ R. Johanan said: It can be derived from the verse itself, Who, when they hear the report of thee, shall tremble and be in anguish because of thee.⁸ When did they tremble and were in anguish before Moses? When the sun broke⁹ through for Moses.

AN SO TOO IF NO RAIN FALLS UPON A PARTICULAR CITY etc. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Both [cities cited in the verse are under] divine displeasure.¹⁰ Jerusalem is among them as one unclean.¹¹ Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The verse implies] blessing; as an unclean [menstruous] woman becomes permissible [to her husband],¹² so too will Jerusalem be reinstated.

She is become as a widow;¹³ Rab Judah said: [The verse implies] blessing; 'as a widow'; not a real widow, but a woman whose husband has gone to a country beyond the sea [fully] intending to return to her.

Therefore have I also made you contemptable and base before all the people:¹⁴ Rab Judah said: [The verse implies] blessing; of you no overseers of rivers¹⁵ nor officers¹⁶ shall be appointed.

For the Lord will smite Israel as a reed is shaken in the water:¹⁷ Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The verse implies] blessing. For R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Johanan: What is the meaning of the verse, Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are importunate?¹⁸ Better is the curse which Ahijah the Shilonite pronounced on Israel than the blessings with which Balaam the wicked blessed them. Ahijah the Shilonite cursed them by comparing them with the 'reed'; he said to Israel, For the Lord will smite Israel as a reed is shaken in water. [Israel are as the reed], as the reed grows by the water and its stock grows new shoots¹⁹ and its roots are many, and even though all the winds of the universe come and blow at it they cannot move it from its place for it sways with the winds and as soon as they have dropped the reed resumes its upright position. But Balaam the wicked blessed them by comparing them with the 'cedar', as it is said, As cedars beside the waters;²⁰ the cedar does not grow by the waterside and its stock does not grow new shoots and its roots are not many, and even though all the winds of the universe blow at it they cannot move it from its place;²¹ if however the south wind blows at it, it uproots it and turns it upside down. Moreover, [because of its yielding nature] the reed merited that of it should be made a pen for the writing of the Law, the Prophets and Hagiographa.

Our Rabbis have taught: A man should always be gentle as the reed and never unyielding as the cedar. Once R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon was coming from Migdal Gedor,²² from the house of his teacher, and he was riding leisurely on his ass by the riverside and was feeling happy and elated because he had studied much Torah

. There chanced to meet him an exceedingly ugly man who greeted him, 'Peace be upon you, Sir'. He, however, did not return his salutation but instead said to him, 'Raca,¹ how ugly you are. Are all your fellow citizens as ugly as you are?' The man replied: 'I do not know, but go and tell the craftsman who made me, "How Ugly is the vessel which you have made".' When R. Eleazar realized that he had done wrong he dismounted from the ass and prostrated himself before the man and said to him, 'I submit myself to you, forgive me'. The man replied: 'I will not forgive you until you go to the craftsman who made me and say to him, "How ugly is the vessel which you have made".' He [R. Eleazar] walked behind him until he reached his native city. When his fellow citizens came out to meet him greeting him with the words, 'Peace be upon you O Teacher, O Master,' the man asked them, 'Whom are you addressing thus?' They replied, 'The man who is walking behind you.' Thereupon he exclaimed: 'If this man is a teacher, may there not be any more like him in Israel!' The people then asked him: 'Why'? He replied: 'Such and such a thing has he done to me. They said to him: 'Nevertheless, forgive him, for he is a man greatly learned in the Torah.' The man replied: 'For your sakes I will forgive him, but only on the condition that he does not act in the same manner in the future.' Soon after this R. Eleazar son of R. Simeon entered [the Beth Hamidrash] and expounded thus, A man should always be gentle as the reed and let him never be unyielding as the cedar. And for this reason the reed merited that of it should be made a pen for the writing of the Law, Phylacteries and Mezuzoth.²

AND SO TOO, IF A PLAGUE RAGES IN A CITY OR [ITS BUILDINGS] COLLAPSE etc. Our Rabbis have taught: The 'COLLAPSE spoken of refers only to sound buildings but not to those already dilapidated; only to those which are not likely to fall in but not to those that are likely to fall in. Are not 'sound buildings' the same as 'those that are not likely to fall in'? And are not those already dilapidated' the same as 'those likely to fall in'? — It is necessary [to distinguish between them] when for instance they collapsed because of their excessive height, or, when they stood on the bank of a river.³ In Nehardea there was a dilapidated wall and neither Rab nor Samuel would go past it although it had remained standing in the same position for thirteen years. One day R. Adda b. Ahaba happened to come there and Samuel said to Rab: 'Come, Sir, let us walk around it', and the latter replied, 'This precaution is not necessary now because R. Adda b. Ahaba is with us; his merit is great and therefore I do not fear’.

R. Huna had wine [stored] in a certain dilapidated house and he desired to remove it. He took R. Adda b. Ahaba into that house and kept him occupied with traditional teaching until he had removed it. As soon as he had left the house it fell in. R. Adda b. Ahaba noticed this and was offended, because he agreed with the statement of R. Jannai who said: A man should never stand in a place of danger and declare, ‘A miracle will befall me’; perhaps a miracle will not befall him. And if a miracle does befall him he suffers thereby a reduction from his merits. R. Hanan said: This can be inferred from the verse where it is written, I am not worthy of all the mercies, and of all the truth.⁴ .⁴ What were the merits of R. Adda b. Ahaba?—Thus it has been stated: The disciples of⁵ R. Adda b. Ahaba asked him: To what do you attribute your longevity? — He replied: I have never displayed any impatience in my house, and I have never walked in front of any man greater than myself, nor have I ever meditated [over the words of the Torah] in any dirty alleys, nor have I ever walked four cubits without [musing over] the Torah or without [wearing] phylacteries, nor have I ever fallen asleep in the Beth Hamidrash for any length of time or even momentarily, nor have I rejoiced at the disgrace of my friends, nor have I ever called my neighbour by a nickname given to him by myself, or, some say by the nickname given to him by others.⁶

Raba said to Rafram b. Papa: Tell me some of the good deeds which R. Huna had done. He replied: Of his childhood I do not recollect anything, but of his old age I do. On cloudy [stormy] days they used to drive him about in a golden carriage and he would survey every part of the city and he would order the demolition of any wall that was unsafe; if the owner was in a position to do so he had to rebuild it himself, but if not, then [R. Huna] would have it rebuilt at his own expense. On the eve of every Sabbath [Friday] he would send a messenger to the market and any vegetables that the [market] gardeners had left over he bought up and had then, thrown into the river. Should he not rather have had these distributed among the poor? — [He was afraid] lest they would then at times be led to rely upon him and would not trouble to buy any for themselves. Why did he not give the vegetables to the domestic animals? — He was of the opinion that food fit for human consumption may not be given to animals⁷ Then why did he purchase them at all? — This would lead [the gardeners] to do wrong in the future [by not providing an adequate supply].⁸ Whenever he discovered some [new] medicine he would fill a water jug with it and suspend it above the doorstep and proclaim, Whosoever desires it let him come and take of it . Some say, he knew from tradition a medicine for that disease, Sibetha⁹ and he would suspend a jugful of water and proclaim, Whosoever needs it let him come [and wash his hands] so that he may save his life from danger. When he had a meal¹⁰ he would open the door wide and declare, Whosoever is in need let him come and eat. Raba said: All these things I could myself carry out except the last one because there are so many in Mahuza.¹

Ilfa and R. Johanan studied together the Torah and they found themselves in great want and they said one to another, Let us go and engage in commerce so that of us may be fulfilled the verse, Howbeit there shall be no need among you.² They went and sat down under a ruinous wall and while they were having their meal two ministering angels came and R. Johanan overheard one saying to the other, Let us throw this wall upon these [people] and kill them, because they forsake life eternal and occupy themselves with life temporal. The other [angel] replied: Leave them alone because one of them has still much to achieve.³ R. Johanan heard this but Ilfa did not. Whereupon R. Johanan said to Ilfa, Master, have you heard anything? He replied: No. Thereupon R. Johanan said to himself: Seeing that I heard this and Ilfa has not, it is evident that I am the one who still has much to achieve. R. Johanan then said to Ilfa: I will go back, that of me may be fulfilled, For the poor shall never cease out of the land.⁴ Thereupon R. Johanan went back but Ilfa did not. When [at last] Ilfa returned, R. Johanan was already presiding over the school, and the scholars said to him: Had you remained here and studied the Torah you might have been presiding.⁵ Ilfa then suspended himself from the mast of a ship and exclaimed, If there is any one who will ask me a question from the Baraitas of R. Hiyya and R. Hoshaiah and I fail to elucidate it from the Mishnah then I will throw myself down and be drowned [in the sea]. And an old man came forward and cited the following Baraita: If a man [in his last will and testament] declares, Give a shekel weekly to my sons, but actually they needed a sela'⁶ then they should be given a sela'; but if he declared, Give them a shekel only, then they should be given a shekel. If, however, he declared, On their death others should inherit [their allowance] in their stead, then whether he has declared 'give' or 'give only' they are given a shekel only.⁷ He replied: This is in accordance with the view of R. Meir who said: It is a duty to carry out the will of a dying man.⁸

It is related of Nahum of Gamzu⁹ that he was blind in both his eyes, his two hands and legs were amputated — and his whole body was covered with boils and he was lying in a dilapidated house on a bed the feet of which were standing in bowls of water in order to prevent the ants from crawling on to him. On one occasion his disciples desired to remove the bed and then clear the things out of the house, but he said to them, My children, first clear out the things [from the house] and then remove my bed for I am confident that so long as I am in the house it will not collapse. They first cleared out the things and then they removed his bed and the house [immediately] collapsed. Thereupon his disciples said to him, Master, since you are wholly righteous, why has all this befallen you? and he replied, I have brought it all upon myself. Once I was journeying on the road and was making for the house of my father-in-law and I had with me three asses, one laden with food, one with drink and one with all kinds of dainties, when a poor man met me and stopped me on the road and said to me, Master, give me something to eat. I replied to him, Wait until I have unloaded something from the ass; I had hardly managed to unload something from the ass when the man died [from hunger]. I then went and laid myself on him and exclaimed, May my eyes which had no pity upon your eyes become blind, may my hands which had no pity upon your hands be cut off, may my legs which had no pity upon your legs be amputated, and my mind was not at rest until I added, may my whole body be covered with boils. Thereupon his pupils exclaimed, 'Alas! that we see you in such a sore plight'. To this he replied, 'Woe would it be to me did you not see me in such a sore plight'. Why was he called Nahum of Gamzu? — Because whatever befell him he would declare, This also is for the best. Once the Jews desired to send to the Emperor a gift and after discussing who should go they decided that Nahum of Gamzu should go because he had experienced many miracles. They sent with him a bag full of precious stones and pearls. He went and spent the night in a certain inn and during the night the people in the inn arose and emptied the bag and filled it up with earth. When he discovered this next morning he exclaimed, This also is for the best. When he arrived at his destination and they undid his bag they found that it was full of earth. The king thereupon desired to put them¹⁰ all to death saying, The Jews are mocking me. Nahum then exclaimed, This also is for the best. Whereupon Elijah appeared in the guise of one of them¹¹ and remarked, Perhaps this is some of the earth of their father Abraham,¹² for when he threw earth [against the enemy] it turned into swords and when [he threw] stubble it changed into arrows, for it is written, His sword maketh them as dust, his bow as the driven stubble.¹³ Now there was one province which [the emperor had hitherto] not been able to conquer but when they tried some of this earth [against it] they were able to conquer it. Then they took him [Nahum] to the royal treasury and filled his bag with precious stones and pearls and sent him back with great honour. When on his return journey he again spent the night in the same inn he was asked, What did you take [to the king] that they showed you such great honour? He replied, I brought thither what I had taken from here. [The innkeepers] thereupon razed the inn to the ground and took of the earth to the king and they said to him, The earth that was brought to you belonged to us. They tested it and it was not found to be [effective] and the innkeepers were thereupon put to death.

WHAT CONSTITUTES PLAGUE? IF IN A CITY THAT CAN SUPPLY FIVE HUNDRED FOOT-SOLDIERS etc. Our Rabbis have taught: If in a city that can supply fifteen hundred foot-soldiers, as for example Kefar Acco,¹⁴ nine deaths take place in three consecutive days, this constitutes plague; if, however, these deaths take place in one day or in four days it is not plague. And if in a city that can supply five hundred foot-soldiers, as for example, Kefar-Amiko,¹⁵ three deaths take place in three consecutive days this constitutes plague; if, however, they take place in one day or in four days it is not plague.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 21b

In Derokereth,¹ a city that supplied five hundred foot-soldiers three deaths took place in one day, whereupon R. Nahman b. Hisda ordained a [public] fast. R. Nahman b. Isaac said, This must be in accordance with the authority of R. Meir who declared, If for going at long intervals [during three days] there is [full] liability, how much more so for going at short intervals [in one day].² Said R. Nahman b. Hisda to R. Nahman b. Isaac: Pray, take a seat nearer us.³ The latter replied: We have taught, R. Jose says: It is not the place that honours the man but it is the man who honours the place. We find it thus In connection with Mt. Sinai, as long as the Shechinah dwelt thereon the Torah declared, Neither let the flocks nor herds feed before that mount;⁴ but once the Shechinah had departed thence the Torah said, When the ram's horn soundeth long, they shall come up to the mount.⁵ The same too we find in connection with the Tent of Meeting in the wilderness; so long as it remained pitched the Torah commanded, That they put out of the camp every leper;⁶ but once the curtains were rolled up⁷ both those with a running issue and the lepers were permitted to enter therein. Thereupon R. Hisda retorted: If so I will come nearer to you; whereupon the latter replied: It is more fitting that a scholar, the son of an ordinary man, should go to one who is a scholar and is the son of a scholar, than the latter should go towards the former.⁸

Once a plague broke out in Sura but it did not affect the locality in which Rab resided. People thought that this was on account of Rab's great merit but in a dream it was made clear to them that this was far too small a matter to need Rab's great merit, but that it was on account of the merit of a certain man who made it a practice to lend shovel and spade for burials.

Once a fire broke out in Derokereth but it did not spread to the locality where R. Huna resided. People thought that it was on account of the great merit of R. Huna, but in a dream it was made clear to them that this was far too small a matter to need R. Huna's great merit, but that it was on account of a certain woman who [on the eve of Sabbaths] would heat her oven and permit her neighbours to make use of it.

Once Rab Judah was informed that locusts had come and he ordained a fast. He was then told that no damage had been done, whereupon he exclaimed: Have they then brought provision with them?⁹

Once Rab Judah was informed that pestilence was raging among the swine and he ordained a fast. Can it then be concluded from this that Rab Judah is of the opinion that a plague scourging one species of animals is likely to attack also other species? No, the case of the swine is exceptional, because their intestines are like unto those of human beings.

Once Samuel was informed that pestilence was raging amongst the inhabitants of Be Hozae,¹⁰ and he ordained a fast. The people said to him: surely [Be Hozae] is a long distance away from here.¹¹ He replied: Would then a crossing prevent it from spreading?¹²

Once R. Nahman was informed that there was pestilence in Palestine and he ordained a fast, for he said, If the 'Mistress' is stricken how much more so the 'Maid-servant' .¹³ [Are we then to assume] that the reason for his ordaining the fast was because it was a case of 'mistress' and 'maid-servant', but if both were maid-servants', he would not have ordained the fast? But did not Samuel ordain a fast [in Nehardea] when he was informed that there was pestilence amongst the inhabitants of Be Hozae?¹⁴ The case there was exceptional since there are caravans which it accompanies and with which it comes along.

Abba was a cupper and daily he would receive greetings from the Heavenly Academy. Abaye received greetings on every Sabbath eve, Raba on the eve of every Day of Atonement. Abaye felt dejected because of [the signal honour shown to] Abba the Cupper. People said to him: This distinction is made because you cannot do what Abba does. What was the special merit of Abba the Cupper? When he performed his operations he would separate men from women, and in addition he had a cloak which held a cup [for receiving the blood]¹⁵ and which was slit at the shoulder¹⁶ and whenever a woman patient came to him he would put the garment on her shoulder¹⁷ in order not to see her [exposed body].¹⁸ He also had a place¹⁹ out of public gaze²⁰ where the patients deposited their fees which he would charge; those that could afford it put their fees there, and thus those who could not pay were not put to shame.²¹ Whenever a young scholar happened to consult him not only would he accept no fee from him but on taking leave of him he also would give him some money at the same time adding, Go and regain strength therewith. One day Abaye sent to him two scholars in order to test him. He received them and gave them food and drink and in the evening he prepared woollen mattresses for them [to sleep on].

In the morning the scholars rolled these together and took them to the market [for sale]. There they met Abba and they said to him, Sir, value these, how much they are worth, and he replied, So-and-so much. They said to him, Perhaps they are worth more? He replied, This is what I paid for them. They then said to him, They are yours, we took them away from you; tell us, pray, of what did you suspect us. He replied: I said to myself, perhaps the Rabbis needed money to redeem captives and they were ashamed to tell me. They replied, Sir, take them back. He answered: From the moment I missed them I dismissed them from my mind and [I devoted them] to charity.

Raba was dejected because of the special honour shown to Abaye and he was therefore told, Be content that [through your merit] the whole city is protected.

R. Beroka Hoza'ah¹ used to frequent the market at Be Lapat² where Elijah often appeared to him. Once he asked [the prophet], is there any one in this market who has a share in the world to come? He replied, No. Meanwhile he caught sight of a man wearing black shoes and who had no thread of blue on the corners of his garment³ and he exclaimed, This man has a share in the world to come. He [R. Beroka] ran after him and asked him, What is your occupation? And the man replied: Go away and come back tomorrow. Next day he asked him again, What is your occupation? And he replied: I am a jailer and I keep the men and women separate and I place my bed between them so that they may not come to sin; when I see a Jewish girl upon whom the Gentiles cast their eyes I risk my life and save her. Once there was amongst us a betrothed girl upon whom the Gentiles cast their eyes. I therefore took lees of [red] wine and put them in her skirt and I told them that she was unclean.⁴ [R. Beroka further] asked the man, Why have you no fringes and why do you wear black shoes?⁵ He replied: That the Gentiles amongst whom I constantly move may not know that I am a Jew, so that when a harsh decree is made [against Jews] I inform the rabbis and they pray [to God] and the decree is annulled. He further asked him, When I asked you, What is your occupation, why did you say to me, Go away now and come back to-morrow? He answered, They had just issued a harsh decree and I said I would first go and acquaint the rabbis of it so that they might pray to God.

Whilst [they were thus conversing] two [men]⁶ passed by and [Elijah] remarked, These two have a share in the world to come. R. Beroka then approached and asked them, What is your occupation? They replied, We are jesters, when we see men depressed we cheer them up; furthermore when we see two people quarrelling we strive hard to make peace between them.

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED EVERYWHERE ON ACCOUNT OF THE FOLLOWING [VISITATIONS] etc. Our Rabbis have taught: The alarm is sounded everywhere on account of the following visitations, blast, mildew, locust, crickets and wild beasts. R. Akiba says: For the slightest attack of blast and mildew; and In the case of locust and crickets even if only one winged creature is seen the alarm is sounded [immediately].

FOR WILD BEASTS etc. Our Rabbis have taught: The Alarm is sounded for wild beasts only when they are a [divine] visitation but not otherwise. What constitutes a [divine] visitation and what does not? When they make their appearance in the city that is a [divine] visitation, in the field it is not; by day it is a [divine] visitation, by night it is not; if a beast sees two persons and pursues them it is a [divine] visitation, but if it hides itself on seeing them it is not; if it killed two persons and devoured only one of them that is a [divine] visitation, but if it devoured both of them it is not;⁷ if it mounted the roof and carried off an infant out of the cradle that is a divine visitation. Is not this [Baraita] self-contradictory? [First] you say, 'If it makes its appearance in the city it is a visitation' and no distinction is made whether this happens by day or by night, and then you add 'it is a visitation', but by night it is not! — There is no contradiction. This is what is meant. If it makes its appearance in the city by day it is a visitation, but in the city by night it is not. Or, in the field even by day it is not a visitation.⁸

[First you say,] 'If the beast sees two persons and pursues them it is a visitation' which implies that if it remains still it is no visitation and then you add 'if it hides itself on seeing then it is not a visitation'; this would imply that if it remains still it is a visitation! — This is no contradiction. In the one case it speaks of [a beast] in a field near reedland,⁹ in the other in a field not near reedland.

[You say,] 'If it kills two men and devours one of them, that is a visitation but if it devours both of them it is not.' But did you not say that even if it only pursues [two people] that is a visitation? — R. Papa replied: That speaks of a case [where the beast is standing] in reedland.

The [above] text [states] 'If it mounted the roof and carried off an infant out of the cradle it is a visitation'. Is not this self-evident? R. Papa replied: This statement is meant to refer to [the case of a beast carrying off an infant out of a cradle in] a hunter's cave.¹⁰

AND THE SWORD etc. Our Rabbis have taught: By 'SWORD' is meant not only a hostile attack by an invading army but also the passing en route of a friendly army.¹¹ For there could be no more friendly army than that of Pharaoh-Necho, and yet through it king Josiah met his fate, as it is said

(1) Of Be Hozae (Khuzistan).

(2) [The capital of the province of Khuzistan during the Sasanian period, v. Obermeyer p. 209.]

(3) Cf. Num. XV, 38.

(4) She was menstruating. [As protection of the woman this was singularly effective, as among the Persians the laws of menstruation were of extreme rigour, v. Obermeyer p. 210, n. 1.]

(5) [It was the black lachets which were the distinguishing marks between Jews and Gentiles, v. Sanh. 74b and Krauss TA. I, 628.]

(6) [Var. lec.: 'two brothers'.]

(7) The animal had already satisfied its hunger by devouring the first person whom it killed; when therefore it kills another person then it can only be a divine visitation.

(8) [The text is doubtful and in disorder. MS.M. omits, or in the field... visitation'. The words 'in the fields by night it is not a visitation', which appear in the cur. ed. in brackets are best left out.]

(9) When the animal stands near reedland and it feels itself secure because it has a place of escape and it therefore is not likely to attack a person

(10) Although it is a low building and the animal need not climb up high for its prey, the attack is yet taken as a divine visitation.

(11) Lit., 'there is no need to speak of a sword that is not of peace but ever a sword of peace'.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 22b

But he sent ambassadors to him, saying¹ : What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war: and God hath given command to speed me; forbear thee from meddling¹ with God, who is with me, that He destroyeth thee not.¹

What is meant by 'God who is with me'? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Idols. Josiah said [to himself], Since he [Pharaoh-Necho] puts his trust in his idols I will prevail over him.

And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants: Have me away, for I am sore wounded.² What is meant by, 'For I am sore wounded'? Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: This teaches that his whole body was perforated like a sieve.³ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Josiah was punished because he should have consulted Jeremiah and he did not. On what did Josiah rely? — On the divine promise contained in the words, Neither shall the sword go through your land.⁴ What sword? Is it the warring sword? It is already stated [in the same verse], And I will give peace in the land.⁴ It must surely refer to the peaceful sword. Josiah, however, did not know that his generation found but little favour [in the eyes of God]. When he was dying Jeremiah observed that his lips were moving and he feared that perhaps, Heaven forbid,[Josiah] was saying something improper because of his great pain; he thereupon bent down and he overheard him justifying [God's] decree against himself saying, The Lord is righteous; for I have rebelled against His word.⁵ He [Jeremiah] then cited of him, The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord.⁶

IT HAPPENED THAT THE ELDERS RETURNED FROM JERUSALEM TO THEIR OWN CITIES etc. The question was asked, [Does the Mishnah mean] as an oven full of grain, or as an oven full of bread?⁷ — Come and hear: As much as would fill the opening of an oven. The following question however still remains, Does it mean [as much bread] as would close the opening of an oven, or a row of loaves extending to the opening of the oven? This is left undecided.

THEY ALSO ORDAINED A FAST BECAUSE WOLVES DEVOURED etc. 'Ulla said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: It happened that wolves devoured two children and they passed them out through their secretory canal and the question came up before the Sages and they declared that the flesh [of the children] was clean but that their bones were unclean.⁸

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED ON THE SABBATH etc. Our Rabbis have taught: When a city is surrounded by hostile Gentiles, or threatened with inundation by the river, or when a ship is foundering in the sea, or when an individual is being pursued by Gentiles or robbers or by an evil spirit,⁹ the alarm is sounded [even] on the Sabbath; and on account of all these an individual may afflict himself by fasting. R. Jose says: An individual may not afflict himself by fasting lest thereby he come to need the help of his fellow men and it may be that they will not have mercy upon him. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: R. Jose's reason is because It is written, And became a living soul;¹⁰ Scripture thereby implies, [God says], Keep alive the soul which I gave you.

SIMEON THE TEMANITE SAYS [THE ALARM IS SOUNDED] ALSO EVEN ON ACCOUNT OF PLAGUE etc. The question was asked: Did the Rabbis disagree with him only when it was a question of sounding the alarm on the Sabbath, but on weekdays they agreed with him; or, perhaps they did not agree with him in any circumstances? — Come and hear: The alarm is sounded on account of plague on the Sabbath, and, it goes without saying, on weekdays. R. Hanan b. Pitom,¹¹ a disciple of R. Akiba, said in the name of R. Akiba: We may not under any circumstances sound the alarm on account of plague.

THE ALARM IS SOUNDED ON ACCOUNT OF ANY VISITATION, THAT COMES UPON THE COMMUNITY! Our Rabbis have taught: The alarm is sounded on account of any visitation that comes upon the community! except on account of an overabundance of rain. Why?— R. Johanan said: Because we may not pray on account of an excess of good. R. Johanan further said: Whence do we derive that we may not pray on account of an excess of good? For it is said, Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse . . . that there shall be more than sufficiency.¹² What is the meaning of, 'More than sufficiency'? — Rami son of R. Yud interpreted: Until your lips grow weary with saying, Sufficient. Rami son of R. Yud said: In the Diaspora the alarm is sounded on account of this.¹³ It has been taught likewise: In a year of excessive rain the Men of the Mishmar send [a message] to the Men of the Ma'amad:¹⁴ Think of your brethren in the Diaspora that their houses may not become their graves.¹⁵

R. Eliezer was asked, How excessive must the rainfall be to warrant prayer for it to cease? He replied: When a man standing on Keren Ofel¹⁶ is able to dabble his feet in water. But has it not been taught 'his hands'? — I mean, his feet [at the same time] as his hands.¹⁷ Rabah bar b. Hana related: Once as I was standing on Keren Ofel I saw [below] an Arab with a spear in his hand riding on a camel and to me he looked as small as a flax-worm.

The Rabbis have taught: And I will give you rains in their season.¹⁸ [This means that the soil shall be] neither soaked nor parched, but moderately rained upon. For whenever the rain is excessive it scours away the soil so that it yields no fruit.

(14) The phrase, Men of the Mishmar' here does not refer to priests but to a division of lay Israelites whose representatives in Jerusalem known as the Men of the Ma'amad (v. Glos.) stood by during the sacrificial ceremonies reciting prayers (v. Malter, a.l. and infra 27a notes).

(15) Diaspora in the first instance denotes Babylon. Babylon being a low lying country would be swamped by an excess of rain.

(17) [MS.M. omits, 'I mean', the reference being to the Baraitha. I.e., the Baraitha, in stating 'hands' means that the water had risen so high that one can sit on the Keren Ofel and wash his hands whilst his feet dabble in the water.]

(18) Lev. XXVI, 4.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 23a

Another explanation. 'In their season': [This means that rain would fall only] on the eve of Wednesdays¹ and Sabbaths. For so it happened in the days of Simeon b. Shetah. [At that time] rain fell on the eve of Wednesdays and Sabbaths so that the grains of wheat came up as large as kidneys and the grains of barley like the stones of olives, and of the lentils like the golden denarii and they stored specimens of them for future generations in order to make known unto them the in effects of sin, as it is said. Your iniquities have turned away these things and your sins have withholden good from you.² Likewise we find happened in the days of Herod when the people were occupied with the rebuilding of the Temple. [At that time] rain fell during the night but in the morning the wind blew and the clouds dispersed and the sun shone so that the people were able to go out to their work, and then they knew that they were engaged in sacred work.

IT HAPPENED THAT THE PEOPLE SAID TO HONI, THE CIRCLE DRAWER etc. Once it happened that the greater part of the month of Adar had gone and yet no rain had fallen. The people sent a message to Honi the Circle Drawer, Pray that rain may fall. He prayed and no rain fell. He thereupon drew a circle and stood within it in the same way as the prophet Habakuk had done, as it is said, I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower etc.³ He exclaimed [before God], Master of the Universe, Thy children have turned to me because [they believe] me to be a member of Thy house. I swear by Thy great name that I will not move from here until Thou hast mercy Upon Thy children! Rain began to drip and his disciples said to him, We look to you to save us from death;⁴ we believe that this rain came down merely to release you from your oath. Thereupon he exclaimed: It is not for this that I have prayed, but for rain [to fill] cisterns, ditches and caves. The rain then began to come down with great force, every drop being as big as the opening of a barrel and the Sages estimated that no one drop was less than a log. His disciples then said to him: Master, we look to you to save us from death; we believe that the rain came down to destroy the world. Thereupon he exclaimed before [God], It is not for this that I have prayed, but for rain of benevolence, blessing and bounty. Then rain fell normally until the Israelites [in Jerusalem] were compelled to go up [for shelter] to the Temple Mount because of the rain. [His disciples] then said to him, Master, in the same way as you have prayed for the rain to fall pray for the rain to cease. He replied: I have it as a tradition that we may not pray on account of an excess of good. Despite this bring unto me a bullock for a thanks-giving-offering.] They brought unto him a bullock for a thanks-giving-offering and he laid his two hands upon it and said, Master of the Universe, Thy people Israel whom Thou hast brought out from Egypt cannot endure an excess of good nor an excess of punishment; when Thou wast angry with them, they could not endure it; when Thou didst shower upon them an excess of good they could not endure it; may it be Thy will that the rain may cease and that there be relief for the world. Immediately the wind began to blow and the clouds were dispersed and the sun shone and the people went out into the fields and gathered for themselves mushrooms and truffles. Thereupon Simeon b. Shetah sent this message to him, Were it not that you are Honi I would have placed you under the ban; for were the years like the years [of famine in the time] of Elijah⁵ (in whose hands were the keys of Rain) would not the name of Heaven be profaned through you?⁶ But what shall I do unto you who actest petulantly before the Omnipresent and He grants your desire, as a son who acts petulantly before his father and he grants his desires; thus he says to him, Father, take me to bathe in warm water, wash me in cold water, give me nuts, almonds, peaches, and pomegranates and he gives them unto him. Of you Scripture says, Let thy father and thy mother be glad, and let her that bore thee rejoice.⁷

Our Rabbis have taught: What was the message that the Sanhedrin⁸ sent to Honi the Circle-Drawer? [It was an interpretation of the verse], Thou, shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee, and light shall shine upon thy ways etc.⁹ ‘Thou shalt also decree a thing:’ You have decreed [on earth] below and the Holy One, Blessed be He, fulfills your word [in heaven] above. ‘And light shall shine upon thy ways:’ You have illumined with your prayer a generation in darkness. ‘When they cast thee down, thou shalt say: There is lifting up:’ You have raised with your prayer a generation that has sunk low. ‘For the humble person He saveth:’ You have saved by your prayer a generation that is humiliated with sin. ‘He delivereth him that is not innocent:’ You have delivered by your prayer a generation that is not innocent. ‘Yea, He shall be delivered through the cleanliness of thy hands:’ You have delivered it¹⁰ through the work of your clean hands.

R. Johanan said: This righteous man [Honi] was throughout the whole of his life troubled about the meaning of the verse, A Song of Ascents, When the Lord brought back those that returned to Zion, we were like unto them that dream.¹¹ Is it possible for a man to dream continuously for seventy years?¹² One day he was journeying on the road and he saw a man planting a carob tree; he asked him, How long does it take [for this tree] to bear fruit? The man replied: Seventy years. He then further asked him: Are you certain that you will live another seventy years? The man replied: I found [ready grown] carob trees in the world; as my forefathers planted these for me so I too plant these for my children.

Honi sat down to have a meal and sleep overcame him. As he slept a rocky formation enclosed upon him which hid him from sight and he continued to sleep for seventy years. When he awoke he saw a man gathering the fruit of the carob tree and he asked him, Are you the man who planted the tree? The man replied: I am his grandson. Thereupon he exclaimed: It is clear that I slept for seventy years. He then caught sight of his ass who had given birth to several generations of mules;¹³ and he returned home. He there enquired, Is the son of Honi the Circle-Drawer still alive? The people answered him, His son is no more, but his grandson is still living. Thereupon he said to them: I am Honi the Circle-Drawer, but no one would believe him. He then repaired to the Beth Hamidrash and there he overheard the scholars say, The law is as clear to us as in the days of Honi the Circle-Drawer, for whenever he came to the Beth Hamidrash he would settle for the scholars any difficulty that they had. Whereupon he called out, I am he; but the scholars would not believe him nor did they give him the honour due to him. This hurt him greatly and he prayed [for death] and he died. Raba said: Hence the saying, Either companionship or death.

Abba Hilkiah was a grandson of Honi the Circle-Drawer, and whenever the world was In need of rain the Rabbis sent a message to him and he prayed and rain fell. Once there was an urgent need for rain and the Rabbis sent to him a couple of scholars [to ask him] to pray for rain. They came to his house but they did not find him there. They then proceeded to the fields and they found him there hoeing. They greeted him but he took no notice of them. Towards evening he gathered some wood and placed the wood and the rake on one shoulder and his cloak on the other shoulder. Throughout the journey he walked barefoot but when he reached a stream he put his shoes on; when he lighted upon thorns and thistles he lifted up his garments; when he reached the city his wife well bedecked came out to meet him; when he arrived home his wife entered first [the house] and then he and then the scholars. He sat down to eat but he did not say to the scholars, 'Join me'. He then shared the meal among his children, giving the older son one portion and the younger two. He said to his wife, I know the scholars have come on account of rain, let us go up to the roof and pray, perhaps the Holy One, Blessed be He, will have mercy and rain will fall, without having credit given to us. They went up to the roof; he stood in one corner and she in another; at first the clouds appeared over the corner where his wife stood. When he came down he said to the scholars. Why have you scholars come here? They replied: The Rabbis have sent us to you, Sir, [to ask you] to pray for rain. Thereupon he exclaimed, Blessed be God, who has made you no longer dependent on Abba Hilkiyah. They replied: We know that the rain has come on your account, but tell us, Sir, the meaning of these mysterious acts of yours, which are bewildering to us? Why did you not take notice of us when we greeted you? He answered: I was a labourer hired by the day and I said I must not relax [from my work]. And why did you, Sir, carry the wood on one shoulder and the cloak on the other shoulder? He replied: It was a borrowed cloak; I borrowed it for one purpose [to wear] and not for any other Purpose. Why did you, Sir, go barefoot throughout the whole journey but when you came to a stream you put your shoes on? He replied: What was on the road I could see but not what was in the water. Why did you, Sir, lift up your garments whenever you lighted upon thorns and thistles? He replied¹ : This [the body] heals itself, but the other [the clothes] does not. Why did your wife come out well bedecked to meet you, Sir, when you entered the city? He replied: In order that I might not set my eyes on any other woman. Why, Sir, did she enter [the house] first and you after her and then we? He replied: Because I did not know your character.² Why, Sir, did you not ask us to join you in the meal? [He replied]: Because there was not sufficient food [for all]. Why did you give, Sir, one portion to the older son and two portions to the younger? He replied: Because the one stays at home and the other is away in the Synagogue³ [the whole day]. Why, Sir, did the clouds appear first in the corner where your wife stood and then in your corner? [He replied]: Because a wife stays at home and gives bread to the poor which they can at once enjoy whilst I give them money which they cannot at once enjoy.⁴ Or perhaps it may have to do with certain robbers In our neighbourhood; I prayed that they might die, but she prayed that they might repent [and they did repent].

Hanan ha-Nehba was the son of the daughter of Honi the Circle-Drawer. When the world was in need of rain the Rabbis would send to him school children and they would take hold of the hem of his garment and say to him, Father, Father, give us rain. Thereupon he would plead with the Holy One, Blessed be He, [thus], Master of the Universe, do it for the sake of these who are unable to distinguish between the Father who gives rain and the father who does not. And why was he called, Hanan ha-Nehba? — Because he was wont to lock [mihabbeh] himself in the privy⁵ [out of modesty].

R. Zerika said to R. Safra: Come and see the difference between the [so called] hard men of Palestine and the pious men of Babylonia. When the world was in need of rain the pious men of Babylonia, R. Huna and R. Hisda said: Let us assemble and pray, Perhaps the Holy One, Blessed be He, may be reconciled and send rain. But the great men of Palestine, as for example, R. Jonah the father of R. Mani, would go into his house when the world was in need of rain and say to his [family]: Get my haversack and I shall go and buy grain for a zuz. When he left his house he would go and stand in some low-lying spot, and then standing in this hidden spot, as it is written, Out of the depths have I called thee O Lord,⁶ dressed in sackcloth he prayed and rain came. When he returned home [his family] asked him, Have you brought the grain? He replied: Now that rain has come the world will feel relieved.

Again his son, R. Mani, was annoyed by the members of the household of the Patriarch, he went and prostrated himself on the grave of his father and exclaimed: Father, father, these people persecute me. Once as they were passing [the grave] the knees of their horses became stiff [and remained so] until they undertook not to persecute him any longer.

Again, R. Mani used often to attend [the discourses] of R. Isaac b. Eliashab and he complained: The rich members of the family of my father-in-law are annoying me. The latter exclaimed: May they become poor! And they became poor. Later on he [R. Mani] complained: They press me [for support] and R. Isaac exclaimed: Let them become rich! And they became rich. [On another occasion] he complained: My wife is no longer acceptable to me. R. Isaac thereupon asked: What is her name? He replied: Hannah. Whereupon R. Isaac exclaimed: May Hannah become beautiful! And she became beautiful. He then complained: She is too domineering over me. Whereupon R. Isaac exclaimed: If that is so, let Hannah revert to her [former] ugliness! And she became once again ugly.

Two disciples used to attend [the discourses of] R. Isaac b. Eliashab and they said to him, Master, pray that we may become very wise. He replied: Once I had the power to do this, but now I no longer possess this power.⁷

R. Jose b. Abin used to attend [the discourses of] R. Jose of Yokereth.⁸ Later he left him and went to those of R. Ashi.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 24a

One day he heard him reciting a tradition that Samuel had said: He that takes out of the sea a fish on the Sabbath, as soon as there is on it a dry spot as large as a sela', he has committed a breach of the Sabbath laws.¹ Thereupon R. Jose b. Abin asked him: Why does not the Master add, 'and between the fins'? He replied: Are you not aware that R. Jose b. Abin had [already] stated this? [The former] retorted: I am R. Jose b. Abin. Thereupon R. Ashi enquired: Did you not frequent the discourses of R. Jose of Yokereth? He replied: Yes. R. Ashi then asked him: Why did you leave him, Sir, and come here? He replied: How could the man who showed no mercy to his son and daughter show mercy to me?

What happened to his son? Once R. Jose had day-labourers [working] in the field; night set in and no food was brought to them and they said to his son, 'We are hungry'. Now they were resting under a fig tree and he exclaimed: Fig tree, fig tree, bring forth thy fruit that my father's labourers may eat. It brought forth fruit and they ate. Meanwhile the father came and said to them, Do not bear a grievance against me; the reason for my delay is because I have been occupied up till now on an errand of charity. The labourers replied, May God satisfy you even as your son has satisfied us. Whereupon he asked: Whence? And they told him what had happened. Thereupon he said to his son: My son, you have troubled your Creator to cause the fig tree to bring forth its fruits before its time, may you too be taken hence before your time!

What happened to his daughter? He had a beautiful daughter. One day he saw a man boring a hole in the fence so that he might catch a glimpse of her. He said to the man, What is [the meaning of] this? And the man answered: Master, if I am not worthy enough to marry her, may I not at least be worthy to catch a glimpse of her? Thereupon he exclaimed: My daughter, you are a source of trouble to mankind; return to the dust so that men may not sin because of you. He also had an ass. When it was hired out for the day [the people who hired it] would place, in the evening, the hire on its back and the ass would make its way home to its master. If, however, the money was too much or too little, it would not go. One day a pair of sandals were left on its back and the ass would not move until they were removed and only then did it proceed.

Whenever the collectors of charity caught sight of R. Eleazar b. Birtal² they would hide themselves from him, because he was in the habit of giving away to them all that he had. One day he was going to the market to buy a trousseau for his daughter. When the collectors of charity caught sight of him they hid themselves from him. He ran after them and said to them: I adjure you, [tell me] on what mission are you engaged? And they replied: [The marriage of] an orphaned pair. He said to them: I swear, they must take precedence over my daughter. And he took all that he had and gave to them. He was left with one zuz and with this he bought wheat which he deposited in the granary. When his wife returned home she asked her daughter, What did your father bring home? She replied, He has put in the granary all that he had bought. She thereupon went to open the door of the granary and she found that it was so full of wheat that the wheat protruded through the hinges of the door-socket and the door would not open on account of this. The daughter then went to the Beth-Hamidrash and said to him [her father], Come and see what your Friend has done for you. Whereupon he said to her, I swear,³ they shall be to you as devoted property, and you shall have no more right to share in them than any poor person in Israel.⁴

R. Judah the Prince⁵ ordained a fast and he prayed but no rain fell. He thereupon exclaimed: What a great difference there is between, Samuel the Ramathite⁶ and Judah the son of Gamaliel! Woe to the generation that finds itself in such plight! Woe to him in whose days this has happened. He felt very grieved and rain fell. Once the House of the Patriarch ordained a fast and did not inform either R. Johanan or Resh Lakish. In the morning, however, they did notify them. Resh Lakish then said to R. Johanan, But we have not undertaken the fast on the previous evening.⁷ The latter replied: We are subject to their ordinances.

Once the House of the Patriarch ordained a fast and no rain fell. Thereupon Oshaiah, the youngest of the college scholars,⁸ expounded the verse, Then it shall be, if it be done in error by the congregation.⁹ This can be compared to a bride who lives in the house of her father. So long as her eyes¹⁰ are beautiful her body needs no examination; should, however, her eyes be bleared then her body needs examination. Thereupon the servants of the Patriarch came and put a scarf around his neck and tortured him. Whereupon the people of the city cried out, Leave him alone; us also he insults but since we see that whatever he does is for the sake of Heaven, we say nothing to him and we leave him alone, so you too leave him alone.

Once Rabbi ordained a fast and no rain fell. Thereupon 'Ilfa (some say, R. Ilfi),[stepped down before the ark and] recited [the prayer], 'He causeth the wind to blow', and the wind blew. [He continued], 'He causeth the rain to fall', and rain fell. Rabbi then asked him, What is your special merit? He replied: I live in a poverty-stricken remote place where wine for Kiddush and Habdalah¹¹ is unobtainable but I take the trouble to procure for myself wine for Kiddush and Habdalah and thus help also others to fulfil their duty.

Once Rab came to a certain place and decreed a fast but no rain fell. The Reader then stepped down at his request before the ark and recited, 'He causeth the wind to blow', and the wind blew; [he continued], 'He causeth the rain to fall', and rain fell. Rab thereupon asked him, What is your special merit? The latter replied: I am a teacher of young children and I teach the children of the poor as well as those of the rich; I take no fees from any who cannot afford to pay; further, I have a fishpond and any boy who is reluctant [to learn] I bribe with some of the fishes from it¹² and thereby appease him so that he becomes eager to learn.

Once R. Nahman ordained a fast and he prayed but no rain fell. He thereupon said, 'Take Nahman and throw him down from the wall to the ground'.¹³ He felt greatly dejected and then rain came. Rabbah once decreed a fast. He prayed but no rain came. Thereupon the people remarked to him: When Rab Judah ordained a fast rain did fall. He replied: What can I do? Is it because of studies? We are superior to him, because in the time of R. Judah all studies were concentrated on Nezikin,¹ whereas we study all the six sections. When R. Judah reached the passage in [the Mishnah],² 'If a woman was preserving vegetables in a pot etc. or as some say the passage, 'If olives are preserved together with their leaves then the leaves are not susceptible to uncleanness',³ he exclaimed: I see here disputations of Rab and Samuel,⁴ and yet we to-day teach 'Ukkazin in thirteen different sessions.⁵ And yet when Rab Judah removed one shoe [as a sign of humiliation]⁶ rain fell but when we cry out the whole day no one pays need to us. Is it because of some failing? If so, let any one who knows of it declare it. What, however, can the great men⁷ of a generation do when their generation does not [appear good enough to favour in the eyes of God].

Once Rab Judah saw two men using bread wastefully and he exclaimed: It seems that there is plenty in the world. He gave an angry look and a famine arose. Thereupon the Rabbis said to R. Kahana the son of R. Nehunia, his attendant, You who are so constantly with him, endeavour to persuade him to go out by the door near the market place.⁸ He prevailed upon him and he went out to the market place and seeing there a large crowd he asked. What is the matter? He was told, They stand around a mass of ground dates which is on sale. Whereupon he exclaimed: It seems that there is famine in the world. He then said to his disciple: Take off my shoes. As soon as he had taken off one shoe rain fell. As he was about to take off the other Elijah appeared and said to him: The Holy One, Blessed be He, said, if you will take off the other shoe I will lay waste the world.⁹

R. Mari the son of the daughter of Samuel related: Once I was standing on the bank of the river Papa¹⁰ and I saw angels in the guise of sailors who brought sand and loaded ships with it and it turned into fine flour. When the people came to purchase [it] I called out to them: Do not buy this because it resulted from a miracle. Next day boatloads of wheat came from Perezina.¹¹

Once Raba came to Hagrunita¹² and ordained a fast but no rain fell. Thereupon he said to the people: Continue with your fasting overnight. Next morning he said to them: If there is any one of you who had a dream let him tell it. Thereupon R. Eleazar from Hagrunita replied: To me in my dream the following was said: Good greetings to the good teacher from the good Lord who from His bounty dispenseth good to His people. Raba then exclaimed: It seems that this is a favourable time to pray. He prayed and rain fell.

Once a certain man was sentenced by the Court of Raba to receive corporal punishment because he had intercourse with a Gentile woman. Raba had the man punished and he died. The matter reached the ears of King Shapur and he sought to punish Raba. Whereupon Ifra Hormuz, the mother of King Shapur,¹³ said to her son, Do not interfere with the Jews because whatever they ask of their God He grants them. The king asked her, For example? They pray and rain falls [she replied]. He retorted: This must have been because it is the season for rain; let them pray now, in the Tammuz cycle¹⁴ for rain. She sent a message to Raba: Concentrate now your mind and pray for rain. He prayed but no rain fell. He then exclaimed: Master of the Universe, 'O God, we have heard with our ears, our fathers have told us; a work Thou didst in their days, in the days of old.'¹⁵ But as for us we have not seen [it] with our eyes. Whereupon there followed such a heavy fall of rain that the gutters of Mahuza¹⁶ emptied their waters into the Tigris. Raba's father then appeared unto him in a dream and said to him: Is there anyone who troubles Heaven so much? Change thy [sleeping] place.¹⁷ He changed his place and next morning he discovered that his bed had been cut with knives.

R. Papa ordained a fast and no rain fell. As he felt faint he sipped a plateful of grits and he again prayed, but still no rain fell. Thereupon R. Nahman b. Ushpazarti¹⁸ said to him: If you, Sir, will sip another plateful of grits rain would fall. Raba felt humiliated and faint, and rain fell.

R. Hanina b. Dosa was journeying on the road when it began to rain. He exclaimed: Master of the Universe, the whole world is at ease, but Hanina is in distress; the rain then ceased. When he reached home he exclaimed: Master of the Universe, the whole world is in distress and Hanina is at ease; whereupon rain fell. [With reference to this incident] R. Joseph remarked: Of what avail was the prayer of the High Priest [on the Day of Atonement] against that of R. Hanina b. Dosa? For we have learnt:¹⁹ [The High Priest on the Day of Atonement] prayed a short prayer in the outer room [of the Temple]. What did he pray? Raba son of R. Adda and Rabin son of R. Adda both said in the name of Rab Judah: 'May it be Thy will, O Lord our God, that this year may be one of rain and of heat'. Is then heat beneficial? Is it not rather something harmful? — Rather [the prayer reads thus], 'If the year is to be a year of heat, let it also be a year of rain and of dew, and let the prayer of those journeying on the roads gain admission before Thee.

R. Aha the son of Raba in the name of Rab Judah completed the prayer as follows: 'May a ruler never cease from the house of Judah and may Israel never be in need of sustenance one from another, nor from another people'. Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Every day a Heavenly Voice is heard declaring, The whole world draws its sustenance because [of the merit] of Hanina my son, and Hanina my son suffices himself with a kab of carobs from one Sabbath eve to another. Every Friday his wife would light the oven and throw twigs²⁰ into it so as not to be put to shame. She had a bad neighbour who said, I know that these people have nothing, what then is the meaning of all this [smoke]? She went and knocked at the door. [The wife of R. Hanina] feeling humiliated [at this] retired into a room. A miracle happened and [her neighbour] saw the oven filled with loaves of bread and the kneading trough full of dough; she called out to her: You, you, bring your shovel, for your bread is getting charred; and she replied, I just went to fetch it. A Tanna taught: She actually had gone to fetch the shovel because she was accustomed to miracles.

Once his wife said to him: How long shall we go on suffering so much: He replied: What shall we do? - Pray that something may be given to you, [she replied]. He prayed, and there emerged the figure of a hand reaching out to him a leg of a golden table. Thereupon he saw in a dream that the pious would one day eat at a three-legged golden table but he would eat at a two-legged table. Her husband said to her:¹ Are you content that everybody shall eat at a perfect table and we at an imperfect table? She replied: What then shall we do? — Pray that the leg should be taken away from you, [she replied]. He prayed and it was taken away. A Tanna taught: The latter miracle was greater than the former; for there is a tradition that a thing may be given but once; it is never taken away again.

Once on a Friday eve he noticed that his daughter was sad and he said to her, My daughter, why are you sad? She replied: My oil can got mixed up with my vinegar can and I kindled of it the Sabbath light. He said to her: My daughter, Why should this trouble you? He who had commanded the oil to burn will also command the vinegar to burn. A Tanna taught: The light continued to burn the whole day until they took of it light for the Habdalah.²

R. Hanina b. Dosa had goats. On being told that they were doing damage he exclaimed, If they indeed do damage may bears devour them, but if not may they each of them at evening time bring home a bear on their horns. In the evening each of them brought home a bear on their horns.

Once a woman neighbour of R. Hanina was building a house but the beams would not reach the walls. She thereupon came to him and said: I have built a house but the beams will not reach the walls. He asked her: What is your name? She replied: Aiku. He thereupon exclaimed: Aiku,³ may your beams reach [the walls]. A Tanna taught: They projected one cubit on either side. Some say, New pieces joined themselves [miraculously] to the beams.⁴ It has been taught: Polemo says: I saw that house and its beams projected one cubit on either side, and people told me: This is the house which R. Hanina b. Dosa covered with beams, through his prayer.

Whence did R. Hanina b. Dosa have goats seeing that he was poor? And furthermore, did not the Sages say: We may not rear small cattle in Palestine?⁵ — R. Phinehas said: Once it happened that a man passed by his house and left there hens and the wife of R. Hanina b. Dosa found them. Her husband, however, forbade her to eat of their eggs. As the eggs and the chickens increased in number he was very troubled by them and he therefore sold them and with the proceeds he purchased goats. One day the man who lost the hens passed by [the house] again and said to his companions, Here I left my hens. R. Hanina overhearing this asked him: Have you any sign [by which to identify them]? He replied: Yes. He gave him the sign and took away the goats. These were the goats that brought bears on their horns.

R. Eleazar b. Pedath found himself in very great want. Once after being bled he had nothing to eat. He took the skin of garlic and put it into his mouth; he became faint and he fell asleep. The Rabbis coming to see him noticed that he was crying and laughing, and that a ray of light was radiating from his forehead. When he awoke they asked him: Why did you cry and laugh? He replied: Because the Holy One, Blessed be He, was sitting by my side and I asked Him, How long will I suffer in this world? And He replied: Eleazar, my son, would you rather that I should turn back the world to its very beginnings? Perhaps you might then be born at a happier hour?⁶ I replied: All this, and then only perhaps?⁷ I then asked Him, Which is the greater life, the one that I had already lived, or the one I am still to live. He replied: The one that I have already lived. I then said to Him: If so, I do not want it. He replied: As a reward for refusing it I will grant you in the next world thirteen rivers of balsam oil as clear as the Euphrates and the Tigris, which you will be able to enjoy. I asked, And nothing more? He replied: And what shall I then give to your fellow men? I said: Do I then ask the share of one who has nothing? He thereupon snapped at my forehead and exclaimed: Eleazar, my son, I have shot you with my arrows.⁸ R. Hama b. Hanina ordained a fast but no rain fell. People said to him: When R. Joshua b. Levi ordained a fast rain did fall. He replied: I am I, and he is the son of Levi.⁹ Go and ask him that he may come [and pray for us] and let us concentrate on our prayer, perhaps the whole community will be contrite in heart and rain will fall.¹⁰ They prayed and no rain fell. He¹¹ then asked them: Are you content that rain should fall on our account? They replied: Yes. He then exclaimed: heaven, heaven, cover thy face.¹² But it did not cover [its face]. He then added: How brazen is the face of heaven! It then became covered and rain fell.

Levi ordained a fast but no rain fell. He thereupon exclaimed: Master of the Universe, Thou didst go up and take Thy Seat on high and hast no mercy upon Thy children. Rain fell but he became lame. R. Eleazar said: Let a man never address himself in a reproachful manner towards God, seeing that one great man did so and he became lame, and he is Levi. But was this actually the cause [of his lameness]? Was it not rather because he demonstrated to Rabbi a particular form of prostration?¹³ — Both were the cause of his lameness.

R. Hiyya b. Luliani overhearing the clouds saying to one another, Come, let us take water to Ammon and Moab, exclaimed: Master of the Universe! When Thou wast about to give the Law to Thy people Israel Thou didst offer it around amongst all the nations of the world but they would not accept it, and now Thou wouldst give them rain; let them [the clouds] empty their waters here; and they emptied their waters on the spot.

R. Hiyya b. Luliani expounded: What is the meaning of the verse, The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree; he shall glow like a cedar in Lebanon?¹⁴ If it is said, 'Palm-tree' why is also said 'Cedar'? And if 'Cedar' why also 'Palm-tree'? Had it been said, 'Palm-tree' and not 'Cedar' I might have argued that just in the same way [ as the stem of the Palm-tree does not renew itself¹ so too the stem of the righteous, Heaven forbid, does not renew itself; therefore it is said 'Cedar'. Had it been said 'Cedar' and not 'Palmtree', I might have argued that just in the same way as the Cedar does not yield fruit, so too the righteous do not yield fruit; therefore it is said, 'Palm-tree' and 'Cedar'. But does the stem of the cedar renew itself. Surely it has been taught: If one buys a tree from his neighbour for felling he must leave of the trunk one handbreadth from the ground;² of the trunk of the sycamore tree two handbreadths; of the virgin sycamore tree three handbreadths; of reeds and of vines from the knot above it;³ in the case, however, of date palms and cedars he may dig into the ground and uproot them because their stock does not renew itself.⁴ Here it speaks of other types of cedar trees in accordance with a statement of Rabbah b. Huna, who said:⁵ There are ten types of cedar trees, as it is said, I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the acacia tree and the myrtle tree etc.⁶

Our Rabbis have taught: It is related of R. Eliezer that he ordained thirteen fasts upon the community and no rain fell. In the end, as the people began to depart [from the synagogue], he exclaimed: Have you prepared graves for yourselves? Thereupon the people sobbed loudly and rain fell.

It is further related of R. Eliezer that once he stepped down before the Ark and recited the twenty-four benedictions⁷ [for fast days] and his prayer was not answered. R. Akiba stepped down after him and exclaimed: Our Father, our King, we have no King but Thee; our Father, our King, for Thy sake have mercy upon us; and rain fell. The Rabbis present suspected [R. Eliezer], whereupon a Heavenly Voice was heard proclaiming.[The prayer of] this man [R. Akiba] was answered not because he is greater than the other man, but because he is ever forbearing and the other is not. Our Rabbis have taught: How long should it continue to rain to warrant the community breaking their fast? [Until the rain has penetrated] as far as the knee of the plough enters the soil; this is the opinion of R. Meir. The Sages, however, say: In the case of arid soil one handbreadth, in the case of moderately soft soil two handbreadths, and in the case of cultivated soil three handbreadths.

It has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eliezer says: Not a handbreadth of rain coming down from above but that the deep with three handbreadths comes up from below to meet it.⁸ But has it not been taught: Two handbreadths? — There is no contradiction. In the one case it is cultivated soil, and in the other it is not.⁹

R. Eliezer said: When on the Feast of Tabernacles the water libations are carried out, Deep says to Deep, 'Let thy waters spring forth, I hear the voice of two friends',¹⁰ as it is said, Deep calleth unto Deep at the voice of Thy cataracts etc.¹¹ Rabbah said: I myself have seen Ridya.¹² who resembles a three years' old heifer, with its lips parted; he stands between the lower deep and the upper deep; to the upper deep he says, 'Distil thy waters', and to the lower deep he says, 'Let thy waters spring forth', as it is said, The flowers appear on the earth etc.¹³

IF WHILST THEY ARE FASTING RAIN FALLS, IF IT IS BEFORE SUNRISE etc. Our Rabbis have taught: If whilst they are fasting rain falls, if it is before sunrise they need not complete the fast; if it is after sunrise they must complete it; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: If before midday they need not complete the fast, if after midday they must complete it. R. Jose says: If before the ninth hour they need not complete the fast, if after the ninth hour they must complete it — For thus we find it in the case of Ahab, King of Israel, that he fasted from the ninth hour onwards, as it is said, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before Me etc.¹⁴

R. Judah the Prince¹⁵ ordained a fast and rain fell after sunrise. He was of the opinion that the people should complete the fast. Said R. Ammi to him: We have learnt: [There is a difference] between before midday and after midday.

Samuel the Little ordained a fast and rain fell before sunrise. The people thought that it was due to the merit of the community, whereupon he said to them: I will quote you a parable. This can be compared to a servant who asked his master for a gratuity and the master exclaimed, Give it to him, and let me not hear his voice.

Another time Samuel the Little ordained a fast and rain fell after sunset. The people thought that it was due to the merit of the community. whereupon Samuel exclaimed: I will quote you a parable. This can be compared to a servant who asked his master for a gratuity and the master exclaimed, Keep him waiting until he is made submissive and is distressed, and then give him his gratuity. According to Samuel the Little, what would be an instance of rain falling on account of the merit of the community? — If they recited [the prayer]. 'He causeth the wind to blow', and the wind blew, and if they recited, 'He causeth the rain to fail, and rain fell.

IT HAPPENED THAT THE RABBIS ORDAINED A FAST IN LYDIA etc. Should they not have recited the Hallel first? — Abaye and Raba explained this to be because the Hallel is recited Scripture tells us that Ahab fasted and humbled himself on the day that Elijah informed him of his doom. The Gemara construes Ahab's fasting to be that he went without his meal that day. This would prove that the last moment resolution to fast, provided a man had not partaken of any food before that time, is counted as a valid fast. V. 12a, the statement of R. Hisda.

only when the appetite is satisfied and the stomach is full? Is that so? Did not R. Papa on one occasion when coming to the synagogue at Abi-Cobar¹ ordain a fast and rain fell before midday and yet he first recited the Hallel and only after that the people ate and drank! — It is different with the people of Mahuza, because drunkenness is frequent amongst them.²

MISHNAH. ON THREE OCCASIONS OF THE YEAR, ON FAST-DAYS, ON MA'AMADOTH,³ AND ON THE DAY OF ATONEMENT DO THE PRIESTS LIFT UP THEIR HANDS TO BLESS [THE PEOPLE] FOUR TIMES DURING THE DAY, NAMELY AT THE SHAHARITH⁴ [SERVICE], AT MUSAF,⁵ AT MINHAH⁶ AND AT THE CLOSING OF THE GATES [NE'ILAH].⁷

THE FOLLOWING ARE [THE DETAILS CONCERNING] THE MA'AMADOTH. BECAUSE⁸ IT IS SAID, COMMAND THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL [AND SAY UNTO THEM]: MY FOOD WHICH IS PRESENTED UNTO ME.⁹ NOW HOW CAN A MAN'S OFFERING BE BROUGHT [ON THE ALTAR] AND HE IS NOT PRESENT? [THEREFORE] THE EARLIER PROPHETS¹⁰ INSTITUTED TWENTY-FOUR MISHMAROTH,¹¹ AND EACH MISHMAR WAS REPRESENTED [AT THE TEMPLE] IN JERUSALEM BY ITS OWN MA'AMAD OF PRIESTS, LEVITES AND ISRAELITES. WHEN THE TIME CAME FOR THE MISHMAR TO GO UP [TO JERUSALEM] THE PRIESTS AND LEVITES WENT UP TO JERUSALEM AND THE ISRAELITES OF THAT MISHMAR ASSEMBLED IN THEIR CITIES AND READ [FROM THE LAW] THE STORY OF CREATION.¹² THE MEN OF THE [ISRAELITE] MA'AMAD FASTED ON FOUR DAYS OF THAT WEEK, FROM MONDAY TO THURSDAY; THEY DID NOT FAST ON FRIDAY OUT OF RESPECT FOR THE SABBATH NOR ON SUNDAY IN ORDER NOT TO CHANGE OVER [WITHOUT A BREAK] FROM THE REST AND DELIGHT [OF THE SABBATH] TO WEARINESS AND FASTING AND SO [PERHAPS] DIE.

ON SUNDAY [THEY READ],¹³ IN THE BEGINNING, AND, LET THERE BE A FIRMAMENT; ON MONDAY,¹⁴ LET THERE BE A FIRMAMENT, AND, LET THE WATERS BE GATHERED TOGETHER; ON TUESDAY,¹⁵ LET THE WATERS BE GATHERED TOGETHER, AND, LET THERE BE LIGHTS; ON WEDNESDAY,¹⁶ LET THERE BE LIGHTS, AND, LET THE WATERS SWARM; ON THURSDAY,¹⁷ LET THE WATERS SWARM, AND, LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH; ON FRIDAY,¹⁸ LET THE EARTH BRING FORTH, AND, AND THE HEAVENS [AND THE EARTH] WERE FINISHED.

TWO PERSONS READ BETWEEN THEM A LONG SECTION¹⁹ AND ONE A SHORT SECTION. AT SHAHARITH, MUSAF, AND MINHAH THEY ASSEMBLED AND READ [THE REQUISITE] SECTION BY HEART, IN THE SAME WAY AS PEOPLE RECITE THE SHEMA'. THEY DID NOT ASSEMBLE AT MINHAH ON FRIDAY OUT OF RESPECT FOR THE SABBATH.

ON ANY DAY WHEN HALLEL²⁰ WAS RECITED THERE WAS NO MA'AMAD [SERVICE]²¹ AT SHAHARITH;²² [ON THE DAY WHEN] A MUSAF-OFFERING [WAS BROUGHT] THERE WAS NONE. AT NE'ILAH, [ON THE DAY OBSERVED AS] THE WOOD-FESTIVAL²³ THERE WAS NONE AT MINHAH;²⁴ THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. AKIBA. BEN 'AZZAI SAID TO HIM: THUS DID R. JOSHUA LEARN: [ON THE DAY WHEN] A MUSAF-OFFERING [WAS BROUGHT] THERE WAS NONE AT MINHAH; [ON THE DAY OBSERVED AS] THE WOOD-FESTIVAL THERE WAS NONE AT THE CLOSING OF THE GATES. THEREUPON R. AKIBA RETRACTED AND LEARNT LIKE BEN 'AZZAI.

NINE TIMES IN THE YEAR [WAS OBSERVED] THE WOOD-FESTIVAL OF THE PRIESTS AND THE PEOPLE; ON THE FIRST OF NISAN THE FAMILY OF ARAH²⁵ OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH BROUGHT THE OFFERING OF WOOD; ON THE TWENTIETH OF TAMMUZ THE FAMILY OF DAVID OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH;²⁶ ON THE FIFTH OF AB THE FAMILY OF PAROSH²⁷ OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH; ON THE SEVENTH OF THE SAME MONTH, THE FAMILY OF JONADAB OF THE RECHABITES;²⁸ ON THE TENTH OF THE SAME MONTH THE FAMILY OF SENAHAH OF THE TRIBE OF BENJAMIN;²⁹ ON THE FIFTEENTH OF THE SAME MONTH THE FAMILY OF ZATTU³⁰ OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH, AND WITH THEM WERE THE PRIESTS AND LEVITES AND ALL THOSE WHO WERE NOT CERTAIN OF THEIR TRIBE AND THE BENE GONBE 'ALI AND THE BENE KOZE KEZI'OTH;³¹ ON THE TWENTIETH OF THE SAME MONTH THE FAMILY OF PAHATH MOAB³² OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH; ON THE TWENTIETH OF ELUL THE FAMILY OF ADIN³³ OF THE TRIBE OF JUDAH; ON THE FIRST OF TEBETH THE FAMILY OF PAROSH A SECOND TIME; ON THE FIRST OF TEBETH THERE WAS NO MA'AMAD FOR THEREON THERE WAS HALLEL, MUSAF-OFFERING³⁴ AND THE WOOD-FESTIVAL.

THE TABLES [OF THE LAW] WERE SHATTERED, THE DAILY OFFERING WAS DISCONTINUED, A BREACH WAS MADE IN THE CITY AND APOSTOMOS¹ BURNED THE SCROLL OF THE LAW AND PLACED AN IDOL IN THE TEMPLE. ON THE NINTH OF AB IT WAS DECREED THAT OUR FATHERS SHOULD NOT ENTER THE [PROMISED] LAND, THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED THE FIRST AND SECOND TIME, BETHAR WAS CAPTURED AND THE CITY [JERUSALEM] WAS PLOUGHED UP.

WITH THE BEGINNING OF AB REJOICINGS ARE CURTAILED. DURING THE WEEK IN WHICH THE NINTH OF AB FALLS IT IS FORBIDDEN TO CUT THE HAIR AND TO WASH CLOTHES BUT ON THE THURSDAY IT IS PERMISSIBLE IN HONOUR OF THE SABBATH. ON THE EVE OF THE NINTH OF AB ONE MAY NOT PARTAKE OF A MEAL OF TWO COURSES NOR EAT MEAT NOR DRINK WINE. RABBAN SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID: ONE SHOULD MAKE A DIFFERENCE IN HIS DIET. R. JUDAH MAKES IT OBLIGATORY TO TURN THE BED OVER;² THE SAGES, HOWEVER, DID NOT AGREE WITH HIM IN THIS.

R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID: THERE NEVER WERE IN ISRAEL GREATER DAYS OF JOY THAN THE FIFTEENTH OF AB AND THE DAY OF ATONEMENT. ON THESE DAYS THE DAUGHTERS OF JERUSALEM³ USED TO WALK OUT IN WHITE GARMENTS WHICH THEY BORROWED IN ORDER NOT TO PUT TO SHAME ANY ONE WHO HAD NONE. ALL THESE GARMENTS REQUIRED RITUAL DIPPING.⁴ THE DAUGHTERS OF JERUSALEM CAME OUT AND DANCED IN THE VINEYARDS EXCLAIMING AT THE SAME TIME, YOUNG MAN, LIFT UP THINE EYES AND SEE WHAT THOU CHOOSEST FOR THYSELF. DO NOT SET THINE EYES ON BEAUTY BUT SET THINE EYES ON [GOOD] FAMILY. GRACE IS DECEITFUL, AND BEAUTY IS VAIN; BUT A WOMAN THAT FEARETH THE LORD, SHE SHALL BE PRAISED.⁵ AND IT FURTHER SAYS,⁶ GIVE HER OF THE FRUIT OF HER HANDS; AND LET HER WORKS PRAISE HER IN THE GATES.

LIKEWISE IT SAYS, GO FORTH, O YE DAUGHTERS OF ZION, AND GAZE UPON KING SOLOMON, EVEN UPON THE CROWN WHEREWITH HIS MOTHER HATH CROWNED HIM IN THE DAY OF HIS ESPOUSALS, AND IN THE DAY OF THE GLADNESS OF HIS HEART.⁷ 'ON THE DAY OF HIS ESPOUSALS:' THIS REFERS TO THE DAY OF THE GIVING OF THE LAW. 'AND IN THE DAY OF THE GLADNESS OF HIS HEART:' THIS REFERS TO THE BUILDING OF THE TEMPLE; MAY IT BE REBUILT SPEEDILY IN OUR DAYS.

GEMARA. ON THREE OCCASIONS OF THE YEAR DO THE PRIESTS LIFT UP THEIR HANDS [TO BLESS THE PEOPLE]. Is there then MUSAF ON FAST-DAYS and ON MA'AMADOTH? — There is a clause wanting [in our Mishnah]. It should read thus: 'on three occasions do the priests lift up their hands [to bless the people] at all services, and on one of these⁸ occasions four times during the day, at the Shaharith [service], at Musaf, at Minhah and at the closing of the Gates. The following are the three occasions, Fast-days, Ma'amadoth and the Day of Atonement'. R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: This is the opinion of R. Meir. The Sages, however, say: At Shaharith and at Musaf there is 'lifting up of hands' but at Minhah or at Ne'ilah there is no 'lifting up of hands'. Who are meant by 'the Sages'? — It is R. Judah. For it has been taught: At all [services, namely] at Shaharith, at Musaf, at Minhah and at Ne'ilah there is 'lifting up of hands'; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: At Shaharith and at Musaf there is 'lifting up of hands' but at Minhah or Ne'ilah there is no 'lifting up of hands'. R. Jose says: At Ne'ilah there is 'lifting up of hands' but at Minhah there is no 'lifting up of hands'. Wherein do they differ? R. Meir holds the view that the reason why on ordinary days the priests do not 'lift up their hands' at Minhah is because of the likelihood of intoxication,⁹ but on the days [cited above] the question of Intoxication does not arise.¹⁰ R. Judah takes the view that as drunkenness during [the time of] Shaharith and Musaf on ordinary days is not usual the Rabbis did not prohibit the lifting up of hands [at these services on fast-days also], whereas at [the time of] Minhah and Ne'ilah since on ordinary days drunkenness is quite a likely occurrence the Rabbis prohibited the 'lifting up of hands' [at these services even on fast-days]. R. Jose holds the view that the Rabbis confined their restriction to the Minhah only seeing that it is read every day, but they did not to the Ne'ilah which is not read every day.¹¹

R. Judah said in the name of Rab: The halachah is in accordance with the view of R. Meir. R. Johanan said: The people followed the view of R. Meir. And Raba said: The established custom is in accordance with the view of R. Meir. On the view that the halachah is according to R. Meir we teach it [explicitly] in the school sessions; but if we say that the established custom is according to R. Meir, then we should not teach it explicitly in the school sessions but we may give our decisions in accordance with it; if, however, we say that the people followed the view of R. Meir then we do not definitely give a decision in accordance with it, but should one have acted on it we do not declare his action null. But R. Nahman said: The halachah is according to R. Jose. And the halachah is [indeed] according to R. Jose. But nowadays why do the priests 'lift up their hands' [to bless the people] on fast-days at Minhah? — As they lift up their hands [in blessing] very near sunset¹² it is as if this was the Ne'ilah [service].

It is, however, generally agreed that an intoxicated [priest] may not lift up his hands [in benediction]. Whence is this view adduced? — R. Joshua b. Levi said in the name of Bar Kappara: Why does the section dealing with [the blessing by] the priest follow immediately after the portion of the Nazirite?¹³ In order to teach you that, just as the Nazirite is forbidden to drink wine, so too is the priest about to recite the priestly benediction. The father of R. Zera, and some say Oshaiah b. Zabbda, demurred to this: [If that is so], then just as the Nazirite is forbidden to eat the shells¹⁴ [of grapes], so too should the priest about to recite the priestly benediction be forbidden [to eat] the 'shells of grapes'.-R. Isaac replied: Scripture says, To minister unto Him and to bless in His name;¹⁵ [from this is to be inferred] that just as the officiating priest may eat the shells [of grapes]¹⁶ so too may the priest about to recite the priestly benediction.

[If so, why not also argue]: Just as an officiating priest may not be blemished so too may a priest reciting the benediction not be blemished. — Surely he is compared to the Nazirite.¹ Why do you choose to make your analogies more lenient [for the priest]? Why not make your analogies more strict [for him]?² — These analogies are but supports for a Rabbinical law and they must therefore incline towards the side of leniency.

THE FOLLOWING ARE [THE DETAILS CONCERNING] THE MA'AMADOTH. BECAUSE IT IS SAID, COMMAND THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL etc. What does [this Mishnah] mean to say? — This is what it means to say: THE FOLLOWING ARE [THE DETAILS CONCERNING] THE MA'AMADOTH. AND WHY WERE THE MA'AMADOTH INSTITUTED? BECAUSE IT IS SAID, COMMAND THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL AND SAY UNTO THEM: MY FOOD WHICH IS PRESENTED UNTO ME. HOW CAN A MAN'S OFFERING BE BROUGHT [ON THE ALTAR] AND HE IS NOT PRESENT? [THEREFORE] THE EARLIER PROPHETS INSTITUTED TWENTY-FOUR MISHMAROTH; EACH MISHMAR WAS REPRESENTED [AT THE TEMPLE] IN JERUSALEM BY ITS OWN MA'AMAD OF PRIESTS, LEVITES AND ISRAELITES. WHEN THE TIME CAME FOR THE MISHMAR TO GO UP, THE PRIESTS AND LEVITES WENT UP TO JERUSALEM.

Our Rabbis have taught: 'There were twenty-four Mishmaroth in Palestine and twelve in Jericho'. [You say] there were [also] twelve in Jericho, then there were actually far more [than twenty-four]! — It must therefore be understood to mean that twelve of them [of the twenty-four] were in Jericho. When the time came for the Mishmar to go up [to Jerusalem] one half of the Mishmar went up from [their homes] in Palestine to Jerusalem and the other half went up to Jericho in order to provide their brethren in Jerusalem with water and food.

Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The absence of the Priests, Levites and Israelites is a bar to [the offering of] the sacrifices. A Tanna taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: The absence of Priests, Levites and musical instruments is a bar to [the offering of] the sacrifices. On what question does their dispute turn? — The one [Rab Judah] holds the view that the principal music of the Temple was vocal,³ and the other that it was with an instrument.

R. Hama b. Guria said in the name of Rab: Moses instituted for Israel eight Mishmaroth, four from [the family of] Eleazar and four from [the family of] Ithamar; Samuel came and increased them to sixteen; David came and increased them to twenty-four, as it is said, In the fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour at Jazer of Gilead.⁴

An objection was raised against this: Moses instituted for Israel eight Mishmaroth, four from [the family of] Eleazar and four [from the family of] Ithamar; David and Samuel came and increased them to twenty-four, as it is said, Whom David and Samuel the seer did ordain in their set office!⁵ — This is what the passage means: From their institution by David and Samuel the Ramathite they were increased to twenty-four. Another [Baraitha] taught: Moses instituted for Israel sixteen Mishmaroth, eight from [the family of] Eleazar and eight from [the family of] Ithamar; but when the descendants of Eleazar increased in number above those of Ithamar, [the Mishmaroth] were again divided and they were increased to twenty-four, as it is said, And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided: of the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen, heads of fathers' houses, and of the sons of Ithamar, according to their fathers' houses, eight.⁶ And it says further, One father's house being taken for Eleazar, and proportionately for Ithamar.⁷ What is the force of the additional verse cited? Should you say, that just as the descendants of Eleazar increased in number, so also those of Ithamar increased from their original four into eight. Then come and hear: 'One father's house being taken for Eleazar, and proportionately [we-ahuz ahuz] for Ithamar.' This [Baraitha] will then refute the opinion of R. Hama b. Guria⁸ — R. Hama b. Guria will answer by saying: Tannaim are divided on the question and I accept the opinion of the Tanna [who says that Moses instituted only] eight Mishmaroth.

Our Rabbis have taught: Four Mishmaroth returned from the [Babylonian] exile, and they were: Jedaiah, Harim, Pashhur and Immer.⁹ The prophets amongst them

(1) And a blemished person may be a Nazirite.

(2) [By comparing the priest reciting the blessing to a Nazirite in respect of the eating of the shells and to an officiating priest in respect of a blemish.]

arose and divided them and increased them to twenty-four. [Lots were prepared] and mixed and placed in an urn. First came Jedaiah and took his portion and the portions of his colleagues,¹ six [in all]; then came Harim and took his portion and the portions of his colleagues six [in all]; and likewise Pashhur; and likewise Immer. And the prophets amongst them stipulated that even if Jehoiarib, who was the chief of the Mishmaroth should go up to [Jerusalem]² Jedaiah should not be ousted from his place, but Jedaiah³ should have precedence and Jehoiarib should be subordinate [to him].⁴

AND THE ISRAELITES OF THE MISHMAR ASSEMBLED IN THEIR CITIES AND READ [FROM THE LAW] THE STORY OF CREATION, On what is this based? — R. Jacob b. Aha said in the name of R. Assi: Were it not for the Ma'amadoth heaven and earth could not endure, as it is said, And he said: O Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?⁵ Abraham said: Master of the Universe, should Israel sin before Thee wilt Thou do unto them [as Thou hast done] to the generation of the Flood⁶ and to the generation of the Dispersion?⁷ [God] replied to him: No. He then said to him: Master of the Universe, 'Let me know whereby I shall inherit it'. [God] answered: Take Me a heifer of three years old, and a she-goat of three years old etc.⁸ Abraham then continued: Master of the Universe! This holds good whilst the Temple remains in being, but when the Temple will no longer be what will become of them? [God] replied: I have already long ago provided for them in the Torah the order of sacrifices and whenever they read it I will deem it as if they had offered them before me and I will grant them pardon for all their iniquities.

Our Rabbis have taught: The men of the Mishmar⁹ prayed over the sacrifice of their brethren that it may be favourably accepted, whilst the men of the Ma'amad assembled in their synagogues and observed four fasts, on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of that week. On Monday [they fasted] for those that go down to the sea; on Tuesday for those who travel in the deserts; on Wednesday that croup may not attack children; on Thursday for pregnant women and nursing mothers, that pregnant women should not suffer a miscarriage, and that nursing mothers may be able to nurse their infants; on Friday they did not fast out of respect for the Sabbath; and certainly not on the Sabbath. Why did they not fast on Sunday? — R. Johanan said: Because of the Nazareans.¹⁰ R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: Because it is the third day after the creation of Man.¹¹ Resh Lakish said: Because of the additional soul. For Resh Lakish said: Man is given an additional soul on Friday, but at the termination of the Sabbath it is taken away from him, as it is said, He ceased from work and rested¹² [shabat wa-yinafash] that is to say, Once the rest had ceased, woe! that soul is gone.

ON SUNDAY [THEY READ], 'IN THE BEGINNING', AND, 'LET THERE BE A FIRMAMENT'. It has been taught: Two persons read [the section] 'In the beginning', and one 'Let there be a firmament'. I can understand one person reading, 'Let there be a firmament', as it contains three verses, but how can two persons read, 'In the beginning', seeing that it contains only five verses? Has it not been taught: He who reads the Law should not read less than three verses? — Rab answered: [The third verse] is repeated. Samuel said: It is divided into two. Rab who says that the third verse is repeated why does he not agree that it is divided? — He is of the opinion that any verse which Moses did not divide, we may not divide. And as for Samuel who says that it is divided, may it then be divided? Did not R. Hanina, the Bible teacher, declare, I endeavoured hard to get permission from R. Hanina the elder to divide a verse into two and he would permit me only in the case of teaching children, because it is merely for teaching practice! — To this Samuel can reply: There [in the case of school children] the reason why [R. Hanina permitted the verse to be divided] was because it is not possible [for them to read the whole verse at one stretch], here too it is not possible. And as for Samuel who said, 'It is divided', why should he not agree that it be repeated? — In order to prevent any misunderstanding on the part of those who may enter or leave [the synagogue].¹³

An objection was raised: [A section of] six verses is read by two, but [a section of] five verses by one; should, however, the first person have read three verses then the second person reads the [remaining] two and one verse from the following section; some say, he reads three verses [from the following section] because we do not read from a [new] section less than three verses. Now in accordance with the view of him who says that it should be repeated, let then [the third verse of the first section] be repeated; and in accordance with the view of him who says that it should be divided, let the verse be divided? — There the position is different because he has plenty of verses at his disposal.¹

TWO PERSONS READ A LONG SECTION . . . AT SHAHARITH, MUSAF AND MINHAH THEY READ [THE REQUISITE] SECTION BY HEART etc. The question was raised: How is this Mishnah to be understood? [Does it mean] that at Shaharith and Musaf [the section] is read from a Scroll of the Law and at Minhah by heart in the same manner as people recite the Shema'? Or, it means this: At Shaharith it is read from a Scroll of the Law and at Musaf and Minhah by heart in the same manner as people recite the Shema'? — Come and hear: At Shaharith and Musaf they assemble in the synagogue and read [from the Scroll of the Law] in the same way as all the year round, but at Minhah an individual reads it by heart. — R. Jose asked: May then an individual read by heart in public words of the Law? It must surely be that all assemble [in the synagogue] and read it by heart in the same way as the Shema' is recited.

ON ANY DAY WHEN HALLEL WAS RECITED THERE WAS NO MA'AMAD etc. What is the difference between the one and the other?² — The one [Minhah] is a Biblical injunction and the other [Ne'ilah] is a rabbinic institution.³

THE WOOD-FESTIVAL OF THE PRIESTS AND OF THE PEOPLE etc. Our Rabbis have taught: Why was it necessary [to fix special days for] the Wood-Festival of the Priests and of the People? It is reported that when the exiles returned [to Palestine] they found no wood in the [Temple wood] chamber and the families here mentioned came forward and offered wood of their own. The prophets amongst them thereupon made it a condition that even should at any time the chamber be full of wood they should still continue their offerings, as it is said, And we cast lots the priests, the Levites and the people, for the wood-offering, to bring it into the house of our God, according to our fathers' houses at times appointed, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it is written in the Law.⁴

AND WITH THEM WERE THE PRIESTS AND THE LEVITES AND ALL THOSE WHO etc. Our Rabbis have taught: What is the incident connected with the Bene Gonbe 'Ali and the Bene

Koze Kezi'oth? It is reported that once the ruling power made a decree that Israel should not bring wood to the altar, nor bring their first-fruit to Jerusalem, and placed guards on the roads as Jeroboam the son of Nebat had done to prevent Israel from going on pilgrimage. What did the pious and sin-fearing men of that generation do? They took the baskets of the first-fruit and covered them with dried figs and carried them with a pestle on their shoulders, and when they reached the guards they were asked: Whither are you going? They replied: With the pestle on our shoulders we are going to make two cakes of pressed figs in the mortar we have yonder. When they had gone away from the guard they decorated the baskets and brought them to Jerusalem.⁵ It has been taught: The family of Salami Netofah acted in a similar way.

Our Rabbis have taught: What is the incident connected with the family of Salami Netofah? It is reported that once the ruling power decreed that Israel should not bring wood to the altar and they placed guards on the roads as Jeroboam the son of Nebat had done to prevent Israel from going on pilgrimage. What did the God-fearing men of that generation do? They took the logs of wood and made them into ladders which they carried on their shoulders and proceeded on their journey; when they reached the guards they were asked: Whither are you going? They replied: [We are going] with the ladders on our shoulders to take down young pigeons from the dovecot at a place further on. When they had gone away from the guards they dismantled [the ladders] and brought them to Jerusalem.⁶ And it is of them and of men like them that Scripture says, The memory of the righteous shall be for a blessing;⁷ and of Jeroboam and his companions the verse adds, But the name of the wicked shall rot.

ON THE TWENTIETH OF THE SAME MONTH THE FAMILY OF PAHATH MOAB: A Tanna taught: The sons of Pahath Moab b. Judah are identical with the sons of David the son of Judah; this is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah says: They are identical with the sons of Joab b. Zeraiah.

ON THE TWENTIETH OF ELUL THE FAMILY OF ADIN THE SON OF JUDAH: Our Rabbis have taught: The sons of Adin the son of Judah are the same as the sons of David the son of Judah; this is the opinion of R. Judah. R. Jose says: They are the same as the sons of Joab the son of Zeraiah.

ON THE FIRST OF TEBETH THE FAMILY OF PAROSH A SECOND TIME etc. With whose view does the Mishnah agree? It is neither with the view of R. Meir nor with that of R. Judah, nor with that of R. Jose. If it were in agreement with the view of R. Meir then [the Mishnah] would read, 'the sons of David b. Judah a second time'; should it be with that of R. Judah then it should read 'the sons of David b. Judah a second time'; if with that of R. Jose then it should read 'the sons of Joab b. Zeraiah a second time'! — [The Mishnah actually] agrees with the view of R. Jose, but there are two Tannaim in dispute as to what R. Jose's view was.⁸

ON THE FIRST OF TEBETH THERE WAS NO MA'AMAD etc. Mar Kashisha the son of R. Hisda asked R. Ashi

(1) But here in the case of the Ma'amadoth the Scriptural verses are limited in number. For further notes on this passage v. Meg., Sonc. ed. p. 133f.

(2) Why on the day of the Wood-Festival is no Ma'amad held at Ne'ilah but takes place as usual at Minhah?

(3) Minhah is of Biblical origin its institution being attributed to the Patriarch Isaac (cf. Ber. 26b), hence the Wood-Festival cannot supersede the Ma'amad in connection with it, whereas Ne'ilah is a rabbinic institution and therefore the festive day can supersede it. (So Rashi). V. however, Tosaf. ad loc. for an alternative interpretation of the passage.

(4) Neh. X, 35.

(5) Cf. Bik. III, 3.

(6) To be used as fuel for the altar.

(7) Prov. X, 7.

(8) On one view (represented under Mishnah) R. Jose identifies the family of Adin with that of David; on the other (in the Baraitha) with that of Joab.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 28b

: Why is Hallel different that it suspends its own Ma'amad¹ while Musaf does not supersede its own Ma'amad?² — R. Ashi replied: If [Musaf] suspends the Ma'amad of a service of which it is not part, [i.e., Minhah] all the more should it suspend its own Ma'amad? — R. Kashisha then said: This is what I mean to say: Let it [Musaf] suspend its own Ma'amad only!³ — R. Ashi replied: There is R. Jose who holds the same view as you. For it has been taught: R. Jose says: Any day on which there is Musaf there is also a Ma'amad. Now which Ma'amad [is here referred to]? Shall I say the Ma'amad of the Shaharith? [Surely] the first Tanna [of our Mishnah] also says likewise! Is it the Ma'amad of the Musaf? Does not Musaf suspend even its own Ma'amad! Is it the Ma'amad of Minhah? But this is already suspended because of the Wood-Festival!⁴ It must then surely be the Ma'amad of Ne'ilah. Hence the conclusion therefrom that Musaf suspends its own Ma'amad but it does not suspend the Ma'amad of any other service. Hence it is proved.

Let [the Mishnah] also state that there was no Ma'amad on the first of Nisan, because there was Hallel,⁵ and Musaf offering and the wood-offering? — Raba replied: This proves that the recital of Hallel on New Moon is not a Biblical injunction.⁶ For R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak, On eighteen days in the year the individual [worshipper] completes the Hallel⁷ and they are, the eight days of the Feast of Tabernacles, the eight days of Hanukkah, the first day of Passover,⁸ and the Festival of Pentecost; but in the Diaspora⁹ [the Hallel is completed] on twenty-one days, and they are, the nine days of the Feast of Tabernacles, the eight days of Hanukkah, the first two days of Passover and the two days of Pentecost.

Rab once came to Babylonia¹⁰ and he noticed that they recited the Hallel¹¹ on New Moon; at first he thought of stopping them but when he saw that they omitted parts of it he remarked: It is clearly evident that it is an old ancestral custom with them. A Tanna taught: The individual should not deliberately begin to recite [the Hallel]¹² but once he has begun he should complete it.

FIVE MISFORTUNES BEFELL OUR FATHERS ON THE SEVENTEENTH OF TAMMUZ etc. Whence is it known that the Tables [of the Law] were shattered [on the seventeenth of Tammuz]? For it has been taught:¹³ On the sixth of the month [of Sivan] the Ten Commandments were given to Israel; R. Jose says: On the seventh of the month. He who says that they were given on the sixth takes the view that on the sixth they were given and on the seventh Moses ascended the mount. And he who says that they were given on the seventh holds that they were given on the seventh and on the seventh Moses ascended the mount. For it is written, And the seventh day he called unto Moses,¹⁴ and it is further written, And Moses entered into the midst of the cloud, and went up into the mount; and Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights.¹⁵ The [remaining] twenty-four days of Sivan and the sixteen days of Tammuz make altogether forty. On the seventeenth of Tammuz he came down [from the mountain] and shattered the Tables, as it is written, And it came to pass as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf . . . and he cast the tables out of his hands, and broke them beneath the mount.¹⁶

[THE DAILY OFFERING] WAS DISCONTINUED. This is a tradition.

A BREACH WAS MADE IN THE CITY. Did this then happen on the seventeenth? Is it not written, In the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore in the city etc.,¹⁷ and in the following verse it is written, Then a breach was made in the city etc.! — Raba said: This is no contradiction. The one refers to the First Temple and the other to the Second Temple. For it has been taught: In the First Temple the breach was made in the city on the ninth of Tammuz, but in the Second Temple on the seventeenth of Tammuz.

APOSTOMOS BURNED THE SCROLL OF THE LAW. This is a tradition.

AND PLACED AN IDOL IN THE TEMPLE. Whence do we know this? — For it is written, And from the time that the continual burnt-offering shall be taken away and the detestable thing that causeth appalment set up.¹⁸ Was there then only one detestable thing? Is it not written, And upon the wing of detestable things shall be that which causeth appalment?¹⁹ — Raba replied: There were two [idols] and one fell upon the other and broke its hand and upon it was found inscribed

- (1) On the day when Hallel is recited is the corresponding Ma'amad prayer of the Shaharith eliminated.
 - (2) On the day when there is Musaf the Ma'amad of the Minhah is eliminated and not the one attached to the Musaf.
 - (3) And not also that of Minhah, having a similar effect as Hallel.
 - (4) [This is difficult to explain. Wilna Gaon omits the last two sentences and reads: Hence it must then surely be the Ma'amad of Minhah and Ne'ilah.]
 - (5) Being New Moon.
 - (6) As the Mishnah does not state this, it is to be inferred that in spite of the fact that the Hallel was recited on the first of Nisan the Ma'amad prayers were read as usual at the Shaharith. This proves that the recital of the Hallel on New Moon is but a custom that had sprung up and is not a Biblical institution, otherwise the Hallel would eliminate the Ma'amad.
 - (7) The complete Hallel consisted of Psalms CXIII-CXVIII; on the days when Hallel was not to be completed verses I-XI of Psalms CXV and CXVI were omitted.
 - (8) The Hallel was also completed on the Eve of Passover at the Passover sacrifices. Cf. Pes. V, 7.
 - (9) The next day was also observed as a festival.
 - (10) [Stands here for Sura, v. Meg., Sonc. ed. p. 135, n. 5.]
 - (11) The recitation of the Hallel on New Moon was one of the points of difference between the ritual of the Jews in Babylonia and Palestine.
 - (12) On the New Moon.
 - (13) Cf. Shab. 86a.
 - (14) Ex. XXIV, 16.
 - (15) Ibid. 18.
 - (16) Ex. XXXII, 19. Thus it is proved that Moses broke the Tables on the seventeenth of Tammuz.

Talmud - Mas. Ta'anith 29a

: You desired to destroy the Temple, but I have handed over your hand to Him.¹

ON THE NINTH OF AB IT WAS DECREED THAT OUR FATHERS SHOULD NOT ENTER THE [PROMISED] LAND. Whence do we know this? For it is written, And it came to pass in the first month in the second year, on the first day of the month, that the tabernacle was reared up.² And [regarding this verse] a Master said: In the first year Moses built the Tabernacle, in the second year Moses erected the Tabernacle and sent out spies. Further it is written. And it came to pass in the second year, in the second month, on the twentieth day of the month, that the cloud was taken up from over the tabernacle of testimony.³ And it is further written, And they set forward from the mount of the Lord three days' journey,⁴ and R. Hama b. Hanina explained this means that on that day they turned aside from after the Lord. And it is further written, And the mixed multitude that was among them fell a-lusting; and the children of Israel also wept on their part etc.⁵ And it is further written, But a whole month etc.⁶ That brings us up to the twenty-second of Sivan. And it is further written, And Miriam was shut up [without the camp] seven days.⁷ That brings us up to the twenty-ninth of Sivan. And it is further written, Send thou men.⁸ And it has been taught: Moses sent out spies on the twenty-ninth of Sivan. And it is further written, Add they returned from spying out the land at the end of forty days.⁹ But is not this forty days less one?¹⁰ — Abaye replied: Tammuz of that year was a full month [of thirty days],¹¹ for it is written, He hath called a solemn assembly against me to crush my young men.¹² And it is further written, And all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.¹³ Rabbah said in the name of R. Johanan: That night was the night of the ninth of Ab. The Holy One, blessed be He, said to them: You have wept without cause, therefore I will set [this day] aside for a weeping throughout the generations to come.

[ON THE NINTH OF AB] THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED THE FIRST TIME. For it is written, Now in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which was the nineteenth year of King Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard, a servant of the King of Babylon, unto Jerusalem. And he burnt the house of the Lord etc.¹⁴ And it is further written, Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, which was the nineteenth year of King Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, came Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard, who stood before the king of Babylon into Jerusalem etc.¹⁵ With reference to this it has been taught: We cannot say that this happened on the seventh, for it has already been stated that it was ‘in the tenth’; and we cannot say that this happened on the tenth, for it has already been stated that it was ‘on the seventh’. How then are these dates to be reconciled? On the seventh the heathens entered the Temple and ate therein and desecrated it throughout the seventh and eighth [of Ab] and towards dusk of the ninth they set fire to it and it continued to burn the whole of that day, as it is said, Woe unto us! for the day declineth, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out.¹⁶ And this is what R. Johanan meant when he said: Had I been alive in that generation I should have fixed [the mourning] for the tenth, because the greater part of the Temple was burnt thereon. How will the Rabbis then [explain the contradiction]? — The beginning of any misfortune is of greater moment.

AND [THE TEMPLE WAS DESTROYED] THE SECOND TIME. Whence do we know this? For it has been taught: Good things come to pass on an auspicious day, and bad things on an unlucky day. It is reported that the day on which the First Temple was destroyed was the eve of the ninth of Ab, a Sunday, and in a year following the Sabbatical year, and the Mishmar of the family of Jehoiarib¹⁷ were on duty and the Levites were chanting the Psalms standing on the Duchan.¹⁸ And what Psalm did they recite? — [The Psalm] containing the verse, And He hath brought upon them their own iniquity; and will cut them off in their own evil.¹⁹ And hardly had they time to say, ‘The Lord our God will cut them off’,¹⁹ when the heathens came and captured them. The same thing too happened in the Second Temple.

BETHAR WAS CAPTURED. This is a tradition.

AND THE CITY WAS PLOUGHED UP. It has been taught: When Turnus Rufus the wicked destroyed²⁰ the Temple, R. Gamaliel was condemned to death. A high officer came and stood up in the Beth-Hamidrash and called out, ‘The Nose-man²¹ is wanted, the Nose-man is wanted’. When R. Gamaliel heard this he hid himself. Thereupon the officer went up secretly to him and said, ‘If I save you will you bring me into the world to come?’ He replied: Yes. He then asked him, ‘Will you swear it unto me?’ And the latter took an oath. The officer then mounted the roof and threw himself down and died. Now there was a tradition [amongst the Romans] that when a decree is made and one of their own [leaders] dies, then that decree is annulled.²² Thereupon a Voice from Heaven was heard declaring, This high officer is destined to enter into the world to come.

Our Rabbis have taught: When the First Temple was about to be destroyed bands upon bands of young priests with the keys of the Temple in their hands assembled and mounted the roof of the Temple and exclaimed, ‘Master of the Universe, as we did not have the merit to be faithful treasurers these keys are handed back into Thy keeping'. They then threw the keys up towards heaven. And there emerged the figure of a hand and received the keys from them. Whereupon they jumped and fell into the fire. It is in allusion to them that the prophet Isaiah laments: The burden concerning the Valley of Vision. What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the house tops, thou that art full of uproar, a tumultuous city, a joyous town? Thy slain are not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle.²³ Of the Holy One, blessed be He, also it is said, Kir shouting, and crying at the mount.²⁴

WITH THE BEGINNING OF AB REJOICINGS ARE CURTAILED. Rab Judah the son of R. Samuel b. Shilath said in the name of Rab: Just as with the beginning of Ab rejoicings are curtailed, so with the beginning of Adar rejoicings are increased.
