(35) Lit., 'remainder', i.e., the value of the attached produce which is the property of the woman (v. supra note 7) and not of the husband who, according to R. Meir, is entitled only to such produce of his wife's land as grows after, but not before he had become entitled to the usufruct.
(36) Thus turning the proceeds of the produce into capital.
(37) The purchased land remaining the property of the wife (cf. supra note 4).
(38) Even if it grew before he had become entitled to the usufruct of the land.
(39) At the time he marries the woman, when he acquires the right to the usufruct.
(40) Cf. supra note 4.
(41) Lit., 'in the place'.
(42) Lit., 'at her entrance', sc. into her married state.
(43) Lit., 'at her going out'.
(44) If at that time they were still attached. This is in agreement with the view of the Sages supra and the point of difference between them and R. Simeon is discussed infra.
(45) A divorced woman being entitled not only to the land (which was hers all the time) but also to all produce of such land that had not been detached prior to her divorce.
(46) It is consequently turned into capital by purchasing therewith land to the usufruct of which the husband is entitled while the land itself remains in the possession of the woman.
(47) All detached fruit belonging to the husband who is entitled to the usufruct of his wife's land.
(48) When A MARRIED WOMAN CAME INTO THE POSSESSION OF MONEY which, as stated in our Mishnah, is to be invested in LAND, sc. a reliable profit yielding security.
(49) Each insisting on his or her choice.
(50) Land being a safer and better investment than houses both as regards durability (which is an advantage to the wife who remains the owner of the capital) and yield (which is an advantage to the husband who has the right of usufruct).
(51) Cf. supra n. 9 mutatis mutandis.
(52) Cf. supra n. 7. This is the interpretation of R. Tam and R. Han. (V. Tosaf. s.v. כללא) contrary to Rashi.
(53) Which can only be used for the cutting of its wood and which is valueless after the wood has been cut.
(54) That loses all its value after the fish have been removed.
(55) Lit., 'they say concerning it'.
(56) Since no capital remains (cf. supra p. 498, nn. 12 and 13) for the woman. Hence it is her right to veto such a purchase.

(57) Cf. supra n. 14.

(58) Because the land of the thicket and the pond respectively remain after the sorb had been cut or the fish had been removed. Against such a purchase, therefore, the woman may not exercise her veto.

(59) Laid down by the authors of the first ruling.

(60) I.e., if after the first yield had been disposed of the capital continues to yield further produce or profit.

(61) So R. Han. (v. Tosaf. a.l. s.v. כללא). Cur. edd., followed by Rashi, read produce'.

(62) V. supra n. 5. Cur. edd., followed by Rashi, read, 'capital'. As a thicket of sorb or a fish pond produces only one yield (cf. supra p. 498. on. 12 and 13) it may not be purchased (v. supra p. 498, n. 7) if the woman objects (cf. supra n. 15).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 79b

the young of a melog[1] beast he must pay double[2] its value to the woman.[3] In accordance with whose [view has this ruling[4] been laid down]? Is it in agreement with neither that of the Rabbis nor with that of Hananiah? For it was taught: The young of a melog beast belongs to the husband; the child of a melog bondwoman belongs to the wife; but Hananiah the son of Josiah's brother ruled, The child of a melog bondwoman has been given the same legal status as the young of a melog beast![5] — It may be said to agree even with the opinion of all,[6] for it is the produce alone that the Rabbis in their enactment have assigned to the husband but not the produce that accrues from this produce.[7] [The view] of Hananiah is quite logical on the assumption[8] that death[9] is not to be taken into consideration,[10] but [what principle is followed by] the Rabbis? If they do take into consideration the possibility of death,[11] even the young of a melog beast also should not [belong to the husband], and if they do not take the possibility of death into consideration,[12] then even the child of a bondwoman also [should belong to the husband]![13] — They do in fact take the possibility of death into consideration,[11] but the case of the beast is different [from that of a bondwoman] since its skin remains.[14]

R. Huna b. Hiyya stated in the name of Samuel: The halachah is in agreement with Hananiah. Said Raba in the name of R. Nahman: Although Samuel said, 'The halachah is in agreement with Hananiah', Hananiah admits that if the woman is divorced she may pay the price [of the bondwoman's children] and take them because [they constitute] the pride of her paternal house [which she is entitled to retain].[15]

Raba stated in the name of R. Nahman: If a woman brought to her husband[16] a goat for milking, a ewe for shearing, a hen for laying eggs, or a date-tree for producing fruit, he may go on eating [the yield of any of these][17] until the capital is consumed.

R. Nahman stated: If a woman[16] brought to her husband a cloak[18] [its use] is [to be regarded as] produce and he may continue to use it as a covering until it is worn out.[19]

In accordance with whose view [has this statement[20] been made]? — In agreement with the following Tanna,[21] for it has been taught: Salt or sand[22] is regarded as produce;[23] a sulphur quarry or an alum-mine[24] is regarded, R. Meir said, as capital,[25] but the Rabbis said, As produce.[26]

R.SIMEON SAID: IN RESPECT OF THAT WHEREIN THE HUSBAND IS AT AN ADVANTAGE. [Is not this view of] R. Simeon identical [with that of] the first Tanna?[27] — Raba replied: The difference between them is [the case of produce that was] attached at the time of the divorce.[28]

MISHNAH. IF AGED BONDMEN OR BONDWOMEN FELL TO HER[29] [AS AN INHERITANCE] THEY MUST BE SOLD, AND LAND PURCHASED WITH THE PROCEEDS,

AND THE HUSBAND CAN ENJOY THE USUFRUCT THEREOF. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID; SHE NEED NOT SELL THEM,[30] BECAUSE THEY ARE THE PRIDE OF HER PATERNAL HOUSE.[31] IF SHE CAME INTO THE POSSESSION OF OLD OLIVE-TREES OR VINES THEY MUST BE SOLD,[32] AND LAND PURCHASED WITH THE PROCEEDS, AND THE HUSBAND CAN ENJOY THE USUFRUCT THEREOF. R. JUDAH SAID: SHE NEED NOT SELL THEM, BECAUSE THEY ARE THE PRIDE OF HER PATERNAL HOUSE.[31] GEMARA. R. Kahana stated in the name of Rab: They[33] differ only where [the olive-trees or vines] fell [to the woman] in her own field,[34] but [if they were] in a field that did not belong to her[35] she must, according to the opinion of all, sell them;[36] because [otherwise] the capital[37] would be destroyed.[38] To this R. Joseph demurred: Are not BONDMEN OR BONDWOMEN[39] the same as [trees in] a field that does not belong to her[40] and there is nevertheless a dispute?[41] — The fact is, if the statement[42] has at all been made it must have been made in the following terms: R. Kahana stated in the name of Rab, They[43] differ only where [the olive-trees and vines] fell [to the woman] in a field that did not belong to her[44] but [if they were] in her own field[45] it is the opinion of all that she need not sell them because [she is entitled to retain] the pride of her paternal house.

MISHNAH. HE WHO INCURRED EXPENDITURE IN CONNECTION WITH HIS WIFE'S [MELOG][46] PROPERTY, WHETHER HE SPENT MUCH AND CONSUMED[47] LITTLE, [OR SPENT] LITTLE AND CONSUMED MUCH, WHAT HE HAS SPENT HE HAS SPENT, AND WHAT HE HAS CONSUMED HE HAS CONSUMED.[48] IF HE SPENT BUT DID NOT CONSUME HE MAY TAKE AN OATH AS TO HOW MUCH HE HAS SPENT AND RECEIVE COMPENSATION.

GEMARA. How much is considered LITTLE? — R. Assi replied: Even one dried fig; but this applies only where he ate it in a dignified manner.[49] Said

---

(1) V. Glos.

(2) V. Ex. XXII, 6ff.

(3) And not to the husband. Since a beast dies, and its yield ceases, the young must replace it as capital and is consequently the property of the wife. It may not be consumed by the husband but may be sold, and a produce-yielding object purchased with the proceeds.

(4) In the statement made in the name of R. jannai.

(5) And belongs to the husband.

(6) Both with that of the Rabbis and that of Hananiah.

(7) The young is the ‘produce’ of the beast but the ‘double’ that the thief pays as restitution is the produce of that young and consequently the ‘produce of the produce’ of the beast. This belongs to the wife.

(8) Lit., ‘that is’.

(9) Either of the bondwoman or of the beast.

(10) Hence his ruling that the child of the bondwoman, as well as the young of the beast, are to be regarded as produce which belongs to the husband, the bondwoman or the beast being regarded as the ‘capital’ which remains in the possession of the wife.

(11) As implied by their ruling that ‘the child of the melog bondwoman belongs to the wife’ (cf. supra p. 499 n. 9 mutatis mutandis) and not to the husband.

(12) As their ruling that ‘the young of a melog beast belongs to the husband’ seems to imply.

(13) How then can the two rulings be reconciled?

(14) And constitutes a small capital which remains the possession of the woman so that the young is treated as ‘produce’.

(15) Cf. Yeb. 66b.

(16) On marriage.

(17) Since milk, wool, eggs and fruit are the ‘produce’ of the goat, the ewe, the hen and the tree respectively and, even when the yield ceases, the woman is still left with some capital such as the skin of the goat and the ewe, the feathers of the hen or the wood of the date-tree.

(18) As melog property.

(19) The shreds being regarded as the woman's capital.
(20) Of R. Nahman that even shreds constitute capital.
(21) Sc. the Rabbis, infra, who differ from R. Meir.
(22) Of melog property situated on the sea shore.
(23) Since the yield is continual. It may, therefore, be used up by the husband.
(24) The supplies of which gradually come to an end.
(25) The quarry or the mine must he sold, and a constantly produce-yielding object is to he acquired with the proceeds.
(26) Which may he used up by the husband. The quarry or mine constitute in their opinion the capital which remains the property of the woman. Cf. supra note 2.
(27) The Sages, cf. supra p. 498, n. 3.
(28) Of which the Sages did not speak in our Mishnah. While according to R. Simeon such produce belongs to the woman, the Sages assign it to the husband because it grew prior to the divorce when he was still entitled to usufruct. That produce detached at the time of divorce belongs to the husband, as R. Simeon stated, cannot, of course, be a matter in dispute.
(29) A married woman.
(30) Even if her husband desires it (cf. Rashi).
(31) Which she is entitled to retain.
(32) 'As wood' (so the separate edd. of the Mishnah).
(33) The first Tanna and R. Judah in our Mishnah.
(34) I.e., if she came into the possession of the trees together with land in which they grew.
(35) If, for instance, her father from whom she inherited them did not own the soil and was only entitled to the trees alone until they withered.
(36) In order that land or any other produce-yielding capital might be acquired with the proceeds.
(37) Which should remain the permanent possession of the woman.
(38) When the trees withered.
(39) After whose death no capital whatsoever remains.
(40) Cf. supra note 6.
(41) Though the capital is destroyed.
(42) Attributed to Rab.
(43) The first Tanna and R. Judah in our Mishnah.
(44) V. supra note 3.
(45) V. supra note 2.
(46) V. Glos.
(47) By virtue of his right to its usufruct.
(48) He has no claim for compensation upon his wife should he divorce her.
(49) V. Kid. 45b.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 80a

R. Abba: At the school of Rab it was stated, Even the refuse[1] of dates.[2]

R.Bibi enquired: What [is the ruling in respect of] a mash of pressed dates?[3] — This stands undecided.[4]

What [is the ruling if] he did not eat it[5] in a dignified manner?[6] 'Ulla replied: On this there is a difference of opinion between two Amoraim in the West.[7] One says, The value of an issar;[8] and the other says, The value of a denar.[8]

The judges of Pumbeditha[9] stated: Rab Judah gave a practical decision[10] in [a case where the husband used up some] bundles of vine-shoots,[11] Rab Judah acting here in accordance with his own principle; for Rab Judah ruled: If he[12] ate thereof [during one of the three years] only 'uncircumcised'[13] produce,[14] [the produce of] the Sabbatical year,[15] or the produce of mingled seed,[16] this counts [towards the three years of] hazakah.[17]

R. Jacob stated in the name of R. Hisda: If a man has incurred expenses on the melog property of his wife who was a minor[18] [he is in the same legal position] as one who incurred expenses on the property of a stranger.[19] What is the reason? — The Rabbis have enacted this measure[20] in order that he should not allow her property to deteriorate.[21]

A woman once came into the possession of four hundred zuz[22] at Be-Hozae.[23] Her husband went thither, spent six hundred [on his journey] and brought with him the four hundred. While he was on his way back he required one zuz and took it out of these. When he came before R. Ammi[24] the latter ruled: What he has spent he has spent and what he used he has used.[25] Said the Rabbis to R. Ammi: Does not this[26] apply only where he consumes the produce, whilst here he used up the capital which [constituted a part of] the expenditure? — If so, he replied,[27] he is one who SPENT BUT DID NOT CONSUME, then HE MAY TAKE AN OATH AS TO HOW MUCH HE HAS SPENT AND RECEIVE HIS COMPENSATION. HE MAY TAKE AN OATH AS TO HOW MUCH HE HAS SPENT AND RECEIVE COMPENSATION. Said R. Assi: This applies only where the appreciation corresponds to the expenditure. What exactly is the object of this[28] law?[29] — Abaye replied: That if the appreciation exceeded the expenditure be receives the sum of his outlay without an oath. Said Raba to him: If so,[30] one might be induced to act cunningly![31] — [The object of the law] however, said Raba, was that if the outlay exceeded the appreciation he is only entitled to receive that amount of his outlay which corresponds to the appreciations and [even this can be obtained only] by an oath.[32]

The question was raised: What is the legal position where a husband has sent down[33] arisin[34] in his place?[35] Does [an aris] go down [into melog fields] in his reliance on the rights of the husband, [and, consequently,] when the husband forfeits his claim[36] they also[37] lose theirs, or does an aris possibly go down [into the melog fields] in his reliance on the [yield of] the land, and land, surely is usually entrusted to arisin?[38] To this Raba son of R. Hanan demurred: Wherein does this case essentially differ from that of a man who went down into a neighbour's field and planted it without the owner's authority where an assessment[39] is made and he is at a disadvantage?[40] — In that case[41] there was no other person to take the trouble;[42] but here there is the husband who should have taken the trouble.[43] What then is the decision on the matter? — R. Huna the son of R. Joshua replied: We must observe [the conditions of each case]: If the husband is an aris,[44] the arisin lose all claim to compensation wherever the husband loses his claim;[45] if the husband is not an aris [they are entitled to compensation, since] all land is usually entrusted to arisin.[46]

The question was raised: What is the ruling where a husband sold [his wife's melog] land for usufruct?[47] Do we say that whatever he possesses[48] he may transfer to others, or is it possible that the Rabbis have by their enactment granted the usufruct to the husband Only

---

(1) שיגרא (rt. שגר 'to flow', 'to cast').

(2) After all the juice and sweetness has been pressed out, when they are practically valueless.

(3) V. Jast. s.v. חובצא, חובין.

(4) Teku, v. Glos.

(5) The 'dried fig', supra.

(6) I.e., what minimum quantity must one eat in such a case to he regarded as having CONSUMED LITTLE?

(7) Palestine.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) The reference is to R. Papa b. Samuel (v. Sanh. 17b).

(10) In favour of the wife who was divorced.

(11) Of his wife's melog property, with which he fed his cattle. Though the shoots were hardly suitable for the purpose, Rab Judah regarded their consumption as sufficient reason for denying the husband all rights to compensation for his expenses.

(12) A person who occupied a field for three years.
(13) ‘Orlah (v. Glos. and cf. Lev. XIX, 23).
(14) I.e., the shoots, since the fruits of ‘Orlah are forbidden for all uses.
(15) Which is common property and the consumption of which is no proof of ownership.
(16) Kil'ayim (v. Glos. and cf. Lev. XIX, 19 and Deut. XXII, 9). Only the shoots are permitted in this case also (cf. supra n. 15).
(17) V. Glos. This shews that right of ownership may be established not only by the consumption of proper produce but also by that of mere shoots. Similarly, here, the improper feeding of one's cattle with vine-shoots is also regarded as proper consumption to exempt the woman from all responsibility for the expenses her husband had incurred on her melog property.
(18) Who might leave him at any time by exercising her right of mi'un (v. Glos.).
(19) The minor on exercising mi'un must compensate her husband for any improvements he may have effected in her property, paying him at the rate given to an aris (v. Glos.) in that country.
(20) Conferring upon the husband of a minor the rights of an aris in respect of any expenses on her melog property that he may incur.
(21) Had no provision been made for enabling him to recover his expenses he, knowing that the minor might leave him at any moment by exercising her right of mi'un, would exploit her property to the full, spending nothing on its improvement.
(22) V. Glos.
(23) A town in Khuzistan, S.W. Persia.
(24) Claiming his expenses.
(25) Cf. our Mishnah. The benefit he has derived from the one zuz (‘CONSUMED LITTLE’) deprives him of the right to recover the six hundred zuz for his expenses (‘HE SPENT MUCH’).
(26) That If HE HAS SPENT MUCH AND CONSUMED LITTLE he cannot recover his expenses.
(27) So Bah.
(28) Lit., ‘concerning what’.
(29) Of R. Assi, i.e., does he lay the emphasis on TAKE AN OATH or on RECEIVE? In other words: Is it implied that the husband must swear Only where the appreciation just corresponds with his outlay, hut is to receive his outlay without any oath where the appreciation exceeds the outlay; or is the implication that he is to receive for his outlay no more than the value of the appreciation, and where the former exceeds the latter, he is not entitled to receive the difference even though he is willing to swear?
(30) That in the circumstances mentioned one may obtain a sum of money without affirming his claim by an oath.
(31) However small the outlay, one might claim the full value of appreciation minus a fraction, and receive it for the mere asking.
(32) Confirming the amount he claims.
(33) Into his wife's melog lands.
(34) Pl. of aris (v. Glos.).
(35) Do these arisin, when the woman is divorced, receive the full value of their amelioration?
(36) Where, e.g., he consumed any part of the produce.
(37) If they consumed any of it.
(38) Had not the husband sent them, the wife would have done it herself. The arisin should consequently he entitled to the full refund of their share.
(39) Of the appreciation.
(40) B.M. 101a. He is repaid the amount he spent or is allowed the value of the appreciation whichever is the less. The two cases being essentially analogous, why was the question of the arisin at all raised?
(41) That of the man who entered his neighbour's field.
(42) Of planting the field. The man who undertook the work in the absence of other cultivators, and thus benefited the owner, is therefore, justly entitled to some compensation.
(43) And since he would not have been entitled to any compensation if he consumed anything of the produce so also, it may well he argued, should not the arisin, who stepped into his place, be entitled to any compensation. Hence the enquiry.

(44) Capable of attending to the field himself as any experienced aris.
(45) Since the wife might well plead that, if they had not interfered, her husband would himself have done the work. As they have only done what the husband would have done they cannot expect any higher privileges.
(46) Cf. supra p. 505, n. 9.
(47) Sc. that the buyer cultivated the land and enjoys its produce while the land itself remains the property of its original owner.
(48) לה of cur. edd. in brackets is wanting in Alfasi. Cf. Asheri.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 80b

in order to provide for the comfort of his home but not so that he should sell it? — Judah Mar b. Meremar replied in the name of Raba: Whatever he has done is done. R. Papi[1] in the name of Raba replied: His act has no validity. Said R. Papa: The ruling reported[2] by Judah Mar b. Meremar was not explicitly stated[3] but was arrived at by inference. For a woman once brought to her husband[4] two bondwomen,[5] and the man went and married another wife and assigned to her one of them. [When the first wife] came before Raba and cried, he disregarded her. One who observed [the incident] formed the opinion [that Raba's inaction] was due to his view that whatever the husband did[6] is valid;[7] but in fact, it is not so.[8] [Usufruct has been allowed to a husband] in order to provide for the comfort of his house and here, Surely, comfort was provided.[9]

And the law is that if a husband sold [his wife's melog] field for its usufruct[10] his act has no legal validity. What is the reason? Abaye replied: Provision must be made against the possible deterioration of the land.[11] Raba explained: In order [to safeguard] the comfort of his house.[12] What is the practical difference between them?[13] — The practical difference between them is the case of land that was adjoining a town;[14] or else where the husband [himself] was [acting as] aris,[15] or else where [the husband] receives money[16] and trades therewith.[17]

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN AWAITING THE DECISION OF THE LEVIR[18] CAME[19] INTO THE POSSESSION OF PROPERTY, BETH SHAMMAI AND BETH HILLEL AGREE THAT SHE MAY SELL IT OR GIVE IT AWAY, AND THAT HER ACT IS LEGALLY VALID.[20] IF SHE DIED, WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH HER KETHUBAH[21] AND WITH THE PROPERTY THAT COMES IN AND GOES OUT WITH HER?[22] BETH SHAMMAI RULED: THE HEIRS OF HER HUSBAND[23] ARE TO SHARE IT[24] WITH THE HEIRS OF HER FATHER;[25] AND BETH HILLEL RULED: THE [ZON BARZEL][26] PROPERTY IS TO REMAIN WITH THOSE IN WHOSE POSSESSION IT IS,[27] THE KETHUBAH[28] IS TO REMAIN IN THE POSSESSION OF THE HEIRS OF THE HUSBAND, AND THE PROPERTY WHICH GOES IN AND COMES OUT WITH HER[29] REMAINS IN THE POSSESSION OF THE HEIRS OF HER FATHER.

IF HIS[30] BROTHER[31] LEFT MONEY, LAND SHALL BE BOUGHT THEREWITH AND HE[32] SHALL ENJOY ITS USUFRUCT.[33] [IF THE DECEASED LEFT] PRODUCE THAT WAS DETACHED FROM THE GROUND, LAND SHALL BE BOUGHT [OUT OF THE PROCEEDS] AND HE[32] SHALL ENJOY ITS USUFRUCT. [IF IT WAS STILL] ATTACHED TO THE GROUND, THE LAND[34] IS TO BE ASSESSED, SAID R. MEIR, AS TO HOW MUCH IT IS WORTH[35] TOGETHER WITH THE PRODUCE AND HOW MUCH IT IS WORTH WITHOUT THE PRODUCE, AND WITH THE DIFFERENCE LAND SHALL BE BOUGHT,[36] AND HE[37] SHALL ENJOY ITS USUFRUCT. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: PRODUCE WHICH IS [STILL] ATTACHED TO THE GROUND BELONGS TO HIM,[38] BUT THAT WHICH IS DETACHED FROM THE GROUND PASSES INTO THE OWNERSHIP OF HIM WHO SEIZES IT FIRST.[39] IF HE [SEIZED IT] FIRST HE ACQUIRES OWNERSHIP; AND IF SHE [SEIZED IT] FIRST LAND SHALL BE BOUGHT THEREWITH AND HE[37] SHALL ENJOY ITS USUFRUCT. IF [THE LEVIR] MARRIED HER SHE IS REGARDED AS HIS WIFE IN ALL RESPECTS[38] SAVE THAT HER KETHUBAH REMAINS A CHARGE ON HER FIRST HUSBAND'S ESTATE.

HE CANNOT SAY TO HER, 'BEHOLD YOUR KETHUBAH LIES ON THE TABLE', BUT ALL HIS PROPERTY[40] IS PLEDGED TO HER KETHUBAH.[41] SO, TOO, A MAN MAY NOT SAY TO HIS WIFE, BEHOLD YOUR KETHUBAH LIES ON THE TABLE, BUT ALL HIS PROPERTY IS PLEDGED TO HER KETHUBAH. IF HE DIVORCED HER[42] SHE IS ENTITLED ONLY TO HER KETHUBAH.[43] IF HE SUBSEQUENTLY REMARRIED HER SHE IS [TO ENJOY THE SAME RIGHTS AS] ALL OTHER WIVES, AND IS ENTITLED ONLY TO HER KETHUBAH.[38]

GEMARA. The question was raised: If a woman awaiting the decision of a levir[44] died, who is to bury her? Are her husband's heirs to bury her because they inherit her kethubah[45] or is it possibly the heirs of her father who must bury her because they inherit the property that comes in and goes out with her? — R. Amram replied, Come and hear what was taught: If a woman awaiting the decision of a levir died,

---

(1) So MS.M. and Bail. Cur. odd., 'Papa'.

(2) Lit., 'that'.

(3) By Raba.

(4) On marriage.

(5) As melog property.

(6) Even if he sold moles property.

(7) Hence the statement of Judah Mar.

(8) A husband has no right to sell such property. It was only in that particular case that the husband acted within his rights for the reason that follows.

(9) Since the bondwoman would even now attend to general household duties.

(10) V. supra note 4.

(11) Lit., 'we fear lest it will deteriorate'. The buyer of the usufruct, having no interest in the land itself, would exploit it to the full, neglecting its proper cultivation and use. The husband, however, who, in addition to his right to usufruct, might also, in the event of his surviving his wife, become the owner of the land itself, may well be relied upon to give it proper attention.

(12) The sale of the usufruct to a stranger would deprive the household of the enjoyment of it.

(13) Abaye and Raba. Is not the sale of the usufruct equally forbidden whatever the reason?

(14) Where it is possible to watch the treatment meted out to the land by the buyer and to take in good time the necessary steps for its protection. In such a ease Raba's reason is applicable; Abaye's is not. According to the latter the husband would he entitled to sell the usufruct.

(15) He himself was looking after the land, delivering to the buyer the harvested produce. In this case also Raba's reason is applicable, but not Abaye's (cf. supra note 4).

(16) From the buyer.

(17) In this case Abaye's reason applies: but not Raba's, since the income from the trading provides for the comfort of the house. According to Raba the sale of usufruct in such a case is permitted.

(18) שומרת יבם the widow of a deceased brother during the period intervening between the death of her husband and her halizah or marriage with the levir.

(19) During this waiting period (Rashi. Cf., however, Rashi on the parallel Mishnah s.v. שנפלו Yeb. 38a).

(20) As melog property (v. Glos.) she has the right to dispose of it in the way she thinks fit.

(21) V. Glos. Here it denotes the sum corresponding in value to the wife's dowry which is conveyed under terms of tenancy to the husband, who enters it in the marriage contract and accepts full responsibility: v. Glos. s.v. zon barzel.

(22) I.e., her melog property, the capital of which remains in the legal possession of the wife, the husband, who enjoys Only the usufruct, accepting no responsibility for it.

(23) Who is heir to his wife. 'Husband' in this context _ levir.

(24) I.e., the melog property, not the kethubah concerning which Beth Shammai are of the same opinion as Beth Hillel that follows. The discrepancy between the first clause in the Mishnah, where the melog property is declared definitely hers, whereas in this second clause it is considered doubtfully so, is explained in Yeb. 38a.

(25) Since it is a matter of doubt whether the marital bond with the levir constitutes such a close relationship as that of actual marriage, the right of heirship as between her husband's heirs and her father's cannot he definitely determined. The property must, therefore, he equally divided between them.

(26) V. Glos.

(27) The question whether these are the heirs of the husband who had undertaken responsibility for the property, or the heirs of the wife whose capital it was originally, is dealt with 10 B.B. 158b.

(28) Here (unlike supra p. 507, n. 11) it has its usual connotation; (a) the statutory sum of a hundred zuz for a widow and two hundred zuz for a virgin which is entered in all marriage contracts irrespective of any property that the wife may bring with her on marriage and (b) the amount which the husband adds to it over and above the value of the property which she brought to him.

(29) V. supra note 1,

(30) The levir's (v. supra p. 507, n. 11).

(31) The deceased (v. l.c.).

(32) The levir, if he contracted the levirate marriage with the widow.

(33) The capital being pledged to the woman for her kethubah which remains a charge upon the estate of her first husband, the deceased. According to this opinion even movable possessions, such as money. are also pledged for the kethubah.

(34) Read אותה with Bah a.l. Cur. edd. אותן refers to פירות and conveys no sense.

(35) היא יפה (so Bah). Cur. edd. הן יפין (cf. previous note).

(36) R. Meir holding the view that whatever the land yielded while it was in the possession of the deceased (i.e.. during his lifetime) is mortgaged for the wife's kethubah.

(37) The levir, if he contracted the levirate marriage with the widow.

(38) This is discussed in the Gemara infra.

(39) כל הקודם זכה lit., 'whoever is first gains possession'. The same ruling applies also to money, since movables, in the opinion of the Sages, are not pledged for the kethubah unless the wife had seized them (cf. Infra 84b).

(40) Which he inherited from his deceased brother.

(41) I.e., he cannot pay her out her kethubah and sell the rest, hut must hold the whole of the deceased brother's estate as mortgaged to her kethubah; v. infra p. 512, n. 21.

(42) After he had duly consummated the levirate marriage.

(43) And he is at liberty to dispose of the rest of the property (v. supra n. 6) as he may desire.

(44) Cf. supra p. 507, n. 8.

(45) Which should compensate for burial expenses (cf. supra 47b).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 81a

it is the duty of her heirs, even those who inherit her kethubah, to bury her. Said Abaye, We also have learned a [similar Mishnah]: A widow is to be maintained out of the estate of [her deceased husband's] orphans, and her handiwork belongs to them. It is not their duty, however, to bury her; it is the duty of her heirs, even those who inherit her kethubah, to bury her.[1] Now, what widow is it that has two kinds of heirs?[2] Obviously[3] she who is awaiting the decision of a levir.[4]

Said Raba: But could[5] he not plead, 'I am only heir to my brother; it is not my duty to bury his wife'![6] — Abaye replied: [Such a plea would be untenable] because he is approached by two alternative demands:[7] If he is heir to his brother he should bury his wife;[8] if he does not bury his wife he should return her kethubah.[9] [Raba] retorted, it is this that I mean: [Might he not plead], 'I am only heir to my brother; it is not my duty to bury his wife; and if [I am expected to bury her] on account of the kethubah[10] [I may point out that] a kethubah is not payable during [the husband's] lifetime'?[11] — Who is it that was heard to admit the kethubah as a text for legal exposition?[12] Beth Shammai, of course.[13] But Beth Shammai have also been heard to lay down the rule that a note of indebtedness which is due for payment is regarded as repaid.[14] For we have learned: If their husbands[15] died before they drank,[16] Beth Shammai rule that they are to receive their kethubah and that they need not drink,[16] and Beth Hillel rule that they either drinks or they do not receive their kethubah.[17] [Now how could it be said,] 'They either drink', when the All-Merciful said, Then shall the man bring his wife to the priest,[18] and he is not there? [The meaning must] consequently be: As they do not drink[19] they are not to receive their kethubah. Again 'Beth Shammai rule that they are to receive their kethubah and that they need not drink', but why [should they receive their kethubah]? Is not their claim of a doubtful nature,[20] it being uncertain whether she had committed adultery or not;[21] then how could an uncertainty[22] override a certainty?[23] Beth Shammai [must consequently] hold the view that 'a note of indebtedness that is due for payment is regarded as repaid'.[24] But is it not required [that the proviso], 'When thou wilt be married to another man thou wilt receive what is prescribed for thee' [be complied with], which is not the case here?[25] — R. Ashi replied: A levir is also regarded as 'another man'.[26]

Raba addressed [the following message] to Abaye[27] through R.Shemaya b. Zera: Is a kethubah[28] indeed payable during [the levir's] lifetime? Has it not, in fact, been taught: R. Abba[29] stated, 'I asked Symmachus, "How is a man[30] who desires to sell his brother s property to proceed" [and he replied,] "If he is a priest,[31] he should prepare a banquet[32] and use persuasive means;[33] if he is an Israelite[34] he may divorce her and then marry her again".'[35]

---

(1) Supra 43a, infra 95b.

(2) The expression 'her heirs, even those who inherit her kethubah' implies that there exists also another class of heirs who do not inherit her kethubah.

(3) Lit., 'be saying'.

(4) [The last clause is to be taken independently of the first, which cannot refer to such a widow since it speaks of orphans, v. Tosaf.].

(5) The levir who, in fact, inherits only the statutory kethubah and the additional jointure, which are the property of his brother, and not the zon barzel, the original property of the woman. Cf. however, Tosaf. s.v. ולימא a.l.

(6) It was only his brother's duty to bury his wife in return for her kethubah which he inherits (cf. supra 47b) but not his duty, since he does not inherit from the widow but from his brother.

(7) Lit 'they come to him from two sides'.

(8) As his brother would have done had he survived her.

(9) To her heirs. Which is conceded to a husband in return for his wife's burial expenses.

(10) Cf. note 10.

(11) And he, representing her husband, since it was his intention to consummate levirate marriage, is still alive.

(12) The exposition being: Since the kethubah contains the proviso, 'When thou wilt be married to another man, thou wilt receive what is prescribed for thee', it may be inferred that, except in the case of divorce, the kethubah is not payable during the lifetime of the husband, when his wife cannot 'be married to another man.

(13) V. Yeb. 117a.

(14) Yeb. 38b, Sol. 25a. The amount of the debt is deemed to he in the virtual possession of the creditor. So, too, with the amount of the kethubah which is deemed to he in the virtual possession of the widow. The levir is consequently inheriting it not from his brother but from the widow, in return for which he must incur the obligation of burying her.

(15) Of women suspected of illicit intercourse with strangers after they had been warned by their husbands.

(16) The water of bitterness. (V. Num. V, 24).

(17) Yeb. 38b. Sol. 24a.

(18) Num. V, 15, emphasis on man.

(19) The water of bitterness (v. Num. V, 24.)

(20) Of course it is.

(21) In the former case she loses her right to her kethubah; in the latter case she does not.

(22) That of her claim (v. supra n. 10).

(23) It is certain that the husband's heirs are the rightful owners of his estate.

(24) So that the woman (and not the heirs) being regarded as the virtual possessor of the amount of her kethubah, no certainty is here overridden by an uncertainty.

(25) Since one awaiting the decision of a levir is not permitted to marry any stranger. How, then, could it he said supra that the kethubah is collected in the levir's lifetime?

(26) At the moment her husband's death had set her free to marry the levir the proviso of her kethubah was fulfilled, and her kethubah is payable.

(27) Who maintained supra that the kethubah is payable even during the lifetime of the levir.

(28) Of a woman awaiting the decision of the levir.

(29) I.e., R. Abba Arika or Rab.

(30) A levir who married his deceased brother's widow for whose kethubah (v. our Mishnah) all the property he inherited from his deceased brother is mortgaged.

(31) Who is forbidden to marry a divorced woman (v. Lev. XXI, 7).

(32) For his wife, his former sister-in-law.

(33) To secure her consent to sell so much of the property (v. supra note 6) as is in excess of the amount of her kethubah. If her consent cannot he obtained and he wishes to live with her he has no redress. He cannot divorce and remarry her as an Israelite may (v. infra) since his priesthood (v. supra note 7) would preclude him from marrying a woman he has once divorced.

(34) Who may marry a divorced woman.

(35) Adopting this course, he may either (a) pay her the amount of her kethubah as soon as she is divorced and, after selling all the property which is in excess of it, marry her again (on the condition of the first kethubah, v. infra 80b) or (b) he may remarry her before paying to her the amount of her kethubah and on remarriage give her a new one which, as all ordinary kethuboth, is secured not only on his present possessions but also on his future acquisitions. It is only a levir whose future acquisitions are not pledged for the kethubah of his deceased brother's widow (whom he marries and whose only security is the property left by her deceased husband) that is forbidden to sell the property he has inherited from that brother. Any other husband, including a levir who remarried his sister-in-law after he consummated levirate marriage and after he divorced her, since such a kethubah is secured by present possession and future acquisition, may well sell all his property even without his wife's consent.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 81b

Now if it could be assumed that a kethubah is payable during the lifetime [of the levir] why should he not set aside exclusively for her some property equal in value to the amount of the kethubah, and then sell the rest?[1] 'But according to your argument[2] [it might be asked] why should not the same objection[3] be raised from our Mishnah [where it was stated,] HE CANNOT SAY TO HER, "BEHOLD YOUR KETHUBAH LIES ON THE TABLE", BUT ALL HIS PROPERTY IS PLEDGED FOR HER KETHUBAH?' — 'There[4] we might merely have been given a piece of good advice;[5] for, were you not to admit this, [how would you] read the final clause where it is stated, So, TOO, A MAN MUST NOT SAY TO HIS WIFE, "BEHOLD YOUR KETHUBAH LIES ON THE TABLE", BUT ALL HIS PROPERTY IS PLEDGED FOR HER KETHUBAH, would he here also [it may be asked] not be able to sell if he wished to do so?[6] Consequently [it must be agreed that] he was there merely giving a piece of good advice;[7] and similarly here also we might merely be given a piece of good advice;[5] the statement of R. Abba, however, does present an objection!'[8] — 'R. Abba's statement also does not give rise to any objection [because the restrictions on the man's liberty to sell] are due to [the desire of avoiding] hatred.'[9] A sister-in-law once fell to the lot of a man[10] at Pumbeditha, and his [younger] brother wanted to cause her to be forbidden to marry him[11] by [forcing upon her] a letter of divorce.[12] 'What is it', [the eldest brother] said to him, 'that you have in your mind? [Are you troubled] because of the property[13] [that I all, to inherit]?[14] I will share the property with you'. R. Joseph [in considering this case] said: Since the Rabbis have laid down that he[15] may not sell,[16] his sale is invalid even if he had already sold it.[17] For it was taught:[18] If a man died[19] and left a widow who was awaiting the decision of a levir[20] and also left a bequest of property of the value of a hundred maneh,[21] [the levir] must not sell the property although the widow's kethubah amounts only to one maneh, because all his property is pledged to her kethubah.[22] Said Abaye to him:[23] Is it so that wherever the Rabbis ruled that one must not sell, the sale is invalid, even after it had taken place? Did we not, in fact, learn: Beth Shammai said, She[24] may sell it, and Beth Hillel said, She may not sell it; but both agree that if she had sold it or given it away her act is legally valid?[25] The case was sent to R. Hanina b. Papi who sent [the same reply] as that of R. Joseph. On this Abaye remarked: Has R. Hanina b. Papi, forsooth, hung jewels[26] upon it?[27] It was then sent to R. Minyomi the son of R. Nihumai who sent [the same reply] as Abaye[28] [and added:][29] 'Should R. Joseph give a new reason report it to me. R. Joseph thereupon went out, investigated, and discovered that it was taught: If a man who had a monetary claim against his brother died,[30] and left a widow who had to await the decision of a levir, [the latter][31] is not entitled to plead, 'Since I am the heir I have acquired [the amount of the debt]', but it must be taken from the levir and spent on the purchase of land and he is only entitled to its usufruct.[32] But 'is it not possible', said Abaye to him, 'that provision was made in his own interests?'[33] — 'The Tanna stated', the other replied, 'that it must be "taken" from him,[34] and you say that "provision was made in his own interests"'! The case was again sent to R. Minyomi the son of R. Nihumai who said to then,: Thus said R. Joseph b. Minyomi in the name of R. Nahman, 'This[35] is not an authentic teaching'.[36] What is the reason?[37] If it be Suggested, 'Because money is a movable thing and movables are not pledged to a kethubah',[38] is it not possible [it might be retorted] that the statement represents the view of R. Meir who holds that movables are pledged to a kethubah?[39] [Should it be suggested,] however,[40] 'Because he[41] could say to her: You are not the party I have to deal with',[42]

---

(1) What need then was there for persuasion or divorce and remarriage?

(2) 'Since you can see no reason against the sale of the property in excess of the kethubah except that a kethubah is not payable during the levir's lifetime'.

(3) Against Abaye, supra.

(4) In our Mishnah.

(5) In the interests of the woman; but not a legal ruling. Hence no objection can arise from it.

(6) Of course he could sell, since his future acquisitions are also pledged for the kethubah (cf. supra p. 512, n. 11).

(7) Cf. supra n. 6.

(8) As shewn supra.

(9) Between husband and wife. Were he allowed to set aside a particular part of his property as surety for her kethubah she might misinterpret his action to be a preliminary to a permanent divorce. By adopting the measures described supra he makes it clear to all that the only motive for his action was his desire to sell the property.

(10) The woman's husband died without issue and the duty of marrying her or submitting to her halizah fell upon that man who was the eldest surviving brother of the deceased.

(11) His eldest brother.

(12) A divorce by one of the surviving brothers causes the widow to be forbidden to all the brothers (v. Yeb. 50a).

(13) Of the deceased.

(14) The brother who marries the widow inherits also the estate of the deceased (v. Yeb. 40a).

(15) A levir for whose marriage (or halizah) a sister-in-law is waiting.

(16) The estate of his deceased brother, which he inherits.

(17) Similarly, here, the share promised to the younger brother under a legal kinyan is deemed to be a sale which is invalid.

(18) Cf. infra n. 10.

(19) Without issue.

(20) Cf. supra p. 507, n. 8.

(21) V. Glos.

(22) Which proves that the levir who is responsible far his sister-in-law's kethubah may not sell any of his deceased brother's property which he inherits.

(23) R. Joseph.

(24) A wife who came into the possession of property.

(25) Supra 78a; which proves that a sale ex post facto is valid even though it was not originally permitted.

(26) כיפי (כיף, כיפא 'stone') 'precious stones'.

(27) He has not. His ruling is no more supported by proof or reason than that of R. Joseph, and may he equally disregarded.

(28) That the sale is valid.

(29) Cf. MS.M. which inserts, 'and he (also) sent (word) to them'.

(30) Without issue.

(31) I.e., the debtor who, as brother of the deceased, marries his widow and also inherits his estate (v. supra p. 514, n. 4).
(32) The debt in this case is similar to a sale ex post facto, and nevertheless it is invalid; which proves the correctness of R. Joseph's ruling.
(33) Lit., 'that which was good for him they did for him'; it is more advantageous for a person when his money is invested than when it is spent.
(34) Implying forcible action against his will.
(35) The Baraitha discovered by R. Joseph.
(36) It is spurious and not to be relied upon.
(37) V. previous note.
(38) And a statement that regards them as pledged to a kethubah must consequently be spurious.
(39) Cf. Yeb. 99a, Kid. 68b.
(40) As a reason why the statement under discussion must be considered spurious.
(41) The levir.
(42) He is the debtor of the deceased but not hers. Cf. supra n.8 mutatis mutandis.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 82a

is it not possible [it might be retorted] that the statement represents the view of R. Nathan, since it was taught: R. Nathan stated, 'Whence is it deduced that if a man claims a maneh[1] from another, and this one [claims a similar sum] from a third, the sum is to be collected from the last [named] and handed over to the first? From Scripture, which stated,[2] And give unto him against whom he hath trespassed'?[3] [This], however, [is the reason:][4] We find nowhere a Tanna who imposes two restrictions[5] in the matter of a kethuboth;[6] we only find agreement either with R. Meir or with R. Nathan.[7] Raba remarked: If so, I can well understand[8] what Abaye meant when I heard him say, 'This is not an authentic teaching' and [at the time] I did not understand what [his reason] was.

A sister-in-law at Matha Mehasia[9] once fell to the lot of a man[10] whose [younger] brother wanted to cause her to be forbidden to marry him[11] by [forcing upon her] a letter of divorce.[12] 'What is it', [the eldest brother] said to him, 'that you have in your mind? If it is on account of the property[13] [that you are troubled][14] will share the estate with you'. 'I am afraid', the other replied, 'that you will treat me as the Pumbedithan rogue [has treated his brother]'.[15] 'If you wish', the first said to him, 'take your half at once'.[16] Said Mar son of R. Ashi: Although when R. Dimi came[17] he stated in the name of R. Johanan, If a man said to another, 'Go and pull[18] this cow, but it shall pass into your legal possession only after thirty days', he legally acquires it after thirty days,[19] even if it stands at the time in the meadow,[20] [in this case the younger brother cannot acquire possession of the promised share]; for there[21] it was in his power [to transfer possession at once][22] but here[23] it is not in his power [to transfer immediate possession]. But, surely, when Rabin came[24] be stated in the name of R. Johanan[25] that 'he does not acquire possession'![26] — This is no difficulty: One[27] refers to a case where the seller said, 'Acquire possession[28] from now';[29] the other, where he did not say, 'Acquire from now'.

'Ulla was asked: What is the ruling where levirate marriage was consummated first and the division of the property[30] took place afterwards?[31] — The act[32] is null and void[33] [he replied]. What is the ruling [he was asked] if the division[30] took place first and the levirate marriage afterwards?[31] -The act[32] [he replied] is null and void.[33] R. Shesheth demurred: Now [that it has been said that where] levirate marriage took place first and the division[30] afterwards the act[32] is null and void, was it at all necessary [to ask the question where] the division took place first and the levirate marriage afterwards?[34] — [The respective enquiries related to] two independent incidents that occurred [at different times].[35]

When Rabin cam€[24] he stated in the name of Resh Lakish: Whether levirate marriage was consummated first and the division took place afterwards, or whether the division took place first and the levirate marriage afterwards, the act is null and void. And [in fact] the law is that the act is null and void.

THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: WHAT IS STILL ATTACHED TO THE GROUND BELONGS TO HIM. But why? Is not all his[36] landed estate[37] a pledge and a guarantee for her kethubah? — Resh Lakish replied: Read, 'Belongs to her'.[38]

IF [THE LEVlr] MARRIED HER SHE IS REGARDED AS HIS WIFE. In what respect? — R. Jose the son of R. Hanina replied: By this is meant that her separation from him is effected by a letter of divorce[39] and that he may marry her again.[40] [You say,] 'Her separation from him is effected By a letter of divorce'; [but] is not this obvious? — It might have been assumed that since the All-Merciful said, And perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her,[41] she[42] is still subject to the original levirate obligations[43] and a letter of divorce should not be enough unless [the separation had been effected] by halizah, hence we were taught [that only a letter of divorce is required].

[You say,] 'He may marry her again'; [but] is not this obvious?

---

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Num. V, 7.

(3) Emphasis on the last five words which refer to the first, who is the person against whom the trespass had been committed, and not to the second who is merely an intermediary who, even if the debt had been repaid to him, would also have had to transfer it to the first. Similarly in the statement under discussion the debt which the deceased claims from the levir might well be regarded as a debt due to the widow who has a claim upon the deceased.

(4) Cf. supra p. 515, n. 10.

(5) That of R. Meir as well as that of R. Nathan.

(6) Which is only a Rabbinical institution.

(7) But not with both. Since the statement under discussion does impose both restrictions it must be considered spurious.

(8) Lit., 'that is'.

(9) A suburb of Sura. It was an important seat of learning in the days of Rab, and attained even greater fame in the first two decades of the fifth century under the guidance of R. Ashi.

(10) Cf. supra p. 523, n. 10.

(11) Cf. loc. cit. n. 11.

(12) Cf. supra p. 513, n. 12.

(13) Cf. p. 514, n. 1.

(14) Cf. loc. cit. n. 2.

(15) He did not keep the promise he made (supra Rib). Pumbeditha was notorious for its sharpers (cf. B.E. 46a, Hul. 127a).

(16) Though legal acquisition could not be effected until the consummation of the levirate marriage.

(17) From Palestine to Babylon.

(18) Pulling, meshikah (v. Glos.) is one of the forms of kinyan.

(19) From the moment he pulled it.

(20) Sc., not in the possession of the buyer.

(21) In the case of the cow,

(22) Hence he may legally transfer possession even after thirty days.

(23) In the case of the share of the younger brother. The elder brother cannot possibly convey possession of the deceased brother's estate before performing the levirate marriage, when it then passes into his possession. Hence also the invalidity of the kinyan.

(24) From Palestine to Babylon.

(25) In the case of the deferred acquisition of a cow, just cited.

(26) Which presents a contradiction between the two rulings attributed to R. Johanan.

(27) The first cited ruling.

(28) After the thirty days.

(29) I.e., retrospective possession which is valid.
(30) Between the levir who married the widow and any other of the brothers.
(31) Is the brother entitled to retain the property the levir has allotted to him?
(32) Sc. the division by which the levir deprives the widow whom he married of a security for her kethubah.
(33) And the property remains in the possession of the levir, the kethubah of the widow being secured on it.
(34) If the division is invalid in the first case, where the kinyan might be immediate, how much more so in the second case where the kinyan can only be retrospective.
(35) The second enquiry was addressed by those who did not hear of the first mentioned ruling.
(36) The deceased.
(37) Including whatever is attached to it.
(38) The Sages' dispute being limited to detached produce and money which, they maintain, as movables are not pledged to a kethubah.
(39) Not by halizah (v. Glos.) by which the bond between a levir and his sister-in-law is severed where no levirate marriage is consummated.
(40) Though prior to the levirate marriage a divorced sister-in-law is forbidden to marry any of the brothers.
(41) Deut. XXV, 5.
(42) Since the expression of levirate marriage (duty of a husband's brother) is specifically mentioned in addition to the expression of marriage (And take her to him to wife, ibid.).
(43) Even after the consummation of the levirate marriage.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 82b

— It might have been assumed that since he has already performed the commandment that the All-Merciful has imposed upon him she shall again resume towards him the prohibition of [marrying] a brother's wife,[1] hence we were informed [that he may remarry her]. But might it not be suggested that the law is so[2] indeed?[3] — Scripture stated, And take her to him to wife,[4] as soon as he has taken her she becomes his wife [in all respects].

SAVE THAT HER KETHUBAH REMAINS A CHARGE ON HER FIRST HUSBAND'S ESTATE. What is the reason?[5] — A wife has been given[6] to him from heaven.[7] If, however, she is unable to obtain her kethubah from her first husband [provision was made by the Rabbis that] she receives it from the second[8] in order that It may not be easy for bin, to divorce her.[9]

HE CANNOT SAY TO HER, BEHOLD YOUR KETHUBAH [etc.]'. What [need was there for stating] SO,TOO?[10] — It might have been suggested [that the restriction mentioned applies only] in the former case[11] because the levir does not insert [in her kethubah the clause] 'That which I possess and that which I will acquire',[12] but that in the latter case, where he does insert [the pledge clause,] 'That which I possess and that which I will acquire',[13] she relies upon this guarantee,[14] hence we were told [that the ruling applies in both cases].

IF HE DIVORCED HER SHE IS ENTITLED ONLY TO HER KETHUBAH. Only[15] IF HE DIVORCED HER [may he sell the property],[16] but if he did not divorce her he may not. Thus we were informed in agreement with the ruling of R. Abba.[17]

IF HE SUBSEQUENTLY REMARRIED HER SHE IS [TO ENJOY THE SAME RIGHTS AS] ALL OTHER WIVES, AND IS ENTITLED ONLY TO HER KETHUBAH. IF HE SUBSEQUENTLY REMARRIED HER'! What does he thereby[18] teach us? Have we not learned: If a man divorced his wife and then remarried her, his second marriage is contracted on the terms of her first kethubah?[19] — It might have been assumed that the law applied only to his wife since it was he himself who wrote the kethubah; in the case of his sister-in-law, however, since it was not he[20] who wrote the kethubah for her, it might well have been assumed that where he divorced, and then remarried her the kethubah must come from himself, hence we were taught [that in this case also she is entitled only to the first kethubah].

Rab Judah stated: At first they used to give merely a written undertaking[21] in respect of [the kethubah of] a virgin for two hundred zuz[22] and in respect of that of a widow for a maneh,[22] and consequently[23] they grew old and could not take any wives, when Simeon b. Shetah took the initiative[24] and ordained that all the property of a husband is pledged for the kethubah of his wife. So it was also taught elsewhere: At first they used to give merely a written undertaking[25] in respect of [the kethubah of] a virgin for two hundred zuz[22] and in respect of that of a widow for a maneh,[22] and consequently[23] they grew old and could not take any wives. It was then ordained that the amount of the kethubah[26] was to be deposited in the wife's father's house. At any time, however, when the husband was angry with her he used to tell her, 'Go to your kethubah'.[27] It was ordained, therefore, that the amount of the kethubah[26] was to be deposited in the house of her father-in-law.[28] Wealthy women[29] converted it into silver, or gold baskets, while poor women converted it into brass[30] tubs. Still, whenever the husband had occasion to be angry with his wife he would say to her, 'Take your kethubah and go'.[31] It was then that[32] Simeon b. Shetah ordained that the husband must insert the pledging clause, 'All my property is mortgaged to your kethubah'.[33] [

---

(1) Lev. XVIII, 16.

(2) That halizah is required and that he may not remarry her.

(3) Lit., 'thus also'.

(4) Deut. XXV, 5; where only the latter part of the verse, And perform the duty of a husband's brother unto her, would have been sufficient.

(5) I.e., why should not the levir, her present husband, assume responsibility for her kethubah.

(6) Lit., 'they caused him to acquire'.

(7) She was not chosen by him but was imposed upon him by the Divine law of the levirate marriage. He cannot, therefore, be expected to undertake any monetary obligations in respect of her kethubah.

(8) The levir who married her.

(9) Lit., 'that it may not be easy in his eyes to cause her to go out'.

(10) In the case of a wife. Is it not obvious that a husband's obligation towards a wife he himself has chosen cannot possibly be less than those he incurs in respect of a sister-in-law he married only in obedience to a commandment?

(11) The marriage of a sister-inlaw.

(12) 'Shall be pledged to the kethubah'. So that the woman, having her security limited to the levir's possessions that were inherited from her deceased husband, would naturally suspect that by 'putting her kethubah on the table' the levir intends to escape his full responsibility and desires to deprive her of the possibility of collecting her kethubah when the occasion arises. This, as might well be expected, would create animosity between husband and wife (cf. supra p. 513, n. 9).

(13) So that the kethubah is well secured.

(14) And no animosity would ensue despite his 'putting of the kethubah on the table'.

(15) Lit., 'yes'.

(16) Which he inherited from the deceased and which is in excess of the amount of the kethubah.

(17) Supra 81a, that unless the woman can be persuaded to consent to the sale of the property it may be sold only after she had been divorced.

(18) By specifying the law in the case of a sister-in-law whom the levir had married.

(19) I.e., she cannot claim a second kethubah, infra 89b; And this law one would expect to apply also to a sister-in-law. What need then was there to specify it in the case of the latter. (V. Supra n. 1)?

(20) But her first husband.

(21) Lit., 'they would write'. No clause pledging the husband's landed property being inserted in the kethubah.

(22) V. Glos.

(23) Women refusing to marry under such precarious conditions, (v. supra note 4).

(24) Lit., 'until he came'.

(25) V. supra note 4.

(26) Lit., 'it'.

(27) I.e., he could easily get rid of her since the amount of her kethubah was at hand and there was no need for him to make any efforts to find the money.

(28) Sc. husband.

(29) The amount of whose kethubah was high. In addition to the statutory sum the kethubah also contains additional obligations on the part of the husband corresponding to the amount the wife brought to him on marriage.

(30) So Tosaf. s.v. עביט. Cur. edd. 'urine'.

(31) Cf. supra p. 520, n. 10.

(32) V. l.c. n. 7.

(33) So MS.M. Cur. edd., 'to her kethubah'. [For a full discussion of this passage v. Epstein, L., op. cit. pp. 19ff.]

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 83a

C H A P T E R I X

MISHNAH. IF A HUSBAND GIVES TO HIS WIFE A WRITTEN UNDERTAKING, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM WHATSOEVER[1] UPON YOUR ESTATES', HE MAY NEVERTHELESS ENJOY ITS USUFRUCT DURING HER LIFETIME AND, WHEN SHE DIES, HE IS HER HEIR. IF SO, WHAT WAS HIS OBJECT IN GIVING HER THE WRITTEN UNDERTAKING, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM WHATSOEVER UPON YOUR ESTATES'? THAT IF SHE SOLD THEM OR GAVE THEM AWAY HER ACT MIGHT BE VALID. IF HE WROTE, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM WHATSOEVER UPON YOUR ESTATES AND UPON THEIR PRODUCE, HE MAY NOT ENJOY THEIR USUFRUCT DURING HER LIFETIME BUT, WHEN SHE DIES, HE IS HER HEIR. R. JUDAH RULED: HE MAY IN ALL CASES ENJOY THE YIELD OF THE PRODUCE UNLESS HE WROTE OUT FOR HER [THE FOLLOWING UNDERTAKING]: 'I HAVE NO CLAIM WHATSOEVER UPON YOUR ESTATES AND UPON THEIR PRODUCE AND THE PRODUCE OF THEIR PRODUCE AND SO ON WITHOUT END.

IF HE WROTE, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM UPON YOUR ESTATES, THEIR PRODUCE AND THE PRODUCE OF THEIR PRODUCE DURING YOUR LIFETIME AND AFTER YOUR DEATH', HE MAY NEITHER ENJOY THEIR PRODUCE DURING HER LIFETIME NOR CAN HE BE HER HEIR WHEN SHE DIES. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED:WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR BECAUSE [BY HIS DECLARATION] HE IS MAKING A CONDITION WHICH IS CONTRARY TO WHAT IS ENJOINED IN THE TORAH[2] AND WHENEVER A MAN MAKES A CONDITION WHICH IS CONTRARY TO WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, HIS CONDITION IS NULL AND VOID.[3] GEMARA. R. Hiyya taught:[4] If a husband said[5] to his wife.[6]

And if he gave her such an undertaking in writing,[7] what does It matter? Was it not taught: If a man says[8] to another,[9] 'I have no claim whatsoever on this field, I have no concern in it and I entirely dissociate myself from it',[10] his statement is of no effect?[11] — At the school of R. Jannai it was explained, [we are dealing here with the case] of a man who gave the undertaking to his wife[12] while she was still only betrothed to him,[13] [the ruling[14] being] in agreement with that of R. Kahana, that a man is at liberty to renounce beforehand an inheritance[15] which is likely to accrue to him from another source;[16] and [this ruling, furthermore, is] in agreement with a dictum of Raba, that if anyone says. 'I do not desire [to avail myself] of a regulation of the Rabbis of this kind', his desire is granted.[17] What [is meant by the expression] 'of this kind'? As [that referred to in the statement made by] R. Huna in the name of Rab: A woman is entitled to say to her husband, 'I do not wish either to be maintained by you or to work for you'.[18] If so,[19] should not [the same ruling apply to] a married woman also?[20] Abaye replied: In the case of a married woman the husband's rights have the same force as the wife's.[21] Raba said: His rights are superior to hers. This[22] is of practical significance in the case of a woman who was awaiting the decision of the levir.[23] The question was raised: What is the ruling if symbolic kinyan was executed[24] [at the time of the renunciation]?[25] — R. Joseph replied: [The kinyan is invalid since] it related to an abstract renunciation.[26] R. Nahman replied: [The kinyan is valid because] it related to land itself.[27] Said Abaye: R. Joseph's statement is reasonable

---

(1) Lit., 'no right nor claim'.
(2) According to the Torah it is the husband who is the heir of his wife (v. B.B. 111b).
(3) It is only the produce which was granted to the husband by a Rabbinical measure, that he may renounce.
(4) In reference to the rulings in our Mishnah.
(5) Emphasis on said, sc. he can waive his rights by a mere verbal declaration.
(6) Infra 102b.
(7) Much less if it was only verbal.
(8) Either verbally or in a written document (v. Rashi).
(9) Sc. to his partner.
(10) Lit., 'and my hand is removed from it'.
(11) Infra 95a. Git. 77a, B.B. 43a, 49a; because no man can renounce his rights by a mere verbal declaration unless by way of a gift or sale, but since there was no expression such as, 'I make the field over to you'. or words to the same effect denoting a gift, the waiver is ineffective. Now since a written undertaking that omitted such an expression is invalid, bow much more so would that be the case with a mere verbal utterance? An objection thus arises against R. Hiyya.
(12) Lit., 'when he writes for her'.
(13) When he has as yet no right to her property.
(14) Which allows renunciation in such a case.
(15) Lit., 'stipulate that he shall not inherit'.
(16) Sc. from a stranger to whom he becomes next of kin through an act of his (such as marriage) and whose heir he becomes thereby in accordance with Rabbinic law. It is only an inheritance from a next-of-kin, or property that is already in one's possession, the rights of which cannot be waived by mere renunciation but requires (v. supra n. 8) the specific expressions of 'giving'. [This statement of R. Kahana is on the view that the law that the husband inherits his wife is a Rabbinic provision. v. supra p. 528, cf. supra p. 522, n. 2].
(17) Since the regulation was made for his benefit, he is at liberty to reject it.
(18) Since her maintenance by her husband in return for her handiwork is a Rabbinic regulation made in favour of the woman, she is at liberty to reject it. A husband (cf. supra nn. 13 and 14) is similarly entitled to renounce his rights as heir to his wife, without any further formality.
(19) That the husband's right to renounce his claim upon his wife's property is due to the fact that it was for his benefit that her property was assigned to him.
(20) Of course it should. Why then was it necessary for the school of R. Jannai supra to explain the ruling as referring to an undertaking that was given 'while she was still only betrothed to him'?
(21) Lit., 'his hand is like her hand'. Since he is consequently legal possessor of the property he cannot (cf. supra p. 523, n. 13) waive his rights to it by mere renunciation.
(22) The difference of opinion between Abaye and Raba, which does not in any way affect our present discussion since in either case a husband is regarded as the possessor of his wife's property and cannot, by a mere verbal renunciation, legally transfer it.
(23) If such a woman died and left property which came into her possession either (a) while her husband was still alive or (b) after his death while she was awaiting the levir's decision, the respective rights of her heirs and her husband's heirs to such property depend on, and vary according to, the respective views of Abaye and Raba as fully discussed in Yeb. 39a, q.v.
(24) Lit., 'they (sc. witnesses) acquired from him (on behalf of his partner)'. Cf. Rashi.
(25) Of his share in his partner's property. spoken of in the Baraitha quoted supra in objection to R. Hiyya. Does, or does not such kinyan, it is asked, effect the legal transfer of the land despite. or because of the fact, that no expression of 'giving' (v. supra p. 523. n. 8) was used. [According to Tosaf. s.v. קני the query refers to the waiving of rights by a husband to the property of his wife after marriage].
(26) Lit., 'they acquired from him (a mere verbal expression) of right and claim', which are not in his power to waive.
(27) Lit., 'of the body of the land', which is, of course, a concrete object that may well be acquired by symbolic kinyan.

where [the partner][1] lodged his protest forthwith,[2] but if he delayed,[3] the kinyan must be regarded as relating to the land itself,[4] Amemar said, the law is that the kinyan is taken to refer to the land itself.[5] Said R. Ashi to Amemar: [Do you speak] of one who lodged his protest forthwith or of one who delayed it? 'In what respect [the other asked] does this matter?' — In respect of [determining whether the law is] in agreement with the view of R. Joseph.[6] 'I did not hear this',[7] the other replied. 'by which I mean that I do not accept it.'

IF SO, WHAT WAS HIS OBJECT IN GIVING HER THE WRITTEN UNDERTAKING etc. But[8] why should she not be able to say to him, 'You have renounced all your claims'?[9] — Abaye replied: The holder of a deed is always at a disadvantage.[10] But might it not be suggested [that he renounced his claim] upon the usufruct?[11] — Abaye replied: A young pumpkin [in hand] is better than a full-grown one [in the field].[12] But may it be suggested [that his renunciation related] to his heirship?[13] Abaye replied: Death is a common occurrence but the sale [of property by a wife] is not common;[14] and whenever a person renounces his claims [he does so] in respect of what is not a common occurrence but he does not do it in respect Of that which is a common occurrence. R. Ashi replied:[15] [The husband's renunciation was] 'UPON YOUR ESTATES',[16] but not upon their produce; 'UPON YOUR[17] ESTATES', but not after your death.[18]

R. JUDAH RULED: HE MAY IN ALL CASES ENJOY THE YIELD OF THE PRODUCE [etc.]. Our Rabbis taught: The following are regarded as produce and the following as the yield of the produce respectively. If a woman brought to her husband[19] a plot of land and it yielded produce, such yield is regarded as produce. If he sold the produce and purchased land with the proceeds and that land yielded produce, such yield is regarded as the yield of the produce. The question was raised: According to R. Judah, [is the expression] THE PRODUCE OF THEIR PRODUCE[20] the essential element,[21] or is rather WITHOUT END[22] the essential element,[23] or is it possible that both expressions are essential?[24] But should you find [some ground] for deciding [that the expression] THE PRODUCE OF THEIR PRODUCE is the essential element,[25] what need was there [it might be asked, for the mention[26] of] 'WITHOUT END'? — It is this that we were taught: So long as he renounced in her favour, in writing, the yield of the produce it is as if he had expressly written in her favour, 'without end'. But should you find [some reason] for deciding that WITHOUT END is the essential element,[27] what need was there [it might be asked, for the mention[26] of] THE PRODUCE OF THEIR PRODUCE? — It is this that we were taught; Although he renounced in her favour, in writing, the yield of the produce [the renunciation] is valid only[28] if he also wrote 'without end' but is invalid[29] if he did not [write it]. But if you should find some argument for giving the decision that both expressions are essential [it could he asked]. what need is there for the specification[30] of both? Both are necessary. For if only the 'yield of the produce' had been written in her favour and 'without end' had been omitted, it might have been assumed that he loses thereby his right to the enjoyment of the yield of the produce only but that he is still entitled to enjoy the produce of the yield of that produce, hence it is necessary for the expression 'without end' [to be included in the renunciation]. And if only 'without end' had been written in her favour and the 'yield of the produce' had not been specified,[30] it might have been assumed that 'without end' referred to the first produce only,[31] hence it is necessary to specify also the 'yield of the produce'.[32]

The question was raised: May a husband who wrote, in favour of his wife, the renunciation 'I have no claim whatsoever upon your estates and upon the yield of their produce', enjoy the produce itself? Has he renounced the yield of their produce only but not the produce [itself] or is it possible that he renounced all his claim? But it is quite obvious that he has renounced all his claims. For should you suggest that he only renounced his claim upon the yield of the produce but not upon the produce itself, whence [it might be objected] would arise a yield of the produce if the man had consumed the produce itself?[33]

[No, for even] according to your view, [how will you explain] the statement in our Mishnah, R. JUDAH RULED: HE MAY IN ALL CASES ENJOY THE YIELD OF THE PRODUCE etc. [Where it may equally be objected,] whence would there be a yield of the produce if she[34] has consumed the produce itself? [Your explanation,] however, [would be that the reference is to a case] where the woman had allowed [the produce] to remain;[35] here also [it may be a case] where the husband has allowed the produce to remain.[35]

R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED etc. Rab said: The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel but not because of the reason he gave. What is meant by 'the halachah is In agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel but not because of the reason he gave'? If it be suggested: 'The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel' in respect of his statement that WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR, 'but not because of the reason he gave'.for whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel is of the opinion that if A MAN MAKES A CONDITION WHICH IS CONTRARY TO WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, HIS CONDITION IS NULL AND VOID, Rab holds that such a condition[36] is valid[37] and [his acceptance of the ruling[38] is solely due to] his opinion that a husband's right of inheritance is a Rabbinical enactment and that the Sages have imposed upon their enactments greater restrictions than upon those of the Torah;[39]

---

(1) Who waived his rights.

(2) As soon as the partner came to take possession of the field, he declared that he never intended to give away his share and that his renunciation was merely a way of escape from a quarrel with his partner.

(3) Lit., 'when standing', the protest being made sometime after his partner had taken possession of the field.

(4) Cf. p. 524, n. 9; it being obvious that this belated protest was only the result of an afterthought, and that his original intention was to give away his share to his partner.

(5) V. p. 524, n. 9.

(6) Supra 83a ad fin.

(7) The ruling of R. Joseph. Cf. MS. M.

(8) If the husband's renunciation is sufficiently valid to confer legality on his wife's sale or gift.

(9) I.e., even his rights to usufruct and heirship.

(10) Should his claims ever conflict with those of the person in possession in whose favour the deed is always to be interpreted. In the case under discussion the wife is regarded as the 'holder of the deed' and the husband as the possessor of the rights of (i) usufruct, (ii) heirship and (iii) the seizure of any property she has sold or given away. Since his renunciation can be interpreted as referring to one of these rights only, the woman has no legal footing on which to claim 'You have renounced all your claims'.

(11) And not upon his other rights (cf. note 7) including that of seizure of the property his wife has sold or given away.

(12) Cf. 'a bird in hand is worth two in the bush' (Eng. prov.). The right to usufruct, which can be enjoyed at once, though it is of less value than the land itself, is more advantageous to a husband than the right of the seizure of property that his wife may possibly sell at some future time. The former is a certainty, the other is an eventuality.

(13) Cf. supra n. 9 mutatis mutandis.

(14) A woman as a rule does not sell her ancestral possessions.

(15) To the two objections just dealt with by Abaye.

(16) Emphasis on ESTATES.

(17) Emphasis on the pronoun.

(18) When they are no longer hers.

(19) On marriage.

(20) And not that of WITHOUT END. (Rashi); cf. note 8 ad fin.

(21) In the wording of the renunciation spoken of by R. Judah; and, if it was omitted, the renunciation, as far as the yield of produce is concerned, is invalid even though the expression 'without end' had been used. Aliter. And the renunciation is valid even though 'without end' was omitted (Tosaf. s.v. פירי).

(22) And not 'the produce of the produce'.

(23) Cf. supra n. 7, mutatis mutandis.

(24) And if one of them was omitted the renunciation is invalid.
(25) V. supra note 7.
(26) In our Mishnah.
(27) Cf. supra note 5.
(28) Lit., ‘yes’.
(29) LIt., ‘not’.
(30) In the renunciation.
(31) That it is this produce, but not its yield, that he renounces for ever
(32) [All of which justifies the query as to which expression is regarded as essential according to R. Judah. The query is left unanswered, v. infra p. 528. n. 2].
(33) Obviously there could be none Hence it may be concluded that the husband renounced ‘all his claims’.
(34) The wife. Cf. Rashi. Cur. edd., דאבלינהו.
(35) It had for some reason remained unconsumed and a produce-yielding object had been purchased with the proceeds. [Here, too, the question remains unanswered, v. supra p. 527. n. 5].
(36) If it relates to monetary matters.
(37) In agreement with R. Judah, supra 56a.
(38) Of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, that the condition is invalid in the case of the husband's heirship.
(39) Not being Pentateuchal, people might be lax in their observance. Greater safeguards were, therefore, required.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 84a

could Rab, however, [it may be retorted,] hold the opinion that one's condition [though contrary to what is written in the Torah] is valid? Has it not in fact been stated: If a man says to another, ‘[I sell you this object] on condition that you have no claim for overreaching against me’ [the buyer]. Rab ruled, has nevertheless a claim for overreaching against him,[1] and Samuel ruled, He has no claim for overreaching against him?[2] — [It is this] then [that was meant;] ‘The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel’ who laid down that IF A MAN MAKES A CONDITION WHICH IS CONTRARY TO WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, HIS CONDITION IS NULL AND VOID, ‘but not because of the reason he gave’, for whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel is of the opinion that WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR, Rab maintains that when she dies he is not her heir.[3] But is not this in agreement with his reason[4] and not with his ruling?[5] — This then [it is that was meant:] ‘The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel’ who laid down that WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR, but not ‘because of the reason he gave’ for, whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel is of the opinion that only a condition that is contrary to a Pentateuchal law is null but one that is contrary only to a Rabbinic law[6] is valid, Rab maintains that even a condition contrary to a Rabbinic law[6] is also null.[7]

But this would be in agreement, would it not, with both his reason[8] and his ruling.[9] Rab only adding [greater force to it]?[10] This then [it is that was meant :] ‘The halachah is in agreement with R. Simeon b. Gamaliel’ who laid down that WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR, but not ‘because of the reason he gave’, for, whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel holds that a husband's right of heirship is Pentateuchal and that [it is invalid because] WHEREVER A MAN MAKES A CONDITION WHICH IS CONTRARY TO WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, HIS CONDITION IS NULL AND VOID, Rab maintains that a husband's right of heirship is only a Rabbinic enactment and [that the condition is nevertheless null because] the Sages have imparted to their enactments the same force as that of Pentateuchal laws.

But [could it be said,] that Rab is of the opinion that a husband's right of heirship is only Rabbinical when in fact we have learned:[11] R. Johanan b. Beroka ruled, ‘If a husband is the heir of his wife he must [when the Jubilee year[12] arrives] return [the inheritance] to the members of her family and allow them a reduction of price’;[13] and, in considering this statement, the objection was raised: What is really his[14] opinion? If he holds that a husband's right of heirship is Pentateuchal, why [it may be asked] should he return [the inheritance at all]?[15] And if [he[16] holds it to be only] Rabbinical, why [it may be objected] should [even a part of] its price be paid?[17] And Rab explained: He[16] holds in fact the opinion that a husband's right of heirship is Pentateuchal but[18] [here it is a case of a man], for instance, whose wife bequeathed to him a [family] graveyard, [and it is] in order [to avoid] a family taint[19] that the Rabbis have ruled, Let him take the price and return it; and by[20] 'allow them a reduction in price' [was meant a deduction of] the cost of his wife's grave;[21] [the return of a family graveyard being] in agreement with what was taught: If a person has sold his [family] grave, the path to this grave, his halting place.[22] or his place of mourning, the members of his family may come and bury him perforce,[23] in order [to avert] a slight upon the family![24] — Rab spoke here in accordance with R. Johanan b. Beroka's point of view but he himself does not uphold it.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN DIED AND LEFT A WIFE,[25] A CREDITOR,[26] AND HEIRS[27] AND HE ALSO HAD A DEPOSIT OR A LOAN IN THE POSSESSION OF OTHERS, THIS, R. TARFON RULED, SHALL BE GIVEN TO THE ONE WHO IS UNDER THE GREATEST DISADVANTAGE.[28] R. AKIBA SAID: NO PITY IS TO BE SHEWN IN A MATTER OF LAW; AND IT[29] SHALL RATHER BE GIVEN TO THE HEIRS, FOR WHEREAS ALL THE OTHERS[30] MUST TAKE AN OATH[31] THE HEIRS NEED NOT TAKE ANY OATH.[32] IF HE LEFT PRODUCE THAT WAS DETACHED FROM THE GROUND, THEN WHOEVER[33] SEIZES IT FIRST ACQUIRES POSSESSION. IF THE WIFE TOOK POSSESSION OF MORE THAN THE AMOUNT OF HER KETHUBAH, OR A CREDIT OR OF MORE THAN THE VALUE OF HIS DEBT, THE BALANCE, R. TARFON RULED, SHALl. BE GIVEN TO THE ONE WHO IS UNDER THE GREATEST DISADVANTAGE.[34] R. AKIBA SAID: NO PITY IS TO BE SHEWN IN A MATTER OF LAW; AND IT SHALL RATHER BE GIVEN TO THE HEIRS, FOR WHEREAS ALL THE OTHERS[30] MUST TAKE AN OATH[31] THE HEIRS NEED NOT TAKE ANY OATH.[32] GEMARA. What was the object of specifying both A LOAN and a DEPOSIT?[35] [Both were] required. For if A LOAN only had been mentioned it might have been presumed that only in that case did R. Tarfon maintain his view, because a loan is intended to be spent,[36] but that in the case of a deposit which is in existence[37] he agrees with R. Akiba.[38] And if the former[39] only had been mentioned it might have been assumed that only in that case did R. Akiba maintain his view[40] but that in the other case[41] he agrees with R. Tarfon.[42] [Hence both were] necessary.

What is meant by TO THE ONE WHO IS UNDER THE GREATEST DISADVANTAGE? — R. Jose the son of R. Hanina replied: To the one who is under the greatest disadvantage in respect of proof.[43] R. Johanan replied: [The reference is] to the kethubah of the wife[44] [who was given this privilege] in order to maintain pleasantness[45] [between her and her husband].[46] [This dispute is the same] as that between the following Tannaim: R. Benjamin said, To the one who is under the greatest disadvantage in respect of proof.[43] and this is the proper [course to take]; R. Eleazar said.[The reference is] to the kethubah of the wife[44] [who was given this privilege] in order to maintain pleasantness[45] [between her and her husband].[46] IF HE LEFT PRODUCE THAT WAS DETACHED. As to R. Akiba,[47] what was the point in discussing the BALANCE when[48] the entire estate belongs to the heirs?[49] — The law is so indeed,[50] but since R. Tarfon spoke of the BALANCE, he also mentioned the BALANCE.

---

(1) Because the condition is contrary to the Pentateuchal injunction of אל-תונו (Lev. XXV, 24).

(2) Now, since Rab recognizes the invalidity of a condition that is contrary to Pentateuchal law of overreaching, how could he be said to regard a similar condition elsewhere as valid?

(3) The condition being 'and because a husband's right of heirship is, in Rab's opinion, a Rabbinical enactment which has not the same force as that of a Pentateuchal law.

(4) I.e., that a condition which is contrary to a Pentateuchal law is null.

(5) That WHEN SHE DIES HE IS HER HEIR. The answer being in the affirmative, the facts are directly opposite to the statement made supra by Rab.

(6) Such, e.g. as a renunciation by a husband of his rights to the usufruct of his wife's property.
(7) Because in his opinion the Sages have impaired to their enactments the same force as that of a Pentateuchal law.
(8) V. supra note 2.
(9) Cf. supra note 3.
(10) Viz., and extending R. Gamaliel's principle to a Rabbinic enactment applies it also to the usufruct. This being the case, how is Rab's statement supra to be understood?
(11) Bek. 52b.
(12) Cf. Lev. XXV, 8ff.
(13) This, it is at present assumed, is the meaning of וינכה להן מן הדמים.
(14) R. Johanan b. Beroka.
(15) An inheritance to which one is Pentateuchally entitled does not return in the Jubilee Year (cf. Bek. 52b).
(16) R. Johanan b. Beroka.
(17) By the members of the wife's family. Lit., 'what is their doing?' Since the husband's right is only in Rabbinic law the members of the wife's family, who are the original owners Pentateuchally, should be entitled to the return of the inheritance to them without any monetary payment on their part.
(18) In explanation of the difficulty as to why such all inheritance should be restored in the Jubilee Year.
(19) It is derogatory for a family that strangers should be interred in their graveyard while their own members should have to seek burial in another family's graveyard.
(20) Lit., 'and what?'
(21) Since it is a husband's duty to bury his dead wife.
(22) The place where, on returning from burial, the funeral escort halts to offer, with due ceremonial, consolation to the mourners. On returning from a burial the funeral escort halted on the way at a certain station where seven times they stood up and sat down on the ground, to offer comfort and consolation to the mourners or to weep and lament for the departed.
(23) They may force the buyer to take back the purchase price and so cancel the sale.
(24) B.B. 100b, Bek. 52b. Cf. supra p. 530. n. 9. Now since Rab specifically stated here that 'a husband's right of inheritance is Pentateuchal' how could he be said to hold that such a right is only Rabbinical.
(25) Who claims her kethubah.
(26) Claiming the repayment of his debt.
(27) Expecting their inheritance.
(28) This is explained infra.
(29) The deposit or the loan
(30) Widows and creditors.
(31) Before they are authorized to seize any portion of the estate.
(32) The inheritance passes into their possession as soon as the parson whose heirs they are dies. Since they are the legal possessors, the others, whose claims have yet to be substantiated by an oath, cannot deprive them of their possessions, for the movables of orphans are not pledged to the creditors of their father.
(33) The heirs, the widow or the creditor.
(34) This is explained infra.
(35) Could not the law of the one be inferred from the other?
(36) The amount of the loan not being in existence at the time the man died it cannot pass into the possession of his heirs before it had been collected from the debtor.
(37) At the time the depositor died, since a deposit must never be spent by the bailee.
(38) That, since it is in existence, it passes into the possession of the heirs.
(39) A DEPOSIT.
(40) Cf supra note 4.
(41) A loan.
(42) Cf. supra note 2.
(43) Sc. the holder of the last dated bond by which such landed estate only may be seized as had been sold after that date.
(44) Who, being unable to exert herself like a man in the search for any possible possessions of her husband, is regarded as 'THE ONE WHO IS UNDER THE GREATEST DISADVANTAGE'.

(45) חינא lit., 'grace'.
(46) While he is alive. Her uncertainty in respect of her settlement after his death might have led to quarrels and strife. Aliter; That women may readily consent to marriage. Had they not been assured that they would have the first claim upon their husband's estate they might refuse all offers of marriage (cf. Rashi). Aliter; That women may be attractive to their husbands by their attachment and devotion which would result from the sense of security they would feel in the provision fist their future (cf. T.J., Aruch and R. Han. in Tosaf. s.v. לכתובת a.l.).
(47) Who regards the heirs as the possessors because WHEREAS OTHERS MUST TAKE AN OATH THE HEIRS NEED NOT.
(48) For the very same reason (cf. previous note).
(49) The seizure on the part of the widow or a creditor of any movable portion of such property would consequently be invalid.
(50) Lit., yes, so also', even if the creditor or the widow has seized any portion of the estate the heirs' right to it is in no way affected and the seized property must be returned to them in its entirety.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 84b

. But would R. Akiba[1] maintain that seizure[2] is never legally valid?[3] Raba replied in the name of R. Nahman: Seizure[4] is valid where it took place during the lifetime [of the deceased].[5] Now according to R. Tarfon,[6] where [must the produce] be kept?[7] — Both Rab and Samuel replied: It must be heaped up and lie in a public domain, but [if it was kept] in an alley[8] no [seizure is valid]. Both R. Johanan and Resh Lakish, however, said: Even [if the produce lay] in an alley [seizure is valid].

Certain judges once gave their decision in agreement with R. Tarfon, and Resh Lakish[9] reversed their verdict. Said R. Johanan to him, 'You have acted as [if R. Akiba's ruling were a law] of the Torah'![10] May it be assumed that they[11] differ on this principle; One Master upholds the view that if [in giving a decision] a law cited in a Mishnah had been overlooked the decision must be reversed[12] and the other Master upholds the view that if a law cited in a Mishnah had been overlooked the decision need not be reversed?[13] — No; all agree that if [in giving a decision] a law cited in a Mishnah had been overlooked the decision must be reversed, but this is the point at issue between them:[14] One Master holds that the halachah is in agreement with the opinion of R. Akiba [only when he differs] from a colleague of his but not from his master,[15] while the other Master holds that the halachah [is in agreement with him] even [if he differs] from his master. If you prefer[16] I might say; All agree that the halachah agrees with R. Akiba [only when he differs] from a colleague of his but not from his master. Here, however. the point at issue is this: One Master holds R. Tarfon to have been his[17] master and the other Master holds him to have been his colleague. Alternatively it might be said: All agree that he[18] was his[19] colleague; but the point at issue between them[20] is this: One Master maintains that the statement[21] was that 'The halachah [agrees with R. Akiba]'[22] and the other Master maintains that the statement[21] was that 'one should be inclined [in favour of a ruling of R. Akiba]'.[23]

R. Johanan's relatives seized in an alley a cow that belonged to orphans. When they appeared before R. Johanan, he said to them, 'Your seizure is quite lawful'. R. Simeon b. Lakish, however, before whom they subsequently appeared, said to them. 'Go and return it'.[24] 'What can I do', said R. Johanan to whom they came again, 'when one of equal authority[25] differs from me?'

[A creditor] once seized an ox from the herdsman of [his debtor's] orphans. The creditor said, 'I seized it during the lifetime [of the debtor]'[26] and the herdsman said, 'He seized it after the debtor's death'.[27] They appeared before R. Nahman who asked the herdsman, 'Have you witnesses that [the creditor] has seized it?' — 'No', the other replied. [R. Nahman thereupon] said to him: Since he could have said, 'It came into my possession through purchase'[28] he is also entitled to say. 'I seized it during the lifetime [of the debtor]'. But did not Resh Lakish state; The law of presumptive possession is inapplicable to living creatures?[29] — The case of an ox that was entrusted to a herdsman is different [from that of other living creatures].[30]

The people of the Nasi's[31] household once seized in an alley a bondwoman belonging to orphans. At a session held by R. Abbahu, R. Hanina b. Papi and R. Isaac Nappaha in whose presence sat also R. Abba they[32] were told, 'Your seizure is quite lawful'. 'Is it', said R. Abba to them,[33] 'because these people are of the Nasi's household that you are favouring them? Surely, when certain judges once gave a decision in agreement with R. Tarfon Resh Lakish reversed their decision'.[34]

Yemar b. Hashu had a money claim against a certain person who died and left a boat. 'Go', he said to his agent, 'and seize it'. [The latter] went and seized it, but R. Papa and R. Huna the son of R. Joshua met him and told him, 'You are seizing [the ship] on behalf of a creditor and thereby you are causing loss to others,[35] and R. Johanan ruled: He who seizes [a debtor's property] on behalf of a creditor and thereby causes loss to others[35]

---

(1) V. supra note 1.

(2) Cf. note 3.

(3) This is a mere enquiry (v. Rashi). R. Tan, regards it as an objection. the assumption of the invalidity of seizure being contradictory to the Mishnah supra 80b, where the woman awaiting levirate marriage, who was first to take possession of the detached produce, is declared to have acquired it; (v. Tosaf. s.v. ולרבי a.l.).

(4) Of chattels.

(5) So that the chattels had never for one moment passed into the possession of the heirs.

(6) Who maintains that WHOEVER SEIZES IT FIRST ACQUIRES POSSESSION, because the heirs do not become its possessors as soon as the man dies.

(7) That the seizure should be valid.

(8) Which is frequented by few people. In such a spot where meshikah (v. Glos.) is valid (cf. B.B. 84b) the produce, even according to R. Tarfon, passes into the possession of the heirs as soon as its original owner dies, and seizure by any other person is invalid.

(9) Who follows the ruling of R. Akiba.

(10) An expression of disapproval. Only a decision which is contrary to the Torah must be reversed. A Rabbinical ruling, however, has no such force, and though a judge may be expected to act according to a certain ruling, his decision must not be reversed if he differed from it.

(11) R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.

(12) Though R. Akiba's ruling is not explicitly contained in a Mishnah, but reported by Amoraim, it is considered a Mishnaic ruling since the law is in agreement with his opinion whenever it is opposed by no more than one individual. Cf. Sanh. 33a.

(13) Is it likely, however, that any authority would uphold the latter view?

(14) R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.

(15) R. Tarfon was sometimes regarded as the master of R. Akiba (v. infra).

(16) Since the last mentioned view seems unlikely.

(17) R. Akiba's.

(18) R. Tarfon.

(19) R. Akiba's.

(20) R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.

(21) On the reliability of R. Akiba's rulings.

(22) Hence the action of Resh Lakish in reversing the decision of the judges mentioned.

(23) I.e. , a ruling of his has not the force of an halachah though a judge is expected to follow it rather than that of any other individual who is opposed to it. Since, however, a decision has been given to the contrary the decision must stand. Hence R. Johanan's objection to the action of Resh Lakish (v. supra n. 11).

(24) In agreement with R. Akiba that seizure of movables for debt after the death of the original owner is invalid, the property having passed, at the moment he died, into the possession of his heirs.

(25) V. Rashi. Lit., 'who is corresponding to me'.

(26) So that it never came into the possession of the orphans.

(27) Cf. supra note 3 mutatis mutandis.
(28) And his statement could not be disproved on account of the absence of witnesses to testify to the seizure.
(29) הגודרות lit., 'those kept In the fold', since (a) they stray into other people's folds and (b) are sometimes taken accidentally from the pasture lands by a shepherd to whom they do not belong. (v. B.B. 36a. Cit. 20b). Now, since the creditor's right to the retention of the animal can only be based on that of presumptive possession, which is here inapplicable, why did Rash Lakish allow the creditor to retain it?
(30) A herdsman is presumed to take good care that his flock stray not into other people's folds, or be seized by other shepherds.
(31) Judah II.
(32) The people of the Nasi's household.
(33) R. Abbahu and his colleagues.
(34) Supra.
(35) Other creditors.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 85a

does not legally acquire it'.[1] Thereupon they[2] seized it themselves, R. Papa rowing[3] the boat while R. Huna the son of R. Joshua pulled it by the rope. One Master then declared, 'I have acquired all the ship'[4] and the other similarly declared, 'I have acquired all of it'.[5] They were met by R. Phinehas b. Ammi who said to them: Both Rab and Samuel ruled that '[Seizure is valid] only if [the produce] was piled up and lay in a public domain'.[6] 'We too', they replied, 'have seized it at the main current of the river'.[7] When they appeared before Raba he said to them, 'Ye white geese[8] that strip the people of their cloaks;[9] thus ruled R. Nahman; [The seizure is valid] only if it took place during the lifetime [of the original owner].

The men of Be-Hozae[10] once claimed a sum of money from Abimi the son of R. Abbahu, who sent it to them by the hand of Hama the son of Rabbah b. Abbahu. He duly went there and paid them, but when he asked them, 'Return to me the bond', they replied. 'This payment was made in settlement of some other claims'.[9] He came before R. Abbahu [to complain] and the latter asked him, 'Have you witnesses that you have paid them?' — 'No', he replied. 'Since', the former said to him, 'they could plead[11] that the payment was never made,[12] they are also entitled to plead that the payment was made in settlement of some other claims'.[13]

What is the law in respect of the agent's liability to refund? — R. Ashi replied; We have to consider the facts. If he[14] said to him. 'Secure the bond and pay the money' he[15] must refund it; [but if he[14] said.] 'Pay the money and secure the bond', he is under no obligation to refund it. The law, however, is not so. He[15] must refund it in either case, because the other[14] may well say. 'I deputed you to improve my position, not to make it worse

There was a certain woman with whom a case[16] of bonds was once deposited and when the heirs [of the depositor] came to claim it from her she said, 'I seized them[17] during [the depositor's] lifetime'.[18] R. Nahman to whom she came said to her, 'Have you witnesses that it[19] was claimed from you during [the depositor's] lifetime and that you refused to return it?' — 'No', she replied. 'If so', he said to her, 'your seizure is one that took place after [the owner's] death,[20] and such a seizure is invalid.[21]

A woman was once ordered[22] to take an oath[23] at the court of Raba, but when R. Hisda's daughter[24] said to him, 'I know that she is suspected of [taking false] oaths', Raba transferred the oath to her opponent.[25]

On another occasion R. Papa and R. Adda b. Mattena sat in his presence when a bond was brought to him. Said R. Papa to him. 'I know that this bond is paid up'. 'Is there, [Raba] asked him, 'any other man with the Master [to confirm the statement]?' 'No', he replied. 'Although', the other said to him, 'the Master is present [to give evidence] there is no validity [in the testimony of] one witness'.[26] Said R. Adda b. Mattena to him, 'Should not R.Papa be [deemed as reliable] as the daughter of R. Hisda?'[27] — 'As to the daughter of R. Hisda [he replied] I am certain of her;[28] I am not sure, however, about the Master'.[29] Said R. Papa: Now that the Master has stated [that a judge who can assert,] 'I am certain of a person', may rely upon that person's evidence,[30] I would tear up a bond on the evidence of my son Abba Mar of whose reliability I am certain. 'I would tear up'! Is such an act conceivable?[31] — He rather [meant to say,] 'I would impair a bond[32] on his evidence'.

A woman was once ordered to take[33] an oath at the court of R. Bibi b. Abaye, when her opponent suggested to them, 'Let her rather come and take the oath in our town,[34] where she might possibly feel ashamed [of her action] and confess'. 'Write out said she to them, 'the verdict in my favour[35] so that after I shall have taken the oath it may be given to me'. 'Write it out for her', ordered R. Bibi b. Abaye. 'Because', said R. Papi. 'you are descendants of short-lived people you speak frail words;[36] surely Raba stated, 'An attestation[37] by judges that was written before the witnesses have identified their signatures is invalid',[38] from which it is evident [that such an attestation] has the appearance of a false declaration, and so here also [the verdict][39] would appear to contain a false statement'. This conclusion,[40] however, is futile[41] [as may be inferred] from a statement of R. Nahman, who said; R. Meir ruled that even if [a husband] found it[42] on a rubbish heap, and then signed and gave it to her, it is valid; and even the Rabbis[43] differ from R. Meir only in respect of letters of divorce where it is necessary that the writing shall be done specifically in her name, but in respect of other legal documents they agree with him,[44] for R. Assi stated in the name of R. Johanan, 'A man may not borrow again on a bond on which he has once borrowed and which he has repaid.[45] because the obligation [incurred by the first loan][46] was cancelled;[47] the reason then is because 'the obligation was cancelled', but that [the contents of the document] have the appearance

---

(1) One has no right to acquire a benefit for one man at the expense of another, v. Git. 11b.

(2) Who were also among the deceased's creditors.

(3) A form of acquisition.

(4) Rowing being in his opinion the proper form of acquiring legal possession of a ship.

(5) Cf. supra n. 6 mutatis mutandis.

(6) Supra 84b, infra 86b. The boat presumably lying at the river bank which, not being frequented by many boats, has the status of an alley, could not, therefore, be lawfully seized and acquired.

(7) On which many boats ply and which has the status of a public thoroughfare where seizure is legal.

(8) Metaph., 'old men'.

(9) By giving a decision in their own favour and thus robbing the other creditors.

(10) V. supra p. 504, n. 5. (13) Lit., 'these are (from other) sides'.

(11) In the absence of witnesses to testify that the debt had been paid.

(12) לא היו דברים מעולם lit., 'the things never were'.

(13) V. supra p. 536, n. 23.

(14) The man who sent him.

(15) The agent.

(16) מלוגא (rt. מלד 'to pluck'), a bag made of skins from which the hair has been plucked.

(17) The bonds.

(18) 'In payment of the debt he owed me'.

(19) The case of bonds.

(20) As long as he was alive the bonds were held by her as a deposit which was virtually in the possession of the depositor.

(21) Since at the death of the depositor the bonds had passed directly into the possession of his heirs.

(22) Lit., 'became liable'.

(23) To confirm her denial of a monetary claim that had been advanced against bet.

(24) Raba's wife.

(25) The claimant who in such a case (cf. Shebu. 44b) is entitled to the sum claimed on confirming it by an oath
(26) [Asheri, Alfasi and Isaiah Trani omit 'No . . . one witness'. According to this reading Raba required the confirmation by another person because R. Papa was related to one of the parties, v. Tosaf, and Strashun].
(27) Whose testimony was regarded by Raba, supra, as sufficient to disqualify the defendant from taking an oath.
(28) That I can rely upon her evidence.
(29) [Did he mean to imply that he suspected R. Papa of lying? This is unlikely in view of the discussion that follows in which R. Papa seemed to betray no resentment at the affront. Yet this is the only meaning which can be attached to the text of cur. edd. Preference is consequently to be given to the reading of Asheri and Alfasi (v. n. 1); and what Raba meant was that, as a relative, R. Papa's evidence could not be accepted].
(30) Even though no other witness is available Lit.. 'It is a thing'.
(31) In money matters, surely, the evidence of two witnesses is required.
(32) Sc. the holder would have to confirm the statement in the bond by an oath before an order for repayment could he issued (Tosaf.).
(33) Lit., 'become liable'.
(34) So Bah. Cur. edd. omit 'our'.
(35) זכוותא, pl, of זכותא, 'favourable judgment'.
(36) Abaye was a descendant of the house of Eli who were condemned to die young (cf. I Sam. II, 32). ממולאי and מוליתא (rt. מלל 'to crush') 'frail things', 'frail words', 'frail or short-lived people'. A similar expression in Arabic means 'to be foolish'. Cf. B.B. 137b, Sone. ed. p. 582, n. 6.
(37) Of a document, confirming the signature of the witnesses.
(38) Git 26b, supra 21b.
(39) Which the woman requested and the wording of which would have implied that when it was written she had already taken the oath.
(40) That a document containing a statement which at the time of writing was not yet true is invalid even after the act it mentions has materialized.
(41) Lit., 'and it is not'.
(42) A letter of divorce he has prepared for his wife.
(43) Who denied the validity of the document.
(44) That the validity of the document (cf. supra n. 4) is not affected.
(45) On the same day that he borrowed. Though the bond in such a case is not antedated it may not be used again.
(46) Viz., the right to seize the debtor's property.
(47) When it was repaid. The second loan, since no new bond was issued in connection with it, has only the force of a loan by word of mouth which does not entitle the creditor to seize any of the debtor's sold property. Should the first bond, however, be used for the second loan, the lender might unlawfully seize property to which he is not legally entitled. B.M. 17a.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 85b

of a false statement[1] is a matter which need not be taken into consideration.

A certain man once deposited seven pearls, wrapped in a sheet, with R. Miasha the son of the son of R. Joshua h. Levi. As R. Miasha died intestate[2] they came to R. Ammi.[3] 'In the first instance', he said to them, 'I know that R. Miasha the son of the son of R. Joshua b. Levi was not a wealthy man,[4] and secondly. does not the man[5] indicate the marks?'[6] This ruling, however, applies only to a man who was not a frequent visitor at the bailee's house,[7] but if he was a frequent visitor there [the marks he indicates are no evidence of ownership since] it might well be assumed that another person has made the deposit and he happened to see it. A certain man once deposited a silver cup with Nasa; and Hasa died intestate.[8] R. Nahman before whom [the heirs] appeared said to them, 'I know that Hasa was not a wealthy man? and, furthermore, does he[5] not indicate the mark?'[9] This, however, applies only to a man who was not an habitual visitor at the bailee's house,[7] but if he was a frequent visitor there [the mark he indicates is no valid proof since] it might be said that another person had deposited [the cup] and he happened to see it.

A certain man once deposited a silk cloth[10] with R. Dimi the brother of R. Safra, and R. Dimi died intestate.[2] R. Abba, to whom [the depositor] came [to submit his claim.] said to them,[11] 'In the first place I know that R. Dimi was not a wealthy man[4] and, secondly, the man is here indicating the distinguishing mark.' This, however, applies only to a man who was not a frequent visitor[7] at the bailee's house, but if he was a frequent visitor there [the indication of the mark is no valid proof since] it might well be suggested that another man deposited the object and he happened to see it. A man once said[12] to those around him,[13] 'Let my estate be given to Tobiah', and then he died. [A man named] Tobiah came [to claim the estate]. 'Behold', said R. Johanan. 'Tobiah has come'.[14] Now if he said, 'Tobiah'[15] and 'R. Tobiah'[16] came, [the latter is not entitled to the estate, since] he said 'To Tobiah' but not 'To R. Tobiah'. If he,[16] however, was on familiar terms with him[17] [the estate must be given to him, since the omission of title might have been due to] the fact that he was on intimate terms with him. If two Tobiahs appeared,[18] one of whom was a neighbour[19] and the other a scholar, the scholar is to be given precedence.[20] If one [of the Tobiahs] is a relative and the other a scholar, the scholar is given precedence.[20] The question was asked: What is the position where one is a neighbour[19] and the other a relative? — Come and hear; Better is a neighbour that is near than a brother far off[21] if both[22] are relatives, or both are neighbours. or both are scholars the decision is left to the discretion[23] of the judges.

Come, said Raba to the son of R. Hiyya b. Abin, I will tell you a fine saying of your father's:[24] Although[25] Samuel said, 'If a man sold a bond of indebtedness to another person and then he[26] released the debtor, the latter is legally released;[27] and, moreover, even [a creditor's] heir may[28] release [the debtor]' Samuel, nevertheless, admits that, where a wife brought in to her husband[29] a bond of indebtedness and then remitted it, the debt is not to be considered remitted, because her husband's rights are equal to hers.[30]

A relative of R. Nahman once sold her kethubah for the goodwill.[31] She was divorced and then died. Thereupon [the buyers] came to claim [the amount of the kethubah] from her daughter.[32] 'Is there no one', said R. Nahman to those around him,[33] 'who can tender her advice?

---

(1) The bond having been written not for the second but for the first loan.

(2) Lit., 'he did not order'. And his heirs maintained that the pearls might have belonged to the deceased from whom they inherited them.

(3) To obtain his ruling on the ownership of the deposit.

(4) And he could not consequently have been the owner of costly objects.

(5) The depositor.

(6) That the pearls were (a) wrapped up in a sheet and (b) their number was seven (Rashi. Cf., however, Tosaf. s.v. קיהיב.

(7) Lit.,' that be was not in the habit of entering and going out from there'.

(8) He was accidentally drowned (v. Yeb. 121b).

(9) That it was a silver cup.

(10) מטכסא cf. , silk or silk cloth.

(11) To the heirs.

(12) While he was on his death bed.

(13) Lit., 'to them'.

(14) Sc. the estate must be given to this man.

(15) I.e., if he assigned his estate to a person whom he named without describing him by the title by which he is usually known.

(16) A scholar of the name of Tobiah who bears the title 'R(abbi)'.

(17) The testator.

(18) Claiming the estate.

(19) Of the deceased.

(20) A person is assumed to be more favourably disposed towards a scholar than towards any other person. On the merit and heavenly reward of him who benefits scholars, v. Bet. 34b.
(21) Prov. XXVII, 10.
(22) Who claim the estate.
(23) שוחדא _ שודא 'choice', 'singling out', 'discretion' (Jast.). Aliter. 'Favour', 'gift'. i.e., the judges in their verdict may favour, or make a gift of the estate to any of the claimants they prefer (cf. R. Tam in Tosaf. s.v. שודא and Levy s.v.). Aliter: שודא _ שדי 'to throw', i.e., the judges must cast about for (gauge) the opinion of the testator to determine which of the claimants he preferred (Rashi). Cf. Golds. שודא ist unverkennbar das syn. סודא, סוודא (confabulatio, colloquium) Rat, Beschluss der Richter'.
(24) Lit 'which your father said'.
(25) This is the reading in the parallel passage elsewhere (cf. B.B. 147b). The reading here is הא, lit., 'that', 'as to that'.
(26) The seller.
(27) Because the buyer of a bond is entitled only to the same rights as those of the seller and since the latter, by his release of the creditor, has forfeited his claims upon the debt, the former also forfeits them; v. Kid.. Sonc. ed. p. 239. n. 1.
(28) When he inherits the estate of the creditor.
(29) On marriage.
(30) Lit., 'his hand is like her hand'; hence it is not within her power to remit the debt without her husband's consent.
(31) Cf. Rashi. טובת הנאה lit , 'the goodness of a favour' (cf. the English idiom, 'a game for love'), i.e., receiving no full price for her kethubah from the buyers, who purchase it as a speculation in case her husband dies first it divorces her. Should she die first, they have no claim to the kethubah.
(32) Who was the heir to her mother's kethubah.
(33) Lit., 'to them'.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 86a

She might remit[1] her mother's kethubah in favour of her father,[2] and then she may inherit it frons him'.[3] When she heard this she went and remitted it [in her father's favour]. Thereupon R. Nahman said: 'We have put ourselves in the [unenviable] position of legal advisers'.[4] What was the opinion that he held at first[5] and what made him change it afterwards?[6] — At first he thought [of the Scriptural text.] And that thou hide not thyself from thine own flesh,[7] but ultimately he realized that [the position of] a noted personality is different [from that of the general public].[8]

[Reverting to] the main text; Samuel said, 'If a man sold a bond of indebtedness to another person, and then he released the debtor, the latter is released; and, moreover, even [a creditor's] heir may release [the debtor].'[9] Said R. Huna the son of R. Joshua; But if he[10] is clever he[11] rattles some coins in his[12] face and [the latter][13] writes the bond[14] in his[15] name.

Amemar said; He[16] who adjudicates [liability] in an action [for damage] caused indirectly would here also[17] adjudge damages[18] to the amount [recoverable] on a valid bond,[19] but he who does not adjudicate [liability] in an action for damage caused indirectly[20] would here adjudge damages only to the extent of the value of the mere scrap of paper.[21] Such[22] an action was [once tried] when through Rafram's insistence[23] R. Ashi[24] was compelled to order the collection [of damages][25] in the manner of a beam that is fit for decorative mouldings.[26]

Amemar stated in the name of R. Hama; If a man has against him, the claim of his wife's kethubah and that of a creditor, and he owns a plot of land and has also ready money, the creditor's claim is settled by means of the ready money while the woman's claim is settled by means of the land, the creditor being treated in accordance with his rights,[27] and the wife in accordance with her rights.[28] If, however, he owns only one plot of land and it suffices to meet the claim of one only, it is to be given to the creditor;[29] it is not to be given to the wife. What is the reason?[30] — More than the man's desire to marry is the woman's desire to be married.[31]

Said R. Papa to R. Hama, Is it a fact that you have stated in the name of Raba; If a man, against whom there was a monetary claim owned a plot of land, and who, when his creditor approached hini with the claim for repayment, replied, 'Collect your loan from the land', he is to be ordered [by the court,] 'You must yourself go and sell it, bring [the net proceeds] and deliver it to him'?[32]

'No', the other replied. 'Tell me then', [the first said to him,] 'how the incident[33] had actually occurred'. '[The debtor]' the other replied, 'alleged that his money belonged to[34] an idolater; and since he acted in an improper manner[35] he was similarly treated in an improper manner'.[36]

Said K. Kahana to R. Papa; According to the statement you made that the repayment of [a debt to] a creditor is a religious act,[37] what is the ruling where [a debtor] said, 'I am not disposed to perform a religious act'?[38] — 'We', the other replied. 'have learned: This[39] applies only to negative precepts, but in the case of positive precepts, as for instance, when a man is told, 'Make a sukkah'[40] and he does not make it [or, 'Perform the commandment of the] lulab'[41] and he does not perform it

---

(1) Lit., 'let her go and remit'.

(2) Since, as has been stated (supra 85b ad fin.), even a creditor's heir may release the debtor'. The daughter is in this case the heir to a debt (the kethubah) which her father owed her mother who sold it to others who, like the buyers of a bond, lose all their claims upon it as soon as the heir has remitted it.

(3) Upon whom the buyers have no claim.

(4) עורכי הדיינין lit., 'those who arrange (the pleas) before the judges'. A judge is forbidden to act even indirectly as legal adviser to one of the parties. Cf. Aboth I, 8, Sonc. ed. p. 6. n. 1.

(5) When he tendered advice.

(6) Lit., 'and in the end what did he think?' sc. why did he finally reproach himself for acting as 'legal adviser'?

(7) Isa. LVIII, 7, implying that it is one's duty to come to the assistance of one's relative.

(8) A judge, in order to be free from all suspicion of partiality, must subject himself to greater restrictions and must consequently tender no legal advice whatever to line of the parties in a lawsuit, even in cases where the action is not to be tried by him, v. supra 52b.

(9) V. p. 541, nn. 15ff.

(10) The buyer.

(11) As soon as he buys the bond and before the creditor has had time to think of remitting it to the debtor.

(12) The debtor.

(13) Being naturally in need of ready money.

(14) For the amount involved. As soon as he buys the bond and before the creditor has time to think of remitting it to the debtor.

(15) The buyer's.

(16) I.e., R. Meir (cf. B.K. 100a f).

(17) Lit., 'by it'; in the case of a bond the debt in which had been remitted to the debtor after the creditor had sold the bond of indebtedness.

(18) In favour of the buyer.

(19) The creditor who was the cause of the damage must compensate the buyer for his loss.

(20) As to the dispute on this point v. B.K. 116b.

(21) On which the bond is written, since the creditor might plead that he is only liable for the piece of paper which he sold. For the debt itself he is not liable since it was only indirectly that he caused the loss of it.

(22) Cf.. however, Infra n. 17.

(23) By his legal and scholastic arguments.

(24) Who was the adjudicator in the action (cf however, infra n. 17).

(25) From, the creditor who remitted the debt. According to another interpretation (cf. Rashi on the parallel passage, B.K. 98b) R. Ashi in his childhood had destroyed a bond of indebtedness, and Rafram made him pay for it in accordance with the ruling of R. Meir (v. supra note 8).

(26) Metaph. As the beam is smooth and straight and of the best quality of wood so was the collection made to the full extent of the damage and of the best of the creditor's estate.

(27) As he advanced ready money he is justly entitled to ready money.

(28) As her statutory kethubah is secured on the husband's lands she is entitled to his land only. The amount (if the kethubah corresponding to the on barzel (v. Glos.) property, though this might have consisted of ready money, is, like the statutory kethubah with which it is amalgamated, also secured on the husband's lands only.

(29) If the bond of indebtedness and the kethubah bear the same date. Otherwise, the holder of the document bearing the earlier date takes precedence.

(30) For the preference of the creditor where the documents were issued on the same date.

(31) And the disadvantage in respect of the collection of her kethubah would not in any way deter her from marriage. If a creditor, on the other hand, were to experience undue difficulty in the collection of his debt he might decide to turn away from his door all future borrowers.

(32) Is it possible that a debtor would be expected to go to all this trouble when the creditor's security was not that of ready money but of land?

(33) That gave rise to the erroneous report.

(34) Lit., 'attached his money to'.

(35) By attempting to deprive his creditor from his due.

(36) In being ordered to find a buyer for his land, though elsewhere (cf. supra n. 6) it is the task of the creditor to do so.

(37) V. 'Ar. 22a.

(38) [Since, that is to say, the payment of a debt is a religious obligation, where is the sanction for the employment of compulsory measures to make one pay his debts? Others connect the question with the preceding case of one who ascribes his money to a non-Jew so as to evade payment, v. Tosaf. s.v. אמר].

(39) That flogging is administered and the sinner is thereby purged.

(40) The festive booth for the Feast of Tabernacles (cf Lev. XXIII, 34ff).

(41) 'Palm-branch', the term applied to the festive wreath used in the Tabernacles ritual and consisting of four species of which the palm-branch is one (cf. Lev. XXIII, 40).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 86b

he is flogged[1] until his soul departeth.[2]

Rami b. Hama enquired of R. Hisda: What is the ruling where [a husband said to his wife,] 'Here is your letter of divorce but you shall be divorced thereby only after [the lapse of] thirty days'. and she went and laid it down at the side of a public domain?[3] — 'She', the other replied, 'is not divorced, by reason of the ruling of Rab and Samuel, both of whom have stated, 'It must be heaped up and lie in a public domain'[4] and the sides of a public domain are regarded as the public domain itself.[5] On the contrary! She should be deemed divorced by reason of a ruling of R. Nahman, who stated in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha, 'If a man said to another, "Pull this cow, but it shall pass into your possession Only after thirty days", he legally acquires it even if it stands at the time in the meadow';[6] and a meadow presumably has, has it not, the same status as the sides of a public domain?[7] — No; a meadow has a status of its own[8] and the sides of a public domain, too, have a status of their own.[9] Another version: He[10] said to him,[11] 'She[12] is divorced by reason of a ruling of R. Nahman,[13] the sides of a public domain having the same status as a meadow'. — 'On the contrary! She should not be regarded as divorced by reason of a ruling of Rab and Samuel.[13] for have not the sides of a public domain the same status as a public domain?' — 'No; a public domain has a status of its own[8] and the sides of a public domain, too, have a status of their own'.[9]

MISHNAH. IF A HUSBAND SET UP HIS WIFE AS A SHOPKEEPER[14] OR APPOINTED HER AS HIS ADMINISTRATRIX HE MAY IMPOSE UPON HER AN OATH[15] WHENEVER HE DESIRES TO DO SO. R. ELIEZER SAID; [SUCH AN OATH[15] MAY BE IMPOSED UPON HER] EVEN IN RESPECT OF HER SPINDLE AND HER DOUGH.[16]

GEMARA. The question was asked; Does R. Eliezer mean [that the oath[17] is to be imposed] by implication[18] or does he mean that it may be imposed directly?[19] Come and hear: They[20] said to R. Eliezer, 'No one can live with a serpent in the same basket'.[21] Now if you will assume that R. Eliezer meant the imposition of a direct oath[19] one can well understand the argument;[22] but if you were to suggest [that he meant the oath to be imposed] by implication only, what [it may be objected] could this[23] matter to her?[24] — She might tell him, 'Since you are so particular with me I am unable to live with you'.[25]

Come and hear:[26] If a man did not exempt his wife[27] from a vow[28] and from an oath[29] and set her up as his saleswoman or appointed her as his administratrix, he may impose upon her an oath[29] whenever he desires to do so. If, however, he did not set her up as his saleswoman and did not appoint her as his administratrix, he may not impose any oath upon her. R. Eliezer said: Although he did not set her up as his saleswoman and did not appoint her as his administratrix, he may nevertheless impose upon her an oath wherever he desires to do so, because there is no woman who was not administratrix for a short time, at least, during the lifetime of her husband, in respect of her spindle and her dough. Thereupon they said to him: No one can live with a serpent in the same basket. Thus you may infer that [R. Eliezer meant that the oath[29] may he imposed] directly. This is conclusive.

MISHNAH. [IF A HUSBAND] GAVE TO HIS WIFE AN UNDERTAKING IN WRITING, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM UPON YOU FOR EITHER VOW[30] OR OATH',[31] HE CANNOT IMPOSE AN OATH[32] UPON HER. HE MAY, HOWEVER, IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER HEIRS[33] AND UPON HER LAWFUL SUCCESSORS.[34] [IF HE WROTE,] I HAVE NO CLAIM FOR EITHER VOW[30] OR OATH[31] EITHER UPON YOU, OR UPON YOUR HEIRS OR UPON YOUR LAWFUL SUCCESSORS', HE MAY NOT IMPOSE AN OATH EITHER UPON HER OR UPON HER HEIRS OR UPON HER LAWFUL SUCCESSORS. HIS HEIRS, HOWEVER, MAY[35] IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER, UPON HER HEIRS OR UPON HER LAWFUL SUCCESSORS. [IF THE WRITTEN UNDERTAKING READ.] 'NEITHER I NOR MY HEIRS NOR MY LAWFUL SUCCESSORS[36] SHALL HAVE ANY CLAIM UPON YOU OR UPON YOUR HEIRS OR UPON YOUR LAWFUL SUCCESSORS FOR EITHER VOW OR OATH', NEITHER HE NOR HIS HEIRS NOR HIS LAWFUL SUCCESSORS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH EITHER UPON HER OR UPON HER HEIRS OR UPON HER LAWFUL SUCCESSORS.

IF SHE[37] WENT FROM HER HUSBAND'S GRAVE TO HER FATHER'S HOUSE,[38] OR RETURNED TO HER FATHER-IN-LAW'S HOUSE BUT WAS NOT MADE ADMINISTRATRIX, THE HEIRS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER;[39] BUT IF SHE WAS MADE ADMINISTRATRIX THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER IN RESPECT OF [HER ADMINISTRATION] DURING THE SUBSEQUENT PERIOD[40] BUT NOT IN RESPECT OF THE PAST.[41] GEMARA. What is the nature of the oath?[42] — Rab Judah replied in the name of Rab:

---

(1) In an endeavour to coerce him to perform the precept.

(2) Hul. 132b; if he persists in his refusal. Thus it follows that no one is at liberty to declare, 'I am not disposed to perform a religious act'.

(3) Where fewer people walk, and where it remained intact until the lapse of the thirty days. Is the letter of divorce, it is asked, regarded as being still in the possession of the woman, despite its place of deposit, and the woman is consequently legally divorced, or is the spot, being at the side of a public domain, subject to the same restrictions in respect of kinyan as the public domain itself.

(4) Supra 84b, 85a, q.v., from which it follows that an object in a public domain cannot be acquired except by a specific act of kinyan.

(5) Cf. supra n. 9. The woman cannot consequently he regarded as being in possession of the letter of divorce and her divorce is, therefore, invalid.

(6) Supra 82a q.v. for notes.

(7) As the cow is acquired after the specified period, though stationed in a meadow', so should the woman be deemed to be in the possession of the letter of divorce, though it lies at the side of a public domain.
(8) Hence the validity of a deferred kinyan if at the specified period the object was within its boundaries.
(9) No deferred kinyan being effective within such a spot.
(10) R. Hisda.
(11) Rami b. Hama.
(12) The woman to whom her husband gave a letter of divorce stipulating that it shall take effect only after the lapse of thirty days.
(13) V. supra.
(14) That she should sell his wares
(15) That she has not dealt fraudulently with anything that had been put in her charge.
(16) Sc. not only when she is engaged in commercial transactions, but also when she is occupied with her domestic affairs only. (V. Gemara infra).
(17) He has spoken of in our Mishnah.
(18) גלגול lit 'rolling'. sc only where the wife has to take an oath in respect of her commercial transactions may an oath in respect of her domestic occupations be added.
(19) Sc. even if she is attending to her domestic occupations only.
(20) The Rabbis who differed from him.
(21) Proverb. Serpent _ cantankerous husband.
(22) A wife could justly object to live with a cantankerous man who does not trust her in her domestic responsibilities.
(23) The oath by implication.
(24) When she has in any case to take an oath in respect of her business transactions.
(25) Her refusal to live with him is not due to the actual oath but to his mistrust of her integrity.
(26) An answer to the question supra as to what was R. Eliezer's meaning.
(27) By a formal declaration.
(28) E.g., 'may all the produce of the world be forbidden to me if I misappropriated any of your goods or money' (cf. Git. 34b).
(29) V. supra p. 546. n, 10.
(30) V. p. 547. n. 10.
(31) V. supra p. 546, n. 20.
(32) The nature of this oath is explained infra.
(33) If, having been divorced by him, she died and they claim from him the amount of her kethubah. The oath they take affirms that the deceased had not enjoined upon them either while, or before, she was dying, not did they find any entry among her papers that the kethubah was paid (v. Shebu. 45a).
(34) People who bought her kethubah from her. Cf. n. 4, mutatis mutandis.
(35) If on the death of their father the widow, her heirs or lawful successors claim from them the payment of her kethubah.
(36) The purchasers of his estate from whom the kethubah is claimed in the absence of unencumbered property.
(37) The woman whom her husband had granted exemption from vow and oath (v. supra).
(38) Sc. she severed all connection with her husband's business affairs as soon as he was buried.
(39) Even in respect of the period between her husband's death and burial.
(40) Lit., 'for that which is to come', the exemption having expired at the moment the estate passed into the possession of the heirs.
(41) The period of her administration prior to their father's death, when she was protected by his exemption.
(42) The exemption from which is discussed in the first clause of our Mishnah.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 87a

[It is one that is incumbent] upon a woman who during the lifetime of her husband was made administratrix [of his affairs].[1] R. Nahman replied in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: [It is one that is incumbent] upon a woman who impairs her kethubah.[2] R. Mordecai went to R. Ashi and submitted to him this argument: One can well imagine [the origin of the exemption], according to him who holds [that the oath is one incumbent] upon a woman who impairs her kethubah [by assuming that] it occurred to the woman that she might sometime be in need of money and would draw it from her kethubah and would, therefore, tell her husband, 'Give me an undertaking in writing that you will impose no oath upon me'.[3] According to him, however, who holds [that the oath is one incumbent] upon a woman who during the lifetime of her husband was made administratrix [of his affairs],[4] did she know [it may be objected] that he would set her up as administratrix that she should say to him, 'Give me a written undertaking that you will impose no oath upon me'?[5] — The other replied: You taught this statement[6] in connection with that clause;[7] we teach it[8] in connection with this:[9] IF SHE WENT FROM HER HUSBAND'S GRAVE TO HER FATHER'S HOUSE, OR RETURNED TO HER FATHER-IN-LAW'S HOUSE BUT WAS NOT MADE ADMINISTRATRIX, THE HEIRS ARE NOT ENTITLED TO IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER, BUT IF SHE WAS MADE ADMINISTRATRIX THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER IN RESPECT OF [HER ADMINISTRATION] DURING THE SUBSEQUENT PERIOD BUT NOT IN CONNECTION WITH THE PAST, [and, in reply to the question as to] what exactly was meant by THE PAST, Rab Judah stated in the name of Rab: [The period] during the lifetime of her husband for which she was made administratrix [of his affairs], but in respect of [the period intervening] between death and burial an oath may be imposed upon her.[10] R. Mattena, however,[11] maintained that no oath may be imposed upon her[12] even in respect of [the period between] death and burial;[13] for the Nehardeans laid down: For poll-tax,[14] maintenance[15] and funeral expenses. an estate[16] is sold without public announcement.[17]

Said Rabbah in the name of R. Hiyya: [If in giving exemption to his wife a husband wrote,] 'Neither vow nor oath' it is only he who cannot impose an oath upon her, but his heirs may impose an oath upon her. [If he wrote, however,] 'Free from vow, free from oath', neither he nor his heirs may exact an oath from her, [since by this expression] he meant to say to her: 'Be free from the obligation of an oath'.

R. Joseph. however, stated in the name of R. Hiyya: [If in giving exemption to his wife a husband writes,] 'Neither vow nor oath' it is only he who cannot impose an oath upon her but his heirs may; [but if he wrote,] 'Free from vow, free from oath', both he and his heirs may exact an oath from her [since by such an expression] he thus meant to say to her: 'Clear yourself by means of an oath'.

R. Zakkai sent to Mar 'Ukba the following message: Whether [the husband wrote,] 'Neither oath' or 'Free from oath', or whether [he wrote.] 'Neither vow', or 'Free from vow', [and he used the expression] 'In respect of my estates',[18] he cannot impose an oath upon her, but his heirs may. [If he wrote, however,] 'In respect of these estates', neither he nor his heirs may exact an oath from her.

R. Nahman stated in the name of Samuel in the name of Abba Saul the son of Imma Miriam: Whether [the husband wrote,] 'Neither oath' or 'Free from oath'' whether [he wrote,] 'Neither vow' or 'Free from vow , or whether [he used the expression,] 'In respect of my[18] estates' or 'In respect of these estates', neither he nor his heirs may exact an oath from her; but what can I do in view of a ruling of the Sages that anyone who comes to exact payment out of the property of orphans is not to be paid unless he first takes an oath.[19]

Others read this[20] as a Baraitha: Abba Saul the son of Imma Miriam stated; Whether [the husband wrote.] 'Neither oath' or 'Free from oath', whether [he wrote,] 'Neither vow' or 'Free from vow , or whether [he used the expression,] 'In respect of my[18] estates, or 'In respect of these estates'. neither he nor his heirs may impose ,an oath upon her; but what can I do in view of a ruling of the Sages that anyone who comes to exact payment out of the property of orphans need not be paid unless he first takes an oath. [It was in connection with this Baraitha[21] that] R. Nahman said in the name of Samuel: The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of the son of Imma Miriam.

MISHNAH. A WOMAN WHO IMPAIRS[22] HER KETHUBAH IS NOT PAID[23] UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH.[24] IF ONE WITNESS TESTIFIES AGAINST HER THAT [HER KETHUBAH] HAS BEEN PAID,[25] SHE IS NOT BE PAID UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES THE OATH. FROM THE PROPERTY OF ORPHANS, FROM ASSIGNED PROPERTY[26] AND [FROM THE PROPERTY OF] AN ABSENT HUSBAND[27] SHE MAY NOT RECOVER [THE PAYMENT OF HER KETHUBAH] UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH.[28]

HOW [ARE WE TO UNDERSTAND THE STATEMENT,] 'A WOMAN WHO IMPAIRS HER KETHUBAH'? IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR A THOUSAND ZUZ[29] AND [HER HUSBAND] SAID TO HER, 'YOU HAVE ALREADY RECEIVED [THE FULL AMOUNT OF] YOUR KETHUBAH', AND SHE SAYS, 'I RECEIVED ONLY A MANEH',[29] SHE IS NOT PAID [THE BALANCE] UNLESS SHE TAKES AN OATH. WHAT IS MEANT BY[30] 'IF ONE WITNESS TESTIFIES AGAINST HER THAT [HER KETHUBAH] HAS BEEN PAID'? IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR A THOUSAND ZUZ[29] AND WHEN [HER HUSBAND] SAID TO HER, 'YOU HAVE RECEIVED [THE FULL AMOUNT OF] YOUR KETHUBAH', SHE REPLIED, 'I HAVE NOT RECEIVED IT WHILE ONE WITNESS TESTIFIES AGAINST HER THAT [THE KETHUBAH] HAS BEEN PAID[25] SHE IS NOT PAID UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH. WHAT IS MEANT BY THE EXPRESSION,[30] 'FROM ASSIGNED PROPERTY'? IF [HER HUSBAND] HAD SOLD HIS PROPERTY TO OTHERS AND SHE SEEKS TO RECOVER PAYMENT FROM THE BUYERS, SHE IS NOT PAID UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH. WHAT IS THE EXPLANATION OF THE EXPRESSION,[30] FROM THE PROPERTY OF ORPHANS'? IF [HER HUSBAND] DIED AND LEFT HIS ESTATE TO HIS ORPHANS AND SHE SEEKS TO RECOVER PAYMENT FROM THE ORPHANS, SHE IS NOT PAID UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH. WHAT IS TO BE UNDERSTOOD BY[31] 'AN ABSENT HUSBAND'? IF HER HUSBAND WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA AND SHE SEEKS TO RECOVER PAYMENT IN HIS ABSENCE,[32] SHE IS NOT PAID UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH.

---

(1) It is from such an oath only that a husband exempts his wife, but not from one which a woman incurs when she impairs her kethubah (v. infra). A husband, according to this view, only exempts his wife from an obligation which is in his power to impose upon her but not from one which she has brought upon herself.

(2) By admitting that part of it has been paid to her. A woman who makes such an admission while her husband pleads that he has paid her the full amount is not entitled to receive the balance she claims except on oath, and it is the opinion of the authority cited by R. Nahman that a husband's general exemption extends to such an oath also, much more so to that required from her as administratrix (cf. supra note 2).

(3) And while asking for exemption from this particular oath she might at the same time ask for an exemption from both oaths.

(4) Cf. supra note 2.

(5) As she cannot be assumed to divine her husband's thoughts and intentions, the desire for such a request could naturally never arise.

(6) Rab Judah's, (supra 86b f).

(7) The case dealt with in the first clause of our Mishnah (cf. supra p. 549. n. i).

(8) I.e., you assume that R. Judah and R. Nahman refer to one and the same clause.

(9) The final clause dealing with the oath of an administratrix.

(10) Cf. supra p. 548, n. 11. Whereas R. Nahman refers to the first clause, Rah Judah refers to the case of an administratrix in the last clause, and so R. Mordecai's objection does not arise.

(11) Differing from Rab Judah.

(12) The administratrix whom her husband has exempted from oath.

(13) This period also coming under the term of THE PAST.

(14) On behalf of orphans.

(15) Of one's widow or daughter.

(16) A bequest now belonging to the orphans of the deceased.

(17) Because in all these cases money is urgently needed and there is no time for the public announcement that must precede all sales effected on the order of a court. The urgency of the sale must inevitably lead to some undercutting of prices which the widow cannot possibly avoid (v. Git. 52b). It would consequently be an act of injustice to impose upon her an oath in respect of her administration during the period between her husband's death and burial.
(18) Omitting the demonstrative pronoun ‘these’.
(19) V. B.B. 5b.
(20) The ruling cited in the name of Abba Saul.
(21) Cf. supra n. 3.
(22) This is explained anon.
(23) The balance she claims.
(24) Affirming her claim.
(25) In full (v. infra).
(26) Mortgaged or sold.
(27) Lit., ‘and not in his presence’, i.e., if a husband who was abroad sent a divorce to his wife and she claims her kethubah in his absence.
(28) Which is imposed upon her by the court even if the respective defendants mentioned do not demand it.
(29) V. Glos.
(30) Lit., ‘how".
(31) Lit., ‘how’.
(32) Cf. supra p. 552, n. 6.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 87b

R. SIMEON RULED: WHENEVER[1] SHE[2] CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER BUT WHERE SHE DOES NOT CLAIM HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS CAN NOT IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER.

GEMARA. Rami b. Hama wished to assume that the OATH[3] was Pentateuchal,[4] since [it is a case where] one [of two persons] claims two hundred [zuz] and the other admits one hundred [the defence] being an admission of a part of the claim,[5] and whoever admits part of a claim must[6] take an oath.[7] Said Raba: There are two objections to this assumption: In the first place, all who take an oath in accordance with Pentateuchal law take the oath and do not pay,[8] while she[9] takes the oath and receives payment. And, secondly, no oath may be imposed[6] in respect of the denial of [a claim that is] secured[10] on landed property.[11] [The fact,] however, is, said Raba, [that the oath is only] Rabbinical. As it is the person who pays that is careful to remember the details while he who receives payment is not, the Rabbis have imposed an oath upon her[12] that she might be careful to recollect the details.

The question was raised; What if a woman impaired her kethubah by [admitting that she received part payment in the presence of] witnesses? [Is it assumed that] were [her husband] to pay her [the balance] he would do it in the presence of witnesses,[13] or [is it rather assumed that] it was a mere coincidence [that witnesses were present when the first payment was made]?[14] — Come and hear;[15] All who take an oath in accordance with Pentateuchal law, take the oath and do not pay,[16] but the following take an oath and receive payment; A hired labourer,[17] a man who was robbed[18] or wounded,[19] [any claimant] whose opponent is suspected of [taking a false] oath[20] and a shopkeeper[21] with his [accounts] book,[22] and also [a creditor] who impaired his bond [the first instalment of which had been paid] in the absence of witnesses.[23] Thus only[24] [where the first instalment was paid] ‘in the absence of witnesses’[25] but not where it was paid in the presence of witnesses![26] — This is a case of ‘there is no question . . .’[27] There is no question[28] that [when the first instalment was paid] in the presence of witnesses she must take an oath; when, however, [it was paid] in the absence of witnesses,it might be assumed that she has [the same privilege] as one who restores a lost object [to its owner][29] and should, therefore, receive payment without taking an oath. It was, therefore, taught [that the oath is nevertheless not to be dispensed with].

The question was raised: What if a woman impaired her kethubah [by including in the amount she admitted] sums amounting to[30] less than the value of a perutah?[31] Is it assumed that since she[32] is so careful in her statements she must be speaking the truth[33] or is it possible that she[34] is merely acting cunningly?[35] — This remains unsolved.[36]

The question was raised: What if a woman declares her [original] kethubah to have been less [than the amount recorded in the written document]?[37] Is it assumed that such a woman is in the same position as the woman who impaired [her kethubah] or is it possible [that the two cases are unlike, since] the woman who impairs [her kethubah] admits a part [of the sum involved][38] while this one does not admit a part [of the sum involved]?[39] — Come and hear: A woman who declares that her [original] kethubah was less [than the amount recorded in the document] receives payment without an oath. How [is this to be understood]? If her kethubah was for a thousand zuz[40] and when her husband said to her, 'You have already received your kethubah,'[41] she replies. 'I have not received it,[41] but [the original kethubah] was only for one maneh,'[42] she is to receive payment without an oath.[43]

Wherewith, however, does she collect [the amount she claims]? Obviously with that document.[44] But is not that document a mere potsherd?[45] — Raba the son of Rabbah replied: [This is a case] where she states, 'There was an arrangement of mutual trust between me and him'.[46]

IF ONE WITNESS TESTIFIES AGAINST HER THAT [HER KETHUBAH] HAS BEEN PAID [etc.]. Rami b. Hama wished to assume that the OATH was Pentateuchal, for it is written In Scripture, One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin;[47] it is only for ally iniquity or for any sin that he may not rise up, but he may rise up [to cause the imposition upon one of the obligation] of an oath. And, furthermore, a Master has laid down: In all cases where two witnesses render a man liable to pay money, one witness renders him liable to take an oath.[48] Said Raba: There are two objections to this assumption. In the first place, all who take an oath in accordance with Pentateuchal law, do so and do not pay,[49] while she takes an oath and receives payment; and, secondly, no oath may be imposed in respect of the denial of [a claim that is] secured on landed property. [The fact], however, is, said Raba [that the oath is only] Rabbinical, [having been enacted] to appease the mind of the husband.

R. Papa said:

---

(1) Lit., 'all the time'.

(2) The Gemara infra explains what R. Simeon refers to.

(3) Which A WOMAN WHO IMPAIRS HER KETHUBAH must take.

(4) On the difference between a Rabbinical oath and one imposed by the Torah v. Shebu. 41a.

(5) [Read with MS.M.: for she claims of him two hundred (zuz) and he admits to her one hundred, so that he is admitting part of the claim].

(6) Pentateuchally.

(7) That he has repaid the difference. The woman, having admitted receipt of a part of her kethubah, must consequently be in a similar position.

(8) I.e., it is the defendant, not the claimant, who takes the oath.

(9) The woman who impaired her kethubah and claims the balance.

(10) As is a kethubah.

(11) V. Shebu. 42b, B.M. 57b.

(12) V. supra p. 553, n. 11.

(13) As he did in the case of the first payment. The woman would consequently be entitled to payment without taking the oath.

(14) And since the man was not particular to secure witnesses on the first occasion, he might have been equally indifferent on the second occasion, and the woman would consequently have to take an oath.
(15) V. Mishnah Shebu. 44b.
(16) V. supra p. 553, n. 10.
(17) Who swears that he has not received his wages.
(18) Witnesses testifying that they saw the robber emerging from that person's house carrying an object which they could not identify.
(19) The evidence shewing that the wound had been inflicted while the two men were alone in a particular spot, though no third party had witnessed the actual wounding.
(20) I.e., if the defendant is known to have once before sworn falsely.
(21) Who was given an order by an employer to supply a certain amount of goods to his workmen on account of their wages.
(22) If the book shews that the goods had been duly supplied and the workmen deny receiving them, the shopkeeper, like the workmen, is ordered to take an oath (the former that he supplied the goods and the latter that they had Dot received them) and both receive payment from the employer.
(23) [Add with MS.M. 'and she who impairs her kethubah without witnesses']. These last two mentioned cases are not found in the Mishnah (v. supra n. 11 ad fin.) and their source is a Baraitha (cf. Tosaf. s.v. ואלו a.l.).
(24) Lit., 'yes'.
(25) Must the claimant take the oath.
(26) The woman, in the case under discussion, would consequently be entitled to collect the balance she claims without taking an oath.
(27) Lit., 'he implied (the formula)."It is not required" (to say etc.)'.
(28) Lit., it is not required (to say that)'.
(29) In such a case a person is not expected to take an oath that he had returned all that he had found. His honesty is taken for granted in view of the fact that a dishonest man would have kept the object entirely to himself. Similarly with the impaired kethubah. Had the woman been dishonest she need not have admitted the receipt of an instalment at all and could have collected the full amount of her kethubah by virtue of the written document she possesses.
(30) Lit., 'less less'.
(31) V. Glos.
(32) By including even small and insignificant payments.
(33) And should, therefore, be exempt from an oath in respect of the balance.
(34) In mentioning insignificant payments.
(35) She mentioned the small sums in order to give the impression of being a careful and scrupulous person while in fact the instalment or instalment she received were substantial sums. Consequently an oath should be imposed upon her.
(36) Teku, v. Glos.
(37) And she claims that amount; while her husband states that he had paid her all her kethubah.
(38) The husband asserting that he paid the full amount and she admitting the receipt of a part of it. In such a case an oath may justly be imposed upon the woman.
(39) Since according to her statement the kethubah never amounted to more than the sum she now claims.
(40) V. Glos.
(41) The amount entered in the document.
(42) While the document contains a larger sum.
(43) This solves the problem.
(44) The kethubah she holds.
(45) Sc. of no legal value, since she herself admits that the amount it records is fictitious.
(46) They agreed, she states, that she would claim the smaller sum only despite the entry in the kethubah which shewed a larger one. This verbal agreement does not in any way affect the validity of the kethubah which, having been written and signed in a proper manner and attested by qualified witnesses, is a valid document on the strength of which a legal claim may well be founded; cf. supra 19b.
(47) Deut. XIX. 15.
(48) As two witnesses would have caused the woman to lose her kethubah entirely, one witness may rightly cause an oath to be imposed upon her. V. Shebu. 40a.

(49) V. supra p. 553, n. 10ff.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 88a

If he[1] is clever he may bring her under the obligation[2] of a Pentateuchal oath:[3] He pays her[4] the amount of her kethubah in the presence of one witness, associates the first witness[5] with the second[6] and then treats his first payments[7] as a loan.[8] R. Shisha son of R. Idi demurred: How can one associate the first witness with the second one?[9] — But, said R. Shisha the son of R. Idi, [he might proceed in this manner:][10] He pays her the amount of her kethubah in the presence of the first witness and a second one, and then treats his first payments as a loan. R. Ashi demurred: Might she not still assert that there were two kethubahs?[11] — But, said R. Ashi: He might inform them[12] [of the facts].[13]

FROM ASSIGNED PROPERTY. Elsewhere we have learned; And so also orphans cannot exact payment unless they first take an oath.[14] From whom?[15] If it be suggested. From a borrower[16] [it may be objected;] Since[17] their father would have received payment without an oath[18] should they require an oath?[19] — It is this, however, that was meant: And so also orphans cannot exact payment from orphans unless they first take an oath.[20]

R. Zerika stated in the name of Rab Judah: This[21] has been taught only [in the case] where the orphans[22] stated, 'Father told us; I have borrowed and paid up'. If, however, they said, 'Father told us: I have never borrowed' [the others] cannot exact payment even if they take an oath. Raba demurred: On the contrary. wherever a man says. 'I have not borrowed', it is as if he had said, 'I have not paid'![23] — [The fact,] however, [is that] if such a statement[24] was at all made it was made in these terms: R. Zerika stated in the name of Rab Judah. This[25] has been taught only [in a case] where the orphans[22] stated, 'Father told us: l have borrowed and paid up'. If, however, they said — 'Father told us: I have never borrowed', [the orphans of the creditor] may exact payment from them without an oath , because to say, 'I have not borrowed' is equivalent to saying, 'I have not paid'.

AND[26] [FROM THE PROPERTY OF] AN ABSENT HUSBAND [A WOMAN] MAY NOT RECOVER [THE PAYMENT OF HER KETHUBAH] UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH. R. Aha, the governor of the castle,[27] stated: A case[28] was once brought before R. Isaac Nappaha[29] at Antioch[30] and he made this statement, 'This[31] has been taught only in respect of the kethubah of a woman [who receives preferential treatment] in order to maintain pleasant relations[32] [between her and her husband] but not [in respect of] a creditor. Raba, however, stated in the name of R. Nahman; Even a creditor [has been given the same privilege],[33] in order that every person shall not take his friend's money and abscond and settle in a country beyond the sea and thus [cause the creditor's] door to be shut in the face of intending borrowers.[34]

R. SIMEON RULED: WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH etc. What is R. Simeon referring to? — R. Jeremiah replied. To this; AND[35] [FROM THE PROPERTY OF] AN ABSENT HUSBAND [A WOMAN] MAY NOT RECOVER [THE PAYMENT OF HER KETHUBAH] UNLESS SHE FIRST TAKES AN OATH [which implies that] there is no difference between [a claim] for maintenance and one for a kethubah,'[36] and [in opposition to this ruling] R. Simeon came to lay down the rule that WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER

---

(1) The husband whose plea is supported by one witness only.

(2) Lit., 'bring her to the hands of'.

(3) Cf. supra p. 553. n. 6.

(4) A second time.

(5) Who saw the first payment.

(6) Should she deny having had her kethubah paid, he presents the two witnesses in support of his claim.
(7) On account of her kethubah.
(8) Should she then deny receiving the money he may well impose upon her a Pentateuchal oath on the strength of the evidence of the first witness who was present when she received it. It is only in the case of a kethubah which is an hypothecary obligation (v. supra) that a witness cannot impose upon a defendant the Pentateuchal oath.
(9) In view of the fact that the evidence of the one relates to a transaction at which the other was not present. The law of evidence demands that both witnesses testify to the same transaction. Should the woman he prepared to deny the second payment also, no Pentateuchal oath could be imposed upon her and she would thus be able to obtain a third payment also on taking a Rabbinical oath.
(10) V. supra notes 1-8.
(11) The first of which she had returned when she had received her first payment. As the first witness, who knows that the two payments were made to her in settlement of a kethubah would naturally corroborate her statement, the dispute would still relate to a kethubah and not to a loan. How then could a Pentateuchal oath be imposed upon her?
(12) The two witnesses.
(13) Before he makes his second payment. As the first witness would thus be aware that the second payment is made solely for the purpose of imposing upon her a Pentateuchal oath in respect of the first payment which she fraudulently denied, he would refrain from giving evidence in her favour and the man would thus be able to recover his money. Her peculiar plea that she had two kethubahs would naturally be disregarded in the absence of all supporting evidence.
(14) Shebu. 45a. Cf. supra p. 548, n. 4.
(15) Can they not 'exact payment etc.'.
(16) Against whom they produce a bond of indebtedness bequeathed by their father.
(17) Lit., 'now".
(18) As all creditors who produce a bond of indebtedness against a debtor.
(19) Obviously not, since orphans would not be subject to a restriction from which their father was exempt.
(20) Cf. Shebu. 47a.
(21) That after taking an oath the orphans of a lender are entitled to receive payment of a bond they have inherited.
(22) Of the borrower.
(23) B.B. 6a, Shebu. 41b. If a man did not borrow he obviously did not repay; but since the bond shews that he did borrow, he must obviously be ordered to pay. How then could it be said that if the orphans pleaded that their father told them that he never borrowed they are exempt from payment?
(24) As the one attributed to R. Zerika.
(25) That the orphans cannot exact payment of a bond they have inherited unless they first take an oath.
(26) V. our Mishnah. Cut. edd. add here ונפרעת MS.M. והנפרעת.
(27) A surname (v. Rashi). Cf. Neb. VII, 2, where Hananiah is so described.
(28) Of a claim against an absent debtor.
(29) So MS.M. and Bah. Cut. edd. omit 'Nappaha'.
(30) The capital of Syria, on the river Orontes. It was founded by Seleucus Nicator and was at one time named Epidaphnes.
(31) That a claimant may be authorized by a court to seize the property of a defendant in the latter's absence.
(32) V. supra p. 532, n. 11f.
(33) Cf. supra n. 5.
(34) Metaph. Undue difficulty in the collection of a debt would prevent people from risking their money in the granting of loans.
(35) Cf. supra p. 558. n. 13.
(36) For either claim the woman cannot recover from her absentee husband's property without an oath.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 88b

BUT WHERE SHE DOES NOT CLAIM HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS CANNOT IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER. And they[1] [in fact] differ on the same principles as those on which Hanan and the sons of the High Priests differed; for we learned: If a man went to a country beyond the sea and his wife claimed maintenance, she must, Hanan ruled, take an oath at the end[2] but not at the beginning.[3] The sons of the High Priests, however, differed from him and said that she must take an oath both at the beginning[3] and at the end.[4] R. Simeon [is thus of the same opinion] as Hanan while the Rabbis[5] [hold the same view] as the sons of the High Priests.

R. Shesheth demurred; Then[6] [instead of saying,] THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH UPON HER, It should have said, 'Beth din[7] may impose an oath upon her'! — The fact, however, is, said R. Shesheth.[that R. Simeon referred] to this:[8] If she went from her husband's grave to her father's house, or returned to her father-in-law's house but was not made administratrix, the heirs are not entitled to impose an oath upon her; but if she was made administratrix the heirs may exact an oath from her in respect of [her administration] during the subsequent period but may not exact one concerning the past;[9] and [in reference to this ruling] R. Simeon came to lay down the rule that WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS MAY ENACT AN OATH FROM HER BUT WHERE SHE DOES NOT CLAIM HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS CANNOT IMPOSE AN OATH[10] UPON HER. And they[11] differ on the same principles as those on which Abba Saul and the Rabbis differed; for we have learned: An administrator whom the father of the orphans had appointed must take an oath,[10] but one whom the Beth din have appointed need not take an oath. Abba Saul, however, said, The rule is to be reversed: If Beth din appointed him he must take an oath but if the father of the orphans appointed him he need not take an oath.[12] R. Simeon [thus holds the same view] as Abba Saul[13] and the Rabbis [in our Mishnah hold the same view] as the Rabbis.[14] Abaye demurred: Then[15] [rather than say,] WHEREVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH[16] it should have said,[15] 'If[17] she claims'.[18] The fact, however, is, said Abaye, [that R. Simeon referred] to this: [If a husband] gave to his wife an undertaking in writing, 'I renounce my claim upon you for either vow or oath', he cannot impose an oath upon her etc. [If the written undertaking read,] 'Neither I nor my heirs nor my lawful successors will have any claim upon you. or your heirs or your lawful successors for either vow or oath', neither he nor his heirs nor his lawful successors may impose an oath either upon her or upon her heirs or upon her lawful successors;[19] and [in reference to this ruling][20] R. Simeon came to lay down the rule[21] that[22] WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH THE HEIRS MAY ENACT AN OATH FROM HER.[22]

And they[23] [consequently] differ on the same principles as those on which Abba Saul the son of Imma Miriam, and the Rabbis differed.[24] R. Simeon agreeing with Abba Saul and the Rabbis [of our Mishnah] with the Rabbis.[25] R. Papa demurred: This would satisfactorily explain [the expression] WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS HER KETHUBAH.[26] What, however, can be said [in justification of] BUT WHERE SHE DOES NOT CLAIM HER KETHUBAH?[27] The fact, however, is, said R. Papa, [R. Simeon's ruling was intended] to oppose the views of both R. Eliezer and those who differed from him.[28] MISHNAH. IF SHE[29] PRODUCED A LETTER OF DIVORCE WITHOUT A KETHUBAH[30]

---

(1) R. Simeon and the first Tanna.

(2) Sc. when her husband dies and she claims her kethubah.

(3) I.e., when he is still alive and she claims maintenance.

(4) Infra 104b.

(5) The first Tanna in our Mishnah.

(6) Lit., 'that', i.e., if it is a case of a wife's claim for maintenance during her husband's lifetime.

(7) The court. V. Glos.

(8) The preceding Mishnah.

(9) Supra 86b, q.v. for notes.

(10) Affirming faithful and honest administration.

(11) R. Simeon and the first Tanna.

(12) Git. 52b, q.v. for the reasons of the respective rulings.

(13) Since the woman also has been appointed by the 'father of the orphans'.

(14) Of the Mishnah cited.

(15) Since R. Simeon relaxes the law in favour of the woman.
(16) Then THE HEIRS MAY IMPOSE AN OATH, an expression which implies that R. Simeon is adding a restriction.
(17) I.e., only if.
(18) 'May an oath be exacted'. 'WHENEVER SHE CLAIMS . . . THE HEIRS MAY' implies that whereas the first Tanna exempted the woman from an oath even where she claimed her kethubah, R. Simeon differed from him and imposed upon her an oath 'WHEREVER SHE CLAIMS'.
(19) Supra 86b q.v. for notes.
(20) Which exempts the woman from an oath even when she seeks to recover payment from orphans.
(21) Restricting the woman's privilege. Cf. supra n. 2f.
(22) Cf. supra n. 4.
(23) R. Simeon and the first Tanna.
(24) Supra 87a.
(25) Of the Baraitha referred to.
(26) Cf. supra note 4. The Rabbis having exempted the woman from the oath that the orphans might wish to impose upon her, R. Simeon laid down that WHEREVER etc.
(27) What need was there for this statement which has no beating on what the Rabbis have said?
(28) I.e., R. Simeon differs from the views expressed in the two Mishnahs, supra 86b, and not only, as Abaye maintained, from those of the second Mishnah only. Contrary to what has been stated in these two Mishnahs, R. Simeon laid down that a wife's liability to take an oath is not determined by the action of the husband in granting her exemption and by the terms of that exemption, but is entirely dependent on whether the woman does or does not claim her kethubah. (V. Rashi and Tosaf'. s.v. לאפוקי a.I.). [On this interpretation R. Papa does not disagree with Abaye but merely adds that R. Simeon's interpretation refers also to the second clause. This is supported by MS.M. which omits: The fact is however, (lit. 'but'), said R. Papa. For other interpretations v. Shittah Mekubbezeth].
(29) A woman who seeks to recover the amount of her kethubah.
(30) I.e., the written marriage contract (v. Glos.). It is now assumed that the woman asserts that the document was lost.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 89a

SHE IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT THE AMOUNT OF HER KETHUBAH.[1] [IF SHE, HOWEVER, PRODUCED HER] KETHUBAH WITHOUT A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND, WHILE SHE PLEADS, MY LETTER OF DIVORCE WAS LOST',[2] HE[3] Pleads, 'MY QUITTANCE[4] WAS LOST', AND SO ALSO A CREDITOR WHO PRODUCED[5] A BOND OF INDEBTEDNESS THAT WAS UNACCOMPANIED BY A PROSBUL,[6] THESE[7] ARE NOT PAID. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED; SINCE THE TIME OF DANGER[8] A WOMAN IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT HER KETHUBAH WITH OUT A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND A CREDITOR IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT [HIS DEBT] WITHOUT A PROSBUL.

GEMARA. This[9] implies [does it not] that a quittance[10] may be written;[11] for if a quittance may not be written would not the possibility have been taken into consideration that the woman might produce her kethubah [after her husband's death] and[12] collect therewith [a second time]?[13] — Rab replied: We are dealing[14] with a place where no kethubah is written.[15] Samuel, however, said: [Our Mishnah refers] also to a place where a kethubah is written.

May then[16] a quittance be written according to Samuel?[17] R. Anan replied, This was explained to me by Mar Samuel;[18] Where it is the custom not to write [a kethubah] and [the husband] asserted, 'I have written one' it is he who must produce the proof, where it is the usage to write one and she pleads. 'He did not write one for me' it is she that must produce the proof.[19]

Rab[20] also withdrew from [his previously expressed opinion]. For Rab had stated: Both in a place where [a kethubah] is written and in one where it is not written, a letter of divorce [enables a woman to] collect her statutory[21] kethubah [while the written document of the] kethubah [enables her to] collect the additional jointure;[22] and whosoever wishes to raise any objection may come and do so.[23]

We have learned: [A WOMAN, HOWEVER, WHO PRODUCED HER] KETHUBAH WITHOUT A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND, WHILE SHE PLEADS, 'MY LETTER OF DIVORCE WAS LOST HE PLEADS, 'MY QUITTANCE WAS LOST'. AND SO ALSO A CREDITOR WHO PRODUCED A BOND OF INDEBTEDNESS WITHOUT A PROSBUL, THESE ARE NOT PAID. Now, according to Samuel[24] this statement is quite intelligible since one might interpret it as applying to a locality where it is the practice to write [no kethubah] and the husband pleaded. 'I did write one'. In such a case [the man] might justly be told, 'Produce your evidence', and should he fail to do so he might well be told, 'Go and pay up'.[25] According to Rab,[26] however, [the question arises,] granted that she[27] is not to collect her statutory kethubah,[28] let her at least collect the additional jointure![29] — R. Joseph replied: Here[30] we are dealing with a case where no witnesses to the divorce were present. Since [the husband] could have pleaded. 'I have not divorced her',[31]

---

(1) Sc. the sum she claims. Should the husband plead that he already paid her that sum and that the document had been returned to him at the time and was then duly destroyed, his plea would be disregarded since the provision for a kethubah has the force of 'an act of a court', מעשה בית דין, and is as binding in the absence of a written document as if one had been actually in existence. Only the production of valid evidence could exempt the man from payment. Cf. B.M. 17b.

(2) 'Before I collected my kethubah'.

(3) The husband.

(4) 'Which was given to me at the time I paid the amount of the kethubah'. His wife, he alleges. had produced at that time her letter of divorce only asserting that her written kethubah was lost. As is the procedure in such cases, he maintains, the letter of divorce was duly destroyed in order to prevent the woman from claiming therewith a second payment at another court of law, while he was furnished with a quittance as a protection for his heirs should the woman produce her kethubah after his death, and, denying that she was ever divorced, claim the amount of her kethubah as the widow of the deceased.

(5) After the Sabbatical year when all debts must be released (v. Deut. XV. 2).

(6) Pleading that the prosbul was lost, while the debtor asserts that such a document had never been made out and that he was consequently released from his debt by the Sabbatical year. פרוזבול, a form of declaration which enables a creditor to retain his rights to the collection of his debts even after the Sabbatical year. (V. Glos. and cf. Git. 34b).

(7) Lit., 'behold these'.

(8) The Hadrianic persecutions that followed the rebellion of Bar Cochba (132-135 C.E.) when all religious practices were forbidden on the penalty of death and it was hazardous to preserve a letter of divorce or a prosbul.

(9) The ruling in out Mishnah that the amount of a kethubah may be collected by a woman who produces her letter of divorce only, even if, under the plea that she lost it, she does not surrender her kethubah.

(10) In lieu of the return of the original document, such as the kethubah or any bond of indebtedness.

(11) Despite the pleas of the defendant who objects to become the custodian of a quittance and demands the return of the original record of his obligations or, in its absence, exemption from payment.

(12) As a widow (cf. supra p. 562, n. 6 ad fin.).

(13) As this possibility is disregarded it follows that a quittance may well be written despite the defendant's objection. But how is this ruling to be reconciled with the accepted view of the authority (B.B. 171b) who holds that the defendant may rightly object to have to 'guard his quittance from mice'?

(14) In our Mishnah.

(15) The women relying on the general provision of the Rabbis which entitles every wife to a kethubah.

(16) Cf. supra notes 2 and 3.

(17) Cf. supra n. 9.

(18) MS.M.: Samuel.

(19) Samuel also is thus of the opinion that a quittance may not be written, as was laid down in B.B. 171b, while our Mishnah, according to his interpretation, refers both to places where a kethubah is written as well as to those where a kethubah is not written. The woman IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT THE AMOUNT OF HER KETHUBAH even if she fails to produce the document when, in the former case, she produced valid proof that her husband did not write one for her, and, in the latter case, where the man failed to produce valid proof that he did write one for her.

(20) Who first restricted the ruling of our Mishnah to a place where no kethubah is written.

(21) Lit., 'root', i.e., the amount of two hundred and a hundred zuz to which a virgin and a widow respectively are entitled.

(22) The first clause of our Mishnah thus refers to the statutory kethubah which may be collected with a letter of divorce, while the second clause refers to the additional jointure, both clauses applying to all localities irrespective of whether the custom of the place was to write a kethubah or not to write one.

(23) Sc. no possible objection could be raised to this view, since the woman would never be able to collect mote than what is her due.

(24) Who allows the statutory kethubah as well as the additional jointure to be collected on the strength of a letter of divorce.

(25) Both the additional and the statutory jointure, on the evidence of the letter of divorce. Should the woman subsequently produce a written kethubah without her letter of divorce, payment, as stated in our Mishnah, might justly be refused if the husband pleads that he had already paid her all that was due to her, at the time she produced her letter of divorce, that her letter of divorce was then destroyed and that a quittance was given to him. The ruling that she NEED NOT BE PAID is consequently quite logical.

(26) Who allows only the statutory kethubah to be collected on the production of a letter of divorce.

(27) When she produces her written kethubah alone.

(28) Because she might have already collected it with her letter of divorce (cf. supra p. 564, n. 5).

(29) Which is at all events due to her (cf. supra p. 564. n' 5). As our Mishnah, however, ruled that she NEED NOT BE PAID anything at all, an objection against Rab's view thus arises.

(30) In the statement of our Mishnah under discussion.

(31) And thereby procured exemption from payment of the kethubah.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 89b

he is also entitled to plead, 'I have divorced her but I have already paid her the kethubah'.[1]

But since it was stated in the final clause, R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED: SINCE THE TIME OF DANGER A WOMAN IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT HER KETHUBAH WITHOUT A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND A CREDITOR IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT [HIS DEBT] WITHOUT A PROSBUL, [it follows that] we are dealing with a case where witnesses to the divorce are present; for had no such witnesses been present whereby could she have collected [her kethubah]?[2] — [The fact], however, is that the entire Mishnah represents the view of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, but some clauses are missing, the correct reading being the following: NEED NOT BE PAID'. This applies only where no witnesses to the divorce are present, but if such witnesses are present she is entitled to collect her additional jointure. As to the statutory kethubah, if she produces her letter of divorce she may collect it, but if she does not produce her letter of divorce she may not collect it.[3] Since the time of danger, however, a woman may collect her kethubah even if she does not produce her letter of divorce, for R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED; SINCE THE TIME OF DANGER A WOMAN IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT HER KETHUBAH WITHOUT A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND A CREDIT OR [IS ENTITLED TO COLLECT HIS DEBT] WITHOUT A PROSBUL'.

R. Kahana and R. Assi said to Rab; According to the ruling you have laid down that the statutory kethubah is collected by the letter of divorce , [the question arises,] whereby does a woman who was widowed after her marriage collect her kethubah? [Obviously] through the witnesses [who testify to the] death [of her husband]. Should we not, however, take into consideration the possibility that her husband might have divorced her and that she might subsequently[4] produce the letter of divorce[5] and collect[6] with it also? — [A widow may collect her kethubah only] if she lived with her husband.[7] But is it not possible that he might have divorced her near the time of his death?[8] — [In such a case] it is he[9] who has brought the loss upon himself.

Whereby does a woman who was widowed after her betrothal collect her kethubah? [Obviously] by the witnesses [who testify to the man's] death. Should we not, however, take into consideration the possibility that the man might have divorced her and that she would subsequently produce her letter of divorce and collect with it also?[10] — [This],[11] however, [is the explanation:][12] Where no other course is possible a quittance may be written.[13] For were you not to admit this [the objection might be raised even in respect of] the very witnesses [who testify to her husband's] death:[14] The possibility should be considered that the woman might present [one pair of] witnesses to [her husband's] death before one court and so collect [her kethubah] and then present [another pair] before another court and collect it [again]. It must he obvious, therefore,[15] that where no other course is possible a quittance may be written.

Said Mar Kashisha the son of R. Hisda to R. Ashi: Whence is it derived that a woman who was widowed after her betrothal is entitled to a kethubah.[16] If it be suggested [that it may he derived] from this passage: 'A woman who was widowed or divorced either after her betrothal or after her marriage is entitled to collect all[17] [that is due to her]',[18] is it not possible [it may be retorted that this applies to a case] where the man had written a kethubah for her? And were you to argue. 'If he has written one for her, what need was there to tell [such an obvious rule?' It could be retorted that it serves the purpose] of rejecting the view of R. Eleazar b. Azariah who maintained that 'the man wrote the [additional jointure] for her with the sole object of marrying her'.[19] The inference too [from the Mishnah cited leads to the same conclusion].[20] For it has been stated, '[She] is entitled to collect all [that is due to her]'. Now if you agree that [this is a case where] the man had written [a kethubah] for her one can well understand why she 'is entitled to collect all [that is due to her]'.[21] If you submit, however, that the man did not write a kethubah for her, what [it may be objected is the justification for the expression.] 'is entitled to collect all', seeing that she is only entitled to one hundred or two hundred[22] zuz?[23] [Should it,] however, [be suggested that the law[24] may be derived] from that which R. Hiyya b. Abin[25] taught: 'In the case of a betrothed wife[26] [a husband] is neither [subject to the laws of] onan[27] nor may he[28] defile himself for her,[29] and she likewise is not subject to the laws of the onan[30] nor is she[31] obliged[32] to defile herself for him;[33] if she died he[34] does not inherit from her though if he died she is entitled to collect the amount of her kethubah',[35] is it not possible [it might be retorted that this refers only to a case] where the man had written a kethubah for her? And should you argue. 'If he had written one for her what need was there to state [such an obvious ruling?' It might be replied that] 'it was necessary [in order to inform us that if] she died he does not inherit from her'.[36]

R. Nahman said to R. Huna: According to Rab who laid down that a letter of divorce [enables a woman to] collect her statutory kethubah, is there no cause to apprehend that she might produce the letter of divorce at one court of law and collect her kethubah therewith and then again produce it at another court of law and collect therewith [a second time]? And should you reply that it might be torn up,[37] could she not [it may be retorted] demand, 'I need [it to be enabled] thereby[38] to marry again? — [What we do is,] we tear it up and endorse on the back of it: 'This letter of divorce has been torn by us, not because it is an invalid document but in order to prevent the woman from collecting therewith a second payments.

MISHNAH. [A WOMAN WHO PRODUCED] TWO LETTERS OF DIVORCE AND TWO KETHUBAHS MAY[39] COLLECT PAYMENT OF THE TWO KETHUBAHS.[40] [IF SHE PRODUCES, HOWEVER.] TWO KETHUBAHS AND ONE LETTER OF DIVORCE[41] OR ONE KETHUBAH AND TWO LETTERS OF DIVORCE,[42] OR A KETHUBAH, A LETTER OF DIVORCE AND [EVIDENCE OF HER HUSBAND'S] DEATH,[43] SHE MAY COLLECT PAYMENT FOR ONE KETHUBAH ONLY, FOR ANY MAN WHO DIVORCES HIS WIFE AND THEN REMARRIES HER CONTRACTS HIS SECOND MARRIAGE ON THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST KETHUBAH.[44]

GEMARA. If she desired it, she[45] could [evidently][46] collect [payment of her kethubah] either with the one kethubah or with the other.[47] May it not then be argued that this ruling presents an objection against the ruling which R. Nahman stated in the name of Samuel? For R. Nahman stated in the name of Samuel: Where two bills[48] are issued one after the other[49] the latter annuls the former![50] — Has it not been stated in connection with this ruling that R. Papa said: 'R. Nahman in fact admits that if one[51] has added in the [second] bill one palm-tree[52] [it is assumed that] he has written it[53] for the sake of that addition',[54] so also here [it is a case] where the husband has added something for her [in the second kethubah].[55]

Our Rabbis taught: If [a woman] produced a letter of divorce, a kethubah and [evidence of her husband's] death[56]

---

(1) His plea is accepted because by abstaining from the use of the false though convenient plea, 'I have not divorced her at all', he has established his reputation for honesty.

(2) It is obvious, therefore, that witnesses were available; contrary to R. Joseph's interpretation (supra 89a ad fin.).

(3) Since it is possible that she had already collected it once on the strength of her letter of divorce.

(4) After receiving payment of her kethubah on the evidence of the witnesses who testified to the death of her husband.

(5) Before another court.

(6) Her statutory kethubah.

(7) Where it is well known that she was not divorced by him.

(8) So that the fact would remain unknown.

(9) By consenting to a secret divorce.

(10) The answer previously given, which well explains the case of a widow after her marriage, is inapplicable here since a betrothed man and woman do not live together.

(11) And not as has been first suggested, 'where she lived with her husband'.

(12) Of the difficulty pointed out by R. Kahana and R. Assi.

(13) Had no quittance been allowed in such instances claimants would be deprived unjustly of their legitimate rights.

(14) In localities where no kethubah is written.

(15) Lit., 'but it is certain'.

(16) Even where the man did not write one for her. That this is the case is apparent from the previous discussion where the husband's liability has been tacitly assumed. Had not a betrothed woman been allowed a kethubah unless she possessed also a written document, the objection that she might collect her kethubah mote than once could must have been advanced, since the document would have been destroyed as soon as payment had been made.

(17) I.e., both her statutory kethubah and her additional jointure.

(18) Supra 47b, 54b, B.M. 17b.

(19) Cf. loc. cit., and since be died before he married her she, it might have been thought, is only entitled to her statutory kethubah but not to the additional jointure. Hence it was necessary for the ruling that she '15 entitled to collect all (that is due to her)'.

(20) That the case dealt with is one 'where the man had actually written a kethubah for her'.

(21) The reason being that the man had expressly promised her in writing not only the statutory kethubah but also the additional jointure.

(22) One hundred if she married as a widow, and two hundred if as a virgin.

(23) I.e., the statutory kethubah only and nothing more.

(24) That a woman who was widowed after her betrothal is entitled to her kethubah (v. supra p. 567, n. 2).

(25) The reading elsewhere (cf. B.M. 18a, Sanh. 28b) is 'Ammi'.

(26) Before the marriage took place.

(27) A mourner during the period between the death and burial of certain relatives is called onan (v. Glos.) and is subject to a number of restrictions. A priest whose betrothed wife died may, unlike one whose married wife died, partake of sacrificial meat or any other holy food.

(28) If he is a priest.

(29) Cf. Lev. XXI, 1ff.

(30) She is allowed to partake of holy food.
(31) Unlike a married wife whose duty it is to attend to the burial of her husband.
(32) Cf. supra n. 10. The laws of defilement do not apply to women. Cf., however, infra n. 22.
(33) Aliter; 'Nor may she defile herself for him', i.e., during a festival when not only priests but also Israelites and women are forbidden to attend on the corpses of those who are not their near relatives (v. R.H. 16b).
(34) Unlike a husband who is heir to his wife (v. B.B. 111b).
(35) Yeb. 29b, B.M. 18a.
(36) Which is not obvious. And since the case where 'she deed' had to be stated, the one where 'he died', though self-evident, had, by way of contrast, also to be mentioned.
(37) As soon as payment is made.
(38) By using it as evidence that she had been legally divorced.
(39) If the date of the first kethubah is earlier than that of the first divorce and that of the second kethubah is earlier than that of the second divorce.
(40) Because it is assumed that after he had once divorced her the man had remarried her and then divorced her again. The kethubahs are consequently both due to her.
(41) The dates of both kethubahs being earlier than that of the letter of divorce, so that both obviously refer to the same marriage.
(42) I.e., the man married her after she had once been divorced by him, but did not write for her a second kethubah before he again divorced her.
(43) If the order was marriage, divorce, remarriage, death.
(44) I.e., that she should be entitled only to the first kethubah.
(45) WHO PRODUCED TWO KETHUBAHS AND ONE LETTER OF DIVORCE.
(46) Since our Mishnah does not specify which of the two kethubahs is to be used, the choice is evidently left to the woman.
(47) I.e., either with the kethubah that bears the earlier, or with the one that bears the later date. Should she prefer to use that of the earlier date she would obviously be able to seize even such property as her husband had sold after the earlier, though prior to the later, date.
(48) Signed by the same person and referring to the same transaction.
(49) Sc. the date on the one is later than on the other.
(50) Supra 44a; and the holder of the two bills is entitled to seize only such property as the defendant had sold subsequent to the later date. This then is in contradiction, is it not, to the ruling in out Mishnah which authorizes the woman (cf. supra p. 569, n. 11) to make use of her earlier kethubah?
(51) A seller or donor.
(52) That was not included in the bill of the earlier date.
(53) The second bill.
(54) And not with the intention of annulling the first one.
(55) Cf supra n. 7. Hence the ruling that the woman may collect payment with either of the two kethubahs. She may not collect, however, with both kethubahs unless the second document contained a specific insertion to the effect that it was the husband's desire that the second one shall form an addition to the first. In the absence of such an insertion the woman may collect either (a) the smaller amount contained in the first kethubah and enjoy the right of seizing all property her husband had sold since that date or (b) the bigger amount in the second kethubah and restrict her right of seizure to such property only as bad been sold after the second date. By the issue of a second kethubah, containing an addition to the first one without the specific insertion mentioned, a husband is assumed to have conferred upon his wife the right of choosing between the respective advantages and disadvantages of the two documents. Where the second kethubah, however, contains no addition at all, the latter document is assumed to have been intended as a cancellation of the first, since otherwise it need not have been issued, and seizure of property is restricted to the later date.
(56) Claiming one kethubah as a divorcee from her first marriage and the other as a widow from her second marriage.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 90a

she may. if the letter of divorce bears an earlier date than the kethubah, collect payment for two kethubahs,[1] but if the kethubah bears an earlier date than the letter of divorce she may collect payment of one kethubah only, for any man who divorces his wife and then remarries her contracts his second marriage on the condition of the first kethubah.

MISHNAH. [IN THE CASE OF] A MINOR WHOM HIS FATHER HAD GIVEN IN MARRIAGE, THE KETHUBAH OF HIS WIFE[2] REMAINS VALID,[3] SINCE IT IS ON THIS CONDITION THAT HE KEPT HER AS HIS WIFE. [IN THE CASE OF ONE WHO BECAME] A PROSELYTE AND HIS WIFE WITH HIM, THE KETHUBAH REMAINS VALID,[4] SINCE IT IS ON THIS CONDITION THAT HE KEPT HER AS HIS WIFE.

GEMARA. R. Huna stated: [The ruling of our Mishnah][5] was given only in respect of the maneh[6] or the two hundred zuz;[7] to the additional jointure, however, she[8] is not entitled.[9] Rab Judah, however, stated: She[10] is entitled [to receive payment for] her additional jointure also.

An objection was raised: If an additional monetary obligation was undertaken[11] the woman receives that which was added.[12] [Thus it follows, does it not, that] only if an additional monetary obligation was undertaken[13] is the woman to receive any addition[14] but if no such addition was made[15] [she does] not [receive any addition at all]?[16] — Read: 'Also that which had been added'.[17] But surely, [in the following Baraitha] it was not taught so: 'If an additional monetary obligation was undertaken[13] the woman receives that which was added, and if no additional monetary obligation was undertaken a virgin receives two hundred zuz and a widow receives a maneh'. Is not this then an objection against Rab Judah?[18] — Rab Judah was misled by the wording of our Mishnah. He thought that the rule, 'THE KETHUBAH OF HIS WIFE REMAINS VALID', applied to the full amount;[19] but in fact it is not so. It applies to the statutory kethubah alone.

C H A P T E R X

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WAS MARRIED TO TWO WIVES AND DIED, THE FIRST [WIFE] TAXES PRECEDENCE[20] OVER THE SECOND, AND THE HEIRS[21] OF THE FIRST WIFE TAKE PRECEDENCE[22] OVER THE HEIRS OF THE SECOND. IF HE MARRIED A FIRST WIFE AND SHE DIED AND THEN HE MARRIED A SECOND WIFE AND HE HIMSELF DIED,[23] THE SECOND WIFE[24] AND HER HEIRS[25] TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER THE HEIRS OF THE FIRST WIFE.[26]

GEMARA. Since it was stated THE FIRST [WIFE] TAKES PRECEDENCE OVER THE SECOND but not 'The first wife receives payment[27] and the second does not',[28] it may be implied that if the second wife forestalled [the first] and seized [the payment of her kethubah] it cannot be taken away from her.[29] May it then be inferred from this ruling that if a creditor of a later date has forestalled [one of an earlier date] and 'distrained [on the property of the debtor], his distraint is of legal Validity?[30] In fact it may be maintained that his distraint is of no legal validity, and as to [the phrase] TAKES PRECEDENCE, It means complete [right of seizure];[31] as we have learned: A son takes precedence over a daughter.[32]

Some there are who say: Since it was not stated, 'If the second wife forestalled [the first] and seized [the payment of her kethubah] it is not to he taken away from her', it may be implied that even if she has seized payment it may be taken away from her. May it then be concluded that if a creditor of a later date has forestalled [one of an earlier date] and distrained [on the property of a debtor] his distraint is of no legal Validity?[33] — In fact it may be maintained that his distraint is of legal validity, only because the Tanna stated, THE SECOND WIFE AND HER HEIRS TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER THE HEIRS OF THE FIRST WIFE[34] ,

---

(1) Since in such a case it is evident that the kethubah was given to her in connection with her second marriage. Her first kethubah she collects on the evidence of her letter of divorce.

(2) The sum of two hundred in which is assigned to a virgin.
(3) Even when he becomes of age, though the woman at that time is no longer a virgin. (V. Tosaf. s.v אע"ז). The kethubah of a non-virgin is only one hundred in.
(4) Though it was given to her before her husband became a proselyte.
(5) That the wife of a minor is entitled to her kethubah even when he becomes of age.
(6) V. Glos.
(7) I.e., the statutory kethubah (cf supra n. 3) which is a woman s due in accordance with a Rabbinical enactment and is entirely independent of the minor's will or consent.
(8) The woman married to a minor.
(9) Since a minor cannot legally be bound to any contract.
(10) The woman who married a minor.
(11) Lit., 'they renewed', sc. the monetary addition was undertaken by the minor after he came of age or by the intending proselyte after he had embraced Judaism.
(12) Tosef. Keth. IX. It is now assumed that this refers to the additional sum only.
(13) V. p. 571. n. 11.
(14) Lit., 'yes'. Cf. p. 571, n. 12.
(15) After the minor came of age or the idolater had embraced Judaism.
(16) An objection against Rab Judah who allows a woman even the additional jointure that a minor or an idolater may have settled upon her.
(17) To the additional jointure that had been settled upon her while her husband was still an idolater or in his minority.
(18) Since here it was explicitly stated that only the statutory kethubah may be recovered (cf. supra n. 4).
(19) That was mentioned in the kethubah, i.e., the statutory kethubah as well as the additional jointure.
(20) In respect of her claim to her kethubah.
(21) If the women, having survived their husband, died before they had collected the payments of their kethubahs.
(22) Cf. supra n. 1, mutatis mutandis.
(23) And the sons of the first wife claim (a) their mother's kethubah to which they are entitled by virtue of the 'male children' clause (v. Mishnah supra 52b) which their father had entered in their mother's kethubah, or (b) their due share in their father's estate.
(24) Who, unlike the first, has survived her husband and consequently has, in respect of her claim upon her kethubah, the same legal status as a creditor.
(25) Who, like their mother, have the status of creditors.
(26) Who predeceased her husband and consequently lost her claim to her kethubah, since a surviving husband is the heir of his wife, her sons' claim to her kethubah (v. n. 4) being treated as a claim for an inheritance (v. supra 55a) and as such must yield precedence to that of a creditor.
(27) Lit., 'she has'.
(28) Lit., 'has not'.
(29) Since the expression of 'PRECEDENCE' only Implies priority of claim but not actual and inalienable right.
(30) Lit., 'what he collected is collected'. But If this were the case there would have been no dispute on the subject infra 94a.
(31) Lit , 'and what....he taught completely', i.e , the claim of the first wife to her kethubah is absolute; and, should there be no balance, the second wife would receive nothing.
(32) B.B. 115a, where the meaning is that if there is a son he has full rights to the estate whilst a daughter has no claim of heirship upon it at all.
(33) Cf. supra n. 1 mutatis mutandis.
(34) Where the statement, 'If the heir's of the first forestalled the heirs of the second and seized payment it is not to be taken away from them' is inapplicable, since, in fact, it is taken away from then, the estate being mortgaged to the heirs of the second who have the status of creditors.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 90b

he also taught. THE FIRST WIFE TAKES PRECEDENCE OVER THE SECOND.[1]

IF A MAN MARRIED A FIRST WIFE. Three rulings may be inferred from this statement. It may be inferred that if one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death, [the sons of the former] are entitled to the kethubah of 'male children'[2] and we do not apprehend any quarrelling.[3] Whence is this inferred? Since it was stated, THE SECOND WIFE AND HER HEIRS TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER THE HEIRS OF THE FIRST WIFE [it follows that] they are only entitled to precedence but that if there is [a balance, the others also] take [their share]. It may also be inferred that the kethubah [of the second wife][4] may be regarded as the surplus[5] over the other.[6] Whence is this inferred? Since it was not stated [that payment[7] is made only] if a surplus of a denar remained there. Furthermore It may be inferred that a kethubah [claimed by virtue] of the 'male children' [clause] may not be distrained on mortgaged property;[8] for if it could be imagined that it may be distrained on mortgaged property, the sons of the first wife[9] should [be entitled to] come and distrain on [the property] of the sons of the second .[10] To this R. Ashi demurred: Whence [these conclusions]? Might I not in fact maintain that if one [wife died] while her husband was alive, and the other after his death, [the sons of the former] are not entitled to the kethubah [that they claim by virtue] of the 'male children' clause, whilst the expression of[11] TAKE PRECEDENCE[12] might refer[13] to the inheritance?[14] And were you to retort: What was the object[15] [of the description] THE HEIRS OF THE FIRST WIFE?[16] [I might reply that] as the Tanna used the expression, THE SECOND WIFE AND HER HEIRS[17] he also spoke of THE HEIRS OF THE FIRST WIFE![18] And with reference to your conclusion that 'the kethubah [of the second wife] may be regarded as a surplus over the other', might I not in fact still maintain that no kethubah may be regarded as a surplus over the other, but here[19] it is a case where there was a surplus of a denar![20] [As to the case where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death, this is [a matter in dispute[21] between] Tannaim. For it was taught: [If a man's wives] died, one during his lifetime and the other after his death, the sons of the first wife, Ben Nannus ruled, can say to the sons of the second,[22] 'You are the sons of a creditor;[23] take your mother's kethubah[24] and go'.[25] R. Akiba said: The inheritance[26] has already been transferred[27] from [the sole right of inheritance by] the sons of the first wife[28] [the joint right of inheritance by these and] the sons of the second.[29] Do they[30] not differ on the following principle: One Master[31] holds the Opinion that where one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to the kethubah [of their mother by Virtue of the] 'male children' clause, and the other Master holds that where one [wife died] during a husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are not entitled to the 'male children' kethubah?[32] Said Rabbah: I found the young scholars of the academy while they were sitting [at their studies] and arguing: All[33] [may hold the view that where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to [their mother's] 'male children' kethubah, but here they[34] differ [on the principle whether the second wife's][35] kethubah may be regarded[36] as a surplus over the other; and the same dispute applies to [the debt] of a creditor.[37] One Master[31] holds that the [second wife's][35] kethubah is regarded as a surplus over the other,[36] and the same law applies to [the debt] of a creditor, and the other Master holds that no one kethubah may be regarded as a surplus over the other, and the same law applies to [the debt] of a creditor. Thereupon I said to them: In respect of [a claim of] a creditor no ones disputes [the view] that [the debt] is regarded as a surplus;[38] they[30] only differ in respect of a kethubah.[39] TO this R. Joseph demurred: If so[40] [instead of saying.] 'R. Akiba said: The inheritance has already been transferred' it should [have said.] 'If there is a surplus of a denar [the sons of the first wife receive their mother's kethubah].'[41] [The fact]. however, is, said R. Joseph. that they[42] differ [on the question whether the 'male children' kethubah is payable where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death .[43]

These Tannaim[44] [differ on the same principle] as the following Tannaim. For it was taught: If a man married his first wife and she died and then he married his second wife and he himself died, the sons of this wife[44] may come after [her][45] death and exact their mother's kethubah.[46] R. Simeon ruled: If there is a surplus of one denar[47] both[48] receive the kethubahs of their mothers but if no [such surplus remains] they[48] divide [the residue][49] in equal portions. Do they[50] not differ on this principle: Whereas one Master[51] holds that where one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to the ‘male children’ kethubah, the other Master holds that where one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the children of the former] are not entitled to the ‘male children’ kethubah?[52] No; all[53] may agree that where one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are to receive the ‘male children’ kethubah,

---

(1) omitting here also an expression which is inapplicable in the other case.

(2) Cf. supra 52b and supra p. 573’ n. 4.

(3) Between the heirs of the second, who claim their mother's kethubah as creditors (cf. supra p. 57. n. 6) and those of the first, who claim (cf. loc. cit. n. 7) their ‘male children’ kethubah as heirs, the former disputing the right of the latter to have .1 larger share in the father's estate than they.

(4) Which has the force of a debt.

(5) V. Mishnah infra 91a. The kethubahs that wives heirs receive by virtue of the ‘male children’ clause (supra 52b) is subject to a surplus of one denar, at least, that must remain after the kethubahs have been paid in full, to safeguard the application of the Pentateuchal law of succession in regard to at least part if the estate. If no such minimum surplus remains the ‘male children’ kethubahs cannot he collected and the entire estate is divided in accordance with the Pentateuchal law of succession among all the sons.

(6) The kethubah which the heirs of the first wife claim by virtue of the ‘male childrens’ clause. The kethubah of the second wife which has to he paid as a debt by all the heirs (cf. infra p. 573,11. 5) who first inherit that amount, provides for the application of the Pentateuchal law’ of succession. The heirs the first wife consequently receive their ‘male children’ kethubah and no minimum surplus of a denar is required as would have been the case had the second kethubah also been dependent on the ‘male children’ clause.

(7) Of the ‘male children’ kethubah of the first wife.

(8) l.c . it has the status of an inheritance and not that of a debt.

(9) Whose claim is of an earlier date than that of the second.

(10) Hence it may be inferred that their claim cannot be distrained on mortgaged property.

(11) Lit , ‘and what’.

(12) Which implies that if there is any residue they also receive a share.

(13) Lit., ‘it was taught’.

(14) Of their father's estate; and not to the ‘male children’ kethubah.

(15) Lit., ‘wherefore to me’.

(16) ‘OF THE FIRST WIFE’ in the final clause has no point if bet sons claim, not the ‘male children’ kethubah by virtue of her rights, but their share in their fathers estate as his heirs.

(17) A proper description, since it is by virtue of their mother's rights that their claim to her kethubah is established.

(18) A mere balancing of expression which has no bearing in the latter case on the source from which their claim is derived.

(19) If the PRECEDENCE spoken of refers even, as at first suggested, to the ‘male children’ kethubah.

(20) Though this fact was not specifically stated in our Mishnah it may have been taken for granted in view of the ruling laid down in the following Mishnah (infra 91a).

(21) As to whether the sons of the first wife are entitled to their mother's kethubah by virtue of the ‘male children’ clause.

(22) Wherever the estate does not allow of a surplus of a denar above the amount of the two kethubahs.

(23) Cf. supra p’ 573, n. 5.

(24) Which becomes due to her on the father's death, and which you inherit from her. This provides for the application of the Pentateuchal law of succession, all the heirs discharging a debt incurred by the father (cf. supra p. 575’ n. 3)’

(25) The Pentateuchal law of succession having been fulfilled (v. supra n 10) the sons of the first wife are entitled to the full payment of their mother's ‘male children’ kethubah out of the residue of the estate.

(26) Of the kethubah of the first wife who predeceased her husband.

(27) Lit., ‘jumped’. at the time the man died and was survived by his second wife.

(28) Lit., ‘and fell before’.

(29) I.e., the residue of the estate, remaining after the deduction of the second wife's kethubah, is the common inheritance of all the sons of the deceased, those of the wife who predeceased him having no claim whatsoever in respect of the male children' kethubah which is payable only where both wives predeceased their husband.

(30) Ben Nannus and R. Akiba.
(31) Ben Nannus.
(32) V. supra note I.
(33) Lit., 'all the world' (v. supra note 2).
(34) V. supra note 2.
(35) The woman who survived her husband and whose claim has the same force as that of a creditor.
(36) Where not even a denar remained after the claims of the two kethubahs had been met.
(37) In the ease where both wives predeceased their husband and the sons of both claim the 'male children' kethubahs of their mothers while the creditor lays claim to the residue.
(38) And the sons of the two wives are consequently entitled to their mother's 'male children' kethubahs respectively.
(39) Ben Nannus holds the view that the kethubah of a wife, who had survived her husband, has the same status as a debt and consequently (v. supra P. 575. n. 3) enables the sons of the first wife to collect the payment of the 'male children' kethubah of their mother; while R. Akiba maintains that the payment of a kethubah is not on a par with that of any other debt; for, whereas any other debt is paid by the heirs to another person after they had first inherited that sum (v. l.c). the amount of a kethubah is received by the sons themselves, in the first instance, as debtors without it having first fallen into their possession as heirs. The sons not having inherited the kethubah, there is no application here of the Pentateuchal law of succession. In order, therefore. that the Pentateuchal law of succession might not be superseded by the Rabbinical enactment of the 'male children' kethubah, it was ordained that in such a ease the sons of the first wife shall lose completely their rights to the kethubah.
(40) That R. Akiba allows the 'male children' kethubah where there is a surplus.
(41) The expression. however, which he actually used implies that the sons never receive their mother's kethubah.
(42) Ben Nannus and R. Akiba.
(43) As has been assumed at first (cf supra p. 576. notes 7.14. and p. 577' nn. 1-4).
(44) This (according to Rashi) is at present assumed to refer to the second wife who survived him and whose kethubah has, therefore, the status of a debt. R. Han, however, reads explicitly 'the sons of the second' (v. Tosaf infra 91a s.v.וכו').
(45) V. Tosaf. l.c.
(46) While the sons of the wife who predeceased her husband, as at present assumed (v. supra n. 5), are not entitled to their mother's kethubah, in virtue of the 'male children' clause.
(47) After the sum of the two kethubahs bad been deducted.
(48) The sons of both wives.
(49) The balance remaining after the kethubah of the second wife bad been paid.
(50) R. Simeon and the first Tanna.
(51) R. Simeon.
(52) But since the principles are the same what need was there to record two disputes on the very same principles?
(53) R. Simeon and the first Tanna,

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 91a

but they differ here on [the question whether it is necessary for the surplus] denar to consist of real estate. The one Master[1] holds that only real estate is regarded as a surplus[2] but not movables[3] and the other Master[4] holds that even movables [are regarded as surplus].[5] But can you say so?[6] Have we not learned, R. Simeon ruled: Even if there was movable property[7] it is of no avail[8] unless there was landed property [of the Value of] one denar more than [the total amount of] the two kethubahs?[9] — [The fact,] however, is that they[10] differ here on [the question whether] a denar of mortgaged property [is regarded as a surplus]. One Master[11] holds that only free property constitutes a surplus[12] but not mortgaged property, and the other Master[13] holds that mortgaged property also [constitutes a surplus]. If so,[14] [instead of stating,] 'R. Simeon ruled: If there is a surplus of one denar', should it not have been stated, 'Since there is a surplus of one denar'? — The fact, however, is that they[10] differ on [the question whether a sum] less than a denar [constitutes a surplus]. One Master[15] is of the opinion that only a denar constitutes a surplus[16] but not a sum less than a denar, and the other Master[17] holds that even less than a denar [constitutes a surplus]. But did not R. Simeon, however, say 'a denar'? And were you to reply. 'Reverse [their views]',[18] does not the first Tanna of the Mishnah[19] [it may be retorted] also speak of a denar?[20] — The fact, however, [is that we must follow] on the lines of the first two explanations. and reverse [the views].[21]

Mar Zutra stated in the name of R. Papa: The law [is that where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to the 'male children' kethubah, and that one kethubah[22] is regarded as the surplus over the other. [Now] granted that if we had been told that '[where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to the "male children" kethubah', but had not been told that 'one kethubah is regarded as the surplus over the other' it might have been presumed [that the former law applied] Only where the surplus amounted to a denar but not otherwise.[23] [Why,] however, could we [not have] been informed [of the second law only, viz., that] 'one kethubah is regarded as the surplus over the other', and it would have been self-evident,[24] [would it not, that this ruling was] due to [the law that 'where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death [the sons of the former] are entitled to the "male children" kethubah'?[25] — If we were given the information in such a manner, [the law] might have been presumed [to apply to a case,] for instance, where a man had married three wives of whom two died during his lifetime and one after his death, and the last mentioned had given birth to a daughter who is not entitled to heirship.[26] but [not to the case where] one [wife died] during her husband's lifetime and the other after his death and the latter had given birth to a son,[since in this case] the possibility of a quarrel[27] might have to be taken into consideration,[28] hence we were taught [that even in this case one kethubah[29] is regarded as surplus over the other].[30] MISHNAH. IF A MAN WAS MARRIED TO TWO WIVES AND THEY DIED, AND SUBSEQUENTLY HE HIMSELF DIED, AND THE ORPHANS [OF ONE OF THE WIVES][31] CLAIM THEIR MOTHER'S KETHUBAH[32] [BUT THE ESTATE OF THE DECEASED HUSBAND] IS ONLY ENOUGH[33] [FOR THE SETTLEMENT OF THE] TWO KETHUBAHS[34] [ALL THE ORPHANS] RECEIVE EQUAL SHARES.[35] IF THERE WAS A SURPLUS[36] OF [A MINIMUM OF] ONE DEN A R,[37] EACH GROUP OF SONS[38] RECEIVE THE KETHUBAH OF THEIR MOTHER.[39] IF THE ORPHANS [OF ONE OF THE WIVES][40] SAID, 'WE ARE OFFERING FOR OUR FATHER'S ESTATE ONE DEN AR MORE [THAN THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF THE KETHUBAHS]', IN ORDER THAT THEY [MIGHT THEREBY BE ENABLED TO] TAKE THEIR MOTHER'S KETHUBAH[41] THEIR REQUEST IS DISREGARDED[42] AND[43] THE ESTATE IS [PROPERLY] VALUED AT THE BETH DIN. IF THE ESTATE INCLUDED[44] PROSPECTIVE PROPERTY,[45] IT IS NOT [REGARDED] AS [PROPERTY HELD] IN ACTUAL POSSESSION.[46] R. SIMEON RULED: EVEN IF THERE WAS MOVABLE PROPERTY[47] IT IS OF NO AVAIL[48] UNLESS THERE WAS LANDED PROPERTY [WORTH] ONE DENAR MORE THAN [THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF] THE TWO KETHUBAHS.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: If one wife had[49] [a kethubah for] a thousand [zuz] and the other for five hundred, each group of sons[50] receive the kethubah of their mother provided a surplus of one denar was available; otherwise, they must divide the estate in equal proportions.

It is obvious [that if[51] the estate was] large[52] and[53] it depreciated,[54] the heirs have already[55] acquired ownership thereof.[56] What, [however, is the ruling where the estate was] small and it appreciated?[57] — Come and hear the case of the estate of the house of Bar Zarzur which was small and it appreciated, and when [the heirs] came [with their suit] before R. Amram he said to them, 'It is your duty[58] to satisfy them'.[59] As they disregarded [his ruling] he said to them, 'If you will not satisfy them I will chastise you with a thorn that causes no blood to flow'.[60] Thereupon he sent them to R. Nahman, who said to then,, 'Just as [in the case where an estate was] large and it depreciated

---

(1) The first Tanna.

(2) Lit., 'yes'.
(3) As in the case under dispute the surplus consisted of movables the first Tanna denies the sons of the first wife all rights to their mother's kethubah,
(4) R. Simeon,
(5) Hence his ruling that where there is a surplus (even if it consists of movables) the sons of the first wife, like those of the second, are entitled to the payment of their mother's kethubah,
(6) That R. Simeon regards movables also as a surplus.
(7) Lit., 'property which has no security'.
(8) As far as the calculation of a surplus is concerned,
(9) V. the Mishnah infra.
(10) R. Simeon and the first Tanna.
(11) The first Tanna,
(12) Lit., 'yes'.
(13) R. Simeon.
(14) That the Baraitha under discussion deals with a case where there is a surplus of one denar and that R. Simeon relaxes the ruling of the first Tanna by regarding that denar as surplus even if it represents mortgaged property.
(15) The first Tanna.
(16) Lit., 'yes'.
(17) R. Simeon.
(18) I.e., that in the opinion of the first Tanna the sons of the first wife are deprived of their mother's Kethubah (cf. supra p. 578, n. 7) only where there is no surplus at all, but if there is one, even if of less than a denar, they are entitled to her kethubah, while according to R. Simeon they are entitled to her kethubah only if the surplus amounts to a denar (so Tosaf. s.v. וכי תימא a.I. contrary to Rashi).
(19) Infra, who is in dispute with R. Simeon and who is identical with the first Tanna of the Baraitha (supra 90b) under discussion.
(20) How' then can it be suggested (cf. supra note 4) that the first Tanna admits a surplus of less than a dear?
(21) Cf. supra note 4 mutatis mutandis. The first Tanna deprives the sons of the first wife of her kethubah only where there is no surplus at all but if there is one, even though it consists of movables or mortgaged property. they are to receive her kethubah, while R. Simeon allows them their mother's kethubah only where the denar surplus consists of landed and free property (cf. Tosaf. s.v.כי). The previous objection against the expressions 'if' instead of 'since' (cf. supra p. 579' n. 16) does not arise since R. Simeon is more restrictive than the first Tanna.
(22) That is paid to the heirs of the wife who bad survived her husband and whose kethubah has the status of a debt.
(23) Lit., 'if there is a surplus of a denar, 'yes'; if not, 'not'. Hence one can well understand the necessity for the statement of the second law also.
(24) Lit., 'and l would know'.
(25) Since it is such a case only. where one kethubah has the status of a debt, that could give rise to this law. Where both wives died doting their husband's lifetime the sons of both have obviously equal rights of inheritance and the question of surplus to satisfy the Pentateuchal law of inheritance does not arise.
(26) In respect of her father's estate. As her claim is restricted to bet mother's kethubah alone, not being entitled to a share in the residue of bet father's estate after her mother's kethubah had been paid. no quarrels between bet and the sons of the two other wives could possibly arise on that account. Hence it is lawful for the sons whose mother's kethubah was larger to collect their due by pointing to the sum paid to the daughter (in settlement of her mother's kethubah which has the status of a debt) as the surplus which satisfied the Pentateuchal law of inheritance.
(27) Between that son and his brothers, all of whom have the same rights to their father's estate; v. supra p. 574. n. 8.
(28) I.e.,it might have been presumed that in order to obviate such a quarrel it may have been enacted that in such a case the second kethubah is not regarded as a surplus and all the sons share equally, after the payment of the second kethubah, the residue of their father's estate.
(29) V. supra p. 580, n. 8.
(30) The possibility of a quarrel does not affect the rights of the sons of the first wife.
(31) Whose kethubah was for a larger sum than that of the other.
(32) As heirs of their mother, by virtue of the 'male children' clause (v. Mishnah, supra 52b); while the other heirs demand a division in equal portions on the ground that, irrespective of their mother's 'male children' kethubahs, as sons of the deceased they are entitled to equal shares in his estate.

(33) Lit., ‘and there is not there but’.
(34) So that, if their demand is complied with, the brothers would be receiving their respective shares of their mother's kethubahs in virtue of the ‘male children’ clause, thus allowing no scope for the operation of the Biblical law of succession.
(35) As heirs of their father with equal rights to his estate.
(36) After the two kethubahs had been paid.
(37) So that the pentateuchal law of succession could be applied to it.
(38) Lit., ‘these... and these’.
(39) And the residue of the estate (amounting to not less than one denar) is then divided between all the sons in equal portions.
(40) V. supra note I.
(41) Cf. supra notes 4.9 and text.
(42) Lit., ‘they do not listen to them’.
(43) Lit., ‘but’.
(44) Lit., ‘there were there’.
(45) Such, for instance, as an expected inheritance from the orphan's grandfather who survived their father, or an outstanding debt of their father's which would fall due only at some time in the future.
(46) The existing estate must accordingly be divided equally amongst all the sons of the deceased though the addition of the prospective property would have provided a surplus.
(47) Cf. supra p’ 579’ n’ 9’
(48) Cf. loc. cit. n. 10.
(49) Lit., ‘to this’,
(50) Lit., ‘these ‘ . ‘ and these’.
(51) At the time the father died,
(52) I.e,, its value exceeded the total amount of the kethubah by not less than a denar,
(53) When it was valued at the court.
(54) So that no surplus remained after deduction of the amounts of the kethubahs,
(55) At the moment of their father's death, when there was a surplus (v. supra note 4).
(56) The sons of the wife whose kethubah was for the larger amount are, therefore, entitled to the larger sum though at the time of the division of the property there was no longer any surplus.
(57) V, supra notes 2-5. Are the sons who claim the larger kethubah now entitled to it as if the surplus had been available at the time of their father's death, or is a claim once lost never recoverable?
(58) Lit., ‘go’.
(59) The sons of the woman whose kethubah was for the larger amount,
(60) Metaph. He would place them under the ban.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 91b

the heirs have already acquired ownership thereof, so [also where the estate was] small and it appreciated the other heirs[1] have already[2] acquired ownership thereof.[3] (Mnemonic:[4] A thousand and a hundred duty in a kethubah, Jacob put up his fields by words [of] claimants.) A man against whom there was a claim of a thousand zuz had two mansions each of which he sold[5] for five hundred zuz. The creditor thereupon came and distrained on one of them and then he was going to distrain on the other. [Whereupon the purchaser] took one thousand zuz, and went to [the creditor] and said to him, ‘If [the one mansion] is worth to you one thousand zuz, well and good; but if not, take your thousand[6] zuz and go’.[7] Rami b. Hama [in dealing with the question] proposed that this case was exactly analogous to that in our Mishnah: IF THE ORPHANS [OF ONE OF THE WIVES] SAID, ‘WE ARE OFFERING FOR OUR FATHER'S ESTATE ONE DENAR MORE’.[8] But Raba said to him, ‘Are the two cases at all alike? There[9] the orphans[10] would be suffering a loss, but here, does the creditor suffer any loss? He only advanced a thousand zuz and a thousand zuz he receives

And for what amount is the tirpa[11] made out?[12] — Rabina said: For a thousand zuz. R. ‘Awira said: For five hundred. And the law is [that the tirpa is made out] for five hundred.

A certain man against whom someone had a claim for a hundred zuz had two small plots of land each of which he sold[5] for fifty zuz. His creditor came and distrained on one of them and then he came again to distrain on the other. [The purchaser. thereupon.] took a hundred zuz and went to him and said, ‘If [one of the plots] is worth a hundred zuz[13] to you. well and good; but if not, take the one hundred zuz and go’.[14] R. Joseph [in considering the question] proposed to say that this was a case exactly analogous to that in our Mishnah: IF THE ORPHANS [OF ONE OF THE WIVES] SAID[15] etc. But Abaye said to him, ‘Are the two cases at all alike? There the orphans would have suffered a loss, but here, what loss would [the creditor] have? He lent a hundred and receives a hundred’.

For what amount is the tirpa made out? — Rabina said: For a hundred. R. ‘Awira said: For fifty. And the law is [that it is made out] for fifty. A certain man against whom there was a claim for a hundred zuz died and left a small plot of land that was worth fifty zuz. As his creditor came and distrained on it the orphans went to him and handed to him fifty zuz. Thereupon he distrained on it again. When they came [with this action] before Abaye. he said to them, ‘It is a moral duty incumbent upon orphans[16] to pay the debt of their father.[17] With the first payment you have performed a moral duty. and now that he has seized [the land again] his action is perfectly lawful’,[18] This ruling. however, applies only in the case where [the orphans] did not tell him ,[19] ‘These fifty zuz are for the price of the small plot of land’, but if they did tell him, ‘these fifty zuz are for the price of the small plot of land’ ,[20] they have thereby entirely dismissed him,[21]

A certain man[22] once sold the kethubah of his mother[23] for a goodwill [price][24] and said to [the buyer], ‘If mother comes and raises objections I shall not pay you any compensation’.[25] His mother then died having raised no objections. but he himself[26] came and objected.[27] Rami b. Hama [in discussing the case] proposed to decide that he[28] takes the place of his mother. Raba, however, said to him: Granted that he did not accept any responsibility for her action, did he not accept responsibility for his own action either?[29] Rami b. Hama stated: If Reuben[30] sold a field to Simeon[30] without a guarantee[31] and Simeon then re-sold it to Reuben with a guarantee

---

(1) Whose mother's kethubah was for the smaller amount.

(2) At the moment their father died, when there was 110 surplus.

(3) Cf. supra note 8 mutatis mutandis,

(4) The words or phrases of the mnemonic correspond to striking terms in the successive rulings that follow,

(5) To one person after he had incurred his debt.

(6) The sum which the seller owed him,

(7) l,e,, ‘give up both mansions’,

(8) As the offer of the orphans is rejected on account of its excessive nature, so is the purchaser's demand of the excessive valuation of the one mansion also to be rejected.

(9) Our Mishnah.

(10) The sons of the woman whose kethubah was for the lesser amount.

(11) טירפא (rt. טרף ‘to seize’), a document issued by a court of law to a claimant (e.g.. a creditor, or a purchaser on whom, as in this case, the seller's creditor has distrained) who is unable to collect his due from the defendant (in this case, the seller), authorizing him to trace his property (including any land the defendant may have sold after the liability in question had been incurred by him) for the purpose of seizing it eventually in payment of his claim.

(12) Lit., ‘do we write’. Where the creditor was willing to accept the one mansion from the purchaser in settlement of his claim of one thousand zuz, is it for the five hundred zuz which the purchaser has actually lost, or is it for the one thousand zuz, the amount of the debt he has settled?

(13) The sum which the seller owed him.

(14) I.e., return both plots.

(15) Cf. supra p. 584. nn. 5.9 mutatis mutandis.

(16) Though such a duty cannot be enforced by a court of law.
(17) As a mark of respect for his memory.
(18) Since a debtor's landed property is pledged for his debts.
(19) The creditor, when they paid him the first fifty zuz.
(20) Thus pointing out that the money was not intended as a payment of the debt.
(21) He cannot again seize the land which is now the absolute property of the orphans.
(22) Whose mother married again after his father's death.
(23) During her second husband's lifetime.
(24) טובת הנאה (cf. supra p. 542, n. 4). A very small price only would be paid for such a kethubah, the purchase of which must be in the nature of a mere speculation, since the mother might die during the lifetime of her husband who would inherit it or the son might pre-decease his mother and never come Into Its possession. in both of which eases the purchaser would lose all he paid.
(25) LIt., 'I will not come to your rescue' (rt. פצי in Pa. 'to free , save , rescue separate by force'). i.e., he accepted no responsibility whatsoever for the safety of the money advanced.
(26) As the heir of his mother.
(27) Contending that as he had accepted no responsibility he may now, like his mother, himself object to the sale and thus procure the amount of the kethubah for himself.
(28) The son.
(29) Of course he did. Though he may well cancel the sale on the ground that it was invalid because it had taken place before he (the seller) was in possession of the inheritance (cf. B.M. 16a), he must nevertheless refund to the buyer the full price he had received whatever it may have been. (For an alternative interpretation v. Rashi a.I., second explanation. and cf. Tosaf s.v. דזבנה a.I.).
(30) The names of the first two sons of Jacob (cf. Gen. XXIX, 32f) are taken as fictitious names for 'seller' and 'buyer' respectively.
(31) For compensation in ease of distraint by a creditor.

and Reuben's creditor[1] came and seized it from him, the law is that Simeon must proceed to offer him[2] compensation.[3] Raba, however, said to him: Granted that [Simeon] had accepted responsibility for general claims,[4] did he also accept responsibility for [claims against Reuben] himself?[5] Raba admits, however, that where Reuben inherited a field from Jacob[6] and sold it to Simeon[7] without a guarantee and Simeon then re-sold It to Reuben with a guarantee. whereupon Jacob's creditor came and seized it from him, the law is that Simeon must proceed to offer him[8] compensation.[9] What is the reason?-Jacob's creditor is regarded as any other creditor.[10]

Rami b. Hama [further] stated: If Reuben sold a field to Simeon with a guarantee and allowed [the price of the field] to stand[11] as a loan,[12] and when Reuben died, and his creditor came to seize it from Simeon, [the latter] satisfied him by [refunding to him the] amount ,[13] the law is that Reuben's children can tell him, '[As far as] we [are concerned,] our father has left movables[14] with you. and the movables of orphans are not pledged to a creditor.'[15]

Raba remarked: If the other[16] is clever he gives them[17] a plot of land in settlement of the debt and then he collects it from them,[18] in accordance [with a ruling of] R. Nahman who stated in the name of Rabbah b. Abbahu: If orphans collected a plot of land for their father's debt,[19] a creditor[20] may in turn collect it from them.[21] Rabbah[22] stated: If Reuben sold all his fields[23] to Simeon who In turn sold one field [of these] to Levi, and then Reuben's creditor appeared,[24] [the latter] may collect either from the one or from the other.[25] This law, however, applies only where [Levi] had bought [land of] medium quality, but if he bought either the best or the worst he may tell him,[26] 'It is for this reason[27] that I have taken the trouble [to buy the best or the worst because either is] land which is not available for you'.[28] And even [when he bought] medium quality the law is applicable only where [Levi] did not leave[29] medium quality of a similar nature

---

(1) By virtue of a bond the date of which was antecedent to that of the first sale.

(2) Reuben.

(3) As if Reuben had not been the original seller. As simeon, who guaranteed compensation. would have to fulfil his obligation in the ease of any other buyer he incurs the same liability towards Reuben who, not having given any guarantee for his sale has the same status as any other buyer. ומפצי, rt. פצי cf. supra note 2.

(4) Proceeding from his own creditors.

(5) The answer is obviously in the negative. Simeon is undoubtedly exempt from all such claims.

(6) Sc. his father (cf. supra p. 586, n' 7).

(7) I.e., any other person (v. loc. cit.).

(8) Reuben,

(9) Lit., 'and rescue him from him' (cf. supra p. 586, n. 2).

(10) I.e., as if Jacob had been a stranger and the creditor had no claim against Reuben's father but against the man from whom Reuben had bought the field. Since the claim of the creditor is not against Reuben himself the claim against his father does not affect his right if he once sold the field without guarantee and Simeon resold it to him with a guarantee.

(11) Lit., 'put up', 'established'.

(12) I.e., instead of paying in cash Simeon gave him a note of Indebtedness,

(13) Lit,, zuzim, money', i,e., the amount of the loan which he owed to Reuben's heirs.

(14) Viz., the amount of the debt,

(15) Nor to the buyer who has been deprived by him of the field. Having paid a claim for which the orphans were not responsible, he must suffer the loss himself,

(16) The buyer from whom the orphans now claim the price of the land which he owes,

(17) The orphans.

(18) By virtue of the responsibility which their father, as seller, had undertaken towards him, as buyer. Since the land comes into their possession by virtue of the debt they inherited from their father, it is deemed to be an inheritance which may be seized by a buyer whose purchase had been distrained on by their father's creditor.

(19) Which was owing to him.
(20) Who lent money to their father,
(21) As if the land had been a direct inheritance from their father, although their acquisition of it took place after his death (cf. supra n. 13) as a result of the creditor's inability to meet his obligation.
(22) MS.M. reads, 'Raba', and this is also the reading in the parallel passage in B.K. 8b.
(23) By one deed of sale (v. infra n. 4).
(24) Claiming payment of the debt,
(25) Lit,,'if he wishes he collects from this and if he wishes he etc.', i.e., either from Simeon or from Levi. Where, however, the fields were sold by Reuben under more than one deed (cf. supra n. 2) his creditor cannot distrain on Levi unless the field the latter had bought was the last one that Reuben had sold to Simeon. If it was not the last, Levi may refuse payment on the ground that, even after Simeon had bought that field, Reuben was still in possession of sufficient property to meet his creditor's claim, and that no creditor can distrain on property sold while free property remained in the debtor's possession.
(26) The creditor who is entitled to recover his debt from the medium quality of the debtor's free, or sold property.
(27) That the creditor might have no legal claim upon it,
(28) Cf. supra n. 5'
(29) With Simeon.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 92b

but if he did leave medium quality of a similar nature he may lawfully tell him,[1] 'I have left for you ample land[2] from which to collect [your debt]'.

Abaye stated: If Reuben sold a field to Simeon with a guarantee and a creditor of Reuben's came to distrain on it the law is that Reuben may proceed to litigate[3] with that creditor and [the latter] cannot say to him, 'You are no party to me'[4] for [the other can] retort, 'For whatever you will take away from him he will turn to me [to claim compensation]'[5] Others say: Even where no guarantee was given[6] the same law[7] applies, since [Reuben] may say to him,[8] 'I do not like Simeon to have any grievance against me

Abaye [further] stated: If Reuben sold a field to Simeon without a guarantee and there appeared against him[9]

---

(1) The creditor.
(2) Lit., 'place'.
(3) ומפצי Cf. supra p. 586, n. 2.
(4) Since he was distraining against Simeon and not against him who, as an uninterested party, has no right to be a pleader in the lawsuit (cf. B.K. 70a).
(5) 'Hence I am an interested party'.
(6) By Reuben to Simeon.
(7) That the creditor cannot say to Reuben, 'You are no party to me'.
(8) The creditor,
(9) Reuben.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 93a

claimants[1] [disputing his title to the field][2] he[3] may withdraw before he has taken possession of it,[4] but after he had taken possession of it[5] he may no longer withdraw,[6] because [Reuben] can say to him,[3] 'You have agreed to a bag sealed with knots[7] and you got it'.[8] And from what moment is possession considered to have been effected? — As soon as he[9] sets his foot upon the landmarks.[10] Others say: Even [If the sale was made] with a guarantee the same law[11] applies. since [the seller] might say to him, 'Produce the tirpa[12] [that was issued against] you and I shall pay you'.[13]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WHO WAS MARRIED TO THREE WIVES DIED, AND THE KETHUBAH OF ONE[14] WAS A MANEH,[15] OF THE OTHER[14] TWO HUNDRED ZUZ, AND OF THE THIRD[14] THREE HUNDRED ZUZ[16] AND THE ESTATE[17] [WAS WORTH] ONLY ONE MANEH[18] [THE SUM] IS DIVIDED EQUALLY.[19] IF THE ESTATE[20] [WAS WORTH] TWO HUNDRED ZUZ [THE CLAIMANT] OF THE MANEH RECEIVES FIFTY ZUZ[21] [AND THE CLAIMANTS RESPECTIVELY] OF THE TWO HUNDRED AND THE THREE HUNDRED ZUZ [RECEIVE EACH] THREE GOLD DENARII.[22] IF THE ESTATE[23] [WAS WORTH] THREE HUNDRED ZUZ,[24] [THE CLAIMANT] OF THE MANEH RECEIVES FIFTY ZUZ[25] AND [THE CLAIMANT] OF THE TWO HUNDRED ZUZ [RECEIVES] A MANEH[25] WHILE [THE CLAIMANT] OF THE THREE HUNDRED ZUZ [RECEIVES] SIX GOLD DENARII.[26] SIMILARLY, IF THREE PERSONS CONTRIBUTED TO A JOINT FUND[27] AND THEY HAD MADE A LOSS OR A PROFIT THEY SHARE IN THE SAME MANNER.[28]

GEMARA. [THE CLAIMANT] OF THE MANEH RECEIVES FIFTY ZUZ. Should she not be entitled to thirty-three and a third zuz only?[29] — Samuel replied: [Here it is a case] where the one who is entitled to the two hundred zuz gave a written undertaking to the woman who was entitled to one maneh, 'I have no claim whatsoever upon the maneh'.[30] But if so,[31] read the next clause: [THE CLAIMANTS RESPECTIVELY] OF THE TWO HUNDRED, AND THE THREE HUNDRED ZUZ [RECEIVE EACH] THREE GOLD DENARII, [why, it may be objected, could she[32] not] tell her,[33] 'You have already renounced your claim upon[34] it'? — Because she can reply. 'I have only renounced my claim'.[35]

IF THE ESTATE [WAS WORTH] THREE HUNDRED etc. [Why should THE CLAIMANT] OF THE TWO HUNDRED ZUZ[36] RECEIVE A MANEH [when in fact] she should be entitled to seventy-five zuz only?[37] — Samuel replied: [Our Mishnah refers to a case] where the woman who was entitled to the three hundred zuz gave a written undertaking to the one who was entitled to the two hundred zuz and the other who was entitled to a maneh, 'I have no claim whatsoever upon you in respect of one maneh'.[38] R. Jacob of Nehar Pekod[39] replied in the name of Rabina: The first clause deals with two acts of seizure[40] and the final clause deals with two acts of seizure.[40] 'The first clause deals with two acts of seizure' viz. seventy-five zuz came into their hands[41] the first[42] time[43] and one hundred and twenty-five the second[42] time.[44] 'The final clause deals with two acts of seizure, viz., seventy-five came into their hands[41] the first[42] time[43] and two hundred and twenty-five the second[42] time.[45]

It was taught: This[46] is the teaching of R. Nathan. Rabbi,[47] however, said, 'I do not approve[48] of R. Nathan's views in these [cases][46] for[49] [the three wives][50] take equal shares'.[51]

SIMILARLY IF THREE PERSONS CONTRIBUTED. Samuel ruled: If two persons contributed to a joint fund,[52] one of them a maneh, and the other two hundred zuz,

---

(1) עסיקין 'contestants' (v. Rashi). Others: 'disputes' (cf. Jast. s.v, עסק II).

(2) Aliter: 'Protests against the tithe were issued' (v. fast. loc. cit.).

(3) Simeon.

(4) If he has not yet paid for it.

(5) And so legally acquired it. Legal acquisition may be effected before the price of the land had been paid, the price becoming a debt due to the seller.

(6) Despite the disputes involved.

(7) Rashi (B.K. 9a): A bag full of wind.

(8) I.e.'you made a purchase without proper investigation and you must bear the unpleasant consequences.

(9) The buyer.

(10) Of the field, to level them (v. Rashi B.M. 14b).

(11) That the buyer may not withdraw after he had taken possession.
(12) V. supra p. 584, n. 8.
(13) I.e., before the court has authorized the distraint the buyer has no right to cancel the sale on the ground that he is troubled by claimants, Only when the court has given its decision in favour of the claimants, and the land was actually taken away from him, has he the right to call upon the seller for compensation.
(14) Lit., 'this',
(15) A hundred zuz (v. Glos.).
(16) And the three contracts bore the same date, If they bear different dates the collection of any earlier kethubah takes precedence over the later one.
(17) Lit., 'there was'.
(18) A hundred zuz (v. Glos.).
(19) Since the three women have equal claims upon that maneh, the smallest kethubah being for no less than one maneh.
(20) Lit., 'there was'.
(21) This will be discussed in the Gemara infra.
(22) I,e., seventy-five zuz. A gold denar twenty-five silver denarii or zuz (v. B.M. 45b). The two women take equal shares in the two hundred zuz since the kethubah of either is for no less a sum and the money available is equally pledged to both.
(23) Lit., 'there was',
(24) So that the first maneh is pledged to all the three women (cf. supra note 2). the second to the claimants of the two hundred and the three hundred respectively, while the third maneh is only pledged to the claimant of the three hundred.
(25) V. supra note 4'
(26) One hundred and fifty us.
(27) Lit., 'who put into a bag' sc. for trading purposes.
(28) In proportion to the amounts contributed.
(29) I,e., a third of the first maneh, since she has no claim at all upon the second maneh,
(30) Which is legally pledged to her. In that maneh she has only one rival claimant in the person of the woman whose kethubah is for three hundred, The maneh is consequently to be divided between the two only.
(31) That the holder of the kethubah for the two hundred us has renounced her claim upon the first maneh,
(32) The claimant of the three hundred zuz.
(33) The holder of the kethubah for the two hundred.
(34) Lit 'you have removed yourself from'.
(35) 'As far as the claimant of the maneh was concerned but not my legal right to a share in it', i.e., she only undertook to abstain from litigation with the claimant of the maneh in order to enable her thereby to obtain a half of that sum, but she had not renounced her right to a share in that maneh should she ever wish to assert it against the third wife, the holder of the kethubah for the three hundred us. She is, therefore, entitled, as far as the balance of that maneh is concerned, to claim a share equal to that of the third wife, which, together with her share in the second maneh, amounts to (50/2 + 100/2) seventy-five us or three gold denarii,
(36) Who, as stated above, has renounced fifty zuz of the first maneh.
(37) I.e., a half of the balance of fifty of the first maneh and a half of the second maneh amounting to a total of (520/2 +100/2 = 25 +50) seventy-five zuz, The third maneh upon which she has no claim at all (cf. supra p. 590. n. 7) must, of course, be excluded from the calculations of her share.
(38) While the woman whose kethubah was for two hundred us did not renounce any of her rights in favour of the holder of the kethubah for the one maneh. The first maneh is consequently divided between these two, the second maneh between the second and the third woman while the third maneh is given to the third woman only.
(39) Lit., 'the river of Pekod', a town east of Nehardea, or a district in S.E. Babylon. Pekod is mentioned in Jer. L, 21 and Ezek. XXIII, 23.
(40) l.e., the women collected the amounts mentioned in two instalments, the second of which was not available when the first was collected.
(41) Lit., 'fell'.
(42) Lit., 'one'.
(43) Since each woman had a claim upon this sum the three divide it between them in equal shares, each one receiving twenty-five zuz.

(44) The first one, having already received twenty-five us, now claims no more than seventy-five zuz, and since her claim to the seventy-five zuz is legally equal to the claims of the other two women the sum is equally divided between them and she receives a third of it, or twenty-five zuz, bringing up her total collection to FIFTY ZUZ. The second woman who has a claim upon the full balance of a hundred zuz divides the sum with the third woman each receiving fifty zuz which, added to the twenty-five zuz each received of the first maneh, amounts to a total of seventy-five zuz, or THREE GOLD DENARII.
(45) Seventy-five us of these, as in the previous case (cf. supra n. 4), is equally divided between the three women thus allowing a total of FIFTY ZUZ for the first woman. The second one who also received twenty-five zuz at the first division and who still claims a balance of two hundred minus twenty-five one hundred and seventy-five us receives twenty-five zuz as her share in the seventy-five us mentioned and another fifty zuz which is her share in the maneh that is equally divided between her and the third woman, thus receiving a total of twenty-five plus twenty-five plus fifty a hundred zuz or a MANEH. The balance of fifty us now remaining is given to the third woman who thus receives a total of twenty-five plus twenty-five plus fifty plus fifty one hundred and fifty==six GOLD DENARII.
(46) The part of our Mishnah which deals with the eases of the three women.
(47) R. Judah the Patriarch or Prince, compiler of the Mishnah.
(48) Lit,, 'see'.
(49) Lit., 'but'.
(50) Despite the difference in the amounts of their respective kethubahs.
(51) The estate being equally pledged to all the three, the woman who claims the smallest amount has no less a right to it than the women who claim the bigger amounts have a right to theirs. Only in the case of contributors to a common fund are profits and losses to be divided in proportion to the respective amounts contributed.
(52) Cf. supra p. 590, n. 10.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 93b

the Profit is to be equally divided.[1] Rabbah said: It stands to reason [that Samuel's ruling applies] where an ox [was purchased][2] for ploughing and Was used[3] for ploughing.[4] Where, however, an ox [was purchased] for ploughing[5] and was used[3] for slaughter[6] each of the Partners[7] receives a share in proportion to his capital.[8] R. Hamnuna, however, ruled: Where an ox [was bought] for ploughing,[9] even if it was used[3] for slaughter[10] the profit must be equally divided.[11]

An objection was raised: If two persons contributed to a joint fund,[12] one of them a maneh, and the other, two hundred zuz, the profit is to be equally divided.[13] Does not this refer to an ox [bought] for ploughing and used[3] for slaughter, and [thus presenting] an objection against Rabbah? — No, it refers to an ox that was bought for ploughing and was used for ploughing.[9] What, however, [is the law where] an ox [was bought] for ploughing and used[3] for killing? Does each partner[7] [in such a case] receive a share in proportion to his capital? Then instead of stating in the final clause, 'If one man had bought [some oxen] out of his own money and the other [had bought some] out of his own money[14] and the animals were mixed up, each partner[7] receives a share in proportion to his capital',[15] could not a distinction have been made in the very same case,[16] [thus:] 'This[17] applies only where an ox was bought for ploughing and was used for ploughing, but where an ox was bought for ploughing and was used for slaughter each partner receives a share in proportion to his capital'? — It is this, in fact, that[18] was implied: 'This[19] applies only where an ox was bought for ploughing and was used for ploughing. but where an ox was bought for ploughing and was used for slaughter' the law is the same as 'if one man had bought [some oxen] out of his own money and the other [had bought some] out of his own money, and the animals were mixed up [in which case] each party receives a share in proportion to his capital'.

We learned: SIMILARLY IF THREE PERSONS CONTRIBUTED TO A JOINT FUND AND THEY MADE A LOSS OR A PROFIT THEY SHARE IN THE SAME MANNER. Does not 'THEY MADE A LOSS mean that they made a loss on their actual transaction, and A PROFIT' that they made a profit on their actual transaction?[20] — R. Nahman replied in the name of Rabbah b.

Abbuha: No; they made 'A PROFIT' [owing to the issue of] new coins[21] and THEY MADE A LOSS' [by the deterioration of a coin into] an istira[22] that was only suitable for application to a bunion.[23]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WHO WAS MARRIED TO FOUR WIVES DIED, HIS FIRST WIFE[24] TAKES PRECEDENCE[25] OVER THE SECOND, THE SECOND TAKES PRECEDENCE OVER THE THIRD AND THE THIRD OVER THE FOURTH. THE FIRST MUST TAKE AN OATH[26] [IN ORDER TO GIVE SATISFACTION] TO THE SECOND,[27] THE SECOND TO THE THIRD,[28] AND THE THIRD TO THE FOURTH,[28] WHILE THE FOURTH RECOVERS PAYMENT WITHOUT AN OATH.[29] BEN NANNUS SAID: SHOULD SHE[30] HAVE THE ADVANTAGE BECAUSE SHE IS THE LAST? SHE ALSO MAY NOT EXACT PAYMENT EXCEPT ON OATH, IF ALL [KETHUBAHS] WERE ISSUED ON THE SAME DAY THEN THE WOMAN [WHOSE KETHUBAH] PRECEDED THAT OF THE OTHER, EVEN IF ONLY BY ONE HOUR,[31] GAINS [THE FIRST RIGHT]. AND SO IT WAS THE CUSTOM IN JERUSALEM TO INSERT THE HOURS [IN SUCH DOCUMENTS]. IF ALL KETHUBAHS WERE ISSUED AT THE SAME HOUR AND THE ESTATE IS WORTH NO MORE[32] THAN A MANEH [THE WOMEN] RECEIVE EQUAL. SHARES.

GEMARA. On what principle do they[33] differ? — Samuel replied:

---

(1) Lit., 'for the middle'.

(2) With the joint capital.

(3) Lit., 'stands'.

(4) So that the share of one partner in the ox is as essential as that of the other, the animal being useless for work unless it is whole.

(5) And much more so if it was purchased for slaughter. (Cf. infra note 7.)

(6) Its value in flesh having in the meantime increased.

(7) Lit., 'this ' ' ' this'.

(8) Since the carcase can be well divided. The original intention to use the animal for ploughing only (cf. supra note 3) does not alter the fact that in the end it was used for the purpose which admitted of division.

(9) V. supra nn. 3 and 7'

(10) Cf. supra n. 4 mutatis mutandis.

(11) Lit., 'for the middle'.

(12) Cf. supra p. 590 n. 10.

(13) Tosef. Keth. X.

(14) One party having bought more expensive and, therefore, much stronger animals than the other.

(15) Tosef. I.e.; since stronger animals are capable of more work.

(16) Spoken of in the first clause, where the two men bought an ox jointly.

(17) That profits are equally divided.

(18) Lit., 'thus also'.

(19) That profits are equally divided.

(20) Which is in contradiction to Samuel's ruling (Rashi). .Aliter: Since it is self-evident that profits on an ox that was both bought and used for slaughter are to be divided proportionally, this ruling, being superfluous in such a case, must refer to that of an ox that was originally bought for ploughing and was only subsequently used for slaughter. Thus an objection arises against R. Hamnuna (v. Tosaf, s,v. מאי a.I.).

(21) The older currency which the men originally invested being worth more than the new currency. so that the profit in the terms of the new currency was not made on any business transactions but on the actual coins. Since then it is the original investments that are returned to their owners the return must be in proportion to the respective original investments. Any profit, however, that is the result of business transactions is equally divided, (V. Rashi. Cf., however, Tosaf. s.v. הותירו a.I.)

(22) A coin (v. Glos.).

(23) As a cure. I.e., coins that have been withdrawn from circulation and, having lost their monetary value, are of no more use than a piece of metal. Such a loss (cf. supra note 4) must be borne by the two men in proportion. A trading loss, however, is, as Samuel ruled, to be equally divided.

(24) I,e,, the woman whose kethubah bears the earliest date.

(25) In respect of her claim to her kethubah,

(26) That she had received no payments from her husband, on account of her kethubah, prior to his death,

(27) Who might lose all her kethubah should no balance remain after the first had collected her due,

(28) Cf. supra n. 4 mutatis mutandis,

(29) If the orphans are of age. In the ease of orphans who are still in their minority no one may exact payment from them except with an oath; v. supra 87a.

(30) The fourth.

(31) Provided the hour had been entered in the document.

(32) Lit., 'and there is not there',

(33) Ben Nannus and the first Tanna.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 94a

[Their dispute relates to a case,] for instance, where It was found that one of the fields[1] did not belong to him,[2] their point of difference[3] being the question [of the legality of the action] of a creditor of a later date who forestalled [one of an earlier date] and distrained [on the debtor's property]. The first Tanna holds that such distraint has no legal validity,[4] and Ben Nannus holds that whatever he distrained on is legally his,[5] R. Nahman in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha replied: Both[6] agree that the distraint [of a creditor of a later date] has no legal validity,[7] but here they differ on the question whether provision is to be made against the possibility that [the fourth woman might] allow the ground to deteriorate. One Master[8] is of the opinion that provision is to be made against the possibility that she[9] might allow the ground[10] to deteriorate,[11] and the other Master is of the opinion that no provision need be made against such a possibility. Abaye replied: The difference between them[6] is the ruling of Abaye the Elder who stated: The 'orphans' spoken of[12] are grown-ups and there is no need to say that minors[13] [are included].[14] The first Tanna[15] does not hold the view of Abaye the Elder while Ben Nannus upholds it.[16]

R.Huna stated: If two brothers or two partners had a lawsuit[17] against a third party[18] and one of them went with that person to law,[19] the other[20] cannot say to him,[21] 'You are not my party'[22] because[23] [the one who went to law] acted on his behalf also.[24]

R. Nahman once visited Sura[25] and was asked what the law was in such a case.[26] He replied: This is [a case that has been stated in] our Mishnah: THE FIRST MUST TAKE AN OATH [IN ORDER TO GIVE SATISFACTION] TO THE SECOND, THE SECOND TO THE THIRD AND THE THIRD TO THE FOURTH, but it was not stated, 'the first to the third'. Now, what could be the reason?[27] Obviously[28] because [the second] has acted on her behalf also. But are [the two cases] alike? In the latter,[29] an oath for one person is the same as an oath for a hundred,[30] but in this case[31] he[32] might well plead, 'Had l been present I would have submitted more convincing arguments'.[33] This,[34] however, applies only when he[32] was not In town [when the action was tried] but if he was in town [his plea is disregarded, since if he had any valid arguments] he ought to have come.[35]

It was stated: If two deeds[36] bearing the same date[37] [are presented in court,[38] the property in question],[39] Rab ruled, should be divided [between the two claimants], and Samuel ruled: [The case is to be decided at] the discretion of the judges.[40] Must it be assumed that Rab follows the view Of R. Meir who holds that the signatures of the witnesses make [a Get] effective,[41]

---

(1) Which the first three women had taken in payment of their respective kethubahs.

(2) I.e., it was found that the deceased husband had taken it by violence from a person who might appear at any moment to claim it, and any one of the three wives, that might thus be deprived of her field, would ultimately proceed 10 make her claim against the field that had been reserved for the fourth wife.

(3) In arguing the question whether the fourth woman may be asked by one of the other women to take an oath that she had not already collected her kethubah during the lifetime of their husband,
(4) And the creditor who holds the earlier-dated bond may consequently distrain on that property. Similarly in the case of the kethubah spoken of in our Mishnah, as that of the fourth woman bears the latest date, any of the other women, being in the position of earlier creditor, may distrain on her field wherever she is deprived of the field that had been allotted to her. And since the fourth may thus be deprived of her field by any of the others at any time there is no need to make sure of her claim by the imposition of an oath, and she, consequently, RECEIVES PAYMENT WITHOUT AN OATH.
(5) As the fourth woman (cf. supra note I) could not consequently be deprived of her field once it has been allotted to her SHE ALSO MAY NOT RECEIVE PAYMENT EXCEPT UNDER AN OATH.
(6) Ben Nannus and the first Tanna.
(7) Against the claims of an earlier creditor,
(8) Ben Nannus.
(9) The fourth woman.
(10) That has been allotted to her.
(11) If no oath were imposed upon her she would realize that her tenure of the property may only be temporary and would consequently exploit it to the full and neglect its amelioration. Hence the ruling that she also must take an oath before she receives payment.
(12) In the Mishnah supra 87a and Shebu. 45a: From orphans' property she cannot recover payment except on oath. (Cf. Mishnah Git, 48b: Payment from orphans can be received only from the poorest land).
(13) Who require greater protection.
(14) Cf. Git. 50a, Shebu. 47b.
(15) Who exempts the fourth woman from the oath.
(16) Our Mishnah does not refer to the particular case which Samuel mentioned and the oath is imposed upon the fourth woman as a protection of the orphans and not vis-_-vis the other women,
(17) In connection with their joint ownership.
(18) Lit,, 'one'.
(19) And lost his case.
(20) Brother or partner.
(21) The third party.
(22) And so demand a new trial on his share.
(23) Lit.,'but'.
(24) Lit,, 'he did his mission'.
(25) V. supra p. 383, n. 7'
(26) Dealt with by R. Huna.
(27) For exempting the first from taking an oath vis-_-vis the third.
(28) Lit., 'not?'
(29) Lit., 'there', that is our Mishnah.
(30) Once the woman has declared on oath that her husband had not paid her kethubah, her claim to it is established irrespective of the number of women who plead that she may have been paid by her husband.
(31) Lit., 'here'.
(32) The brother or partner who was not present at the trial.
(33) Which would have enabled him to win his case. Our Mishnah, therefore, provides no answer to the enquiry addressed to R. Nahman.
(34) That the plea, 'Had I been present etc.' is admissible.
(35) To court,
(36) Of a sale or a gift relating to the same property.
(37) Lit., 'coming forth in one day'.
(38) As the hour at which a deed was executed was not usually entered (except in Jerusalem) it cannot be determined which of the deeds is the earlier and which is the later document.
(39) I.e., the property of the donor or seller respectively which the holders of the deeds claim.
(40) שודא דדייני , v. supra p. 541. n. 12. The judges are empowered to give their decision in favour of the claimant who in their opinion deserves it (so Rashi and R. Tam, Tosaf. B.B. 350 s.v שודא) According to Rashb. (B.B. loc. cit.) the judges estimate which of the two claimants the seller or donor was more likely to favour. This may also be the opinion of Rashi (cf. infra 94b s.v. ושמואל ad fin).

(41) Git. 3b. Lit., 'the witnesses of the signature cut (the marriage union)'. In the ease of a deed, too. the validity should begin on the date the signatures were attached. And since the two deeds bear the same date and no hours are specified (cf. supra p. 597, n. 22) the two should have the same force and there can be no other alternative but that of dividing the property equally between the two claimants.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 94b

and that Samuel follows the view of R. Eleazar who holds that the witnesses to the delivery [Of a Get] make it effective?[1] — No, all[2] follow the view of R. Eleazar,[3] but it is the following Principle on which they differ here. Rab is of the opinion that a division [between the claimants] is preferable and Samuel holds that [leaving the decision to] the discretion Of the judges is prefer. able. But can you maintain that Rab follows the view Of R. Eleazar? Surely, Rab Judah stated in the name of Rab, 'The halachah is in agreement with R. Eleazar in matters Of divorce' [and he added.] 'When I mentioned this in Samuel's presence he said: "Also in the case of other deeds". Does not this then imply that Rab is of the opinion that in the case Of deeds [the halachah is] not [in agreement with R. Eleazar]?' Clearly. Rab follows the view Of R. Meir and Samuel that of R. Eleazar.

An objection was raised: 'If two deeds[4] bearing the same date [are produced in court, the property In question] is to be divided. Is not this an objection against Samuel?[5] — Samuel can answer you: This represents the view of[6] R. Meir but I follow the view of R. Eleazar.[7]

But if this[8] represents the view of R. Meir, read the final clause: 'If he[9] wrote [a deed] for one man[10] [and then he wrote a deed for,] and delivered it to another man, the one to whom he delivered [the deed] acquires legal possession'. Now if [this[8] represents the view of] R. Meir why does he acquire possession? Did he not, in fact, lay down that the signatures of the witnesses[11] make [a Get] effective?[12] — This[13] [is a question which is also in dispute between] Tannaim.[14] For it was taught: And the Sages say [that the money][15] must[16] be divided,[17] while here[18] it was ruled that the trustee[19] shall use his own discretion.[20]

The mother of Rami b. Hama[21] gave her property in writing to Rami b. Hama in the morning, but in the evening she gave it in writing to Mar 'Ukba b. Hama.[22] Rami b. Hama came before R. Shesheth who confirmed him in the possession of the property. Mar 'Ukba then appeared before R. Nahman who Similarly confirmed him in the possession of the property. R. Shesheth, thereupon, came to R. Nahman and said to him, 'What is the reason that the Master has acted in this way?' 'And what is the reason', the other retorted, 'that the Master has acted in that way?' 'Because', the former replied, '[Rami's deed was written] first' ,[23] 'Are we then', the other retorted, 'living in Jerusalem where the hours are inserted [in deeds]?'[24] 'Then why [the former asked] did the Master act in this way?'[25] '[I treated it,] the other retorted, [as a case to be decided] at the discretion of the judges'.[26] 'I too'' the first said, '[treated the case as one to be decided at] the discretion of the judges' ,[27] 'In the first place' the other retorted, 'I am a judge[28] and the Master is no judge, and furthermore, you did not at first come with this argument' ,[29]

Two deeds [of sale][30] were once presented before R. Joseph, one being dated,[31] 'On the fifth of Nisan' ,[32] and the other was vaguely dated, 'In Nisan'. R. Joseph confirmed the [holder of the deed which had the entry,] 'fifth of Nisan' in the possession of the property. 'And I', said the other, 'must lose?' 'You', he replied, 'are at a disadvantage, since it may be suggested that your deed was one that was written[33] on the twenty-ninth of Nisan'[34] 'Will, then, the Master', the other asked, 'write for me

(1) Cit. 9b. The date of the signatures is immaterial. Since, therefore, it is possible that the donor or seller has delivered the one deed before he delivered the other, the judges must use their discretion in deciding which of the two claimants was the more likely to have been favoured by the deceased.
(2) L.it., 'all the world', Rab and Samuel.
(3) Since his ruling is the accepted law (cf. Cit. 86b).
(4) V. supra p 597' nn. 20-23.
(5) Who maintained that it is left to the discretion of the judges to decide which of the claimants is to receive the property in dispute.
(6) Lit., 'this according to whom?'
(7) Since Samuel has Tannaitic authority for his view he may well differ from R. Meir.
(8) The Baraitha, the first clause of which has been quoted.
(9) The seller or donor.
(10) To whom, however, he did not deliver it until a later date (v. infra n. 7).
(11) Not the delivery of the document.
(12) And since the first deed was signed before the other, the holder of that deed should have acquired possession despite the fact that it was delivered to him after the second deed had been delivered to the other man. The Baraitha must consequently represent the view of R. Eleazar who, as is evident from the first clause, also upholds the ruling that the property in dispute must he divided, How then, in opposition to two Tannaim, could Samuel (cf. supra p. 598' n. 7) maintain his view?
(13) The point in dispute between Rab and Samuel,
(14) Cf. supra n. 2.
(15) Which a man sent through an agent to a certain person who, however, died before the agent could deliver It to him (v. Cit, 14b).
(16) If on returning the agent found that the sender also had died,
(17) Between the heirs of the sender and the heirs of the payee.
(18) In Babylon.
(19) השליש lit., 'the third party', I.e., the agent through whom the money was sent. The parallel passage (Git. 14b) reads, השליח'the messenger. Colds, suggests that השלי which was an abbreviation for השליח was here wrongly read השליש.
(20) A ruling which is based on the same principle as that of Samuel's in respect of the judges. The ruling of the Sages is followed by Rab while that adopted by the Rabbis in Babylon is followed by Samuel,
(21) Cf. B.B. 151a where an incident involving the same characters is recorded. The circumstances, however, are not exactly identical and the arguments involve totally different principles. The two records (v. Tosaf. s,v, אמיה) obviously deal with two different incidents.
(22) And it was not known to which of the two the deed was delivered first.
(23) In the morning, while that of his brother was written in the evening.
(24) Of course not. Since in Babylon no hours were entered in deeds it is obvious that, in accordance with the usage of the place. if two deeds were written on the same day no preference is to be given to one because it was written a few hours earlier than the other, Rami, therefore, can claim no preference over Mar 'Ukba.
(25) Since both deeds have the same force the property should have been equally divided between Rami and Mar 'Ukba. Why was it all confirmed in the possession of the latter?
(26) I.e..following the ruling of R. Eleazar that it is the witnesses to the delivery that render a deed effective, he estimated that it was Mar 'Ukba, for whom his mother had been known to have had greater affection, to whom his deed had been delivered first.
(27) And since his decision was given first, R. Nahman should not have reversed it by relying merely on his own discretion,
(28) Appointed by the Exilarch and the academy (Rashi).
(29) He did not at first contend that he treated the case as one that was dependent on the discretion of the judges but submitted that Rami was entitled to the property because his deed was written first. As this submission was erroneous, since outside Jerusalem no hours were entered in deeds and the case was not tried in Jerusalem but in Babylon, his decision could well be reversed.
(30) Both relating to the same field that was sold under a guarantee for indemnification.

(31) Lit., 'written'.

(32) The first civil month in the Hebrew calendar corresponding to March-April.

(33) Lit., 'son of'.

(34) I.e., the last day of the month. Hence the priority of the claim of the holder of the presumably earlier deed.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 95a

a tirpa[1] [authorizing distraint on property sold][2] after the first of Iyar?'[3] 'They',[4] he replied, 'might tell you: You [are holding a deed] that was written on the first of Nisan' .[5] What means of redress [can he[6] have recourse to]?[7] — They[8] write out authorizations[9] to one another.[10] MISHNAH. IF A MAN WHO WAS MARRIED TO TWO WIVES SOLD HIS FIELD,[11] AND THE FIRST WIFE[12] HAD GIVEN A WRITTEN DECLARATION TO THE BUYER, 'I HAVE NO CLAIM WHATSOEVER UPON YOU', THE SECOND WIFE[13] MAY[14] DISTRAIN ON THE BUYER, AND THE FIRST WIFE[12] ON THE SECOND, AND THE BUYER ON THE FIRST WIFE,[15] AND SO THEY GO ON IN TURN UNTIL THEY ARRANGE SOME COMPROMISE BETWEEN THEM, THE SAME LAW APPLIES ALSO TO[16] A CREDITOR[17] AND TO[16] A WOMAN CREDITOR,[17]

GEMARA. What matters it even if she HAD GIVEN him A WRITTEN DECLARATION? Has it not been a man says to another, 'I have no claim whatsoever on this field, I have no concern in it and l entirely dissociate myself from it', his statement is of no effect?[18] — Here we are dealing with a case where a kinyan was executed.[19] But even if kinyan had been executed, what is the use? Could she not say, 'I merely wished to oblige my husband'?[20] Have we not, in fact, learned: If a man bought [a married woman's property][21] from her husband and then bought it also from the wife, his purchase is legally invalid.[22] Does not this[11] [13] show clearly that the woman can plead, 'l merely wished to oblige my husband'?[20] R. Zera replied in the name of R. Hisda: This is no difficulty. One ruling[23] is that of R. Meir and the other[24] is that of R. Judah. For it was taught: [If a husband] drew up a deed[25] for the buyer[26] [of a field of his wife],[27] and she did not endorse it, [and then he drew up a deed] for another buyer [of a field of hers][27] and that she did endorse, she loses thereby [her claim to] her kethubah,'[28] so R. Meir.[29] R. Judah, however, said: She may plead, 'I[30] merely meant to oblige my husband;[31] what [claim] can you have against me?'[32]

As to Rabbi,[33] however, would he allow the anonymous Mishnah here to represent the view of R. Meir and the anonymous Mishnah there[34] to represent the view of R. Judah?[35] R. Papa replied: [Our Mishnah deals] with the case of a divorced woman,[36] and it represents the opinion of all. R. Ashi replied: Both Mishnahs[37] represent the views of R. Meir,[38] for R. Meir maintains his view[39] only there where two buyers are concerned,[40] since in such a case she may well be told, 'If you wished to oblige. you should have done so in the case of the first buyer',[41] but where Only one buyer [is concerned]. even R. Meir admits [that the sale is invalid].[42] while our Mishnah[43] [refers to a case] where [the husband had first] written out a deed for another buyer.[44]

Elsewhere we learned: Payment cannot be recovered from mortgaged property where free assets are available, even if they are only of the poorest quality.[45] The question was raised: If the free assets were blasted[46] may the mortgaged property be distrained on? — Come and hear: [If a husband] drew up a deed for the buyer [of a field of his wife] and she did not endorse it [and then he drew up a deed] for another buyer [of a field of hers] and that she did endorse, she loses thereby [her claim to] her kethubah,' so R. Meir.[47] Now, if it could be imagined that where the free assets were blasted the mortgaged property may be distrained on [the difficulty would arise:] Granted that she lost [her right to recover] her kethubah from the second buyer,[48] why[49] should she not be entitled[50] to recover it, at any rate, from the first buyer?[51] — Said R. Nahman b. Isaac:[52] The meaning of 'she loses' is that she loses [her right to recover her due] from the second buyer.[53] Said Raba: Two objections may be raised against this explanation:[54] In the first place [it may be pointed out] that [the expression of]

'she loses' implies total loss. And, furthermore, it was taught: If a man borrowed from one person and sold his property to two others, and the creditor gave a written declaration to the second buyer, 'I have no claim whatever upon you', [this creditor] has no claim whatever upon the first buyer, since the latter can tell him, 'I have left you[55] a source[56] from which to recover your debt'![57] — There,[58] [it may be argued[59] that] it was he[60] who had deliberately caused the loss to himself.[61]

Said R. Yemar to R. Ashi:

---

(1) V. supra p. 584, n. 8.

(2) By the same vendor.

(3) The month following Nisan. Lit., 'from Iyar onwards'. However late in Nisan the deed may have been written it could not have been later than the first of the following month, and the vendee should, therefore (v. supra p. 600, n. 9)' be entitled to distrain at least on those vendees who purchased their property from the same vendor after he had purchased his.

(4) The vendees whose purchases were effected after the first of Iyar.

(5) And since his deed was consequently of an earlier date than the one that was written on the 'fifth of Nisan', the holder of the latter deed was not entitled to the property which R. Joseph confirmed in his possession. 'Before distraining on our purchases', the vendees (v. supra n. 8) might well plead, 'claim the land which you have actually bought'.

(6) The holder of the 'In Nisan' deed.

(7) In view of the alternative pleadings. Should he make a claim against the holder of the deed written On the fifth of Nisan the latter could retort that 'In Nisan' meant the twenty-ninth of the month; and should he attempt to distrain on those who bought after the first of Iyar they could retort that 'In Nisan' meant the first of that month.

(8) The holders of the 'In Nisan' and 'fifth of Nisan' deeds.

(9) To distrain on subsequent buyers.

(10) The holder of the 'In Nisan' deed is thus enabled to distrain on the subsequent vendees by virtue of his own deed or by virtue of that of the 'fifth of Nisan' held by the other. Since the vendor guaranteed to indemnify either of them he may distrain on behalf of the other if the later vendees plead that his deed was written as early as on the first of Nisan; or if, in reply to the claim of the holder of the 'fifth of Nisan' deed, they pleaded that the 'In Nisan' deed was written as late as on the twenty-ninth and that the holder of the earlier deed should consequently have distrained on him and not on them, who were later purchasers, he may distrain on them by virtue of his own deed.

(11) Which was pledged for the kethubahs of the women,

(12) I.e., the woman who was married first and whose kethubah consequently bore the earlier date.

(13) Whose claim upon the field was not in any way impaired.

(14) When her husband dies.

(15) Since she had renounced in his favour her claims upon that field.

(16) Lit., 'and so',

(17) This is explained infra.

(18) Supra 83a q.v. for notes, Git. 77a.

(19) Lit., 'they (sc. witnesses) acquired from her (on behalf of the vendee)'. Such a kinyan (as was laid down by Amemar, supra 83b) is taken to refer to the land itself and not merely to the woman's abstract renunciation.

(20) St. her kinyan was not meant to be taken seriously.

(21) Which (a) her husband inserted in her kethubah as a special security for the sum of that kethubah, apart from the general security on all his estate, or (b) her husband assigned to her after their wedding as special security for her kethubah, or (c) she had brought to her husband as marriage dowry and for the money value of which he had made himself responsible to her (v. B,B. 49b ff).

(22) Cit. 55b, B.B. loc. cit. (13) The ruling that the sale is invalid.

(23) That of our Mishnah,

(24) The ruling that the sale is invalid.

(25) Lit., 'he wrote .

(26) Lit., 'for the first'.

(27) V, supra p. 602, n. 11.

(28) If her husband has no free property left. She cannot recover her kethubah even from the first buyer since he might plead that when he had bought his field her husband was still left in the possession of that field which he subsequently sold to the second purchaser.

(29) Because by refusing to endorse the first deed she made it clear that she had no desire to please her husband. Her action in endorsing the second deed may, therefore, be regarded as the true expression of her consent to the sale and her earnest renunciation of her claim upon the property.

(30) In endorsing the second deed.

(31) Cf. supra p. 602, n. 10,

(32) Surely none. She is, therefore, entitled to recover her kethubah from the second buyer.

(33) R. Judah the Patriarch, the Redactor of the Mishnah.

(34) Git, 55b just cited.

(35) Since the halachah agrees as a rule with the anonymous Mishnah a contradiction would arise.

(36) Who renounced her rights to the purchased field after she had been divorced, so that the plea of obliging her husband is clearly inadmissible.

(37) Lit., 'all of it', our Mishnah as well as the one in Git. 55b.

(38) Both dealing with a woman who was still living with her husband,

(39) That the woman loses her kethubah.

(40) As was specifically mentioned in that Baraitha. Cf. supra note 7'

(41) As she had not done it she cannot now plead that her object was to oblige her husband.

(42) Since she may plead that she merely wished to oblige her husband.

(43) Which regards the woman's renunciation as valid.

(44) Whose deed she refused to endorse. Cf. supra p. 603, n. 7.

(45) Git. 48b.

(46) After the sale of the others.

(47) Cf. supra p, 603 notes,

(48) On account of her endorsement of his purchase.

(49) Since her first source of payment was no longer available,

(50) As in the case of free assets that were blasted.

(51) Whose purchase corresponds to the 'mortgaged property' referred to in the enquiry. Since, however, she is not allowed to distrain on the first it follows, does it not, that even if the free assets were blasted, payment cannot be recovered from mortgaged property.

(52) The Baraitha quoted provides no solution to the question.

(53) Her right to recover her kethubah from the first buyer, however, remains unimpaired.

(54) Which R. Nahman b. Isaac advanced.

(55) 'When I purchased the first field'.

(56) The field which the second buyer had subsequently purchased.

(57) Similarly in the ease of the woman, her kethubah cannot be recovered from the first buyer who might well plead that he too had left her a source from which to collect her kethubah, R. Nahman h. Isaac's explanation thus stands refuted by two objections.

(58) In the Baraitha cited by Raba,

(59) In justification of R. Nahman b. Isaac's explanation. So according to R. Tam and R. Han (v. Tosaf, s.v. הֹתם a. l.), contrary to Rashi who regards what follows as the conclusion of Raba's arguments, v. infra n. 5.

(60) The creditor,

(61) By signing the declaration in favour of the second buyer though he was well aware that by this act he loses the only source available for the recovery of his debt. In the ease of a woman, however, whose kethubah does not fall due for payment until after the death of her husband, it may well be maintained that the renunciation of her rights in favour of the second buyer, during the lifetime of her husband, was not regarded by her as of any practical consequence, and the loss ultimately ensuing cannot, therefore, be said to have been deliberately caused by herself. As the two eases are not analogous R. Nahman b. Isaac's explanation stands unrefuted, The first objection raised by Raba remains unanswered as happens sometimes in such Talmudic discussions where only the second of two objections is dealt with. Moreover the first objection is rather feeble and may well be met by the reply that the expression 'she loses' need not necessarily imply total loss (so Tosaf. loc, cit.), According to Rashi 'There . ' himself', is taken by Raba as an argument against the solution of the problem that was attempted by inference from the first Baraitha, and might also be inferred from the last one quoted (cf. Golds.). ‘There’, i,e.,in the eases dealt with in the last Baraithas, the argument runs, it was he’, i e.,the claimant (the woman in the first case and the creditor in the second) ‘who had caused the loss to himself’; and no inference can, therefore, be drawn from either of these cases in respect of the one referred to in the question where the claimant is in no way responsible for the loss of the free assets.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 95b

This,[1] Surely, is the regular practice[2] [of the courts of law]? For did not a man once pledge a vineyard to his friend for ten years[3] but it aged after five years,[4] and [when the creditor] came to the Rabbis[5] they wrote out a tirpa[6] for him?[7] — There[8] also it was they[9] who caused the loss to themselves. For, having been aware that it may happen that a Vineyard should age,[10] they should not have bought [any of the debtor's pledged land].[11] The law, however, is that where free assets are blasted, mortgaged property may be distrained on. Abaye ruled: [If a man said to a woman][12] ‘My estate shall be yours and after you [it shall be given] to So-and-so’, and then the woman[13] married, her husband has the Status of a vendee and her successor[14] has no legal claim[15] in face[16] of her husband. In agreement with whose view [was Abaye's ruling laid down]? In agreement with the following Tanna.[17] For it has been taught: [If one man said to another,] ‘My estate shall be yours and after you [it shall be given] to So-and-so’ and the first recipient went down [into the estate] and sold it, the second may reclaim the estate[18] from those who bought it; so Rabbi. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel ruled: The second may receive only that which the first has left.[19] But could Abaye have laid down such a ruling? Did not Abaye in fact, Say, ‘Who is a cunning rogue? He who counsels[20] to sell[21] an estate[22] in accordance with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel?[23] — Did he Say, ‘She may marry’?[24] All he said was, ‘The woman married’.[25]

Abaye further stated: [If a man said to a woman.][26] ‘My estate shall be yours and after you [it shall be given] to So-and-so’ and the woman sold [the estate] and died, her husband[27] may seize It from the buyer, the woman's successor[28] [may seize it] from the husband,[29] and the buyer from the successor,[30] and all the estate is confirmed in the possession of the buyer.[31] But why should this case be different from the following where we learned: AND SO THEY GO ON IN TURN UNTIL THEY ARRANGE SOME COMPROMISE BETWEEN THEM?-There they are all suffering some loss[32] but here it is only the buyer who suffers the loss.[33]

Rafram went to R. Ashi and recited this argument to him: Could Abaye have laid down such a ruling?[34] Did he not, in fact, lay down: [If a man said to a woman.] ‘My estate shall be yours and after you [it shall be given] to So-and-so’,and then the woman married, her husband has the status of a vendee, and her successor has no legal claim in face of her husband?[35] — The other replied: There [it is a woman] to whom he[36] spoke while she was feme sole,[37] but here [we are dealing with one] to whom he[36] spoke when she was married.[38] For it is this that he meant to tell[39] her? ‘Your successor only shall acquire Possession; your husband shall not’.[40]

THE SAME LAW APPLIES ALSO TO A CREDITOR. A Tanna taught:[41] The same law applies to[42] a creditor and two buyers[43] and also to a woman, who was a creditor,[44] and two buyers.[45]

C H A P T E R X I

MISHNAH. A WIDOW IS TO BE MAINTAINED OUT OF THE ESTATE OF [HER DECEASED HUSBAND'S] ORPHANS [AND] HER HANDIWORK BELONGS TO THEM. IT IS NOT THEIR DUTY, HOWEVER, TO BURY HER; IT IS THE DUTY OF HER HEIRS, EVEN THOSE WHO INHERIT HER KETHUBAH, TO BURY HER.

GEMARA. The question was asked: Have we learnt,[46] ‘is to be maintained’[47] or ‘one who is maintained’?[48] Have we learned, ‘is to be maintained’, in agreement with the men of Galilee,[49] so that there is no way[50] [by which the orphans] can avoid[51] maintaining her; or have we rather learned 'one who is maintained',[48] in agreement with the men of Judaea,[52] so that [the orphans,] if they wish it, need not[53] maintain her?

---

(1) To allow creditors to distrain on mortgaged property wherever free assets are blasted.

(2) Lit., 'and, surely, actions every day'.

(3) The terms entered in the mortgage deed being that the creditor was to enjoy the usufruct of the vineyard during the ten years, in payment of his loan, while the vineyard itself was to return to the debtor at the end of that period without any further payment or obligation on his part.

(4) I.e., ceased yielding produce before the creditor had recouped himself in full.

(5) To claim the balance of the loan,

(6) V. supra p. 584, n. 8.

(7) And thereby enabled him to distrain on all property which the debtor had sold after the date On which the mortgage deed was written. This being the regular practice in the administration of the law, why was the question, supra 95a, at all raised?

(8) The ease just cited.

(9) Who purchased the lands from the debtor though they were well aware that these were already pledged to the mortgagee of the vineyard.

(10) And that this might happen before the expiry of the ten years in consequence of which the creditor would naturally distrain on the debtor's remaining property.

(11) Having bought it they have only themselves to blame for the consequences. The regular practice of the courts in such actions has, therefore, no bearing on the ease referred to in the question.

(12) Who (as will be explained Infra) was feme sole.

(13) Lit., 'and stood up'.

(14) Lit., 'to after you'.

(15) Lit., 'nothing'.

(16) Lit., 'place'.

(17) R. Simeon b. Gamaliel.

(18) After the death of the first donee who, by the terms of the gift, was entitled to the usufruct during his lifetime only but had no right to sell the estate itself

(19) B.B. 137a; and since the first has sold the estate the second his no rightful claim upon it.

(20) So Rashb. (B. B. 137a). Aliter. Who lakes counsel with himself (R. Gersh.).

(21) And much more so one who sells (so according to Rashb. v. supra n. 15).

(22) Which was given to a person with the stipulation that after his death it shall pass over to another person.

(23) Sotah 21b, B. B. loc. cit. Though such a sale is morally wrong, since the donor meant the second donee to have the estate after the death of the first, it is nevertheless quite legal on the basis of the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel. Now since Abaye condemns the person who acts on the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, would he himself base a ruling of his on this view' of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel?

(24) Which would have implied approval.

(25) A fait accompli. Her action, however, though legal, is nevertheless condemned by Abaye as morally wrong.

(26) Who (v. infra) was married.

(27) Who has the status of a first buyer.

(28) Cf. supra p. 606, n. 9.

(29) Because, unlike the previous ease where the woman of whom Abaye spoke was unmarried, the woman in this case (v. supra n. 4) was married at the time the estate was presented to her and her successor. Her husband who was not in any way mentioned by the donor is, therefore, deemed to have been Implicitly excluded by the donor from all rights to, or claim upon. the estate.

(30) In agreement with the ruling of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel that the first donee has the right to sell the estate.

(31) It cannot again be taken away from him by the husband, since his present tenure of the estate is no longer based upon his rights as a buyer from the married woman but upon the rights derived from her successor. In the former ease the husband as 'first buyer' (v. supra note 5) would have had right of seizure. In the latter ease he has none.

(32) The buyer loses some of his purchase money and the women lose portions of their kethubah.

(33) The husband and the donees are only claiming a gift.
(34) That all the estate is confirmed in the possession of the buyer.
(35) Cf. supra p. 606, n. 7 and 9.
(36) The donor.
(37) Cf. supra p. 606, n. 7.
(38) Cf. supra p. 607, n. 4.
(39) Lit., 'what did he (mean) to say?'
(40) Cf. supra 607. n. 7.
(41) In explanation of our Mishnah.
(42) Lit., 'and so'.
(43) The total value of whose purchases from the debtor represents the amount of the debt. The creditor, if he renounced his claim to the extent of that portion of the debt that was secured on the second buyer's purchase, may distrain on the purchases of the first buyer who in turn distrains on the second buyer (whose purchase was that of property that was already pledged to the first in security of his purchase) who in turn distrains on the creditor (by virtue of his renunciation); and so they go on in turn until a compromise is arranged.
(44) Sc. who claims the amount of her kethubah.
(45) Cf. supra n' 9 mutatis mutandis.
(46) In our Mishnah.
(47) ניזונת sc. the reading given supra.
(48) הניזונת in which case the Mishnah means that only the handiwork of a widow, who is maintained by the orphans, belongs to them.
(49) Who entered in the kethubah the clause. 'You shall dwell in my house and be maintained therein out of my estate throughout the duration of your widowhood' (v. Mishnah supra 52b).
(50) 'To go' (cf. fast.).
(51) Aliter. There is no possibility of avoiding (cf. Levy).
(52) Who added to the clause mentioned (supra n. 4), 'Until the heirs may consent to pay you your kethubah' (Mishnah. supra 52b).
(53) If they had paid her the kethubah.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 96a

— Come and hear what[1] R. Zera stated in the name of Samuel:[2] 'The find of a widow belongs to herself'. Now if you grant that what we learnt was, one who is maintained' [this ruling is] quite justified,[3] but if you insist that what we learnt was 'is to be maintained'[4] [why,[5] it might be objected, should they not] have the same rights as a husband, and just as in the latter case[6] a wife's find belongs to her husband, so it, the former case[7] also the find of the woman[8] should belong to the heirs?[9] — I may still insist that what we have learnt[10] was 'is to be maintained'; for the reason why[11] the Rabbis have ordained that the find of a wife belonged to her husband is in order that he shall bear no grudge[12] against her, but as regards these[13] let them bear the grudge.[14]

R.Jose b. Hanina ruled: All manner of work which a wife must render to her husband[15] a widow must render to the orphans, with the exception of serving one's drinks,[16] making ready one's bed and washing one's face, hands or feet.[17] R.Joshua b. Levi ruled: All manner of service that a slave must render to his master a student must render to his teacher, except that of taking off his[18] shoe.[19] Raba explained: This ruling[20] applies only to a place where he[21] is not known, but where he is known there can be no objection.[22] R. Ashi said: Even where he[21] is not known the ruling[20] applies only where he does not put on tefillin[23] but where he puts on tefillin, he may well perform such a service.[22] R.Hiyya b. Abba stated in the name of R. Johanan. A man who deprives his student of [the privilege of] attending on him acts as if he had deprived him of [an act of] kindness, for it is said in Scripture, To him that deprives[24] his friend[25] of kindness.[26] R. Nahman b. Isaac said: He also deprives[27] him of the fear of heaven, for it is said in Scripture, And he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.[28]

R.Eleazar ruled: If a widow[29] seized movables [to provide] for her maintenance, her act is[30] valid.[31] So it was also taught: If a widow seized movables [to provide] for her maintenance, her act is[30] valid.[31] And so R. Dimi, when he came,[32] related: It once happened that the daughter-in-law of R. Shabbethai seized[33] a saddle bag[34] that was full of money,[35] and the Sages had no power to take it out of her possession.

Rabina ruled: This[36] applies only to maintenance but [movables seized] in payment of a kethubah may be taken away from her. Mar son of R. Ashi demurred: Wherein [is the case of seizure] for a kethubah different [from the other]? Is it because [the former may be distrained for] on landed property and not on movables, may not maintenance also, [it may be objected, be distrained] on landed property and not on movables? The fact, however, is that as in respect of maintenance seizure[30] is valid,[31] so it is also valid in respect of a kethubah.

Said R. Isaac b. Naphtali to Rabina: Thus, in agreement with your view, it has also been stated in the name of Raba. R.Johanan stated in the name of R. Jose b. Zimra: A widow who allowed two or three years to pass[37] before[38] she claimed maintenance loses her maintenance. Now [that it has been said that] she loses [her maintenance after] two years, was it necessary [to mention also] three? — This is no difficulty; the lesser number[39] refers to a poor woman while the bigger one[39] refers to a rich woman;[40] or else: The former[39] refers to a bold woman and the latter[39] to a modest woman.[41] Raba ruled: This[42] applies only to a retrospective claim,[43] but in respect of the future she is entitled [to maintenance].

R.Johanan enquired: If the orphans plead, 'We have already paid[44] [the cost of maintenance[45] in advance]', and she retorts, 'I did not receive it', who must produce the proof?

---

(1) So MS.M. reading דאמר Cur. edd. omit the daleth.

(2) Alfasi and Asheri omitting. 'R. Zera stated' read 'Samuel stated'.

(3) Our Mishnah representing the view of the men of Judaea, Samuel's ruling might be applied to a widow who (v. supra note 7) was not maintained by the orphans.

(4) In agreement with the men of Galilee who allow' the orphans no alternative.

(5) In view of the fact that they must always maintain the widow as a husband must always maintain his wife.

(6) Lit., 'husband'.

(7) Lit., 'here', Sc. the case referred to by Samuel.

(8) I.e., the widow.

(9) As Samuel, however, ruled that it belongs to herself it must be concluded that the reading in our Mishnah is, 'one who is maintained'.

(10) In our Mishnah.

(11) Lit., 'what',

(12) איבה 'enmity'.

(13) The orphans who are legally bound to maintain her.

(14) It is only the handiwork of the widow that belongs to the orphans, in return for the maintenance she receives from them, as the handiwork of a wife, for a similar reason, belongs 10 her husband.

(15) V. supra 59b.

(16) Lit., 'mixing (the drink in his) cup'. Rt. מזג to mix with water (to weaken its strength) or spices.

(17) These are intimate services to which a husband only is entitled.

(18) Lit., 'loosening', 'undoing'.

(19) Only a Canaanite slave performs this menial service, and a student performing it might be mistaken for such a slave,

(20) That a student should not assist his teacher in taking off his shoes.

(21) The student.

(22) Lit 'we have nothing against it'.

(23) V. GIos. As slaves also do not wear tefillin (v Git. 40a), his status might well be mistaken.

(24) לְמַם, rt. מסס 'to melt'.
(25) Sc. the student one teaches.
(26) Job VI, 14. The previous verse speaks of help which is homiletically applied to that of the student to his teacher. R.V. renders v. 14. To him that is ready to faint kindness should be shewed from his friend. 'Should be shewed' is changed by A. J. V. to 'is due'.
(27) Lit., 'breaks off'.
(28) Job VI, 14; E.V., Even10 him that forsaketh etc. [Personal attendance on scholars constitutes in itself a good education in righteous conduct and fear of the Almighty, v. Bet. 7b.
(29) Whose maintenance may be distrained for on landed property only (v. supra 69b).
(30) Ex post facto.
(31) Lit., what she seized she seized'.
(32) From Palestine to Babylon.
(33) From the estate of her deceased husband.
(34) דסקיא Gr. , a bag made up of two pouches.
(35) For her maintenance.
(36) That the seizure of movables by a widow is ex post facto valid.
(37) Lit.. 'who delayed'.
(38) Lit., 'and not'.
(39) Lit., 'here'.
(40) Who is able to live for a considerable time on her own means. Such a woman cannot be assumed to have surrendered her right to maintenance before a period of three years had elapsed.
(41) Who is too shy to litigate or to go to court. Cf. supra n. 2 second clause.
(42) The loss of maintenance.
(43) For the time that has passed.
(44) To the widow.
(45) For the ensuing year.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 96b

Is the estate [of the deceased man] in the presumptive possession of the orphans[1] and consequently it is the widow who must produce the proof, or is the estate rather in the presumptive possession of the widow[2] and the proof must be produced by the orphans? Come and hear what Levi taught: [In a dispute on the maintenance of] a widow, the orphans must produce the proof[3] so long as she is unmarried,[4] but if she was married[5] the proof must be produced by her.[6]

R.Shimi b. Ashi said: [This point[7] is a matter in dispute between] the following[8] Tannaim: She[9] may sell [portions of her deceased husband's estate] but should specify in writing,[10] 'These I have sold for maintenance,' and 'These I have sold for the kethubah' [as the case may be]; so R. Judah. R. Jose, however, ruled: She[11] may sell [such portions] and need not specify the purpose[12] in writing, for in this manner she gains an advantage.[13] They[14] thus apparently[15] differ on the following point: R. Judah, who ruled that it is necessary to specify[16] the purpose,[17] holds that the [deceased man's] estate is in the presumptive possession of the orphans and that it is the widow who must produce the proof,[18] whilst R. Jose, who ruled that it was not necessary to specify the purpose, upholds the view that the estate is in the presumptive possession of the widow and that it is the orphans who must produce the proof.[19] Whence [is this[20] made so obvious]? It is quite possible that all[14] agree that the [deceased man's] estate is in the presumptive possession of his widow and that the orphans must produce the proof,[21] but R. Judah[22] is merely tendering good advice [by following which the widow] would prevent people from calling[23] her a glutton.[24] For were you not to admit this,[25] could not the question[26] raised by R. Johanan[27] be answered from the Mishnah:[28] She may sell [her deceased husband's estate] for her maintenance out of court but should enter [in the deed of sale,] 'I have sold these for maintenance'?[29] Consequently[30] It must be concluded[31] that no deduction may be made from the Mishnah[28] because therein only good advice was tendered;[32] and so also here[33] [it may similarly be submitted that R. Judah] was only tendering good advice.[32] Or else: All[34] may agree that the estate [of the deceased] is in the presumptive possession of the orphans, but R. Jose's reason[35] is exactly the same as [that given by] Abaye the Elder who stated: To what may the ruling[36] of R. Jose be compared? To [the instructions of] a dying man who said, 'Give two hundred zuz[37] to So-and-so, my creditor,[38] who may take them, if he wishes, in settlement of his debt or, if he prefers, he may take then, as a gift',

---

(1) Who are his legal heirs.

(2) To whom it is pledged in accordance with an enactment of the Rabbis.

(3) That they have paid her in advance.

(4) Since the estate is pledged to her (v. supra n. 9).

(5) And claims the cost of her maintenance for the time past.

(6) Having married she loses the security of her Former husband's estate.

(7) The question of the presumptive ownership of the deceased man's estate.

(8) Lit., 'as', 'like'.

(9) A widow.

(10) In the deeds of sale.

(11) A widow.

(12) Whether it was maintenance or kethubah.

(13) Lit., 'her power is beautiful', as will be explained anon.

(14) R. Judah and R. Jose.

(15) Lit., 'what not'?

(16) In the deeds of sale.

(17) Whether it was maintenance or kethubah.

(18) That she has not been paid the cost of maintenance. Hence it is to her advantage that the purpose of the sale should be specified. Should she fail to do so, the orphans, when she comes to claim her kethubah from them, might refuse payment on the ground that her sale had the purpose of recouping her for her kethubah. Her alternative plea, 'If so, pay me for my maintenance' could be met by the counter plea that they had already Paid for it in movables, a plea which, when coming from orphans, the court must accept.

(19) A specification of the purpose, therefore, would bring no advantage to her. Its omission, on the other hand, might well prove advantageous in the case where the deceased man's estate was completely consumed by the orphans and the widow had recourse to distraining on landed property which he sold during his lifetime. Submitting that her own sales had the purpose of providing for her maintenance she may legally distrain on such property which is pledged for her kethubah. Had she, however, specified that her sales had the purpose of recovering her kethubah she could no longer distrain on her husband's sold property which (v. Git. 48b) is not pledged for her maintenance.

(20) The conclusion of R. Shimi.

(21) That the widow had already received the allowance for her maintenance.

(22) In ruling that the widow should specify the purpose for which her sales are made.

(23) Lit., 'that they shall not call'.

(24) Were she to omit from the deed of sale the mention of her kethubah people might assume that all the proceeds of her sales were spent on her maintenance alone. As a reputed glutton her chances of a second marriage would be diminished (v. Rashi).

(25) Lit., 'say so', that R. Judah in his ruling is merely tendering advice.

(26) Lit., 'that'.

(27) 'Who must produce the proof' (supra 96a ad fin.).

(28) Infra 97b.

(29) Of course it could. The reason for the requirement of a specification of the purpose of the sale that underlies R. Judah's ruling in the Baraitha should obviously hold good for the similar ruling in the Mishnah. If the reason in the former is that the estate remains in the presumptive possession of the orphans, the same reason would apply to the latter. And since a Mishnah, unlike a Baraitha, must be known to all students, R. Johanan's question would easily have been answered.

(30) Since the question had to be solved from Levi's Baraitha.

(31) Lit., ‘but’.
(32) But the presumptive possession of the estate is that of the widow.
(33) In the Baraitha.
(34) R. Judah and R. Jose.
(35) For the ruling that the purpose of the sale need not be specified in the deed.
(36) V. supra n. 8. משל lit., ‘simile’.
(37) V. Glos.
(38) Cf. B.B. 138b.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 97a

who, if he takes them as a gift, has not the same advantage [as if he had taken them for his debt].[1]

In what manner does [a widow] sell [her deceased husband's property] for her maintenance?[2] — R. Daniel son of R. Kattina replied in the name of R. Huna: She sells [portions of it] once in twelve months[3] and the buyer supplies her maintenance [in instalments][4] once every thirty days. Rab Judah, however, stated: She sells once in six months and the buyer provides her maintenance [in instalments] once every thirty days.

It was taught in agreement with R. Huna: [A widow] sells[5] once in twelve months and the buyer supplies her maintenance [in instalments] once every thirty days. It was also taught in agreement with Rab Judah: [A widow] sells once in six months and the buyer provides her maintenance [in instalments] once every thirty days.

Amemar said: The law is that [a widow] sells [sufficient land to suffice her] for six months and the buyer provides her maintenance [in instalments] once every thirty days. Said R. Ashi to Amemar: What [about the ruling] of R. Huna? — ‘I’, the other replied, ‘have not heard of it’, by which he meant,[6] ‘I do not approve of it’.

R. Shesheth was asked: May [a widow] who sold [land] for her maintenance subsequently distrain on it[7] for her kethubah? This question was raised on [the basis of a ruling of] R. Joseph who stated, ‘If a widow has sold [any of her deceased husband's estate][8] the responsibility for the indemnity falls upon the orphans,[9] and if the court sold [any such property] the responsibility for the indemnity again falls upon the orphans’[10] What [then, it was asked, is the ruling]? May she, since the responsibility for the indemnity falls upon the orphans, distrain [on the land],[11] or is it possible that [the buyers] may tell her,[12] ‘Granted that you have not accepted general[13] responsibility for indemnity, did you not indeed accept responsibility [against distraint] by yourself either?’[14] — You, he replied, have learned it: ‘[A widow][15] may continue to sell[16] until [only the estate of] the value of her kethubah [remains], and this is a support to her since she might thus collect her kethubah from the residue’. Thus[17] it may be inferred that only if she left [estate corresponding to the value of her kethubah] may[18] [she collect her kethubah]. but if she did not leave [so much of the estate,[19] she may] not.[20] But is it not possible that he[21] was merely tendering good advice, in order that people might not call her a swindler?[22] — If so,[23] he[21] should have stated, ‘She collects her kethubah from the remainder’, why [then did he also add,] ‘A support to her’? Consequently it must be inferred that only if she left [estate corresponding to the value of her kethubah] may[18] [the widow collect her kethubah], but if she did not leave [so much[19] she may] not.[20]

The question was raised: If a man sold [a plot of land][24] but [on concluding the sale] he was no longer in need of money, may his sale[25] be withdrawn[26] or not?[27] Come and hear: There was a certain man who sold a plot of land to R. Papa because he was in need of money to buy some oxen, and, as eventually he did not need it, R. Papa actually returned the land to him! — [This is no proof since] R. Papa may have acted beyond the strict requirements of the law.[28]

Come and hear: There was once a dearth at Nehardea[29] when all the people sold their mansions,[30] but when eventually wheat arrived[31] R. Nahman told them: The law is that the mansions must be returned to their original owners! — There also the sales were made in error since it eventually became known that the ship[32] was[33] waiting in the bays.[34] If that is so,[35] how [explain] what Rami b. Samuel said to R. Nahman, 'If [you rule] thus you will cause them[36] trouble in the future',[37] [whereupon] he replied, 'Is dearth a daily occurrence?' and to which the former retorted, 'Yes, a dearth at Nehardea is indeed a common occurrence'?[38] And the law is that if a man sold [a plot of land][39] and [on concluding the sale] was no longer in need of money the sale may be withdrawn.

MISHNAH. A WIDOW, WHETHER [HER HUSBAND DIED] AFTER [HER] BETROTHAL[40] OR AFTER [HER] MARRIAGE[41] MAY SELL [OF HER DECEASED HUSBAND'S ESTATE] WITHOUT [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN. R. SIMEON RULED: [IF HER HUSBAND DIED] AFTER MARRIAGE[41] SHE MAY SELL[42] [OF HIS ESTATE] WITHOUT [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN,[43] [BUT IF ONLY] AFTER [HER] BETROTHAL, SHE MAY NOT SELL [ANY OF THE ESTATE] EXCEPT WITH [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN, SINCE SHE IS NOT ENTITLED TO MAINTENANCE, AND ONE WHO IS NOT ENTITLED TO MAINTENANCE MAY NOT SELL [SUCH PROPERTY] EXCEPT WITH [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN.

GEMARA. One can readily see [that the privilegє[44] of a woman who was widowed] AFTER MARRIAGE is due to [her immediate need for] maintenance;[45]

---

(1) A debt may be distrained for on sold property, but a gift may not. Similarly with the widow, by omitting, in agreement with the ruling of R. Jose, the specification of the purpose of her sales, she retains the right to distrain on her deceased husband's sold property by advancing the plea that her own sales had been made for the purpose of her maintenance (which cannot, of course, be distrained for on such property) and that she was now seeking to recover her kethubah to which such property is pledged. To protect herself against the plea of the orphans that her kethubah also was paid out of her sales, she might arrange for witnesses to he present when the sales for her maintenance take place and when she makes a verbal declaration to that effect.

(2) למזונות, so MS.M. Cur. edd. omit the word.

(3) Sufficient to Provide for her maintenance during all that period.

(4) He must not pay the full price in one instalment in order that he may be enabled, should the widow marry before she receives all the instalments, to hand over the balance to the orphans.

(5) Portions of her deceased husband's estate.

(6) Lit.,'as if to say'.

(7) On the very land she has sold.

(8) To reimburse herself for her maintenance or kethubah, but guaranteeing indemnity to the buyer.

(9) Since it is they who are responsible for the widow's kethubah and maintenance.

(10) Infra 100a.

(11) Though she herself had sold it; and refer the buyers to the orphans.

(12) When she proceeds to distrain on the land she sold them.

(13) Lit., 'of the world', sc. if other claimants distrained on the land.

(14) And, consequently. she is not allowed to distrain on such property.

(15) To provide for her maintenance.

(16) Portions of her deceased husband's estate.

(17) Since according to this ruling the widow must have recourse to the residue.

(18) Lit., 'yes'.

(19) But sold all of it.

(20) Collect her kethubah by distraining on the lands she sold.

(21) The author of the Baraitha, in ruling that a portion of the estate corresponding to the value of the kethubah must remain unsold.

(22) L1t., 'retractor'. Legally. however, she may well distrain on the property of such buyers.

(23) If the ruling was in the nature of advice.
(24) For the sole reason that he needed money for some specific purpose.
(25) Since he no longer needed the money.
(26) On the ground of being a sale made in error.
(27) Owing to the fact that at the time of the sale the seller was still in need of money.
(28) לפנים משורת הדין lit., 'within the line of the law', i.e., he surrendered his legal right for the sake of benefiting a fellow man; v. B.K. Sonc. ed. p. 584, n. 2.
(29) V. supra p. 222, n. 8.
(30) To use the proceeds for the purchase of wheat.
(31) And prices fell so that the sellers of the mansions were no longer in need of the money.
(32) That carried the grain.
(33) At the time the sales were effected.
(34) Sheltering until the subsidence of the high water. Had these sellers been aware of the fact that the ship was so near they would never have thought of selling their mansions. Such sales may, therefore, be regarded as sales in error, which may be withdrawn. The question under discussion, however, refers to a seller who was actually in need of money when his sale was effected (v. p. 616, n. 16) and whose release came only after the sale.
(35) That the reason for R. Nahman's ruling was that the ship was already in the bays at the time the sales were arranged. So according to Rashb. (v. Tosaf. s. v. אי, a.l.) contra Rashi who takes this argument to he in support of the reason given for R. Nahman's ruling.
(36) The sellers.
(37) Because they will not be able to find buyers.
(38) Granted the frequency of dearth at Nehardea, the detention of the provision ships in the bays is obviously of no common occurrence. Consequently it must be concluded that R. Nahman's reason for the cancellation of the sales was not because 'the ship was in the bays' but because the sellers, though in need of money when the sales were arranged, had no need of the money subsequently, such cases being of frequent occurrence.
(39) V. supra p. 616, n. 13.
(40) When her claim is restricted to that of her kethubah only (v. our Mishnah infra).
(41) When she claims also maintenance.
(42) For her maintenance.
(43) Since she cannot be expected to starve until Beth din find time to deal with her case.
(44) To SELL... WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF BETH DIN.
(45) Cf. supra n. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 97b

what, however, is the reason[1] [for conferring this privilege[2] upon one widowed] after betrothal?[3] — 'Ulla replied: In order to [enhance the] attractions[4] [of matrimony].[5] R. Johanan replied: Because no man wants his wife to suffer the indignity [of appearing] in court. What is the practical difference between them?[6] — The practical difference between them is the case of a divorced woman. For according to him who replied, 'In order to [enhance the] attractiveness [of matrimony]' a divorced woman also may[7] claim [the privilege[8] of the provision for matrimonial] attractiveness; but according to him who replied, 'Because no man Wants his wife to suffer the indignity [of appearing] in court' a divorced woman [is not entitled to the privilege since] the man does not care [for her dignity].

We learned: And a divorced woman may not sell [of her former husband's estate][9] except with the sanction of Beth din.[10] Now, according to him who replied, 'Because no man wants his wife to suffer the indignity [of appearing] in court' the ruling is well justified since for a divorced wife one does not care; but according to him who replied, 'In order to [enhance the] attractions [of matrimony'. why should not] a divorced woman[11] also be entitled to claim [the privilege of the provision for matrimonial] attractiveness? — This represents the view of R. Simeon.[12] If [this represents the view of] R. Simeon [the objection arises: Was not this principle] already laid down in the earlier clause,

AFTER HER BETROTHAL SHE MAY NOT SELL etc.?[13] — It might have been presumed [that his ruling applied] Only to a woman widowed after [her] betrothal, since in her case there was not much affection,[14] but that a divorced woman, in whose case there was much affection,[15] may[16] demand [the privilege of the provision for matrimonial] attraction.[17] But have we not learned this[18] also: WHO IS NOT ENTITLED TO MAINTENANCE which includes,[19] does it not, a divorced woman?[20] — No, [it includes one who is both] divorced[21] and' not divorced,[22] as [the one spoken of by] R. Zera who stated: Wherever the Sages described a woman as both divorced and not divorced[22] her husband is responsible for her maintenance.[23]

Come and hear: As she[24] may sell [of her deceased husband's estate] without [the sanction of] Beth din so may her heirs, those who inherit her kethubah, sell [such property] without [the sanction of] Beth din. Now, according to him who replied, 'Because no man wants his wife to suffer the indignity [of appearing] in court' one can well see the reason for this ruling;[25] for as it is disagreeable to him[26] that she should suffer indignity so it is also disagreeable to him that her heirs should suffer indignity. According to him, however, who replied, 'In order to [enhance the] attractiveness [of matrimony]', what [consideration for] attractiveness [it may be objected] could there be in respect of her heirs?[27] — 'Ulla interpreted this [to be a case where] her daughter, for instance, or her sister, Was her heir.[28]

MISHNAH. [A WIDOW WHO] SOLD HER KETHUBAH OR PART OF IT, OR PLEDGED IT OR PART OF IT, OR PRESENTED IT OR PART OF IT, TO A STRANGER, MAY NOT SELL THE RESIDUE [OF HER DECEASED HUSBAND'S ESTATE][29] EXCEPT WITH (THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN.[30] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: SHE MAY SELL [THE LAND PLEDGED FOR HER KETHUBAH] EVEN IN FOUR OR FIVE INSTALMENTS[31] AND [IN THE MEANTIME][32] SHE MAY SELL [OF HER HUSBAND'S ESTATE TO PROVIDE] FOR HER MAINTENANCE WITHOUT [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN, ENTERING, [HOWEVER, IN THE DEED OF SALE,] 'I SOLD [THE LAND TO PROVIDE] FOR MY MAINTENANCE'.[33] A DIVORCED WOMAN, HOWEVER, MUST NOT SELL [SUCH PROPERTY] EXCEPT WITH [THE SANCTION OF] BETH DIN.

GEMARA. Who [is the author of the first ruling in] our Mishnah?[34] — It is R. Simeon. For it was taught: If a woman sold [all] her kethubah or pledged it, or mortgaged [the land that was pledged for] her kethubah to a stranger, she is not entitled to maintenance.[35] R. Simeon ruled: Even if she did not sell or pledge [all] her kethubah, but half of it only, she loses her maintenance.[36] Does this[37] then imply that R. Simeon holds the view that we do not regard part of the amount[38] as being legally equal to the full amount, while the Rabbis maintain that part of the amount is legally regarded as the full amount? But, [it may be objected], have we not in fact heard the reverse? For was It not taught: And he[39] shall take a wife its her virginity[40] excludes one who is adolescent[41] [some of whose] virginity is ended; so R. Meir. R. Eleazar and R. Simeon permit[42] [the marriage] of one who is adolescent?[43] — There[44] they differ [on the interpretation] of Scriptural texts,[45] R. Meir being of the opinion that 'virgin'[46] implies even [one who retains] some of her virginity; 'her virginity'[47] implies only one who retains all her virginity;[48] 'in her virginity'[49] implies only[50] [when previous intercourse with her took place] in a natural manner,[51] but not when in an unnatural manner.[52] R. Eleazar and R. Simeon, however, are of the opinion that 'virgin' would have implied a perfect virgin; 'her virginity' implies even [one who retains] only part of her virginity;

---

(1) Of the first Tanna of our Mishnah.

(2) As far as her kethubah is concerned.

(3) Why should not a claim of this nature (cf. supra note 1) be subject to the jurisdiction of a court just as that of any other claimants?

(4) Lit., 'grace'.

(5) In the absence of the privilege some women might refuse to consent to their betrothal; v. supra 84a.

(6) ‘Ulla and R. Johanan.
(7) Since the privilege is not dependent on the husband's feelings.
(8) V. supra note 8.
(9) To reimburse herself for her kethubah.
(10) Mishnah infra.
(11) Since the privilege is not dependent on the husband's feelings.
(12) Who, as follows from his ruling in our Mishnah, does not recognize the principle of providing for matrimonial attractiveness.
(13) Cf. supra n. 4’ Why then should the same principle be repeated?
(14) Lit., ‘her favour (in the eyes of the husband) was not much’. Her husband having died before he married her. As no woman would expect privileges after such a slight matrimonial relationship there was Do need to confer the privilege (v. supra p. 618, n. 5) upon such a widow,
(15) Cf. previous note mutatis mutandis. V. Tosaf. s.v, אלמנה a.I. for two other interpretations.
(16) Even according to R. Simeon.
(17) Hence the necessity for the two rulings.
(18) The case of a divorced woman.
(19) Lit., ‘to include what?’
(20) After her marriage. It cannot refer to a woman divorced after her betrothal since her case could be inferred a minori ad majus from that of A WIDOW... AFTER HER BETROTHAL.
(21) After betrothal.
(22) One, for instance, to whom the husband has thrown a letter of divorce in a public thoroughfare and it is uncertain whether it fell nearer to her or to him (v. Git. 74a).
(23) Our. Mishnah thus teaches that the husband's responsibility for the maintenance of a woman in such circumstances ceases with his death, and his orphans, therefore, are under no obligation to maintain her out of his estate. She is well entitled to maintenance during his lifetime since it is through him that she is prevented from contracting a second marriage; but after his death, when she is free to marry again, her claim which was all the time of a doubtful nature must lapse.
(24) A widow.
(25) The right of the heirs to sell without the sanction of Beth din.
(26) The husband.
(27) Who as a rule are males (cf. Rashi). A female enjoys the right of inheritance only in the absence of males.
(28) In whose case the consideration of rendering matrimony attractive must be reckoned with.
(29) For her maintenance.
(30) This is the view of R. Simeon (v. Gemara infra).
(31) Lit., ‘times’.
(32) Before the last instalment is sold.
(33) Such insertion being in certain cases advantageous for the woman (as explained supra 96b).
(34) According to which a widow who sold even only part of her kethubah may not sell of her husband's estate without the sanction of Beth din.
(35) Tosef. Keth. XI, supra 54a. If. however, she sold etc. a part of it only she is still entitled to maintenance. Cur. edd. insert here in parentheses, ‘these are the words of R. Meir’, a sentence which is wanting in the Tosefta. Rashi retains it.
(36) Tosef. Keth. XI; as she loses her maintenance she may not sell without the sanction of Beth din. Cf. supra n. 4 and Rashi on our Mishnah, s.v. לא תמכור. Rashal actually inserts in the text ‘and the rest she may not sell except with the sanction of Beth din’, a reading which was apparently wanting in Rashi's text as well as in cut. edd., but was known to the Tosafists (v. Tosaf. s.v. מכרה).
(37) The dispute between R. Simeon and the Rabbis according to which the former regards the absence of a part as the absence of the whole while the latter do not.
(38) Sc. of the kethubah. Lit., ‘silver’ with reference to Ex. XXII, 17.
(39) A High Priest.
(40) Lev. XXI, 13.
(41) A bogereth (v. Glos.).
(42) A High Priest.

(43) Yeb. 595. The absence of a part of her virginity not being regarded as the absence of all virginity. Thus it follows that, while R. Simeon does not regard the absence of a part as the absence of the whole, the Rabbis do, which is the reverse of their respective views here (v. p. 621, n. 7).
(44) In the Baraitha cited from Yeb.
(45) Not on the question whether a part legally equals the whole.
(46) בתולה.
(47) בתוליה.
(48) Which excludes the one who is adolescent some of whose virginity is ended.
(49) בבתוליה (Lev. XXI, 13)
(50) Lit., 'yes'.
(51) Is she forbidden to a High Priest.
(52) The superfluous ב (='in') in בבתוליה implies intercourse in the place of virginity. Unnatural intercourse with a na'arah (v. Glos) whereby virginity is not affected, is consequently excluded.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 98a

'in her virginity'[1] implies only one[2] whose entire virginity is intact,[3] irrespective of whether [previous intercourse with her was] of a natural or unnatural character.[4] A certain woman[5] once seized a silver cup on account of her kethubah[6] and then claimed her maintenance. She appeared before Raba. He [thereupon] told the orphans, 'Proceed to provide for her maintenance; no one cares for the ruling of R. Simeon who laid down that we do not regard part of the amount as legally equal to the full amount.

Rabbah the son of Raba sent to R. Joseph [the following enquiry:] Is a woman[7] who sells [of her deceased husband's estate] without [an authorization of] Beth din required to take an oath[8] or is she not required to take an oath? — And [why, the other replied, do you not] enquire [as to whether] a public announcement[9] [is required]? I have no need, the first retorted, to enquire concerning a public announcement because R. Zera has stated in the name of R. Nahman, 'If a widow assessed [her husband's estate] on her own behalf[10] her act is invalid';[11] now, how [is this statement] to be understood? If a public announcement[9] has been made [the difficulty arises,] why is her act invalid? Must we not consequently assume that there was no public announcement, and [since it was stated that] Only [if the assessment was made] 'on her own behalf' is 'her act invalid' it follows, does it not, [that if she made it] on behalf of another[12] her act is valid?[13] — [No,] a public announcement may in fact have been made but [her act is nevertheless invalid] because she can be told, 'Who [authorized] you to make the assessment?'[14] as was the case with a certain man with whom corals[15] belonging to orphans had been deposited and he proceeded to assess them on his own behalf for four hundred ZUZ, and when later its price rose to six hundred zuz, he appeared before R. Ammi, who said to him, 'Who [authorized] you to make the assessment?'[16] And the law is that she[17] is required to take an oath,[18] but there is no need to make a public announcement.[19] MISHNAH.IF A WIDOW WHOSE KETHUBAH WAS FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ SOLD[20] [A PLOT OF LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH[21] FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ OR ONE THAT WAS WORTH TWO HUNDRED ZUZ FOR ONE MANEH, HER KETHUBAH IS DEEMED TO HAVE BEEN THEREBY SETTLED.[22] IF HER KETHUBAH, HOWEVER, WAS FOR ONE MANEH, AND SHE SOLD [LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH AND A DENAR' FOR ONE MANEH, HER SALE IS VOID. EVEN THOUGH SHE DECLARED, I WILL RETURN THE DENAR TO THE HEIRS' HER SALE IS VOID.[23] R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED: HER SALE[22] IS ALWAYS VALID[24] UNLESS THERE WAS[25] [SO MUCH LAND] THERE AS WOULD HAVE ENABLED HER[26] TO LEAVE[27] FROM A FIELD AN AREA OF NINE KAB,[28] AND FROM A GARDEN THAT OF HALF A KAB[29] OR, ACCORDING TO R. AKIBA, A QUARTER OF A KAB.[29] IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR FOUR HUNDRED ZUZ AND SHE SOLD [PLOTS OF LAND][30] TO [THREE] PERSONS, TO EACH FOR ONE MANEH,[31] AND TO A FOURTH[32] [SHE SOLD] WHAT WAS WORTH A MANE HAND A DENAR FOR ONE MANEH,[33] [THE SALE] TO THE LAST PERSON IS VOID BUT [THE SALES] OF ALL THE OTHERS ARE VALID. GEMARA. Wherein does [the sale of a plot of land] THAT WAS WORTH TWO HUNDRED ZUZ FOR ONE MANEH differ [from the previous case? Is it] because she[34] might be told, 'You yourself have caused the loss'? [But, then, why should she not, where she SOLD A PLOT OF LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ, also [be entitled to] say, 'It is I who have made the profit'?[35] — R. Nahman replied in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha:

---

(1) Which includes one who is adolescent (Lev. XXI, 13).

(2) Being a na'arah (v. Glos.).

(3) Is permitted to be married by a High priest.

(4) Yeb. 595. She is forbidden even if it was unnatural. Her virginity must he completely intact. Cf. supra note 11. Thus it has been shewn that the dispute between R. Simeon and the Rabbis (sc. R. Meir) has no bearing on the legal relationship between the part and the whole (cf. supra note 4). but on the method of interpreting certain Scriptural texts.

(5) A widow.

(6) The amount of which exceeded the value of the cup.

(7) A widow.

(8) That she did not collect more than her due.

(9) Of the intended sale of the estate, as is the procedure where the sale is ordered by the court.

(10) And seized it for her kethubah.

(11) Lit., 'she did nothing'; the orphans may at any time reclaim that land and refund her the amount of her kethubah.

(12) I.e., she sold the estate for her kethubah to a third party.

(13) Lit., 'what she did she did'; which shews that no public announcement is required in the case of the sale under discussion.

(14) As neither the court nor the orphans had given her any such authorization the estate must remain in the legal possession of the orphans. If, however, she sells to other people her act is valid since she is fully authorized to do so.

(15) כסיתא (so Rashi). Cur. edd., כיסתא fodder'. MS. M. כסותא 'garment'.

(16) Cf. supra n. 8 mutatis mutandis.

(17) A woman in the circumstances spoken of 10 Rabbah's enquiry supra.

(18) V. supra note 2.

(19) Cf. n. 3. [This implies that the assessment must nevertheless be made in the presence of an expert valuer (Trani)].

(20) From her deceased husband's estate.

(21) V. Glos.

(22) Because she is to blame for the loss incurred.

(23) Since she had no right to sell a part of the land (representing the value of the denar) her entire sale is deemed to have been made in error and is. therefore, void.

(24) Even if the land she sold was worth more than the amount of her kethubah; because she can refund the balance to the orphans.

(25) Lit., 'shall be'.

(26) If she had not sold for more than her due. Lit. , 'sufficient', 'as much as'.

(27) Exclusive or inclusive of the land she sold over and above the area representing the value of the amount that was due to her.

(28) Sc. in which such a quantity of seed could be sown. An area of that size represents the minimum of land that can be profitably cultivated. By leaving a lesser area the woman is causing undue loss to the orphans. and her sale must consequently be annulled. If the lesser area, however, would have remained even if she had sold what was her due, her sale is valid since the orphans could not in any case have made profitable use of the residue.

(29) The minimum area that can be profitably laid out as a garden. Cf. supra n. 9 mutatis mutandis.

(30) From her deceased husband's estate.

(31) Lit., 'to this for a maneh and to this for a maneh'.

(32) Lit., 'last'.

(33) So that in the last sale she disposed of more than her due.

(34) The widow who effected the sale.

(35) And so have a claim to another maneh.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 98b

Rabbi[1] has taught here[2] that all [profits[3] belong] to the owner of the money.[4] As it was taught,[5] 'If one unit[6] was added to [the purchases made by an agent] all [the profit belongs] to the agent'; so R. Judah, but R. Jose ruled,, '[The profit] is to be divided',[7] [and, in reply to the objection,] But, surely, it was taught that R. Jose ruled, All [profit belongs] to the owner of the money! Rami b. Hama replied: This is no difficulty for the former refers to an object that has a fixed value[8] while the latter refers to one that has no fixed[9] value.[10] R. Papa stated: The law is that[11] [the profit made by the agent on] an object that had a fixed value must be divided,[7] but if on an object that had no fixed value all [profit belongs] to the owner of the money. What does he[12] teach us?[13] — That the reply that was given[14] is the proper one.[15] The question was raised: What [is the law where a man] said to his agent,[16] 'Sell for me a lethek'[17] and the latter presumed[18] to sell a kor.[19] [Is the agent deemed to be merely] adding to the owner's instructions and [the buyer, therefore,] acquires possession of a lethek, at all events, or is he rather transgressing his instructions and [the buyer, therefore,] acquires no possession of a lethek either? — Said R. Jacob of Nehar Pekod[20] in the name of Rabina, Come and hear: If a householder said to his agent, 'Serve a piece [of meat][21] to the guests', and the latter said to them, 'Take two',[22] and they took three,[22] all of them are guilty[23] of trespass.[24] Now if you agree [that the agent][25] was merely adding to the host's instruction one can well understand the reason why the householder is guilty of trespass. If you should maintain, however, [that the agent][25] was transgressing his instruction [the objection could well be advanced:] Why should the householder be guilty of trespass? Have we not In fact learned: If an agent performed his mission it is the householder who is guilty of trespass but if he did not perform his mission it is the agent who is guilty of trespass?[26] — Here we may be dealing with a case where the agent said to the guests, 'Take one at the desire[27] of the householder[28] and one at my own request's[27] and they took three.

Come and hear: IF HER KETHUBAH, HOWEVER, WAS FOR A MANEH, AND SHE SOLD [LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH AND A DENAR FOR A MANEH, HER SALE IS VOID. Does[29] not [this mean] that SHE SOLD [LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH AND A DENAR FOR A MANE band a denar,[30] and that by[29] [the expression,] 'FOR A MANEH' the maneh that was due to her [is meant], and by[29] EVEN[31] [one is to understand] EVEN THOUGH SHE DECLARED, I WILL RETURN THE DENAR TO THE HEIRS [by repurchasing for them] land of the value of a denar'? And was it not nevertheless stated, HER SALE IS VOID?[32] — No,[33] retorted R. Huna the son of R. Nathan, [this is a case] where [she sold] at the lower price.[34]

---

(1) R. Judah I, the Patriarch, compiler of the Mishnah c. 200 C.E.

(2) In our Mishnah.

(3) Made by an agent.

(4) Since the widow was merely acting as the agent of the orphans, who are the owners, she cannot lay any claim to the profit she made.

(5) V. infra, o. 12.

(6) Lit., 'one more'.

(7) Between agent and owner; v. Tosef. Dem, VIII.

(8) And, since it is not certain in whose favour the additional unit was given away by the seller, its value must be equally divided between the agent and the owner of the money.

(9) So that the additional unit cannot be regarded as a gift, but as a part of the purchase, payment for which was made with the money of the owner. Hence it is the latter only who is entitled to the added unit.

(10) Thus it has been shewn that our Mishnah which deals with land (something that has no fixed value) and assigns the profits to the original owner (the orphans) is in agreement with the view of R. Jose.

(11) הלכתא so cur. edd. and R. Han. MS.M. and a reading approved by Tosaf. (s.v. אמר) is הלכך 'therefore'.

(12) R. Papa.

(13) By his statement which is only a repetition of what has just been laid down. This question seems to imply the reading of הלכך (v. supra n. 13) rather than that of הלכתא, (Tosaf.).

(14) By Rami b. Hama.

(15) Lit., 'that which we replied is a reply'.

(16) Lit., 'to him'.

(17) Sc. a plot of land in which a lethek (half a kor) of grain may be sown.

(18) Lit., 'and went'.

(19) V. Glos.

(20) A town situated on the east of Nehardea.

(21) Which was subsequently found to have been consecrated food.

(22) Each.

(23) The host in respect of the first, the agent in respect of the second and the guests 10 respect of the third.

(24) Me'il. 20a.

(25) Like the agent spoken of in the enquiry.

(26) Hag. 10b, Kid. 42b, Ned. 54a, Me'ii. 205. Consequently it must be concluded, must it not. that an agent in the circumstances mentioned is deemed to have added to, and not transgressed, his instructions?

(27) Lit., 'knowledge'.

(28) Thus performing his mission.

(29) Lit., 'what'.

(30) Sc. for its full price, so that no error was involved.

(31) Which, in view of the fact that the denar obviously belongs to the orphans, is apparently meaningless.

(32) As the woman is in a position similar to that of the agent spoken of in the enquiry it follows that as her sale is void so is that of the agent.

(33) I.e., our Mishnah is not to be understood as suggested.

(34) Sc. for one maneh only; the error 10 the sale, not the excess of the land sold, being the reason for the invalidity of the sale. [Read with MS.M. and Tosaf. בדזילא instead of בדאויל in cur. edd.].

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 99a

But since the final clause[1] [deals with a case] where [she sold] at a lower price, [would not] the earlier clause[2] [naturally[3] refer to one] where [she did] not [sell] at a lower price. for has [it not] been stated in the final clause, IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR FOUR HUNDRED ZUZ AND SHE SOLD [PLOTS OF AND] TO [THREE] PERSONS[4] TO EACH FOR ONE MANEH, AND TO A FOURTH[4] [SHE SOLD] WHAT WAS WORTH A MANE HAND A DENAR FOR ONE MANEH, [THE SALE] TO THE LAST PERSON IS VOID BUT [THE SALES] OF ALL THE OTHERS ARE VALID?[5] — No, both the earlier and the final clause [refer to a sale] at a lower price, but[6] it is this that we were informed in the final clause: The reason [why her sale is void is] because [she sold][7] at a lower price [the property] that belonged to the orphans,[8] but [if that[9] had been done] with her own,[10] her sale is valid.[11] But is not this already inferred from the first clause: WHOSE KETHUBAH WAS FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ SOLD [A PLOT OF LAND THAT WAS] WORTH A MANEH FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ OR ONE THAT WAS WORTH TWO HUNDRED ZUZ FOR ONE MANEH, HER KETHUBAH IS DEEMED TO HAVE BEEN THEREBY SETTLED?[12] — It might have been assumed [that the ruling[13] was applicable] there Only because [by her one act] she completely severed her connection with that house,[14] but that here[15] [the sale for] the first maneh [should be deemed invalid] as a preventive measure against [the assumption of the validity of the sale for the] last maneh,' hence we were informed [that the law was not so].

Some there are who say: You have no need to ask [for a ruling] where [a man said to his agent,] 'Go and sell for me a lethek'[16] and [the latter] sold for him a kor, since [in this case the agent] was undoubtedly adding to his instructions.[17] The question, however, arises as to what is the ruling where the man said to the agent, 'Go and sell for me a kor' and he sold for him Only one lethek.[16] Do we [in such a case] lay down that [the agent] might tell the man, 'I have done for you that which is more advantageous to you, for [had I sold the full kor, and] you were no longer in need of money you could not have retracted',[18] or is it rather [held that the owner] might retort to him, 'It is no satisfaction to me that many deeds [should be held] against me'? — R. Hanina of Sura[19] replied, Come and hear: If one man gave to another a gold denar[20] and told him, 'Bring me a shirt', and the other brought him a shirt for three sela's and a cloak for three sela's, both are guilty of trespass.[21] Now if you admit that an agent in similar circumstances[22] has performed his mission and was only adding to his instructions, one can well see why the owner[23] is guilty of trespass.[24] If, however, you should maintain that [the agent in such circumstances] was transgressing his instructions, why should [the owner] be guilty of trespass?[25] — Here we are dealing with a case where [the agent] brought him [a shirt that was] worth six sela's for three.[26] If so[27] why should the agent be guilty of trespass? — On account of the cloak.[28] But if that were so,[29] read the final clause: R. Judah ruled, Even in this case[29] the owner is not guilty of trespass because he might say [to the agent,] 'I wanted a big shirt and you brought me one that is small and bad'![30] — 'Bad' means[31] 'bad in respect of the price', for[32] [the owner can] tell him, 'Had you brought me one for six sela's [my gain would have been] even greater since it would have been worth twelve sela's.'[33] This[34] may also be proved by an inference. For it was stated:[35] R. Judah admits [that if the transaction was] in pulse both[36] are guilty of trespass

---

(1) Of our Mishnah.

(2) The clause just cited.

(3) Since two clauses are not necessary to lay down the same principle.

(4) V. our Mishnah for notes.

(5) An objection against R. Huna the son of R. Nathan (cf. supra n' 9).

(6) As to the objection (v. supra n. 9).

(7) To the fourth person.

(8) Sc. land that exceeded the amount that was due to her.

(9) The sale of land of the value of a maneh and a denar for one maneh only.

(10) I.e., when she was selling to the first three persons. and when the extra land for the denar was still hers.

(11) Because the law of overreaching is inapplicable to landed property even where the error amounted to as much as a sixth of the value; much less when it is no more than one hundredth.

(12) Which shews that where the additional land sold constituted a part of the woman's due, her sale is valid. Cf. supra p. 627, n. 11.

(13) That the sale is valid when the land belongs to the woman,

(14) In such a case naturally no preventive measures are called for.

(15) The case in the final clause.

(16) V. supra p. 626, n. 2.

(17) And the buyer is consequently entitled to the possession at least of the lethek (cf. supra 98b).

(18) The sale consequently should be valid.

(19) Cf. supra p. 383, n. 7.

(20) Rashi: The gold denar twenty-five silver denarii, or six sela's (cf. B.M. 44b). [Rashi probably means approximately six sela's, since one sela' four denarii, or the extra denar may be surcharge as agio. v, Strashun].

(21) If the denar was found to have belonged to the sanctuary. Me'il. 21a.

(22) Selling one lethek where the instruction was to sell two (a kor) is similar to spending on an object three sela's where the instruction was to spend on it six (a gold denar).

(23) Lit., 'master of the house', sc. the man who gave the denar to the agent.

(24) He is responsible for the offence since his wish had been carried out.

(25) Consequently it must be inferred that the agent spoken of 10 the enquiry has performed his mission (cf. supra p. 628, n. 6).

(26) Cf. supra note 4.

(27) That the agent carried out the sender's instructions.

(28) Which he bought entirely on his own responsibility.

(29) That the agent bought for three sela's an article that was actually worth six,

(30) Me'il, loc. cit. If the reply given (cf. supra n. 9) is to be accepted R. Judah's statement is apparently meaningless.
(31) Lit., 'what'.
(32) Despite the fact that the shirt bought was actually worth six sela's.
(33) The higher the price the higher in proportion is the profit. Aliter: One who pays a higher price is allowed a greater discount (cf. Rashi s.v. דא ל, and Tosaf. s,v. כל a.I.).
(34) That by 'bad' R. Judah meant 'bad in respect of the price', that the shirt bought for three sela's was actually worth six, and that the reason why the owner is not guilty of trespass is because his wish to have the advantage of the bigger purchase had not been carried out.
(35) Tosef. Me'il, II.
(36) The owner and the agent.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 99b

because [the quantity of] pulse for a sela' [is in exactly the same proportion as] that for one perutah.[1] This is conclusive. How is this[2] to be understood? If it be suggested [that it refers] to a place where [pulse] is sold by conjectural estimate, does not one [it may be objected] who pays a sela' obtain the commodity at a much cheaper rate?[3] — R. Papa replied: [It refers] to a place where each kanna[4] is sold[5] for one perutah.[6] Come and hear: IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR FOUR HUNDRED ZUZ AND SHE SOLD [PLOTS OF LAND] TO [THREE] PERSONS[7] TO EACH FOR ONE MANEH, AND TO A FOURTH[7] [SHE SOLD] WHAT WAS WORTH A MANEH AND A DEN AR FOR ONE MANEH [THE SALE] TO THE LAST PERSON IS VOID BUT [THE SALES] OF ALL THE OTHERS ARE VALID![8] — [This[9] is no proof, for] as R. Shisha the son of R. Idi replied[10] [that the final clause of our Mishnah deals] with small plots of land,[11] [so it may] in this discussion[12] also [be argued that the clause cited deals] with small plots of land.[13] It is obvious [that if a man] instructed [his agent to sell a plot of land] to one person but not to two persons [and he sold it to two' the sale is invalid[14] for] he distinctly told him, 'To one person but not to two persons'.[15] What, [however, is the ruling where] he gave instructions [that the sale shall be made] to one person without mentioning any further limitation?[16] R. Huna ruled: 'To one person' implies 'but not to two'.[17] Both R. Hisda and Rabbah son of R. Huna, however, ruled: 'To one person'[18] may mean even to two;[19] 'to one', may mean[16] even to a hundred.[19] R. Nahman once happened to be at Sura[20] when R. Hisda and Rabbah b. R. Huna came to visit him. 'What [is the ruling], they asked him, in such a case?'[21] — To one', he replied, [may mean] even to two, 'to one' may mean even to a hundred. '[Are the sales valid,]' they asked him, 'even where the agent made an error?'[22] — 'I do not speak', he replied, 'of a case where the agent had made an error'. 'But did not a Master', they asked again, 'say [that the law of] overreaching does not apply to landed property'?[23] This[24] applies only where the owner made the error; but where the agent has made the error [the owner] might tell him, 'I sent you to improve my position but not to impair it'.[25] Whence, however, is it inferred that a distinction may be drawn between the agent and the owner? — [From] what we have learned, 'If a man tells his agent, "Go and give terumah", the latter must give sold no more than a lethek. The validity of the sales of the former is consequently no criterion for the "validity of the sales of the agent in question. the terumah in accordance with the disposition of the owner,[26] and if he does not know the owner's disposition, he should give the terumah in a moderate manner, viz., one fiftieth.[27] If he reduced [the denominator by] ten[28] or added ten to it[29] his terumah is nevertheless valid',s while in respect of an owner[26] it was taught: If, when setting apart terumah, there came up in his hand even so much as one twentieth[30] his terumah is valid.[31] Come and hear: IF HER KETHUBAH WAS FOR FOUR HUNDRED ZUZ AND SHE SOLD [PLOTS OF LAND] TO [THREE] PERSONS[32] TO EACH FOR ONE MANEH, AND TO A FOURTH[32] [SHE SOLD] WHAT WAS WORTH A MANEH AND A DENAR FOR ONE MANEH, [THE SALE] TO THE LAST PERSON IS VOID BUT [THE SALES] OF ALL OTHERS ARE VALID.[33] R. Shisha the son of R. Ishi replied: [This clause deals] with small plots of land.[34]

MISHNAH. IF AN ASSESSMENT OF THE JUDGES[35] WAS BY ONE SIXTH LESS, OR BY

ONE SIXTH MORE [THAN THE ACTUAL VALUE OF THE PROPERTY]. THEIR SALE IS VOID. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED: THEIR SALE IS VALID FOR, OTHERWISE,[36] OF WHAT ADVANTAGE WOULD THE POWER OF A COURT BE? IF A BILL FOR INSPECTION,[37] HOWEVER, HAS BEEN DRAWN UP, THEIR SALE IS VALID EVEN IF THEY SOLD FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ[38] WHAT WAS WORTH ONE MANEH,[38] OR FOR ONE MANEH WHAT WAS WORTH TWO HUNDRED ZUZ.

GEMARA. The question was asked: What is the legal status of[39] an agent?[40] —

---

(1) The smallest coin. No advantage is gained10 making a bigger purchase. The owner's wish 10 this case, unlike that of the shirt (cf. supra p. 629, n. 13) may consequently be regarded as having been carried out. Thus it has been shewn that the reason why R. Judah exempts the owner in the case of the shirt is the one indicated. (Cf. p. 629.0. 14).

(2) The transaction10 pulse.

(3) Than one who buys for a perutah only. The more the amount spent by the buyer the more generous the conjectural estimate of the seller How then could it be said (cf. supra n. 1) that no advantage is gained from the purchase of a larger quantity?

(4) כנא (cf.) a small measure of capacity.

(5) Lit., 'measured'.

(6) V . Glos. ; no advantage, therefore, is gained from the purchase of larger quantities. Read with MS.M. דכייליכנא כנא בפרוטה Cur edd., 'where they measure with kannai (pl. of kanna) so that he tells him. Each kanna for a perutah'.

(7) V. our Mishnah for notes.

(8) Though at the time she sold to each of the first three persons she was in fact authorized (or entitled) to sell much more. As these sales of the woman (which are analogous to an agent's sale of a lethek when his instructions were to sell as much as a kor) are valid, so one would expect the sale of the agent to be valid, and a reply is thus obtained to the enquiry supra 995.

(9) Cf. supra note 8.

(10) Infra.

(11) Detached from one another.

(12) L1t., 'here'.

(13) Cf. supra n. 11. In such circumstances the woman was never expected (entitled or authorized) to sell for all the four hundred zuz to one person at one and the same time. By selling the small plots each for a price not higher than one maneh she is in a different legal position from that of the agent who,10 fact, was expected to sell a full kor while he actually

(14) Even if the sale of a lethek, where the instructions were to sell a kor, were to be ruled as being valid.

(15) Thus clearly expressing his objection to be responsible for more than one deed of sale.

(16) Are the agent's sales to two persons. in such circumstances, valid or not?

(17) The sales, therefore, are invalid.

(18) Unless some definite form of restriction has been expressed.

(19) The sales to them are consequently valid. The mention of one person only is regarded as the usual manner of speech, which is not intended to exclude any larger number of persons.

(20) V. supra p. 383, n. 7'

(21) As the one just discussed.

(22) By accepting a lower price.

(23) V. Mishnah B.M. 56a, why then should the agent's error cause the invalidity of the sale? [Var. lec., 'But did the Master not say etc.',the reference being to R. Nahman's ruling reported B.M. 108a, v. Tosaf. s.v. הכי].

(24) The law just quoted.

(25) Hence the invalidity of the sale.

(26) Lit., 'master of the house'.

(27) Of the produce.

(28) Sc. one fortieth of the whole, which is the quantity of terumah given by men of a liberal disposition (v. Ter. IV, 3).

(29) A sixtieth, which is the measure given by one who is of a mean disposition (v. loc, cit.).

(30) Ter. IV 4; but if his error was greater his terumah is invalid.
(31) Which proves conclusively that a distinction is made between an error made by an owner and one made by his agent.
(32) V. our Mishnah for notes.
(33) Though the multiplicity of sales and inevitable deeds might be objected to' if not by the orphans themselves, by Beth din. Since, however, no such objection is admitted in this case, the same ruling should apply to the case discussed in the enquiry supra 99a.
(34) That were detached from one another, so that it was impracticable to sell them all to one person. Hence the validity of the sales. Where one plot of land, however, is concerned, the owner might well object to have the responsibility of a multiplicity of deeds.
(35) Of a deceased husband's estate which was sold to pay the kethubah of his widow.
(36) Lit., 'if so'.
(37) אגרת בקורת (אגרת= letter', 'bill'; בקורת from rt. בקר, 'to examine' 'inspect'), a legal document, issued by a court, inviting the public to inspect property put up by an order of the court for sale.
(38) V. Glos.
(39) Lit. 'like whom'.
(40) Who made a mistake in the sale he was instructed to effect.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 100a

Raba in the name of R. Nahman replied: An agent [has the same status] as judges,[1] but R. Samuel b. Bisna replied in the name of R. Nahman: As a widow.[2] 'Raba in the name of R. Nahman replied: An agent [has the same status] as judges', for as judges do not act in their [personal interests] so does an agent not act in his [personal interests], thus excluding a widow who acts in her [own personal interests]. 'R. Samuel b. Bisna replied in the name of R. Nahman: As a widow', for as the widow is a single individual so is an agent a single individual; thus excluding members of a court, who are many. — And the law is that an agent [has the same legal status] as a widow. But why [should this case be] different from that concerning which we learned: If a man tells his agent, 'Go and give terumah' the latter must give the terumah in accordance with the disposition of the owner, and if he does not know the owner's disposition, he should separate terumah in a moderate manner, viz. one fiftieth. If he reduced [the denominator by] ten or added ten to it his terumah is, nevertheless, valid?[3] — There[4] [the circumstances are different], for, since someone might give his terumah in a niggardly manner while some other might give it liberally, [the agent][5] might tell the owner, 'I deemed[6] you to be of such [a disposition]';[7] but here, since it was clearly an error, [the owner] might well say, 'You should have made no error'.[8]

R. Huna b. Hanina stated in the name of R. Nahman: The halachah is in agreement with the ruling of the Sages.[9] [Can it be said,] however, that R. Nahman does not hold [that the act of a court is invariably valid since, otherwise,] of what advantage would the power of a court be,[10] when R. Nahman, in fact, ruled in the name of Samuel:[11] If orphans came to take their shares in their father's estate, the court must appoint for [each of] them a guardian and [these guardians] choose for [each of] them a proper share, and when [the orphans] grow up they may enter a protest [against the settlement]; but R. Nahman in his own name, laid down: Even when they grow up they may enter no protest since, otherwise, of what advantage would the power of a court be? — This is no difficulty, the former[12] [referring to a case] where the guardians made a mistake while the latter[13] [deals with one] where no error was made. If no error was made, on what grounds could [the orphans] enter their protest? — On that of the adjacent fields.[14]

When R. Dimi came[15] he stated: It once happened that Rabbi[16] acted in agreement with the ruling of the Sages[9] when Perata, the son of R. Eleazar b. Perata, grandson of R. Perata the Great, asked him, 'If so, of what advantage would the power of a court be?'[10] And [as a result] Rabbi reversed his decision. Thus it was taught by R. Dimi. R. Safra, however, taught as follows: It once happened that

Rabbi[16] desired to act in agreement with the ruling of the Sages,[9] when Perata, the son of R. Eleazar b. Perata, grandson of R. Perata the Great, said to him, 'If so, of what advantage is the power of a court?' And[17] [as a result] Rabbi did not act as he intended.[18] Must it be assumed that they[19] differ on this principle: One master[20] holds the view that if [in giving a decision] a law cited in a Mishnah[21] has been overlooked the decision must be reversed, and the other Master[22] upholds the view[23] that it cannot be reversed?[24] — No; all[19] agree that if [in giving a decision] a law cited in a Mishnah has been overlooked the decision must be reversed, but one Master holds that the incident occurred in one way[25] while the other holds that it occurred in the other way.[25]

R. Joseph stated: If a widow sold [any of her deceased husband's estate][26] the responsibility for the indemnity falls upon the orphans,[27] and if the court sold [any such property][28] the responsibility for the indemnity again falls upon the orphans.[29] [Is not this ruling] obvious?[30] — It was not necessary [indeed in respect of] the widow,[30] but was required [in respect of] the court; for it might have been assumed

---

(1) The sale is valid if the error did not amount to a sixth (v. our Mishnah).

(2) The slightest error renders the sale invalid (cf. the Mishnah supra 98a.)

(3) Ter. IV, 4 and supra 99b q.v. for notes. This then shews, contrary to what was laid down above as law (cf. supra n. 5)' that a slight error does not render an agent's act invalid.

(4) In the case of an agent giving terumah for the owner.

(5) Who gave more, or less, than the owner was inclined to give.

(6) Lit., 'estimated'.

(7) Niggardly or liberal as the case might be.

(8) Hence the invalidity of the sale however slight the error may have been.

(9) The first mentioned ruling in our Mishnah.

(10) I.e., the view of R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL.

(11) V. Kid. Sonc. ed. p. 210, notes.

(12) Lit., 'that', R. Nahman's ruling in the name of Samuel (cf. supra n. 2).

(13) R. Nahman's ruling in his own name (cf. supra, n. 3)'

(14) Lit., 'on (the ground of) the sides', sc. the unsatisfactory situation of their allotted fields owing to their distance from other fields which they already possessed.

(15) From Palestine to Babylon.

(16) R. Judah I, the Patriarch, compiler of the Mishnah.

(17) So MS.M. (wanting in cur. edd.).

(18) Lit., 'the act'.

(19) R. Dimi and R. Safra.

(20) R. Dimi.

(21) Sc. that of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel, which, unlike that of the first Tanna, is also supported by a reason.

(22) R. Safra.

(23) Which is, however, most unlikely.

(24) Had then Rabbi acted in agreement with the Sages' ruling, he would not have been able to reverse his decision.

(25) Lit., 'thus'.

(26) To reimburse herself for her maintenance or kethubah, guaranteeing indemnity to the buyer.

(27) Because they are responsible for the widow's kethubah and maintenance, and she, in selling the estate, was merely acting as their agent.

(28) For the maintenance of a widow or daughter. Cf. also supra n. 10 mutatis mutandis.

(29) Cf. supra n. 10 mutatis mutandis and 97a.

(30) Cf supra n. 11.

that whoever buys from the court does so in order that he may have the benefit of a public announcement,[1] hence we were informed [that the responsibility for the indemnity still remains upon the orphans].

R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED etc. To what limit [of error]?[2] — R. Huna b. Judah replied in the name of R. Shesheth: To a half.[3] So it was also taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel ruled, If the court sold for one maneh what was worth two hundred zuz, or for two hundred zuz what was worth one maneh, their sale is valid. Amemar laid down in the name of R. Joseph: A court that sold [one's estate] without a [previous] public announcement are deemed[4] to have overlooked a law cited in a Mishnah and [their decision][5] must be reversed. [You say] 'Are deemed'?[4] since

Have they not in actual fact overlooked one,' we learned:[6] The assessment [of the property] of the orphans[7] [must be accompanied by a public announcement for a period of] thirty days, and the assessment of consecrated land[8] [for a period of] sixty days; and the announcement must be made both in the morning and in the evening?[9] — If [the ruling[10] were to be derived] from that [Mishnah alone] it might be presumed that it applied only to an agent[11] but not to a court; hence we were taught[10] [that the law applied to a court also].

R. Ashi raised an objection against Amemar: IF AN ASSESSMENT OF JUDGES WAS BY ONE SIXTH LESS, OR ONE SIXTH MORE [THAN THE ACTUAL VALUE OF THE PROPERTY], THEIR SALE IS VOID, but [it follows] if it corresponded to the actual worth of the land[12] their sale is valid. Does not this[13] [apply even to a case] where no public announcement was made?[14] — No; [it applies only to one] where an announcement was made. But since the final clause [refers to a case] where an announcement was made [must not] the first clause[15] [refer to one] where no announcement was made; for in the final clause it was taught: IF A BILL FOR INSPECTION,[16] HOWEVER, HAS BEEN DRAWN UP, THEIR SALE IS VALID EVEN IF THEY SOLD FOR TWO HUNDRED ZUZ WHAT WAS WORTH ONE MANEH, OR FOR ONE MANEH WHAT WAS WORTH TWO HUNDRED ZUZ ?[17] — The fact indeed is [that the first clause refers to a case] where no announcement was made, and [yet[18] there is] no difficulty, for one ruling[19] refers to objects concerning which public announcements must be made, while the other[20] refers to objects concerning which no public announcements are made, such as[21] slaves, movables and deeds. (What is the reason [why no announcement is made in the case of] slaves? — [Because if one were made] they might hear It and escape. Movables and deeds? — Because they might be stolen.) If you wish I might reply:[22] One ruling[23] refers to a time when an announcement is made while the others refers to a time when no announcement is made, the Nehardeans having laid down that for poll-tax,[24] maintenance[25] and funeral expenses [an estate][26] is sold without a public announcement.[27] And if you prefer I might reply:[22] One ruling[23] applies to a place where announcements are made while the other[20] applies to one where no announcements are made, R. Nahman having stated: Never was a bill for inspection[28] drawn up at Nehardea.[29] From this [statement][30] one implied that [the reason[31] was] because they[32] were experts in assessments; but R. Joseph b. Minyomi stated: It was explained to me by R. Nahman [that the reason is] because they[33] were nicknamed 'consumers of publicly auctioned estates',[34]

Rab Judah ruled in the name of Samuel: Orphans' movables must be assessed[35] and sold forthwith.[36] R. Hisda ruled in the name of Abimi: They are to be sold[37] in the markets.[38] There is, however, no difference of opinion between them.[39] One speaks of a place[40] in the proximity of a market ,[41] while the other deals with one[40] from which the market is far.[42]

R. Kahana had in his possession some beer that belonged to the orphan R. Mesharsheya b. Hilkai. He kept it until the festival,[43] saying, 'Though it might deteriorate,[44] it will have a quick sale.'[45]

Rabina had In his possession some wine belonging to the orphan Rabina the Little, his sister's son, and he had also some wine of his own which he was about to take up to Sikara.[46] When he came to

R. Ashi and asked him, 'May I carry [the orphan's wine] with my own'[47] the other told him, 'You may go; it is not superior to your own.

MISHNAH. [A MINOR] WHO EXERCISED THE RIGHT OF MI'UN,[48] A FORBIDDEN RELATIVE OF THE SECOND DEGREE,[49] OR A WOMAN WHO IS INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION IS NOT ENTITLED EITHER TO A KETHUBAH[50] OR TO THE BENEFITS[51] [OF HER MELOG[48] PROPERTY][52] OR TO MAINTENANCE,[53] OR TO HER WORN OUT ARTICLES.[54] IF THE MAN, HOWEVER, HAD MARRIED HER AT THE OUTSET ON THE UNDERSTANDING THAT SHE WAS INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION SHE IS ENTITLED TO A KETHUBAH. A WIDOW WHO WAS MARRIED TO A HIGH PRIEST,[55] A DIVORCED WOMAN OR A HALUZAH[48] WHO WAS MARRIED TO A COMMON PRIEST,[56] A BASTARD OR A NETHINAH[48] WHO WAS MARRIED TO AN ISRAELITE. OR THE DAUGHTER OF AN ISRAELITE WHO WAS MARRIED TO A NATHIN,[48] OR A BASTARD IS ENTITLED TO A KETHUBAH.[57]

GEMARA. Rab taught: A minor who is released by means of a letter of divorce is not entitled to a kethubah[58] and, much less so, [a minor] who exercises the right of mi'un[48] Samuel taught: [A minor] who exercises the right of mi'un[48] is not entitled to a kethubah,[59] but a minor who is released by a letter of divorce is entitled to her kethubah.[60] Samuel[61] follows his [previously expressed] principle; for he laid down: [A minor] who exercises the right of mi'un[62] is not entitled to a kethubah[63] but a minor who is released by a letter of divorce is entitled to her kethubah,'[64] [a minor] who exercises the right of mi'un[62] is not [through this act] disqualified from marrying the brothers [of her husband],[65] nor is she thereby disqualified from marrying a priest,[66] but [a minor who] is released by a letter of divorce is [through this act] disqualified from marrying the brothers [of her husband][67] and also from marrying a priest;[68] [a minor] who exercises the right of mi'un need not wait three months[69]

---

(1) Lit.,'it is with the intent that a voice may be brought out for him that he buys'. Since any sale by a court must be preceded by a public announcement. it is conceivable that if any person had a claim upon the land in question he would advance it as soon as the announcement had been made. A buyer who is presumably aware of these considerations might. therefore, be assumed to feel so secure in his purchase as to surrender his guarantee for indemnity. [Aliter: Whoever buys from the Beth din buys for the purpose that he might gain publicity as a man of means, without necessarily expecting any guarantee of indemnification; Strashun].

(2) Is the sale valid.

(3) Of the actual value.

(4) Lit., 'are made'.

(5) Unlike an erroneous decision that does not conflict with a Mishnah, which remains in force and compensation is paid by the court.

(6) In a Mishnah.

(7) That is put up for sale to meet the claims of their father's widow or daughters.

(8) Sold by the Temple treasurer.

(9) 'Ar. 21b.

(10) Laid down by Amemar in the name of R. Joseph.

(11) Who sells orphans' property.

(12) Lit., 'worth for worth', or 'equal for equal'.

(13) The implied ruling that the sale is valid.

(14) Is this then an objection against Amemar?

(15) Since two adjacent clauses would not repeat the same law.

(16) Which involves. of course, a public announcement (v. supra p. 632, n. 12).

(17) Is this then an objection against Amemar?

(18) Despite the deduction which is apparently in contradiction to Amemar's ruling.

(19) Lit., 'here', the ruling of Amemar.

(20) The first clause of our Mishnah.
(21) Lit., 'and these are objects concerning which no public announcement is made'.
(22) To the objection against Amemar that was raised supra.
(23) Lit., 'here', the ruling of Amemar.
(24) On behalf of orphans.
(25) Of one's widow or daughters.
(26) Of a deceased, inherited by his orphans.
(27) Since in all these cases money is urgently needed no time can be spared for the usual public announcement that must precede other sales ordered by a court; v. supra 8a.
(28) Cf. supra p. 632, n. 12.
(29) Cf. supra p. 222, n. 8.
(30) Of R. Nahman.
(31) For dispensing with a bill of inspection at Nehardea.
(32) The Nehardeans.
(33) Who bought orphans' estates that were offered for sale after a public announcement.
(34) A description of contempt. At such enforced sales the buyers usually made exorbitant profits at the expense of the helpless orphans.
(35) Immediately on their father's death.
(36) In order to prevent their deterioration.
(37) [Read with MS. M.: They are taken to the markets, מוליכין]
(38) Or 'on market days' (cf. Rashi, s.v. דמקרב).
(39) Rab Judah and R. Hisda.
(40) L1t., 'that'.
(41) Aliter: A time when market day is near (cf. Rashi loc. cit.).
(42) Aliter. 'When market day is a long way of' (cf. I.e.).
(43) Though beer must be classed as movables.
(44) איצטא. 'depreciation in the market' or 'deterioration of quality' (cf Jast.) Aliter: 'Though it might become sour', (cf. Rashi).
(45) Lit., 'will bring quick money', I.e , there will be no need to sell on credit. Cash sales, though at a comparatively small price, are preferable to sales on credit that might command a higher price.
(46) [A town on the Tigris near Mahuza. Obermeyer. p. 186].
(47) Sc. may a trustee undertake the risk of sea transport [The wine could be taken from Matha Mehasia (Sura) the home of Rabina to Sikara, either overland or by boat. The former journey, though shorter, was the more expensive and involved greater risk of breakage to the earthenware barrels in which the wine was transported, v. Obermeyer, p. 188ff.]
(48) V. Glos.
(49) Who is forbidden by Rabbinic, though not by Pentateuchal, law (cf. Yeb. 21a).
(50) Cf. Yeb. 113a, B.M. 67a; the first mentioned because her separation may be affected even against her husband's will, the second was penalized for contracting an unlawful marriage (cf. Yeb. 85b) while in the case of the last her marriage is regarded as a contract under false pretences.
(51) Lit., 'fruit'. Aliter: Usufruct.
(52) Sc. her husband is under no obligation to pay her ransom if she is taken captive, though in the case of a legal and normal marriage a husband must assume such obligation (in return for the usufruct of his wife's melog property). As this woman is not entitled to a kethubah she is also deprived of the right to be ransomed which is one of the terms of a kethubah. Aliter; Her husband need not refund the usufruct,
(53) Cf. supra note 5 mutatis mutandis. The limitations of this ruling are dealt with infra 107b.
(54) The articles which she brought to her husband on marriage and the value of which was included in her kethubah. If her husband has used these articles he need not compensate her for their wear or loss when she leaves him.
(55) V. Lev. XXI, 13.
(56) V. ibid. 7.
(57) Yeb. 84a.
(58) Since the marriage of a minor, n his opinion, has no validity and her status is that of one seduced,
(59) Cf. supra note 3.

(60) Because a divorce can be given with the husband's consent only.
(61) In his ruling just cited.
(62) V. Glos,
(63) Cf. supra p. 639, R. 3.
(64) V. p. 639, n. 13.
(65) V. p. 639, n. 11,
(66) Since she has not the status of a divorced woman, mi'un dissolving the union retrospectively.
(67) Because it is forbidden to marry a woman whom ones brother had divorced.
(68) V, Lev. XXI, 7'
(69) After mi'un, before contracting a second marriage, though such a period must be allowed to pass in the case of any other divorced woman or widow. Cf. supra n' 5.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 101a

but [a minor who] was released by a letter of divorce must wait three months.[1] What does he[2] teach us when all these cases have already been taught:[3] If [a minor] has exercised the right of mi'un against her husband he is permitted to marry her relatives[4] and she is permitted to marry his relatives,[4] and he does not disqualify her from marrying a priest;[5] but if he gave her a letter of divorce he is forbidden to marry her relatives and she is forbidden to marry his relatives and he also disqualifies her from marrying a priest?[6] — He found it necessary [to restate these rulings in order to mention:] 'She must wait three months' which we did not learn.[7]

Must one assume [that they[8] differ on the same principles] as the following Tannaim: R. Eliezer stated, There is no validity whatsoever in the act of a minor, and her husband is entitled neither to anything she finds,[9] nor to the work of her hands,[9] nor may he invalidate her vows;[10] he is not her heir[9] and he may not defile himself for her;[11] this being the general rule: She is in no respect regarded as his wife, except that it is necessary for her to make a declaration of refusal;[12] and R. Joshua stated, The act of a minor is valid, and her husband has the right to anything she finds[13] and to the work of her hands,[13] to invalidate her vows,[14] to be her heir,[13] and to defile himself for her;[15] the general principle being that she is regarded as his wife in every respect, except that she may leave him[12] by declaring her refusal against him?[16] Must one then assume that Rab[17] has laid down the same principle as that of R. Eliezer[18] and that Samuel[19] has laid down the same principle as that of R. Joshua?[20] — There is no difference of opinion between them[21] as to what was the view[22] of R. Eliezer;[23] they differ only in respect of the view[22] of R. Joshua. Samuel [ruled] In agreement with R. Joshua; but Rab argued that[24] R. Joshua maintained his view only there[25] [where the benefits[26] are transferred] from her to him[27] but not [where the benefits[28] are to be transferred] from him to her.[29]

OR TO HER WORN OUT ARTICLES. Said R. Huna b. Hiyya to R. Kahana: You have told us in the name of Samuel that this[30] was taught only in respect of melog,[31] but that to zon barzel[31] property she is entitled. R. Papa, in considering this statement, raised the point: To which [class of women did Samuel refer]? If it be suggested: To [A MINOR] WHO EXERCISED THE RIGHT OF MI'UN [the difficulty would arise:] If [the articles] are still in existence she would be entitled to receive them in either case,[32] and if they were no longer in existence she would in neither case[32] be entitled to receive them.[33] [Is the reference], then, to A WOMAN WHO IS INCAPABLE OF PROCREATION? [But here again, it may be objected:] If [the articles] were still in existence she would receive them in either case,[32] and if they no longer existed [the ruling] should be reversed: She should receive melog property since [the capital] always remains in her legal possession[34] but should not receive zon barzel property since [the capital] does not remain in her possession.[35] [The fact,] however, [is that the reference is] to A FORBIDDEN RELATIVE OF THE SECOND DEGREE, in whose case[36] the Rabbis have penalized the woman in respect of [what is due to her] from the man,[37] and the man in respect of [what is due to him] from the woman.[38] R. Shimi b. Ashi remarked: From R. Kahana's statement[39] it may be inferred [that if a lawful wife] brought to her husband[40] a cloak,[41] the article is [to be treated as] capital and the man may not continue to wear it until it is worn out.[42] But did not R. Nahman, however, rule that [a cloak must be treated as] produce?[43] — He[44] differs from R. Nahman. IS NOT ENTITLED [. . .] TO A KETHUBAH. Samuel stated: This was taught only in respect of the maneh[45] and the two hundred zuz,'[46] to the additional jointure,[47] however, she[48] is entitled. So it was also taught: The women concerning whom the Sages have ruled, 'They are not entitled to a kethubah' as, for instance, a minor who exercised the right of mi'un[39] and the others enumerated in the same context,[49] are not entitled to the maneh[50] or to the two hundred zuz,[51] but are entitled to their additional jointures; women, however, concerning whom the Sages have ruled, 'They may be divorced without [receiving their] kethubah' as, for instance, [a wife who] transgresses the [Mosaic] law, and others enumerated in the same context,[52] are not entitled to their additional jointures[47] and much less to [their statutory kethubahs of] a maneh[50] or two hundred zuz;[51] whilst a woman who is divorced on the ground of in repute[53] takes only[54] what is hers[55] and departs. This[56] provides support to R. Hunah who laid down: If she played the harlot [a wife] does not in consequence forfeit

---

(1) As any other woman (v. supra note 8).

(2) Samuel, in the statement cited.

(3) In a Mishnah.

(4) V. supra p. 639, n. 11.

(5) Cf. note 5'

(6) Yeb. 1085.

(7) in the Mishnah of Yeb. cited.

(8) Rab and Samuel.

(9) To which a lawful husband is entitled.

(10) Which is the privilege of a husband (cf. Num. XXX, 7ff).

(11) If he is a priest. Only a lawful husband may (cf. Lev. XXI, 2).

(12) If she wishes to marry another man.

(13) Rabbinic law has conferred upon him the same rights as those of a lawful husband. Cf. p. 640, n. 17.

(14) Which is the privilege of a husband (cf. Num. XXX, 7ff).

(15) Even if he is a priest (cf. supra n. 1). Since he inherits her she is regarded as a meth mizwah (v. Glos.) for whom he may defile himself though Pentateuchally she is not his proper wife; v. Rashi Yeb. 108a.

(16) And no letter of divorce is required. Yeb. 89b, 108a.

(17) Who does not allow a kethubah to a divorced minor.

(18) Who ruled: 'There is no validity whatsoever in the act of a minor'.

(19) Who allows to a minor her kethubah,

(20) Who ruled that 'the act of a minor is valid'. Is it likely, however, that Rab and Samuel who were Amoraim would engage in a dispute which is practically a mere repetition of that of Tannaim?

(21) Lit., 'all the world', sc, Rab and Samuel.

(22) Lit., 'according'.

(23) I.e., even Samuel must admit that according to R. Eliezer, no kethubah is due to a minor a minori ad majus (cf. infra nn. 16 to 19 and text mutatis mutandis).

(24) Lit., 'up to here',

(25) In the case cited from Yeb.

(26) Inheritance, handiwork and finds.

(27) A husband may well be given such privileges in order to encourage men to undertake the responsibilities of married life.

(28) Such as the kethubah and the other privileges contained therein.

(29) There is no need to hold out inducements of marriage to a woman who is assumed to be always craving for marriage.

(30) That the woman spoken of in our Mishnah is not entitled to compensation for the WORN OUT CLOTHES. It will be discussed anon to which of the three classes of woman mentioned Samuel referred.

(31) V. Glos.

(32) Whether they were melog or zon barzel.
(33) Since, in the case of zon barzel, the husband might plead that what he used up was legally his, and in respect of melog also, though he had no right to use up the 'capital'. he might still plead justification on the ground that it would have become his by the right of heirship if he had survived her. In either case he would be justified in his claim that the minor's right to compensation does not come into force except on divorce.
(34) And the husband, therefore, had no right to use it up.
(35) But in that of the husband who was consequently entitled to use it up completely.
(36) Since both husband and wife are guilty of a transgression.
(37) Lit., 'fined her in respect of what is his'. Viz the kethubah and maintenance as well as for the wear of melog articles which he used up unlawfully and for which,10 the case of a lawful marriage. he would have been liable to pay compensation to the woman.
(38) Lit. , 'fined him in respect of what is hers'. He must pay compensation for the wear of zon barzel articles which he used up, though a lawful wife cannot object to such use. [Although the woman is nor mally entitled to compensation for the wear of the zon barzel property, it is still considered a fine, as legally the husband should, in this case, not be made to pay since he does not divorce of his own free will (R. Nissim). Var. lec. , they fined her in respect of what is hers (i.e..the melog property) and him in respect of what is his (i.e., the zon barzel property).]
(39) That in a forbidden marriage the woman is not entitled to compensation for worn out melog articles.
(40) On marrying him.
(41) As melog.
(42) If he did so he must pay compensation.
(43) Supra 79b.
(44) R. Kahana.
(45) The statutory kethubah that is due to one who married as a widow or divorcee.
(46) Due to a virgin (cf. supra note 7 mutatis mutandis).
(47) Which a husband settles on his wife at his own pleasure.
(48) Lit., 'they', sc, the classes of women mentioned in our Mishnah.
(49) Lit., 'and her associates'.
(50) V. supra note 7.
(51) V. supra n. 8.
(52) Cf. supra n. 10 and v. Mishnah supra 72a.
(53) Lit., 'on evil name', sc. of faithlessness.
(54) MS.M. inserts, 'the worn out clothes'.
(55) Lit., 'before her', sc. her 'melog property.
(56) The last ruling in the cited Baraitha.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 101b

her worn out articles that are still in existence.

A tanna recited in the presence of R. Nahman: [A wife who] played the harlot forfeits in consequence her worn out articles [though they are still] in existence. 'If she' , the other said to him, 'has played the harlot, have her chattels also played the harlot?[1] Recite rather: She does not forfeit her worn out articles [that are still] in existence' — Rabbah b. Bar Hana stated in the name of R. Johanan: This[2] is the view of the unnamed R. Menahem,[3] but the Sages ruled: [A wife who] played the harlot does not thereby forfeit her worn out articles that are still in existence.

IF THE MAN, HOWEVER, HAD MARRIED HER etc. Said R. Huna:A woman incapable of procreation [has sometimes the status of] a wife and [sometimes she has] no such status;[4] a widow[5] [has always the status of] a proper wife. 'A woman incapable of procreation [has sometimes the status of] a wife and [sometimes she] has no such status'; if the husband knew of her [defect][6] she is entitled to a kethubah[7] and if he did not know of her [defect] she is not entitled to a kethubah. 'A widows [has always the status of] a proper wife', for, whether her husband was aware of her

[widowhood] or whether he was not aware of it, she is always entitled to a kethubah. Rab Judah, however, said: The one[8] as well as the other[9] [has sometimes the status of] a wife and [sometimes she has] no such status,[4] for [in either case] if her husband was aware of her [condition or status] she is entitled to a kethubah and if he was not aware of it she is not entitled to a kethubah. An objection was raised: If [a High Priest] married on the presumption that [the woman] was in her widowhood[10] and it was found that she had been in such a condition,[10] she is entitled to her kethubah. Does not this imply that if[11] there was no presumption[12] she is not entitled to a kethubah?[13] — Do not infer 'that[11] if there was no such presumption' but infer [this:] If he married her on the presumption that she was not in her widowhood[14] and it was found that she had been in such a condition,[14] she is not entitled to a kethubah. What, however, [is the ruling where he married her] with no assumption? Is she entitled [to a kethubah]? Then instead of stating, 'On the presumption that [the woman] was in her widowhood[14] and it was found that she had been in such a condition,[14] she is entitled to her kethubah', should it not rather have been stated, 'With no assumption she is entitled to her kethubah'[15] and [it would have been obvious that this[16] applied] with even greater force to the former?[17] Furthermore, it was explicitly taught: If he[18] married her in the belief[19] [that she was a widow] and it was found that his belief was justified,[19] she is entitled to a kethubah, but if he married her with no assumption she is not entitled to a kethubah. [Does not this present] an 'objection against R. Huna? — It was our Mishnah that caused R. Huna to err. He thought that, since a distinction was drawn in the case of a woman incapable of procreation[20] and no distinction was drawn in respect of a widow, it must be inferred that a widow is entitled [to a kethubah even if she was married] with no assumption of her status. [In fact, however] this is no [proper conclusion], for in stating the case of a widow the author intended to apply to it[21] the distinction drawn in the case of the woman who was incapable of procreation.[22]

CHAPTER XII

MISHNAH. IF A MAN MARRIED A WIFE AND SHE MADE AN ARRANGEMENT WITH HIM THAT HE SHOULD MAINTAIN HER DAUGHTER[23] FOR FIVE YEARS, HE MUST MAINTAIN HER FOR FIVE YEARS. IF SHE WAS [SUBSEQUENTLY][24] MARRIED TO ANOTHER MAN AND ARRANGED WITH HIM ALSO THAT HE SHOULD MAINTAIN HER DAUGHTER[23] FOR FIVE YEARS, HE, TOO, MUST MAINTAIN HER FOR FIVE YEARS. THE FIRST HUSBAND IS NOT ENTITLED TO PLEAD, 'IF SHE WILL. COME TO ME I WILL MAINTAIN HER',[25] BUT HE MUST FORWARD HER MAINTENANCE TO HER AT THE PLACE WHERE HER MOTHER [LIVES].[26] SIMILARLY, THE TWO HUSBANDS CANNOT PLEAD, 'WE WILL MAINTAIN HER JOINTLY', BUT ONE MUST MAINTAIN HER AND THE OTHER ALLOW HER THE COST OF HER MAINTENANCE. IF SHE[27] MARRIED[24] HER HUSBAND MUST SUPPLY HER WITH MAINTENANCE AND THEY[28] ALLOW HER THE COST OF HER MAINTENANCE. SHOULD THEY[29] DIE, THEIR OWN DAUGHTERS ARE TO BE MAINTAINED OUT OF THEIR FREE ASSETS ONLY[30] BUT SHE[27] MUST BE MAINTAINED EVEN OUT OF ASSIGNED PROPERTY, BECAUSE SHE[31] [HAS THE SAME LEGAL STATUS] AS A CREDITOR. PRUDENT MEN USED TO WRITE,[32] 'ON CONDITION THAT I SHALL MAINTAIN YOUR DAUGHTER FOR FIVE YEARS WHILE YOU [CONTINUE TO LIVE] WITH ME'. GEMARA. It was stated: A man who said to his fellow, 'I owe you a maneh'[33] is, R. Johanan ruled, liable; but Resh Lakish ruled: He is free. How is one to understand [this dispute]? If [it refers to a case] where the man said to them[34] 'You are my witnesses', what [it might be objected] is the reason of Resh Lakish who holds him to be free?[35] If [it is a case] where he did not say to them,[34] 'You are my witnesses, what [it might equally be objected] can be the reason of R. Johanan who holds him liable?[36] The fact is[37] that [the dispute relates to a case] where he did not tell them, 'You are my witnesses', but here we are[38] dealing [with the case of a person] who said to another, 'I owe you a maneh'[33] by [handing to him][39] a note of indebtedness.[40] R. Johanan ruled: He is liable, because the contents[41] of a bond[42] has the same force as if the man [who delivered it] said, 'You are my witnesses'; but Resh Lakish ruled: He is free, because the contents[41] of a bond has no binding force.

We learned: IF A MAN MARRIED A WIFE AND SHE MADE AN AGREEMENT WITH HIM THAT HE SHALL MAINTAIN HER DAUGHTER FOR FIVE YEARS, HE MUST MAINTAIN HER FOR FIVE YEARS. Does not this refer to[43] , a case like this?[44]

---

(1) Surely not.

(2) The version recited by the Tanna in the presence of R. Nahman.

(3) Sc. whose rulings were often quoted anonymously in the Mishnah and the Baraitha. [The reference is to R. Menahem b. R. Jose, v, Neg. 262.]

(4) Lit., 'and not a wife'.

(5) Even if married to a High Priest (cf. Lev. XXI, 14).

(6) Before he married her.

(7) He is assumed to have acquiesced.

(8) MS,M., one incapable of procreation'.

(9) 'A widow' (so MS.M.) who was married to a High Priest.

(10) Lit., 'so'.

(11) Lit. , 'but' —

(12) A case analogous to that where the High Priest was not aware of the woman's widowhood, supra.

(13) An objection against R. Huna.

(14) Lit. , 'so'.

(15) So Bah. Cur. edd. omit the last six words.

(16) The woman's right to her kethubah.

(17) Lit. , 'that', where the High Priest actually presumed the woman's widowhood.

(18) A High Priest.

(19) בידוע particip. pass. of ידע ('to know') with prefix.

(20) 'IF THE MAN, HOWEVER, HAD MARRIED HER AT THE OUTSET . . . SHE IS ENTITLED etc.'.

(21) Lit., 'stands on'.

(22) Which immediately precedes it.

(23) From another husband.

(24) before the expiration of the five years.

(25) Sc. refusing maintenance on the ground that her mother with whom she lives was no longer his wife.

(26) Var. lec., 'to the place of her mother' (so according to the separate edd. of the Mishnah and Alfasi).

(27) The daughter.

(28) Respectively; each one the full cost.

(29) The two husbands (v. supra n. 2).

(30) Cf. 48b.

(31) Whose rights are based on a written bond.

(32) In any agreement to maintain a wife's daughter.

(33) V. Glos.

(34) Those who were present at the time of his admission of the debt.

(35) Such a ruling, surely. is contrary to what has been laid down in Sanh. 29b.

(36) This, surely, is also contrary to what was taught in Sanh. 29b, that the admission is valid only where the debtor explicitly stated, 'You are my witnesses'.

(37) Lit., 'always'.

(38) Lit., 'in what are we'.

(39) In the presence of witnesses.

(40) In which the debt is acknowledged in the man's handwriting but is not attested by his signature nor by that of witnesses.

(41) Lit., 'thing'.

(42) Delivered in the presence of witnesses.

(43) Lit., 'what, not?'

(44) Where the husband had handed over the written agreement (cf. supra note 8 mutatis mutandis) in the presence of witnesses without specifically appointing them as such. Had the document been duly signed the ruling, being so obvious, would have been superfluous. Does this then present an objection against Resh Lakish?

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 102a

— No, [our Mishnah is dealing] with deeds on verbal agreements,[1] and [the ruling[2] was necessary] in accordance with [the view] of R.Giddal, since R. Giddal has laid down in the name of Rab:[3] [if[4] one man said to another.] 'How much are you giving to your son?' [and the other replies.] 'Such and such a sum', and [when the other asks.] 'How much are you giving to your daughter?' [the first replies.] 'Such and such a sum', [and on the basis of this talk] a betrothal was effected,[5] kinyan is deemed to have been executed, these being matters concerning which kinyan is effected by a mere verbal arrangement.[6]

Come and hear: If a man gave to a priest in writing [a statement] that he[7] owed him five sela's[8] he must[9] pay him the five sela's and his son is not redeemed thereby![10] — There [the law] is different because one is under a pentateuchal obligation [to give them] to him.[11] If that be so, why did he write? — In order to choose for himself a priest.[12] If that is the case[13] why is not his son redeemed?[14] — In agreement with a ruling of 'Ulla; For 'Ulla said, pentateuchally [the son] is redeemed as soon as [the father] gives [the note of money indebtedness to the priest,] and the reason why the Rabbis ruled that he was not redeemed is because a preventive measure was enacted against the possibility of the assumption that redemption may be effected by means of bonds [in general].[15]

Raba said: [Their '[6] dispute seems to follow the same principles] as [laid down by] Tannaim: [If the guarantee] of a guarantor appears[16] below the signatures to bonds of indebtedness,[17] [the creditor] may recover his debt from [the guarantor's] free property.[18] Such a case once came before R. Ishmael who decided that [the debt] may be recovered from [the guarantor's] free property.[18] Ben Nannus, however, said to him, '[The debt may] be recovered neither from free property nor from assigned property'. 'Why?' the other asked him. 'Behold', he replied, 'this is just as if [a creditor] were [in the act of] throttling a debtor[19] in the street,[20] and his friend found him and said to him, "Leave him alone and I will pay you", [where he is undoubtedly] exempt from liability, since the loan was not made through trust in him.'[21] May it not be suggested that R. Johanan holds the same view as R. Ishmael while Resh Lakish holds that of Ben Nannus? — On the view of Ben Nannus there can be no difference of opinion;[22]

---

(1) שטרי פסיקתא in which the witnesses enter the terms that were verbally agreed upon between the parties and duly attach their signatures.

(2) Which might appear superfluous in view of the fact that the agreement has been properly drawn up and duly signed.

(3) Kid. 9b.

(4) In negotiating a marriage.

(5) Lit., 'they stood and betrothed'.

(6) No symbolic kinyan being necessary. Our Mishnah, too' deals similarly with a verbal agreement from which symbolic kinyan was absent; and, contrary to the opinion that an agreement without kinyan is invalid, it lays down the law In agreement with R. Giddal.

(7) Lit., 'that I'.

(8) Or shekels. Such a sum is due to the priest for the redemption of an Israelite's firstborn son (cf. Ex. XIII, 13 and Num. XVIII, 16).

(9) Though the document was unsigned and no kinyan was executed and, in consequence. should have no more legal force than a verbal admission. This contradicts Resh Lakish.

(10) Bek. 510.

(11) [He is not actually obliged Biblically to give to this particular priest, hence omit to him' with MS.M. which reads 'because it is Biblical'.]

(12) In the absence of the written document the five sela's could have been given to any other priest.
(13) That the Pentateuchal obligation confers upon a legally invalid document the force of one that was duly signed by witnesses.
(14) A legal bond, surely, might be regarded as a virtual payment.
(15) Other than those In which the father of the child himself assumed the liability. (14) R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.
(16) Lit., 'which goes out'.
(17) [The guarantor simply declaring 'I am guarantor' without attaching his signature (Tosaf.).]
(18) But not from property which he sold or mortgaged. Since the signatures of the witnesses do not appear below the guarantee, the guarantor's undertaking can have no more force than a verbal promise, or a loan that has not been secured by a bond, in which case no assigned property is pledged to the creditor.
(19) Lit., 'his fellow'.
(20) Sc. using violence against him.
(21) Such a guarantee is offered for the sole purpose of rescuing the debtor from the creditor's violence. It cannot be regarded as a serious guarantee to discharge the debt, since the debt was incurred before the guarantee was given, v. B.B. 175b.
(22) I.e., even R. Johanan must admit that Ben Nannus differs from his ruling. For, if in the case of a guarantee which has Pentateuchal authority (v. B.B. 173b), Ben Nannus does not recognize the validity of a personally unattested undertaking, how much less would he recognize such an undertaking in a case like that spoken of by R. Johanan.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 102b

their dispute, however, might relate to the view of R. Ishmael. R. Johanan is, [of course,] in agreement with R. Ishmael, while Resh Lakish [might argue:] R. Ishmael maintains his view there[1] only[2] because a pentateuchal responsibility is involved[3] but [not] here where no pentateuchal responsibility is involved.

The [above] text [stated]: 'R. Giddal has laid down in the name of Rab: [If one man said to another,] "How much are you giving to your son?" [and the other replied,] "Such and such a sun,", and [when the other asks,] "How much are you giving to your daughter?" [the first replies,] "Such and such a sum", [and on the basis of this talk] betrothal was effected, kinyan is deemed to have been executed, these being matters concerning which kinyan is effected by a mere verbal arrangement'.[4] Said Raba: It stands to reason that Rab's ruling should apply [only] to the case of a man whose daughter was[5] a na'arah,[6] since the benefit [of her betrothal][7] goes to him,[8] but not to that of a bogereth,[6] since the benefit [of the betrothal of the latter]' does not go to him; but, by God! Rab meant [his ruling to include] even one who is a bogereth. For, should you not concede this, [the objection could be put:] What benefit does the son's[9] father derive?[10] The reason consequently must be that[11] owing to the pleasure of the formation of a mutual family tie they decide to allow one another the full rights of kinyan.

Said Rabina to R. Ashi: Are those verbal arrangements,[12] allowed to be recorded[13] or are they not allowed to be recorded?[14] — They, the other replied, may not be recorded.[15] He[16] raised an objection against him:[17] PRUDENT MEN USED TO WRITE,[18] ON CONDITION THAT I SHALL MAINTAIN YOUR DAUGHTER FOR FIVE YEARS WHILE YOU [CONTINUE TO LIVE] WITH ME'?[19] — The meaning of[20] 'WRITE' [in this context] is 'say'. Could 'saying', however, be described as 'writing'? — Yes, for so we learned: If a husband gives to his wife a written undertaking,[21] 'I have no claim whatsoever upon your estates',[22] and R. Hiyya taught:[23] If a husband said[24] to his wife.[25]

Come and hear: Deeds of betrothal[26] and marriage[27] may not be written except with the consent of both parties,[28] but, [it follows, that] with the consent of both parties they may be written. Does not this refer to[29] deeds based on verbal agreements?[30] — No; deeds of actual betrothal,[31] [the ruling[32] being] in agreement with R. papa and R. Sherabya; for it was stated: If a man wrote it[33] in her name[34] but without her consent she is, said Rabbah[35] and Rabina, betrothed, but R. Papa and R. Sherabya aid, She is not betrothed.[36]

Come and hear: SHOULD THEY DIE, THEIR OWN DAUGHTERS ARE TO BE MAINTAINED OUT OF THEIR FREE PROPERTY ONLY BUT SHE MUST BE MAINTAINED EVEN OUT OF ASSIGNED PROPERTY, BECAUSE SHE [HAS THE SAME LEGAL STATUS] AS A CREDITOR![37] Here we are dealing with a case where the man was made to confirm his obligation[38] by a kinyan.[39] If so,[40] [the same right[41] should be enjoyed, should it not, by one's own] daughters also? — [This is a case] where kinyan was executed in favour of the ones but not in favour of the others.[42] Whence this certainty?[43] — Since she was in existence at the time the kinyan was executed, the kinyan in her favour is effective; the other daughters,[44] however, since they were not in existence at the time the kinyan was executed, the kinyan in their favour is not effective. But do we not also deal with the case where they[45] were in existence at the time of the kinyan, this being possible where,[46] for instance, the man had divorced his wife and then remarried her? — [This] however, [is the explanation:] Since she is not covered by the provision of Beth din[47] kinyan in her case is effective; in the case of the other daughters, however, who are protected by the provision of Beth din,[47] kinyan is not effective. Are they, on that account, worse off?[48] — This, however, is the reason: In the case of his own daughters, since they are protected by the provision of Beth din,[47] it might be assumed that he entrusted them[49] with some bundles [of money].[50]

THE FIRST HUSBAND IS NOT ENTITLED TO PLEAD [etc.] R.Hisda stated: This[51] implies that [the place of] a daughter must be with her mother.[52] Whence, [however, the proof] that we are dealing here[53] with one who is of age; is it not possible that[54] we are dealing only with a minor [whose custody must be entrusted to her mother] on account of what had once happened? For it was taught: If a man died and left a young son with his mother,[55] [and while] the father's heirs demand, ‘Let him be brought up with us’ his mother claims, ‘My son should be brought up by me’, [the son] must be left with his mother, but may not be left with anyone who is entitled to be his heir.[56] Such a case[57] once occurred and [the heirs] killed him on the eve of passover![58] — If that were so[59] it should have been stated,[60] ‘To wherever she is,’

---

(1) The case of the guarantor.

(2) Lit., ‘until here’.

(3) The recognition of a guarantor's responsibility is (as stated supra) Pentateuchal.

(4) Supra 102a q.v. for notes.

(5) At the time betrothal was negotiated.

(6) V. Glos.

(7) Sc. the sum of money or object of value which the man gives to the woman as a token of betrothal which constitutes the required kinyan.

(8) Lit., to his hand’. As a return for the benefit he, it may well be presumed, readily agrees that even his verbal undertaking should have the legal force of a personally attested written deed.

(9) Sc. the bridegroom's.

(10) Surely none; since the pecuniary benefit from his son's betrothal does not belong to him.

(11) Lit., ‘but’.

(12) Lit., ‘words’, spoken of supra, in connection with which no symbolic kinyan was executed.

(13) Sc. in a deed, by witnesses.

(14) For, if they were to be embodied10 a deed, the holder of such a deed would be enabled to distrain on assigned property to which, in the absence of symbolic kinyan, he is legally not entitled. [The question, according to Isaiah Trani, is whether these may be reduced to writing without the consent of both parties, either of whom may object to encumbering the property with a mortgage, v. Shittah Mekubbezeth a.I. and R. Nissim on Kid.9b also, for other interpretations.]

(15) Cf. supra nn. 10 and 11.

(16) Rabina.

(17) R. Ashi.
(18) כותבין emphasis on 'WRITE'.
(19) Though the agreement was only verbal. How then could K. Ashi maintain that verbal arrangements may not be embodied in a deed?
(20) Lit., 'what'.
(21) הכותב
(22) Mishnah supra 830.
(23) In reference to this Mishnah which uses the expression of writing (v. supra n. 3).
(24) Emphasis on the word האומר.
(25) Which proves that a verbal statement is sometimes described as a written one.
(26) Verbal agreements between the parties on the amounts promised.
(27) Kethubah contracts.
(28) B.B. 167b,Kid.9b.
(29) Lit., 'what, not?'
(30) Cf. supra p. 647, n. 13. An objection thus arises against R. Ashi who ruled that verbal agreements 'may not be recorded'. [On Trani's interpretation (supra p. 650, n. II) this passage is adduced in support of R. Ashi that such deeds cannot be written without the consent of both parties. This will, however, necessitate the deletion of the words '(it follows that) with the consent of both they may be written', which words10 fact do not occur in MS.M.]
(31) Betrothal may be effected by a deed wherein the man enters, 'Behold thou art betrothed unto me'.
(32) Which requires the consent of the woman to such a deed.
(33) A deed of betrothal.
(34) Or 'for her sake', that of the woman he wishes to betroth.
(35) Var., 'Raba' (MS.M., the parallel passage in Kid., and Codes).
(36) Kid. 9b, 48a.
(37) Since only a written deed would confer upon her such a status it is obvious that such a deed was in her possession, an objection against R. Ashi (cf. supra n. 12).
(38) To maintain his wife's daughter.
(39) Lit., 'where they acquired (symbolic) possession from his hand'. Hence the permissibility of writing a deed.
(40) That the verbal agreement was under a kinyan.
(41) To exact the cost of maintenance from assigned property.
(42) Lit., 'to this'.
(43) The Mishnah, surely, does not mention kinyan in the case of the one and omit it in that of the others.
(44) Who were presumably born from the marriage contracted at the time of the kinyan.
(45) The man's own daughters.
(46) Lit., 'and how is this to be imagined?'
(47) The clause of the kethubah which entitles daughters born from that marriage to maintenance.
(48) The contrary might, in fact, be expected: As they enjoy the privilege of the clause in the kethubah (v. supra n. 10) they should also be entitled to the privilege of the kinyan.
(49) Lit., 'caused them to seize', before he died.
(50) Or valuables, to discharge his obligation on the account of their maintenance.
(51) The ruling that the maintenance of one's wife's daughter must be forwarded to the place where her mother lives.
(52) The brothers who maintain her are not entitled to demand that she shall live with them.
(53) In our Mishnah.
(54) In stating. 'WHERE HER MOTHER (LIVES)'.
(55) לאמו; wanting in Bomb. ed.
(56) An interested party may be suspected of murder.
(57) That the child was entrusted to the care of relatives who were entitled to be his legal heirs.
(58) In order to secure his property. Now since there is nothing to prove that an older daughter (who is well capable of looking after herself) must also be maintained at her mother's house and cannot be compelled to live with the brothers and receive maintenance from them, an objection arises against R. Hisda. [Detractors of the Talmud, it may be mentioned, professed to find in this passage an allusion to the 'ritual' murder of 'Christian' children! The absurdity of this suggestion was pointed out by Eric Bischoff in his Talmudkatechismus, p. 38, where he describes it as 'sinnlos'

(senseless). It is evident that this incident was recorded to emphasize the danger of entrusting a child to the care of one who stands to benefit by its death. For we see here that even the sanctity of the Festival did not deter the brothers from perpetrating a crime for the purpose of gain. This danger has also been recognized in the English Law of Insurance which lays down that a man cannot insure his child's life to derive a benefit on its death].

(59) That a daughter who is of age may be compelled to live with her brothers.

(60) In our Mishnah.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 103a

why then was it stated, 'AT THE PLACE WHERE HER MOTHER [LIVES]'?[1] Consequently it must be inferred that [the place of] a daughter, whether she be of age or a minor, is with her mother.

THE TWO HUSBANDS CANNOT PLEAD etc. A certain man once leased his mill to another for [the consideration of the latter's services in] grinding [his corn].[2] Eventually he became rich and bought another mill and an ass. Thereupon he said to the other, 'Until now I have had my grinding done at your place but now[3] pay me rent'. — 'I shall', the other replied, 'only grind for you'.[4] Rabina [in considering the case] intended to rule that it involved the very principle that was laid down in our Mishnah: THE TWO HUSBANDS CANNOT PLEAD, 'WE WILL MAINTAIN HER JOINTLY', BUT ONE MUST MAINTAIN HER AND THE OTHER ALLOWS HER THE COST OF HER MAINTENANCE.[5] R. 'Awira, however, said to him: Are [the two cases] alike? There [the woman][6] has Only one stomach, not two;[7] but here[8] [the lessee] might well tell the owner, 'Grind [in your own mill][9] and sell; grind [in mine][10] and keep'.[11] This,[12] however, has been said only in a case where [the lessee] has no [other orders for] grinding at his mill,[13] but if he has [sufficient orders for] grinding at his mill he may in such circumstances be compelled [not to act] in the manner of Sodom.[14]

MISHNAH. SHOULD A WIDOW SAY, 'I HAVE NO DESIRE TO MOVE FROM MY HUSBAND'S HOUSE', THE HEIRS CANNOT TELL HER, GO TO YOUR FATHER'S HOUSE AND WE WILL MAINTAIN YOU', BUT THEY MUST MAINTAIN HER IN HER HUSBAND'S HOUSE[15] AND GIVE HER A DWELLING BECOMING HER DIGNITY. IF SHE SAID, HOWEVER,[16] HAVE NO DESIRE TO MOVE FROM MY FATHER'S HOUSE', THE HEIRS ARE ENTITLED TO SAY TO HER, 'IF YOU STAY WITH US YOU WILL HAVE YOUR MAINTENANCE, BUT IF YOU DO NOT STAY WITH US YOU WILL RECEIVE NO MAINTENANCE'. IF SHE BASED HER PLEA[16] ON THE GROUND THAT SHE WAS YOUNG AND THEY[17] WERE YOUNG,[18] THEY MUST MAINTAIN HER WHILE SHE LIVES IN THE HOUSE OF HER FATHER.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught:[19] [A widow] may use [her deceased husband's] dwelling as she used it during his[20] lifetime. [She may also use] the bondmen and bondwomen, the cushions and the bolsters, and the silver and gold utensils as she used them during the lifetime of her husband, for such is the written undertaking he gave her: 'And you shall dwell in my house and be maintained therein out of my estate throughout the duration of your widowhood'.[21]

R. Joseph learnt:[22] 'In my house' [implies] 'but not in my hovel'.[23]

R. Nahman ruled: If orphans sold a widow's dwelling[24] their act is legally invalid.[25] But why [should this case be] different from that of which R. Assi spoke in the name of R. Johanan as follows:[26] If the male orphans forestalled [the female orphans] and sold[27] some property of a small estate[28] their sale is valid?[29] — There[30] [the property] Was not pledged to any daughter[31] during [her father's] lifetime,[32] but here[33] [the dwelling] was pledged to the widow[34] during [her husband's] lifetime.[35]

Abaye stated: We have a tradition that if a widow's dwelling[36] collapsed it is not the duty of the heirs to rebuild it.' So it was also taught: If a widow's dwelling[36] collapsed it is not the duty of the heirs to rebuild it.[37] Furthermore, even if she says, 'Allow me and I shall rebuild it at my own expense', she is not granted her request .[38]

Abaye asked: What [is the legal position if] she repaired it?[39] — This is undecided.[40]

IF SHE SAID, HOWEVER,'I HAVE NO DESIRE' etc. Why should they not give her maintenance while she lives there?[41] — This supports [a statement] of R. Huna who said, 'The blessing of a house [is proportionate] to its size'.[42] Why then can they not give her according to the blessing of the house?[43] — That is so.[44] Said R. Huna: The sayings[45] of the Sages [are a source of] blessing, wealth and healing. [As to] 'blessing',[we have] the statement just mentioned. 'Wealth'? — Because we learned: If one sold fruits to another[46] [and the buyer] pulled[47] them, though they have not yet been measured,[48] ownership is acquired. If, however, they have been measured,[49] but [the buyer] has not pulled them, ownership is not acquired. But if [the buyer] is prudent he rents the place where they are kept.[50] 'Healing'? — For we learned: A man should not chew wheat and put it on his wound during the Passover because it ferments.[51]

Our Rabbis taught: When Rabbi[52] was about to depart [from this life] he said, 'I require [the presence] of my sons'. When his sons entered into his presence he instructed them: 'Take care that you shew due respect to your mother. The light[53] shall continue to burn in its usual place, the table[53] shall be laid in its usual place [and my] bed shall be spread in its usual place.[54] Joseph of Haifa and Simeon of Efrath who attended on me in my lifetime shall attend on me when I am dead'.

'Take care that you shew due respect to your mother'. Is [not this instruction] Pentateuchal, since it is written, Honour thy father and thy mother?[55] — She was their stepmother.[56] [Is not the commandment to honour] a stepmother[56] also Pentateuchal, for it was taught: Honour thy father and thy mother,'[55] 'thy father'[57] includes[58] 'thy stepmother','and thy mother'[59] includes[60] 'thy Stepfather',[61] and the superfluous waw[62] includes 'thy elder brother'? — This exposition[63] [was meant to apply] during [one's own parents'] lifetime but not after [their] death.

'The light shall continue to burn in its usual place, the table shall be laid in its usual place [and my] bed shall be spread in its usual place'.[64] What is the reason? — He used to come home again at twilight every Sabbath Eve. On a certain Sabbath Eve a neighbour came to the door speaking aloud, when his handmaid whispered, 'Be quiet for Rabbi is sitting there'. As soon as he heard this he came no more,in order that no reflection might be cast[65] on the earlier saints.[66]

'Joseph of Haifa and Simeon of Efrath who attended on me in my lifetime shall attend on me when I am dead'. He was understood to mean, 'In this world'.[67] When it was seen however, that their biers preceded his[68] [all] said that the conclusion must be that he was referring to the other[69] world, and that the reason why he mentioned it[70] was that it might not be suspected that they were guilty of some offence[71] and that it was only the merit of Rabbi that protected[72] them until that moment .[73]

'I require'. he said to them, '[the presence] of the Sages of Israel', and the Sages of Israel entered into his presence. 'Do not lament for me',[74] he said to them, 'in the smaller towns,

---

(1) Emphasis on MOTHER.

(2) No money rental having been arranged.

(3) 'That I have another mill in which to grind my corn'.

(4) But will pay no rent.

(5) As 10 this case a cash payment must be made though originally only maintenance gas undertaken so in the case of the miller a cash rental may be demanded though the original arrangement was for payment in service.

(6) Spoken of in our Mishnah.
(7) She cannot he expected to consume a double allowance of food. Hence there is no other alternative but that of substituting one monetary payment for one allowance of food.
(8) The case of the miller.
(9) The one you bought.
(10) The one I hired from you.
(11) A suggestion which may well be adopted by the owner without any loss to himself.
(12) That the lessee cannot be compelled to pay a cash rental.
(13) It would be an act of injustice to compel him to pay rent while his machinery stood idle. It is more equitable that he should be enabled to continue the original agreement whereby he is both kept employed and pays his rent.
(14) The Sodomites were notorious for refusing to do any favours even when they cost them nothing. 'A dog-in-the-manger attitude' (cf. B.B. Sonc. ed. p. 62, n. 3).
(15) בבית בעלה, so MS.M. Wanting incur. edd.
(16) For refusing to live with the heirs.
(17) The heirs, children from another wife.
(18) In consequence of which she fears quarrels or temptation.
(19) Cf. Tosef. Keth. XI.
(20) Lit., 'her husband'.
(21) Mishnah supra 52b.
(22) In explaining the Mishnah cited.
(23) Supra 540 q.v. for notes.
(24) Which formed part of her deceased husband's estate.
(25) Lit., 'they have not done anything'.
(26) Lit., 'for R. Assi stated in the name of R. Johanan'.
(27) Before the court had dealt with the case.
(28) Of their deceased father, which is legally due to the daughters (cf. infra 108b).
(29) Lit., 'what they sold is sold', Yeb. 67b, Sotah 21b, B.B. 1400.
(30) The sale of a small estate.
(31) Lit., 'to her'.
(32) A father is under no legal obligation to maintain his daughters.
(33) A widow's dwelling.
(34) Lit., 'to her'.
(35) As is evident from the Mishnah supra 52b.
(36) Which formed part of her deceased husband's estate.
(37) Her claim upon the dwelling terminates as soon as it is no longer fit for habitation.
(38) Lit., 'they do not listen to her'.
(39) The dilapidated dwelling (v. Rashi). Aliter; May she repair it? (V. Tosaf. s.v. ג ה a.l.) Is she entitled, it is asked, to continue to live In that dwelling so long as it can be kept up by repairs or must she quit it as soon as dwelling in it becomes impossible without repairs.
(40) Teku, v. Glos.
(41) In her father's house.
(42) Tosef. Keth. XII, B.B. 144b. The more the members of a household the cheaper the cost of living.
(43) Sc. an allowance equal to the cheaper cost of her maintenance at the house of the heirs.
(44) Lit., 'thus also'; she is in fact entitled to such an allowance.
(45) Lit., 'tongue', 'language'.
(46) The price having been agreed upon.
(47) 'Pulling' (meshikah, v. Glos.).
(48) Measuring is not an essential factor of a sale, since it merely determines the quantity sold.
(49) V. B.B. 84b as to how and where.
(50) Mishnah B.B. 84b. If the fruit is kept in the seller's domain the buyer who for some reason is unable to transport his purchase forthwith and fears that the seller might retract and cause him financial loss, may thus protect himself by renting the spot on which the fruit is kept and thereby acquire possession of the fruit since a man's domain acquires possession for him. A buyer thus gets wealth by taking the hint of the Sages.

(51) Pesah. 39b. From this saying one learns of a remedy for a wound.

(52) R. Judah I (135-220 C.E.) the Patriarch, compiler of the Mishnah.

(53) Which he used during his lifetime.

(54) 'Bed shall. . . place' is wanting in MS.M.

(55) Ex. XX, 12.

(56) Lit., 'a father's wife'.

(57) את אביך emphasis on את the sign of the defined accusative, which is not absolutely essential in the context.

(58) Lit., 'this'. Cf., however, Beth Joseph, Y.D. 240 ad fin. where the reading is לרבות 'to include'.

(59) ואת אמך cf. supra n. 7 mutatis mutandis.

(60) V. supra note 8.

(61) Lit. 'thy mother's husband'.

(62) In ואת אמך.

(63) Lit., 'these words', respect for step.parents.

(64) V. supra note 4.

(65) Lit., 'to bring out'.

(66) צדיקים 'righteous and pious men' who were denied the privilege of revisiting their earthly homes.

(67) I.e., they should attend to his burial (Rashi) or to the light. table and bed at his house, of which he spoke earlier.

(68) They died about the same time as Rabbi and were buried first.

(69) Lit., 'that'.

(70) Lit., 'that he said thus', that they should attend on him.

(71) Lit., 'that they may not say: They had something'.

(72) Lit., 'benefitted'.

(73) Until the end of his days.

(74) Or 'hold funeral orations'.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 103b

and reassemble[1] the college after thirty days.[2] My son Simeon is wise[3] my son Gamaliel Nasi[4] and Hanina b. Hama shall preside [at the college].

'Do not lament for me in the smaller towns'. He was understood to give this instruction In order [to cause less] trouble.[5] As it was observed, however, that when lamentations were held in the large towns everybody[6] came[7] they arrived at the conclusion that his instruction was due to [a desire to enhance] the honour [of the people].[8]

'Reassemble the college after thirty days', because [he thought] 'I am not more important than our teacher Moses concerning whom it is Written in Scripture. And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days'.[9]

For thirty days they mourned both day and night; subsequently[10] they mourned in the day-time and studied at night or mourned at night and studied during the day, until a period of twelve months of mourning[11] [had passed].

On the day that Rabbi died a bath kol[12] went forth and announced: Whosoever has been present at the death of Rabbi is destined to enjoy the life of the world to come. A certain fuller,[13] who used to come to him[14] every day, failed to call on that day; and, as soon as he heard this, went up upon a roof, fell down to the ground and died. A bath kol[12] came forth and announced: That fuller also is destined to enjoy the life of the world to come. 'My son Simeon is wise. What did he[14] mean?[15] — It is this that he meant: Although my son Simeon is wise, my son Gamaliel shall be the Nasi.[16] Said Levi, 'Was It necessary to state this?'[17] — It was necessary'. replied R. Simeon b. Rabbi, 'for yourself and for your lameness'.[18] What was his[19] difficulty?[20] Does not Scripture state, But the kingdom gave he to Jehoram, because he was the firstborn?[21] — The other[22] was properly representing[23] his ancestors[24] but R. Gamaliel was not properly representing[23] his ancestors.[25] Then why did Rabbi act in the manner he did?[26] — Granted that he[27] was not representing his ancestors In wisdom he was worthily representing them in his fear of sin.[28]

'Hanina b. Hama shall preside at the college'. R. Hanina, however, did not accept [the office] because R. Afes was by two and a half years older than he; and so R. Afes presided. R. Hanina sat [at his studies] outside [the lecture room],[29] and Levi came and joined him. When R. Afes went to his eternal rest[30] and R. Hanina took up the presidency Levi had no one to join him[31] and came in consequence to Babylon.

This description coincides with the following:[32] When Rab was told that a great man who was lame made his appearance at Nehardea[33] and held a discourse [in the course of which he] permitted [the wearing of] a wreath,[34] he said,'It is evident[35] that R. Afes has gone to his eternal rest, and R. Hanina has taken over the presidency; and that Levi having had no one to join him, has come [down here].' But might not one have suggested that R. Hanina came to his eternal rest, that R. Afes continued In the presidency as before[36] and that Levi who had no one to join him came [therefore, to Babylon]? If you wish I might reply: Levi would have submitted to the authority of R. Afes. And if you prefer I might reply: Since [Rabbi] once said, 'Hanina b. Hama shall preside at the college', there could be no possibility of his not becoming head;[37] for about the righteous it is written in Scripture. Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee.[38]

Was there not R. Hiyya?[39] — He had already gone to his eternal rest.[40] But did not R. Hiyya, state, 'I saw Rabbi's sepulchre[41] and shed tears upon it'? — Reverse [the names]. But did not R. Hiyya state, 'On the day on which Rabbi died holiness ceased'? — Reverse [the names]. But has it not been taught: When Rabbi fell in R. Hiyya entered into his presence and found him weeping. 'Master', he said to him, 'Why are you weeping? Was it not taught: '[If a man] dies smiling it is a good omen for him, if weeping it is a bad omen for him; his face upwards it is a good omen, his face downwards it is a bad omen; his face towards the public it is a good omen, towards the wall it is a bad omen; if his face is greenish it is a bad omen, if bright and ruddy it.is a good omen; dying on Sabbath Eve[42] is a good omen, on the termination of the Sabbath[43] is a bad omen; dying on the Eve of the Day of Atonement is a bad omen, on the termination of the Day of Atonement[44] is a good omen; dying of diarrhoea is a good omen because most righteous men die of diarrhoea?' And the other replied, 'I weep on [account of my impending separation from] the Torah and the commandments'?[45] — If you wish I might reply: Reverse [the names]; and if you prefer I might reply: In fact there Is no need to reverse [the names; but as] R. Hiyya was engaged in the performance of pious deeds Rabbi thought 'I will not disturb him'.[46] This[47] is in line with the following:[48] When R. Hanina and R. Hiyya were engaged in a dispute R. Hanina said to R. Hiyya, 'Do you [venture to] dispute with me? Were the Torah, God forbid, to be forgotten in Israel, I would restore it by means of my dialectical arguments'. — 'I', replied R. Hiyya, 'make provision that the Torah shall not be forgotten in Israel. For I bring flax seed, sow it, and weave nets [from the plant]. [With these] I hunt stags with whose flesh I feed orphans and from whose skins I prepare scrolls, and then proceed to a town where there are no teachers of young children, and write out the five Books of the Pentateuch for five children [respectively] and teach another six children respectively the six orders of the Mishnah, and then tell each one: Teach your section to your colleagues"'. It was this that Rabbi [had in mind when he] exclaimed, 'How great are the deeds of Hiyya?' Said R. Simeon b. Rabbi to him: '[Greater] even than yours?' — 'Yes', he replied. 'Even', asked R. Ishmael the son of R. Jose, 'than my father's?' — 'God forbid', the other replied. 'Let no such thing be [mentioned] in Israel!'[49]

'I desire', he[50] announced, 'the presence of my younger son R. Simeon entered into his presence and he entrusted him with the orders[51] of wisdom. ‘I desire the presence of my elder son’, he announced. When R. Gamaliel entered he entrusted him with the traditions and regulations[51] of the Patriarchate. ‘My son’, he said to him, ‘conduct your patriarchate with men of high standing,[52] and cast bile among the students’.[53]

But , surely, this[54] is not proper[55] for is it not written in Scripture, But he honoureth them that fear the Lord,[56] and the Master said that this [text might be applied to] Jehoshaphat, King of Judah. who, on seeing a scholar, used to rise from his throne, embrace him and kiss him, and call him ‘My master, my master; my teacher, my teacher’? — This is no difficulty: The latter attitude[57] [is to be adopted] in private; the former[57] in public.[58]

It was taught: Rabbi was lying [on his sickbed] at Sepphoris[59] but a [burial] place was reserved for him at Beth She'arim.[60] Was it not, however, taught: Justice, justice shalt thou follow.[61] follow Rabbi to Beth She'arim? — Rabbi was [indeed] living at Beth She'arim[62] but when he fell ill[63] he was brought to Sepphoris

---

(1) Lit., ‘and cause to sit.

(2) Of lamentation and mourning. No longer period for mourning shall be allowed.

(3) חכם. this is explained in the Gemara infra. V. also infra n. 24 and p. 659. n. 9.

(4) נשיא ‘prince’. ‘president’, ‘patriarch’. On some of the dignities and honours attached to the offices of Nasi, Hakam, and Ab-beth-din respectively v. Hor. 13b.

(5) By restricting the lamentations to the larger towns the inhabitants of the smaller ones as well as the villagers would be spared the time and trouble involved in arranging, or attending, the public funeral services.

(6) Lit., ‘all the world’.

(7) Both from the smaller towns and the villages.

(8) Cf., ‘he wished that Israel might be honoured in greater measure through him’ (Sanh. 470).

(9) Deut. XXXIV, 8.

(10) Lit., ‘from now onwards’.

(11) Lit., ‘that they mourned twelve months of the year’.

(12) V. Glos.

(13) [Probably this was the fuller mentioned in Ned. 410 (Jacob Emden).]

(14) Rabbi.

(15) One would naturally expect the wise son rather than the other to succeed his father as Nasi. Why then did Rabbi mention the wisdom of the one as apparently a reason for the appointment of the other?

(16) Cf. supra p. 658 nn. 13-14. [Halevy Doroth, II, p. 20, n. I, explains that what Rabbi primarily meant was that Simeon shall be the Hakam and Gamaliel the Nasi. The precedence, however, given in his instructions to Simeon, although his office was second to that of the Nasi, indicated that Rabbi desired to have a secondary meaning attached to his words. Hence the question, ‘what did he mean?’].

(17) That Gamaliel, who was the elder son and entitled to the succession, shall be the Nasi.

(18) Levi was lame (v. Suk. 530). Aliter (Jast.): ‘Do we need thee and thy limping (lame remark)?’

(19) R. Simeon b. Rabbi's.

(20) In understanding Levi's objection.

(21) II Chron. XXI, 3. (Cf. p. 659, n. 10). What need then was there, as Levi objected, for Rabbi's specific instruction?

(22) Lit., ‘that’, Jehoram.

(23) Lit., ‘fulfilling the place of’.

(24) Since there was no other son possessing a superior claim.

(25) His younger brother having been wiser. Hence the necessity for Rabbi's specific instructions. Aliter; What was his (sc. Levi's) difficulty? (Is it) that Scripture stated, But the kingdom . . . the firstborn, that (firstborn, it may be replied.) was properly representing his ancestors but R. Gamaliel etc. (cf. S. Strashun).

(26) Lit. , ‘thus’.

(27) Gamaliel.

(28) Moral conception and conduct (cf. Abboth III, II; Sonc. ed. III, 9’ p. 32).

(29) Since he could not recognise R. Afes as his superior.
(30) Lit., ‘his soul rested’.
(31) Lit., ‘to sit at his side’.
(32) Lit., ‘and that is’.
(33) V. supra p. 222, n. 8.
(34) On the Sabbath, when the carrying of objects from one domain into another is forbidden (cf. Shab. 59b).
(35) Lit., ‘infer from this’.
(36) Lit., ‘as he sat he sits’.
(37) Lit., ‘that he should not reign’. Consequently he must have survived R. Afes.
(38) lob XXII, 28.
(39) Who was superior to both R. Hanina and R. Afes. Why was he overlooked by Rabbi?
(40) When Rabbi was making his testamentary appointments.
(41) ‘His coffin’ (Rashi).
(42) Being the approach of the day of rest.
(43) Lit., ‘at the going out of the Sabbath’.
(44) One's sins having been forgiven during the day.
(45) All of which proves that R. Hiyya was still alive when Rabbi was on his deathbed.
(46) Lit., ‘cause him to be idle’ or ‘to relax’.
(47) The testimony to R. Hiyya's piety and public benefactions.
(48) Lit., ‘and that is (why)’.
(49) Cf. B.M. 85b where the parallel passage contains some variations including the substitution of ‘R. Ishmael the son of R. Jose’ for ‘R. Simeon b. Rabbi’.
(50) Rabbi. The story of the last moments of his life, interrupted by the Preceding discussions, explanations and incidents, is here resumed.
(51) Plur. const. of סדר ‘order’, ‘rules and regulations’.
(52) ברמים (sing. רם ‘high’, ‘elevated’). Aruch reads, בדמים) (דמים ‘equivalent’, ‘compensation’, ‘value’) ‘as something precious’.
(53) Sc. ‘introduce a firm discipline in the college’.
(54) Keeping scholars under a discipline which many might regard as degrading.
(55) Lit., ‘I am not’.
(56) Ps. XV, 4.
(57) Lit., ‘that’.
(58) Scholars, like the general public, may be expected to respect the common rules and regulations and to pay homage to the Patriarch.
(59) V. supra p. 410, n. 6.
(60) Identified with (a) the modern Tur'an. a village situated ten kilometres E.N.E. of Sepphoris (I. S. Horowitz, Palestine s.v.); (b) Besara, mentioned in Josephus, the modern Dscheda W. of the Valley of Jezreel (Klein. S. EJ. 4, 427).
(61) Deut. XVI, 20.
(62) ‘Rabbi . . . She'arim’ is wanting in עין יעקב edd.
(63) V. B.M. 85a.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 104a

because it was situated on higher ground[1] and its air was salubrious.

On the day when Rabbi died the Rabbis decreed a public fast and offered prayers for heavenly mercy. They. furthermore, announced that whoever said that Rabbi was dead would be stabbed with a sword.

Rabbi's handmaid[2] ascended the roof and prayed: ‘The immortals[3] desire Rabbi [to join them] and the mortals[4] desire Rabbi [to remain with them]; may it be the will [of God] that the mortals may overpower the immortals'. When, however, she saw how often he resorted to the privy,[5] painfully taking off his tefillin[6] and putting them on again, she prayed: 'May it be the will [of the Almighty] that the immortals may overpower the mortals'. As the Rabbis incessantly continued[7] their prayers for [heavenly] mercy she took up a jar and threw it down from the roof to the ground. [For a moment] they ceased praying[8] and the soul of Rabbi departed to its eternal rest.[9] 'Go', said the Rabbis to Bar Kappara, 'and investigate'.[10] He went and, finding that [Rabbi] was dead, he tore his cloak and turned the tear backwards. [On returning to the Rabbis] he began: 'The angels[11] and the mortals[12] have taken hold of the holy ark.[13] The angels overpowered the mortals and the holy ark has been captured'. 'Has he', they asked him, 'gone to his eternal rest?' — 'You', he replied, 'said it; I did not say it'.

Rabbi, at the time of his passing, raised his ten fingers towards heaven[14] and said: 'Sovereign of the Universe, it is revealed and known to you that I have laboured in the study of the Torah with my ten fingers and that I did not enjoy [any worldly] benefits even with my little finger. May it be Thy will that there be peace In my [Jast] resting place'. A bath kol[15] echoed, announcing, He shall enter into peace; they shall rest on their beds.[16]

[Does not] the context require [the singular pronoun:] 'On thy bed'?[17] This provides support for R. Hiyya b. Gamda. For he stated in the name of R. Jose b. Saul: When a righteous man departs from this world the ministering angels say to the Holy One, blessed be He, 'Sovereign of the Universe, the righteous man So-and-so is coming', and he answers them, 'Let the righteous men come [from their resting places], go forth to meet him, and say to him that he shall enter into peace [and then] they[18] shall rest on their beds'.

R. Eleazar stated: When a righteous man departs from the world he is welcomed by[19] three companies of ministering angels. One exclaims, 'Come[20] into peace'; the other[21] exclaims, He who walketh in his uprightness,[22] while the third[23] exclaims, 'He shall enter into peace; they shall rest on their beds'.[22] When a wicked man perishes from the world he is met[24] by three groups of angels of destruction. One announces, 'There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked';[25] the other[23] tells him, 'He[26] shall lie down in sorrow',[27] while the third[23] tells him, 'Go down and be thou laid with the uncircumcised'.[28]

MISHNAH. SO LONG AS SHE LIVES IN HER FATHER'S HOUSE [A WIDOW][29] MAY RECOVER HER KETHUBAH AT ANY TIME.[30] AS LONG, HOWEVER, AS SHE LIVES IN HER HUSBAND'S HOUSE SHE MAY RECOVER HER KETHUBAH ONLY WITHIN[31] TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, BECAUSE IN THE COURSE OF TWENTY-FIVE YEARS SHE HAS SUFFICIENT OPPORTUNITIES[32] OF RENDERING[33] FAVOURS[34] CORRESPONDING [IN VALUE TO THE AMOUNT OF] HER KETHUBAH; SO R. MEIR WHO LAID DOWN THE RULING IN THE NAME OF R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL. THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: SO LONG AS SHE LIVES IN HER HUSBAND'S HO USE [A WIDOW][35] MAY RECOVER HER KETHUBAH AT ANY TIME,[36] BUT AS LONG AS SHE LIVES IN HER FATHER'S HOUSE SHE MAY RECOVER HER KETHUBAH ONLY WITHIN[31] TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.[37] IF [THE WIDOW] DIED, HER HEIRS MUST MENTION[38] HER KETHUBAH WITHIN[31] TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.[39] GEMARA. Said Abaye to R. Joseph. [Is it logical[40] that] the poorest woman in Israel [should be allowed to recover her kethubah] ONLY WITHIN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS and Martha the daughter of Boethus[41] also ONLY WITHIN TWENTY-FIVE As?[42] — The other replied: In accordance with the camel is the burden.[43]

The question was raised: Must she,[44] according to R. Meir, lose in proportion?[45] -This must stand undecided.[46]

THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: SO LONG. Said Abaye to R.Joseph: [Is it reasonable that if] she comes before sunset she may recover her kethubah and that [if she came] after sunset she may not recover it? [Is it likely that] she has surrendered it in that short while? — 'Yes', the other replied. 'all the standards of the Sages are such. In [a bath of] forty se'ah[47] [for instance] one may perform ritual immersion; In [a bath of] forty se'ah minus one kortob[47] one may not perform ritual immersion

Rab Judah reported in the name of Rab: R. Ishmael son of R. Jose testified in the presence of Rabbi to a statement he made[48] in the name of his father that [the ruling in our Mishnah] was taught only [in respect of a woman] who produces[49] no deed of the kethubah but if she produces[49] the deed of the kethubah she may recover [the amount of] her kethubah at any time.[50] R. Eleazar, however, ruled: Even if she produces[49] the deed of the kethubah she may recover the amount within twenty-five years Only.

R. Shesheth raised an objection: 'A creditor may recover his debt [at any time]. even if there was no mention of it.'[51] Now, how is this to be understood? If [it refers to a creditor] who holds no bond, whereby [it might be asked] could he recover his debt? Consequently [it must refer to one] who does hold a bond [from which it follows, does It not, that] only a creditor [may recover his due]. because he is not likely to have surrendered his claim, but that a widow[52] [is deemed to have] surrendered?[53] — He[54] raised the objection and he also removed it: This[55] may, in fact, refer to[56] one who holds no bond,[57] but[58] here we are dealing with a case[59] where the debtor[60] admits [his liability].[61] But, Surely. R. Elai had stated: They[62] taught. 'A divorced woman has the very same rights as a creditor'.[63] Now, how are We to understand [this ruling]? If [it refers to a divorcee] who holds no kethubah, whereby [it might be objected] could she recover her due? Consequently [it must refer to one] who does hold a kethubah, [from which it follows, does it not, that] only a divorcee [may recover her kethubah] because she is not likely to have surrendered it, but that a widow [is deemed to have] surrendered?[64] — Here also [it is a case] where the defendant[60] admits [the claim].[65]

R. Nahman b. Isaac stated: R. Judah b. Kaza learnt in the Baraitha of the school of Bar Kaza, If she[66] claimed her kethubah

---

(1) Cf. Meg. 60: 'Why was it called Sepphoris (צפורי)? Because it was perched on the top of a hill like a bird' (צפור 'bird').

(2) A famous character, known for her sagacity and learning.

(3) Lit., 'those above', 'the angels'.

(4) Lit., 'those below', 'lower regions'.

(5) He was suffering from acute and painful diarrhoea (cf. B.M. 85a).

(6) V. Glos. These must not be worn when the body is not in a state of perfect cleanliness.

(7) Lit., 'they were not silent'.

(8) Lit., 'they remained silent'.

(9) Lit., 'rested'.

(10) Rabbi's condition.

(11) אראלים lit., 'messengers' (Jast.); cf. B.H. מלאך. Aliter; 'God's lions' (Levy).

(12) מצוקים (rt. יצק 'to cast'). Aliter; 'The just' (Rashi).

(13) Metaph. Rabbi was known as 'our holy teacher'.

(14) Lit., 'in an upward direction'.

(15) V. Glos.

(16) Isa. LVII, 2.

(17) In harmony with the first part of the verse. [Strashun amends 'on his bed'].

(18) The righteous who went out to welcome him.

(19) Lit., 'go out to meet him'.

(20) Var. 'He shall enter' (עין יעקב).

(21) Lit.,

(22) Isa. LVII, 2.

(23) Lit., ‘and one’.
(24) Lit., ‘go out to meet him’.
(25) Isa. XLVIII, 22.
(26) M.T. reads ‘Ye’תשכבון. [This is also the reading of MS.M.].
(27) lsa. L, 11.
(28) Ezek. XXXII, 19.
(29) Who is maintained by her deceased husband's heirs.
(30) Lit.,’for ever’.
(31) Lit., ‘until’.
(32) Lit,, ‘there is (the opportunity)’.
(33) At the expense of the heirs who maintain her.
(34) To neighbours and friends, by giving them small gifts.
(35) V. supra note 8.
(36) Lit., ‘for ever’.
(37) If a longer period has been allowed to pass she is presumed to have surrendered her claim. Such surrender cannot be assumed In the case of a widow who lives in her late husband's house, since the respect shewn to her by the heirs with whom she lives may well account for her bashfulness to advance a claim which might disturb the cordial relations between them.
(38) Sc. claim.
(39) Of her husband's death. They lose their claim if a longer period has been allowed to lapse.
(40) According to R. Meir's ruling in our Mishnah.
(41) One of the rich women of Jerusalem in the time of the Titus and Vespasian siege (cf. Git. 56a) whose kethubah amounted to a very high figure.
(42) A kethubah like that of the latter, surely. could not be spent in small gifts in the same period as one for the minimum amount of a kethubah.
(43) Proverb. The richer the woman the more she may be expected to spend.
(44) A widow who claimed her kethubah within twenty-five years.
(45) Sc. one twenty-fifth of her kethubah for each year that she has allowed to pass. Lit.,’divide into three’.
(46) Teku v. Glos.
(47) V. Glos.
(48) Lit., ‘which he said’.
(49) Lit., ‘goes out from under her hands’.
(50) It is held that if she had surrendered her kethubah she would have destroyed the deed or given it up to the heirs.
(51) For twenty-five years.
(52) Who enjoyed the protection of the heirs for all those years and who, furthermore, is not actually ‘out of pocket’ when her kethubah is surrendered.
(53) An objection against R. Eleazar.
(54) R. Shesheth.
(55) The Baraitha just cited.
(56) Lit., ‘always’.
(57) The inference being: Only a creditor who holds no bond is not presumed to have surrendered his claim but that a widow who holds no kethubah is presumed to have surrendered her claim.
(58) In reply to the objection: How could the claim be proved in the absence of a bond?
(59) Lit., ‘10 what?’
(60) Lit., ‘he who is liable.
(61) Cf. supra n. 7.
(62) The authors of the Baraitha.
(63) She may recover her kethubah even after twenty: five years.
(64) V. supra notes 1 and 2.
(65) Sc. that her kethubah had not yet been paid.
(66) A widow (cf. supra p. 665, n. 8).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 104b

she is again entitled to the original period.[1] and if she produced[2] the deed of the kethubah she may recover [the amount of] her kethubah at any time.[3]

R. Nahman b. R. Hisda sent [the following message] to R. Nahman b. Jacob: Will our Master instruct us as to whether the dispute[4] [refers to] one who produced a deed of the kethubah or to one who produced no deed of the kethubah,' and with whose ruling does the halachah agree? — The other replied: The dispute refers to one who produced no deed of the kethubah, but [a woman] who produced a deed of the kethubah may recover her kethubah at any time;[5] and the halachah is in agreement with the ruling of the Sages.

When R. Dimi came[6] he reported R. Simeon b. Pazzi who laid down in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi who had it from Bar Kappara: This[7] was taught only in respect of the maneh[8] and the two hundred zuz.[8] To any additional jointure, however, the woman is always entitled.[9] R. Abbahu in the name of R. Johanan, however, ruled: She is not entitled even to the additional jointure; for R. Aibu has laid down in the name of R. Jannai: The additional provisions[10] of a kethubah are subject to the same rules[11] as the kethubah itself.[12] So it was also said:[13] R. Abba laid down in the name of R. Huna who had it from Rab: This was taught only in respect of the maneh and the two hundred zuz. To any additional jointure, however, she is always entitled.[14] Said R. Abba to R. Huna: Did Rab really say this?[15] — 'Do you wish', the other replied, to silence me[16] or to stand me a drink?'[17] — 'I',the other replied. wish to silence you!'

The mother-in-law of R. Hiyya Arika[18] was the wife of his brother,[19] and [when she became] a widow lived in her father's bouse. [R. Hiyya] maintained her for twenty.five years at her paternal home [but when] at the end [of the period] she said to him. 'Supply me with my maintenance' he told her, 'You have no [longer any claim to] maintenance'. 'pay me [then', she said'my] kethubah'. 'You have no claim,' he replied- 'either to maintenance or to the kethubah' ,[20] She summoned him to law before Rabbah b. Shila. 'Tell me', [the judge] said to him,[21] 'what exactly were the circumstances. 'I maintained her', the other[21] replied. 'for twenty-five years at her paternal home and, by the life of the Master!, I carried [the stuff] to her on my shoulder'. 'What is the reason', [the judge] said to him, 'that the Rabbis[22] ruled, so LONG AS SHE LIVES IN HER HUSBAND'S HOUSE [A WIDOW] MAY RECOVER HER KETHUBAH AT ANY TIME? Because we assume that she did not claim it in order [to save herself from] shame.[23] Similarly here also[24] [it may well be assumed] that she did not [previously] submit her claim in order [to save herself from] shame.[23] Go, and supply her [maintenance]'. [As R. Hiyya] disregarded [the ruling. the judge] wrote out for her an adrakta[25] on his property. Thereupon he came to Raba and said to him, 'See, Master, how he treated my case',[26] 'He has given you the proper ruling', the other replied. 'If that is the case',[the widow] said to him,[27] 'let him[28] proceed to refund me the produce[29] [he has consumed] since that day[30] to date'. 'Shew me' he[27] said to her, 'your adrakta'.[31] As he observed that it did not contain the clause,[32] 'And we have ascertained that this estate belonged to the deceased', he said to her, 'The adrakta is not properly drawn up'.[33] 'Let the adrakta be dropped'. she said; 'and let me receive [the refund for the produce] from the day on which the period of the public announcement terminated[34] to date'. 'This',[35] he replied. applies only to a case[36] where no error has crept[37] into the adrakta, but where an error occurs[37] in the adrakta the document possesses no validity'.[38] 'But did not the Master himself lay down', she exclaimed, '[that the omission[39] of the clause] pledging property [is to be regarded as the] scribe's error?'[40] — 'In this case', Raba told her, '[the omission] cannot be said to be a scribe's error, for even Rabbah b. Shila originally[41] overlooked the point'.[42] He thought: Since both belonged to him[43] what matters it [whether the widow distrains] on the one or the other.[44] But this is not [the proper view]. For sometimes [the widow] might go and improve those [lands][45] while those belonging to her husband[46] would be allowed[47] to deteriorate and [the heir might eventually] tell her, 'Take yours[48] and return to me mine',[49] and a stigma[50] would thus fall[51] upon the court.[52]

CHAPTER XIII

MISHNAH. TWO JUDGES OF CIVIL LAW[53] WERE [ADMINISTERING JUSTICE] IN JERUSALEM, ADMON AND HANAN B. ABISHALOM. HANAN LAID DOWN TWO RULINGS[54] AND ADMON LAID DOWN SEVEN: —[55]

IF A MAN WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA AND HIS WIFE CLAIMED MAINTENANCE, HANAN RULED:

---

(1) Of twenty-five years. Lit. , 'behold she is as at first'.

(2) Lit. , 'goes out from under her hands'.

(3) Cf. supra note 12.

(4) Between R. MEIR and THE SAGES.

(5) Cf. supra p. 667. n. 12.

(6) From Palestine to Babylon.

(7) That after a period of twenty-five years a widow is presumed to have surrendered her kethubah.

(8) V. Glos., sc. the statutory kethubah which is one maneh in the case of marriage with a widow and two hundred zuz in that with a virgin.

(9) Since this may be regarded as a gift (and not as the legal kethubah) from the husband to his wife.

(10) Lit., 'conditions', of which the additional jointure is one.

(11) Lit., 'like'.

(12) One who loses the statutory kethubah must also forfeit the additional jointure.

(13) By Amoraim.

(14) V. supra notes 4 to 6.

(15) [MS.M. inserts, He (R. Huna) said he was silenced; cf. Ned. Sonc. ed. p. 242. notes.]

(16) I.e., was his question intended to imply incredulity?

(17) I.e., he wished in all earnestness to ascertain whether Rab had actually made that statement so that in return for the valuable information he might treat him to a cup of wine. אישתיקן and אשקיין a play upon the similarity of the letters.

(18) The tall.

(19) Who died childless and whose estate was inherited by R. Hiyya.

(20) In accordance with the ruling of the Sages in our Mishnah.

(21) R. Hiyya.

(22) Sc. THE SAGES.

(23) Cf. supra p. 665. n. 16, second clause.

(24) Where so much respect was shewn to her by R. Hiyya that he carried her foodstuffs to her on his shoulder.

(25) אדרכתא (rt. דרך 'to tread'). an authorization following that of another legal document called tirpa (cf. B.B. , Sonc. ed., p 738. n. 1) which a court issues to a claimant after he had traced the defendant's property. to seize it (to 'tread' on) for the purpose of having it offered for public sale and his recovering the proceeds or the land itself at the Price valued.

(26) Lit., 'judged me'.

(27) Raba.

(28) R. Hiyya.

(29) Of the land that was valued at a sum corresponding to that of her kethubah.

(30) On which she received the adrakta (according to the opinion of Rabbah). when it was signed (according to Abaye). or when the period of the announcement of the public sale terminated (according to Raba). From such date the land passes into the possession of the claimant and its produce also from that day onwards belongs to him (cf. B.M. 36b).

(31) V. supra p. 669. n. 7.

(32) Lit., 'that it was not written in it'.

(33) The adrakta referred to all R. Hiyya's landed property. while legally it should have been restricted to those which he inherited from his deceased brother. On his own lands the widow could have no claim whatsoever.

(34) In agree. melt with the view of Raba (cf. supra p. 669. n. 12). After the claimant discovers a field that belonged to the defendant he reports to the court who value it, and arrange for a period of thirty days for the public announcement. at the end of which the claimant comes into possession (v. B.M. 35b).
(35) That the land passes into the possession of the claimant on one of the dates mentioned (supra p. 669. n. 12).
(36) Lit., 'these words'.
(37) Lit., 'is written'.
(38) Lit., we have not in it'; the land does not pass into the ownership of the claimant until he takes actual possession of it.
(39) From a deed.
(40) And is deemed to have been entered though the scribe had omitted it (B.M. 140. B.B. 169b). Why then should an error in the adrakta cause its invalidity?
(41) [Rightly omitted in MS.M.]
(42) Lit., 'in that'. In that he had an adrakta made out against R. Hiyya's own property.
(43) R. Hiyya.
(44) R. Hiyya's brother's or his own. Hence he drew up the adrakta on all R. Hiyya's lands.
(45) Which did not belong to her husband but to his heir and which the court handed over to her in return for her claim.
(46) And were legally pledged for her kethubah.
(47) By the heir who is well aware that he can at any time re-claim his own land and transfer the property of the deceased to his widow,
(48) Cf. supra p. 670, n. 16.
(49) Cf. supra p. 670. n. 15.
(50) Lit., 'murmur', 'reflection'.
(51) Lit., 'and come to bring out'.
(52) Who would be accused of carelessness or indifference in the provision they made for the widow.
(53) גזירות (plural of גזירה, 'decree', 'decision'). Var., גזילות (plural of גזילה 'robbery') v. infra. Cf. B.K. 58b, Sonc. ed. p. 340, n. 1.
(54) From which the Sages differed.
(55) V. supra n. 2. The rulings are enumerated in this Mishnah and in those following.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 105a

SHE MUST TAKE AN OATH[1] AT THE END[2] BUT NOT AT THE BEGINNING.[3] THE SONS OF THE HIGH PRIESTS,[4] HOWEVER, DIFFERED FROM HIM AND RULED THAT SHE MUST TAKE AN OATH BOTH AT THE BEGINNING[3] AND AT THE END.[2] R. DOSA B. HARKINAS AGREED WITH THEIR RULING. R. JOHANAN B. ZAKKAI SAID: HANAN HAS SPOKEN WELL; SHE NEED TAKE AN OATH ONLY AT THE END.[2]

GEMARA. I Would point out an Inconsistency: 'Three judges in cases of robbery[5] were [administering justice] in Jerusalem. Admon b. Gadai,[6] Hanan the Egyptian and Hanan b. Abishalom'. Is there not an inconsistency between 'three'[7] and 'TWO', and an inconsistency between 'CIVIL'[8] and 'robbery'?[9] One might well admit that there is no [real] inconsistency between the 'three' and the 'TWO' since he[10] may be enumerating [only those] whom he con siders important[11] and omitting[12] [the one] whom he does not consider important. Does not, however, the inconsistency between 'CIVIL' and 'robbery' remain? — R. Nahman b. Isaac replied: [Both terms may be justified on the grounds] that they[13] imposed fines[14] for acts of robbery;[15] as it was taught: If [a beast] nipped off a plant, said R. Jose. the Judges of Civil Law in Jerusalem ruled that if the plant was in its first year [the owner of the beast pays as compensation] two silver pieces.[16] if it was in its second year [he pays as compensation] four silver pieces.[17]

I point out [another] contradiction: Three judges of Civil Law were [administering justice] in Jerusalem. Admon, and Hanan and Nahum?[18] — R. Papa replied: He who mentioned Nahum was R. Nathan;[19] for it was taught: R. Nathan stated, 'Nahum the Mede also was one of the Judges of Civil Law in Jerusalem', but the Sages did not agree with him.

Were there, however, no more [judges]? [Did not] R. Phinehas. in fact, state on the authority of R. Oshaia that there were three hundred and ninety four courts of law[20] in Jerusalem, and an equal number of Synagogues. of Houses of Study[21] and of schools?[22] — Judges there were many, but we were speaking of Judges of Civil Law only.

Rab Judah stated in the name of R. Assi: The Judges of Civil Law in Jerusalem received their salaries out of the Temple funds[23] [at the rate of] ninety-nine maneh.[24] If they were not satisfied is they were given an increase.

[You say] 'They were not satisfied'?[25] Are we dealing with wicked men?[26] The reading in fact is,[27] [If the amount was] not Sufficient[28] an increase was granted to them even if they objected.[29]

Karna[30] used to take one istira[31] from the innocent[32] party and one istira from the guilty party and then informed them of his decision.[33] But how could he[34] act in such a manner? Is it not written in Scripture, And thou shalt take no gift?[35] And should you reply that this applies only where he does not take from both [litigants] since he might [in consequence] wrest judgment, but Karna, since he took [the same amount] from both parties, would not come to wrest judgment, [it can be retorted:] Is this permitted even where one would not come to wrest judgment? Was it not in fact taught: What was the purpose of the statement And thou shalt take no gift?[35] If to teach that one must not acquit the guilty or that one must not condemn the innocent [the objection Surely could be raised]. It was already specifically stated elsewhere in Scripture, Thou shalt not wrest judgement.[36] Consequently it must be concluded that even [where the intention is] to acquit the innocent or to condemn the guilty the Torah laid down, And thou shalt take no gift?[37] — This[37] applies only where [the judge] takes [the gift] as a bribe,[38] but Karna took [the two istira] as a fee.[39] But is it permissible [for a judge to take money] as a fee.[39] Have we not in fact learned: The legal decisions of one who takes a fee for acting as judge are null and void?[40] — This[40] applies only to a fee for pronouncing judgment, while Karna was only taking compensation for loss of work.[41]

But [is a judge] permitted to take compensation for loss of work? Was it not in fact taught: Contemptible is the judge who takes a fee for pronouncing judgment; but his decision is valid?[42] Now, what is to be understood [by fee]. If it be suggested [that it means] a fee for acting as judge [the objection would arise: How could be said,] 'his decision is valid', when in fact we have learned:[43] The legal decisions of one who takes a fee for acting as judge are null and void? Consequently it must mean[44] a fee for loss of work,[45] and yet it was stated, was it not, 'Contemptible is the judge etc.'? — This applies only to a loss of work that cannot be proved, but Karna received [compensation for] loss of work that could be proved. for he was [regularly occupied in] smelling tests[46] at a wine store,[47] and for this he was paid a fee.[48] This is similar to the case[49] of R. Huna. When a lawsuit was brought to him, he used to say to the [litigants]. 'Provide me with a man who will draw the water[50] in my place[51] and I will pronounce judgment for you'.

Said R. Abbahu: Come and see how blind are the eyes of those who take a bribe. If a man has pain in his eyes he pays away money to a medical man and he may be cured or he nay not be cured, yet these take what is only worth one perutah[52] and blind their eyes [therewith]. for it is said in Scripture. For a gift blindeth them that have sight.[53]

Our Rabbis taught: For a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise,[54] and much more so those of the foolish; And pervert the words of the righteous,[54] and much more so those of the wicked. Are then fools and wicked men capable of acting as judges?[55] — But it is this that is meant: 'For a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise', even a great Sage who takes bribes will not depart from the world without [the affliction of] a dullness of the mind,[56] 'And pervert the words of the righteous',

(1) That she has no property of her husband's in her possession.
(2) Sc. when her husband dies and she claims her kethubah.
(3) I.e., during his lifetime when she claims her maintenance.
(4) בני כהנים גדולים A similar description occurs in Oh. XVII, 5. Cf. supra p. 64, n. 6, בית דין של כהנים 'Priestly Court' or 'Court of Priests'.
(5) Or any damage.
(6) I.e, Admon mentioned in our Mishnah.
(7) In the Baraitha cited.
(8) Cf. supra note 1.
(9) In the Baraitha cited.
(10) The author of our Mishnah.
(11) On the admissibility of another rendering v. Tosaf. s.v., דחשיב, a.I.
(12) Lit., 'did not teach'.
(13) The judges mentioned.
(14) Lit., 'decreed decrees'. Hence the term 'CIVIL' גזירות: (v. supra p. 672, n. 1) in our Mishnah.
(15) גזילות (cf. supra p. 672, nn. 1 and 8). Hence the justification for the use of this term in the Baraitha.
(16) A silver piece = one ma'ah or a third of a denar, v. Glos.
(17) B.K. 58b.
(18) Inconsistent with our Mishnah which mentions only TWO. V., however, Tosaf s.v. דחשיב.
(19) [Who considered Nahum important, v. Maharsha].
(20) Each consisting of twenty-three judges.
(21) For Mishnah and Talmud.
(22) For children.
(23) תרומת הלשכה, lit., 'heave-offering of the (people) to the (Temple treasure) chamber'.
(24) V. Glos.
(25) לא רצו,
(26) Who expect from the public funds more than is required for a decent living. A judge's salary most not exceed the actual cost of his living (v. Rashi).
(27) Lit., 'but'.
(28) To provide for a decent living.
(29) V. supra p. 673, n. 15.
(30) A judge if the Exile. Cf Sanh. 17b, Sonc. ed. p.88, n. 5.
(31) V. Glos.
(32) A the party in whose favour judgment was to he given.
(33) Lit., 'and judged for them the law'.
(34) Karna.
(35) Ex. XXIII. 8.
(36) [Deut. XVI, 19.
(37) Ex. XXIII, 8.
(38) Sc. with the intention of perverting judgment.
(39) For his professional services.
(40) Kid. 58, Bek. 29a.
(41) Lit 'idleness'.
(42) Lit, 'his Judgment is judgment'. a fee for acting as judge [the objection would arise: How could it be said,] 'his decision is valid', when in fact we have learned: 1 The
(43) So Bah. Cur. edd. 'it was taught'.
(44) Lit., 'but'.
(45) Lit., 'idleness'.
(46) To advise the owner as to which wine could be stored for longer and which only for shorter periods.
(47) אמבראRashi reads the noun in the pl., stores'.
(48) Lit., 'and they gave him a zuz' (v. Glos.). When acting as judge he was entitled to demand compensation for his loss.

(49) Lit., ‘like that’.
(50) ‘For the irrigation of my land’.
(51) בחריקאי, cf. supra p. 364. n. 4
(52) The smallest coin, v.Glos.
(53) Ex.XXIII,8.
(54) Deut. XVI, 19.
(55) Obviously not; how then is it likely that anyone would offer them any bribe
(56) Lit., ‘blindness of heart’.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 105b

even one who is righteous in every respect and takes bribes will not depart from this world without [the affliction of] confusion of mind. When R. Dimi came[1] he related that R. Nahman b. Kohen made the following exposition: What was meant by the Scriptural text, The King by justice establisheth the land, but he that loveth gifts overthroweth it? If the judge is like a king who is not in need of anything[2] he establisheth the land, but if he is like a priest who moves to and fro among the threshing floors,[3] he overthroweth it.[4]

Rabbah b. R. Shila stated: Any judge who is in the habit of borrowing[5] is unfit to pronounce judgment. This, however, applies only where he possesses nothing to lend to others, but where he possesses things to lend [his borrowing] does not matter.[6] This, however, cannot surely be correct;[7] for did not Raba borrow things from the household of Bar Merion, although they did not borrow anything from him? — There he desired to give them better standing.[8]

Raba stated: What is the reason for [the prohibition[9] against taking] a gift?[10] Because as soon as a man receives a gift from another he becomes so well disposed towards him[11] that he becomes like his own person, and no man sees himself in the wrong.[12] What [is the meaning of] shohad?[13] She-hu had.[14]

R. Papa said: A man should not act as judge either for one whom he loves or for one whom he hates; for no man can see the guilt of one whom he loves or the merit of one whom he hates.

Abaye said: If a scholar[15] is loved by the townspeople [their love] is not due to his superiority but [to the fact] that he does not rebuke them for [neglecting] spiritual[16] matters.

Raba remarked: At first I thought that all the people of Mahuza[17] loved me. When I was appointed judge[18] I thought that some[19] would hate me and others[20] would love me. Having observed, however, that the man who loses[21] to-day[22] wins tomorrow I came to the conclusion that if I am loved they all love me and if I am hated they must all hate me.

Our Rabbis taught: And thou shalt take no gift;[23] there was no need to speak of [the prohibition of] a gift of money, but [this was meant:] Even a bribe of words[24] is also forbidden, for Scripture does not write, And thou shalt take no gain.[25] What is to be understood by ‘a bribe of words’?[24] — As the bribe offered to Samuel.[26] He was once crossing [a river] on a board[27] when a man came up and offered him his hand.[28] ‘What’, [Samuel] asked him, ‘is your business here?’ — ‘I have a lawsuit’, the other replied. ‘I’, came the reply, ‘am disqualified from acting for you in the suit’.

Amemar was once engaged in the trial of an action,[29] when a bird flew down upon his head and a man approached and removed it. ‘What is your business here?’ [Amemar] asked him. ‘I have a lawsuit’, the other replied. ‘I’, came the reply, ‘am disqualified from acting as your judge’.

Mar ‘Ukba once ejected some saliva[30] and a man approached and covered it. ‘What is your business here?’ [Mar ‘Ukba] asked him. ‘l have a lawsuit’, the man replied. ‘I’, came the reply, ‘am disqualified from acting as your judge’.

R. Ishmael son of R. Jose, whose aris[31] was wont to bring him a basket full of fruit[32] every Friday[33] but on one occasion[34] brought it to him on a Thursday, asked the latter, ‘Why the present change?’ I have a lawsuit’, the other replied, ‘and thought that at the same time[35] I might bring [the fruit] to the Master’. He did not accept it from him [and] said,’I am disqualified to act as your judge’. He thereupon appointed a couple of Rabbis to try the case for him. As he was arranging the affair[36] he [found himself] thinking, ‘If he[37] wished he could plead thus, or if he preferred he might plead thus’.[38] ‘Oh’, he exclaimed, ‘the despair that waits for those who take bribes’![39] If I, who have not taken [the fruit at all], and even if I had taken I would only have taken what is my own, am In such [a state of mind], show much more [Would that[40] be the state of] those who accept bribes’.

A man once brought to R. Ishmael b. Elisha[41] [a gift of] the firstfleece.[42] ‘Whence’,the latter asked him, ‘are you?’ — ‘From such and such a place’, the other replied. ‘But’, [R. Ishmael] asked, ‘was there no priest to whom to give it [in any of the places] between that place and this?’[43] — ‘I have a lawsuit’, the other replied, ‘and thought that at the same time[44] I would bring [the gift] to the Master’.He said to him, ‘I am unfit to try your action’,and refused to receive [the gift] from him. [Thereupon] he appointed two Rabbis to try his action. As he was arranging this affair[45] he [found himself] thinking, ‘If he[46] wished he could plead thus, or if he preferred he might plead thus’.[47] ‘Oh’, he exclaimed, ‘the despair that awaits those who take bribes! If I, who did not take [the gift], and even if l had taken it I would only have accepted that which is my due, am in such [a state of mind], how much more [would that be the case with] those who accept bribes’.

A man once brought to R. Anan a bale of small marsh fish.[48] ‘What is your business here’, the latter asked him. ‘I have a lawsuit’, the other replied. [R. Anan] did not accept it from him, and told him, ‘I am disqualified to try your action’. ‘I would not now request’, the other said to him, ‘the Master's decision [in my lawsuit]; will the Master, however, at least accept [the present] so that I may not be prevented from offering my first-fruit?[49] For it was taught: And there came a man from Baal-shalishah, and brought the man of God bread of the first-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and fresh ears of corn in his sack;[50] but was Elisha[51] entitled to eat first-fruit?[52] This, however, was intended to tell you that one who brings a gift to a scholar [is doing as good a deed] as if he had offered first-fruits’. It was not my intention to accept [your gift’, R. Anan] said to him, ‘but now that you have given me a reason I will accept it’ — Thereupon he sent him to R. Nahman to whom he also dispatched [the following message:] ‘Will the Master try [the action of] this man, for I, Anan,[53] am disqualified from acting as judge for him’. ‘Since he has sent me such a message’, [R. Nahman] thought, ‘he must be his relative’ —[54] An orphans’ lawsuit was then in progress[55] before him; and he reflected:

---

(1) From Palestine to Babylon.

(2) Sc. is independent of other people's help or favours.

(3) Collecting his dues.

(4) Cf Sanh. 7b.

(5) Any objects. The verb שאל, here used, does not apply to money.

(6) Lit., ‘we have nothing against it’.

(7) Lit., ‘Is it really so?’

(8) His borrowing was of no benefit to himself. Lit., ‘to cause them to be important’. For a similar reason Rabbah levied a contribution for charity on the orphans of the house of Bar Merion (cf. B.B. 8a).

(9) Upon a judge.

(10) Even where the judge intended to act justly.

(11) Lit., ‘his mind draws near to him’.

(12) Lit., ‘guilt’.
(13) שוחד, ‘gift’, ‘bribe’.
(14) שהוא חד, ‘that he (the recipient) is one (with the giver)’. This is not intended as etymology but as a word play.
(15) Lit., ‘one who has caught fire by (association with) Rabbis’.
(16) Lit ‘of heaven’.
(17) V. supra p. 319, n. 9’
(18) In that town.
(19) Who would lose their lawsuits.
(20) In whose favour judgment would be given.
(21) Lit, ‘who is made guilty’.
(22) Lit., ‘now’.
(23) Ex. XXIII, 8.
(24) Or ‘acts’.
(25) בצע which would have meant a monetary bribe.
(26) Lit., ‘as that of Samuel’.
(27) Or ‘ferry’.
(28) To assist him.
(29) Lit., ‘was sitting and deciding a law’.
(30) Lit., ‘threw saliva before him’.
(31) Gardener-tenant (v. Glos.).
(32) As rent, from R. Ishmael's garden which he cultivated.
(33) מעלי שבתא, lit., ‘entering of the Sabbath’, sc. Sabbath Eve.
(34) Lit., ‘day’.
(35) Lit., ‘by the way’.
(36) Lit., ‘went and came’.
(37) His aris.
(38) All possible pleadings in favour of the aris rose spontaneously to his mind.
(39) So Jast. תיפח נפשם, lit., ‘may their ghost blow out’, or ‘be blown’ (rt. נפח ‘to blow’).
(40) Cf. supra n.3.
(41) Who was a priest and entitled to the priestly does.
(42) Cf. Deut. XVIII, 4.
(43) Lit., ‘from there to here’.
(44) Lit., ‘by the way’.
(45) Lit., ‘went and came’.
(46) The man who offered him the priestly due.
(47) Cf. supra notes 1-5.
(48) בי גילי ‘among the marshes’. Sc. that live among the reeds in the swamps (Jast.). [Obermeyer p. 245. n. 1 suggests בי גילי to be the name of a place, Al Kil on the Tigris].
(49) Cf. Ex. XXIII, 19.
(50) II Kings IV, 42.
(51) Who was no priest. Tradition ascribes him to the tribe of Gad (cf. Pesah. 68a and Rosh. a.l.).
(52) Obviously not; why then did he accept ‘first-fruits’?
(53) Wanting in MS.M.
(54) It is forbidden to act as judge or witness in a relative's lawsuit.
(55) Lit., ‘was standing’.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 106a

The one[1] is a positive precept and the other[2] is also a positive precept. but the positive precept of shewing respect for the Torah[2] must take precedence. He, therefore, postponed[3] the orphans’ case and brought up that man's suit. When the other party[4] noticed the honour he was shewing him[5] he remained speechless.[6] [Until that happened] Elijah[7] was a frequent visitor of R. Anan whom he was teaching the Order of Elijah.[8] but as soon as he[9] acted in the manner described[10] [Elijah] stayed away. He[9] Spent his time[11] in fasting, and in prayers for [God's] mercy, [until Elijah] came to him again; but when he appeared he greatly frightened him. Thereupon he[12] made a box [for himself] and in it he sat before him until he concluded his Order with him. And this is [the reason] why people speak of the Seder Eliyyahu Rabbah and the Seder Eliyyahu Zuta.[13]

In the days[14] of R. Joseph there was a famine.[15] Said the Rabbis to R. Joseph, 'Will the Master offer prayers for [heavenly] mercy'? He replied, 'If Elisha, with whom, when the [main body of] Rabbis had departed, there still remained two thousand and two hundred Rabbis,[16] did not offer up any prayers for mercy in a time of famine,[15] should I [at such a time venture to] offer prayers for mercy? But whence is it inferred that so many remained? — [From Scripture] where it is written, And his servant said: How should I set this before a hundred men.?[17] Now what is meant by [the expression.] 'Before a hundred men'? If it be suggested that all[18] [was to be set] before the hundred men [one might well object that] in years of famine [all this] is rather a large quantity. Consequently it must be concluded[19] that each [loaf was set] before a hundred men.[20]

When the [main body of] Rabbis departed from the school of Rab there still remained behind one thousand and two hundred Rabbis; [when they departed] from the school of R. Huna there remained behind eight hundred Rabbis. R. Huna when delivering his discourses [was assisted] by thirteen interpreters.[21] When the Rabbis stood up after R. Huna's discourses[22] and shook out their garments the dust rose [so high] that it obscured the [light of] day, and people in Palestine[23] said, 'They have risen after the discourses of R. Huna the Babylonian' — When [the main body of] Rabbis departed from the schools of Rabbah and R. Joseph there remained four hundred Rabbis and they described themselves as orphans. When [the main body of] Rabbis departed from the school of Abaye (others say, From the school of R. Papa, while still others say, From the school of R. Ashi) there remained two hundred Rabbis, and these described themselves as orphans of the orphans.

R. Isaac b. Radifa said in the name of R. Ammi: The inspectors of [animal] blemishes[24] in Jerusalem received their wages from the Temple funds.[25] Rab Judah said in the name of Samuel: The learned men who taught the priests the laws of ritual slaughter received their fees from the Temple funds.[25] R. Giddal said in the name of Rab: The learned men who taught the priests the rules of kemizah[26] received their fees from the Temple funds.[25] Rabbah b. Bar Hana said in the name of R. Johanan: Book readers[27] in Jerusalem received their fees from the Temple funds.[28]

R. Nahman said: Rab stated that the women who wove the [Temple] curtains received their wages from the Temple funds[25] but I maintain [that they received them] from the sums consecrated for Temple repairs, since the curtains were a substitute for builder's work.

An objection was raised: The women who wove the [Temple] curtains, and the house of Garmo[29] [who were in charge] of the preparation of the shewbread,[30] and the house of Abtinas[29] [who were in charge] of the preparation of the incense,[31] received their wages from the Temple funds![32] — There[33] [it may be replied] the reference is [to the curtains] of the gates;[34] for R. Zera related in the name of Rab: There were thirteen curtains in the second Temple, seven corresponding to the seven gates,[35] one for the entrance to the Hekal,[36] one for the entrance to the 'Ulam,[36] two[37] [at the entrance] to the Debir[36] and two [above them and] corresponding to them in the upper storey.[38]

Our Rabbis taught: The women who brought up their children for the [services of the red] heifer,[39] received their wages from the Temple funds. Abba Saul said: The notable[40] women of Jerusalem fed them and maintained them.

R. Huna enquired of Rab:

(1) Lit., ‘that’, to judge the orphan.
(2) Respect for a man of learning (cf. B.K. 41b) and consequently also for those who are related to him.
(3) Lit., removed’, ‘put aside’.
(4) Lit., ‘the master of his law(suit’).
(5) His opponent. whom R. Nahman presumed to he R. Anan's relative.
(6) Lit., ‘his plea was stopped’.
(7) Cf supra p. 488, n. 6.
(8) סדר אליהו, a Rabbinic work of mysterious origin and authorship.
(9) R. Anan.
(10) Lit , ‘thus’. He allowed himself to be the unconscious tool of the man who cunningly bribed him.
(11) Lit., ‘sat’.
(12) R. Anan.
(13) The former was taught when P. Anan was without, the latter when he was within, the box (Rashi). [Tosaf.: the Treatise consists of a large and small book, hence the names Rabbah and Zuta. Both constitute the Midrash known as Tanna debe Eliyyaha].
(14) Lit., ‘years’. a reference perhaps to the period during which he was head of the academy.
(15) ריתחא, lit., ‘agitation’. excitement’, hence ‘anger’. Owing to God's anger the world was afflicted with famine (v. Rashi).
(16) To dine with him.
(17) II Kings IV, 43.
(18) Lit., ‘all of them’, i.e., the twenty loaves of barley and fresh ears of corn, enumerated in the preceding verse.
(19) Lit., ‘but’.
(20) There were twenty loaves of barley (II Kings II, 42). one loaf of bread of the first-fruits (ibid.) and one loaf of fresh ears of corn (ibid.). a total of twenty-two loaves. Since each loaf was set before a hundred men the total number of the men must have been (twenty-two times one hundred =) two thousand two hundred (Rashi).
(21) Each of whom addressed a section of the crowded audiences, v. Glos. s.v. Amora.
(22) Lit., ‘sitting’.
(23) Lit., ‘in the west’.
(24) מבקרי מומין, lit., ‘those who examine blemishes’, officials whose duty it was to ascertain whether any beast was unfit as a sacrifice owing to a disqualifying blemish.
(25) תרומת הלשכה, v. supra p. 673, n. 13.
(26) קמיצה, (rt. קמץ, ‘to close the hand’), ‘taking a handful’ from a meal-offering. Cf. e.g., Lev. II, 2 and Men. 11a.
(27) Who check scribal errors.
(28) In order to preserve the accuracy of the written word the services of the readers were placed free at the disposal of any member of the public (cf. Rashi).
(29) A priestly family.
(30) Cf. Ex. XXV. 30 and Yoma 38a.
(31) Cf. Ex. XXX, 23ff and Yoma 38a.
(32) An objection against R. Nahman.
(33) In the Baraitha just cited.
(34) Which cannot be regarded as forming a part of the structure of the building, while R.Nahman spoke of those curtains that replaced a wall that in the first Temple formed the partition between the Holy of Holies and the Hekal (v. infra n.5 and Yoma 51b).
(35) Of the Temple court.
(36) The Hekal (היכל) or ‘Holy’, was situated between the ‘Ulam (אולם) the Temple porch and the Debir (דביר), and contained the candlestick, the table for the shewbread and the golden altar. The Debir, or the Holy of Holies, contained the ark and the cherubim.
(37) With a space of one cubit between them in place of the thickness of the wall in the first Temple (cf. supra note 3).
(38) To form a partition between the chamber above the Debir and that above the Hekal.
(39) Cf. Num. XIX, 2ff. Certain services in connection with its preparation had to be entrusted to children who from birth were brought up under conditions of scrupulous ritual purity. For this purpose the mothers had to live in specially constructed buildings from the ante-natal period until the time the children were ready for their duties. (Cf. Suk. 21a).

(40) Rich (Rashi).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 106b

May vessels of ministry[1] be procured[2] with the offerings consecrated to Temple repair? Are these [a part of] the equipment[3] of the altar and were, therefore,[4] purchased[5] with the offerings consecrated to Temple repair, or are they rather among the requirements of the sacrifices and were, therefore, procured[6] with the Temple funds? — 'They'. the other[7] replied, 'may be procured[2] with the Temple funds only'.

He raised an objection against him; And when they had made an end, they brought the rest of the money[8] before the King and Jehoiada,[9] whereof were made vessels for the house of the Lord, even vessels wherewith to minister[10] etc. — The other[11] replied: He that taught you the Hagiographa did not teach you the Prophets: But there were not made for the hose of the Lord cups[12] etc. for they gave that to them that did the work.[13] But if so,is there not a contradiction between the two Scriptural texts? — There is really no contradiction. The former is a case[14] where after the collections were made [for Temple repair] there remained a balance,[15] while the latter[14] is a case where no balance remained.[16] But even if there was a balance after the Collection had been made, what of it?[17] R. Abbahu replied: Beth din make a mental[18] Stipulation that if they[19] be required they should be utilized for their original purpose[20] and that if [they would] not [be required] they should be [spent] on vessels of ministry.

A Tanna of the school of R. Ishmael taught: Vessels of ministry were provided[21] from the Temple funds; for it is said in Scriptures The rest of the money,[22] now what funds shewed a balance?[23] Obviously[24] the Temple funds.[25] But might it not be suggested that only the balance itself [could be spent on the vessels of ministry]?[26] — As Raba said,[27] The burnt-offering[28] implies the first burnt-offering,[29] so must the money[30] imply the first money.[31] An objection was raised: The incense and all congregational sacrifices were provided[32] from the Temple funds; the golden altar,[33] the frankincense[34] and the vessels of ministry were provided from the residue of the drink-offerings;[35] the altar for the burnt-offerings,[36] the chambers and the courts were provided from the funds that were dedicated for Temple repair, [and whatever was situated] outside the court walls[37] was provided out of the surplus of the Temple funds;[38] and it is this that [explains what] we learned: The city wall and its towers and all other requirements of the city were provided from the surplus of the Temple funds?[39] — This [point[40] is in fact a question at issue between] Tannaim. For we learned: What were they doing[41] with the surplus of the offerings [for the Temple funds]?[42] Beaten gold [plates that served as] a covering for [the walls and floor][43] of the Holy of Holies. R. Ishmael said: The surplus of the fruit[44] [was spent on the purchase of sacrifices] for the dry season[45] of the altar, while the surplus of the offerings [for the Temple funds] was spent upon vessels of ministry. R. Akiba said: The surplus of the offerings [for the Temple funds was spent on sacrifices] for the dry season of the altar while the surplus of the drink-offerings[35] was used for [the purchase of] the vessels of ministry. R. Hanina, the deputy High Priest, said: The surplus of the drink-offerings [was spent on sacrifices] for the dry season of the altar, while the surplus of the offerings [for the Temple funds was spent] on vessels of ministry. And neither the one nor the other[46] admitted that [there ever was a surplus] in the [proceeds of the] fruit.[47]

What is [meant by] 'fruit'?[48] — It was taught: What were they doing with the surplus of the offering [to the Temple funds]?[49] They bought fruit at a low price and sold it at a higher price, and with the profits sacrifices were purchased for the dry season of the altar; and it is this that [explains what] we learned: The surplus of the fruits was spent on sacrifices for the dry season of the altar. What is meant by 'neither the one nor the other admitted that [there ever was a surplus] in [proceeds of the] fruit'?[50] — [The following of] which we learned: What were they doing with the surplus[51] of the Temple funds? They purchased therewith wines, oils and various kinds of fine flour, and the profit [resulting was credited] to the sacred funds; so R. Ishmael. R. Akiba said: No sale for profit is made with the sacred funds nor out of those of the poor.[52] Why [may no sales for profit be made] with sacred funds? — There must be no poverty where there is wealth. Why [is] no [sale for profit made] with the poor funds? — Because a poor man might come unexpectedly and there would be nothing to give him.

IF A MAN WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA. It was stated: Rab ruled,

---

(1) For use on the 'external' altar, a stone structure in the Temple court.

(2) Lit., 'made'.

(3) Lit., 'need', 'requirement'.

(4) Since the altar was builder's work.

(5) Lit. 'come'.

(6) Lit., 'they were making them'.

(7) Rab.

(8) That was dedicated to Temple repair.

(9) 'The priest' is in cur.edd. enclosed in parentheses. It does not appear in M.T.

(10) II Chron. XXIV, 14; which proves that offerings for Temple repair may be used for the provision of vessels of ministry. An objection against Rab.

(11) Rab

(12) Sc. vessels of ministry.

(13) II Kings XII. 14-15.

(14) Lit., 'here'.

(15) Lit., 'they collected and left over'; hence it was permissible to procure 'vessels wherewith to minister' with the balance.

(16) Lit., 'where they collected and did not leave'.

(17) Cf. supra n.8 ab init.; how could funds collected for one purpose lawfully be used for another?

(18) Lit., 'heart'.

(19) The funds collected.

(20) Lit., 'if they were required they were required'.

(21) Lit., 'come'.

(22) II Chron. XXIV, 14.

(23) Lit, 'which is the money that has a remainder'.

(24) Lit.. 'be saying, this'.

(25) Since after the current yearly expenses were met the balance was allowed to remain in the treasury.

(26) But the main funds could not.

(27) Pes. 58b, B.K. 111a.

(28) העולה Lev. VI, 5, emphasis on the definite article.

(29) Sc. that is offered on the altar every morning before all other sacrifices.

(30) הכסף (II Chron. XXIV, 14) emphasis again on the definite article (cf. supra n.21).

(31) I.e., the income of the current year, and not only the balance. Cf. infra p. 684, n. 7.

(32) Lit., 'come'.

(33) Which, since it was not attached to the ground and was movable, was not regarded as a part of the structure of the building.

(34) That was placed at the side of the shewbread. The Wilna Gaon omits frankincense; v. J. Shek. IV, 3.

(35) This is explained in Men. 90a.

(36) The 'external' altar, cf. supra p. 682, n. 10.

(37) E.g., the women's court and the city walls.

(38) Sc. after the expenses for the current year have been met. Cf. supra p. 683, n. 24.

(39) Shek. IV, 2. Does not this Baraitha, which lays down that vessels of ministry were provided out of the surplus of the drink-offerings contradict the teaching of the school of R. Ishmael?

(40) From which funds the vessels of ministry were procured.

(41) When the new year began on the first of Nisan and the funds of the previous year were no longer allowed to be used for the purchase of congregational sacrifices.
(42) Of the previous year.
(43) Rashi.
(44) This is explained infra.
(45) קיץ המזבח. Sc. when no private offerings were available and the altar lay idle; v. Shebu., Sonc. ed. p. 50, n. 3.
(46) Lit., 'and this and this', sc. R. Akiba and R. Hanina.
(47) Shek. 6a. Thus it is shewn that the opinion expressed at the school of R. Ishmael is a question in dispute between Tannaim.
(48) In the Mishnah just cited.
(49) V. supra P. 684, n. 10.
(50) Sc. how could they be so sure of the conditions of the market at all times?
(51) Lit., 'surplus of the remainder'.
(52) Shek. IV, 3. R. Akiba, and similarly R. Hanina (cf. supra n. 1). is thus of the opinion that there could never have been a surplus of tho fruit since it was never sold.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 107a

An allowance for maintenance must be granted[1] to a married woman,[2] but Samuel ruled: No allowance may be granted[1] to a married woman.[2] Said Samuel: Abba[3] agrees with me [that no allowance is to be granted][4] during the first three months,[5] because no man leaves his house empty. In a case where a report was received[6] that he[7] was dead there is no difference of opinion between them.[8] They only differ when no one heard that he[7] was dead. Rab ruled, 'An allowance for maintenance must be granted' since he[7] is under an obligation [to maintain her]; on what ground however, did Samuel rule, 'No allowance may be granted'? — R. Zebid replied: Because it might well be assumed that he handed over to her some bundles [of valuables].[9] R. Papa replied: We must take into consideration the possibility that he told her, 'Deduct [the proceeds of] your handiwork[10] for your maintenance'.[11] What is the practical difference between them?[12] — The practical difference between them is the case of a woman who is of age[13] but [the proceeds of whose handiwork] did not suffice [for her maintenance],[14] or a minor[15] [the proceeds of whose handiwork] is sufficient [for her maintenance].[16]

We learned: IF A MAN WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA AND HIS WIFE CLAIMED MAINTENANCE, HANAN RULED: SHE MUST TAKE AN OATH AT THE END BUT NOT AT THE BEGINNING. THE SONS OF THE HIGH PRIESTS, HOWEVER, DIFFERED FROM HIM AND RULED THAT SHE MUST TAKE AN OATH BOTH AT THE BEGINNING AND AT THE END. They thus[17] differ only in respect of the oath but [agree, do they not,] that maintenance must be given to her?[18] — Samuel explained [this to refer to a case] where a report had been received that [the absent husband] was dead. Come and hear: If [a husband] went to a country beyond the sea and his wife claimed maintenance she must, said the sons of the High Priests, take an oath,[19] Hanan said: She need not take an oath. If [the husband] came, however, and declared, 'I have provided for her maintenance'[20] he is believed.[21] Here also [it may be replied] is a case where a report was received that he was dead. But, did it not Say, 'If [the husband] came, however, and declared'?[22] [The meaning of the expression is,] If he came after the report had been received.

Come and hear: If [a husband] went to a country beyond the sea, and his wife claimed maintenance, and he returned and said [to her], 'Deduct your handiwork for your maintenance', he is entitled [to withhold it]. If Beth din, however, granted the allowance before [he returned] their decision is valid.[23] Here also it is a case where a report that he had died was received.

Come and hear: If [a husband] went to a country beyond the sea and his wife claimed maintenance, Beth din take possession of[24] his estate and provide food and clothing for his wife, but not for his sons and daughters or for anything else![25] — R. Shesheth replied; [Here it is a case] where a husband maintained his wife at the hands of a trustee.[26] If so, [should not maintenance be granted to] one's sons and daughters also?[27] [It is a case] where [a husband] made provision for the maintenance of his wife[28] but not of his daughters.[28]

Whence this certainty?[29] — This, however, said R. Papa, [is the explanation: This is a case] where she heard from one witness that [her husband] had died. To her, since she could Marry on the evidence of one witness, we must also grant maintenance; to his sons and daughters, however, since they, even if they desired it, could not be allowed to take possession of his estate on the evidence of one witness, maintenance also may not be granted — What [is meant by] 'anything else'? R. Hisda replied: Cosmetics. R. Joseph replied: Charity. According to him who replied, 'Cosmetics' the ruling[30] would apply with even greater force to

---

(1) By the court, out of her husband's estate.

(2) Whose husband is away from home. אשת איש, lit., 'the wife of a man'.

(3) Sc. Rab who was also known as Abba Arika.

(4) Added by Bah in the text.
(5) Of the husband's absence.
(6) Lit., 'when they heard'.
(7) The absent husband.
(8) Lit., 'all the world (sc. Rab and Samuel) do not differ'; both agree that the woman is entitled to an allowance for maintenance.
(9) Out of which to defray the cost of her maintenance.
(10) Which are a husband's due.
(11) And that she may have consented.
(12) R. Zebid and R. Papa.
(13) Whom a husband might safely entrust with valuables.
(14) In consequence of which she would not have consented in return for her handiwork to forego her right to maintenance. Such a woman. according to R. Zebid, would still not be entitled to the court's ruling for her allowance, while according to R. Papa she would.
(15) Whom no husband would entrust with valuables.
(16) And who, in consequence, might have consented to forego her maintenance in return for her handiwork. Such a minor, according to P. Zebid, would, while according to R. Papa she would not. be entitled to the court's ruling for an allowance.
(17) Lit., 'until here' —
(18) An objection against Samuel.
(19) Cf. supra p. 672, n. 4.
(20) By entrusting her with some valuables.
(21) If he takes the prescribed oath, and the amount allowed by the court must be refunded to him. From here it obviously follows that the court does make an allowance from an absent husband's estate, a legal practice which is contrary to Samuel's ruling.
(22) A dead man, sorely, could not come and make a declaration.
(23) Tosef. Keth. XII. Lit. , 'what they have fixed is fixed'; which proves that the court does make an allowance to a wife from her absent husband's estate, contrary to the ruling of Samuel,
(24) Lit 'go down into'.
(25) This is explained infra. Cf. supra 48a. A contradiction thus arises (cf. supra n. 5) against Samuel's view.
(26) Who now refuses to continue to act on his behalf. A husband's appointment of a trustee conclusively proves that he has left no valuables with his wife for her maintenance, and that be could not have asked her to retain her handiwork for her maintenance. Hence it is quite proper for Beth din to arrange for her maintenance. Where no trustee, however, is appointed Samuel's ruling holds.
(27) Since it is assumed that he had entrusted the maintenance of his wife to a trustee, why not assume the same in regard to his sons and daughters?
(28) Lit., 'for this'.
(29) That provision was made for the one and not for the others. The Baraitha, surely, draws no distinction.
(30) That 'anything else' was not to be provided for.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 107b

charity[1] . He, however, who replied, 'Charity' [restricts the ruling to this alone] but cosmetics [he maintains] must be given to her, for [her husband] would not be pleased that she should lose her comeliness.[2]

Come and hear: A yebamah[3] during the first three months is maintained out of the estate of her husband — Subsequently[4] she is not to be maintained either out of the estate of her husband or out of that of the levir. If, however, [the levir] appeared in court[5] and then absconded she is maintained out of the estate of the levir![6] — Samuel can answer you: What possibility need we take into consideration in the case of this [woman]?[7] If that of[8] [having been entrusted[9] with] bundles of valuables[10] [one could well object that such a levir] is not well disposed towards her;[11] and if that of[12] [the remission of] her handiwork[13] [the fact is, it could be retorted, that] she is under no obligation to give it to him.[14]

Come and hear: A woman who went with her husband to a country beyond the sea and then came back and stated, 'My husband is dead', may, if she wishes, successfully claim her maintenance and, if she prefers, may equally claim her kethubah. [If she stated, however,] 'My husband has divorced me', she may be maintained[15] to the extent of her kethubah![16] — Here also [it may be replied, it is a case] where a report was received that he had died. Then[17] why [is she maintained] only to the extent of her kethubah? — Because she herself has brought the loss upon herself.[18]

Come and hear: In what circumstances was it laid down that [a minor who] exercised her right of refusal[19] is not entitled to maintenance? It cannot be said, In [those of] one who lives with her husband, since [in such circumstances] her husband is under an obligation to maintain her, but [in those], for instance, [of one] whose husband went to a country beyond the sea, and she borrowed money and spent it[20] and then[21] exercised her right of refusal. Now, the reason [why she is not entitled to maintenance is obviously] because she exercised her right of refusal; had she, however, not exercised her right of refusal, maintenance would have been granted to her?[22] — Samuel can answer you: What possibility need we provide against as far as she is concerned? If against that of[23] [having been entrusted with] bundles of valuables [it may be pointed out that] no one entrusts a minor with valuables; and if against that of [the man's remission of] her handiwork[24] [the fact is, it could be argued, that] the handiwork of a minor does not suffice [for her maintenance].[25] What is the ultimate decision?[26] When R. Dimi came[27] he related: Such a case was submitted to Rabbi at Beth She'arim[28] and he granted[29] the Woman[30] an allowance for her maintenance, [while a similar case was submitted] to R. Ishmael at Sepphoris[31] and he did not grant her any maintenance. R. Johanan was astonished at this decision — What reason [he wondered] could R. Ishmael see that [in consequence of it] he allowed her no maintenance? Surely the sons of the High Priests and Hanan differed only on the question of the oath,[32] but [they all agree, do they not, that] maintenance is to be given to her? — R. Shaman b. Abba answered him: Our Master, Samuel, in Babylon has long ago explained this [as being a case] where a report had been received that [the absent husband] had died. 'You', the other remarked, 'explain so much with this reply'.

When Rabin came[27] he related: Such a case was submitted to Rabbi at Beth She'arim[28] and he did not grant the woman[30] any maintenance, [while in a similar case which was submitted] to R. Ishmael at Sepphoris[31] [the latter] granted her an allowance for her maintenance. Said R. Johanan: What reason could Rabbi see for not granting her an allowance, when Hanan and the sons of the High Priests obviously differed only in respect of the oath[32] but [agreed that] maintenance is to be given her? — R. Shaman b. Abba replied: Samuel in Babylon has long ago explained this [as being a case] where a report has been received that [the absent husband] had died. 'You','the other remarked, 'explain so much with this answer'. The law, however, is in agreement with Rab,[33] and a married woman is to be granted an allowance for her maintenance. The law is also in agreement with a ruling which R. Huna laid down in the name of Rab, R. Huna having stated on the authority of Rab: A wife is within her rights when she says to her husband, 'I desire no maintenance from, and refuse to do [any work for you]'. The law, furthermore, agrees with a ruling of R. Zebid[34] in respect of glazed vessels,[35] R. Zebid having laid down: Glazed vessels[35] are permitted[36] if they are white or black,[37] but forbidden[38] if green.[39] This,[40] however, applies only to such[41] as have no cracks[42] but if they have cracks they are forbidden.[38]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA AND SOMEONE CAME FORWARD[43] AND MAINTAINED HIS WIFE, HANAN SAID: HE LOSES HIS MONEY.[44] THE SONS OF THE HIGH PRIESTS[45] DIFFERED FROM HIM AND RULED: LET HIM TAKE AN OATH AS TO HOW MUCH HE SPENT AND RECOVER IT. SAID R. DOSA B. HARKINAS: [MY OPINION IS] IN AGREEMENT WITH THEIR RULING. R. JOHANAN B.

ZAKKAI SAID: HANAN SPOKE WELL [FOR THE MAN] PUT HIS MONEY ON A STAG'S HORN.[46]

GEMARA. Elsewhere we have learned: If a man is forbidden by a vow to have any benefit from another

---

(1) Since a court which has no power to provide from a man's estate for his own wife's enjoyments would have much less power to exact charity from his estate.

(2) Supra 482.

(3) A woman whose husband died without issue, and who awaits levirate marriage or halizah which must not take place before the lapse of three months after her husband's death.

(4) Lit., 'from now and onwards'.

(5) To answer the widow's demand for marriage or halizah.

(6) Yeb. 41b. Is not this then (cf. supra P. 687, n. 5) an objection against Samuel's ruling?

(7) To deprive her in consequence of her maintenance.

(8) Lit., 'on account of'.

(9) By the absent levir, before his departure.

(10) To cover her cost of living.

(11) Lit., 'his mind is not near to her', and it is, therefore, most unlikely that he left any valuables with her.

(12) Lit., 'on account of'.

(13) Sc. that he might have allowed her to retain the proceeds of her handiwork to defray therewith her cost of living.

(14) Hence the indisputable right of the court to grant an allowance out of the absent levir's estate. In the case of an absent husband, however, where both possibilities must be taken into consideration, Samuel's ruling holds.

(15) Out of her husband's estate, by an order of the court.

(16) Because if she was10 fact divorced she is well entitled to her kethubah, and if she was not divorced she has a rightful claim to maintenance. Now, is not this ruling (cf. supra p. 687. n. 5) an objection against Samuel's ruling?

(17) Since the assumption is that she is a widow.

(18) By declaring that she had been divorced. A divorcee is entitled to her kethubah but, unlike a widow, is not entitled to maintenance.

(19) V. Glos. s.v. mi'un.

(20) Lit., 'and ate'.

(21) Lit., 'she stood up'.

(22) Which is an objection (cf. supra p. 687. n. 5) against Samuel.

(23) Lit., 'on account of'.

(24) V. supra p. 689, n. 3.

(25) And she would not have agreed to release her husband from his obligation to maintain her in return for the inadequate income from her handiwork.

(26) Lit., 'what is there about it?' Is maintenance to be allowed to a wife out of her absent husband's estate?

(27) From Palestine to Babylon.

(28) Cf. supra p. 663, n. 4.

(29) Out of the estate of her absent husband.

(30) Lit., 'her'.

(31) Cf. supra p. 410, n. 6.

(32) V. our Mishnah.

(33) Supra 107a ab init.

(34) [This is introduced here because R. Zebid figures in the above discussion; or, it is likely that both the rulings of R. Huna and R. Zebid were adopted at the same session, v. Shittah Mekubbezeth].

(35) If earthenware.

(36) For use (cf. infra note 5ff).

(37) These kinds of glaze prevent absorption despite the porous nature of the earthenware.

(38) To be used at all, if they once contained heathen foodstuffs or heathen wine of libation (nesek), or on the Passover if they ever contained frames, any foodstuffs that were not free from leavened substances of any of the five kinds of grain

(cf. Hal. I, i).

(39) Or ‘yellow’. The last mentioned glaze, unlike the former, contains crystals of alum which increase the absorptive capacity of the potsherd (cf. A.Z. 33b).

(40) That green (or yellow) glazed earthenware is permitted (v. sura note 4).

(41) Lit , ‘and it was not said but’.

(42) In the glazed surface.

(43) Lit., ‘and one rose’.

(44) He has no legal claim upon the husband who neither instructed him to advance the money nor promised to refund his expenses.

(45) Cf. supra p. 672, n. 7.

(46) Metaph. He could never recover the money from the stag, nor can he recover it from the woman or her husband (cf. p. 691 n. 12).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 108a

the latter may nevertheless pay for him his shekel,[1] repay his debt[2] and restore to him any object he may have lost; but where a reward is taken,[3] the benefit is to be given[4] to the sacred funds.[5] Now, one can well be satisfied [with the ruling that] he may ‘pay for him his shekel’ [because by this payment] he merely performs a religious act,[6] for it was taught:[7] It is lawful to withdraw[8] [from the funds of the Temple treasury] on the account of that which was lost,[9] collected[10] or about to be collected;[11] and [the ruling that he may] restore to him any object he may have lost’ [is also intelligible since thereby] also he is performing a religious duty;[12] but [how could he be permitted to] ‘repay his debt’ [when thereby] he undoubtedly benefits[13] him? — R. Oshaia replied: ‘This ruling[14] is that of[15] Hanan who said: HE LOSES HIS MONEY.[16] Raba, however, replied: The ruling[14] may be said [to agree even with the view of] the Rabbis,[17] for here[18] we are dealing [with the case of a man] who borrowed money on the condition that he does not repay it [except when he is inclined to do so].[19] It is well that Raba does not give the same reply as R. Oshaia, since [he wishes] the ruling to agree even with the opinion of the Rabbis. On what ground, however, does not R. Oshaia [wish to] give the same reply as Raba? — R. Oshaia can answer you: Granted that he[20] has no actual benefit;[21]

---

(1) His annual contribution to the fund for congregational sacrifices. According to Tosaf. (s.v. ועל) provided it was lost on its way to the Temple treasury, v. infra n. 10.

(2) Which he may be owing to a third party.

(3) For the return of a lost object; and this man either refuses to take it or where he, too, is forbidden by vow to derive any benefit from the other man, v. Ned. 33a.

(4) Lit., ‘shall fall’.

(5) Ned. 33a. The other may not retain the amount of the reward since it is legally due to the man from whom he is forbidden to derive any benefit.

(6) And confers no benefit upon the other.

(7) Cf. marginal note and Tosaf. B.M. 58a s.v. דתנן. Cur. edd. ‘we learned’.

(8) תורמין (rt. תרם ‘to lift’, ‘separate’). Such withdrawals were made three times a year (cf. Shek. III, i).

(9) Sc. the man whose shekel was lost has a share in the sacrifices purchased out of the funds as if his contribution had actually reached the treasury. According to Tosaf. (loc. cit.); provided it had been handed by him to the Temple treasurer, and it was lost after the withdrawal in the Temple had taken place.

(10) By an agent who lost it on the way. According to Tosaf., after the withdrawal in the Temple had taken place. Cf. supra note 10).

(11) B.M. 58a. From the first two mentioned cases it thus follows that the man whose shekel was lost (cf. notes 10 and 11) gains no benefit from the generosity of the man who paid his shekel in the circumstances mentioned (cf. supra note 2).

(12) And the question of conferring a benefit upon the other does not arise. His object is not the benefit of the man but the religious act.

(13) קמשתרשי, (rt. שרש, Hithpa.) 'to take root'.
(14) That he may 'repay his debt'.
(15) Lit.,'who is it?'
(16) Similarly anyone who repays a stranger's debt cannot reclaim it from him. Such a debtor, it follows, is not regarded as the recipient of the amount repaid. For the same reason he cannot be regarded as the recipient of a benefit.
(17) Who hold a man liable for any expenses any. body may have incurred on his behalf.
(18) Lit., 'here in what?'
(19) V. Ned. Sonc. ed. p. 102, n. 5. Since the creditor in such circumstances can never exact payment from the debtor, any man who repays it confers no real benefit upon him.
(20) In the circumstances mentioned (cf. supra n. 7).
(21) From the repayment of the debt.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 108b

has he not [some benefit in being spared] shame?[1] Another reading:[2] There also he has benefit, the benefit that he [need not] feel embarrassed in the other's presence.[3]

MISHNAH. ADMON LAID DOWN SEVEN RULINGS: —[4] IF A MAN DIES AND LEAVES SONS AND DAUGHTERS, IF THE ESTATE IS LARGE,[5] THE SONS INHERIT IT AND THE DAUGHTERS ARE MAINTAINED [FROM IT][6] AND IF THE ESTATE IS SMALL,[5] THE DAUGHTERS ARE MAINTAINED FROM IT, AND THE SONS CAN GO BEGGING.[7] ADMON SAID, 'AM I TO BE THE LOSER BECAUSE I AM A MALE!'[8] R. GAMALIEL SAID; ADMON'S VIEW HAS MY APPROVAL.[9]

GEMARA. What does he[10] mean?[11] — Abaye replied: He means this; 'AM I TO BE THE LOSER BECAUSE I AM A MALE and capable of engaging in the study of the Torah?' Said Raba to him: Would, then, he who is engaged in the study of the Torah be entitled to heirship, while he who is not engaged in the study of the Torah not be entitled to be heir?[12] — But, said Raba, it is this that he[10] meant: AM I BECAUSE I AM A MALE, and entitled to be heir in the case of a large estate, TO BE THE LOSER [of my rights] in the case of a small estate?'

MISHNAH. IF A MAN CLAIMED FROM ANOTHER JARS OF OIL AND [THE LATTER] ADMITTED HIS CLAIM TO [EMPTY] JARS, ADMON RULED: SINCE HE ADMITTED A PORTION OF THE CLAIM HE MUST TAKE AN OATH,[13] BUT THE SAGES SAID: THE ADMISSION OF THE PORTION [OF THE CLAIM] IS NOT OF THE SAME KIND AS THE CLAIM.[14] R. GAMALIEL SAID; ADMON'S VIEW HAS MY APPROVAL.[12]

GEMARA. From this[15] it may be inferred that, according to the Rabbis,[16] [a man from] whom one claimed wheat and barley and he admitted the claim to the barley is exempt [from oath]. Must it then be said that this presents an objection against a ruling which R. Nahman laid down in the name of Samuel? For R. Nahman laid down in the name of Samuel: [A man from] whom one claimed wheat and barley and he admitted one of them is liable [to an oath]?[17] — Rab Judah replied in the name of Rab; [Our Mishnah deals with the case of one from] whom a certain quantity[18] [of oil] was claimed.[19] If so,[20] what could Admon's reason be? — This, however, said Raba, [is the explanation]: Both[21] [agree] that where [the claimant] said to the other, 'I have the contents[22] of ten jars of oil in your tank',[23] he claims from him the oil but not the jars, [and if he said], 'You owe me[24] ten jars full of oil', he claims both the oil and the jars; they only differ where [the claimant] said to him, 'You owe me[24] ten jars of oil'. Admon maintains that in this expression a claim for the jars also is implied, and the Rabbis[25] contend that in this expression the jars were not implied.

The reason then[26] is because 'in this expression the jars were not implied', but if the jars had been implied in this expression he would apparently have been liable [to the oath]. Must it consequently be presumed that this presents an objection against a ruling of R. Hiyya b. Abba? For R. Hiyya b. Abbah[27] ruled: [A man from] whom one claimed wheat and barley, and he admitted one of them, is exempt [from an oath]? — R. Shimi b. Ashi replied: [The making of such a claim][28] is the same as if one had claimed from another a pomegranate with its peel.[29] To this Rabina demurred: A pomegranate without its peel cannot be preserved, but oil can well be preserved without jars![30] [The fact] however, is that[31] we are here[32] dealing [with the case of a man] who said to another, 'You owe me[33] ten jars of oil', and the other replied, 'The [claim for the] oil is a pure invention,[34] [and as to] the jars, too, I owe you[35] five and you have no [claim to any other] five'. Admon maintains that this expression implies a claim to the jars also and, since [the defendant] must take an oath in respect of the jars,[36] he must also take an oath by implication[37] in respect of the oil, while the Rabbis[38] are of the opinion that such an expression does not imply a claim for the jars [so that] what the one claims[39] the other did not admit, and what the latter admitted[40] the former did not claim.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN PROMISED[41] A SUM OF MONEY TO HIS [PROSPECTIVE] SON-IN-LAW AND THEN DEFAULTED,[42]

---

(1) Of defaulting. Of course he has. Raba's reply. therefore, is unacceptable to R. Oshaia.

(2) So Bah and Rashal. Wanting in cur. edd.

(3) [The difference between the two versions is that whereas according to the former, the sparing of a feeling of shame is not considered an actual benefit, according to the latter it is regarded as such, v. Glosses of Bezalel Ronsburg].

(4) Lit., 'said seven'. Cf. supra p. 672 nn. 2 and 3.

(5) Lit., 'possessions are many'. The definition of 'large' and 'small' is given in B.B. Sonc. ed. p. 594.

(6) Until their majority or marriage.

(7) Lit., 'go about (people's) doors'.

(8) This is explained in the Gemara.

(9) Lit., 'I see the words of Admon.

(10) Admon.

(11) Sc. what reason is there to assume that, as regards maintenance, a male should be given any preference at all over a female?

(12) Obviously not. The Pentateuchal laws of inheritance. surely, draw no distinction between a learned, and an ignorant son.

(13) That he owes him no oil.

(14) The claim was for (a) jars and (b) oil, while the admission was in respect of the full claim of the former and of no part of the latter.

(15) The statement of the Sages in our Mishnah (cf.supra n. 7).

(16) Sc. THE SAGES.

(17) Shebu. 40a.

(18) Lit., 'measure'.

(19) JARS does not refer to the actual containers but to their measure or capacity, the jars themselves forming no part of the claim.

(20) That the jars admitted formed no part of the claim.

(21) Lit., 'that all the world', Admon and the Sages.

(22) מלא, lit., 'fulness'.

(23) בור, a receptacle in the oil press.

(24) Lit., 'l have with you'.

(25) Sc. THE SAGES.

(26) Why the Sages do not regard the admission of the claim to the jars as AN ADMISSION OF THE SAME KIND AS THE CLAIM.

(27) MS.M. inserts, 'in the name of R. Johanan'.

(28) 'Jars of oil'.

(29) Between the oil and the jars in which it is kept there exists a definite connection similar to that of the pomegranate and its peel; but between wheat and barley there exists no such connection. An admission of one of the two in the former cases may well be regarded as AN ADMission OF THE SAME KIND AS THE CLAIM though an admission of one of the two in the latter case cannot be so regarded.

(30) In the tank. How then could the one pair be compared to the other?

(31) Lit., 'in what?'

(32) In our Mishnah.

(33) Lit., 'I have with you'.

(34) Lit., 'the things never were'.

(35) Lit.,'you have'.

(36) Having clearly admitted a part of the claim.

(37) V. supra p. 549 n. 3.

(38) Sc. THE SAGES.

(39) Oil.

(40) Jars.

(41) Lit., 'fixed'.

(42) פשט לו את הרגל, lit., 'stretched out the leg towards him', as if to say, 'Take the dust of my foot', or 'hang me by the leg, l have nothing to give you' (Rashi).

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 109a

LET [HIS DAUGHTER] REMAIN [SINGLE][1] UNTIL HER HAIR GROWS GREY.[2] ADMON RULED: SHE MAY SAY,[3] 'HAD I MYSELF PROMISED THE SUM ON MY BEHALF I WOULD REMAIN [SINGLE][1] UNTIL MY HAIR GREW GREY, BUT NOW THAT MY FATHER HAS PROMISED IT, WHAT CAN I DO? EITHER MARRY ME OR SET ME FREE'. R. GAMALIEL SAID: ADMON'S WORDS HAVE MY APPROVAL.

GEMARA. Our Mishnah does not [uphold the same view] as that of the following Tanna. For it was taught: R. Jose son of R. Judah stated, There was no difference of opinion between Admon and the Sages that, where a man promised a sum of money to his [prospective] son-in-law and then defaulted, his daughter may say[3] My father has promised on my behalf, what can I do?' They only[4] differ where she herself promised a sum of money on her own behalf, in which case the Sages ruled: Let her remain [single][5] until her hair grows grey, while Admon maintained that she could say, 'I thought that my father would pay for me [the promised amount], but now that my father does not pay for me, what can I do? Either marry me or set me free'. Said R. Gamaliel: Admon's words have my approval.[6]

A Tanna taught: This[7] applies only to a woman who is of age but in the case of a minor compulsion may be used. Who is to be compelled? If the father [be suggested], should [not the ruling. it may be retorted,] be reversed?[8] — But, said Raba, compulsion is exercised against the [prospective] husband that he may give her a letter of divorce.

R. Isaac b. Eleazar laid down on the authority of Hezekiah: Wherever R. Gamaliel stated, 'Admon's words have my approval', the halachah agrees with him. Said Raba to R. Nahman, Even in the Baraitha?[9] — The other replied, Did we say 'In the Mishnah?' What we said was, 'Wherever R. Gamaliel stated'.[10]

Said R. Zera in the name of Rabbah b. Jeremiah: As to the two rulings which Hanan has laid down, the halachah is in agreement with him who followed his view,[11] but in respect of the seven rulings that were laid down by Admon, the halachah is not in agreement with him who followed his view.[12] What does he[13] mean? If it be suggested that he means this: As to the two rulings which Hanan has laid down, the halachah is in agreement with himself and with him who followed his view, and that in respect of the seven rulings that were laid down by Admon, the halachah is neither in agreement with himself nor with him who followed his view,[12] [it may be objected:] Did not R.

Isaac b. Eleazar lay down on the authority of Hezekiah that ‘wherever R. Gamaliel stated, "Admon's words have my approval", the halachah agrees with him’? — What he[13] meant, however, must have been this: As to the two rulings which Hanan has laid down, the halachah is in agreement with himself and with him who followed his view,[14] but in respect of the seven rulings that were laid down by Admon, the halachah does not agree with him who followed his view[15] but agrees with himself in all his rulings. But, surely, R. Isaac b. Eleazar laid down on the authority of Hezekiah that ‘wherever R. Gamaliel stated, ‘Admon's words have my approval" the halachah agrees with him’. [Does not this imply:] Only[16] where he stated;[17] but not where he did not state? — The fact, however, is that he[13] meant this; As to the two rulings which Hanan has laid down, the halachah is in agreement with himself and with him who followed him,[14] but of the seven rulings that were laid down by Admon, there are some concerning which the halachah is in agreement with himself and with him who followed his view[18] while there are others concerning which the halachah does not agree with him[19] but with him who followed his view,[15] [the rule being that] wherever R. Gamaliel stated, ‘Admon's words have my approval’ is the halachah in agreement with him, but not elsewhere.[20] MISHNAH. IF A MAN CONTESTS [THE OWNERSHIP OF] A FIELD ON [THE DEED OF SALE OF] WHICH HE IS SIGNED AS A WITNESS,[21] ADMON RULED; [HIS CLAIM IS ADMISSIBLE BECAUSE] HE CAN SAY,[22] ‘[LITIGATION WITH] THE SECOND[23] IS EASIER FOR ME, SINCE THE FIRST[24] IS A MORE DIFFICULT PERSON THAN HE’.[25] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED THAT HE HAS LOST HIS RIGHT.[26] IF [THE SELLER][27] MADE IT[28] A [BOUNDARY] MARK FOR ANOTHER PERSON[29] [THE CONTESTANT][30] HAS LOST HIS RIGHT.[31]

GEMARA. Abaye said: This[32] was taught only [in respect of] A WITNESS, but a judge[33] does not lose his title;[34] for R. Hiyya taught Witnesses may not sign a deed unless they have read it[35]

---

(1) Unmarried and undivorced.

(2) Sc. the son-in-law cannot be compelled either to marry her or to set her free.

(3) To her prospective husband.

(4) Lit., ‘concerning what?’

(5) Unmarried and undivorced.

(6) Tosef. Keth. XII.

(7) The ruling of the Baraitha.

(8) If compulsion is to be resorted to, this should not be in the case of a minor whose actions have no legal validity, but in that of one who is of age, whose undertaking is legally valid (v. Strashun).

(9) Just cited, where the dispute relates to a promise made by the daughter herself (cf. Rashi s.v. אפי and Tosaf. s.v. ואפילו a.l.). [R. Nissim; Does this principle apply elsewhere also in a Baraitha? — though here the halachah has been fixed according to the version of our Mishnah].

(10) The halachah, apparently contradictory, being determined by the version of the Mishnah and Baraitha respectively, (cf. Tosaf. l.c.). [Cf. however n. 6].

(11) כיוצא בו, lit., ‘like he who goes out with him’, sc. R. Johanan b. Zakkai (cf. the Mishnahs supra 105a and 107b). This is discussed anon. aliter; ‘Like that which goes out with it’, i.e., rulings similar to those laid down by Admon (v. Tosaf.) [According to Adreth a case similar to that of Admon's is provided by one who pays his fellow's debt to his creditor without his instructions. and where the claim is, say, for wheat and barley and the admission is only in regard to one of these, we have an instance similar to that of Admon].

(12) Sc. R. Gamaliel (cf. the Mishnahs supra 108b f). Cf. also p. 697, n.8 mutatis mutandis.

(13) R. Zera.

(14) V. p. 697, n. 8.

(15) I.e., R. Gamaliel (cf. supra note I) who agreed with him in three rulings only, for the halachah agrees with Admon in all his rulings.

(16) Lit. , ‘yes’.

(17) Is the halachah in agreement with Admon.

(18) Sc. the three rulings (cf supra n. 4).

(19) Rashal on the interpretation of Tosaf. (v. p. 697, n. 8) emends: ‘agrees neither with him nor with etc.’
(20) Lit., ‘not those’, sc. the rulings of Admon of which R. Gamaliel expressed no approval.
(21) His plea being that the seller has taken it from him by violence.
(22) So separate edd. of the Mishnah, Alfasi and Asheri.
(23) The buyer.
(24) The seller.
(25) Sc. he might plead that he signed as a witness, not because he acknowledged the seller to be the lawful owner, but in the hope that it would be easier for him to recover his field from the buyer than from the seller.
(26) By signing the deed of sale he is presumed to have acknowledged the seller as the lawful owner of that field.
(27) Whose title to the field is contested.
(28) The contested field.
(29) To whom he has sold a field adjacent to it.
(30) Who signed as a witness to the deed of sale in which the contested field was described as the property of the seller, and given as one of the boundaries of the field sold.
(31) Even according to Admon. The plea that the contestant preferred to litigate with the buyer is obviously inadmissible here, and the reason given supra note 6, applies.
(32) The ruling that the contestant HAS LOST HIS TITLE.
(33) Who attested the Signatures of the witnesses to a deed of sale.
(34) To the field sold and, despite his Signature, may reclaim it. A judge is concerned only with the attestation of the witnesses’ signature and not with the contents of the deed.
(35) Since it is the contents of the deed to which they must testify.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 109b

but judges[1] may sign even though they have not read it.[2]

IF [THE SELLER] MADE IT A [BOUNDARY] MARK FOR ANOTHER PERSON. Abaye said: This was taught Only [where it was] FOR ANOTHER PERSON, but [if it was made a boundary mark] for himself[3] he does not lose his right; for he can say, ‘Had I not done that[4] for him he would not have sold the field to me’. What [possible objection can] you have?[5] That he should have made a declaration [to that effect]? Your friend [it can be retorted] has a friend, and the friend of your friend has a friend.[6]

A certain man once made a field[7] a [boundary] mark for another person,[8] [and one of the witnesses,] having contested [its ownership,][9] died, when a guardian was appointed [over his estate].[10] The guardian came to Abaye[11] who quoted to him: ‘IF [THE SELLER] MADE IT A [BOUNDARY] MARK FOR ANOTHER PERSON [THE CONTESTANT] HAS LOST HIS RIGHT’. ‘If the father of the orphans had been alive’, the other retorted, ‘could he not have pleaded, "l have conceded to him[12] only one furrow"?’[13] — ‘You speak well’, he said, ‘for R. Johanan stated, If he submitted the plea, "l have conceded to you only one furrow", he is believed’. ‘Proceed at any rate [Abaye later[14] told the guardian] to give him one furrow’.[15] On that [furrow, however,] there was a nursery of palm trees, and [the guardian] said to him, ‘Had the father of the orphans been alive, could he not have submitted the plea, "I have re-purchased it from him"?’[16] — ‘You speak well’, [Abaye] said to him, ‘for R. Johanan ruled, If he submitted the plea, "I have re-purchased it from him" he is believed’.[17] Said Abaye: Anyone who appoints a guardian should appoint one like this man who understands how to turn [the scales][18] in favour of orphans.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN WENT TO A COUNTRY BEYOND THE SEA AND [IN HIS ABSENCE] THE PATH TO HIS FIELD WAS LOST,[19] ADMON RULED: LET HIM WALK [TO HIS FIELD][20] BY THE SHORTEST WAY.[21] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: LET HIM EITHER PURCHASE A PATH FOR HIMSELF EVEN THOUGH IT [COST HIM] A HUNDRED MANEH OR FLY THROUGH THE AIR.

GEMARA. What is the Rabbis'[22] reason? Does not Admon speak well?[23] — Rab Judah replied in the name of Rab: [The ruling[24] refers to a field], for instance, which [the fields of] four persons surrounded on its four sides.[25] If that be so, what can be Admon's reason?[26] — Raba explained: Where four persons[27] succeeded[28] [to the adjacent fields] by virtue of the rights of four [persons respectively][29] or where four persons succeeded[28] [to them][30] by virtue of one,[29] all agree that these may turn him away.[31] They[32] only differ where one person succeeded[33] [to all the surrounding fields] by virtue of four persons.[34] Admon is of the opinion that [the claimant can say to that person,] 'At all events[35] my path is in your territory'; and the Rabbis hold the opinion [that the defendant might retort,] 'If you will keep quiet, well and good,[36] but if not l will return the deeds to their respective original owners whom you will have no chance of calling to law'.[37]

A [dying man][38] once instructed [those around him] that a palm tree shall be given to his daughters but the orphans proceeded to divide the estate and gave her no palm tree. R. Joseph [in considering the case] intended to lay down that it involved the very same principle as that of our Mishnah.[39] But Abaye said to him: Are [the two] alike? There,[40] each one can send [the claimant to the path] away;[41] but here, the palm tree is in their common possession.[42] What is their way out?[43] — They must give her a palm tree and divide [the estate] all over[44] again.

A [dying man][45] once instructed [those around him] that a palm tree shall be given to his daughter. When he died he left[46] two halves of a palm tree.[47] Sat R. Ashi [discussing the case] and grappled with this difficulty; Do people call two halves of palms trees a palm tree' or not? — Said R. Mordecai to R. Ashi, Thus said Abimi of Hagronia[48] in the name of Raba: People do call two halves of palm trees 'a palm tree'.[49]

---

(1) Cf. supra n. 13.

(2) A judge's signature on a deed consequently does not prove that beyond the Signatures of the witnesses he was at all aware of its contents.

(3) Sc. if the contestant himself bought a field from the man whom he accuses of having stolen an adjacent field from him, and the latter, inserting the field in dispute as a boundary, described it as his own.

(4) Lit., 'thus', i.e., agreed to the description of the stolen field as the property of the seller.

(5) Against this plea.

(6) Popular saying. The declaration would eventually reach the ears of the seller who might in consequence cancel the sale.

(7) Which he was accused of having stolen.

(8) To whom he had sold a field adjacent to it.

(9) Cf. supra p. 699, n. I.

(10) To manage it for the orphans.

(11) To claim the field on behalf of his wards.

(12) Of the field in dispute.

(13) That was immediately next to the sold field. The orphans should, therefore, be entitled to reclaim the rest of the field.

(14) After proof had been adduced that the field had been stolen from the father of the orphans.

(15) The minimum which the deceased must have conceded.

(16) After it had been ascribed to him.

(17) [The reason for this ruling. according to Rashi, is because the field is known to have belonged to the contestant and but for his signature referred to, the present occupier has no proof of his title to the field. This admission on the part of the contestant is, however, cancelled by his declaration of having repurchased the field, v. supra 16a.]

(18) Lit.,'to turn over'.

(19) It being unknown in which of the surrounding fields it lay.

(20) He must be allowed a short path through one of the surrounding fields. (This is further explained infra).

(21) The minimum. He cannot claim more than what is, at all events, due to him.

(22) THE SAGES.
(23) The assumption now being that all the surrounding fields belonged to one person who must obviously be held responsible for the lost path.
(24) In our Mishnah.
(25) So that each person can shift responsibility on the others.
(26) How can one be held responsible when all the four are equally involved?
(27) The respective owners of the four surrounding fields.
(28) Lit., 'came'.
(29) Sc. by purchase or gift.
(30) After the path was lost.
(31) Cf. supra note 8.
(32) Admon and the Sages.
(33) Lit., 'came'.
(34) Sc. by purchase or gift.
(35) In whichever field the path was lost.
(36) Lit., 'you will keep quiet' (bis). He will sell him a path at a reasonable price (cf. Rashi). V . however, Tosaf. Yeb. 37b, s.v. דאמר.
(37) Lit., 'and you will not be able to talk law with them'. Cf supra p. 701, n. 8.
(38) The verbal instructions of one in such circumstances have the force of a legally written document.
(39) Like the owners of the adjacent fields each of whom shifts the responsibility for the path on to the others. so can each brother shift the responsibility for the palms tree on to the other brothers.
(40) The case in our Mishnah.
(41) The One path can lie only in one person's held, and each of the defendants can, therefore, well plead that it did not lie in his.
(42) Lit., 'with them', the instructions of the deceased having been given before the division of the estate, and the duty of carrying out his wish is incumbent upon all the heirs jointly.
(43) Lit., 'their correction'. 'redress' —
(44) Lit., 'from the beginning'.
(45) V. supra note 2.
(46) Among his many palm trees.
(47) Sc. two palm trees in each of which he owned a half, and the heirs desired to assign them to the daughter in fulfilment of their father's instructions.
(48) One of the suburbs of Nehardea.
(49) And the brothers can assign these to the daughter despite the greater trouble involved in their cultivation.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 110a

MISHNAH. IF A MAN PRODUCED A BOND OF INDEBTEDNESS AGAINST ANOTHER, AND THE LATTER PRO DUCED [A DEED OF SALE,[1] SHEWING] THAT THE FORMER HAD SOLD HIM A FIELD,[2] ADMON RULED; [THE OTHER] CAN SAY, HAD I OWED YOU [ANYTHING] YOU WOULD HAVE RECOVERED IT WHEN YOU SOLD ME THE FIELD'.[3] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, SAY; THIS [SELLER] MAY HAVE BEEN A PRUDENT MAN, SINCE HE MAY HAVE SOLD HIM THE LAND IN ORDER TO BE ABLE TO TAKE IT FROM HIM AS A PLEDGE.[4]

GEMARA. What is the reason of the Rabbis? Does not Admon speak well? — Where [the purchase] money is paid first and the deed is written afterwards, no one disputes that the [defendant] may well say [to the claimant], 'You should have recovered your debt when you sold me the field'.[3] They only differ where the deed is written first and the purchase money is paid afterwards. Admon is of the opinion that [the claimant] should have made a declaration [of his motive],[5] while the Rabbis[6] maintain [that the claimant can retort,] 'Your friend has a friend, and the friend of your friend has a friend'.[7]

MISHNAH. IF TWO MEN PRODUCED BONDS OF INDEBTEDNESS AGAINST ONE ANOTHER,[8] ADMON RULED; [THE HOLDER OF THE LATER BOND CAN SAY TO THE OTHER,] 'HAD I OWED YOU [ANY MONEY] HOW IS IT THAT YOU BORROWED FROM ME?'[9] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: THE ONE RECOVERS HIS DEBT[10] AND THE OTHER RECOVERS HIS DEBT.[11] GEMARA. It was stated: If two men produced bonds of indebtedness against one another, R. Nahman ruled: The one recovers his debt and the other recovers his debt.[12] R. Shesheth said: What is the point[13] in exchanging bags?[14] The one rather retains his own [money][15] and the other retains his.

All agree[16] that if both [litigants possess land of the] best,[17] medium or worst quality [distraint for each on the other is] undoubtedly a case of changing bags.[14] They differ only where one [of the litigants] has land of medium quality and the other of the worst quality. R. Nahman is of the opinion that 'the one recovers his debt and the other recovers his debt' because in his view an assessment[18] is made on the basis of the debtor's[19] possessions,[20] [so that] the owner of the land of the worst quality proceeds to distrain on the medium quality [of the other][21] which then becomes with him the best; and the other can then proceed to take from him the worst only.[22] R. Shesheth, however, said, 'What is the point in exchanging bags?' because he is of the opinion that an assessment[23] is made on a general basis,[24] [so that] eventually when the original owner of the medium land[25] proceeds [to distrain on the property of the other][26] he will only take back his own medium land. But what [reason can] you see, according to R. Nahman, that the owner of the worst quality of land should proceed [to distrain] first? Why should not rather the owner of the medium quality come first and distrain on the worst [of the other] and then let him distrain on it?[27] — [But this ruling] applies only[28] where the [holder of the worst land] submitted his claim first. But after all when they come to distrain, do they not come simultaneously?[29] The fact, however, [is that the ruling] applies only[28] where one [of the litigants] has best and medium land, and the other has only of the worst. One Master[30] is of the opinion that an assessment[31] is made on the basis of the debtor's[32] possessions,[33] while the other Master[34] is of the opinion that an assessments is made on a general basis.[35]

We have learned: THE SAGES, HOWEVER, RULED: THE ONE RECOVERS HIS DEBT AND THE OTHER RECOVERS HIS DEBT![36] R. Nahman explained this, according to R. Shesheth, [as referring to a case,] for instance, where one borrowed for a period often, and the other for one of five years.[37] But how exactly are we to understand this? If it be suggested that the first [bond][38] was for ten years and the second for five, would Admon [it may be objected] have ruled [that the second can say to the first:] 'HAD OWED YOU [ANY MONEY] HOW IS IT THAT YOU BORROWED FROM ME?' The time for payment[39] surely, had not yet arrived.[40] If, however, [it be suggested that] the first was for five years and the second for ten, how [it may again be objected] is this to be understood? If the time for payment[39] had arrived,[40] what [it may be asked] could be the reason of the Rabbis?[41] And if the time for payment[39] had not yet arrived,[40] well, payment was not yet due and what [it may again be asked] is Admon's reason? — [This ruling was] required [in that case] only where [the holder of the earlier bond][42] came [to borrow] on the day on which the five years had terminated.[43] The Masters[44] are of the opinion that it is usual to borrow money for one day[45] and the Master[46] is of the opinion that one does not borrow money for one day.[47]

Rama b. Mama explained: We are here[48] dealing with [a case where one of the bonds was presented by] orphans[49] who are themselves entitled to recover a debt but from whom no debt may be recovered.[50]

Was it not, however, stated, THE ONE RECOVERS HIS DEBT AND THE OTHER RECOVERS HIS DEBT?[51] — [The meaning is:] The one recovers his debt, and the other is entitled to recover it but gets nothing. Said Raba: Two objections [may be advanced] against this explanation. Firstly, it was stated, 'THE ONE RECOVERS HIS DEBT AND THE OTHER RECOVERS[51] HIS DEBT'; and, secondly, could not [the other party] allow the orphans to distrain on a plot of land [of his] and then recover it from them,[52] in accordance with [a ruling of] R. Nahman, for R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: If orphans collected a plot of land for their father's debt[53] the creditor[54] may re-collect it from them?[55] — This is a difficulty.

Why could it not be explained [that this is a case] where the orphans owned land of the worst quality and the other owned best[56] and medium quality, so that the orphans proceed to distrain on his medium land[57] and allow him to distrain on their worst only? For, even though[58] an assessment[59] is made on a general basis[60] is not payment from orphans' property recovered from their worst land only?[61] — This applies only where [the creditor] has not yet seized [their property] but where[62] he had seized it[63] he may lawfully retain it.[64]

MISHNAH. [THE FOLLOWING REGIONS ARE REGARDED AS] THREE COUNTRIES IN RESPECT OF MATRIMONY:[65] JUDAEA, TRANSJORDAN AND GALILEE. [A MAN] MAY NOT TAKE OUT [HIS WIFE WITH HIM][66] FROM ONE TOWN[67] TO ANOTHER[68] OR FROM ONE CITY[69] TO AN OTHER. WITHIN THE SAME COUNTRY, HOWEVER, HE MAY TAKE HER OUT WITH HIM FROM ONE TOWN INTO ANOTHER OR FROM ONE CITY INTO AN OTHER[70]

---

(1) Bearing a later date than that of the bond.

(2) And thereby he seeks to prove that either he never borrowed the sum claimed or that he repaid It prior to his purchase of the field.

(3) By seizing the purchase price in payment of the debt. Since he did not do it is obvious that he owed bins nothing.

(4) Movables can be hidden away.

(5) And since he did not do so the defendant may well plead, 'HAD I OWED YOU' etc.

(6) THE SAGES.

(7) Cf. supra p. 700, n. 3 mutatis mutandis.

(8) One bond bearing an earlier date than the other.

(9) And this plea exempts him from payment.

(10) Lit., 'bond of his debt'.

(11) No balancing of amounts or exchange of bonds being allowed by the court. Each bond must be treated on its own merits and orders for distraint are given accordingly.

(12) V. p. 703, n. II.

(13) If the amounts of the two debts are equal (v. infra).

(14) Metaph. If the bags are of equal weight there is no advantage to an animal in changing them from one side to the other (Jast.) or to a human being in changing the burden from one hand to the other (Levy). מטרתא, 'leather bag' (Rashi). Cf. 'a liquid measure', 'cask'.

(15) Or property on which the other desires to distrain.

(16) Lit., 'all the world', R. Nahman and R. Shesheth.

(17) Lit., 'best and best'.

(18) On behalf of a creditor who distrains on the debtor's land.

(19) Lit., 'of his'.

(20) If the debtor, for instance, has only two kinds of land, medium and inferior quality, the former is regarded as 'best' and the creditor can only distrain on the inferior land. A creditor (cf. B.K. 7b) may distrain on the 'medium' land of the debtor if he possesses such, or on the 'worst'. He has no right to distrain on the 'best'.

(21) Being in fact the only kind of land the other possesses.

(22) He cannot reclaim the medium quality that was taken from him, since it is now regarded as its present owner's 'best' (cf. supra note 9).

(23) V.supra note 7.

(24) Lit., 'of all men'.

(25) Lit., 'that one'.

(26) Who had taken possession of his medium land.

(27) Cf. p. 704, n. 11. The other could not distrain on the medium which is now his best.
(28) Lit., 'is not required but'.
(29) Since both presented their bonds at court (v. our Mishnah ab init.). Why then should one be allowed an advantage over the other?
(30) R. Nahman.
(31) V. supra p. 704, n. 7.
(32) Lit., 'of his'.
(33) Cf. supra p. 704, n. 9. The owner of the worst land, if allowed to distrain on the other instead of keeping his own. is at an advantage in either case. whether he distrains first or last. If he distrains first he obtains, of course, the other's medium land which, becoming his 'best', cannot be distrained on by the creditor, and the other must consequently recoup himself from his worst. If, on the other hand, the owner of the best and medium land distrains first, it is again the other's worst land (the only kind he possesses) to which he can have recourse, while the other still distrains on his medium.
(34) R. Shesheth.
(35) Cf. supra p. 704. n. 13. Where, therefore, two bonds are simultaneously presented at court and the order would naturally be made that the owner of the worst land distrains first on the other's 'medium' and that the latter then distrains on the same 'medium', the procedure would be as useless as that of 'exchanging bags'.
(36) Is not this an objection against K. Shesheth?
(37) So that it is advantageous to the debtor of the loan for the longer period that his bond shall not be balanced against the other's.
(38) I.e., the one bearing the earlier date.
(39) Lit., 'its time'.
(40) When the second bond was written.
(41) It should be pretty obvious that the holder of the later bond should be believed mince he might well plead as Admon suggested.
(42) The five years' loan.
(43) Payment having been due on the following day.
(44) The Sages. Lit., 'master'.
(45) Hence their ruling that both bonds are valid.
(46) Admon.
(47) Hence the admissibility of the plea, 'HAD I OWED YOU etc'
(48) In our Mishnah.
(49) Who inherited it from their father.
(50) If they possessed no landed property. Orphans' movables may not be distrained on.
(51) Not merely, 'is entitled to recover etc.
(52) Cf. supra n. 12 mutatis mutandis.
(53) Which someone owed him.
(54) To whom their father owed money.
(55) Supra 92a, Pes. 31a, B.B. 125a.
(56) So cur. edd. and MS.M. R. Nissim and Maharsha omit.
(57) To which a creditor is entitled (cf. supra p. 704. n. 9 second clause).
(58) Lit , also'.
(59) Cf. supra p. 704. n. 7.
(60) Lit., 'of all men'.
(61) V. Git. 48b.
(62) MS.M. 'but here since'.
(63) As in the case under discussion where they seek to take it from him.
(64) Lit., 'he seized'.
(65) Sc. a man who married in one of these cannot compel his wife to go with him to any of the others.
(66) Except with her consent.
(67) כרך.
(68) In another country.

(69) [עיר According to Rashi כרך is larger than עיר. According to Krauss, the former denotes a city (large or small) surrounded by a wall, v. He'atid. III, 1ff.]
(70) Even if she objects.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 110b

BUT NOT FROM A TOWN TO A CITY NOR FROM A CITY TO A TOWN.[1] [A MAN] MAY TAKE OUT [HIS WIFE WITH HIM] FROM AN INFERIOR[2] TO A SUPERIOR[3] DWELLING, BUT NOT FROM A SUPERIOR[3] TO AN INFERIOR[2] DWELLING. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED: NOT EVEN FROM AN INFERIOR DWELLING TO A SUPERIOR DWELLING, BECAUSE THE [CHANGE TO A] SUPERIOR DWELLING PUTS [THE HUMAN BODY] TO A [SEVERE] TEST.[4]

GEMARA. One may readily grant [the justice of the ruling that a wife may not be compelled to move] FROM A CITY TO A TOWN, since everything [necessary] is obtainable in a city while not everything is obtainable in a town. On what grounds, however, [can she not be compelled to move] FROM A TOWN TO A CITY? — [This ruling] provides support for R. Jose b. Hanina who stated, 'Whence is it deduced that city[5] life[6] is difficult?[7] [From Scripture] where it is said, And the people blessed all men that willingly offered themselves to dwell in Jerusalem.[8]

R.SIMEON B. GAMALIEL RULED etc. What [is meant by] PUTS [THE HUMAN BODY] TO A [SEVERE] TEST'?[9] — In agreement [with a saying] of Samuel. For Samuel said: A change of diet is the beginning of bowel trouble.[10]

It is written in the Book of Ben Sira: All the days of the poor[11] are evil;[12] but are there not the Sabbaths and festivals?[13] — [The explanation, however, is] according to Samuel. For Samuel said: A change of diet is the beginning of bowel trouble.[10] Ben Sira said: The nights also.[14] Lower than [all] the roofs is his roof,[15] and on the height of mountains is his vineyard,[16] [so that] the rain of [other] roofs [pours down] upon his roof and the earth of his vineyard [is washed down] into the vineyards [of others].[17] MISHNAH. [A MAN] MAY COMPEL ALL [HIS HOUSEHOLD] TO GO UP[18] [WITH HIM] TO THE LAND OF ISRAEL., BUT NONE MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT. ALL [ONE'S HOUSEHOLD] MAY BE COMPELLED TO GO UP[18] TO JERUSALEM,[19] BUT NONE MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT. [THIS APPLIES TO] BOTH MEN AND WOMEN.[20] IF A MAN MARRIED A WOMAN IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL AND DIVORCED HER IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL, HE MUST PAY HER [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL. IF HE MARRIED A WOMAN IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL AND DIVORCED HER IN CAPPADOCIA HE MUST PAY HER [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL.[21] IF HE MARRIED A WOMAN IN CAPPADOCIA AND DIVORCED HER IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL, HE MUST A GAIN PAY [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL.[21] R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL, HOWEVER, RULED THAT HE MUST PAY HER IN THE CAPPADOCIAN CURRENCY.

IF A MAN MARRIED A WOMAN IN CAPPADOCIA AND DIVORCED HER IN CAPPADOCIA, HE MUST PAY HER [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF CAPPADOCIA.

GEMARA. What [was the expression,] 'MAY COMPEL ALL'[22] intended to include? — To include slaves.[23] What, however, [was the expression[22] intended] to include according to him who specifically mentioned 'slaves' [in our Mishnah]? — To include [removal] from a superior dwelling to an inferior one. What [was the expression,] 'BUT NONE[24] MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT' intended to include? — To include a slave who fled from outside the Land [of Israel] into the Land in which case his master is told,[25] 'Sell him here, and go', in order to [encourage] settlement in the Land of Israel. What [was the expression] 'ALL[26] . . . MAY BE COMPELLED TO GO UP TO JERUSALEM' intended to include? — To include [removal] from a superior dwelling to an inferior one. What [was the expression,] 'BUT NONE[27] MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT' intended to include? — To include even [removal] from an inferior dwelling to a superior one; only since as it was stated in the earlier clause,[28] 'NONE MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT it was also stated in the latter clause,[29] 'NONE MAY BE COMPELLED TO LEAVE IT'.[30]

Our Rabbis taught: If [the husband] desires[31] to go up[32] and his wife refuses[31] she must be pressed[33] to go up; and if [she does] not [consent] she may be divorced[34] without a kethubah. If she desires[31] to go up[32] and be refuses,[31] he must be pressed to go up; and if [he does] not [consent] he must divorce her and pay her kethubah. If she desires to leave[35] and he refuses to leave, she must be pressed not to leave, and if [pressure is of] no [avail] she may be divorced[34] without a kethubah. If he desires to leave[35] and she refuses he must be pressed not to leave, and if [coercion is of] no [avail] he must divorce her and pay her kethubah.[36]

IF A MAN MARRIED A WOMAN etc. Is not this self-contradictory? It was stated, IF HE MARRIED A WOMAN IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL AND DIvorced HER IN CAPPADOCIA HE MUST PAY HER [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL, from which it clearly follows that we are guided by [the currency of the place where the] obligation[37] was undertaken.[38] Read, however, the concluding clause: IF HE MARRIED A WOMAN IN CAPPADOCIA AND DIVORCED HER IN THE LAND OF ISRAEL HE MUST AGAIN PAY HER [HER KETHUBAH] IN THE CURRENCY OF THE LAND OF ISRAEL, from which it follows, does it not, that we are guided by [the currency of the place] where collection is effected?[39] — Rabbah replied: [The rulings] taught here [are among those in which the claims relating to] a kethubah are weaker [than those of other claimants],[40] for [the author] is of the opinion that the kethubah is a Rabbinical enactment.[41] R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL, HOWEVER, RULED THAT HE MUST PAY HER IN THE CAPPADOCIAN CURRENCY. He is of the opinion[42] that the kethubah is Pentateuchal.[43]

Our Rabbis taught: If a man produces a bond of indebtedness against another [and the place of issue] entered[44] therein was Babylon, [the debtor] must allow him to collect it in Babylonian currency. If [the place of issue] entered[44] therein was the Land of Israel he must allow him to collect it in the currency of the Land of Israel. If no place of issue was entered[44] he must, if it was presented in Babylon, pay him in Babylonian currency; and, if it was presented in the Land of Israel, he must pay him in the currency of the Land of Israel. If merely [a sum of] 'silver [pieces]'[45] was entered, the borrower may pay the other whatever he wishes.[46] [This is a ruling] which does not apply to[47] a kethubah.[48] To what [ruling does this[49] refer]? — R. Mesharsheya replied: To that in the first clause,[50] thus indicating that the law is not in agreement with[51] R. Simeon b. Gamaliel who ruled that the kethubah is Pentateuchal.

'If merely [a sum of] "silver [pieces]" was entered the borrower may pay the other whatever he wishes'. May not one say that [a 'silver piece' merely signified] a bar [of silver]? — R. Eleazar replied: [This is a case] where 'coin' was mentioned in the bond.[52] May not one suggest [that it signified] small change? — R. Papa replied: Small change is not made of silver.[53]

Our Rabbis taught: One should always live in the Land of Israel, even in a town most of whose inhabitants are idolaters, but let no one live outside the Land, even in a town most of whose inhabitants are Israelites; for whoever lives in the Land of Israel may be considered to have[54] a God, but whoever lives outside the Land may be regarded as one who has no God. For it is said in Scripture, To give you the Land of Canaan, to be your God.[55] Has he, then, who does not live in the Land, no God?[56] But [this is what the text intended] to tell you, that whoever lives outside the Land may be regarded as one who worships idols. Similarly it was said in Scripture in [the story of] David, For they have driven me out this day that I should not cleave to the inheritance of the Lord, saying: Go, serve other gods.[57] Now, whoever said to David, 'Serve other gods'? But [the text intended] to tell you that whoever lives outside the Land[58] may be regarded as one who worships idols.[59]

R. Zera was evading Rab Judah because he desired to go up to the Land of Israel while Rab Judah had expressed [the following view:] Whoever goes up from Babylon to the Land of Israel transgresses a positive commandment, for it is said in Scripture,

---

(1) The reason is stated infra.

(2) Lit., 'bad'.

(3) Lit., 'beautiful'.

(4) This is further explained by Samuel infra. בודק rt. בדק 'to examine', 'test', 'try'. Aliter (Jast.): בדק 'to penetrate'; 'the removal to a better residence (and style of living) penetrates (the body and creates disease)'.

(5) Lit., 'cities'.

(6) שישיבת, rt. ישב 'to sit', 'dwell'.

(7) Lit., 'hard', owing to overcrowding, lack of pure country air and an insufficiency of parks and open spaces.

(8) Neh. XI, 2.

(9) בודק cf. supra note 1.

(10) חולי מעים, lit., 'disease of the bowels', 'abdominal trouble'. Cf. B.B. 146a, Sonc. ed. p. 628 (where מעים is omitted) and Sanh. 101a, Sonc. ed. p. 683.

(11) So A.J.V.; A.V. and R.V. 'afflicted'.

(12) Prov. XV, 15, Ben Sira XXXI, 5.

(13) During which days, at least, the poor were provided with substantial meals.

(14) Ben Sira loc. cit. Not only all the days.

(15) As a poor man he is compelled to live in a low-roofed hovel.

(16) Since he cannot afford a more costly vineyard in the valley.

(17) Ben Sira XXXI, 6-7.

(18) Lit., 'cause to go up'.

(19) From any other Palestinian place.

(20) A wife also may compel her husband to live with her in Jerusalem or the Land of Israel and, if he refuses, she is entitled to demand a divorce and the payment of her kethubah.

(21) The Cappadocian coins were dearer than the corresponding ones of the Land of Israel.

(22) Emphasis on 'ALL'.

(23) Hebrew slaves also may be compelled by their master to follow him to Jerusalem or to the Land of Israel.

(24) Emphasis on 'NONE'.

(25) Lit., 'we say to him'.

(26) Emphasis on 'ALL'.

(27) Emphasis on 'NONE'.

(28) In reference to the Land of Israel.

(29) In respect of Jerusalem.

(30) Though the latter clause is, in fact, redundant, it being self-evident that if a person may be compelled to leave a superior dwelling to move to an inferior one, provided the latter is in Jerusalem, he could not a fortiori be compelled to leave Jerusalem even for the sake of a change from an inferior to a superior dwelling.

(31) Lit., 'says'.

(32) From a country outside the Land, to the Land of Israel, or from a province in the latter to Jerusalem.

(33) This law does not apply to the present time owing to the risks of the journey (Tosaf. s.v. הוא a.l.). Rabbenu Hayim also maintains that living in the Land of Israel is now not a religious act owing to the difficulty and impossibility of fulfilling many of the precepts attached to the soil (Tosaf. loc. cit. q.v.).

(34) Lit., 'she goes out'.

(35) Jerusalem, for a provincial town in the Land of Israel, or the latter for a foreign country.

(36) Tosef. Keth. XII.

(37) To pay the kethubah.
(38) The obligation is undertaken at marriage and collection takes place on divorce (or the man's death).
(39) Cf. supra n. 2.
(40) Cf. supra p. 709, n. 4, B.B. 132b, Sonc. ed. p. 554, n. 9, Bek. 52a.
(41) Non-Pentateuchal (cf. infra n. 6 and text).
(42) Contrary to the view of the first Tanna (cf. supra n. 5).
(43) [In the Jerusalem Talmud the opinions are reversed: R. Gamaliel holds that the kethubah is Rabbinical, whereas the Sages consider it Biblical, the Palestinian giving preference to the Palestine coinage, v. supra 10a].
(44) Lit., 'written'.
(45) No mention being made of the exact denomination.
(46) Since he may assert that the figure in the bond referred to the smallest silver coin.
(47) Lit., 'which is not so in'.
(48) Tosef. Keth. XII.
(49) The last clause.
(50) Sc. unlike a creditor who, according to the first clause, is entitled to collect his due in the currency of the place of issue, a woman collects her kethubah in the cheaper currency only.
(51) Lit., 'to bring out from'.
(52) Lit., 'written in it .
(53) Lit., 'small change of silver people do not make'. Cf. B.B. 165b f, Sonc. ed. p. 722f.
(54) Lit., 'is like as if he has'.
(55) Lev. XXV, 38; implying apparently that only in the land of Canaan would He be their God.
(56) One surely may serve God anywhere.
(57) I Sam. XXVI, 19.
(58) David was compelled to seek shelter from Saul in the country of Moab and the land of the Philistines.
(59) Tosef. 'A.Z. V.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 111a

They shall be carried to Babylon, and there shall they be, until the day that I remember them, saith the Lord.[1] And R. Zera?[2] — That text[1] refers[3] to the vessels of ministry.[4] And Rab Judah? — Another text also is available:[3] I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles, and by the hinds of the field, [that ye awaken not, nor stir up love,[5] until it please]'.[6] And R. Zera? — That[7] implies that Israel shall not go up [all together as if surrounded] by a wall.[8] And Rab Judah? — Another 'I adjure you'[9] is written in Scripture. And R. Zera? — That text is required for [an exposition] like that of R. Jose son of R. Hanina who said: 'What was the purpose of those three adjurations?[10] — One, that Israel shall not go up [all together as if surrounded] by a wall;[8] the second, that whereby the Holy One, blessed be He, adjured Israel that they shall not rebel against the nations of the world; and the third is that whereby the Holy One, blessed be He, adjured the idolaters that they shall not oppress Israel too much'. And Rab Judah? — It is written in Scripture, That ye awaken not, nor stir up.[11] And R. Zera? — That text is required for [an exposition] like that of R. Levi who stated: 'What was the purpose of those six adjurations?[12] — Three for the purposes just mentioned and the others, that [the prophets] shall not make known the end,[13] that [the people] shall not[14] delay[15] the end,[13] and that they shall not reveal the secret[16] to the idolaters'.

By the gazelles, and by the hinds of the field.[17] R. Eleazar explained: The Holy One, blessed be He, said to Israel, 'If you will keep the adjuration, well and good; but if not, I will permit your flesh [to be a prey] like [that of] the gazelles and the hinds of the field'.

R. Eleazar said: Whoever is domiciled in the Land of Israel lives without sin, for it is said in Scripture, And the inhabitant shall not say, 'I am sick', the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.[18] Said Raba[19] to R. Ashi; We apply this [text][18] to those who suffer from disease.

R.Anan said; Whoever is buried in the Land of Israel is deemed to be[20] buried under the altar; since in respect of the latter[21] it is written in Scripture, At altar of earth thou shalt make unto me,[22] and in respect of the former[23] it is written in Scripture, And his laud doth make expiation for his people.[24]

'Ulla was in the habit of paying visits to the Land of Israel but came to his eternal rest[25] outside the Land — [When people] came and reported this to R. Eleazar he exclaimed, 'Thou 'Ulla, shouldst die in an unclean land!.'[26] 'His coffin', they said to him, 'has arrived'.[27] 'Receiving a man in his lifetime', he replied, 'is not the same as receiving him after his death'.

A certain man[28] who fell under the obligation [of marrying][29] a sister-in-law[30] at Be Hozae[31] came to R. Hanina and asked him whether it was proper[32] to go down there to contract with her levirate marriage. 'His brother', [R. Hanina] replied, 'married a heathen[33] and died, blessed be the Omnipresent Who slew him, and this one would follow him!'

Rab Judah stated in the name of Samuel: As it is forbidden to leave the Land of Israel for Babylon so it is forbidden to leave Babylon[34] for other countries. Both Rabbah and R. Joseph said: Even from Pumbeditha[35] to Be Kubi.[36]

A man once moved from Pumbeditha to [settle in] Be Kubi and R. Joseph placed him under the ban.

A man once left Pumbeditha to [take up his abode at] Astunia,[37] and he died.[38] Said Abaye: 'If this young scholar wanted it, he could still have been alive'.[39]

Both Rabbah and R. Joseph stated: The fit[40] persons of Babylon are received[38] by the Land of Israel, and the fit[40] ones of other countries are received[41] by Babylon. In what respect?[42] If it be suggested: In respect of purity of descent,[43] surely [it may be objected,] did not the Master say, 'All countries are [like] dough[44] towards the Land of Israel,[45] and the Land of Israel is [like] dough towards Babylon'?[46] — The fact, however, [is that the 'fit'[47] are received] in respect of burial.[48]

Rab Judah said: Whoever lives in Babylon is accounted as though he lived in the Land of Israel; for it is said in Scripture, Ho, Zion, escape, thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.[49]

Abaye stated: We have a tradition that Babel[50] will not witness the sufferings[51] [that will precede the coming] of the Messiah.[52] He [also] explained it[53] to refer[54] to Huzal[55] in Benjamin which would be named[56] the Corner of Safety.[57]

R. Eleazar stated: The dead outside the Land[58] will not be resurrected; for it is said in Scripture, And I will set glory[59] in the land of the living,[60] [implying] the dead of the land in which I have my desire[61] will be resurrected, but the dead [of the land] in which I have no desire will not be resurrected.

R. Abba b. Memel objected: Thy dead shall live, my dead bodies shall arise;[62] does not [the expression] 'Thy dead shall live' refer to the dead of the Land of Israel, and 'My dead bodies shall arise' to the dead outside the Land;[63] while the text,[64] And I will give glory[65] in the land of the living[60] was written of Nebuchadnezzar concerning whom the All-Merciful said, 'I will bring against them a king who is as swift as a stag'?[66] — The other replied: Master, I am making an ex position of another Scriptural text: He that giveth breath unto the people upon it,[67] and spirit to them that walk therein.[68] But is it not written, My dead bodies shall arise?[69] — That was written in reference to miscarriages.[70] Now as to R. Abba b. Memel, what [is the application] he makes of the text,[71] 'He that giveth breath unto the people upon it'? — He requires it for [an exposition] like that of R. Abbahu who stated: Even a Canaanite bondwoman who [lives] in the Land of Israel is assured of a place in[72] the world to come, [for in the context] here it is written, unto the people[73] upon it,[74] and elsewhere it is written, Abide ye here with[75] the ass[76] [which may be rendered][77] people that are like an ass'.[78]

And spirit to them that work therein[74] [teaches], said R. Jeremiah b. Abba in the name of R. Johanan, that whoever walks four cubits in the Land of Israel is assured of a place[79] in the world to come. Now according to R. Eleazar,[80] would not the righteous outside the Land[81] be revived?[82] — R. Elai replied: [They will be revived] by rolling [to the Land of Israel]. R. Abba Sala the Great demurred: Will not the rolling be painful to the righteous? — Abaye replied: Cavities will be made for them underground.

Thou shalt carry me out of Egypt and bury me in their burying-place.[83] Karna remarked: [There must be here] some inner meaning. Our father Jacob well knew that he was a righteous man in every way, and, since the dead outside the Land will also be resurrected, why did he trouble his sons?[84] Because he might possibly be unworthy to [roll through] the cavities.[85]

Similarly you read in Scripture, And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, [saying....ye shall carry up my bones from hence],[86] and R. Hanina remarked: [There is here] an inner meaning. Joseph well knew himself to be a righteous man in every way, and, since the dead outside the Land[87] will be revived, why did he trouble his brothers [with a journey of] four hundred parasangs? Because he might possibly be unworthy to [roll through] the cavities.[88]

His brothers[89] sent [the following message] to Rabbah:[90] 'Jacob well knew that he was a righteous man in every way' etc.[91] Ilfa added to this the following incident. A man was once troubled on account of [his inability to marry] a certain woman[92] and desired to go down [to her country]; but as soon as he heard this[91] he resigned himself to his unmarried state[93] until the day of his death. Although you are a great scholar [you will admit that] a man who studies on his own cannot be on a par with a man who learns from his master. And perchance you might think that you have no master [good enough for you here, we may inform you that] you have one, and he is[94] R. Johanan. If you are not coming up, however, beware [we advise you] of three things. Do not sit too long, for [long] sitting aggravates one's abdominal troubles;[95] do not stand for a long time, because [long] standing is injurious to the heart; and do not walk too much, because [excessive] walking is harmful to the eyes. Rather [spend] one third [of your time] in sitting, one third in standing and one third in walking. Standing is better than sitting when one has nothing to lean against.

'Standing'! How can this be imagined in view of the statement that '[long] standing is injurious to the heart'? — What was meant in fact was this:[96] Better than sitting

---

(1) Jer. XXVII, 22.

(2) How could he act against this text?

(3) Lit., 'is written'.

(4) Enumerated previously in the context (Jer. XXVII, 19ff).

(5) For the Land of Israel.

(6) Cant. II, 7. Before it pleased God to bring them back to their Land they must patiently remain in Babylon.

(7) The text of Cant. II, 7.

(8) Individuals, however, may well go there. Cur. edd., read בחומה MS. M., כחומה, 'like a wall'. So also Emden and Strashun.

(9) Cant. III, 5, which refers to individuals.

(10) The two mentioned (Cant. II, 7, Ill, 5) and the one in Cant. V, 8.

(11) Cant. II, 7, אם תעירו ואם תעוררו, the repetition of the root עור implies (a) all Israel together and (b) individuals.

(12) Each of the three adjurations (cf. supra n. 10) is repeated (cf. supra n. 11).
(13) Of the exile. The beginning of the Messianic era.
(14) By their misdeeds.
(15) ירחקו (rt. רחק 'to be far'). Aliter; Shall not regard the end (of the exile) as being too far off, and so lose hope (Maharsha). Var. ידחקו (rt. דחק 'to press'), 'force by excessive prayer'.
(16) Of intercalation Aliter: The secret of the reasons underlying the commandments in the Torah (Rashi).
(17) Cant. II, 7.
(18) Isa. XXXIII, 24.
(19) Read with עין יעקב 'Rabina', Yalkut: R. Abba, since Raba and R. Ashi were not contemporaries.
(20) Lit., 'as if'.
(21) Lit., 'here'.
(22) Ex. XX, 21.
(23) Lit., 'there'.
(24) Deut. XXXII, 43. The renderings of A.V., R.V. and A.J.V. respectively differ from each other and from the one given here.
(25) Lit., 'his soul rested'.
(26) The italicized words are a quotation from Amos VII. 17.
(27) In the Land of Israel for burial.
(28) Who lived in the Land of Israel.
(29) Lit. 'that fell to him'.
(30) V. Glos. s.v. yibbum.
(31) V. supra p. 504, n. 5.
(32) Lit., 'what is it?'
(33) כותית var. גויה). Apparently a term of contempt for the Jewish woman of Be Hozae (Golds.).
(34) Which was a centre of religion and learning.
(35) V. supra p. 325, n. 5.
(36) It is forbidden to move one's abode. בי כובי was the name of a village in the vicinity of Pumbeditha' (Rashi Kid. 70b); 'the fort of P.' (Jast.).
(37) אסתוניא a place near Pumbeditha. [Identified by Obermeyer (p. 229) with Piruz Shabur.]
(38) So MS.M. Cur. edd. omit the waw.
(39) His death was due to his departure from Pumbeditha.
(40) כשרין, either (a) of pure and legitimate descent or (b) worthy and righteous. V. infra n. 8.
(41) This is explained anon.
(42) Are the 'fit . . . received'.
(43) Cf. supra note 7 (a), sc. that such persons may marry into any pure families of the Land of Israel and Babylon respectively.
(44) Opp. to 'fine flour', sc. a mixed mass the ingredients of which cannot be determined. Metaph. for impurity or illegitimacy of descent.
(45) The families of the latter place would not allow, therefore, any person from the former to marry any of their members.
(46) Kid. 69b, 71a, which proves that as regards purity of descent Babylon stands higher than the Land of Israel. How then could it be said that only the 'fit persons of Babylon are received by the Land of Israel'? On the causes of the lower standard of genealogical purity in the Land of Israel v. Halevy's suggestion quoted in Kid., Sonc. ed. p. 350, n. 6.
(47) Cf. supra note 7 (b).
(48) Only the worthy men of Babylon and other countries should be allowed burial in the Land of Israel and Babylon respectively. Unworthy men should not be admitted to the former whose soil was sacred or to the latter which scholars and saints had made their home (cf. supra note 1).
(49) Zech. II, 11.
(50) בבל, usually rendered 'Babylon', but v. infra notes 6 and 7.
(51) Or 'travail'.
(52) חבלי דמשיח; 'but the more correct reading is חבליה דמשיח (Moore, G.F., Judaism II 361, n. 2).

חבלי המשיח 'frequent in modern Christian books is fictitious' (loc. cit.). The 'sufferings' or 'travail' are more fully described in Sanh. 97b, Sonc. ed. p. 654. These are the 'throes of mother Zion which is in labor to bring forth the Messiah — without metaphor, the Jewish people' (Moore, loc. cit. text).

(53) The tradition as to the immunity of Babel.

(54) Not, as might be assumed, to the well known Babylon (cf. supra note 2).

(55) הומל, a village to the north of Jerusalem between Tel Al-Ful and Nob 'the city of the priests'. It was known by many names including that of בבל (v. Horowitz, I.S., Palestine, p. 73. nn 3ff, s.v. אצל). Neubauer, (Geogr. p. 152) describes it as an old fortress in Palestine (v. Jast.). There was also a Huzal in Babylonia between Nehardea and Sura. Cf. Sanh. 19a, Sonc. ed. p. 98, n. 3 and Berliner, Beitr. z. Geogr. p. 32.

(56) וקרו ליה, lit., 'and they would call it'. The pronoun according to Rashi refers to the 'days of the Messiah', but this is difficult.

(57) The noun הוצל is regarded here as the Hof. of נצל 'to save'.

(58) Of Israel.

(59) צבי. Cf. infra notes13 and 18.

(60) Ezek. XXVI, 20.

(61) צביון containing the three letters of צבי (cf. supra note II). God's care for Palestine is taken for granted. Cf. e.g, A land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it (Deut. XI, 12).

(62) Isa. XXVI, 19.

(63) Of Israel.

(64) Lit., 'and what'.

(65) V. supra note II.

(66) צבי also means 'stag' (cf. supra note 11).

(67) The land of Israel.

(68) Isa. XLII, 5.

(69) Isa. XXVI, 19.

(70) Even they will be resurrected but only in the Land of Israel.

(71) Lit., 'that'.

(72) Lit., 'daughter of'.

(73) עם

(74) Isa. XLII, 5.

(75) עם.

(76) Gen. XXII, 5.

(77) The consonants עם being the same (cf. supra on. 7 and 9.)

(78) Sc. slaves who are considered the property of the master. As the 'people' spoken of in Isa. XLII, 5, are assured of a place in the world to come so are the 'people' referred to in Gen. XXII, 5. Moore describes this as 'a specimen of exegetical whimsicality, rather than an eccentricity of opinion' (Judaism, II, 380).

(79) Lit., 'son of'.

(80) Who based his view on Ezek. XXVI, 20, supra.

(81) Of Israel.

(82) But this, surely. is most improbable.

(83) Gen. XLVII, 30.

(84) To carry him to Canaan?

(85) Var. lec., 'because he did not accept the suffering of the pain of rolling through the cavities' (Yalkut and עין יעקב).

(86) Gen. L, 25.

(87) Of Israel.

(88) V. p.717, n. 19.

(89) Who lived in Palestine and desired him to join them,

(90) Rabbah b. Nahmani who wad domiciled in Pumbeditha in Babylonia (cf. supra p. 325, n. 5).

(91) V. Karna's remark supra.

(92) Who refused to leave her home country outside Palestine to join him in Palestine.

(93) Lit 'he rolled by himself'.

(94) Lit., ‘and who is he?’
(95) Pl. of תחתון ‘nethermost’, hence ‘piles’.
(96) Lit., ‘but’.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 111b

with nothing to lean against is standing with something to lean against.

And thus [his brothers][1] proceeded to say [in their message]: — ‘Isaac and Simeon and Oshaia were unanimous in their view that[2] the halachah is in agreement with R. Judah in [respect of the mating of] mules’. For it was taught: If a mule was craving for sexual gratification it must not be mated with a horse or an ass[3] but [only with one of] its own species.[4]

R.Nahman b. Isaac stated; By ‘Isaac’[5] was meant[6] R. Isaac Nappaha. By ‘Simeon’,[5] R. Simeon b. Pazzi — others say: Resh Lakish;[7] and by ‘Oshaia’,[8] R. Oshaia[8] Berabbi.[9]

R. Eleazar said; The illiterate[10] will not be resurrected, for it is said in Scripture, The dead will not live etc.[11] So it was also taught: The dead will not live.[11] As this might [be assumed to refer] to all, it was specifically stated, The lax[12] will not rise,[11] [thus indicating] that the text speaks only of such a man as was lax in the study of the words of the Torah.[13] Said R. Johanan to him:[14] it is no satisfaction to their Master[15] that you should speak to them in this manner. That text[16] was written of a man who was so lax as[17] to worship idols. ‘I’, the other[18] replied, ‘make an exposition [to the same effect] from another text. For it is written in Scripture, For thy dew is as the dew of light, and the earth shall bring to life the dead.[19] him who makes use of the ‘light’ of the Torah will the ‘light’ of the Torah revive, but him who makes no use of the light of the Torah[20] the light of the Torah will not revive’. Observing, however, that he[21] was distressed, he[18] said to him, ‘Master, I have found for them[22] a remedy in the Pentateuch: But ye that did cleave unto the Lord your God are alive every one of you this day;[23] now is it possible to ‘cleave’ to the divine presence concerning which it is written in Scripture, For the Lord thy God is a devouring fire?[24] But [the meaning is this:] Any man who marries his daughter to a scholar, or carries on a trade on behalf of scholars,[25] or benefits scholars from his estate is regarded by Scripture[26] as if he had cleaved to the divine presence.[27] Similarly you read in Scripture, To love the Lord thy God, [to hearken to His voice,] and to cleave unto Him.[28] Is it possible for a human being to ‘cleave’ unto the divine presence? But [what was meant is this:] Any man who marries his daughter to a scholar, or carries on a trade for scholars, or benefits scholars from his estate is regarded by Scripture as if he had cleaved to the divine presence.

R. Hiyya b. Joseph said: A time will come when the just will break through [the soil] and rise up in Jerusalem, for it is said in Scripture, And they will blossom out of the city like grass of the earth,[29] and by ‘city’ only Jerusalem can be meant for it is said in Scripture, For I will defend this city.[30]

R. Hiyya b. Joseph further stated: The just in the time to come will rise [apparelled] in their own clothes.[31] [This is deduced] a minori ad majus from a grain of wheat. If a grain of wheat that is buried[32] naked sprouts up with many coverings how much more so the just who are buried in their shrouds.

R. Hiyya b. Joseph further stated: There will be a time when the Land of Israel will produce baked cakes of the purest quality[33] and silk[34] garments, for it is said in Scripture, There will be a rich[35] cornfield[36] in the land.[37]

Our Rabbis taught: There will be a rich cornfield in the Land upon the top of the mountains.[37] [From this] it was inferred that there will be a time when wheat will rise as high as a palm-tree and will grow on the top of the mountains. But in case you should think that there will be trouble in reaping it, it was specifically said in Scripture, its fruit shall rustle like Lebanon;[37] the Holy One, blessed be He, will bring a wind from his treasure houses which He will cause to blow upon it. This will loosen its fine flour and a man will walk out into the field and take a mere handful[38] and, out of it, will [have sufficient provision for] his own, and his household's maintenance.

With the kidney-fat of wheat.[39] [From this] it was inferred that there will be a time when a grain of wheat will be as large as the two kidneys of a big bull. And you need not marvel at this, for a fox once made his nest In a turnip and when [the remainder of the vegetable] was weighed, it was found [to be] sixty pounds in the pound weight of Sepphoris.[40]

It was taught: R. Joseph[41] related: It once happened to a man[42] at Shihin[43] to whom his father had left three twigs of mustard that one of these split and was found to contain nine kab of mustard, and its timber sufficed to cover a potter's hut.

R. Simeon b. Tahlifa[44] related. Our father left us a cabbage stack and we[45] ascended and descended it by means of a ladder.[46] And of the blood of the grape thou drankest foaming wine.[47] It was inferred: The world to come is not like this world. In this world there is the trouble of harvesting and treading [of the grapes], but in the world to come a man will bring one grape[48] on a wagon or a ship, put it in a corner of his house and use its contents as [if it had been] a large wine cask, while its timber[49] would be used to make fires for cooking.[50] There will be no grape that will not contain thirty kegs[51] of wine, for it is said is Scripture, And of the blood of the grape thou drankest foaming wine,[52] read not 'foaming'[53] but homer.[54]

When R. Dimi came[55] he made the following statement: What is the implication in the Scriptural text, Binding his foal[56] unto the vine?[57] There is not a vine in the Land of Israel that does not require [all the inhabitants of] one city[58] to harvest it; And his ass's colt[59] into the choice[60] vine,[57] there is not even a wild[61] tree in the Land of Israel that does not produce a load of [fruit for] two she-asses.[62] In case you should imagine that it contains no wine, it was explicitly said in Scriptures, He washes his garments in wine.[57] And since you might say that it is not red it was explicitly stated, And of the blood of the grape thou drankest foaming wine.[63] And in case you should say that it does not cause intoxication it was stated, His vesture.[64] And in case you should think that it is tasteless it was expressly stated, His eyes shall be red[65] with wine,[66] any palate that will taste it says, 'To me, to me'.[67] And since you might say that it is suitable for young people but unsuitable for old, it was explicitly stated And his teeth white with milk;[66] read not, 'teeth white'[68] but 'To him who is advanced in years'.[69]

In what [sense] is the plain meaning of the text[70] to be understood?[71] — When R. Dimi came[72] he explained: The congregation of Israel said to the Holy One, blessed be He, 'Lord of the Universe, wink to me with Thine eyes,[73] which [to me will be] sweeter than wine, and shew[74] me Thy teeth which will be sweeter than milk'.[73] [This interpretation] provides support for R. Johanan who said; The man who [by smiling affectionately] shews[75] his teeth to his friend is better than one who gives bins milk to drink, for it is said in Scriptures, And his teeth white with milk,[70] read not 'teeth white' but 'shewing the teeth'.[76]

R. Hiyya b. Adda[77] was the Scriptural tutor of the young children of Resh Lakish. [On one occasion] he took a three days' holiday[78] and did not come [to teach the children]. 'Why', the other asked hiss when he returned, 'did you take a holiday?' 'My father', he replied, 'left me one espalier[79] and on the first day I cut from it three hundred clusters [of grapes], each cluster yielding one keg. On the second day I cut three hundred clusters, each two of which yielded one keg. On the third day I cut three hundred clusters, each three of which yielded one keg, and so I renounced my ownership of more than one half of it'. 'If you had not taken a holiday [from the Torah]', the other told him, 'it would have yielded much more'.[80]

Rami b. Ezekiel once paid a visit to Bene-berak[81] where he saw goats grazing under fig-trees while honey was flowing from the figs, and milk ran from them, and these mingled with each other. 'This is indeed', he remarked, '[a land] flowing with milk and honey'.[82]

R. Jacob b. Dostai related: From Lod[83] to Ono[84] [is a distance of about] three miles.[85] Once I rose up early in the morning and waded [all that way] up to my ankles in honey of the figs.

Resh Lakish said: I myself saw the flow of the milk and honey of Sepphoris[86] and it extended [over an area of] sixteen by sixteen miles.

Rabbah b. Bar Hana said: I saw the flow of the milk and honey in all the Land of Israel

---

(1) V. nn. 4-5.
(2) Lit., 'said one thing'.
(3) An act which is contrary to the law forbidding the hybridization of heterogeneous animals.
(4) Tosef. Kil. I, Hul. 79a.
(5) Referred to in the message supra
(6) Lit., 'this'.
(7) Sc. R. Simeon b. Lakish.
(8) MS.M., Hoshaia.
(9) Or 'Berebi'. A title of uncertain meaning. It denotes a scholar of any famous college or a qualified Rabbi who remained at college and acted as tutor to senior students. Cf. Mak. 5b, Sonc. ed. p. 25, n. 4 and Naz., Sonc. ed. p. 64, n. 1.
(10) עמי הארצות pl of 'Am ha-'arez v. Glos.
(11) Isa. XXVI, 14.
(12) רפאים cf. רפה, רפי 'to be or make lax'. A.V and R.V. 'deceased'; R.V. marg. and A. J. V., 'shades'.
(13) Sc. the illiterate (v. supra n. 9).
(14) A. Eleazar.
(15) God Who created all beings even the illiterate.
(16) Isa. XXVI, 14.
(17) Lit., 'who makes himself lax'.
(18) R. Eleazar.
(19) Isa. XXVI, 19.
(20) Sc. the illiterate who does not engage in the study of the Torah.
(21) R. Johanan.
(22) The illiterate.
(23) Deut. IV, 4, emphasis on 'cleave'.
(24) lbid. 24.
(25) Thus enabling them to devote their time to study. Aliter. Assigns them a share in his business as sleeping partners. V. Sanh., Sonc. ed. p. 671, n. 4.
(26) Lit 'Scripture brings up on him'.
(27) The illiterate (v. supra p. 719. n. 19) need not, therefore, be in despair since, by practising any of these alternatives, they also will be included among the resurrected.
(28) Deut. XXX, 20.
(29) Ps. LXXII, 16.
(30) Referring to Jerusalem. II Kings XIX, 34.
(31) Which they wore during their lifetime (J.T. cited by Tosaf. s.v. בלבושיהן a.I.). The noun in the present context apparently refers to the shrouds (v. Tosaf. loc. cit.) and this may also be the opinion of one authority in J.T. (cf. Marginal Glosses to text.).
(32) Sown.
(33) Cf. Rashi and Jast. גלוסקא, 'a brand of white flour' or 'a white and delicate bread'. (V. infra p. 721, nn. 2 and 3).

(34) Or ‘woollen’.
(35) Heb. פסת analogous to פסים (Gen. XXXVII, 3) (E.V. of many colours).
(36) Heb. בר signifies also ‘purity’.
(37) Ps. LXXII, 16.
(38) פיסת ידו (cf. supra n. 2).
(39) Deut. XXXII, 14.
(40) Cf. supra p. 410, n. 6.
(41) Read with MS.M. ‘R. Jose’.
(42) Halafta of Sepphoris.
(43) A town near Sepphoris.
(44) MS. M. and others (v. Wilna Gaon), ‘Halafta’.
(45) In order to gather its leaves.
(46) בסולם. MS. M., במעלות כסולם, ‘on steps as on a ladder’.
(47) Deut. XXXII, 14.
(48) Aliter: ‘Stalk of grapes’ (Jast.).
(49) The stalk of the grape. V. also p. 721, n. 15 Aliter: the wood of the cask which the husk had superseded (Maharsha).
(50) Lit., ‘under the dish’.
(51) Each measuring one se'ah (v. infra n. 5).
(52) Deut. XXXII, 14.
(53) חמר
(54) חמר the consonants of the two being identical A homer thirty se'ah.
(55) From Palestine to Babylon.
(56) עירה, absol. עיר (v. infra n 10)
(57) Gen XLIX, II.
(58) Heb. עיר (v. supra n. 8).
(59) אתונו, absol. אתון ‘she-ass’.
(60) שורקה v. infra n. 13).
(61) סרק analogous to סורקה the ש in שורקה (v. supra n. 12) being read as ס (cf. Maharsha)
(62) V. supra n. II. The number ‘two’ is perhaps derived from בני (in בני אתונו) which is taken as the pl. const. of בן and signifies no less than two.
(63) Deut. XXXII, 14. Read with MS.M. and עין יעקב, And his vesture in the blood of grapes, which is the conclusion of Gen. XLIX, 11, the text of the present exposition.
(64) סותה, derived from the rt. סות, ‘to incite’, ‘agitate’.
(65) חכלילי (v. infra n. 19).
(66) Gen. XLIX 12.
(67) חכלילי, (v.supra n. 17) is expounded as, the palate (will say:) To me, to me’
(68) לבן שנים
(69) לבן שנים lit., to a son of years’. לבן ‘white’ also means ‘to a son’, שנים ‘teeth’ may also mean, by a change of vowels ‘years’.
(70) Gen. XLIX. 12
(71) Lit. ‘is written’.
(72) From Palestine to Babylon
(73) חכלילי (cf. supra p. 722. nn. 17 and 19) is again read as חכ-לי-לי, but חכ is regarded as analogous to the rt. חוך ‘to laugh’, ‘to smile affectionately’, facial movements which involve the eyes and the teeth.
(74) V. infra note 6 and text.
(75) Lit., ‘makes white’ (cf. supra note 4).
(76) Lit., ‘whitening of the teeth’ (cf. supra l.c).
(77) [MS.M Abba; v. supra 8b].
(78) Lit., ‘he relaxed’.
(79) Or ‘a vine trained to an espalier’.
(80) Sc. the progressive daily decline of the yield was due to the corresponding increase in the number of days in which he failed to return to his sacred duty of teaching his pupils the word of God.

(81) One of the cities in the tribe of Dan (Josh XIX, 45); now the village Ibn Ibrak, north east of Jaffa (v. Horowitz, I.S , Palestine s.v.)
(82) Cf. e.g.. Ex. III, 8, Num. XIII, 27.
(83) Or Lydda, the Roman Diospolis, W.N.W. of Jerusalem.
(84) Modern Kafr Annah, between Jaffa and Lydda (v. supra note 2).
(85) The actual distance is rather seven miles (v. Horowitz, op. cit., s.v. אונו n. 1).
(86) V. supra p. 410. n. 6.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 112a

and [the total area] was equal [to the land extending] from Be Mikse[1] to the Fort of Tulbanke,[2] [an area of] twenty-two parasangs in length and six parasangs in breadth.

R. Helbo, R. 'Awira[3] and R. Jose b. Hanina once visited a certain place where a peach that was [as large] as a pot of Kefar Hino[4] was brought before them. (And how big is a pot of Kefar Hino? — Five se'ah.) One third [of the fruit] they ate, one third they declared free to all, and one third they put before their beasts. A year later R. Eleazar came there on a visit and [a peach] was brought to him. Taking it in his one hand[5] he exclaimed, A fruitful land into a salt waste, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.[6]

R. Joshua b. Levi once visited Gabla[7] where he saw vines laden with clusters of ripe grapes[8] standing up [to all appearances] like calves. 'Calves among the vines!', he remarked. 'These', they told him, 'are clusters of ripe grapes'.[8] 'Land, O Land', he exclaimed, 'withdraw thy fruit; for whom art thou yielding thy fruit? For those Arabs[9] who rose up against us on account of our sins?' Towards [the end[10] of that] year R. Hiyya happened to be there and saw them[11] standing up [to all appearances] like goats. 'Goats among the vines', he exclaimed. 'Go away', they told him, 'do not you treat us as your friend did'.

Our Rabbis taught: In the blessed years[12] of the Land of Israel a beth se'ah[13] yielded fifty thousand[14] kor[15] though in Zoan,[16] even in the days of its prosperity,[17] a beth se'ah yielded [no more than] seventy kor.[15] For it was taught: R. Meir said, I saw in the valley of Beth Shean[18] that a beth se'ah[13] yielded seventy kor.[15] Now, among all the countries there is none more fertile than the land of Egypt, for it is said in Scripture, Like the garden of the Lord, like the land of Egypt;[19] and there is no more fertile spot in all the land of Egypt than that of Zoan where kings were brought up, for it is written in Scripture, For his princes[20] are at Zoan.[21] Furthermore, in all the Land of Israel there is no ground more rocky than at Hebron[22] where the dead[23] were buried. Hebron was nevertheless seven times as fertile[24] as Zoan; for it is written in Scripture, And Hebron was built in seven years before Zoan in Egypt,[25] now what [can be the meaning of] built? If it be suggested that it was actually built, is it possible [It may be objected that] a man[26] would build a house[27] for his younger son[28] before he built one for his elder son,[29] it being stated in Scriptures And the sons of Ham, Cush and Mizraim, and Put and Canaan?[30] [The meaning must] consequently be[31] that it was seven times as fertile[32] as Zoan.[33] This refers to stony ground, but [in ground] where there are no stones [a beth se'ah would yield] five hundred [kor].[34] This too refers to periods when the land was not blessed,[35] but [of the time] when it was blessed[35] it is written in Scripture, And Isaac sowed in that land, [and found in the same year a hundredfold].[36]

It was taught: R. Jose stated, One se'ah[37] in Judea yielded five se'ah: One se'ah of flour, one se'ah of fine flour, one se'ah of bran, one se'ah of coarse bran and one se'ah of cibarium.

A certain Sadducee[38] once said to R Hanina: 'You may well sing the praises of your country. My father left me one beth se'ah[39] and from it [I obtain] oil, wine, corn and pulse, and my cattle also feed on it'.

An Amorite[40] once said to a Palestinian,[41] 'How much do you gather[42] from that date tree that stands on the bank of the Jordan?' — 'Sixty kor',[37] the other replied. 'You have not improved it'. the former said to him, 'but rather[43] ruined it; we used to gather[44] from it one hundred and twenty kor'. 'I too', the other replied 'was speaking to you [of the yield] of one side only'.

R. Hisda stated: What [was meant] by the Scriptural text, I give thee a pleasant land, the heritage of the deer?[45] Why was the Land of Israel compared to a deer? — To tell you that as the skin of a deer[46] cannot contain its flesh[47] so cannot the Land of Israel contain its produce.[48] Another explanation: As the deer is the swiftest among the animals so is the Land of Israel the swiftest of all lands in the ripening of its fruit. In case[49] [one should suggest that] as the deer is swift but his flesh is not fat so is the Land of Israel swift to ripen but its fruits are not rich, it was explicitly stated in Scripture, Flowing with milk and honey[50] [thus indicating that they are] richer than milk and sweeter than honey.

When R. Eleazar went up to the Land of Israel he remarked, 'I have escaped [one penalty]'.[51] When he was ordained he said, 'I have now escaped two [penalties]'.[51] When he was given a seat on the council for intercalation he exclaimed, 'I have escaped the three [penalties]'; for it is said in Scripture, And My hand shall be against the prophets that see vanity etc. They shall not be in the council of My people,[52] which refers to[53] the council for intercalation, neither shall they be written in the register of the house of Israel,[52] refers to[53] ordination; neither shall they enter into the land of Israel[52] [is to be understood] in accordance with its plain meaning.

When R. Zera went up to the Land of Israel and could not find a ferry wherein to cross [a certain river][54] he grasped a rope bridge and crossed. Thereupon a certain Sadducee sneered at him: 'Hasty people, that put your mouths before your ears,[55] you are still, as ever, clinging to your hastiness'. 'The spot', the former replied. 'which Moses and Aaron were not worthy [of entering] who could assure me that I should be worthy [of entering]?' R. Abba[56] used to kiss the cliffs of Akko.[57] R. Hanina[56] used to repair its roads.[58] R. Ammi and R. Assi[59]

---

(1) V. supra p. 408, n. 9.

(2) The latter was a place on Tel-ben-kaneh, one of the upper reaches of the Euphrates on the boundary between Babylonia and Palestine. Cf. Kid. Sonc. ed. p. 365. n. 8; Horowitz, op. cit. s.v. אקרא דתולבנקי; S. Funk, Juden in Bab. I, p. 13, n. 2.

(3) MS.M. עזריה

(4) [Identified by Klein (Beitrage, p. 184) with Kefar Hananiah in Galilee].

(5) It was so small.

(6) Ps. CVII, 34.

(7) Biblical Gebal, a district between Ammon and Amalek (cf. Ps. LXXXIII, 8) now known as A-gibal, S.E. of the Dead Sea. This Gebal is not to be confused with Gebal, a Zidonian town in the N.W. of Palestine (v. Horowitz, op. cit., s.v.).

(8) קטופי, pl. of קטופא (rt. קטף 'to pluck'), 'fruit ready to be plucked'.

(9) Bomb. ed., 'heathens'.

(10) So Rashi. Cf Maharsha.

(11) The clusters of grapes.

(12) So Rashi. Lit. . 'In her blessings'.

(13) An area of fifty cubits by fifty in which one se'ah (v. Glos.) of seed can be sown.

(14) Lit., 'five myriads'.

(15) V. Glos.

(16) In the land of Egypt.

(17) Lit., 'settlement'.

(18) In the Jordan plain, about twenty miles to the south of Tiberias. The town of Beth Shean is mentioned several times in the Bible (cf. e.g., Josh. XVII. 11 and 16, Judges I, 27, I Sam. XXXI, 10, I Chron. VII, 29). The town once belonged to Egypt (it occurs in the Tel-el-Amarna letters under the name of Bitsani) while at other times in its history it formed part of the Land of Israel. In the post exilic period it belonged neither to the former nor (cf. Hul. 6b, 7a) the latter country, and is taken by R. Meir here as an example of the normal fertility of a neutral district in order to draw the inference that follows.

(19) Gen. XIII, 10.
(20) Sc. rulers, kings. Aliter: the princes of Israel flocked to Zoan to solicit the protection of the kings of Egypt (v. Rashi).
(21) Isa. XXX, 4.
(22) Sixteen miles S.S.W. of Jerusalem.
(23) Cf. Gen. XLIX, 31.
(24) Lit., 'built', 'cultivated'.
(25) Num. XIII, 22.
(26) Ham (v. Gen. X, 6)
(27) And much less a whole town.
(28) Canaan (v. ibid.).
(29) Mizraim (ibid.).
(30) Ibid.
(31) Lit., 'but'.
(32) Lit., 'built', 'cultivated'.
(33) Seven times seventy kor _ four hundred and ninety kor.
(34) At least; only ten more than rocky ground (v. supra n. 9).
(35) Cf. supra p. 725, n. 5.
(36) Gen. XXVI, 12. A hundred times five hundred _ five thousand (v. supra p. 725, nn. 7 and 10 and text).
(37) V. Glos.
(38) [Read with MS. M. Min (v. Glos.) and cf. Git 57a].
(39) Cf. supra p. 725, n. 6.
(40) Of the early inhabitants of Canaan (cf. e.g., Gen. XV, 21).
(41) Lit., 'to a son (inhabitant) of the Land of Israel'; to an Israelite who entered Palestine in the days of Joshua.
(42) Or 'cut' (cf. MS. M. גדריתון).
(43) Cf. Bah.
(44) Cf. supra n. 18.
(45) Jer. III, 19; נחלת צבי, A.V., goodly heritage.
(46) After it had been flayed.
(47) It cannot again be made to cover the full body of the animal.
(48) It grows in such abundance that all the store houses of the land cannot provide sufficient accommodation for its storage.
(49) Lit., 'if'.
(50) V. e.g., Ex. III, 8, Num. XIV, 8.
(51) This is explained anon.
(52) Ezek. XIII. 9.
(53) Lit., 'this'.
(54) The Jordan?
(55) Israel said נעשה, 'we will do' before ונשמע 'and we will hear' (Ex XXIV, 7).
(56) In his love for Palestine.
(57) Acre Or Ptolemais, a city and harbour on the northern end of Haifa Bay on the coast of Palestine.
(58) Lit., 'its stumblings', 'obstacles'.
(59) Cf. p. 727, n. 12.

Talmud - Mas. Kethuboth 112b

used to rise [from their seats[1] to move] from the sun to the shade[2] and from the shade to the sun.[3] R. Hiyya b. Gamda[4] rolled himself in its[5] dust, for it is said in Scripture, For Thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and love her dust.[6]

R. Zera said: R. Jeremiah b. Abba stated, 'In the generation in which the son of David[7] will come there will be prosecution[8] against scholars'. When I repeated this statement in the presence of Samuel, he exclaimed, [There will be] test after test,[9] for it is said in Scripture, And if there be yet a tenth in it, it shall again be eaten up.[10]

R. Joseph learnt:[11] [There will be] plunderers[12] and plunderers of the plunderers.[13]

R. Hiyya b. Ashi stated in the name of Rab: In the time to come all the wild trees of the Land of Israel will bear fruit; for it is said in Scripture, For the tree[14] beareth its fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength.[15]

---

(1) Where they sat while delivering their discourses.

(2) In the summer when the heat is intense.

(3) In the cold days of the winter. In order to obviate any fault finding with the weather of Palestine (Rashi).

(4) In his love for Palestine.

(5) Palestine's.

(6) Ps. CII, 15.

(7) The Messiah.

(8) קטיגוריא

(9) Trials and calamities will follow each other in close succession. 'One reduction after the other' (Jast.). MS.M. adds, בוגדים בגדו ובגד בוגדים בגדו. (Isa. XXIV, 16) the assonance of which might have suggested R. Joseph's comment (v. infra n. 15).

(10) Isa. VI, 13.

(11) An exposition of the Isaiah text cited (v.supra n. 12). [Cf. Targum a.l. and B.K., Sonc. ed. p. 9. n. 9].

(12) Who will leave only 'a tenth of it'.

(13) Inferred from 'shall again be eaten up'. Aram. ובזוזי דבזוזי בזוזי (cf. supra note 11).

(14) Sc. 'the wild tree', since fruit-trees are specifically mentioned in the following clause (Rashi).

(15) Joel II, 22.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 2a

C H A P T E R I

MISHNAH. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS.[1] THOSE FOR HARAMIM ARE LIKE HARAMIM,[2] THOSE FOR OATHS ARE LIKE OATHS, AND THOSE FOR NEZIROTH ARE LIKE NEZIROTH.[3] IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW, [OR] I AM SEPARATED FROM YOU,' [OR] 'I AM REMOVED FROM YOU, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT[4] THAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE OF YOURS,' HE IS PROHIBITED. IF HE SAYS: I AM BANNED TO YOU,' THEN R. AKIBA WAS INCLINED TO GIVE A STRINGENT RULING.[5]

---

(1) The principal form of a vow to abstain from anything is: 'This shall be to me as a korban (Heb. sacrifice); korban was sometimes substituted by konam or konas.

(2) Herem (plural haramim): a vow dedicating something to the Temple or the priests.

(3) Neziroth: the vow of a nazirite. A nazirite had to abstain from grapes and intoxicating liquors and refrain from cutting his hair and defiling himself through the dead.

(4) [Reading שאנו, Var. lec. שאינו 'for I will eat naught of yours'.]

(5) I.e., declared the vow binding. [According to Maimonides, provided he adds: 'for I will eat naught of yours'. Tosaf., however, (infra 7a) holds that the phrase by itself implies a vow to abstain from aught belonging to the other person.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 2b

GEMARA. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS: Why other clauses[1] not stated in [the Mishnah of] Nazir,[2] whilst [our Mishnah of] Nedarim includes them all? — Because oaths and Vows are written side by side [in the Bible][3] they are both stated, and since the two are mentioned, the others are stated also. Then let OATHS be taught immediately after VOWS? — Because he states vows In which the article is forbidden to the person, he follows it up with HARAMIM, where likewise the article is forbidden to the person. OATHS, however, are excluded [from the category of vows], since oaths bind the person to abstain from a thing;[4] [hence they cannot immediately follow vows].

The Mishnah commences with substitutes: ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR [THE FORMULAS OF] VOWS etc., yet proceeds to explain the laws of abbreviations of VOWS: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR: I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW . . . WITH HIS VOW;[5] moreover, [the Tanna] has altogether omitted to state that abbreviations [are binding]? — [The Tanna does] speak of them, but our text is defective,[6] and this is what was really meant: ALL SUBSTITUTES and abbreviations OF VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS. Then let substitutes be first explained? — The clause to which [the Tanna] has last referred is generally first explained, as we have learned: Wherewith may [the Sabbath lights] be kindled, and wherewith may they not be kindled? They may not be kindled etc.[7] Wherein may food be put away [to be kept hot for the Sabbath], and wherein may it not be put away? It may not be put away [etc.].[8] Wherewith may a woman go out (from her house on the Sabbath], and wherewith may she not go out? She may not go out from etc.[9] [Is it then a universal rule] that the first clause is never explained first? But we have learnt: Some relations inherit from and transmit [their estate] to others; some inherit but do not transmit. Now, these relations inherit from and transmit to each other etc.[10] Some women are permitted to their husbands but forbidden to their husbands' brothers;[11] others are the reverse. Now, these are permitted to their husbands but forbidden to their husbands' brothers etc.[12] Some meal offerings require oil and frankincense, others require oil but no frankincense. Now, these require both oil and frankincense etc.[13] Some mealofferings must be taken [by the priest to the south-west corner of the altar], but do not need waving;[14] others are the reverse. Now, these must be taken to the altar etc.[15] Some are treated as first-borns in respect of inheritance[16] but not in respect of the priest;[17] others are treated as first-borns in respect of the priest but not in respect of inheritance. Now who is regarded as a first-born in respect of inheritance but not in respect of the priest etc.?[18] — In these examples [the first clause is explained first] because it contains numerous instances [to which its law applies]. But, 'Wherewith may a beast go out on the Sabbath, and wherewith may it not go out?' where [the first clause does] not contain numerous instances, yet it is explained [first], viz., a camel may go out etc.?

---

(1) Viz., HARAMIM, OATHS, AND VOWS.

(2) The tractate Nazir commences likewise: All substitutes for the nazirite vow are binding.

(3) Num. XXX, 3: If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath.

(4) A vow is thus taken: 'This shall be forbidden tonic,' the prohibition falling upon the thing. An oath, however, is thus taken: 'I swear to abstain from a certain thing,' the prohibition falling upon the person.

(5) Since the principal way of making a vow is to declare a thing to be as korban, the omission of such a declaration renders the vow merely an abbreviation or suggestion (lit., 'a handle') of a vow, V. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 2.

(6) This may mean either that there is actually a lacuna in the text, words having fallen out, or that though it is correct in itself something has to be supplied to complete the sense; v. Weiss, Dor. III, p. 6. n. 14. The former is the most probable here.

(7) Shab. 20b.

(8) Ibid. 47b.

(9) Ibid. 57a. — In all these examples the second clause is first discussed.

(10) B.B. 108a.

(11) In Levirate marriage, v. Deut. XXV, 5 seq.

(12) Yeb. 84a.

(13) Men. 59a.

(14) A ceremony in which the priest put his hands under those of the person bringing the offering and waved them to and fro in front of the altar.

(15) Ibid. 60a

(16) I.e., they receive a double share of their patrimony; v. Deut. XXI, 17.

(17) They do not need redemption: v. Ex. XIII, 23.

(18) Bek. 46a. In all these examples the first clause is discussed first.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 3a

Hence there is no fixed rule: sometimes the first clause is explained first, at others the last clause is first explained. Alternatively: abbreviations are explained first, because they [sc. their validity] are deduced by exegesis.[1] Then let these be stated first? He [the Tanna] commences indeed with substitutes, since these are Scriptural,[2] and proceeds to explain abbreviations, which are inferred by interpretation only.[3] This harmonises with the view that substitutes are merely the foreign equivalents [of the word korban].[4] But what can be said on the view that they are forms expressly invented by the Sages for the purpose of making vows?[5] — Now, are abbreviations mentioned at all; were you not compelled to assume a defective text? Then indeed place abbreviations first. Thus: All abbreviations of VOWS have the validity of VOWS, and ALL SUBSTITUTES FOR VOWS HAVE THE VALIDITY OF VOWS. These are the abbreviations: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR . . . And these are the substitutes: Konam, konas, konah.[6]

Now, where are abbreviations written? — When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow [lindor neder] of a nazirite [nazir le-hazzir];[7] and it has been taught: Nazir le-hazzir is to render substitutes and abbreviations of neziroth as neziroth.[8] From this I may infer only the law of neziroth; whence do we know that it applies to other vows too? This is taught by the verse: When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a nazirite to the Lord:[9] here ordinary vows are compared to neziroth and vice versa.[10] Just as in neziroth abbreviations are equally binding, so in the case of other vows; and just as in other vows, he who does not fulfil them violates the injunctions: He shall not break his word,[11] and Thou shalt not delay to pay it,[12] so in neziroth. And just as in other vows, the father can annul those of his daughter and the husband those of his wife, so with neziroth.

Wherein does neziroth differ? Because it is written nazir lehazzir! But [in the case of] vows too it is written, lindor neder;[13] then what need is there of analogy? — If the text were neder lindor just as 'nazir le-hazzir', it would be as you say, and the analogy would be unnecessary,' since however, 'lindor neder' is written, the Torah spoke in the language of men.[14] This agrees with the view that the Torah spoke in the language of men; but he who maintains that the Torah did not speak in the language of men,[15] to what purpose does he put this 'lindor neder'? — He interprets it to deduce that abbreviations of vows are as VOWS, and then neziroth is compared to vows; and as to 'nazir le-hazzir' he interprets it as teaching

---

(1) But not explicitly stated in the Bible.

(2) I.e., their validity is explicitly stated in the Bible.

(3) When stating the law in general terms there is a preference for that which is best known; hence, substitutes, being explicitly taught, are first mentioned. But when going into details, the Tanna prefers to deal first with the lesser known.

(4) Hence their validity may be regarded as explicitly stated in the Bible, since it obviously does not matter in which language a vow is taken.

(5) V. infra, 10a.

(6) V. infra 9a.

(7) Num. VI. 2.

(8) Sc. equally binding.

(9) Ibid.

(10) Since they are coupled together. This method of exegesis is known as hekkesh.

(11) Ibid. XXX, 3.

(12) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(13) Lit., 'to vow a vow — likewise a pleonastic form.

(14) The point is this: The usual grammatical form is for the verb to precede its cognate object. Hence, when this order is reversed, as in nazir le-hazir, one may directly infer something from the unusual order. When it is observed, however, nothing can be inferred.

(15) So that every pleonasm, even if in accordance with the general idiom, gives an additional teaching.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 3b

that one nazirite vow falls upon another.[1] Then he who maintains that the Torah spoke in the language of men, and interprets 'nazir le-hazzir' as teaching the validity of abbreviations of neziroth, whence does he learn that a nazirite vow can fall upon another? If he agrees with the view that a nazirite vow does not fall upon another, it is well; but if he agrees with the view that it does, whence does he know it? — Let Scripture say, li-zor [the kal form]; why 'le-hazzir' [the causative]? That you may infer both from it.[2] In the West[3] it was said: One Tanna deduces [the validity of] abbreviations from 'lindor neder'; whilst another deduces it from [the 'phrase], he shall do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.[4]

The Master said: 'And just as in other vows, he who does not fulfil them violates the injunctions, he shall not break his wad, and thou shalt not delay to pay it, so in neziroth.' Now, as for 'he shall not break his word' as applying to [ordinary] vows, it is well: it is possible e.g., if one says, 'I vow to eat this loaf', and does not eat it; he violates the injunction, 'he shall not break his word'. But how is, 'he shall not break [his word],' possible in the case of neziroth.? For, as soon as one says, 'Behold, I am a nazir' he is one; if he eats [grapes], he is liable for, nor eat moist drapes or dried;[5] if he drinks [wine], he violates, he . . . shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes.[6] — Raba answered: It is to transgress two [injunctions].[7] How is 'thou shalt not delay to pay it,' referring to neziroth, conceivable? [For] as soon as one says 'Behold, I am a nazir', he is one; if he eats [grapes], he transgresses, 'neither' shall he . . . eat moist grapes or dried?' — When one says: 'when I wish, I will be a nazir'.[8] But if he says, 'when I wish', the injunction 'thou shalt not delay' does not apply?[9] — Said Raba: E.g., if he says, 'I must not depart this world before having been a nazir,' for he becomes a nazir from that moment.[10] For this is similar to one who says to his wife: 'Here is your divorce, [to take effect] one hour before my death,' where she is immediately forbidden to eat terumah.[11] Thus we see that we fear[12] that he may die at any moment: so here[13] too, he becomes a nazir immediately, for we say, Perchance he will die now.

---

(1) A nazirite vow for an unspecified period means for thirty days. If one who is already a nazir takes a nazirite vow, it is binding, and becomes operative when the first ends. Thus he translates: a nazir can take a vow le-hazir, to become a nazir after his present vow terminates, v. infra isa.

(2) The heavier form le-hazzir implies intensity, therefore it is interpreted as meaning something additional to what might be inferred from the kal li-zor, which itself being pleonastic allows us to infer something not explicit in the verse.

(3) I.e., the Palestinian academies.

(4) Num. XXX, 3: this embraces every form in which a vow can be made.

(5) Ibid. VI, 3.

(6) Ibid. [It is assumed that the injunction 'he shall not break his word' can apply only to a case where the vow is nullified by his action, e.g., where he vows to eat and he does not eat, but not where he, for instance, vows not to eat and he does eat, where the vow has not been nullified but transgressed: and similarly in the case of a nazir.]

(7) [Raba extends the scope of the injunction to include cases where the oath is transgressed: and thus by drinking wine he transgresses 'he shall it drink', in addition to 'he shall not break his word'.]

(8) If he postpones becoming a nazir, he violates, 'thou shalt not delay etc'.

(9) Since there is no vow until he so desires.

(10) Not actually, but in the sense that he must assume his naziriteship without delay lest he dies the next moment.

(11) V. Glos.

(12) Lit., 'we say'.

(13) In the case of a nazirite.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 4a

R. Aha b. Jacob said: E.g., if one takes a nazirite vow whilst in a cemetery.[1] This agrees with the view that the naziriteship is not immediately binding. But on the view that it is immediately valid, is then, 'he shall not delay,' applicable?[2] Moreover, Mar, son of R. Ashi, said: The vow is immediately valid, and they differ[3] only on the question of flagellation? — Nevertheless he violates, 'thou shalt not delay,' because the [ritually] clean naziriteship is delayed. R. Ashi said: Since this is so, [it follows that] if a nazir intentionally defiles himself, he transgresses thou shalt not delay in respect to [the recommencement of] the clean naziriteship.

R. Aha, the son of R. Ika, said: He[4] might transgress 'that shalt not delay' in respect to shaving.[5] Now, this goes without saying according to the view that shaving is indispensable,[6] but even on the view that the shaving is not a bar [to the sacrifices], nevertheless he does not observe the precept of shaving. Mar Zutra the son of R. Mari said: He might violate 'Thou shalt not delay' in respect to his sacrifices. Is this deduced from here; surely, it is rather inferred from elsewhere: [When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord, thou shalt not slack to pay it, for the Lord thy God] will surely require it of thee:[7] this refers to sin-offerings and trespass-offerings?[8] — I might say that the Torah set up an anomaly[9] in the case of nazir.[10] What is the anomaly? Shall we say, the fact that a vow to bring the sin-offering of a nazir[11] is invalid: but a sin-offering for heleb[12] cannot be made obligatory by a vow,[13] yet one transgresses, 'thou shalt not delay'? But the anomaly is this: I might have thought, since even if one says, 'I will be a nazir only with respect to the kernels of grapes,'[14] he is a nazir in all respects. I would think that he does not violate, Thou shalt not delay'; therefore we are told [otherwise].[15] , Now, this is well according to the opinion that a vow of naziriteship in respect of the kernels of grapes makes one a nazir in all respects; but on the view of R. Simeon, viz., that one is not a nazir unless he separates himself from all, what can be said? Moreover, this is an anomaly in the direction of greater stringency?[16] — But the anomaly is this: I might have thought, since

---

(1) A nazir may not defile himself through the dead. Consequently the vow does not become immediately operative, but he must not delay to leave the cemetery so that it shall become binding.

(2) Surely not, for he is an actual nazir, subject to all the provisions of a nazir.

(3) Sc. R. Johanan and Resh Lakish, in Nazir 16b.

(4) The nazirite.

(5) After the completion of his naziriteship: v. Num. VI, 9, and thus violate the injunction 'thou shalt not delay'.

(6) Lit., 'hinders' — the offering of the sacrifices on the completion of naziriteship, hence delay in shaving involves a delay in sacrifices.

(7) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(8) And this would cover the case of a nazirite. For what purpose then the application of the verse 'thou shalt not delay' to the nazirite?

(9) Lit., 'a novelty' — as such it cannot be included in other general laws, as it is a principle of exegesis that an anomaly stands in a class by itself.

(10) Which includes a nazir's sacrifices.

(11) By one who is not nazirite.

(12) Forbidden fat.

(13) A vow to bring a sin-offering which is normally due for eating heleb is not binding if the vower is not actually liable.

(14) V. Num. VI, 4.

(15) By the coupling of the nazirite vow with other vows in the same sentence.

(16) How then would we think that the injunction does not apply, so that it is more lenient if he shaves himself for one [sacrifice] of the three, he fulfils his duty.[1] therefore he should not be subject to, 'Thou shalt not delay'; hence we are told [that it is not so]. An alternative answer is this: the anomaly is that it cannot be vowed; but as to your difficulty of the sin-offering for heleb,[2] — the sin-offering for heleb comes for atonement,[3] but for what does the sin-offering of anal come?[4] But the sin-offering of a woman who gave birth,[5] which does not come for an atonement, yet one violates, 'thou shalt not delay' on account thereof? — That permits her to eat of sacrifices.[6]

The Master said: 'And just as in other vows, the father can annul those of his daughter and the husband those of his wife, so in the case of neziroth, the father can annul the neziroth of his daughter and the husband that of his wife'. But what need is there of analogy; let us infer it from VOWS by general similarity?[7] — Perhaps he can annul only in the case of other vows, because their duration is unlimited; but with respect to neziroth, the duration of which is limited — for an unspecified vow of neziroth is for thirty days, — I might say that it is not so.[8] Hence we are informed [otherwise].[9]

IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, I AM DEBARRED FROM YOU BY A VOW' etc. Samuel said: In all these instances he must say, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours'. An objection is raised: [If one says to his neighbour], 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' [or] 'I am separated from you.' [or] 'I am removed from you', he is forbidden [to derive any benefit from him]. [If he says,] 'That which I might eat or taste of yours' [shall be to me prohibited], he is forbidden![10] — This is what is taught: When is this? If he adds 'in respect of aught that I might eat or taste of yours.' But the reverse was taught: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'That which I might eat or taste of yours' [shall be prohibited to me], he is forbidden; 'I am debarred from you by a vow', [or] 'I am separated from you', [or] 'I am removed from you,' he is [likewise] forbidden! — Read thus: Providing that he had first said, 'I am debarred from you, etc.'[11] If so, it is identical with the first [Baraitha]?[12] Moreover, why teach further, 'he is forbidden' twice?[13] — But this is what Samuel really said: Because he said, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours', the maker of the vow alone is forbidden while his neighbour is permitted;[14]

---

(1) A nazir at the termination of his vow is bound to bring three sacrifices, viz., a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and a peace-offering. Yet if he shaves and brings only one, the prohibitions of a nazir, such as the drinking of wine, etc., are lifted. This is a unique law, and in the direction of greater leniency.

(2) Supra p. 7, n. 10.

(3) Hence one violates the injunction by delaying to make atonement.

(4) Though technically a sin-offering, it is, in fact, merely part of a larger vow. Hence it is an anomaly that it cannot be vowed separately.

(5) V. Lev. XII, 6ff.

(6) Which may be an obligation. e.g., the eating of the Passover sacrifice. Hence 'thou shalt not delay' is applicable.

(7) Since naziriteship is a form of vow. [מה מצינו Lit., 'as we find concerning', a method of hermeneutics whereby an analogy is drawn from one case for one single similar case, as distinct from hekkesh (supra p. 4, n. 6) where the analogy is based on the close connection of the two subjects in one and the same context.]

(8) Since the vow will automatically lapse.

(9) By the analogy.

(10) The first clause proves that the vow is valid without the addition.

(11) According to this rendering, the bracketed 'shall be prohibited to me' must be deleted.

(12) Why then is the order reversed? This difficulty arises in any case. But if each clause is independent, it can be answered that the second Baraitha intentionally reverses the clauses, so as to make their independence obvious, since the interpretation 'providing that he had first said' is forced; whilst in the first Baraitha the assumption that the second clause is an addition to the first is quite feasible.

(13) Seeing that the whole refers to one vow.

(14) To benefit from him.

but if he merely says. 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden. Just as R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: [If one says to his neighbour] 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden.

We learnt: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'Behold! I am herem[1] to you,' the muddar[2] is forbidden.[3] But the maddir[2] is not [forbidden]?[4] — E.g., if he explicitly states, 'but you are not [herem] to me'. [But does it not continue,] 'You are herem to me', the maddir is forbidden, [implying,] but not the muddar? — E.g., if he explicitly states, 'but you are not [herem] to me.' But what if it is not explicit: both are forbidden? But since the final clause teaches,' I am [herem] to you and you are [herem] to me,' both are forbidden, it is only in that case that both are forbidden, but in general he is forbidden while his neighbour is permitted?[5] But this is how R. Jose son of R. Hanina's [dictum] was stated: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'I am under a vow in respect of you,' both are forbidden; 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' he is forbidden but his neighbour is permitted. But our Mishnah teaches, 'FROM YOU, yet our Mishnah was explained according to Samuel that in all cases he must say, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours' — only then is he [alone] forbidden while his neighbour is permitted, but in the case of, 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' both are forbidden? But this is what was originally stated in Samuel's name: It is only because he said, 'in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours,' that he is forbidden only in respect of eating. But [if he only said,] 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' he is forbidden even benefit. If so, let Samuel state thus: But if he did not say, 'In respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours,' even benefit is forbidden to him?[6] But this is what was stated: Only if he says, in respect of aught that I might eat of yours or that I might taste of yours', is he forbidden; but if he [merely] says, 'I am debarred from you by a vow,' it does not imply a prohibition at all. What is the reason? 'I am debarred from you,' [implies] 'I am not to speak to you ; 'I am separated from you' [implies] 'I all, to do no business with you'; 'I am removed from you' implies, 'I am not to stand within four cubits of you'.

---

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Muddar is the object of the vow; maddir is the man who makes the vow.

(3) Infra 47b.

(4) This contradicts Samuel's dictum that without the addition the incidence of the vow is reciprocal.

(5) Which contradicts R. Jose b. R. Hanina.

(6) So the text as amended by Bah.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 5b

Shall we say Samuel holds the opinion that inexplicit abbreviations are not abbreviations?[1] — Yes. Samuel makes the Mishnah agree with R. Judah, who maintained: Inexplicit abbreviations are not abbreviations. For we learnt: The essential part of a Get[2] is, 'Behold, thou art free unto all men'. R Judah said: [To this must be added] 'and this [document] shall be unto thee from me a deed of dismissal and a document of release.'[3] Now, what forced Samuel to thus interpret the Mishnah, so as to make it agree with R. Judah: let him, make it agree with the Rabbis, that even inexplicit abbreviations [are binding]?[4] Said Raba: The Mishnah presents a difficulty to him: Why state, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT THAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE OF YOURS, let him teach, IN RESPECT OF AUGHT THAT I MIGHT EAT OR THAT I MIGHT TASTE [and no more]? This proves that we require explicit abbreviations.

It was stated: Inexplicit abbreviations — Abaye maintained: They are [valid] abbreviations; while Raba said: They are not [valid] abbreviations. Raba said: R. Idi explained the matter to me. Scripture says, [When either a man or a woman shall] explicitly law a vow of a nazirite, to separate themselves unto the Lord: abbreviations of neziroth are compared to neziroth: just as neziroth must be explicit in meaning, so must their abbreviations be too.

Are we to say that they differ in the dispute of R. Judah and the Rabbis? For we learnt: The essential part of a Get is the words, 'Behold, thou art free unto all men.' R. Judah said: [To this must be added,] 'and this [document] shall be unto thee from me a deed of dismissal and a document of discharge and a letter of release': [Thus] Abaye rules as the Rabbis, and Raba as R. Judah? — [No.] Abaye may assert: My opinion agrees even with R. Judah's. Only in divorce does R. Judah insist that abbreviations shall be explicit, because 'cutting off'[5] is necessary, and this is lacking;[6] but do you know him to require it elsewhere too? Whilst Raba can maintain, My view agrees even with that of the Rabbis. Only in the case of divorce do they say that explicit abbreviations are not essential,

---

(1) I.e., invalid. For the above forms are such, and Samuel maintains that they impose no prohibition at all without the explanatory clauses.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) Otherwise it is not clear that the divorce is to be effected by the Get. Thus he holds that inexplicit abbreviations are invalid.

(4) [For unless Samuel had cogent reasons to make the Mishnah agree only with R. Judah, he himself would not have accepted the view of R. Judah in preference to that of the majority of Rabbis (Ran).]

(5) [Referring to Deut. XXIV, 3: 'And he shall write unto her a writ of cutting off' (so literally).]

(6) If the abbreviation is inexplicit the severance is not complete.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 6a

because no man divorces his neighbour's wife;[1] but do you know then, [to rule thus] elsewhere?[2]

An objection is raised: [If one says,] 'That is to me,' [or] 'this is to me,' he is forbidden,[3] because it is an abbreviation of ['that is as a] korban [to me].'[4] Thus, the reason is that he said, 'unto me,' but if he did not say, 'unto me,' it is not so:[5] this refutes Abaye? — Abaye replies thus: It is only because he said, 'to me,' that he is forbidden; but if he [merely] said, 'behold, that is,' without adding 'to me' he might have meant, 'behold, that is hefker,'[6] or 'that is for charity.'[7] But is it not stated, 'because it is an abbreviation of, "a korban?"'[8] — But answer thus: Because he said, 'to me,' he [alone] is forbidden, but his neighbour is permitted; but if he said, 'behold, that is', both are forbidden, because he may have meant,[9] 'behold that is hekdesh.[10]

An objection is raised: [If one says,] 'Behold, this [animal] is a sin-offering,' 'this is a trespass-offering,' though he is liable to a sin-offering or a trespass-offering, his words are of no effect. [But if he says,] 'Behold, this animal is my sin-offering,' or 'my trespass-offering,' his declaration is effectual if he was liable. Now, this is a refutation of Abaye![11] — Abaye answers: This agrees with R. Judah.[12] But Abaye said, My ruling agrees even with R. Judah?[12] — Abaye retracted. Are we to say [then] that Raba's ruling agrees [only] with R. Judah's?[13] — No. Raba may maintain: My view agrees even with that of the Rabbis. Only in the case of divorce do they say that explicit abbreviations are not essential, because no man divorces his neighbour's wife; but elsewhere explicit abbreviations are required.

---

(1) I.e., even if the wording is inexplicit, the whole transaction makes its meaning perfectly clear. [This argument makes it evident that the point at issue between R. Judah and the Rabbis is mainly concerning the phrase [from me', the Rabbis being of the opinion that since no man divorces his neighbour's wife, it is clear that the Get comes 'from him' (Ran); v. Git. 85b.]

(2) Elsewhere they may agree that inexplicit allusions are invalid.

(3) To benefit from it.

(4) So Rashi and Asheri. [Alternatively: Because it is an abbreviation valid for a korban (an offering), and therefore also valid in case of a vow.]

(5) Because it is an inexplicit abbreviation.

(6) Ownerless property. V. Glos.

(7) Hence it is not an abbreviation of a vow at all.

(8) [This is difficult. The meaning apparently is that the reason that it is an abbreviation valid for a korban, (v. n. 2) ought to apply also to the declaration 'that is' by itself, since such a declaration too is valid for a korban; v. Ran.]

(9) [Where the object vowed was not fit for sacrifice; v. n. 6.]

(10) Sanctified property. V. Glos.

(11) Since in the first clause the abbreviation is invalid because it is inexplicit.

(12) V. supra 5b.

(13) Since Abaye's view agrees only with that of the Rabbis.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 6b

R. Papa enquired: Are abbreviations valid in the case of kiddushin,[1] or not? Now, how does this problem arise? Shall we say thus: If one said to a woman, 'Behold, thou art betrothed unto me, and said to her companion, 'and thou too,' it is obvious that this is actual kiddushin?[2] — But e.g., If one said to a woman, 'Behold, thou art betrothed unto me,' and then to her companion, 'and thou'. Do we assume that he meant 'and thou too,' and so the second is betrothed;[3] or perhaps he said to her companion, 'and do thou witness it', and so she is not betrothed?

But is R. Papa really in doubt? But since he said to Abaye. Does Samuel hold that inexplicit abbreviations are valid?[4] it follows that he [R. Papa] holds that abbreviations are valid in the case of kiddushin? — R. Papa's question to Abaye was based on Samuel's opinion.[5]

R. Papa enquired: Are abbreviations binding in respect of pe'al[6] or not? What are the circumstances? Shall we say that one said, 'Let this furrow be pe'ah. and this one too' — that is a complete [declaration of] pe'ah? — His problem arises, e.g., if he [merely] said, 'and this,' without adding 'too'.[7] (Hence it follows that if one says, 'Let the entire field be pe'ah', it is so?[8] — Yes. And it was taught likewise: Whence do we know that if one wishes to render his whole field pe'ah, he can do so? From the verse, [And when ye reap the harvest of thy land, thou shalt not wholly reap] the corner of the field.)[9] — Do we say, Since it [sc. pe'ah] is compared to sacrifices, just as abbreviations are binding in the case of sacrifices, so in the case of pe'ah too; or perhaps, the analogy holds good only in respect of [the injunction,] than shalt not delay?[10] Now, where is the analogy found? — For it was taught:

---

(1) Betrothals. V. Glos.

(2) Not an abbreviation.

(3) Lit., 'kiddushin takes hold on her companion'.

(4) In reference to kiddushin, v. Kid. 5b.

(5) Recognising that Samuel held abbreviations to be valid in the case of kiddushin.

(6) Pe'ah-the corner of the field, which was left for the poor. v. Lev. XIX, 9.

(7) [Asheri seems to have read: Did he then mean 'and this too is for pe'ah' or 'and this is for personal expenses'.]

(8) The presumption is that R. Papa's problem arises only if the first furrow alone contained the necessary minimum, for otherwise the second would certainly be pe'ah; therefore the second furrow is in addition to the requisite minimum, and becomes pe'ah, if abbreviations are binding. But if more than the minimum can be pe'ah, it follows that even the whole field can be pe'ah.

(9) And not 'the corner in thy field'. Lev. MIX, 9.

(10) I.e., if pe'ah is not given within the fixed period, this injunction is violated.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 7a

[When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not delay to pay it, far the Lord will surely require it] of thee:[1] this refers to gleanings, forgotten sheaves, and pe'ah.[2]

Are abbreviations binding in the case of charity or not? How does this arise? Shall we say, that one said, 'This zuz[3] is for charity, and this one too,' that is a complete [declaration of] charity! — But, e.g., If one said, '[And] this,' omitting 'too'. What then: did he mean, 'and this too is for charity,' or, 'and this is for my personal expenditure,' his statement being incomplete?[4] Do we say, Since this is likened to sacrifices, as it is written' [That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a free-will offering according as thou hast vowed unto the Lord thy God, which thou hast promised] with thy mouth, which refers to charity:[5] hence, just as abbreviations are valid for sacrifices, so with charity; or possibly the comparison is in respect of 'Thou shalt not delay' only?

Are abbreviations valid in respect of hefker or not? But that is charity?[6] — This problem is based on a presupposition:[7] Should you rule, abbreviations are valid in the case of charity, because there is no analogy by halves,[8] [what of] hefker?[9] Do we say: Hefker is charity; or possibly charity differs, charity being for the poor only, whilst hefker is both for the rich and the poor?

Rabina propounded: Are abbreviations effective in respect of a privy or not?[9] How does this arise? Shall we say, that he declared, 'Let this place be for a privy, and this one too,' then obviously it is one? — But e.g., if he declared, 'and this,' omitting 'too'. What then? Does '[and] this' mean 'and this too shall be a privy,' or perhaps, what is meant by 'and this'? In respect of general use? Now, this proves that it is certain to Rabina that designation is valid for a privy. But Rabina propounded: What if one designates a place for a privy' or for baths; is designation effective or not?[10] — Rabina propounded this problem on an assumption. [Thus:] Is designation effective or not, should you answer, Designation is effective, are abbreviations valid or not?[11] This question remains.

I AM BANNED TO YOU,' etc. Abaye said: R. Akiba admits in respect to lashes, that he is not flagellated;[12] for otherwise, let [the Mishnah] state, R. Akiba gave a stringent ruling.[13] R. Papa said: With respect to, 'I am isolated [nedinah] from you,' all agree that he is forbidden; 'I am accursed [meshamatna] from you,' all agree that he is permitted. Wherein do they differ?

---

(1) Deut. XXIII, 22.

(2) Whilst he will surely require it refers to sacrifices, supra 4a. Hence they are assimilated to each other, being coupled in the same verse. The Hebrew for of thee is מעמך which can be rendered 'of that which is with thee', the reference being to the gleanings etc., which are to be left for those that are 'with dice', i.e., the poor. Ex. XXII, 24.

(3) Zuz, a silver coin, one fourth of a shekel.

(4) This alternative may apply to the query on pe'ah too: i.e., did he mean, 'and this furrow too', or, 'and this furrow be for my personal use?' V. p. 13, n. 7.

(5) This is deduced from the verse: the promise of charity is gone out of my mouth (Isa. S>V, 23, so translated here), where a promise by mouth refers to charity.

(6) Renunciation of one's property is the equivalent of giving it to charity. Thus the problem has already been stated.

(7) Lit., 'he sass, "if you should say".'

(8) I.e., it cannot be confined to certain aspects only.

(9) A place so appointed may not be used for reciting prayers, even before it was used as a privy.

(10) In the sense that this place may not be used henceforth for reciting prayers.

(11) In all the foregoing problems on kiddushin, pe'ah, charity etc., the abbreviations, though apparently not clear in meaning, since alternatives are given, are regarded as explicit, since the alternatives are, in every case, of a remote character, and the question then arises whether abbreviations, though explicit enough, are effective in these cases, v. Ran. 6b, s.v. בעי.

(12) If he breaks the vow.

(13) 'WAS INCLINED' shows that he entertained some doubt, and would therefore not inflict the penalty of lashes.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 7b

In the case of, 'I am banned to you,' R. Akiba maintaining that it is the equivalent of 'isolated' [nedinah], whilst the Rabbis hold that it means accursed' [meshamatna]. Now, this conflicts with R. Hisda's view. For a certain man, who declared, 'I am accursed in respect of the property of the son of R. Jeremiah b. Abba' went before R. Hisda. Said he to him, 'None pay regard to this [ruling] of R. Akiba'. [Thus] he holds that they differ in respect to' 'I am accursed' [meshamatna].

R. Elai said in the name of Rab. If [a Rabbi] places a person under a ban in his presence, the ban can be revoked only in his presence; if in his absence, it can be revoked both in his presence and in his absence. R. Hanin said in Rab's name. One who hears his neighbour utter God's name in vain[1] must place him under a ban; otherwise he himself must be under a ban,[2] because the unnecessary utterance of the Divine Name always leads to poverty, and poverty leads to death, as it is written, [And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return unto Egypt]. For all the men are dead [which sought thy life];[3] and it was taught: Wherever the Sages cast their eyes [in disapproval] death or poverty has resulted.

R. Abba said: I was standing in the presence of R. Huna, when he heard a woman utter God's name in vain. Thereupon he banned her, but immediately lifted the ban in her presence. This proves three things: [i] He who hears his neighbour utter the Divine Name unnecessarily must excommunicate him; [ii] If [a Rabbi] bans a person in his presence, the ban must be lifted in his presence too. [iii] No time need elapse between the imposition and the lifting of a ban.[4]

R. Giddal said in Rab's name: A scholar may utter a ban against himself, and lift it himself. But is this not obvious? — I would think that a prisoner cannot free himself from prison; hence we are taught otherwise. Now, how can such a thing occur? — As in the case of Mar Zutra the Pious:[5] when a disciple incurred a ban,[6] [Mar Zutra] first excommunicated himself and then the disciple.[7] On arriving home, he lifted the ban from himself and then from the disciple.

R. Giddal also said in Rab's name:

---

(1) Lit., the mentioning of the Name from his neighbour's mouth.

(2) [I.e., deserves to be placed under a ban, (Ran).]

(3) Ex. IV, 19. It is stated infra 64b that the reference is to Dathan and Abiram, who in fact were alive at Korah's rebellion, but had become poverty-stricken. Four are regarded as dead: a poor man, a leper, a blind person, and one who has no children. They were not blind, for it is written, wilt thou put out the eyes of these men? (Num. XVI, 14). Again, they were not lepers, for we find that they had not been excluded from the congregation: in the midst of all Israel (Deut. XI, 6). Even if they had been childless, they still could have been a source of danger to Moses before Pharaoh. Hence when God assured Moses that the danger was past, He meant that they were now poor and without influence (Ran).

(4) Hence, the ban may be merely a nominal punishment. V. J.E. art. Anathema. The term used here is niddui, and though it is stated there (p. 560, 2) that niddui is for seven days (M.K. 16a, 17b), it is evident from this passage that there was a formal ban too of no particular duration.

(5) Heb. hasida, (hasid). In Rabbinic literature the term is a title of respect denoting the type of an ideal Jew; (cf. Ta'an. 8a; Tem. 15b).

(6) [Here the term used is shamta, ‘desolation’, ‘curse’. According to Rashi, ‘shamta’ is a less severe form of ban than ‘niddui’; Maimonides, Yad, Talmud Torah, VII, 2, equates them. Nahmanides, Mishpat ha-Herem, considers shamta to be a general term for the more severe form of excommunication, the Herem, and the less severe, the Niddui.

(7) This was done to safeguard the honour of his disciple.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 8a

Whence do we know that an oath may be taken to fulfil a precept? From the verse, I have sworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.[1] But is he not under a perpetual oath from Mount Sinai?[2] — But what [R. Giddal] teaches us is that one may stimulate himself.[3] R. Giddal also said in Rab's name: He who says, ‘I will rise early to study this chapter or this tractate,’ has vowed a great vow to the God of Israel. But he is under a perpetual oath from Mount Sinai, and an oath cannot fall upon another?[4] Then [again] if he informs us that a person may thus stimulate himself, it is identical with R. Giddal's first [statement]? — This is what R. Giddal teaches: The oath is binding, since one can free [i.e., acquit] himself by the reading of the Shema’ morning or evening.[5] R. Giddal said in Rab's name: If one says to his neighbour, ‘Let us rise early and study this chapter,’ it is his [the former's] duty to rise early, as it is written, And he said unto me, arise, go forth into the plain, and there I will talk with thee. Then I arose and went forth into the plain, and behold, the glory of the Lord stood there.[6]

R. Joseph said: If one was placed under a ban in a dream, ten persons are necessary for lifting the ban.[7] They must have studied halachah;[8] I but if they had only learnt [Mishnah],[9] they cannot lift the ban; but if such as have studied halachah are unavailable, then even those who have only learnt Mishnah], but had not studied [halachah] will do. But if even such are unavailable, let him go and sit at the cross-roads, and extend greetings[10] to ten men, until he finds ten men who have studied halachah.[11] Rabina asked R. Ashi: If he knew [in his dream] the person who placed him tinder a ban, can this person lift the ban? — He answered: He might have been appointed [God's] messenger to ban him, but not to revoke it. R. Aha asked R. Ashi: What if one was both banned and readmitted[12] in his dream? — Said he to him: Just as grain is impossible without straw,[13]

---

(1) Ps. CXIX, 106.

(2) Every Jew is regarded as having sworn at Sinai to observe God's precepts.

(3) By an oath, to do what he is in any case bound to do.

(4) I.e., an oath is not valid when referring to that which is already subject to an oath.

(5) The passage commencing: Hear O Israel etc. (Deut. VI, 4 seq.). There is a definite obligation to study day and night, which is derived either from Deut. VI, 7 (and thou shalt teach them, etc.) or from Josh. I, 8 (This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth). But it is stated in Men. 95b that the obligation is fulfilled by the reading of the Shema' morning and evening.

(6) Ezek. III, 22, 23. The Lord, having instructed him to go forth, had preceded him.

(7) Dreams were widely held to have a positive significance; indeed, as almost partaking of the nature of prophecy. As we see here, a definite quality of reality was ascribed to them. V. J.E. s.v. 'Dreams'.

(8) Heb., hilketha, v. next note.

(9) So Rashi and Ran on the basis of our text. Mishnah is the law in broad outline, which characterises the whole of our present Mishnah, as compiled by R. Judah I. Hilketha (halachah) (law, rule) would appear to connote here the Talmudic discussion thereon, i.e., the amoraic development of the Mishnah. For tanu (תנו) referring to amoraic teaching instead of Tannaitic. cf. Kaplan, Redaction of the Talmud, pp. 209 seq. Ran, Asheri, and Tosaf, offer another interpretation, based on a slightly different reading: They must have taught law, but not merely learnt it (themselves).

(10) Lit., 'give peace' — the usual form of a Jewish greeting.

(11) Tosaf.: the greetings of ten men at the cross-roads will remove his grief; but ten scholars are necessary for the removal of the ban.

(12) Lit., 'it was loosened for him'.

(13) Cf. Jer. XXIII, 28.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 8b

so is there no dream without meaningless matter.[1]

Rabina's wife was under a vow; he then came before R. Ashi, asking. Can the husband become an agent for his wife's regret?[2] — He replied: If they [the three scholars] are ready assembled, he can do so: but not otherwise.[3] Three things may be inferred front this incident: [i] A husband can become an agent for his wife's regret. [ii] It is not seemly[4] for a scholar to revoke a vow in his teacher's town.[5] [iii] If they [the necessary scholars] are already assembled, it is well. But a scholar may lift a ban even in the vicinity of his master, and even a single ordained scholar[6] may lift a ban.

R. Simeon b. Zebid said in the name of R. Isaac b. Tabla, in the name of R. Hiyya Areka of the school of R. Aha, in the name of R. Zera in the name of R. Eleazar in the name of R. Hanania in the name of R. Mi'asha on the authority of R. Judah b. Il'ai: What is the meaning of, But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings?[7] — This refers to those people who fear to utter the Divine name in vain.[8] 'The sin of righteousness with healing in its wings': Said Abaye, This proves that the motes dancing in the sun's rays have healing power. Now, he differs from R. Simeon b. Lakish, who said: There is no Gehinnom[9] in the world to come,[10] but the Holy One, blessed be He, will draw forth the sun from its sheath: the righteous shall be healed, and the wicked shall be judged and punished thereby. As it is written, But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in its wings.[11] Moreover, they shall be rejuvenated by it, as it is written, And ye shall go forth and grow up as calves of the stall.[12] But the wicked shall be punished thereby, as it is written, Behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.[13]

---

(1) I.e., the ban is not lifted.

(2) So as to have the vow cancelled. On regret (haratah). v. infra 21b, a.l.

(3) Because having troubled to assemble three scholars, he may be anxious that his trouble should not be unrewarded and so exceed his wife's instructions as to the grounds on which she desired absolution.

(4) This is the reading of Ran. Cur. edd. (quoted by Rashi too): a scholar is not permitted.

(5) Since Rabina, himself a Rabbi, did not act in the town of R. Ashi, his teacher.

(6) Mumhe, v. Glos.

(7) Mal. III. 20.

(8) The name of God represents the Divine nature and the relation of God to His people. As such it was understood as the equivalent of the Divine Presence, hence the awe with which it was surrounded, cf. Kid. 71a, Sanh. 99a.

(9) Gehinnom (Gehenna) as an equivalent of hell, purgatory, takes its name from the place where children were once sacrificed to Moloch, viz., ge ben Hinnom, the valley of the son of Hinnom, to the south of Jerusalem (Josh. XV, 8; 11 Kings XXIII, 10; Jer. VII, 32-32; XIX, 6. 13-14).

(10) ['Olam ha-ba. Here, as it is clear from the context, the reference is to the Messianic days.]

(11) Thus, unlike Abaye, he applies the verse to the future world.

(12) Mal. III, 20.

(13) Mal. III, 19.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 9a

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS] 'AS THE VOWS OF THE WICKED, HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF NEZIROTH, A SACRIFICE, AND AN OATH.[1] [IF HE SAYS:] 'AS THE VOWS OF THE RIGHTEOUS,' HIS WORDS ARE OF NO EFFECT. [BUT IF HE SAID,] 'AS THEIR FREEWILL-OFFERINGS,' HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF A NAZIRITE VOW AND A SACRIFICE.[1]

GEMARA. But perhaps he meant thus: 'I do not vow as the vows of the wicked?' — Samuel answered: The Mishnah refers to one who said, 'As the vows of the wicked behold I am,' [or] '[I take] upon myself,' [or] '[I am debarred] from it': [which means,] 'Behold, I am a nazir,' [or] 'I take upon myself [the obligation] to offer a sacrifice,' [or] 'I [am debarred] by an oath [to derive any benefit] therefrom. Behold, I am a nazir': but perhaps he meant, 'Behold, lam to fast'? — Said Samuel: That is if a nazir was passing in front of him.[2] 'I am [debarred] by an oath [to derive any benefit] therefrom.' But perhaps [hemennu] [from or of it] means 'that I am to eat of it'? — Said Raba: It means that he said, '[I am debarred] from it not to eat it.' If so, why state it?[3] — I would argue, But he has not explicitly taken an oath![4] Hence we are informed [otherwise].[5]

[IF HE SAYS], 'AS THE VOWS OF THE RIGHTEOUS,' etc. Which Tanna recognises a distinction between a vow and a freewill offering:[6] shall we say, neither R. Meir nor R. Judah? For it was taught: Better it is that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay.[7] Better than both is not to vow at all: thus said R. Meir. R. Judah said: Better than both is to vow and repay.[8] — You may even say that it is R. Meir:

---

(1) I.e., his vow is valid in respect of these. This will be explained in the Gemara.

(2) So he meant, 'such as he'.

(3) Since it is obvious.

(4) Hence it is not an oath.

(5) [The meaning of the Mishnah would be accordingly: If a nazirite is passing by and a man noticing him says. 'Behold, I am as he who makes the vows of the wicked', (meaning the nazirite, who in a sense is regarded as a sinner; v. infra 10a); or if a man with a beast before him says, 'I take upon myself as the vows of the wicked', or, with a loaf of bread before him, says. 'From it as the vows of the wicked', he becomes respectively a nazirite; Is obliged to bring a sacrifice; and is forbidden to eat of the loaf, each utterance being treated as an abbreviation of a vow (Ran).]

(6) In making a vow to offer a sacrifice, one says, 'Behold, I will bring a sacrifice'; since he may forget to do so, it is considered wrong to make a vow. But a freewill donation is declared thus: 'Behold, this animal is for a sacrifice'. Since the animal has already been put aside for the purpose, there is no fear of forgetfulness.

(7) Eccl. V, 4.

(8) Thus neither draw a distinction between a vow and a freewill-offering.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 9b

R. Meir spoke only of a vow, but not of a freewill-offering. But the Mishnah states: AS THEIR FREEWILL-OFFERINGS, HE HAS VOWED IN RESPECT OF NAZIR AND A SACRIFICE?[1] — Learn: HE HAS made a freewill-offering IN RESPECT OF NAZIR AND A SACRIFICE. Now, wherein does a vower differ, that he is not [approved]: because he may thereby come to a stumbling-block?[2] But a freewill-offering too can become a stumbling-block?[3] — [He does as] Hillel the Elder.[4] For it was taught: It was said of Hillel the Elder that no man ever trespassed through his burnt-offering;[5] he would bring it as hullin[6] to the Temple court, then sanctify it, and put his hand upon it[7] and slaughter it. That is well in respect of a freewill-offering of sacrifices; but what can be said of a freewill-offering of neziroth?[8] — It is as Simeon the Just.[9] For it was taught: Simeon the Just said: Only once in my life have I eaten of the trespass-offering brought by a defiled tear. On one occasion a nazir came from the South country, and I saw that he had beautiful eyes, was of handsome appearance, and with thick locks of hair symmetrically arranged. Said I to him: 'My son, what [reason] didst thou see to destroy this beautiful hair of thine?'[10] He replied: 'I was a shepherd for my father in my town. [Once] I went to draw water from a well, gazed upon my reflection in the water, whereupon my evil desires rushed upon me and sought to drive me from the world [through sin]. But I said unto it [my lust]: "Wretch! why dost thou vaunt thyself in a world that is not thine, with one who is destined to become worms and dust?[11] I swear[12] that I will shave thee off [his beautiful hair] for the sake of Heaven."' l immediately arose and kissed his head, saying: 'My son, may there be many nazirites such as thou in Israel! Of thee saith the Holy Writ, When either a man or a woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a nazirite, to separate themselves unto the Lord.[13]

R. Mani demurred: Wherein does the trespass-offering of an unclean nazirite differ, that he did not eat [thereof]: because it comes on account of sin? Then he should not have partaken [of] all trespass-offerings, since they come on account of sin? Said R. Jonah to him, This is the reason: When they regret [their evil deeds], they become nazirites, but when they become defiled, and the period of neziroth is lengthened,[14] they regret their vow, and thus hullin is brought to the Temple court.[15] If so, it is the same even with an undefiled nazir too?[16] — A clean nazir is not so, for he [previ ously] estimates his will-power, [and decides] that he can vow.

Alternatively:

---

(1) Rashi: this implies that it is stated as a vow. Asheri: the use of both terms together, FREEWILL-OFFERINGS and HE HAS VOWED proves that the Tanna of our Mishnah recognises no difference between them.

(2) By forgetting to fulfil his vow.

(3) Because when an animal has been dedicated, it may not be put to any use; in a momentary forgetfulness, however, one may use it.

(4) 'Elder' (Heb. zaken) does not necessarily refer to age, but was a title of scholarship; cf. Kid. 32b; Yoma 28b; J.M.K. III, beginning of 81c.

(5) By putting it to secular use after dedication.

(6) Non-holy, v. Glos.

(7) Lev. I, 4: And he shall put his hand upon the lead of the burnt-offering.

(8) Since the possibility of violating one of the laws of neziroth constitutes a stumblingblock.

(9) So the text as emended by Ran. — One who takes the vow of a nazirite in such circumstances as those related by Simeon the Just need not fear a stumbling-block. Scholars differ whether he is identical with Simeon I (310-291 or 300-270 B.C.E.) or Simeon II (219-199 B.C.E.). v. Ab. (Sonc. ed.) p. 2, n. 1.

(10) V. Num. VI, 18.

(11) Meaning himself. In thus apostrophising his lust he did not ascribe any persona], independent identity to it, as is evident from the context.

(12) Lit., 'by the service' (of the Temple).
(13) Num. VI, 2. A nazirite vow made for such reasons may be regarded as the vow of the righteous. Simeon the Just's refusal to partake of these sacrifices must be regarded as a protest against the growing ascetic practice of taking vows to be a nazirite, — usually a sign of unhappy times; Weiss, Dor, I, 85, v. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 13.
(14) Since they must recommence their neziroth; v' Num. VI, 12.
(15) Actually, of course, the animal would be consecrated; but it is as though it were hullin, since their neziroth, on account of which the sacrifice is brought, was not whole-hearted.
(16) He may regret the vow before the expiration of his term.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 10a

You may even say that it [the Mishnah] agrees with R. Judah, for R. Judah said this[1] only of a freewill-offering, but not of a vow. But he teaches: Better than both is to vow and repay? — Learn: To make a freewill-offering and repay. Now, why is a vow objectional: because one may come thereby to a stumbling-block.[2] [Does not] the same apply to a free-will offering whereby too he may come to a stumbling-block? — R. Judah conforms to his other view, viz., that a person may bring his lamb to the Temple-court, consecrate and lay [hands] upon it, and slaughter it.[3] This answer suffices for a freewill-offering of a sacrifice; but what can be said of a free-will offering of neziroth? — R. Judah follows his view [there too]. For it was taught: R. Judah said: The early hasidim[4] were eager to bring a sin-offering, because the Holy One, blessed be He, never caused them to stumble. What did they do? They arose and made a free-will vow of neziroth to the Omnipresent, so as to be liable to a sin-offering to the Omnipresent.[5] R. Simeon said: They did not vow neziroth. But he who wished to bring a burnt-offering donated it freely, and brought it; if a peace-offering, he donated it freely and brought it; or if a thanks-offering and the four kinds of loaves,[6] donated it freely and brought it. But they did not take neziroth upon themselves, so as not to be designated sinners, as it is written, And [the priest] shall make atonement for him, for that he sinned against a soul.[7]

Abaye said: Simeon the Just, R. Simeon, and R. Eleazar hakappar, are all of the same opinion, viz., that a nazir is a sinner. Simeon the Just and R. Simeon, as we have stated. R. Eleazar ha-Kappar Berabbi,[8] as it was taught: And he shall make atonement for him, for that he sinned against a soul. Against which 'soul' then has he sinned? But it is because he afflicted himself through abstention from wine. Now, does not this afford an argument from the minor to the major? If one, who afflicted himself only in respect of wine, is called a sinner: how much more so one who ascetically refrains from everything. Hence, one who fasts is called a sinner. But this verse refers to an unclean nazir?[9] — That is because he doubly sinned.[10]

MISHNAH. ONE WHO SAYS, 'KONAM,' 'KONAH,' OR 'KONAS,'[11] THESE ARE THE SUBSTITUTES FOR KORBAN.[12] 'HEREK,' 'HEREK,' [OR] 'HEREF,' THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR HEREM.[13] 'NAZIK,' 'NAZIAH,' 'PAZIAH,' THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR NEZIROTH;[14] 'SHEBUTHAH,' 'SHEKUKAH,' OR ONE WHO VOWS BY MOHI,[15] THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES FOR SHEBU'AH.[16]

GEMARA. It was stated: Substitutes: R. Johanan said: They are foreign equivalents [of the Hebrew]; R. Simeon b. Lakish said: They are forms devised by the Sages for the purpose of making vows; (and thus it is written, in the month which he had devised of his own heart).[17] And why did the Rabbis institute substitutes? — That one should not say korban. Then let him Say, korban? — Lest he say korban la-adonai [a sacrifice to the Lord]. And why not say korban la-adonai? — Lest one say la-adonai without korban, and thus utter the Divine Name in vain.[18] And it was taught: R. Simeon said:

---

(1) That it is better to vow and repay.
(2) V. p. 21, nn. 1 & 6.

(3) It cannot become a stumbling-block, because it is hullin practically until it is killed.
(4) Hasid, PI. hasidim; lit., 'pious ones'. The hasidim referred to here are definitely not the Essenes (Weiss, Dor, I, P' 110). [Buchler, Types. p. 78, makes these early hasidim contemporaries of Shammai and Hillel.]
(5) V. Num. VI, 14.
(6) A thanks-offering was accompanied by forty loaves of bread, divided into four different kinds.
(7) Num. VI, 11 .
(8) [Or, Berebi, designation by which Bar Kappara is known to distinguish him from his father who bore the same name, v. Nazir, (Sonc. ed.) p. 64, n. 1.]
(9) How then can one deduce that a nazir in general is a sinner?
(10) The verse shews that a double sin is referred to, because 'for that he sinned' alone would have sufficed; 'against a soul' is superfluous, and teaches that he is a sinner in two respects: (i) by becoming a nazir at all; (ii) by defiling his neziroth (Ran). — The whole passage shows the Jewish opposition to asceticism, for Judaism rejects the doctrine of the wickedness of this life and the inherent corruption of the body, which is the basis of asceticism. Whilst the community as a whole fasted in times of trouble (cf. Esth. IV, 16; Ta'an. 10a, 15a), and certain Rabbis too were addicted to it (e.g. R. Ze'ira, B.M. 85a), yet individual fasting was discouraged, as here; v. Maim. Yad, De'oth, III, 1; VI, 1; Lazarus, Ethics of Judaism, ¤¤ 246-256.
(11) [Its derivation is probably from kenum, 'self', 'person', and then the object in an elliptical sentence, 'I pledge (myself) my person with So-and-so (that I will not do this or that)', v. Cooke, North Semitic Inscriptions, p. 34. This is a substitute for korban vow, in which he declares 'this may be forbidden to me as is a sacrifice'. No satisfactory explanation has been given so far for the other terms, which seem to be corruptions of konam.]
(12) Heb. for sacrifice.
(13) Ban.
(14) The vow of a nazir: 'Behold, I will be a nazir'. These words may be substituted for nazir.
(15) This is explained in the Gemara. [The Mishnayoth text reads 'BY MOTHA', an abbreviation of Momatha, the Aramaic equivalent of Shebu'ah.]
(16) Heb. for oath.
(17) I Kings XII, 33, referring to the unauthorised festival instituted by Jeroboam in the eighth instead of the seventh month. [The Heb. for 'devised', בדה is the same as used by R. Johanan in his definition. The bracketed words appear to be a copyist's gloss that has crept into the text. They do not occur in MS.M.]
(18) This machinery for vows, regulating the manner in which they were to be made, points to the practice as being very prevalent. V. Weiss, Dor, I, 85.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 10b

Whence do we know that one must not say, 'Unto the Lord a burnt-offering,' 'unto the Lord a meal-offering,' 'unto the Lord a thanks-offering,' or 'unto the Lord a peace-offering'?[1] Because it is written, [If any man of you bring] an offering to the Lord.[2] And from the minor we may deduce the major: If concerning one who intended uttering the Divine Name only in connection with a sacrifice, the Torah taught, an offering to the Lord;[3] how much more [care must one take against its deliberate utterance] in vain!

Shall we say that this [conflict] is dependent on Tannaim? For it was taught: Beth Shammai maintain: Substitutes of substitutes are binding; whilst Beth Hillel Say: They are not.[4] Surely, the ruling that secondary substitutes are valid is based on the view that substitutes are foreign equivalents;[5] whilst he who says that they are invalid holds that they are forms devised by the Sages?[6] — No. All agree that substitutes are foreign words; but Beth Shammai hold that Gentiles speak in these [terms] too,[7] whilst Beth Hillel hold that they do not speak in these [terms]. Alternatively Beth Shammai hold: Secondary substitutes [are declared valid] as a precautionary measure on account of substitutes themselves;[8] but Beth Hillel maintain: We do not enact a precautionary measure for secondary substitutes on account of the substitutes themselves.

What forms do double modifications of vows take? — R. Joseph recited: Mekanamana, mekanehana, mekanesana. What are the secondary substitutes of herem? — Mafash'ah taught: harakim, harakim, harafim. Secondary substitutes of neziroth? — R. Joseph learnt: mehazakana, menazahana, mephana.[9] The scholars inquired: What of mipahazna, mithhazana, mith'azana?[10] Rabina asked R. Ashi: What of kinema: does it mean konam,[11] or perhaps, kinemon besem [sweet cinnamon]?[12] R. Aha, the son of R. Hiyya, asked R. Ashi: What of kinah: does it mean a fowl's sty,[13] or konam? These remain questions.[14]

What are secondary substitutes of oaths? — Shebuel, shebuthiel, shekukeel. But shebuel may simply mean Shebhuel the son of Gershon? But say thus: Shebubiel, shebuthiel shekukeel.[15] Samuel said: If one says ashbithah, he says nothing: ashkikah, he says nothing; karinsha, he says nothing.[16]

OR ONE WHO VOWS BY MOHI, THESE ARE SUBSTITUTES [FOR SHEBU'A]. It was taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: One who says 'by Mohi' [Moses][17] says nothing; 'by Momtha which Mohi said,'[18] these are substitutes for an oath. MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS [TO HIS NEIGHBOUR], 'THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT[19] HULLIN,'[20] 'BE NOT KASHER,'[21] 'BE NOT PURE,' 'BE CLEAN OR UNCLEAN,'[22] 'BE NOTHAR,'[23] OR PIGGUL,[24] HE IS FORBIDDEN.[25] AS THE LAMB,'[26] AS THE TEMPLE SHEDS OF CATTLE OR WOOD,'[27] 'AS THE WOOD' [ON THE ALTAR], AS THE FIRE [ON THE ALTAR],'[28] ' AS THE ALTAR,' 'AS THE TEMPLE, AS JERUSALEM;' [OR] IF ONE VOWED BY REFERENCE TO THE ALTAR UTENSILS,[29] THOUGH HE DID NOT MENTION KORBAN, IT IS AS THOUGH HE HAD VOWED BY KORBAN.[30] R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM[31] HAS SAID NOTHING.

---

(1) In this order, the Divine Name preceding.

(2) Lev. I, 1; thus the offering must precede.

(3) But not the reverse, lest one utter the Name in vain.

(4) Lit., 'they are permitted'.

(5) Hence, the first modifications are correct foreign words, the substitutes thereof are corrupt, but also used, and hence valid for oaths.

(6) Hence secondary substitutes, not having been assigned by the Sages to that purpose, are invalid.

(7) Sc. secondary substitutes; hence they are valid.

(8) Which would otherwise be treated as invalid by the masses.

(9) [Read Menazakna . . . mepazahna, each of which consists ofthe three consonantal letters of the substitutes with prefix and suffix; v. Strashun].

(10) [Strashun reads: Mepahazna, menahazna, menakazna, the last consonantal letters of the substitutes being transposed. This receives support from MS.M.]. Are they binding or not?

(11) Hence it is valid.

(12) Ex. XXX, 23; i.e., it is not a vow-form at all.

(13) I.e., the fem. of קֵן (kin), a bird's nest.

(14) In all these doubtful forms the question arises when they were actually used to express vows, the question being whether they imply vows or something else — notwithstanding the intention of their user.

(15) מהו 'What is the law' in cur. edd. is to be deleted; Bah.

(16) These forms are ineffective for expressing oaths.

(17) ['By Moses', was one of the common forms of asseveration, cf. Bez. 38b; Shab. 101b. V. Chajes, Notes.]

(18) By the oath which Moses uttered. [The allusion is to Ex. II, 21, where ויואל משה is rendered, 'Moses swore'. (Ran).]

(19) The Hebrew is la-hullin, here regarded as meaning: not hullin. V. also p. 28, n. 8.

(20) V. Glos.

(21) Lit., 'fit', ritually permitted for consumption.

(22) So cur. edd. Asheri explains: be as sacrifices, to which the laws of cleanliness and uncleanness apply — i.e., forbidden. Rashi's text reads simply: be not clean, be unclean, etc.

(23) Lit., 'left over'. The flesh of an offering which remains over after the period in which it must be eaten, v. Ex. XXIX, 34, and Lev., VII, 17.

(24) Lit., 'abomination'. The flesh of an animal sacrificed with the deliberate intention of eating it after the permitted period; it is then forbidden even within the period, v. Lev. VII, 18.

(25) To eat aught of his neighbour.

(26) I.e., the lamb of the daily sacrifice.

(27) The alternative is implied by the use of the plural in the Mishnah (Tosaf.).

(28) [So T.J. Others: Fire-offerings, cf. Lev. XXI. 6. (V. Asheri and Tosaf.)]

(29) I.e., your food be as the altar utensils unto me, hence, forbidden.

(30) V. Mishnah 20a.

(31) Without as i.e., 'Your food be Jerusalem to me'.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 11a

GEMARA. The scholars presumed. What does la-hullin mean: Let it not be as hullin, [implying] but as a sacrifice. Who is the authority of our Mishnah? If R. Meir: but he does not hold that the positive may be inferred from the negative?[1] For we learnt, R. Meir said: Every stipulation which is not like the stipulation of the children of Gad and Reuben is invalid.[2] Hence it must be R. Judah.[3] Then consider the conclusion: R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM HAS SAID NOTHING. Now, since the conclusion is R. Judah, the former clause is not R. Judah?[4] — The whole Mishnah gives R. Judah's ruling, but this is what is stated: for R. JUDAH SAID: HE WHO SAYS JERUSALEM HAS SAID NOTHING.[5]

But if one says, 'as Jerusalem,' is he forbidden according to R. Judah? But it was taught: R. Judah said: He who says, 'as Jerusalem,' has said nothing, unless he vows by what is sacrificed in Jerusalem! — It is all R. Judah, and two Tannaim, conflict as to his views.[6]

---

(1) To render it legally binding. Thus, if one says, 'Iet it not be as hullin', we may not infer that he meant, 'but let it be as a korban', and so declare it forbidden.

(2) Num. XXXII, 20-23; 29-30, q.v. We see there that Moses stipulated what was to happen in each case, and did not rely on one clause only, from which the reverse might be deduced, v. Kid. 61a.

(3) That the positive is inferred from the negative, and is then legally binding.

(4) Since it is specifically pointed out that the second clause is R. Judah.

(5) For that reason 'as' is specified in all the previous expressions.

(6) The Tanna of the Mishnah holding R. Judah's view to be that 'as Jerusalem' is a binding form, and the Tanna of the Baraitha that it is not.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 11b

It was taught: [If one says,] 'That which I might eat of yours,' or 'that which I might not eat of yours, be hullin,' or, 'be the hullin,' or, 'be as hullin,' he is permitted.[1] [If he says,] 'That which I might eat of yours be not hullin,' he is forbidden;[2] 'that which I might not eat of yours be not hullin,' he is permitted. Now with whom does the first clause agree? With R. Meir, viz., who does not hold that the positive may be inferred from the negative.[3] Then consider the latter clause: 'That which I might not eat of yours be not hullin,' he is permitted. But we learnt: [If one says,] 'That which I might not eat of yours be not for korban': R. Meir forbids [him]. Now we raised the difficulty: but he does not rule that the positive may be inferred from the negative?[4] And R. Abba replied: It is as though he said, 'Let it [i.e., your food] be for the korban, therefore I will not eat of yours.'[5] Then here too' perhaps, he meant, 'Let it not be hullin; therefore I may not eat of yours'? — This Tanna agrees with R. Meir on one point, but disagrees with him on another. He agrees with him on one point. that the positive may not be inferred from the negative; but disagrees with him on another, [viz.,] on [the interpretation of] la-korban. R. Ashi said: In the one case he said le-hullin;[6] in the other[7] he said, 'la-hullin', which might mean, 'let it not be hullin,[8] but as a korban'.

BE CLEAN OR UNCLEAN,' 'AS NOTHAR,' 'AS PIGGUL, HE IS FORBIDDEN. Rami b. Hama asked: What if one said: 'This be unto me as the flesh of a peace-offering after the sprinkling of the blood'? But if he vowed thus, he related [his vow] to what is permissible![9] — But (the question arises thus]: E.g., if there lay flesh of a peace-offering before him and permitted food lay beside it' and he said, 'This be like this'. What then: did he relate it to its original state,[10] or to its present [permitted] condition? — Raba answered: Come and hear: [We learnt:] IF ONE SAYS . . . AS NOTHAR, [OR] AS PIGGUL, [HE IS FORBIDDEN].

---

(1) To eat or benefit from his neighbour.

(2) Rashi. Ran is inclined to delete the clause, since, as the Talmud shews, this Baraitha is taught according to R. Meir, who holds that the positive may not be inferred from the negative.

(3) Hence, when he Says, 'That which I might not eat of yours be hullin', we may not infer that that which he might eat should not be hullin, and so prohibited.

(4) The hypothesis being that he is forbidden on account of this inference.

(5) The Hebrew form is la-korban: in popular speech la 'to the' may be a hurried utterance of la' 'not'; therefore on the first assumption what he said was: 'shall not be a korban'; in the answer the preposition is given its normal meaning, viz., shall be for the korban.

(6) Meaning as (or, for) hullin. [This can by no means he taken to denote 'not', and since R. Meir does not infer the positive from the negative, he does not consider it a vow.]

(7) The case interpreted by R. Abba.

(8) [So Ran. curr. edd. la-hullin, 'not hullin'].

(9) His words imply no prohibition.

(10) Before the sprinkling of the blood, when it was forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 12a

Now, nothar and piggul[1] are [possible only] after the sprinkling of the blood! —[2] R. Huna the son of R. Nathan said to him, This refers to nothar of a burnt-offering.[3] Said he to him, If so, let him [the Tanna] teach: As the flesh of the burnt-offering?[4] — He proceeds to a climax.[5] [Thus:] It is unnecessary [to teach that if one relates his vow to] the flesh of a burnt-offering, that he is forbidden, since he referred it to a sacrifice. But it is necessary for him [to teach the case of] nothar and piggul of a burnt-offering. For I would think that he referred it to the prohibitions of nothar and piggul, so that it counts as a reference to what is inherently forbidden, and he is not prohibited;[6] hence he informs us [otherwise].

An objection is raised: Which is the bond mentioned in the Torah?[7] If one says, 'Behold! I am not to eat meat or drink wine, as on the day that my father or teacher died,' [or] 'as on the day when Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was slain,'[8] [or] 'as on the day that I saw Jerusalem in ruins.' Now Samuel commented thereon: Providing that he was under a vow in respect to that very day.[9] What does this mean? Surely that e.g., he stood thus on a Sunday, on which day his father had died, and though there were many permitted Sundays, it is taught that he is forbidden; this proves that the original [Sunday] is referred to.[10] — Samuel's dictum was thus stated: Samuel said, Providing that he was under a vow uninterruptedly since that day.[11]

Rabina said, Come and hear: [If one says, 'This be unto me] as Aaron's dough,[12] or as his terumah', he is permitted.[13] Hence, [if he vowed,] 'as the terumah of the loaves of the thanksgiving-offering,'[14] he would be forbidden.[15]

---

(1) Some delete piggul, since at no time was it permitted. If retained in the text, it is so because nothar and piggul are generally coupled; but Raba's deductions are from nothar only.

(2) The proof is this. A sacrifice is forbidden because at some time it was consecrated by a vow. With the sprinkling of its blood it loses its forbidden character until it becomes nothar, when it resumes it. But a direct reference to nothar itself is inadmissible in a vow, because nothar is Divinely forbidden, and not the result of a vow (v. text, and p. 30, n. 2). Hence the reference must have been to the condition of the flesh before the sprinkling of the blood.

(3) The flesh of which is not permitted even after the sprinkling of the blood: hence it proves nothing.

(4) Without reference to nothar at all.

(5) Lit., he states, 'it is unnecessary'.

(6) When a man imposes a prohibition by referring one thing to another, the latter must be also artificially forbidden, e.g., a sacrifice, which was originally permitted, and then forbidden through consecration. But if it is Divinely forbidden, without the agency of man, the vow is invalid. Thus, if one says, 'This be to me as the flesh of the swine', it is not forbidden. Now, the prohibition of piggul and nothar are Divine: therefore, If the reference was in point of that particular prohibition, the vow would be invalid.

(7) Num. XXX, 3: If a man vow a vow unto the Lord, or swear an oath to bind his soul with a bond, he shall not break his word.

(8) After the destruction of the first Temple by Nebuchadnezzar in 586 B.C.E. and the deportation of the nobles and the upper classes to Babylon, Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was appointed governor of the small community that was left. As a result of a conspiracy he was slain on the second day of Tishri. Jer. XL-XLI.

(9) The assumed meaning is: he had vowed on the day of his father's death, or had once vowed not to eat meat on the day that Gedaliah the son of Ahikam was slain, and now he vowed a second time, 'I am not to eat meat, etc. as on the day when I am forbidden by my previous vow, thus the second vow was related to an interdict which was itself the result of a vow (Ran.).

(10) I.e., the first Sunday distinguished by his former vow.

(11) I.e., he had been under a vow every Sunday until this present vow. Hence nothing can be proved. v. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) p. 105.

(12) Num. XV, 20-21. Ye shall offer up a cake of the first of your dough for an heave offering. This, and terumah (v. Glos.) belonged to Aaron, i.e., the priest, and was prohibited to a star (I.e., a non-priest).

(13) To benefit therefrom. The vow is invalid, because the dough and the terumah, not being prohibited to all, are regarded as Divinely forbidden: v. p. 30, n. 2.

(14) V. Lev. VII, 22ff. Of the forty loaves brought (p. 32, n. 1) one out of each set of ten was terumah, and belonged to the priest.

(15) Because the prohibition of those is evidently due to a vow.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 12b

But the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves is [forbidden] only after the sprinkling of the blood![1] — [No.] Infer thus: [If he vows,] 'as the terumah of the shekel-chamber,'[2] he is forbidden. But what if [he said,] 'as the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves,' he is permitted? Then let him [the Tanna] state the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves, then how much more so 'his terumah'![3] — He teaches us this: The terumah of the thanksgiving loaves is 'his terumah'.[4] Alternatively, the terumah of the thanksgiving loaves may also mean before the sprinkling of the blood,[5] e.g., if it was separated during the kneading [of the dough].[6] Even as R. Tobi b. Kisna said in Samuel's name: If the thanksgiving loaves are baked as four loaves [instead of forty], it suffices. But does not the Writ state forty?[7] — As a meritorious deed. But terumah has to be taken therefrom?[8] And should you answer that one loaf is taken for all, — but we learnt: [And of it he shall offer] one out of each oblation:[9] 'one' teaches that terumah is not to be taken from one oblation for another?[10] And should you say that a piece is taken from each, — but we learnt: 'One' teaches that a piece is not to be taken? But it must be that he separates it during kneading, taking one [part] of the leaven, one of the unleavened cakes, one of the unleavened wafer, and one of the fried cake;[11] [so here too].

Shall we say that this is dependent on Tannaim? [For it was taught: If one says,] 'This be unto me as a firstling,'[12] R. Jacob forbids it, while R. Jose permits it. Now, how is this meant? If we say, before the sprinkling of the blood:[13] what is the reason of him who permits it? If after, on what grounds does the other forbid it? But it surely [means]

(1) This itself is disputed. The view of R. Eliezer b. Simon is adopted here. Since, by deduction, this vow is binding, we evidently regard the reference as being to the present state.

(2) This refers to a special fund kept in the Temple for various purposes. mainly congregational sacrifices; Shek. III, 2: IV, 1. — This is the deduction to be made, not the previous one.

(3) If a vow referring to the terumah of the loaves of a thanks-offering is invalid, though in their origin their own prohibition is due to a vow, how much more will a vow referring to other terumah, which is Divinely forbidden, be valid. Also, it is a general rule that there is a preference for teaching the less likely, so that the more likely may be deduced therefrom a minori.

(4) I.e., the word 'terumah' embraces all forms of terumah.

(5) It is even then forbidden to a star, v. Glos.

(6) Although the loaves become sanctified only by the sprinkling of the blood, according to our premise, yet if the terumah was separated in the dough, it is consecrated.

(7) Not actually. But since the Writ speaks of four species, and terumah (I.e., one in ten) was to be given from each, it follows that forty had to be made.

(8) One from each ten.

(9) Lev. VII, 14.

(10) Each kind of loaf is here referred to as an oblation.

(11) V. Lev. VII, 12.

(12) v. Num. XVIII, 15.

(13) Of the firstling, when it is definitely forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 13a

that flesh of a firstling lay before him, and this other flesh lay at its side, and he declared, 'this be as this,' and [thus] it is a controversy of Tannaim?[1] — No. All treat of before the sprinkling of the blood; and what is the reason of him who permits it? The Writ States, If a man vow,[2] [teaching] that one must vow by that which is [itself] forbidden through a vow; thus excluding a firstling, which is an interdicted thing. And he who forbids it?[3] — The Writ states, 'unto the Lord,'[2] to include an interdicted thing.[4] Then he who permits it, how does he interpret 'unto the Lord'? — He employs it in respect of relating [a vow] to a sin-offering or a guilt-offering.[5] Now, what [reason] do you see to include a sin-offering and a guilt-offering and exclude the firstling? — I include the sin-offering and the guilt-offering which one sanctifies[6] by a vow,[7] but exclude the firstling, which is holy from its mother's womb. But he who forbids?[8] A firstling too one sanctifies by a vow. For it was taught: It was said on the authority of Rabbi, Whence do we know that one is bidden to consecrate the firstling born in one's house? — From the verse, [All] the firstling males [that come of thy herd and thy flock] thou shalt sanctify [unto the Lord].[9] But he who permits it [argues thus]: If he does not consecrate it, is it not holy?[10]

. . . AS THE LAMB, AS THE TEMPLE SHEDS etc. It was taught: A lamb, for a lamb, as a lamb; [or] sheds, for sheds, as sheds; [or] wood, for wood, as wood; [or] fire, for fire, as fire; [or] the altar, for the altar, as the altar; [or] the temple, for the temple, as the temple; or Jerusalem, for Jerusalem, as Jerusalem, — in all these cases, [if he says,] 'what I might eat of yours,' he is forbidden; 'what I might not eat of yours,' he is permitted.

Now which Tanna do we know draws no distinction between a lamb, for a lamb and as a lamb? — R. Meir.[11] Then consider the second clause: and in all these cases, [if he says], 'that which I might not eat of yours [be so],' he is permitted. But we learnt: [If one says to his neighbour,] 'That which I might not eat of yours be not for korban, R. Meir forbids [him]. Now R. Abba commented thereon: It is as though he said, 'Let it [i.e., your food] be for korban, therefore I may not eat of yours'? — This is no difficulty: in the one case he said, 'lo le-imra';[12] in the other he said, 'le-imra'.[13] MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS [TO HIS NEIGHBOUR], 'THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE

KORBAN', [OR]' A BURNT-OFFERING',[14] [OR] 'A MEAL-OFFERING', [OR]' A SIN-OFFERING [OR] 'A THANKSGIVING-OFFERING', [OR]' A PEACE-OFFERING, — HE IS FORBIDDEN.[15] R. JUDAH PERMITTED [HIM].[16] [IF HE SAYS,] 'THE KORBAN,' [OR] 'AS A KORBAN,' [OR]' KORBAN,[17] BE THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,' HE IS FORBIDDEN.[18] IF HE SAYS: THAT WHICH I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE FOR A KORBAN,'[19] R. MEIR FORBIDS [HIM].

GEMARA. Now, the Mishnah teaches, [IF HE SAYS.] 'THE KORBAN,' [OR] 'AS KORBAN,' [OR] 'A KORBAN BE THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,' HE IS FORBIDDEN. Thus, it is anonymously taught as R. Meir, who recognises no distinction between 'it sheep' and 'for a sheep'.[20] But if so, then as to what he [the Tanna] teaches: 'THE KORBAN . . . [BE] THAT WHICH I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS,' HE IS FORBIDDEN. But it was taught: The Sages concede to R. Judah that if one says, 'Oh, korban,' or 'Oh, burnt-offering,' 'Oh, meal-offering,' 'Oh, sin-offering, what I will eat this of thine,' he is permitted, because he merely vowed by the life of the korban![21] —

---

(1) Whether the reference is to its present (permitted) state or to its original (forbidden) condition.

(2) Num. XXX, 3.

(3) What is his reason?

(4) This will not apply to all Divinely forbidden things, but only to such as the firstling, as the Talmud proceeds to explain.

(5) That the vow is valid.

(6) Lit., 'seizes'.

(7) Though one cannot offer these as vows, without having incurred the obligation, the actual animal is forbidden as a result of the vow of consecration, since another could equally well have been sacrificed.

(8) How will he meet this argument?

(9) Deut. XV, 19. Thus, though Divinely consecrated, yet its owner must formally declare it holy, and hence it may be regarded as subject to a vow.

(10) Of course it is! Hence its interdict is not the result of a vow.

(11) Since R. Judah rules that if one says Jerusalem, without 'for' or 'as', the vow is invalid.

(12) 'Let it not be for the lamb' — hence it is permitted. [So cur. edd. MS.M. and Ran read: In one case he said la'-imra; 'let it not be the lamb'. V. supra. p. 28, n. 8.]

(13) 'Let it be for the lamb' — there he is forbidden.

(14) [The two may also be taken together and thus rendered 'a sacrifice of a burnt-offering'.]

(15) To eat aright of his neighbour's.

(16) Because he did not say, 'as a sacrifice', etc.

(17) In this last case korban is used as an oath: I swear by the sacrifice to eat naught of thine.

(18) Vowing by means of korban formula was a specifically Jewish practice: v. Josephus, Contra Apionem, 1, ¤¤ 22, Halevy, Doroth I, 3, pp. 314 f.

(19) In the Gemara these words are subsequently otherwise interpreted, but in the promise they are thus translated.

(20) V. supra p. 33, n. 6.

(21) That he would eat. Then why not assume the same in our Mishnah?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 13b

This is no difficulty: Here he said ha korban,'[1] there he said ha-korban.[2] What is the reason?[3] He meant, '[I swear] by the life of the sacrifice.'[4] He [the Tanna] teaches: THAT WHICH I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT FOR KORBAN, R. MEIR FORBIDS HIM. But R. Meir does not rule that the positive may be inferred from the negative?[5] R. Abba answered: it is as though he said: 'Let it be for korban, therefore I will not eat of yours'.[6]

MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'KONAM BE MY MOUTH SPEAKING

WITH YOU,' [OR] 'MY HANDS WORKING FOR YOU,' [OR] 'MY FEET WALKING WITH YOU,' HE IS FORBIDDEN.[7]

GEMARA. But a contradiction is shown: There is greater stringency in oaths than in vows, and greater stringency in vows than in oaths. There is greater stringency in vows, for vows apply to obligatory as to optional matters,[8] which is not so in the case of oaths.[9] And there is greater stringency in oaths, for oaths are valid with respect to things both abstract and concrete, but vows are not so?[10] — Said Rab Judah: It means that he says,[11] 'let my mouth be forbidden in respect of my speech,' or 'my hands in respect of their work', or 'my feet in respect of their walking'.[12] This may be inferred too, for he [the Tanna] teaches: 'MY MOUTH SPEAKING WITH YOU,' not, ['konam] if I speak with you'.[13]

C H A P T E R I I

MISHNAH. NOW THESE ARE PERMITTED:[14] [HE WHO SAYS,] WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE HULLIN,' 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE, AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP,'[15] AS PERFORATED HIDES,'[16] 'AS NEBELOTH AND TEREFOTH',[17] AS ABOMINATIONS AND REPTILES, AS AARON'S DOUGH OR HIS TERUMAH',[18] — [IN ALL THESE CASES] HE IS PERMITTED. IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER,'[19] HE MUST BE GIVEN AN OPENING ON OTHER GROUNDS,[20] IN ORDER THAT HE SHOULD NOT ACT FRIVOLOUSLY IN SUCH MATTERS.[21]

GEMARA. Now, the reason is because he said, 'WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE HULLIN'; but if he said, 'What I might eat of yours be lehullin,' it would imply: let it not be hullin but a korban.[22] Whose view is taught in our Mishnah? If R. Meir's, but he does not hold

---

(1) The ha being a separate word, and thus an interjection expressing an affirmative oath — I will eat. [The vowel of the ha as interjection is, in addition, of a longer quality than that of ha as definite article.]

(2) Here the ha is an inseparate def. art.; hence he must have meant, 'What I might eat of yours he a sacrifice', and therefore he is forbidden.

(3) Of the Baraitha, that he is permitted.

(4) That I will eat of yours.

(5) And according to our premise the reason for R. Meir's ruling is that we deduce the opposite from his words, thus: 'but that which I might eat of thine be for korban'.

(6) V. p. 28, n. 8.

(7) According to the terms of his vow.

(8) I.e., if one said, 'I am forbidden by a vow to erect a sukkah (v. Glos.), or put on tefillin', (v. Glos.) the vow is binding, although he is bound to do these things. and if he does them, he violates the injunction he shall not break his word.

(9) I.e., if he said, 'I swear not to erect a sukkah, his oath is invalid.

(10) Vows being applicable to concrete things only. Walking, talking and working are regarded here as abstractions (by contrast with the vow that a loaf of broad etc shall be as a sacrifice and forbidden), yet the Mishnah states that the vows are valid.

(11) I.e., it is regarded as though he says.

(12) The reason for this assumption is this: the konam of the Mishnah may refer either to my mouth (concrete) or to my talking (abstract). In the former case the vow would be valid, but not in the latter. Since it is not clear which, we adopt the more rigorous interpretation.

(13) In which case the speaking would be the object of the vow: the speaking being abstract, the vow would be invalid.

(14) I.e., invalid.

(15) Lit., 'as the worship of stars'.

(16) The hide was perforated opposite the heart, which was cut out from the living animal and offered to the idol. Cf.

'A.Z. 29b and 32a.

(17) V. Glos. s.v. nebelah (pl. nebeloth) and terefoth (pl. terefoth).

(18) V. supra 12a, a.l.

(19) I.e., forbidden.

(20) Lit., 'from another place'. I.e., when he wishes his vow to be annulled, the Rabbi, who must find for him some grounds of regret to invalidate his vow, must not do so by pointing out that such a vow is derogatory to his mother's dignity.

(21) His mother's honour is too easy a ground for regret, and if the vow is invalidated on that score it is an encouragement to make such vows lightly, since they can easily be annulled. The making of vows was discouraged: cf. 9a.

(22) And the vow would be binding.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 14a

that the positive may be inferred from the negative? But if R. Judah's, it is identical with the earlier Mishnah?[1] — Because he [the Tanna] teaches, 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE, AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP,' he teaches hullin too.[2] Rabina said: This is what he teaches: NOW THESE ARE PERMITTED as [if he said WHAT I MIGHT EAT OF YOURS BE] HULLIN, VIZ., [IF ONE SAYS,] 'AS THE FLESH OF THE SWINE AS THE OBJECT OF IDOLATROUS WORSHIP'; and if HULLIN were not stated, I would have thought that absolution[3] is required But could I possibly think so? Since the last clause teaches: IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER,' HE MUST BE GIVEN AN OPENING ON OTHER GROUNDS, it follows that in the first cause absolution is unnecessary? But it is clear that HULLIN is mentioned incidentally.

Whence do we know it?[4] — Scripture states, If a man vow a vow unto the Lord:[5] This teaches that one must vow by what is [itself] forbidden through a vow.[6] If so, even [if one vows] by a [Divinely] interdicted object too, since it is written, to bind his soul with a bond?[7] — That is necessary for what was taught: Which is the bond referred to in the Torah etc.[8]

HE WHO SAYS TO HIS WIFE, BEHOLD! THOU ART UNTO ME AS MY MOTHER', etc. But a contradiction is shewn: If one says to his wife, 'Behold! thou art unto me as the flesh of my mother, as the flesh of my sister, as 'orlah,[9] as kil'ayim[10] of the vineyard, his words are of no effect.[11] — Said Abaye: His words are of no effect by Biblical law, yet absolution is required by Rabbinical law. Raba answered: One refers to a scholar; the other refers to an 'am haarez.[12] And it was taught even so: If one vows by the Torah,[13] his words are of no effect. Yet R. Johanan commented: He must retract [his vow] before a Sage; while R. Nahman observed: A scholar does not need absolution.

---

(1) Supra 10b.

(2) I.e., hullin is unnecessary in itself, but mentioned merely for the sake of completeness.

(3) Lit., 'a request' (for revocation).

(4) That these vows are not binding.

(5) Num. XXX, 3.

(6) Translating: if a man vow by referring to a vow.

(7) Ibid. This may also be interpreted: to bind his soul by that which is already a bond, vis. something Divinely interdicted.

(8) V. supra 12a.

(9) V. Glos.

(10) V. Glos. Deut. XXII, 9.

(11) Because all these objects are forbidden by the Law.

(12) Lit., 'people of the earth' — an ignoramus. v. J.E. s.v. In the first case the vow is entirely invalid; but an ignoramus will treat vows too lightly if shewn leniency, and therefore needs absolution.

(13) (E.g., 'I vow by the Torah not to eat of this loaf' — in reality a kind of oath. V. infra (Ran).]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 14b

It was taught: If one vows by the Torah, his words are of no effect; by what is written therein, his vow is binding; by it and by what is written therein, his vow is binding. Since he states, 'by what is written therein, his vow is binding,' is it necessary to mention, 'by it and by what is written therein?' — R. Nahman answered: There is no difficulty: one means that a Torah is lying on the ground; the other, that [the vower] holds a Torah in his hand. If it is lying on the ground, his thoughts are of the parchment; if he holds it in his hand, his thoughts are of the Divine Names therein.[1] Alternatively, [both clauses mean] that it is lying on the ground, and we are informed this: even when it is lying on the ground, since he vows, 'by what is written therein,' his vow is valid;[2] and an anti-climax is taught.[3] A further alternative: the whole [Baraitha] indeed means that he holds it in his hand, and we are informed this:[4] Since he holds it in his hand, even if he merely says 'by it,' it is as though he said, 'by what is written therein'.[5]

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM IF I SLEEP', 'IF I SPEAK', OR 'IF I WALK';[6] OR IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'KONAM IF I COHABIT WITH YOU,' HE IS LIABLE TO [THE INJUNCTION] HE SHALL NOT BREAK HIS WORD.[7]

GEMARA. It was stated: [If one says,] 'Konam be my eyes sleeping to-day, if I sleep to-morrow' — Rab Judah said in Rab's name: He must not sleep that day, lest he sleep on the morrow. But R. Nahman said: He may sleep on that day, and we do not fear that he may sleep on the morrow. Yet Rab Judah agrees that if one says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping tomorrow, If I sleep to-day,' he may sleep that day;

---

(1) The Heb. bamah shekathuw bah may mean either, by what is written therein, or, by that whereon it (the Law) is written. Now if the Scroll is lying on the ground, and one says, 'bamah shekathuw bah', we assume that he thought that it was a mere scroll not written upon, since it had been irreverently placed on the ground, and his words refer to the actual parchment, unless he says 'bah ubamah shekathuw bah', which can only mean by the scroll and by what is written therein. A reference to the parchment is invalid; to the Divine Names, is binding.
(2) I.e we assume the Heb. bamah shekathuw bah to bear that meaning, not, 'by that whereon it is written'.
(3) In the clause: 'By it and by what is is written therein.' Lit., 'this, and the other goes without saying'.
(4) Bah. [Cur. ed.: 'the whole also, the middle clause etc.'. Ran: 'the final clause informs us this'. All of which shows the text is in disorder. An attempt may he made to restore the text on the basis of MS.M. and Ran: 'The first clause (refers to the case) where it lies on the ground (MS.M.), the final clause (Ran) where he holds it in his hand (MS.M.). Such a text is also implied in the Ran on the passage.]
(5) I.e., bah u-bamah shekathuw bah are now translated 'by it or by what is written therein', the copulative sometimes meaning or. The text is not quite clear, that of the Ran has been adopted as giving the most plausible rendering.
(6) I.e., I am forbidden by a vow to sleep, etc. [Lit., 'konam be that which I sleep'. V. Laible, MGWJ. 1916, pp. 29ff'.]
(7) Num. XXX, 3.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 15a

a person may be lax with respect to a condition, but he is observant of an actual prohibition.[1] We learnt: [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM IF I SLEEP, IF I WALK, IF I SPEAK, etc. How is it meant? If literally, 'if I sleep,' is such a vow valid? But it was taught: There is greater stringency in oaths than in vows, for oaths are valid with respect to things both abstract and concrete, but vows are not so; and sleep is an abstract thing! But if he said, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping,'[2] then, if he states no time-limit, is he permitted to go on until he violates the injunction, he shall not break his word?' But R. Johanan said: [If one says,] 'I swear not to sleep for three days', he is flagellated and may sleep immediately.[3] But if it means that he says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping tomorrow, if I sleep to-day[4] — surely you say that a person is observant in respect of an actual prohibition?[5] Hence it is obvious that he says, 'Konam be my eyes sleeping to-day, if I sleep tomorrow. Now, if he did not sleep that first day, how can the injunction, he shall not break his word[6] apply, even if he slept on the second? Hence it surely means that he did sleep, thus proving that he is permitted to do so. This refutes Rab Judah! When is this stated? If he happened to sleep on the first day.[7] Rabina said: After all, it is as taught,[8] yet how can he shall not break his word apply? — By Rabbinical law.[9] But can the Biblical injunction apply by Rabbinical law?[10] — Yes. Even as it was taught: Things which are permitted, yet some treat them as forbidden, you must not permit them in their presence, because it is written, he shall not break his word.[11]

We learnt: [If one says to his wife, 'Konam be] that which you benefit from me until Passover, if you go to your father's house until the Festival',[12] if she went before Passover, she may not benefit from him until Passover. Now, only if she went before Passover is she forbidden, but not otherwise?[13] — R. Abba answered: If she went before Passover, she is forbidden and is flagellated;[14] If she did not go, she is merely forbidden. Then consider the second clause: After Passover, she is subject to he shall not break his word. Now if she did not benefit before Passover, how can the injunction apply? Hence it is obvious that she did benefit, which proves that this is permitted,

---

(1) Thus, where the second day is merely a condition for the first, we fear that even after having slept on the first, he may do so on the second too, hut where the second day is the subject of the actual vow, we do not fear that having slept on the first he will disregard the prohibition of the second.

(2) Since the konam falls upon the eyes, the vow is valid, eyes being concrete.

(3) Because it is impossible to keep awake three consecutive days. Therefore his oath is inherently vain (v. Shebu. 25a); hence he is punished, and the oath is invalid.

(4) It cannot mean that he simply said, 'konam be my eyes sleeping to-day', as in that case it is obvious; hence the stipulation must be assumed, and the meaning of the Mishnah will be that he must take heed not to sleep on the first day, lest he sleep on the second too, and thereby violate the injunction, for on any other meaning the Mishnah is superfluous.

(5) So there is no reason for refraining from sleeping that day, since he will observe his oath on the next.

(6) Num. XXX, 3.

(7) Despite the prohibition for which very reason he may not sleep on the first.

(8) Literally, viz., 'konam if I sleep'.

(9) Though by Biblical law the vow is invalid, since sleep is abstract, the Rabbis declared it binding, and therefore the injunction holds good.

(10) Lit., 'is there (the transgression) he shall not break in a Rabbinic (law)'.

(11) When one is accustomed to treat a thing as forbidden, it is as though it were subject to a vow. Thus, though the prohibitive force of custom is Rabbinical only, the Biblical injunction applies to it.

(12) 'The Festival', without any further determinant, always refers to Tabernacles, six months after Passover.

(13) Though the condition extends to Tabernacles, we do not fear that she may yet violate it after Passover: this refutes Rab Judah.

(14) If she benefits from him.

thus refuting Rab Judah! — [No.] That Mishnah teaches that if she benefited, she is involved in, 'he shall not break his word'.

We learnt: [If one says to his wife, 'Konam be] that which you benefit from me until the Festival, if you go to your father's house before Passover': if she goes before Passover, she may not benefit from him until the Festival, but is permitted to go after Passover. [Thus,] if she goes, she is forbidden, but not otherwise?[1] — Raba answered: The same law applies that even without going she is forbidden. But if she goes, she is forbidden [to benefit], and receives lashes [if she does]; if she does not go, she is merely forbidden.

An objection is raised: [If he says,] 'This loaf [of bread be forbidden] to me to-day, if I go to such and such a place to-morrow: if he eats it, he is liable to an injunction, 'he shall not go'![2] — Does he [the Tanna] teach: he may eat it — [surely] he teaches, 'if he eats it' so that if he eats it he is under the injunction not to go.[3] [The Baraitha continues:] If he goes, he violates the injunction, he shall not break his word.[4] But there is no [clause] teaching that he goes [on the second day]: this contradicts Rab Judah![5] — R. Judah answers you: In truth, he could teach, he goes: but since the first clause teaches, 'if he eats', not being able to teach.'he eats'.[6] the second clause too teaches, 'if he goes

IF ONE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, KONAM IF I COHABIT WITH YOU.' HE IS LIABLE TO [THE INJUNCTION,] HE SHALL NOT BREAK HIS WORD. But he is obligated to her by Biblical law, as it is written, her food, her raiment, and her marriage rights he shall not diminish?[7] — It means that he vows, 'The pleasure of cohabitation with you be forbidden me': thus he surely denies himself the enjoyment of cohabitation.[8] For R. Kahana said: [If a woman says to her husband,] 'Cohabitation with me be forbidden to you,' she is compelled to grant it, since she is under an obligation to him. [But if she says,] 'The pleasure of cohabitation with you be forbidden me,' he is forbidden [to cohabit]. Since one may not be fed with what is prohibited to him.[9]

MISHNAH. [IF HE SAYS,] '[I SWEAR] AN OATH NOT TO SLEEP, OR, 'TALK,' OR, 'WALK,' HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO DO SO]. [IF HE SAYS,] 'A KORBAN BE WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS,'[10] [OR] 'OH KORBAN! IF I EAT OF YOURS,' [OR] 'WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT A KORBAN UNTO ME,' HE IS PERMITTED [TO EAT OF HIS NEIGHBOURS'].

---

(1) Though by going any time before Passover, subsequent to having benefited from her husband, the vow is violated. This contradicts Rab Judah.

(2) This too refutes Rab Judah, since he may eat the loaf on the first day.

(3) But actually this is forbidden.

(4) Num. XXX, 3.

(5) For if he may not eat the loaf on the first day. the Baraitha should teach such a clause on the assumption that he did not eat it.

(6) For it cannot be taught that he may eat — this being Rab Judah's opinion.

(7) Ex. XXI, 10. How then can he free himself by a vow?

(8) Hence his vow is valid, since it falls primarily upon himself.

(9) So here too. Where the husband or wife make a vow, depriving the other if his or her rights, it is invalid. But if the vow deprives its maker from the enjoyment of his or her privileges, it is valid, though the other is affected thereby too.

(10) An alternative is: 'By the sacrifice (i.e., I swear by the sacrifice) I will not eat of yours.' [On this interpretation, the declaration is a form of oath taken by the life of the korban which is not binding. V. supra 13a, (Ran).]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 16a

GEMARA. Whose view is taught in our Mishnah? — R. Meir's; for if R. Judah's, he recognises no distinction between a korban and Oh, korban.[1] Then consider the latter clause [IF HE SAYS,]. 'WHAT I MIGHT NOT EAT OF YOURS BE NOT A KORBAN UNTO ME,' HE IS PERMITTED. But we learnt: [If one says,] 'That which I might not eat of yours be not for a korban unto me': R. Meir forbids [him]. And R. Abba observed thereon: It is as though he said, 'let it [i.e., your food] be for a korban, therefore I may not eat of yours.[2] — There is no difficulty: in the latter case he said, 'le-korban' [for a korban]; but here [in our Mishnah] he said, 'la'-korban,'[3] which means: let it not be a korban. MISHNAH. [IF HE SAYS, 'I TAKE] AN OATH [THAT] I WILL NOT EAT OF YOURS,' [OR] 'OH OATH THAT[4] I EAT OF YOURS,' [OR 'I TAKE] NO OATH [THAT] I WILL NOT EAT OF YOURS,'[5] HE IS FORBIDDEN.

GEMARA. This proves that 'Oh oath that I eat of yours implies that I will not eat. Now this contradicts the following: Oaths are of two categories, which are extended to four, viz., '[I swear] that I will eat,' 'that I will not eat,' 'that I have eaten, 'that I have not eaten'.[6] Now, since he enumerates, 'that I will eat,' 'that I will not eat,' 'that I have eaten.' 'that I have not eaten, it follows that [the phrase,] 'that I eat of yours' implies, 'I will eat'? — Abaye answered: 'That I eat' has two meanings. If one was being urged to eat, and he replied: 'I will eat, I will eat, moreover. [I take] an oath that I eat,' it implies, 'I will eat.' But if he said, 'I will not eat, I will not eat,' and then added: '[I take] an oath that I eat,' it implies, 'I will not eat'.[7] R. Ashi answered: 'That I eat,' in connection with an oath,[8] really means that he [actually] said, 'I will not eat'.[9] If so, it is obvious: why state it? — I might think it is a mispronunciation[10] which caused him to stumble;[11] we are therefore taught [otherwise]. Abaye does not give R. Ashi's reason, because it is not stated, 'That I will not eat.' R. Ashi rejects Abaye's interpretation: he holds, 'that I will not eat' may also bear two meanings. [Thus:-] if one was being urged to eat, and he said, 'I will not eat, I will not eat, and then added, 'I [swear by] an oath', whether [he concluded] 'that I eat,' or, 'that I do not eat,' it implies, 'I will eat'. While the language, 'An oath that I will not eat,' may also be explained as meaning, 'I swear [indeed] that I will not eat.'[12] But the Tanna[13] states a general rule: she-'okel [always] means that I will eat, and she-lo 'okel, that I will not eat.[14] MISHNAH. IN THESE INSTANCES OATHS ARE MORE RIGOROUS THAN VOWS.[15] YET THERE IS [ALSO] GREATER STRINGENCY IN VOWS THAN IN OATHS. E.G., IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM BE THE SUKKAH THAT I MAKE,' OR, 'THE LULAB THAT I TAKE, OR, THE TEFILLIN[16] THAT I PUT ON:' [WHEN EXPRESSED] AS VOWS THEY ARE BINDING, BUT AS OATHS THEY ARE NOT, BECAUSE ONE CANNOT SWEAR TO TRANSGRESS THE PRECEPTS.

---

(1) This is argued from the fact the Mishnah does not include the form 'korban be what I might eat of yours', as permissible, as it does in the case of 'Oh, korban', which could be included according to R. Judah's opinion that the particle 'as' is necessary to render the oath binding, v. supra.

(2) Then why not assume the same here?

(3) So Ran. cur. edd. lo le-korban.

(4) V. Gemara.

(5) This even according to R. Meir, for the Talmud states (Shebu'oth 36a) that R. Meir holds that the positive may be inferred from the negative in oaths.

(6) The two categories are affirmative and negative oaths referring to the future, which are extended to include similar oaths in the past.

(7) The Heb. then means: 'I swear in this matter of eating' — viz., that I will not eat. [The whole turns on the meaning attached to שאוכל. The particle ש may denote 'that' or 'if' (or 'that which'). In the first instance, the circumstance favours the former interpretation: 'An oath that I eat', i.e., 'I swear that I eat'. In the latter, he probably meant: 'An oath if (or that which) I eat, i.e., 'I swear not to eat', (or, 'By oath be forbidden that which I eat); cf. Shebu. 19b.]

(8) I.e., the Mishnah, when employing this phrase in connection with oaths.

(9) I.e., the Mishnah merely indicates that his oath bore reference to eating, but actually it was a negative one.

(10) Lit 'a twisting of the tongue'.

(11) Saying she-i-'okel instead of she-'okel, the difference in Hebrew being very slight. — This answer, as well as the discussion supra et passim on le-korban and lo korban, implies that the vows and oaths, as hypothetically posited in the Mishnah, were actually taken in Hebrew, not in another language. Thus Hebrew was generally spoken when the Mishnah was composed, and the Hebrew employed in the Mishnah would appear a natural, not an artificial language. V. M.H. Segal, Mishnaic Hebrew Grammar, Introduction.

(12) The text is not quite clear, but the general meaning appears to be this: When he says, 'lo akilna, lo akilna (I will not eat),' he may mean it positively, 'I will certainly not eat'; when he further adds, 'I swear that I will eat (she-'okel)' or 'that I will not eat' he is strengthening his first statement, for 'I swear that I will eat (she-'ohel)' may mean, 'I swear in respect of this matter of eating'. On the other hand, his first words may mean, 'I will not eat'? — of course I will! Hence the subsequent oath confirms this, for 'I swear that I will not eat (she-lo 'okel)' may mean, 'An oath may be imposed upon what I will no eat, but not upon what I will eat.' Hence, if Abaye's explanation is correct, that the Tanna teaches that she-'okel may imply a negative, he should also teach that she-lo 'okel may imply an affirmative. [MS.M. preserves a better reading: . . , if one was being urged to eat . . . whether (he concluded) 'that I eat' or 'that I do not eat' he means 'I shall not eat', while the language 'An oath that I will not eat' may be explained 'An oath that I do eat'. The meaning is thus clearer: When he first says 'I will not eat', his subsequent statement, whatever it is, will, on Abaye's explanation, be taken as confirming the first: If it is 'An oath that I eat' the particle ש (v. supra p. 43. n. 4) denotes 'if' or ('that which') and he means 'I swear I eat'; if it is 'An oath that I do not eat' the particle is simply taken in the sense of 'that'. And thus similarly on Abaye's view, the phrase 'that I do not eat' could also be explained in a positive sense: 'I swear. . . if I do not eat', viz., where it was preceded by the statement 'I will eat'. This however, is impossible, in view of the Mishnah in Shebu'oth, which draws a distinction between 'that I will eat' and 'that I will not eat' and not between the circumstances that produced the oath.]

(13) Of the Mishnah in Shebu'oth.

(14) Disregarding the special cases where the general tenor of a person's speech or the inflection of his voice reverses the literal meaning of his oath.

(15) Since the Mishnah (15b) states that a vow in these terms is not binding.

(16) V. Glos. for these words.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 16b

GEMARA. MORE RIGOROUS? That implies that they are [valid] vows;[1] but it is taught, He is permitted?[2] — This is taught in reference to the second clause of the other section: [viz.,] [If one says,] ['I swear] on oath not to sleep,' or, 'talk,' or 'walk,' he is forbidden [to do so]: IN THESE INSTANCES OATHS ARE MORE RIGOROUS THAN vows.[3]

YET THERE IS GREATER STRINGENCY IN VOWS THAN IN OATHS etc. R. Kahana recited, R. Giddal said in Rab's name, and R. Tabyomi recited, R. Giddal said in Samuel's name: Whence do we know that one cannot swear [a valid oath] to violate the precepts? Front the verse, When a man . . . swear an oath . . . he shall not break his word,'[4] [this implies,] he may not break his word,[5] but he must break a word [i.e., an oath] in respect of Heavenly matters.[6] Now, why are vows different: because it is written, When a man vow a vow unto the Lord . . . he shall not break his word?[7] But [of] oaths too it is written, or swear an oath unto the Lord he shall not break his word?[8] — Abaye answered: In that case [vows] one says: 'The pleasure of the sukkah be forbidden me';[9] but in this case [oaths] one says; 'I swear that I shall not benefit from the sukkah'.[10] Raba objected: Were the precepts then given for enjoyment?[11] But Raba answered: There [in the case of vows] one says, 'The sitting in the sukkah be forbidden me';[12] but here [oaths] one says, 'I swear not to sit in the sukkah'.

Now, do we learn that one cannot swear to transgress the precepts from this verse: do we not rather deduce it from elsewhere? For it was taught: If one swears to annul a precept, and does not, I might think that he is liable,[13]

---

(1) Save that their binding character is not so rigid as that of oaths; but if not binding at all, the term is inapplicable.

(2) V. Mishnah 25b; that indicates that these vows are quite invalid.

(3) For as stated in the Mishnah on 14b, such vows are indeed binding, but as explained by Rabina (v. 15a), only by Rabbinical Law; whereas oaths of a similar nature are Biblically valid.

(4) Num. XXX, 3.

(5) I.e., when it refers to human, optional matters.

(6) I.e., when the subject of the vow is obligatory.

(7) Ibid. Implying that it is binding even when referring to Divine, non-optional matters. This is inferred by regarding unto (ל) as meaning against: i.e., when a man vows contrary to the Lord's precepts.

(8) Ibid. Not actually; but as to the Lord immediately precedes or swear an oath, it may he regarded as referring to it.

(9) Hence it is binding, as one may not coy that which he has vowed not to enjoy.

(10) I.e., the oath falls primarily upon the person. v. supra 2b; but one cannot free himself from a Biblical obligation.

(11) Technically speaking, one cannot be said to drive physical enjoyment from the fulfilment of a precept, and therefore a vow in these terms would not be binding. One's highest enjoyment should be in obedience to God's word. [Apart from its halachic implications, the object of this saying was to keep the ethical principle free from any admixture of the idea of utility V. Lazarus, M. Ethics of Judaism, I, p. 284.]
(12) Thus the vow falls upon the sukkah, which is rendered forbidden, and upon the person; therefore it is valid.
(13) For swearing falsely.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 17a

hence the Bible teaches, [or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips] to do evil, or to do good etc.:[1] just as doing good refers to something optional,[2] so doing evil refers [only] to something optional. This excludes one who swears to annul a precept, and did not annul it,[3] because it is not optional! — One verse is to exempt him from the sacrifice due for [violating] an oath, and the other is to exempt him [from punishment[4] for having violated] the injunction concerning an oath.

MISHNAH. A VOW WITHIN A VOW IS VALID,[5] BUT NOT AN OATH WITHIN AN OATH. E.G., IF ONE DECLARES, 'BEHOLD, I WILL BE A NAZIR IF I EAT [THIS LOAF].' 'I WILL BE A NAZIR IF I EAT [THIS LOAF],' AND THEN EATS [IT], HE IS LIABLE IN RESPECT OF EACH [VOW].[6] BUT IF HE SAYS, 'I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF],' 'I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF],' AND THEN EATS [IT], HE IS LIABLE [TO PUNISHMENT] FOR ONE [OATH] ONLY.

GEMARA. R. Huna said: This holds good only if one says, 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day [if I eat this loaf]; I will be a nazir to-morrow [if I eat this loaf]', since an extra day is added, the [second] neziruth[7] is binding in addition to the first.[8] But if he says, 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day, I will be a nazir to-day,' the second neziruth is not valid in addition to the first. But Samuel said: Even if one declares, 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day, I will be a nazir to-day,' the second neziruth is binding. Now, according to R. Huna, [the Mishnah,] instead of teaching BUT NOT AN OATH WITHIN AN OATH, should teach, Sometimes A VOW WITHIN A VOW IS VALID, and sometimes not. [If one says,] 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; behold, I will be a nazir to-morrow,' the vow within the vow is binding. But if he says, 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day, I will be a nazir to-day,'

---

(1) Lev. V, 4.

(2) V. Shebu. Sonc. ed.) p. 147 for notes.

(3) Teaching that no penalty is incurred.

(4) [I.e., the penalty of lashed for transgressing 'he shall not break his word'. He is however lashed for uttering a vain oath; v. Shebu. 29a (Tosaf).]

(5) Lit., 'there is a vow within a vow'.

(6) And he must observe two periods of neziroth of thirty days each. This double vow relating to the same thing is called a vow within a vow.

(7) Abstract noun from nazir, 'naziriteship'.

(8) And the full statutory period of thirty days must be observed for the second neziruth.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 17b

the second is not binding?[1] — This is a difficulty.

We learnt: A VOW WITHIN A VOW IS VALID, BUT NOT AN OATH WITHIN AN OATH. How is this? shall we say that one declared, 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day. Behold, I will be a nazir tomorrow':[2] then an analogous oath is: 'I swear not to eat figs. I swear not to eat grapes,' why should this second oath be invalid? But the invalidity of all oath within an oath arises thus: 'I swear not to eat figs, I swear not to eat figs.' Then an analogous vow in respect of neziruth is: 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; and it is stated, A VOW WITHIN A VOW IS VALID. This refutes R. Huna? — R. Huna answers you: The Mishnah applies to one who said: 'Behold, I will be a nazir to-day. Behold, I will be a nazir to-morrow;'[3] and an analogous oath is: 'I swear not to eat figs I swear not to eat figs and grapes,'[4] the second oath being invalid. But did not Rabbah Say: [If one says,] 'I swear not to eat figs,' and then adds, 'I swear not to eat figs and grapes'; if he eats figs, sets aside [an animal for] a sacrifice and then eats grapes, the grapes constitute [only] half the extent [of his second oath],[5] and a sacrifice is not brought for [the violation of] such. Front this we see that if one declares, ‘I swear not to eat figs,’ and then adds,’ I swear not to eat figs and grapes’: since the [second] oath is valid in respect of grapes, it is valid in respect of figs too? — R. Huna does not agree with Rabbah.

An objection is raised; If one made two vows of neziruth, observed[6] the first, set aside a sacrifice,[7] and then had himself absolved thereof [sc. the first vow], the second is accounted to him in [the observance of] the first.[8] How is this? Shall we say that he declared, ‘Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; Behold, I will be a nazir tomorrow’, why does the second replace the first; surely there is an additional day? But it is obvious that he said: ‘Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; Behold, I will be a nazir to-day.’

---

(1) The point of the difficulty is that the Tanna should not draw a distinction between vows and oaths, when it can be drawn between vows themselves.

(2) The second vow being a real addition to the first.

(3) So that the second vow is identical with the first, save that a day is added.

(4) The second oath thus included the first, and added thereto.

(5) Which embraces grapes and figs.

(6) Lit., ‘counted’ — the days of his vow.

(7) Due on the expiration of neziroth.

(8) I.e., the term of neziroth already observed is accounted to the second view, since the first was revoked.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 18a

This contradicts R. Huna! — No. After all, [it means that he said,] ‘Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; Behold, I will be a nazir to-morrow; and how is it accounted to him? With the exception of that additional day. Alternatively, [it means], e.g that one undertook two periods of neziruth simultaneously.[1]

R. Hamnuna objected: To vow a vow of a Nazirite, declaring themselves it Nazirite [into the Lord]:[2] teaches hence [we learn] that neziruth falls upon neziruth.[3] For I would think, does it [the reverse] not follow a fortiori: If an oath, which is [more] stringent, is not binding upon another oath; how much more so neziruth, which is less rigorous![4] Therefore it is stated, ‘a nazirite, declaring himself a nazirite to the Lord’; from which [we learnt] that neziroth falls upon neziroth. Now how is this? Shall we say, that one said, ‘Behold, I will be a nazir to-day; Behold, I will be a nazir to-morrow, — is a verse necessary? But presumably it applies to one who said, ‘Behold, I will be a nazir to day, Behold, I will be a nazir to-day;’ and it is stated that the second [vow of] neziruth is binding in addition to the first?[5] — No. This refers to one who undertook two [periods of] neziruth simultaneously.

Now, wherein is an oath more rigorous than a vow? Shall we say in so far that it is applicable even to the abstract:[6] but a vow too is more stringent, since it is as valid in respect to a precept as in respect to anything optional?[7] — But it is because it is written in reference thereto, he shall not be held guiltless [that taketh my name in vain].[8]

BUT IF HE SAYS, ‘I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF],’ ‘I SWEAR THAT I WILL NOT EAT [THIS LOAF],’ AND THEN EATS IT, HE IS LIABLE [TO PUNISHMENT] FOR ONE [OATH] ONLY. Raba said: If he was absolved of the first, the second becomes binding. How is this deduced? Since it is not stated, It is only one [oath], but, HE IS LIABLE [TO PUNISHMENT] FOR ONE [OATH] ONLY: thus, there is no room for it;[9] but if the first is revoked, the second becomes binding. A different version [of Raba's dictum] is this: There is no penalty [for the second], yet it is an oath. For what purpose is it so?[10] — For Raba's dictum. For Raba said: If he was absolved of the first, the second takes its place. Shall we say that the following supports him: If one made two vows of neziruth, observed the first, set aside a sacrifice, and was then absolved thereof, the second [vow] is fulfilled in [the observance of] the first?[11] — [No.] This refers e.g., to one who vowed two periods of neziruth simultaneously.[12]

---

(1) Declaring. 'I vow two periods of neziroth'.

(2) Num. VI, 2.

(3) I.e., a vow of neziruth is binding upon one who is already a nazir, translating thus: . . . of a nazirite, when he is already a nazirite to the Lord.

(4) The greater stringency of oaths is explained below. To shew that the second is binding-surely it is obvious!

(5) This contradicts R. Huna.

(6) V. supra 13b, a.l.

(7) V. Mishnah on 16a.

(8) Ex. XX, 7.

(9) I.e., for the second to impose a penalty, since that is incurred on account of the first.

(10) Since he is not punished for violating the second, whilst he is already bound by the first, what does it matter whether we regard the second as an oath or not?

(11) This proves that the second is actually valid.

(12) Hence the second is binding; but if one declares, 'I swear not to eat this loaf, I swear not to eat this loaf', it may be that his second statement has no validity at all. For further notes on this passage v. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 150ff.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 18b

MISHNAH. UNSPECIFIED VOWS ARE INTERPRETED STRICTLY, BUT IF SPECIFIED,[1] LENIENTLY. E.G., IF ONE VOWS, BEHOLD! THIS BE TO ME AS SALTED MEAT,' OR, 'AS WINE OF LIBATION': NOW, IF HE VOWED BY ALLUSION TO A PEACEOFFERING,[2] HE IS FORBIDDEN;[3] IF BY AN IDOLATROUS SACRIFICE, HE IS PERMITTED, BUT IF IT WAS UNSPECIFIED, HE IS FORBIDDEN. [IF ONE DECLARES], 'BEHOLD! THIS BE TO ME AS HEREM': IF AS A HEREM TO THE LORD,[4] HE IS FORBIDDEN; IF AS A HEREM TO THE PRIESTS, HE IS PERMITTED.[5] IF IT IS UNSPECIFIED, HE IS FORBIDDEN. 'BEHOLD! THIS BE TO ME AS TITHE': IF HE VOWED, AS CATTLE TITHES, HE IS FORBIDDEN; IF AS CORN TITHES, HE IS PERMITTED; IF UNSPECIFIED, HE IS FORBIDDEN.[6] 'BEHOLD! THIS BE TO ME AS TERUMAH';[7] IF HE VOWED, AS THE TERUMAH OF THE TEMPLE-CHAMBER,[8] HE IS FORBIDDEN; IF AS THE TERUMAH OF THE THRESHING-FLOOR [I.E., OF CORN]. HE IS PERMITTED;[9] IF UNSPECIFIED, HE IS FORBIDDEN: THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. MEIR. R. JUDAH SAID; AN UNSPECIFied REFERENCE TO TERUMAH IN JUDEA[10] IS BINDING, BUT NOT IN GALILEE, BECAUSE THE GALILEANS ARE UNFAMILIAR WITH THE TERUMAH OF THE TEMPLE-CHAMBER.[11] UNQUALIFIED ALLUSIONS TO HARAMIM IN JUDEA ARE NOT BINDING. BUT IN GALILEE THEY ARE, BECAUSE THE GALILEANS ARE UNFAMILIAR WITH PRIESTLY HARAMIM.[12]

GEMARA. But we learnt: A doubt in neziruth is treated leniently?[13] — R. Zera answered; There is no difficulty; This [our Mishnah] agrees with the Rabbis; the other, with R. Eliezer. For it was taught: If one consecrates [all] his beasts and his cattle,[14] the koy[15] is included. R. Eliezer said: He has not consecrated the koy.[16] He who maintains that one permits doubt to extend to his chattels,[17] maintains likewise that he permits it to extend to himself too.[18] But he who holds that one does not permit doubt to extend to his chattels, will maintain this all the more of one's own person.

---

(1) After the vow is made in general terms (Ran).

(2) [Var. lec. 'TO HEAVEN', v. next note.]

(3) To benefit from the object of his vow — i.e., his vow is valid.

(4) Lit., 'of Heaven'. For 'Heaven' as a synonym of god cf. I Macc. III, 18 (though some ancient authorities read there

'the God of heaven'); Matt. XXI. 25; v. A. Marmorstein, The Old Rabbinic doctrine of God, I, pp. 14 and 105-106.
(5) That which was devoted (herem) to the Lord, i.e., to be utilized in or sold for Temple purposes, could not be redeemed, and hence was definitely forbidden for secular use (Lev. XXVII, 28); but if devoted to the priests. it might be so used once they had taken possession of it (Num. XVIII, 14); it is therefore regarded as permitted, and a reference to it in a vow has no validity.
(6) The cattle tithe had to be formally designated, hence it is regarded as humanly forbidden, and a reference to it is valid; but the corn tithe belonged automatically to the Levite, even if not formally designated; therefore it is regarded as Divinely forbidden; v. supra 13b.
(7) V. Glos.
(8) For congregational sacrifices; v. Shek. III. 2; IV. 1.
(9) V. p. 50. n. 8. The terumah of the Temple fund had to be formally designated, but that of corn was regarded as Divinely and automatically forbidden.
(10) I.e., the southern portion of Palestine.
(11) The Galileans, living at some distance from the Temple, did not think much about the Temple fund, consequently, when they spoke of terumah without any further qualification, they meant terumah if corn.
(12) As the priests lived mainly in Judea, priestly haramim were unusual in Galilee; hence a Divine Herem must have been meant.
(13) Toho. IV, 12. E.g., if one vows, 'Behold! I will be a nazir if the man who is just passing is one', and that person disappeared before it could be ascertained whether he was or not, the vow is not binding. This contradicts the Mishnah that an unspecified vow, the meaning of which is doubtful, is rigorously interpreted.
(14) So Rashi and Asheri. Ran: his beasts or his cattle; Tosaf. maintains that it refers to both cases The term 'cattle' (behemah) refers to domesticated animals; 'beasts' (hayyah) to wild or semi-wild animals.
(15) Probably a kind of bearded deer or antelope. It is doubtful whether this belongs to the genus of cattle or of beasts. This view is that the koy must be included in the one or the other. Or, according to the interpretation of the Ran, we are strict because of our doubt.
(16) Because his vow embraced animals of certain, but not of uncertain genus.
(17) I.e., in consecrating his cattle or his beasts, he meant it to include the lot, though aware that it is of doubtful genus.
(18) Thus, having subjected himself to an unspecified vow, his intention is that the most rigorous interpretation of his words shall apply.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 19a

Abaye said to him: How have you explained [the Mishnah] 'A doubt in neziruth is ruled leniently' — as being R. Eliezer's view? Then consider the latter clause: Doubtful first-borns, whether of man[1] or beast,[2] whether clean or unclean — the claimant must furnish proof [that they are first-borns].[3] And it was taught thereon: They may neither be sheared nor put to service![4] — He replied: Why do you compare innate sanctity[5] with man-made sanctity?[6] But if there is a difficulty, it is this: Doubtful fluids,[7] in respect of becoming unclean [themselves], are unclean; in respect of defiling others, they are clean:[8] this is R. Meir's view, and R. Eliezer agreed with him. But is it R. Eliezer's opinion that in respect of becoming unclean [themselves] they are unclean? But it was taught, R. Eliezer said: Liquids have no uncleanness at all [by Scriptural law]; the proof is that Jose b. Joezer of Zeredah[9] testified[10] that the stag locust[11] is clean [i.e., fit for food], and that the fluids[12] in the [temple] slaughter-house are clean?[13] Now, there is no difficulty according to Samuel's interpretation that they are clean [only] insofar that they cannot defile other liquids, but that nevertheless they are unclean in themselves; but according to Rab, who maintained that they are literally clean [even in respect of themselves], what can be said?[14] But [answer thus]: One [the Mishnah in Toharoth] teaches R. Judah's view; the other [our Mishnah] gives R. Simeon's. For it was taught: [If one says,] 'Behold! I will be a nazir,' if this stack contains a hundred kor,'[15] and he goes and finds it stolen or destroyed: R. Judah ruled that he is not a nazir: R. Simeon, that he is.[16]

Now, R. Judah is self-contradictory. Did he say that one does not place himself in a doubtful position?[17] Then a contradiction is shewn: R. JUDAH SAID: AN UNSPECIFIED REFERENCE TO

TERUMAH IN [JUDEA IS BINDING, BUT NOT IN GALILEE, BECAUSE THE GALILEANS ARE UNFAMILIAR WITH THE TERUMAH OF THE TEMPLE-CHAMBER. Thus the reason is that they are unfamiliar,

---

(1) If, e.g., a woman gave birth to twins, a male and a female, and it is not known the head of which appeared first (this being legally regarded as birth). If of the male, he is a firstborn; but if of the female, the male is not a first-born even if he subsequently issued first.

(2) If, e.g., two cows calved, one a male and one a female, one a firstling and one not; and it is not known whether the male is the firstling. Only male firstlings belong to the priest.

(3) I.e., if the priest claims the firstling or redemption money for the first-born.

(4) Just as certain firstlings. (v. Deut. XV, 19). How then can this be the view of R. Eliezer, who holds that when in doubt the animal is not regarded as consecrated?

(5) Lit., 'sanctity that comes of itself', v. B.M. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 26ff.

(6) In the former case a rigorous view is naturally taken. But when man consecrates, he has in mind only that which certainty comes within the terms of his consecration.

(7) E.g., if an unclean person, whose touch defiles liquids. put his hand into a vessel, and it is not known whether he actually touched the liquid there or not.

(8) They do not defile them.

(9) I Kings XI, 26.

(10) On the historic occasion, when as a result of a dispute between R. Gamaliel and R. Joshua, the former was temporarily deposed from the Patriarchate, and R. Eliezer b. 'Azariah appointed in his stead. An examination was then made of scholars' traditions, which were investigated and declared valid or otherwise, v. 'Ed. (Sonc. ed.) Introduction, XI.

(11) Heb. Ayil, of doubtful meaning.

(12) The flow of blood and water.

(13) Even by Rabbinical law. Since the general uncleanliness of liquids is rabbinical only, it was not imposed upon liquids in the temple slaughter house, so as not to defile the flesh of sacrifices. The language of this testimony is Aramaic, whereas all other laws in the Mishnah are couched in Hebrew. Weiss, Dor, I, 105, sees in this a proof of its extreme antiquity; v. A.Z. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 181ff for further notes.

(14) It may appear that this difficulty arises in any case. But if the Mishnah, 'an uncertain vow of neziruth', is not R. Eliezer's ruling, it can be answered that though the entire law of the uncleanness of liquids is rabbinical only, he is nevertheless stringent in a case of doubt. But if the Mishnah agrees with R. Eliezer, so that though neziruth and vows in general are Biblically binding, he is lenient in case of doubt, how can he treat liquids strictly, when the law is merely rabbinical?

(15) A measure of capacity: 36.44 litres in dry measure; 364.4 litres in liquid measure. J.E. 'Weights and Measures'.

(16) Lit., 'R. Judah permits. R. Simeon forbids'.

(17) I.e., he meant to be a nazir only if it certainly contained that measure.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 19b

but if they were familiar [therewith], it would be binding?[1] — Raba answered: In the case of the stack he holds that since doubt is graver than certainty, one will not put himself into that doubtful position. For if he is a certain nazir, he may shave[2] and offer his sacrifice, which may be eaten, but if he is a doubtful nazir, he may never shave.[3] R. Huna b. Judah asked Raba; But what if he said, 'Behold! I will be a lifelong nazir'?[4] He replied; Even then, a lifelong nazir, his doubt is graver than his certainty; for a certain nazir lightens the burden of his hair and offers three animals,[5] but not so a doubtful nazir. But what if he said, 'Behold! I will be a Samson nazirite'?[6] — He replied: A Samson nazirite was not included.[7] Said he to him: But R. Adda b. Ahabah said: A Samson Nazirite was taught?[8] He replied; If it was taught, it was taught.[9]

R. Ashi said: That [the Mishnah in Toharoth] gives the view of R. Judah quoting R. Tarfon.[10] For it was taught: R. Judah said on the authority of R. Tarfon: Neither is a nazir, because neziroth must be expressed with certainty.[11] If so, why particularly if the stack was stolen or destroyed?[12] — To shew how far-reaching is R. Simeon's view, that even if it was stolen or destroyed, he still maintains that one places himself in a doubtful position.

R. JUDAH SAID: AN UNSPECIFIED REFERENCE TO TERUMAH IN JUDEA etc. But if they were familiar therewith, it would be binding, which shews that the doubt is ruled stringently. Then consider the last clause: UNQUALIFIED ALLUSIONS TO HARA MIM IN JUDEA ARE NOT BINDING BUT IN GALILEE THEY ARE, BECAUSE THE GALILEANS ARE UNFAMILIAR WITH PRIESTLY HARAMIM. But if they were familiar, they would be invalid: thus in doubt we are lenient? — Abaye answered: The last clause is the view of R. Eleazar b. R. Zadok. For it was taught: R. Judah said: An unspecified [reference to] terumah in Judah is binding. R. Eleazar son of R. Zadok said: unspecified [references to] haramim in Galilee are binding.

---

(1) Though it would still be doubtful to which he referred.

(2) On the expiration of his term of neziroth.

(3) Because this must follow his sacrifices. But being a doubtful nazir, he cannot offer any at all, lest he be not one, in which case the animal, having been wrongfully designated as a nazir's sacrifice, is hullin (q.v. Glos.), which may not be brought to the Temple Court.

(4) Here the doubt cannot he more stringent than the certainty, as the term never expires, and since R. Judah draws no distinction in neziroth, his ruling must apply even to such.

(5) V. Nazir, 4.

(6) V. ibid. In which case his hair may never be cut.

(7) The term nazir may include a lifelong nazir, but not a Samson nazir, which would require special mention.

(8) [I.e., that R. Judah declares that he is not a nazir even in the case of a Samson nazirite vow (Ran).]

(9) I cannot answer it.

(10) But not his own view.

(11) This refers to the following case: If two persons were walking together, and one said: 'I will be a nazir, if the man who is coming towards us is one'; whereupon the other said: 'I will be a nazir if he is not', the vow is binding upon neither, because of the element of doubt in each when it was made, v. Naz. 34a.

(12) Even if the stack is intact and contains the stipulated measure, the vow of neziruth is invalid, since when it was taken it was unknown.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 20a

MISHNAH. IF ONE VIEWS BY HEREM,[1] AND THEN SAYS, 'I VOWED ONLY BY A FISHING NET',[2] BY KORBAN, AND THEN SAYS, I VOWED ONLY BY ROYAL GIFTS',[3] [IF HE SAYS] BEHOLD! [I MYSELF] 'AZMI BE A KORBAN',[4] AND THEN STATES. 'I VOWED ONLY BY THE EZEM [BONE] WHICH I KEEP FOR THE PURPOSE OF VOWING';[5] [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT MY WIFE HAS OF ME, AND THEN DECLARES, I SPOKE ONLY OF MY FIRST WIFE, WHOM I HAVE DIVORCED (IF NONE OF THESE [VOWS] DO THEY REQUIRE TO SEEK ABSOLUTION.[6] BUT IF A REQUEST FOR ABSOLUTION IS PREFERRED, THEY ARE PUNISHED AND TREATED STRICTLY: THIS IS THE VIEW OF R. MEIR, BUT THE SAGES SAY: THEY ARE GIVEN AN OPENING [FOR REGRET] (IN OTHER GROUNDS.[7] AND THEY ARE ADMONISHED SO THAT THEY DO NOT TREAT VOWS WITH LEVITY.

GEMARA. This is self-contradictory: You say, OF NONE OF THESE VOWS DO THEY REQUIRE TO SEEK ABSOLUTION; and then you continue: IF A REQUEST FOR ABSOLUTION IS PREFERRED, THEY ARE PUNISHED AND TREATED STRICTLY?[8] — Said Rab Judah, This is its meaning; OF NONE OF THESE VOWS DO THEY REQUIRE TO SEEK ABSOLUTION. This applies however only to a scholar;[9] and when 'am ha-arez[10] applies for absolution, he is punished and treated strictly. Now 'TREATED STRICTLY' is well: it means that we do not suggest an opening for regret.[11] But how are they punished? — As it was taught: If one vowed neziroth and then violated his vow: his case is not examined unless he observes his vow for the full period that he had violated it: this is the view of R. Judah. R. Jose said: This applies only to short neziroth [i.e., thirty days]; but in the case of a long period of neziroth, thirty days are sufficient.[12] R. Joseph said: Since the Rabbis have decreed, his case is not to be examined, if a Beth din[13] does attend to it [before time], it does not act right [and must be reprimanded]. R. Aha b. Jacob said: It is banned.[14]

BUT THE SAGES SAY: THEY ARE GIVEN AN OPENING [FOR] REGRET etc. It was taught: Never make a practice of vowing, for ultimately you will trespass in the matter of oaths,[15] and do not frequent an 'am ha-arez, for eventually he will give you tebalim;[16] and do not associate with a priest, an 'am ha-arez, for ultimately he will give you terumah to eat;[17] and do not converse much with women, as this will ultimately lead you to unchastity.[18] R. Aha of the school of[19] R. Josiah said: He who gazes at a woman eventually comes to sin, and he who looks even at a woman's heel will beget degenerate children. R. Joseph said: This applies even to one's own wife when she is a niddah.[20] R. Simeon b. Lakish said: 'Heel' that is stated means the unclean part, which is directly opposite the heel.

It was taught: [And Moses said unto the people, fear not: for God is come to prove you,] that his fear may be before your faces:[21] By this is meant shamefacedness; that ye sin not[22] — this teaches that shamefacedness leads to fear of sin: hence it was said[23] that it is a good sign if a man is shamefaced.[24] Others say: No man who experiences shame[25] will easily sin; and he who is not shamefaced — it is certain that his ancestors were not present at Mount Sinai.

R. Johanan b. Dahabai said: The Ministering Angels told me four things: People are born lame because they [sc. their parents] overturned their table [i.e., practised unnatural cohabitation]; dumb, because they kiss 'that place'; deaf, because they converse during cohabitation; blind, because they look at 'that place'. But this contradicts the following: Imma Shalom[26] was asked: Why are

---

(1) Viz., 'This be herem unto me'.

(2) Herem meaning net too; i.e., 'I did not vow at all'.

(3) Korban meaning an offering, and hence applicable to gifts or tribute to the king.

(4) Implying that he had consecrated himself to the Lord and needed redemption; v. Lev. XXVII, 1-8. (Rashi). [Or: May I myself be forbidden to you as korban (Ran).]

(5) [In order to give the impression to the hearer that I am making a vow.]

(6) Being invalid, according to the meaning assigned to them.

(7) Lit., 'from another place'. I.e., they cannot obtain absolution on the plea that thy had attached an unusual significance to their words, for the phrase cf. supra 13b.

(8) The first implies that they are altogether invalid, whereas the second implies that they are valid vows.

(9) Who is careful about making vows.

(10) V. Glos.

(11) When one desired absolution, the Rabbi usually suggested grounds for granting it; here, however, such aid was to be withheld.

(12) E.g., if he had vowed to be a nazir a hundred days, violated his vow for fifty days, and then desired absolution, it is enough to observe thirty days only, and then he is absolved. Here too he is punished in this way.

(13) Lit., 'house of law': Jewish court of law. Any three persons could constitute themselves a Beth din, by request, and it is to such a constituted body of laymen that this dictum probably refers. [Absolution could he granted either by one Rabbi or by three laymen; infra.]

(14) On the term used shamta, v. supra p. 17, n. 2.

(15) Which are more stringent.

(16) Tebel, pl. tebalim, produce from which no tithes have been set aside.

(17) According to this reading the exhortation is to a zar. The Ran however reads: 'unclean terumah', which was forbidden even to a priest, in which case the exhortation is to a priest.

(18) The present statement is not meant to be derogatory to women, who were held in high esteem, but conditioned by the prevailing laxity in sexual matters which characterised many of the ancient peoples. V. Herford Talmud and Apocrypha, pp. 163ff.

(19) Berabbi or Beribbi is a contraction of Be Rab, belonging to the school of an eminent teacher (Jast.).

(20) A woman during her period of menstruation and seven days following.

(21) Ex. XX, 17.

(22) Ibid.

(23) This indicates a very ancient tradition; v. Frankel, Z.: Darke ha-Mishnah, p. 305; Bacher, Tradition und Tradenten, pp. 160, 171 seqq.

(24) Cf. Yeb. 79a, where a sense of shame is said to be one of the characteristics of the Jew; also Ab. V, 20, where 'shamefacedness' is contrasted with 'bold-facedness', i.e., impudence or insolence.

(25) I.e., who is not hardened or callous, but feels humiliated when he does wrong.

(26) The wife of R. Eliezer b. Hyrkanos, a sister of Gamaliel II.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 20b

thy children so exceedingly beautiful? She replied: [Because] he [my husband] 'converses' with me neither at the beginning nor at the end of the night, but [only] at midnight; and when he 'converses', he uncovers a handbreadth and covers a hand breadth, and is as though he were compelled by a demon. And when I asked him, What is the reason for this [for choosing midnight], he replied, So that I may not think of another woman,[1] lest my children be as bastards.[2] — There is no difficulty: this refers to conjugal matters;[3] the other refers to other matters.

R. Johanan said: The above is the view of R. Johanan b. Dahabai; but our Sages said: The halachah is not as R. Johanan b. Dahabai, but a man may do whatever he pleases with his wife [at intercourse]: A parable; Meat which comes from the abattoir, may be eaten salted, roasted, cooked or seethed; so with fish from the fishmonger.[4] Amemar said: Who are the 'Ministering Angels'? The Rabbis. For should you maintain it literally, why did R. Johanan say that the halachah is not as R. Johanan b. Dahabai, seeing that the angels know more about the formation of the fetus than we? And why are they designated 'Ministering Angels'? — Because they are as distinguished as they.[5]

A woman once came before Rabbi and said, 'Rabbi! I set a table before my husband, but he overturned it.' Rabbi replied: 'My daughter! the Torah hath permitted thee to him — what then can I do for thee?' A woman once came before Rab and complained. 'Rabbi! I set a table before my husband, but he overturned it.' Rab replied; Wherein does it differ from a fish?[6]

And that ye seek not after your own heart.[7] [Deducing] from this Rabbi taught: One may not drink out of one goblet and think of another.[8] Rabina said: This is necessary only when both are his wives.

And I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me.[9] R. Levi said: This refers to children belonging to the following nine categories: children of fear,[10] of outrage, of a hated wife, one under a ban,[11] of a woman mistaken for another,[12] of strife,[13] of intoxication [during intercourse], of a mentally divorced wife,[14] of promiscuity, and of a brazen woman.[15] But that is not so: for did not R. Samuel b. Nahmani say in the name of R. Jonathan: One who is summoned to his marital duty by his wife will beget children such as were not to be found even in the generation of Moses? For it is said, Take you wise men, and understanding [and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you];[16] and it is written, So I took the chiefs of your tribes, wise men and known[17] but 'understanding' is not mentioned.[18] But it is also written, Issachar is a large-boned ass;[19] whilst elsewhere it is written, And of the children of Issachar, which were men that had understanding of the titles?[20] — [It is virtuous] only when the wife ingratiates herself [with her husband].[21]

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. FOUR TYPES OF VOWS HAVE THE SAGES INVALIDATED;[22] VIZ., VOWS INCENTIVE, VOWS OF EXAGGERATION, VOWS IN ERROR, AND VOWS [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE.[23] VOWS INCENTIVE: E.G., IF ONE WAS SELLING AN ARTICLE AND SAID, KONAM THAT I DO NOT LET YOU HAVE IT FOR LESS THAN A SELA''; AND THE OTHER REPLIED, KONAM THAT I DO NOT GIVE YOU MORE THAN A SHEKEL —

---

(1) At the beginning of the night women are still going about in the streets; at the end, before morning, they are abroad again.

(2) Figuratively, of course. This shews that they did converse.

(3) That are permitted.

(4) [This parable serves to express the absence of reserve that may characterise the mutual and intimate relationship of husband and wife without offending the laws of chastity.]

(5) Rashi (in Kid. 71a): they are distinguished in dress, being robed in white and turbaned; cf. passage a.l.: Shah. 25b.

(6) V. supra.

(7) Num. XV, 39.

(8) Whilst cohabiting with one woman to think of another.

(9) Ezek. XX, 38.

(10) When a husband imposes himself upon his wife by force; Asheri reads: children of a maidservant (אמה instead of אימה); v. MGWJ 1934 p 136. n. 1.

(11) A person under a ban was forbidden to cohabit.

(12) Having intended to cohabit with one of his wives, he cohabited with another.

(13) Not a hated wife, but one with whom he had just then quarrelled.

(14) I.e., when her husband has decided to divorce her.

(15) One who openly demands her conjugal rights.

(16) Deut. I. 13.

(17) Ibid. I, 15.

(18) The Heb. נבונים is here taken to denote the highest degree of wisdom — but such could not be found.

(19) Gen. XLIX, 14; cf. Gen. XXX. 16-18. The allusion is to the legend that Leah heard the braying of Jacob's ass, and so came out of the tent and said to Jacob, thou must come in unto me. She had thus demanded her conjugal rights.

(20) I Chron. XII. 33; though such men were not to be found in the days of Moses. This was Leah's reward, thus proving that it is meritorious for a woman to demand her rights.

(21) She may shew her desires, as did Leah, who merely invited Jacob into her tent, but not explicitly demand their gratification.

(22) Lit., 'permitted'.

(23) This is explained infra 27a.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 21a

BOTH ARE AGREED UPON THREE DENARII.[1]

GEMARA. FOUR VOWS HAVE THE RABBIS INVALIDATED etc. R. Abba b. Memel said to R. Ammi: You have told us in the name of R. Judah Nesi'ah:[2] Which Tanna holds this view? — R. Judah, who said on the authority of R. Tarfon: Neither is a nazir, because neziroth must be expressed with certainty.[3] Raba said: You may even say, The Rabbis. Does the Mishnah teach, both [subsequently] agreed — it teaches, BOTH ARE AGREED.[4]

Rabina asked R. Ashi: If he demanded more than a se'ah, and the other offered less than a shekel[5] is it a [valid] vow, or still a matter of incitement?[6] — He replied. We have learnt this. If one was urging his neighbour to eat in his house, and he answered: 'Konam if I enter your house,' or 'if I drink a drop of cold water', he may enter his house and drink cold water, because he only meant eating and drinking in general.[7] But why? Did he not state, a drop of cold water? Hence this is the usual manner of speech.[8] Thus here too: this is the usual manner of speech![9] — He said to him:

---

(1) A sela' _ two shekels _ four denarii.

(2) R. Judah, the Prince II.

(3) 19b. Thus here too, in the case of the incentive vow, since the two parties are dependent upon another, the vow is invalid.

(4) Thus, neither meant the vow seriously at all; but the conditional vow of neziroth was really meant.

(5) [I.e., the vendor demanded a sela' and a perutah (v. Glos.) and the buyer offered a shekel minus a perutah (Ran).]

(6) Since each was so exact, it may be that the sum was literally meant by both, and the vow likewise.

(7) But did not intend his words literally.

(8) For emphasis stating 'a drop of water', when in reality something substantial was meant.

(9) For emphasis: but neither meant his words literally, hence the vow is invalid.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 21b

How compare? In the case of cold water, 'the righteous promise little and perform much';[1] but here, It is really doubtful whether he [the vendor] implied that he would take less than a sela', and [the buyer] that he would give more than a shekel,[2] and it is [a vow of] incitement, or perhaps, each spoke literally, and it is a valid [vow]? This problem remains unsolved.

Rab Judah said in R. Assi's name: For these four vows [formal] absolution must be sought from a Sage. When I stated this before Samuel, he observed: The Tanna teaches, FOUR VOWS HAVE THE SAGES INVALIDATED,[3] yet you say. absolution must be sought from a Sage! R. Joseph reported this discussion in the following version: Rab Judah said in R. Assi's name: A Sage may remit only such [vows] as are similar to these four. Thus in his view mere regret is not given as an opening [for absolution].[4] A man once came before R. Huna [for absolution]. He asked him: 'Are you still of the same mind?' and he replied 'No!' Thereupon he absolved him. A man once came before Rabbah son of R. Huna, who asked him: 'Had ten men been present to appease you just then, would you have vowed?' On his replying 'No!' he absolved him. It was taught: R. Judah said: We ask him, 'Are you still of the same mind?' If he answers, No!' he is absolved. R. Ishmael son of R. Jose said on his father's authority: We say to him: 'Had ten men been present to appease you just then, would you have vowed?' If he replies in the negative, absolution is granted.

(Mnemonic: Assi and Eleazar, Johanan and Jannai).[5]

A man once came before R. Assi. He asked him: 'Do you now regret [that you ever vowed]?' and he replied, 'Do I not?' Thereupon he absolved him.[6] A man once came before R. Eleazar. He said to him, 'Do you desire your vow?'[7] 'He replied: 'Had I not been provoked, I certainly would not have desired aught.' 'Let it be as you wish,' answered he. A woman who had subjected her daughter to a vow[8] came before R. Johanan. Said he to her, 'Had you known that your neighbours would say of your daughter,

---

(1) When the would-be host urged him to partake just a little, he understood that a full meal was intended, and therefore made the vow in the terms he did, meaning, however, to debar himself only from a substantial meal.

(2) Both intending to compromise on three denarii.

(3) I.e., they have no binding power at all.

(4) A definite reason for absolution is necessary, based on a fact which was unknown when the vow was made; consequently, it may be regarded as having been made in error. But if the only reason for cancellation is that the vower regrets it, absolution cannot be granted, v. infra 77b.

(5) A mnemonic is a short phrase or a string of words or letters each consisting of catchwords of statements or incidents, strung together as an aid to the memory.

(6) (He holds that mere regret is accepted as ground for revoking a vow, contrary to the view of Rab Assi in the name of Rab Judah, the author of this ruling here being Rabbi Assi, a Palestinian Amora as distinct from the former, who was a Babylonian. (Ran).]

(7) Ran: I.e., have you no regret that you ever made the vow except that you wish that it be no longer valid from now, in which case absolution cannot be granted. Rashi: 'Did you fully desire to vow, i.e., were you calm and composed, vowing with full deliberation' this seems more plausible.

(8) Not to benefit from her mother.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 22a

"If her mother had not seen something shameful[1] in her [behaviour], she would not have put her under a vow without cause" — would you have vowed?' On her replying in the negative, he absolved her. The grandson of R. Jannai the Elder[2] came before him Said he to him, 'Had you known that [when you vow] your ledger[3] is opened [in heaven] and your deeds examined — would you have vowed?' On his giving a negative reply, he absolved him R. Abba said: Which verse [teaches this]? After vows cometh examination.[4] But though R. Jannai proposed this as a ground for absolution, we may not do so.[5] Nor do we suggest the following, which Rabbah b. Bar Hanah related in R. Johanan's name: What opening did R. Gamaliel give to a certain old man? Thee is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword, but the tongue of the wise is health.[6] He who speaketh [a vow] is worthy of being pierced by the sword, but that the tongue of the wise [i.e., absolution] health. Nor do we suggest the following, viz., what was taught, R. Nathan said: One who vows is as though he built a high place,[7] and he who fulfils it is as though he sacrificed thereon. Now the first [half] may be given as an opening,[8] but as for the second, Abaye maintained: We suggest [it]; Raba said: We do not suggest [it]. This is the version of the discussion as recited by R. Kahana. R. Tabyomi reported it thus: We may not suggest the latter half;[9] but as for the first, — Abaye maintained: We suggest [it]; Raba said: We do not. The law is that neither the first [half] nor the second may be proposed.

Nor do we suggest the following dictum of Samuel, Viz., Even when one fulfils his vow he is called wicked. R. Abba said: Which verse [teaches this]? But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee.[10] And [the meaning of] forbearance is learnt from forbearance as expressed elsewhere. Here it is written, But if thou shalt forbear to vow, and there it is written, There the wicked forbear from insolence.[11] R. Joseph said: We too have learnt so. [If one says:] 'As the vows of the righteous,' his words are of no effect. [But if he says:] 'As the vows of the wicked,' he has vowed in respect of a nazirite vow and a sacrifice.[12]

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: He who loses his temper is exposed to all the torments of Gehenna,[13] for it is written, Therefore remove anger from thy heart,' thus wilt thou put away evil from thy flesh.[14] Now 'evil' can only mean Gehenna, as it is written, The Lord hath made all things for himself yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.[15] Moreover, he is made to suffer from abdominal troubles, as it is written, But the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind.[16] Now what causes failing eyes and a sorrowful mind? Abdominal troubles.

When 'Ulla went up to Palestine,[17] he was joined by two inhabitants of Hozai,[18] one of whom arose and slew the other. The murderer asked of 'Ulla: 'Did I do well?' 'Yes,' he replied; 'moreover, cut his throat clean across.'[19] When he came before R. Johanan, he asked him, 'Maybe, God forbid, I have strengthened the hands of transgressors?' He replied, 'You have saved your life.'[20] Then R. Johanan wondered: The Lord shall give them there an infuriated heart[21] refers to Babylon?[22] 'Ulla replied, 'We had not yet

---

(1) Lit., 'something best left alone'.

(2) Lit., ‘the son of the daughter’. Var. lec.: Jannai Rabbah, the Great. He was a Palestinian amora of the first generation (second and third generation); to be distinguished from Jannai the Younger, a Palestinian amora of the fourth generation.
(3) The notion that there is a Heavenly ledger in which man's doings are recorded (cf. Aboth, III, 20) is probably connected with the idea of the Book of Life, in which are inscribed on the Judgment Day of New Year those who are to be granted life for the ensuing year (cf R.H. 15b). The Sefer Hasidim (13th century) observes that God is in no need of a book of records: ‘the Torah speaks the language of man’, i e.. figuratively. Cf Aboth, (Sonc. ed .) p. 12, n. 9.
(4) Prov. XX, 25.
(5) Because it terrifies one too much, and makes him ready to express a regret which he may not feel.
(6) Ibid. XII, 18.
(7) For sacrifice — this being forbidden since the building of Solomon's Temple.
(8) Merely building a high place without sacrificing is not so heinous all offence, and therefore the suggestion is not so terrifying.
(9) All agreeing that it is too frightening.
(10) Deut. XXIII, 23.
(11) Job III, 17. Thus forbearing being employed of the wicked in the latter verse, its use in the former shews that he who vows is also so dubbed.
(12) Supra 9a.
(13) V. p. 19, n. 6.
(14) Ecc. XI, 10.
(15) Prov. XVI, 4. This is understood to mean Gehenna.
(16) Deut. XXVIII, 65.
(17) ‘Ulla was a Prominent Palestinian amora of the latter part of the third century and the beginning of the fourth. He frequently visited Babylonia, in pursuance of the general policy of maintaining intellectual intercourse between these two great centres, and his learning was very highly esteemed there; Bacher, Ag. Bab. Amor. pp. 93-97.
(18) [Or Be'Hozae, the modern Khuzistan, province S.W. Persia, Obermeyer, Die Landschaft Babylonien, pp. 204ff.]
(19) Fearing that disapproval would endanger his own life; moreover, he wished to hasten his death.
(20) The action was excusable, being in self-defence.
(21) Ibid.
(22) How then could one Jew become so angry with another in Palestine as to slay him?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 22b

crossed the Jordan [into Palestine].’

Rabbah son of R. Huna said: He who loses his temper, even the Divine Presence is unimportant in his eyes, as it is written, The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek God,’ God is not in all his thoughts.[1] R. Jeremiah of Difti[2] said: He forgets his learning and waxes ever more stupid, as it is written, For anger resteth in the bosom of fools;[3] and it is written, But the fool layeth open his folly.[4] R. Nahman b. Isaac said: It is certain that his sins out number his merits, as it is written, And a furious man aboundeth in transgressions.[5]

R. Adda son of R. Hanina said: Had not Israel sinned, only the Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua would have been given them, [the latter] because it records the disposition of Palestine [among the tribes].[6] Whence is this known? For much wisdom proceedeth from much anger.[7]

R. Assi said: Absolution is not granted for[8] [a vow in the name of] the God of Israel, except [the following]: ‘Konam be any benefit [by the God of Israel] my wife has of me, because she stole my purse or beat my child’; and it was subsequently learnt that she had done neither.[9]

A woman once came before R. Assi. He asked her, ‘How did you vow?’ She replied, ‘By the God of Israel.’ Said he to her, ‘Had you vowed by mohi, which is a mere substitute,[10] I would absolve you. Now that you did not vow by mohi, but by the God of Israel, I will not absolve you.

R. Kahana visited[11] R. Joseph's home. The latter said to him, ‘Eat something’; to which he replied, ‘No, by the Master of all, I will not taste anything.’ R. Joseph answered, ‘No, by the Master of all, you may not eat.’ Now R. Kahana rightly said, ‘No, by the Master of all, etc.’ [to strengthen his vow]; but why did R. Joseph repeat this? — This is what he said: ‘Since you have said, "No, by the Master of all", you may not eat.’[12]

Raba said in R. Nahman's name: The law is: Regret may be made an opening [for absolution], and absolution is granted for [a vow made in the name of] the God of Israel.

Raba was praising R. Sehorah to R. Nahman as a great man. Thereupon N. Nahman said: ‘When he comes to you, bring him to me.’ Now he [R. Sehorah] had a vow for absolution, so he went before R. Nahman, who asked him: ‘Did you vow bearing this[13] in mind?’ ‘Yes,’ he replied. ‘Or this?’ ‘Yes.’ This being repeated a number of times, R. Nahman became angry and exclaimed, ‘Go to your room!’[14] R. Sehorah departed, and found an opening for himself: Rabbi said: Which is the right course that man should choose for himself? That which he feels to be honourable to himself, and brings him honour from mankind.[15] But now, since R. Nahman has become angry, I did not vow on this understanding. He thus absolved himself.

R. Simeon son of Rabbi had a vow for absolution. He went before the Rabbis, who asked him, ‘Did you vow bearing this in mind?’ He replied, ‘Yes.’ ‘Or this?’ ‘Yes.’ [This was repeated] several times,

---

(1) Ps. X, 4.

(2) V. p. 214, n. 2.

(3) Ecc. VII, 9.

(4) Prov. XIII, 26.

(5) Prov. XXIX, 22.

(6) But the other books, consisting mostly of the rebukings of the prophets, would have been unnecessary.

(7) Ecc. I, 18; i.e., the anger of God caused Him to send many prophets with their wise teachings. — We learn through error, and sin becomes the occasion of a fuller Revelation by God.

(8) Lit., ‘no (request for absolution) is attended to in the case of’.

(9) [This exception is made for the sake of restoring peace in the home.]

(10) V. Mishnah, supra 10a.

(11) Lit., ‘happened (to be) at’.

(12) I.e., Even if you desire, because one cannot be absolved from such an oath.

(13) Some fact mentioned.

(14) I cannot absolve you.

(15) V. Aboth II. 2 (Sonc. ed.) p. 12, n. 2 and 5.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 23a

and the Rabbis passed wearily to and fro ‘twixt sun and shade.[1] Said Botnith, the son of Abba Saul b. Botnith, to him, ‘Did you vow in order that the Rabbis should thus wearily pass from sun to shade and from shade to sun?’ ‘No,’ replied he. Thereupon they absolved him.

R. Ishmael son of R. Jose had a vow for absolution. He went before the Rabbis, who asked him, ‘Did you vow bearing this in mind?’ ‘Even so,’ replied he. ‘Or this?’ ‘ Yes.’ This was repeated several times. A fuller, seeing that he was paining the Rabbis, smote him with his basket.[2] Said he, ‘I did not vow to be beaten by a fuller,’ and so he absolved himself. R. Aha of Difti objected to Rabina: But this was an unexpected fact, as it had not occurred to him that a fuller would smite him, and we learnt: An unexpected fact may not be given as an opening?[3] — He replied: This is not unexpected, because scoffers[4] are common who vex the Rabbis.[5]

Abaye's wife had a daughter. He declared, '[She must marry] one of my relations,' and she maintained, 'one of mine'. So he said to her: '[All] benefit from me be forbidden to you if you disregard my wish and marry her to one of your relations.' She went, ignored his desire, and married her to her relation. [Subsequently Abaye] went before R. Joseph [for absolution], who asked him: 'Had you known that she would disregard your wish and marry her to her relation, would you have vowed?' He answered, 'No,' and R. Joseph absolved him. But is such permitted?[6] — Yes, and it was taught : A man once imposed a vow on his wife not to make the festival pilgrimage [to Jerusalem]; but she disregarded his wish, and did go. He went to R. Jose [for absolution], who said to him, 'Had you known that she would disregard your wish and make the journey, would you have imposed the vow on her?' He answered, 'No,' and R. Jose absolved him.

MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER B. JACOB SAID: ALSO HE[7] WHO WISHES TO SUBJECT HIS FRIEND TO A VOW TO EAT WITH HIM, SHOULD DECLARE: EVERY VOW WHICH I MAY MAKE IN THE FUTURE SHALL BE NULL'. [HIS VOWS ARE THEN INVALID,] PROVIDING THAT HE REMEMBERS THIS AT THE TIME OF THE VOW.

GEMARA. But since he says, 'Every vow which I may make in the future shall be null,' he will surely not listen to him[8] and not come to [eat with] him? —

---

(1) In an endeavour to find grounds for absolution.

(2) The Rabbis appear to have held open session.

(3) V. infra 64a. The tact must have been in existence, when the vow was made, but overlooked. If, however, it occurred only subsequently, it cannot be a ground for absolution.

(4) Apikora (pakar) etymologically should mean a loose, unbridled person. Its phonetic similarity phonetic similarity to Epicurus, the philosopher, stamped it with the meaning of sceptic, heretic, and that is its probable meaning in Sanh. XI, 2, where an apikoros is excluded from the world to come. The definition given in the Gemara, 99b, viz., one who is scornful of the Rabbis, which is the same as it bears here, was in all probability an extension of its meaning, due to feuds between the Rabbis and some sections of the people.

(5) And as their adherents naturally try to punish them, the incident could have been anticipated, and therefore is not regarded as unexpected

(6) The vow itself providing cause for absolution.

(7) The friend.

(8) This too is an example of a vow of incitement, v. Gemara.

The text is defective, and this is what was taught : He who desires his friend to eat with him, and after urging him, imposes a vow upon him, it is 'a vow of incitement [and hence invalid]. And he who desires that none of his vows made during the year shall be valid, let him stand at the beginning of the year and declare, 'Every vow which I may make in the future shall be null.[1] [HIS VOWS ARE THEN INVALID,] PROVIDING THAT HE REMEMBERS THIS AT THE TIME OF THE VOW. But if he remembers, he has cancelled the declaration and confirmed the vow?[2] — Abaye answered: Read: providing that it is not remembered at the time of the vow. Raba said, After all, it is as we said originally.[3] Here the circumstances are e.g., that one stipulated at the beginning of the year, but does not know in reference to what. Now he vows. Hence, if he remembers [the stipulation] and he declares: 'I vow in accordance with my original intention', his vow has no reality. But if he does not declare thus, he has cancelled his stipulation and confirmed his vow.

R. Huna b. Hinena wished to lecture thereon [sc. anticipatory cancellation] at the public session. But Raba remonstrated with him : The Tanna has intentionally obscured the law,[4] in order that vows should not be lightly treated, whilst you desire to teach it publicly!

The scholars propounded: Do the Rabbis disagree with R. Eliezer b. Jacob or not?[5] And should you say that they differ, is the halachah like him or not?[6] — Come and hear: For we learnt: If one says to his neighbour,

---

(1) This may have provided a support for the custom of reciting Kol Nidre (a formula for dispensation of vows) prior to the Evening Service of the Day of Atonement (Ran.). The context makes it perfectly obvious that only vows, where the maker abjures benefit from aught. or imposes an interdict of his own property upon his neighbour, are referred to. V. J.E. s.v. Kol Nidre. Though the beginning of the year (New Year) is mentioned here, the Day of Atonement was probably chosen on account of its great solemnity. But Kol Nidre as part of the ritual is later than the Talmud, and, as seen from the following statement about R. Huna h. Hinena, the law of revocation in advance was not made public.

(2) Since, when vowing. he knows of his previous declaration, he obviously disregards it. as otherwise he would not vow at all.

(3) The received text is correct.

(4) By giving a defective text. This implies that here, at least, the lacuna is not accidental, due to faulty transmission, but deliberate; cf. p. 2, n. 3.

(5) But regard this as a binding vow.

(6) Since the Mishnah teaches it as an individual opinion.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 24a

'Konam that I do not benefit from your if you do not accept for your son a kor of wheat and two barrels of wine,' — his neighbour may annul his vow without [recourse to] a Sage, by saying: 'Did you vow for any other purpose but to honour me? This [nonacceptance] is my honour.' Thus, it is only because he asserts, 'This is my honour'; but otherwise, it is [a binding] vow. Whose view is this? If R. Eliezer b. Jacob's, — it is a vow of incitement ?[1] Hence it must be the Rabbis,[2] thus proving that they disagree with R. Eliezer! — [No.] After all, it may be R. Eliezer b. Jacob's view: he admits that this is a [real] vow, for he [who makes it] says [in effect], 'I am not a dog, that I should benefit from you without your benefiting from me.'

Come and hear: If one says to his neighbour, ' Konam that you benefit not from me, if you do not give my son a kor of wheat and two barrels of wine,' — R. Meir rules: He is [so] forbidden until he gives; but the Rabbis maintain: He too can annul his vow without a Sage by declaring: 'I regard it as though I have received it.' Thus, it is only because he says, 'I regard it as though I have received it' ; but otherwise it is [a valid] vow. Whose view is this? If R. Eliezer b. Jacob's, — but it is a vow of incitement. Hence it must be the Rabbis'; thus proving that they disagree with him! — [No.] Verily, it may be R. Eliezer b. Jacob's view: he admits that this is a [real] vow, for he [who makes it] says, 'I am not a king to benefit you without your benefiting me.'

Mar Kashisha son of R. Hisda said to R. Ashi, Come and hear: VOWS [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE: If one subjected his neighbour to a vow to dine with him,[3] and then he or his son fell sick, or a river prevented him [from coming to him]. But otherwise the vow is binding. Whose view is this? If R. Eliezer b. Jacob's, — but it is [a vow of] incitement. Hence it must be the Rabbis', which proves that they disagree with him! — [No.] This may be R. Eliezer b. Jacob's view. Do you think that the inviter imposed the vow upon the invited? On the contrary, the invited imposed the vow upon the inviter. Thus: He said to his neighbour, 'Do you invite me to your banquet?' 'Yes,' replied he. 'Then make a vow to that effect.' So he vowed, and then he [the person invited] or his son fell sick, or was kept back by a river; such are vows [broken] under pressure.

Come and hear: R. Eliezer b. Jacob went even further [in his definition of vows of incitement]: If one says to his neighbour, 'konam that I do not benefit from you if you will not be my guest and partake of fresh bread and a hot drink with me'; and the latter remonstrated in his turn — such too are vows of incitement.[4] But the Sages did not admit this. Now, to what does this disagreement refer? Surely,

---

(1) Which is invalid in any case.

(2) The text is thus emended by Bah.

(3) Saying, 'You are forbidden to benefit from me if you do not eat with me'.

(4) [Although the fact that the invitation was so carefully worded, and that the other remonstrated would tend to indicate that the vower was in earnest.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 24b

even to the first [illustration given by R. Eliezer b. Jacob]! This proves that the Rabbis dispute his ruling [in its entirety]. This proves it.[1] What is our final conclusion on the matter?[2] — Come and hear: For R. Huna said: The halachah is like R. Eliezer b. Jacob.[3]

MISHNAH. VOWS OF EXAGGERATION: WHEN ONE SAYS, 'KONAM IF I DID NOT SEE ON THIS ROAD AS MANY AS DEPARTED FROM EGYPT, OR 'IF I DID NOT SEE A SERPENT LIKE THE BEAM OF AN OLIVE PRESS.

GEMARA. It was taught: Vows of exaggeration are invalid, but oaths of such a nature are binding. How are such oaths possible? Shall we say that one said. 'I swear [so and so] if I have not seen etc.' — he said nothing![4] — Abaye answered: When one declares, 'I swear that I did see' etc.[5] Raba objected: If so, why teach it?[6] Moreover, it is taught parallel to vows![7] But, said Raba: When one says, 'May [all] the fruit in the world be forbidden me on oath if I did not see on this road as many as departed from Egypt.' Rabina said to R. Ashi: Perhaps this man saw an ant nest and designated them[8] 'those who left Egypt's his oath thus being genuine? —

---

(1) So cur. edd. Asheri: No. The disagreement refers only to the latter example. Accordingly, the next question: what is our final conclusion, still refers to the same problem, whether the Rabbis disagree or not.

(2) Having proved that they disagree, whose view is law? V. preceding note.

(3) Ran: The answerer knew that R. Huna referred to the first too, or assumed that he would be referring to the Mishnah, which was well known by all, rather than the Baraitha, which was not so well known. Alternatively, the whole point of the question whether the Rabbis disagree is to know the correct halachah, for since they are in the majority it may not be as R. Eliezer b. Jacob. Now, however, that R. Huna gave his ruling that the halachah is as R. Eliezer b. Jacob in the whole matter, it makes no difference whether the Rabbis disagree with him or not.

(4) He did not complete his sentence.

(5) It is then not regarded as an intentionally false oath, meriting punishment, but as an oath of exaggeration.

(6) It is obvious.

(7) Just as vows seek to impose an interdict, so do these oaths too.

(8) On account of their large number.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 25a

He replied. One who swears, swears in our sense, and we do not think of an ant nest. Now, does one never swear in his own sense? But it was taught: When an oath is administered, he [the man swearing] is admonished: 'Know that we do not adjure you according to your own mind, but according to our mind[1] and the mind of the Court.' Now, what does this exclude? Surely the case of one who gave [his creditor] checkers [tokens in game] and [mentally] dubbed them coins; and since he is admonished, 'according to our intention,' it follows that [otherwise] one may swear in his own sense? — No. It excludes such an incident as Raba's cane. A man with a monetary claim upon his neighbour once came before Raba, demanding of the debtor, 'Come and pay me.' 'I have repaid you,' pleaded he. 'If so,' said Raba to him, 'go and swear to him that you have repaid.' Thereupon he went and brought a [hollow] cane, placed the money therein, and came before the Court, walking and leaning on it. [Before swearing] he said to the plaintiff: 'Hold the cane in your hand'. He then took a scroll of the Law and swore that he had repaid him all that he [the creditor] held in his hand.[2] The creditor thereupon broke the cane in his rage and the money poured out on the ground; it was thus seen that he had [literally] sworn to the truth.[3]

But even so, does one never swear in his own sense? But it was taught: Thus we find that when Moses adjured the children of Israel in the plains of Moab, he said unto them, 'Know that I do not adjure you in your sense, but in mine, and in that of the Omnipresent', as it is written, Neither with you only etc.[4] Now what did Moses say to Israel? Surely this: Lest you transgress my words[5] and then say. 'We swore in our own sense'; therefore he exhorted them: [swear] in my sense. What does this exclude: surely the naming of idols 'god'? This proves that one does sometimes swear in his own sense. — No. Idols too are called 'god', as it is written, And against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment.[6] Then let him adjure then, to fulfil the commands? — That might imply the commands of the King. Then let him adjure then, to fulfil all the commands? — That might imply [the precept of] fringes,[7] for a Master said, The precept of fringes is equal to all the [other] precepts of the Torah.[8] But why did not Moses simply adjure the Israelites to fulfil the Torah?[9] — Because that would imply one Torah only.[10] Then why not adjure then, to fulfil the Toroth?[11] — That might mean the Torah of the meal-offering, the Torah of the sin-offering, the Torah of the trespass-offering.[12] Then why not impose an oath to fulfil the whole Torah? — The whole Torah might mean merely to refrain from idolatry, as it was taught : Idolatry is so grave a sin that the rejection thereof is as the fulfilment of the whole Torah. Then why not impose an oath to observe the prohibition against idolatry and the whole Torah; or to fulfil the six hundred thirteen precepts? — Moses used a general expression without troubling [to enumerate details].[13]

OR IF I DID NOT SEE A SERPENT LIKE THE BEAMS OF AN OLIVE-PRESS. Is this impossible? Was there not a serpent in the days of King Shapur[14] before which thirteen stables of straw were laced, and it swallowed then, all?[15] — Samuel answered: He meant 'as smooth as a bean, etc.' But are not all serpents smooth? — We speak [of one who declared that] its back was smooth [not on]y the neck].[16] Then let him [the Tanna] state 'smooth'? — He thereby informs us in passing that the beams of the olive-press must be smooth. How does this affect the law? — In respect of buying and selling: to tell you that if one sells the beams of an olive-press. the sale is valid only if they are smooth, but not otherwise.[17]

---

(1) [In Shebu. 29b. the reading is 'the mind of the Omnipresent'.]

(2) In his (the debtor's) possession i.e., all that he claimed of him.

(3) Hence the exhortation is needed to exclude such oaths, as the defendant may really believe that be is swearing truly. But no person regards his oath as true when he mentally attaches a particular meaning to his words.

(4) Deut. XXIX, 13; i.e., not merely according to your thoughts.

(5) [So Bah. cur. edd. 'lest you do something'.]

(6) Ex. XII, 12.

(7) Num. XV, 38.

(8) Because it is written, and it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the Lord. Ibid. 39.

(9) Instead of imposing an oath against idol worship, which, as shewn, is ambiguous.

(10) The written Law, but not the Oral law. The former is the Bible, more especially the Pentateuch, while the latter is the whole body of tradition and Rabbinical development thereof. It is generally assumed that the Oral Law was the matter In dispute between the Pharisees, who accepted it, and the Sadducees, who rejected it. Weiss, Dor, I, 116 seq.; Halevy, Doroth, I, 3, 360 seq. denies this ii to, and maintains that the Sadducees were purely a political party that rejected religious teaching altogether, and only later, through force of circumstances, attempted some interpretation of Scripture.

(11) Pl. of Torah.
(12) Each of which is referred to a 'torah': Lev. VI, 7, 18; VII, 1.
(13) The text of the whole passage is in some disorder, the translation is of the text as emended by Bah; for further notes v. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 159ff.
(14) Shapur I, a contemporary of Samuel and King of Persia.
(15) This question assumes that the comparison is in point of size. — Aruch reads: thirteen hides full of straw'. Rashi in Shebu. 29b explains that it was a man-eating serpent. hot coals were concealed in the straw, and these killed it. [This is reminiscent of the Apocryphal story of Daniel and the Dragon]
(16) The backs of serpents are not smooth but somewhat scaly, caused by hard folds of skin, v. Lewysohn, Zoologie, p. 234.
(17) A number of other interpretations have been given to the whole passage. Rashi translates: spotted like a beam. Ran: incised like a beam; and an alternative, based on the Jerusalemi: square like a beam, instead of circular. Asheri inclines to the last interpretation.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 25b

MISHNAH. VOWS IN ERROR: [IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM,] IF I ATE OR DRANK, AND THEN REMEMBERED THAT HE HAD; OR, 'IF I EAT OR DRINK,' AND THEN FORGOT [HIS VOW] AND ATE OR DRANK; [OR] 'KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT WHICH MY WIFE HAS OF ME, BECAUSE SHE STOLE MY PURSE OR BEAT MY CHILD, AND IT WAS SUBSEQUENTLY LEARNT THAT SHE HAD NOT BEATEN HIM NOR STOLEN; ALL THESE ARE VOWS IN ERROR. IF A MAN SAW PEOPLE EATING [HIS] FIGS AND SAID TO THEM, LET THE FIGS BE A KORBAN TO YOU,' AND THEN DISCOVERED THEM TO BE HIS FATHER OR HIS BROTHERS,[1] WHILE OTHERS WERE WITH THEM TOO — BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: HIS FATHER AND BROTHERS ARE PERMITTED, BUT THE REST ARE FORBIDDEN. BETH HILLEL RULE: ALL ARE PERMITTED.

GEMARA. It was taught: Just as vows in error are permitted, so are oaths in error.[2] What are oaths in error? — E.g., those of R. Kahana and R. Assi. One said, I swear that Rab taught this, whilst the other asserted, I swear that he taught this: thus each swore truthfully according to his belief.

IF A MAN SAW PEOPLE EATING [HIS] FIGS. We learnt elsewhere: The Sabbaths and festivals are suggested as an opening [for regret].[3] Before then the ruling was that for those day's the vow is canceled, but for others it is binding; until R. Akiba taught: A vow which is partially annulled is entirely annulled.

Rabbah said: All agree that if he said, 'Had I known that my father was among you I would have declared, "You are all forbidden except my father",' all are forbidden but his father is permitted. They differ only if he asserted, 'Had I known that my father was among you. I would have said, "So-and-so are forbidden and my father is permitted".'[4]

---

(1) Whom he would not have prohibited.
(2) V. Shebu. 28b.
(3) E.g., if one made a self-denying vow, the Rabbi may ask him, 'Had you known that this is forbidden on Sabbaths and Festivals, would you have vowed?' Should he answer 'No', he is absolved.
(4) In the former instance, the second declaration, apart from excluding his father, does not alter the vow at all, since just as he first vowed 'you are all forbidden', so now too. Therefore it is not regarded as even partially annulled. But in the second case, the actual form of the vow is changed from the inclusive you are all forbidden' to the detailed enumeration 'So-and-so are forbidden', even if the enumeration covered all. Because of these two factors, viz., the exclusion of his father and the change in form in respect to the rest, it is regarded as partially annulled. Thus the view of Beth Hillel is in accordance with R. Akiba's dictum, whilst Beth Shammai's decision agrees with the earlier ruling. In many cases we find Beth Shammai adhering to the older view; cf. Weiss, Dor, I, 183.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 26a

But Raba maintained: All agree that if he declared, ‘Had I known that my father was among you I would have said, "So-and-so are forbidden but my father is permitted",’ all are permitted.[1] They are in dispute only if he declared, ‘Had I known that my father was among you, I would have said, "You are all forbidden except my father".’ Beth Shammai agree with R. Meir, who maintains, one's first words are to be reckoned with, and Beth Hillel agree with R. Jose who said, one's last words count.[2]

R. Papa objected to Raba: In what instance did R. Akiba rule that a vow which is partially annulled is entirely annulled? E.g., [If one said.] ‘Konam, that I do not benefit from any of you,’ if one was [subsequently] permitted [to afford him benefit], they are all permitted. [But if he said,] ‘Konam that I do not benefit from A, B, C,’ etc.: if the first was [subsequently] permitted, all are permitted; but if the last-named was permitted, he alone is permitted, but the rest are forbidden. As for Rabbah, it is well, [for] he can apply the first clause[3] to one who [in the first instance] enumerated A, B, C, etc.;[4] while the second clause[5] refers to one who [in the first instance] declared, ‘to any of you.’[6] But as for yourself: granted that you can apply the first clause to one who [in his second statement] declared, ‘to any of you.’[7]

---

(1) Even Beth Shammai regard such as a partially annulled vow, and accept R. Akiba's dictum.

(2) The dispute refers to his second declaration, which is divided into ‘first words’ and ‘last words’. The first words are, ‘you are all forbidden’; since these are identical with his earlier declaration, Beth Shammai maintain that his vow has not even been partially annulled. His last words are ‘except my father’, since these definitely limit the scope of the earlier declaration, Beth Hillel maintain that the vow has thereby been partially, and consequently entirely, annulled.

(3) Viz., ‘konam that I do not benefit from all of you’.

(4) Subsequently altering it to the form given in the Mishnah.

(5) ‘Konam that I do not benefit from A, B, C’, etc.

(6) Hence the actual forms given refer to the second declaration. Now, Rabbah maintains that the dispute of Beth Hillel and Beth Shammai, as that of R. Akiba and his predecessors, refers to a case where the second declaration, besides excluding a particular person, differs in form from the first. Hence in the two instances dealt with here it is the view only of R. Akiba (and Beth Hillel) that that absolution extends to all; but his predecessors hold that even in these instances absolution is limited to the person definitely excluded. This explanation does not allow for the distinction drawn in the two subdivisions of the second clause, and Raba draws attention to it in his reply. — A number of varying interpretations have been given in this passage. The one adopted here is that of Tosaf.

(7) Hence, as explained by Raba above, this ruling is disputed by R. Akiba's predecessors; therefore it is given as an illustration of R. Akiba's view on), implying that his predecessors disagree.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 26b

But as for the second clause, where one enumerated, A, B, C — is this R. Akiba's view [only]: why do the Rabbis disagree therewith? But you say that all agree that the vow is entirely annulled? — Raba answered: Even according to Rabbah, is R. Akiba's ruling satisfactory? How have you explained it: that he said, ‘any of you’: who then is the ‘first’, and who is the ‘last’? But [explain it thus]: The first clause means that he said, ‘any of you’; but the second refers e.g., to one who made each dependent on the preceding, vowing, B be as A, C be as B, etc.[1] This may be proved too, for it is taught: if the middle person was permitted, those mentioned after him are [also] permitted, but not those named before.

R. Adda b. Ahaba objected to Raba: ‘Konam, if I taste onions, because they are injurious to the heart’: then one said to him, But the wild onion[2] is good for the heart — he is permitted to partake of wild onions, and not only of these, but of all onions. Such a case happened before R. Meir, who gave absolution in respect of all onions. Does it not mean that he declared, ‘Had I known that wild onions are good for the heart, I would have vowed: "all onions be forbidden me, but wild onions be permitted"'?[3] — No. This refers to one who declared, 'Had I known that wild onions are good for the heart, I would have vowed, "Such and such onions be forbidden me, but wild onions be permitted"'; and therefore R. Meir's ruling agrees with both R. Akiba and the Rabbis.

Rabina objected to Raba: R. Nathan said: A vow may be partly permitted and partly binding. E.g., if one vowed not to eat a basket [of figs],

---

(1) Therefore if by his second statement A is excluded, the rest are likewise excluded. But if the last-named is excluded, the vow remains in full force with respect to those mentioned earlier.

(2) Rashi: the name of a place — probably Cyprus.

(3) This contradicts Raba's view that Beth Shammai's ruling, confining absolution only to that explicitly excluded, is in agreement with R. Meir. Here we see that R. Meir himself granted complete absolution.

among which were shuah[1] figs, and then declared, 'Had I known that shuali figs were among them, I would not have vowed' — the basket of figs is forbidden, but the shuah figs are permitted. Then R. Akiba came and taught: A vow which is partially annulled is entirely annulled. Does it not mean that he declared, 'Had I known that shuah figs were among them, I would have vowed: "The black figs and white figs be forbidden, but the shuah figs be permitted"?' Yet it is R. Akiba's view only, but the Rabbis dispute it.[2] — No. This refers to one who declared, 'Had I known that shuah figs were among them, I would have vowed, "Let the whole basket [of figs] be forbidden, but the shuah figs permitted."'

Which Tanna is the authority for the following dictum of the Rabbis? If one vowed simultaneously not to benefit from five men, if he is absolved in respect of one of them, he is absolved in respect of all; but [if he stated,] 'Except one of them,' that one is permitted, but the others are forbidden [to him]. According to Rabbah, the first clause agrees with R. Akiba [only], and the second clause with all.[3] According to Raba, the second clause agrees with the Rabbis [only], and the first clause with all.

MISHNAH. VOWS [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE: IF ONE SUBJECTED HIS NEIGHBOUR TO A VOW, TO DINE WITH HIM,[4] AND THEN HE OR HIS SON FELL SICK, OR A RIVER PREVENTED HIM [FROM COMING TO HIM] — SUCH IS A VOW [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE. GEMARA. A man once deposited his rights[5] at Beth din, and declared: 'If I do not appear within thirty days, these rights shall be void.' Subsequently he was unavoidably prevented from appearing. Thereupon R. Huna ruled: His rights are void. But Rabbah said to him, He was unavoidably prevented, and the Divine Law exempts such,for it is written, But unto the damsel shalt thou do nothing.[6] And should you answer, the death penalty is different ,[7] □ but we learnt ; VOWS [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE; IF ONE SUBJECTED HIS NEIGHBOUR TO A VOW TO DINE WITH HIM, AND THEN HE OR HIS SON FELL SICK, OR A RIVER PREVENTED HIM [FROM COMING TO HIM] — SUCH IS A VOW [BROKEN] UNDER PRESSURE![8] Now, according to Rabbah, wherein does this differ from what We learnt: [If one said to his wife,] 'Behold! this is thy divorce, [to be effective] from now, if I do not come back within twelve months', and he died within the twelve months, the divorce is valid?[9] Yet why so? was he not forcibly prevented! — I will tell you. There it may be different,

---

(1) A species of white figs.

(2) This contradicts Raba's view that in such a case there is no dispute.

(3) In the first clause it is assumed that his partially revoking statement was, 'Had I known that X was in the group, I would have said, ' 'A, B, C, etc. be forbidden, but X be permitted".' This assumption is based on the contrast with the second clause, where one was excluded, from which it is assumed that his revoking statement was, ‘Had I known . . . I would have declared, "All of you be forbidden etc."’

(4) Saying, ‘You are forbidden to benefit from me if you do not eat with me’.

(5) A document embodying his rights (Tosaf.).

(6) Deut. XXII, 26. This refers to a betrothed maiden who was violated against her will; but if she was a consenting party, she was punished with death.

(7) Because of its gravity.

(8) Proving that such exemption holds good in all cases.

(9) And if she is childless she is free from Levirate marriage or the ceremony of loosening the ‘shoe (v. Deut XXV, 5. seq.), because she is not the deceased's widow.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 27b

because had he known that he would die, he would have decided and given the divorce so as to take effect immediately.[1] And how does it differ from the case of the man who declared, ‘If I do not come within thirty days from now, let it be a divorce. ‘ He came [on the last day], but was cut off through [the lack of] a ferry. [Yet though] he cried out, ‘See! I have come; see! I have come!’ Samuel ruled, That is not called coming[2] . But why: surely he was unavoidably prevented? — Perhaps an accident that can be foreseen is different, and [the lack of] a ferry could be foreseen.[3]

Now according to R. Huna, let us see; It is an asmakta,[4] and an asmakta gives no title?[5] — Here it is different, because he had deposited his rights.[6] And where they are deposited, is it not an asmakta? But we learnt: If one repaid a portion of his debt, and then placed the bond in the hands of a third party, and declared, ‘If I do not repay [the balance] within thirty days, return the bill to the creditor,’[7] and the time came and he did not repay, R. Jose maintained: He [the third party] must surrender the bond to the [creditor]; R. Judah maintained: He must not surrender it. And R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbahu in Rab's name: The halachah is not as R. Jose, who ruled that an asmakta gives a legal claim.[8] — Here it is different, because he had declared, ‘These rights shall be void.’[9] Now the law is: an asmakta does give a legal claim, providing that no unavoidable accident supervened and that a formal acquisition was made[10] at an authoritative Beth din.[11]

MISHNAH. ONE MAY VOW TO MURDERERS,[12] ROBBERS,[13] AND PUBLICANS THAT IT [THE PRODUCE WHICH THEY DEMAND] IS TERUMAH, EVEN IF IT IS NOT,[14] OR THAT IT BELONGS TO THE ROYAL HOUSE, EVEN IF IT DOES NOT. BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: ONE MAY MAKE ANY FORM OF VOW,

---

(1) So that the result would be the same.

(2) Because he had stipulated to come at a particular time.

(3) But the Mishnah refers to a river abnormally swollen by the rains and inciting snow.

(4) V. Glos.

(5) I.e., gives the claimant no rights, because it is presumed that such a promise was not meant seriously, but made only in order to give the transaction the character of good faith and solemnity.

(6) Not merely promised them.

(7) Who will thus be able to demand the full sum.

(8) V. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 734.

(9) This is a stronger declaration than e.g., ‘I will not claim my rights’; hence it is valid.

(10) The conceding party formally ceded his rights. This was symbolically effected by one giving an article, e.g., a scarf, to the other.

(11) Rash and Maim.: an ordained Beth din; Ran: a Beth din with the power to enforce its decisions.

(12) I.e., robbers who kill if their demands are not granted.

(13) Rashi, Ran, Rosh and Tosaf. all interpret this as private robbers. Jast.: official oppressors. These are less desperate than murderers, and do not kill if their demands are refused.

(14) This vow is to save it from their hands, as terumah is forbidden to a zar, q.v. Glos. — It is remarkable that even murderers and robbers are assumed to respect the prohibition of terumah!

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 28a

EXCEPTING THAT SUSTAINED BY AN OATH;[1] BUT BETH HILLEL MAINTAIN: EVEN SUCH ARE PERMISSIBLE.[2] BETH SHAMMAI RULE: HE MUST NOT VOLUNTEER TO VOW;[3] BETH HILLEL RULE: HE MAY DO SO. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: [HE MAY VOW] ONLY AS FAR AS HE [THE MURDERER, etc.] MAKES HIM VOW; BETH HILLEL SAY: EVEN IN RESPECT OF WHAT HE DOES NOT MAKE HIM VOW. E.G., IF HE [THE ROBBER] SAID TO HIM, SAY: KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT MY WIFE HAS OF ME'; AND HE DECLARED, 'KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT MY WIFE AND CHILDREN HAVE OF ME,' — BETH SHAMMAI RULE: HIS WIFE IS PERMITTED, BUT HIS CHILDREN ARE FORBIDDEN; BETH HILLEL RULE: BOTH ARE PERMITTED.

GEMARA. But Samuel said, The law of the country is law?[4] — R. Hinena said in the name of R. Kahana in the name of Samuel: The Mishnah refers to a publican who is not limited to a legal due.[5] The School of R. Jannai answered: This refers to an unauthorised collector.

OR THAT IT BELONGS TO THE ROYAL HOUSE, EVEN IF IT DOES NOT. How does he vow? — R. Amram said in Rab's name: By saying, 'May all the fruits of the world be forbidden me, if this does not belong to the royal house.' But if he said, 'may they be forbidden,' all the fruits of the world are forbidden to him.[6] — He adds, to-day. But if so, the publican will not accept it! — He mentally stipulates 'to-day,' but makes no explicit reservation; and though we [normally] rule that an unexpressed stipulation is invalid,[7] it is different when made under duress.

BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: ONE MAY MAKE ANY FORM OF VOW . . . BUT BETH HILLEL RULE THAT EVEN SUCH ARE PER MISSIBLE. BETH SHAMMAI RULE: THE OWNER MUST NOT VOLUNTEER TO VOW; BETH HILLEL RULE: HE MAY DO SO. BETH SHAMMAI SAY: HE MAY VOW ONLY AS FAR AS HE [THE MURDERER] MAKES HIM VOW; BETH HILLEL SAY: EVEN IN RESPECT OF WHAT HE DOES NOT MAKE HIM VOW. E.G., IF HE [THE ROBBER] SAID TO HIM, SAY: KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT MY WIFE HAS OF ME'; AND THE OWNER DECLARED, 'KONAM BE ANY BENEFIT MY WIFE AND CHIldren HAVE OF ME — BETH SHAMMAI RULE: HIS WIFE IS PERMITTED, BUT HIS CHILDREN ARE FORBIDDEN; BETH HILLEL RULE: BOTH ARE PERMITTED.

R. Huna said: A Tanna taught: Beth Shammai maintain: He must not volunteer with an oath; Beth Hillel say: He may volunteer even with an oath. Now, in the view of Beth Shammai, only with an oath may he not volunteer, but he may volunteer a vow. But we learnt: BETH SHAMMAI RULE: THE OWNER MUST NOT VOLUNTEER TO VOW. Moreover, he may merely not volunteer an oath, but he may vow with an oath [if requested]; but we learnt, BETH SHAMMAI MAINTAIN: ONE MAY MAKE ANY FORM OF VOW, EXCEPTING THAT SUSTAINED BY AN OATH? — The Mishnah deals with a vow, to shew how far-reaching is Beth Shammai's ruling;[8] whilst the Baraitha treats of an oath, to shew the full extent of Beth Hillel's view.[9]

R. Ashi answered, This is what is taught: Beth Shammai say, There is no absolution for an oath; and Beth Hillel say, There is absolution for an oath.[10]

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS,] 'LET THESE SAPLINGS BE KORBAN [I.E., CONSECRATED] IF THEY ARE NOT CUT DOWN'; OR, LET THIS GARMENT BE KORBAN IF IT IS NOT BURNT: THEY CAN BE REDEEMED.[11] [IF HE SAYS,] 'LET THESE SAPLINGS BE KORBAN UNTIL THEY ARE CUT DOWN ; OR, LET THIS GARMENT BE KORBAN UNTIL IT IS

BURNT',

(1) I.e. one may not vow, 'may this corn be forbidden me by an oath if' etc.

(2) Weiss, Dor I, p. 185, conjectures that this controversy arose out of Herod's demand that all the members of the nation should swear loyalty to him (Joseph. Ant. 15, ¤ 10).

(3) If the murderer does not demand a vow as an assurance, he must not offer to vow of his own accord.

(4) Therefore the publican has a legal claim: why then is the owner permitted to evade payment by a false vow?

(5) Under the Roman Procurators there was a tremendous amount of illegal extortion, particularly of octroi tolls, v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 148.

(6) For if the vow contains no sort of evasion, it is binding whatever its purpose.

(7) Lit., 'words that are in the heart are no words'.

(8) I.e., one may not volunteer even a vow, which is not as grave as an oath.

(9) That one may volunteer even an oath, in spite of its greater gravity.

(10) According to this, the Baraitha does not treat of vows under pressure at all. The Heb. lo yiftah (rendered 'he may not volunteer') will mean: He (the rabbi) must not give an opening for regret, i.e., must not grant absolution.

(11) They are duly consecrated, and must be redeemed before they are permitted for secular use.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 28b

THEY CANNOT BE REDEEMED.[1]

GEMARA. Let [the Mishnah] teach 'they are consecrated!'[2] — Because the second clause must state ' THEY CANNOT BE REDEEMED,'[3] the first clause also states, 'THEY CAN BE REDEEMED.

How was the vow made?[4] — Amemar answered: By saying, '. . . if they are not cut down to-day'; and the day passed without their being cut down. If so, why teach it: is it not obvious? — The need for teaching it arises e.g., when a strong wind is blowing.[5] But the same is taught with respect to a garment: and does a garment stand to be burnt? — Even so; e.g., when a fire has broken out. So here too [in respect of plants], a strong wind is blowing; and I might think that he thought that they would not be saved, and therefore vowed.[6] Hence the Mishnah informs us [that the vow is binding].

LET THESE SAPLINGS BE KORBAN etc. [Can they] never [be redeemed]?[7] — Said Bar Pada: If he redeems them, they revert to their sanctity; if he redeems them again, they again revert to their sanctity, until they are cut down.[8] When cut down, he redeems them once,[9] and that suffices. 'Ulla said: Having been cut down, they require no further redemption.[10]

(1) Because a definite limit having been set, even if they are redeemed, they revert to their consecrated state.

(2) Instead of the unusual 'they can be redeemed'. This is the reading of Ran, Asheri, and one view of Tosaf. Rashi's reading, which is that of cur. edd. is, 'let the Mishnah teach "they are consecrated" (in one respect) "and unconsecrated" (in another)'; the meaning of which is, they are consecrated in accordance with his vow', but not so strongly that they cannot be redeemed. This aspect of non-consecration is merely by contrast with the case of the second clause, where, even if redeemed, they revert to their consecrated state. [Tosaf. in name of R. Isaac of Dampierre (Ri.) gives a more satisfactory interpretation to this reading: 'They are consecrated' as long as they are not cut down, and 'unconsecrated' when they are cut down.]

(3) It would be insufficient merely to state that they are consecrated, as the emphasis lies on the fact that redemption cannot release them.

(4) Since ultimately they have to be cut down, how' and when can they become consecrated?

(5) In which case it might be assumed that he never for a moment thought it possible for the saplings to be spared and did not consecrate them with a perfect heart.

(6) But not really meaning it, and so the vow is invalid.

(7) Surely that is impossible, since the vow set a limit to their period of sanctity!

(8) V. p. 82, n. 3.
(9) V. infra.
(10) Since by the term of the vow their consecration lasts only until then.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 29a

Said R. Hamnuna to him: Whither then has their sanctity departed? What if one said to a woman, 'Be thou my wife to-day, but to-morrow thou art no longer my wife': would she be free without a divorce?[1] — Raba replied: Can you compare monetary consecration to bodily consecration?[2] Monetary sanctity may automatically end; but bodily consecration cannot end thus. Abaye objected to him: Cannot bodily consecration automatically cease? But it was taught: [If one says.] 'Let this ox be a burntoffering for thirty days, and after that a peace-offering':[3] it is a burntoffering for thirty days, and after that a peace-offering. Now why? it has bodily sanctity, yet it loses it automatically![4] — This deals with one who consecrated its value.[5] If so, consider the second clause: [If he says,] 'Let it be a burnt-offering after thirty days, but a peace-offering from now' [it is so]. Now, if you agree that one clause refers to bodily sanctity, and the other to monetary sanctity,

(1) Notwithstanding that he had married her for a limited period. So here too, though he had declared, 'let them be korban until they are cut down'; yet when they are, they do not automatically lose their sanctity. but must be redeemed.
(2) The plants have only a monetary consecration, i.e., they cannot themselves be offered in the Temple, but must be redeemed, and their redemption money is utilized in the Temple service. But a married woman is herself consecrated to her husband.
(3) I.e., if sacrificed within thirty days, it must be a burnt-offering; if after, a peace-offering.
(4) Its sanctity as a burnt-offering has automatically ceased, though it retains the sanctity of a peace-offering.
(5) I.e. , the value of this ox be consecrated as a burnt-offering for thirty days. viz., that if redeemed within thirty days, a burntoffering must be bought for the money; if after, a peace-offering.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 29b

hence the Tanna must teach both [clauses], because I would think that monetary consecration can automatically cease, but not so bodily sanctity; hence both are rightly taught. But if you maintain that the two refer to monetary consecration, why teach them both? If a higher sanctity can automatically give way to a lower sanctity, Surely it is superfluous to state that a lower sanctity can be replaced by a higher one?[1] Shall we say that this is a refutation of Bar Pada, who maintained that sanctity cannot cease automatically? — Said R. Papa, Bar Pada can answer thus: The text is defective,[2] and this is its meaning: If he did not say, 'let this be a peace — offering from now, it remains a burnt-offering after thirty days.[3] This may be compared to the case of one who says to a woman, 'Be thou betrothed unto me after thirty days'; she becomes betrothed [then], even though the money [of betrothal] has been consumed [in the meanwhile].[4] But is this not obvious?[5] — This is necessary only [to teach that] where he supplemented his first declaration [it is still ineffective].[6] Now that is well on the view that she [the woman] cannot retract;[7] but on the view that she can retract, what can be said?[8] — Even according to that view, this case is different, because a verbal promise to God is as actual delivery in secular transactions.[9]

R. Abin and R. Isaac b. Rabbi[10] were sitting before R. Jeremiah, who was dozing. Now they sat and stated: According to Bar Pada, who maintained that they revert to their sanctity,

(1) The burnt-offering has a higher sanctity than a peace-offering.
(2) This is Rashi's reading, but is absent from the versions of Asheri, Ran, and Tosaf.
(3) The text is thus to be reconstructed: If one says, 'Let this ox be a burntoffering for thirty days, and from now and after thirty days a peace-offering': it is a burnt-offering for the first thirty days, and a peace-offering after that. But if he did not say, 'Let it be a peace-offering from now and after thirty days', but merely, 'let it be a burnt-offering for thirty days; and a peace-offering afterwards'; it remains a burnt-offering after thirty days. In the former case, the sanctity pertaining to the burnt-offering automatically ceases, because that of the peace-offering is potentially concurrent therewith and extends beyond it; but in the latter case, the sanctity cannot automatically cease (Rashi). Ran, Asheri and Tosaf. explain it differently.

(4) So here too. When the second sanctity is not imposed concurrently with the first, the latter, on the completion of the thirty days, is similar to the money, which though consumed in the meanwhile, is nevertheless effective in betrothing the woman; so also the first sanctity remains though the period has been 'consumed'.

(5) Since it is taught that only when the second sanctity runs concurrently with the first does it take effect after thirty days, it is self-evident that if it is not imposed concurrently, the first sanctity remains after the period.

(6) I.e. , if after declaring. 'this ox be a burnt-offering for thirty days and after that let it be a peaceoffering' (in which case, as we have seen, it remains a burnt-offering), he made a supplementary statement, 'let it be a peace-offering from now and after thirty days', it will still remain a burnt-offering after that period, because this statement from now' must be made at the outset. Now, if only the first clause had been taught. viz., that if he imposed the second sanctity concurrently with

(7) During the interval and become betrothed to another man. So here too, unless the second sanctity was at the outset imposed concurrently with the first, the force of the latter remains.

(8) So here too by analogy, even if the second sanctity was not imposed concurrently with the first, it should cancel the first after the thirty days.

(9) I.e., the declaration, 'this ox be a burntoffering for thirty days', has more force than a normal promise affecting the interests of man only. but is regarded as though thereby the animal had actually been made into a burnt-offering. and therefore that sanctity, even though imposed for a limited period, remains after it, unless another was imposed concurrently therewith.

(10) [Read with MS.M 'b. Joseph'.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 30a

you may solve the problem of R. Hoshaia. Viz., what if one gives two perutahs to a woman, saying to her, 'Be thou betrothed unto me for one of these to-day. and for the other be thou betrothed unto me after I divorce thee'?[1] [Now, from Bar Pada's ruling you may deduce that the second] is indeed [valid] kiddushin.[2] This the first the former is duly effective, I would think that it is so even if this concurrent sanctity was imposed only in a supplementary statement. Hence the need for the second clause, viz., that if the second sanctity was not (at the very outset) imposed concurrently with the first, it cannot come into effect. roused R. Jeremiah, and he said to them, Why do you compare redemption by the owner to redemption by others? Thus did R. Johanan say: If he himself redeems them, they revert to their sanctity; but if others redeem them, they do not.[3] Now a [divorced] woman may be compared to the case of redemption by others.[4] It was stated likewise: R. Ammi said in R. Johanan's name: Only if he himself redeems them was this taught [that they revert to their sanctity]; but when others redeem them, they do not revert to their sanctity.

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM SEAFARERS, MAY BENEFIT FROM LAND-DWELLERS; FROM LAND-DWELLERS, HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] EVEN FROM SEAFARERS, BECAUSE SEAFARERS ARE INCLUDED IN THE TERM LAND-DWELLERS'; NOT THOSE WHO MERELY TRAVEL FROM ACCO TO JAFFA,[5] BUT THOSE WHO SAIL AWAY GREAT DISTANCES [FROM LAND].

GEMARA. R. Papa and R. Aha son of R. Ika — one referred it [the last statement] to the first clause, and the other to the second. Now, he who referred it to the first clause learnt thus: HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM SEAFARERS MAY BENEFIT FROM LAND-DWELLERS. Hence, he may not benefit from seafarers; NOT THOSE WHO MERELY

---

(1) Is the second betrothal valid?

(2) For, just as the plants after redemption revert to their sanctity in virtue of an earlier declaration, so the woman, after being freed by a divorce, will revert to her betrothed state in virtue of the declaration prior thereto — Ran and Asheri. Rashi: For, when the plants are cut down, they should, according to the terms of the vow, lose their sanctity; yet in virtue of the first declaration they retain it until they are redeemed. So here too: though the divorce sets the woman free, the prior declaration is valid insofar as she becomes betrothed again. This interpretation is rather strained. Moreover, it would appear that the deduction is made from the fact that before being cut down the plants revert to their sanctity after being redeemed, and not because they require redemption even after being cut down. In Rashi's favour, however, it may be observed that this law of consecration after redemption is that of the Mishnah as explained both by Bar Pada and by 'Ulla. So that the particular reference to Bar Pada may indicate that the solution in deduced from the continued sanctity of the saplings after they are cut down, which is maintained by Bar Pada only.

(3) For since they are redeemed by others, they are no longer under the authority of their first owner, therefore his first declaration is no longer valid.

(4) Because once divorced, she is no longer under her husband's authority, just as the plants, when redeemed by others, are not under the authority of their first owner.

(5) Acco (also called Acre). A city and seaport of Phoenicia on a promontory at the foot of mount Carmel ('Cf. Josephus. Ant, II, 10, 2). Jaffa. A city of Palestine and a Mediterranean Port, 35 miles northwest of Jerusalem.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 30b

TRAVEL FROM ACCO TO JAFFA, as these are land-dwellers, BUT THOSE WHO SAIL AWAY GREAT DISTANCES [FROM LAND]. He who referred it to the second clause learnt thus: [IF ONE VOWS NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM LAND-DWELLERS, HE MAY NOT BENEFIT FROM SEAFARERS; [this applies] NOT ONLY TO THOSE WHO TRAVEL MERELY FROM ACCO TO JAFFA. BUT EVEN TO THOSE WHO TRAVEL GREAT DISTANCES, since they eventually land.

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM THE SEERS OF THE SUN, IS FORBIDDEN FROM THE BLIND TOO, BECAUSE HE MEANT THOSE WHOM THE SUN SEES'.[1]

GEMARA. What is the reason? — Since he did not say 'from those who see,' he meant to exclude only fish and embryos.[1]

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM THE BLACK-HAIRED MAY NOT [BENEFIT] FROM THE BALD AND THE GREY-HAIRED, BUT MAY [BENEFIT] FROM WOMEN AND CHILDREN, BECAUSE ONLY MEN ARE CALLED BLACKHAIRED.

GEMARA. What is the reason? — Since he did not say 'from those who possess hair'.[2]

BUT MAY [BENEFIT] FROM WOMEN AND CHILDREN, BECAUSE ONLY MEN ARE CALLED 'BLACK-HAIRED'. What is the reason? — Men sometimes cover their heads and sometimes not; but women's hair is always covered, and children are always bareheaded.[3] MISHNAH. ONE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM YILLODIM [THOSE BORN] MAY [BENEFIT] FROM NOLADIM THOSE TO BE BORN]; FROM NOLADIM, HE MAY NOT [BENEFIT] FROM YILLODIM. R. MEIR PERMITTED [HIM TO BENEFIT] EVEN FROM YILLODIM; BUT THE SAGES SAY: HE MEANT ALL WHOSE NATURE IT IS TO BE BORN.[4]

GEMARA. Now, according to R. Meir, noladim go without saying;[5] who then is forbidden to him? — The text is defective, and thus to be reconstructed: ONE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM YILLODIM MAY [BENEFIT] FROM NOLADIM; FROM NOLADIM, YILLODIM ARE FORBIDDEN TO HIM. R. MEIR SAID: ALSO HE WHO VOWS NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM NOLADIM MAY [BENEFIT] FROM YILLODIM, JUST AS HE WHO VOWS NOT TO BENEFIT FROM YILLODIM MAY [BENEFIT] FROM NOLADIM.[6]

R. Papa said to Abaye: Are we to conclude that noladim implies those about to be born? If so, does the verse, thy two sons, which noladim unto thee in the land of Egypt,[7] — mean 'who are to be born'?[8] — What then will you say: that it implies who were born? If so, what of the verse, behold a child nolad unto the house of David Josiah by name:[9] will you say that he was [already born]? but even Menasseh [Josiah's grandfather] was not yet born![10] But nolad implies both,[11] and in vows, we follow general usage.[12] BUT THE SAGES SAY: HE MEANT ALL WHOSE NATURE IT IS TO BE BORN. Excluding what? — It excludes fish and fowl.[13]

---

(1) [I.e.. he might have intended the phrase 'those who see the sun' as an euphemism for 'those whom the sun sees', i.e., the blind (cf. Bek. VIII, 3, סכי שמש, 'looking to the sun' used euphemistically for 'squinting'). But since with vows we adopt the more rigorous interpretation, he is forbidden to benefit from those who see as well as from the blind (cf. Rabinowitz, M. Graber Otzar ha-Safruth II, 137ff.).]

(2) Therefore bald and grey-haired people are included, since they were once black-haired.

(3) Hence women would be referred to as 'those of covered hair', and children as 'the bare-headed'. — Ran. In Mishnaic times it was the universal practise for women's hair to be covered, and its violation was deemed sufficient ground for divorce without payment of the kethubah (Keth. 72a Mishnah.) From the present passage it appears that no distinction was drawn between married and unmarried women, but later on custom became more lenient with respect to unmarried women (Shulhan 'Aruk', O.H. 75, 2; cf. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 398. n. 1 , referring to Gentiles). As for men, it was considered a sign of reverence and piety to cover the head (Kid. 31a, Shab. 118b); nevertheless only in the case of great scholars was it held to be indispensable (cf. Kid. 8a.

(4) I.e., not hatched, and therefore including both those already born and those to be born.

(5) That they are permitted. since the Mishnah states, R. MEIR PERMITTED (HIM TO BENEFIT) EVEN FROM YILLODIM.

(6) I.e. in each case his words are taken literally.

(7) Gen. XLVIII.5.

(8) The reference being to Ephraim and Manasseh, who were already born.

(9) I Kings XIII, 2.

(10) This verse was spoken in the reign of Jeroboam I.

(11) Biblically. Sc. 'born' and 'to be born'.

(12) Lit., 'the language of the sons of men', which applies nolad to those who are yet to be born.

(13) Which are spawned and hatched respectively.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 31a

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM THOSE WHO REST ON THE SABBATH, IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] BOTH FROM ISRAELITES AND CUTHEANS.[1] IF HE VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM GARlic EATERS, HE MAY NOT BENEFIT FROM ISRAELITES AND CUTHEANS;[2] FROM THOSE WHO GO UP[3] TO JERUSALEM, HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM ISRAELITES BUT FROM CUTHEANS HE IS PERMITTED.[4]

GEMARA. What is meant by 'THOSE WHO REST ON THE SABBATH'? Shall we say, 'those who observe the Sabbath,' why particularly Cutheans: even heathens [if they observe the Sabbath] too? Hence It must mean 'those who are commanded to observe the Sabbath.'' If so, consider the last clause: FROM THOSE WHO GO UP TO JERUSALEM, HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM ISRAELITES BUT FROM CUTHEANS HE IS PERMITTED. But why so: are they not commanded too?[5] — Sand Abaye: In both clauses the reference is to those who are commanded and fulfil [their obligations]. Hence, in the first clause, both Israelites and Cutheans are commanded and observe [the Sabbath]; but those heathens who rest on the Sabbath do so without being obliged to. As for making pilgrimages to Jerusalem, Jews are commanded and observe it; but Cutheans, though commanded, do not.

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM THE CHILDREN OF NOAH,' HE MAY BENEFIT FROM ISRAELITES, BUT NOT FROM HEATHENS.

GEMARA. But are then Israelites excluded from the children of Noah? — Since Abraham was sanctified, they are called by his name.[6]

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM] THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM THE SEED OF ABRAHAM,' HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM ISRAELITES, BUT PERMITTED [TO BENEFIT] FROM HEATHENS.

GEMARA. But there is Ishmael?[7] — It is written, for in Isaac shall thy seed be called.[8] But there is Esau? — 'In Isaac',[9] but not all [the descendants of] Isaac.

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM] THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM ISRAELITES', HE MUST BUY THINGS FROM THEM FOR MORE [THAN THEIR WORTH] AND SELL THEM FOR LESS.[10] [IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM] IF ISRAELITES BENEFIT FROM ME, HE MUST BUY FROM THEM FOR LESS AND SELL FOR MORE [THAN THEIR WORTH], BUT NONE NEED CONSENT TO THIS.[11] THAT I MAY NOT BENEFIT FROM THEM, NOR THEY FROM ME, HE MAY BENEFIT ONLY FROM HEATHENS.[12]

GEMARA. Samuel said: If one takes an article from an artisan[13] on approval, and whilst in his possession it is accidentally damaged, he is liable for it. Hence we see that in his view the benefit is on the side of the buyer.[14] We learnt: [IF ONE SAYS, ' KONAM] THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM ISRAELITES,' HE MUST . . . SELL THEM FOR LESS. Hence he may not sell at its actual worth: but if the purchaser benefits [not the vendor], why not sell at its actual worth? — The Mishnah refers to an unsaleable article.[15] If so, consider the first statement : HE MUST BUY FOR MORE THAN THEIR WORTH.[16] Moreover, consider the second clause: [IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM] IF ISRAELITES BENEFIT FROM ME,' HE MUST BUY FROM THEM FOR LESS AND SELL FOR MORE THAN THEIR WORTH. But if this refers to unsaleable merchandise, even [to sell] at its actual worth [should be permitted]?[17] — The second clause refers to 'keen' merchandise.[18] If so, why must he purchase at a lesser [price]; he may even pay the full value?[19] —

---

(1) Lit., 'men of Cuth or Cuthah'; this was one of the five cities from which Sargon, King of Assyria, brought settlers for the depopulated Northern Palestine, after it had been conquered and its inhabitants deported (II Kings XVII, 24, 30). During the period of its depopulation the land had become overrun by lions, who now attacked the settlers; they took this as a sign of the wrath of the local deity, and so, after instruction, they became Jews, though continuing some of their heathen practices. The religious status of the Cutheans (also called Samaritans) was of rather a vacillating nature. The Cutheans observed the Sabbath.

(2) It was customary for these to eat garlic on Friday evenings. B.K. 82a.

(3) For the three Festivals v. Deut. XVI, 16.

(4) The Cutheans built a temple upon mount Gerizim, and though this was destroyed by John Hyrcanus, they continued to reverence the site and make pilgrimages thereto, instead of to Jerusalem.

(5) Since they regarded themselves as true Jews and had formally become converts.

(6) I.e., they are referred to as descendants ofabraham, not of Noah.

(7) Hence his descendants, who are heathens, should be included in the vow.

(8) Gen. XXI, 12.

(9) I.e. , only a portion of his descendants.

(10) Because if he trades on ordinary terms, he is benefiting from them.

(11) I.e., since others are not likely to trade on such terms, in practice he may not trade with them at all.

(12) The point is this. One might think that since it is almost impossible for such a vow to be kept, it is by its very nature invalid; hence it is taught that its observance is not impossible, as he can fall back upon heathens.

(13) Ran reads: from a tradesman.
(14) Trustees are divided into various categories, according to their degrees of responsibility, depending upon the benefit they derive from their trust. Only one who borrows an article is liable for accidental damage, because all the benefit is on his side, the lender receiving nothing in return. Since Samuel rules that the prospective purchaser is liable for accidental damage, it is evident that he puts him in the same category as a borrower, who is the only one to derive benefit.
(15) I.e., something for which there are no buyers. Hence the vendor benefits from the transaction, unless he sells below market price.
(16) But if it is unsaleable, even if he pays no more than its market value, he is not benefiting.
(17) Since the purchaser does not thereby benefit from him.
(18) Goods in keen demand.
(19) As the vendor does not benefit, since he can easily sell it to someone else.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 31b

But the Mishnah refers to average merchandise;[1] whilst Samuel refers to an article that is eagerly sought.

It was taught in agreement with Samuel : If one takes articles from a tradesman [on approval] to send them [as a gift] to his father-in-law's house, and stipulates: 'if they are accepted, I will pay you their value, but if not, I will pay you for their goodwill benefit':[2] if they were accidentally damaged on the outward journey, he is liable;[3] if on their return journey, he is not liable, because he is regarded as a paid trustee.[4]

A middleman [once] took an ass[5] to sell, but could not sell it. On his way back it was accidentally injured, [whereupon] R. Nahman held him liable to make it good. Raba objected: 'if they were damaged on the outward journey, he is liable; if on their return journey. he is not!' — Sand he to him: The return journey of a middleman counts as an outward journey, for if he finds a purchaser even at his doorstep, will he not sell [it] to him?

MISHNAH. [IF ONE SAYS,] 'KONAM THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM THE UNCIRCUMCISED, HE MAY BENEFIT FROM UNCIRCUMCISED ISRAELITES BUT NOT FROM CIRCUMCISED HEATHENS; THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM THE CIRCUMCISED,' HE IS FORBIDDEN TO BENEFIT FROM UNCIRCUMCISED ISRAELITES BUT NOT FROM CIRCUMCISED HEATHENS, BECAUSE 'UNCIRCUMCISED' IS A TERM APPLICABLE ONLY TO HEATHENS, AS IT IS WRITTEN, FOR ALL THE NATIONS ARE UNCIRCUMCISED AND ALL THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL ARE UNCIRCUMCISED IN THE HEART.[6] AND IT IS FURTHER SAID, AND THIS UNCIRCUMCISED PHILISTINE SHALL BE [AS ONE OF THEM],[7] AND IT IS FURTHER SAID, LEST THE DAUGHTERS OF THE PHILISTINES REJOICE, LEST THE DAUGHTERS OF THE UNCIRCUMCISED TRIUMPH.[8] R. ELEAZAR B. 'AZARIAH SAID: THE FORESKIN IS LOATHSOME, SINCE IT IS A TERM OF OPPROBRIUM FOR THE WICKED, AS IT IS WRITTEN, FOR ALL THE NATIONS ARE UNCIRCUMCISED. R. ISHMAEL SAID, GREAT IS [THE PRECEPT] OF CIRCUMCISION, SINCE THIRTEEN COVENANTS WERE MADE THEREON.[9] R. JOSE SAID, CIRCUMCISION IS A GREAT PRECEPT, FOR IT OVERRIDES [THE SEVERITY OF] THE SABBATH.[10] R. JOSHUA B. KARHA SAID: GREAT IS [THE PRECEPT OF] CIRCUMCISION. FOR [NEGLECTING] WHICH MOSES DID NOT HAVE [HIS PUNISHMENT] SUSPENDED EVEN FOR A SINGLE HOUR[11] . R. NEHEMIAH SAID, GREAT IS [THE PRECEPT OF] CIRCUMCISION, SINCE IT SUPERSEDES THE LAWS OF LEPROSY.[12] RABBI SAID, GREAT IS CIRCUMCISION, FOR [NOTWITHSTANDING] ALL THE PRECEPTS WHICH ABRAHAM FULFILLED HE WAS NOT DESIGNATED PERFECT UNTIL HE CIRCUMCISED HIMSELF, AS IT IS WRITTEN, WALK BEFORE ME, AND BE THOU PERFECT.[13] ANOTHER EXPLANATION: GREAT IS CIRCUMCISION, SINCE BUT FOR THAT, THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, WOULD NOT HAVE CREATED THE UNIVERSE, AS IT IS WRITTEN, BUT FOR MY COVENANT BY DAY AND NIGHT,[14] I WOULD NOT HAVE APPOINTED THE ORDINANCES OF HEAVEN AND EARTH.[15] GEMARA. It was taught: R. Joshua b. Karha said, Great is circumcision, for all the meritorious deeds performed by Moses our teacher did not stand him in stead when he displayed apathy towards circumcision, as it is written, and the Lord met him, and sought to kill him.[16] R. Jose sand, God forbid that Moses should have been apathetic towards circumcision, but he reasoned thus: 'If I circumcise [my son] and [straightway] go forth [on my mission to Pharaoh], I will endanger his life, as it is written, and it came to pass on the third day, when they were sore.[17] If I circumcise him, and tarry three days, — but the Holy One, blessed be He, has commanded: Go, return unto Egypt.[18] Why then was Moses punished?

---

(1) Which is neither a drag on the market nor in keen demand.

(2) Which he would derive from his father-in-law's knowing that he wished to make him a present. Although only a matter of goodwill a monetary value could be set upon it.

(3) This supports Samuel's ruling.

(4) Who is not liable for accidental damage; this is because he has derived some benefit through having had it in his charge; but he cannot be considered as a simple borrower, the sole benefit being his, since this benefit has by now ceased, B.M. (Sonc. ed.) p. 460.

(5) חמדא. The word may also mean 'wine'.

(6) Jet. IX, 25. Thus, though there may be some circumcised among the heathens, they are collectively termed 'uncircumcised'; similarly, when the Israelites are rebuked for their leanings to paganism, they are denounced as 'uncircumcised of heart'.

(7) I Sam. XVII, 36, though he did not know whether Goliath was uncircumcised or not.

(8) II Sam. I, 20.

(9) In the passage dealing with God's command to Abraham to circumcise himself, the word 'covenant' occurs thirteen times. Gen. XVII.

(10) Circumcision, though entailing work, is performed on the Sabbath.

(11) This is discussed in the Gemara.

(12) A leprous spot, such as a swelling etc., may not be cut off (Deut. XXIV, is so interpreted); but if it is on the foreskin, it may be removed together with it.

(13) Gen. XVII, 1.

(14) This is taken to refer to circumcision, which, as shown above, is frequently designated as such.

(15) Jer. XXXIII, 25. This is the end of the Mishnah in our text, but other versions, including that of Ran and Tosaf., add the following: — Great is circumcision, for it counterbalances all other precepts put together, as it is written, behold he blood of the covenant, which he Lord hath made with you concerning all these words (Ex. XXIV, 8). All these words are understood to mean all God's precepts: and 'the blood of the covenant', though referring in its context to sacrifice, is applied to circumcision, on account of its frequent designation as covenant. Part of this reading is quoted in the Gemara as a Baraitha. — Weiss, Dor, II, 9. regards all these dicta as called forth by Christianity's abrogation of circumcision.

(16) Ex. IV, 24.

(17) Gen. XXXIV, 25. This refers to the inhabitants of the city of Shechem, who underwent circumcision. Moses considered it dangerous to take his son on a journey within the first three days of circumcision.

(18) Ex. IV, 19, implying without delay.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 32a

Because he busied himself first with the inn,[1] as it is written, And it came to pass by the way, in the inn.[2] R. Simeon b. Gamaliel sand: Satan[3] did not seek to slay Moses but the child, for it is written, [Then Zipporah took a sharp stone, and cut off the foreskin of her son, and cast it as his feet, and sand,] Surely a bloody hathan art thou to me.[4] Go forth and see: who is called a hathan? Surely the infant [to be circumcised].[5]

R. Judah b. Bizna lectured: When Moses was lax in the perform ance of circumcision, Af and Hemah[6] came and swallowed him up, leaving nought but his legs. Thereupon immediately Zipporah 'took a sharp stone and cut off the foreskin of her son';[7] straightway he let him alone.[8] In that moment Moses desired to slay them, as it is written, Cease from Af and forsake Hemah.[9] Some say that he did slay Hemah, as it is written, I have not Hemah.[10] But is it not written, for I was afraid of Af and Hemah?[11] — There were two [angels named] Hemah. An alternative answer is this: [he slew] the troop commanded by Hemah, [but not Hemah himself].

It was taught: Rabbi sand, Great is circumcision, for none so ardently busied himself with [God's] precepts as our Father Abraham, yet he was called perfect only in virtue of circumcision, as it is written, Walk before me and be thou perfect,[12] and it is written, And I will make my covenant between me and thee.[13] Another version [of Rabbi's teaching] is this: Great is circumcision, for it counterbalances all the [other] precepts of the Torah, as it is written, For after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel.[14] Another version is: Great is circumcision, since but for it heaven and earth would not endure, as it is written, [Thus saith the Lord,] But for my covenant by day and night,[15] I would not have appointed the ordinances of Heaven and earth.[16] Now this [statement][17] conflicts with R. Eleazar's: for R. Eleazar[18] said, Great is the Torah, since but for it heaven and earth could not endure, as it is written, But for my covenant by day and night, I would not have appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth.[19]

Rab Judah sand in Rab's name: When the Holy One, blessed be He, said to our Father Abraham, 'Walk before me and be thou perfect',[20] he was seized with trembling. 'Perhaps,' he said, 'there is still aught shameful in me!' But when He added, 'And I will make my covenant between me and thee', his mind was appeased.[21]

Aid he brought him forth abroad.[22] Now Abraham had said unto him, 'Sovereign of the Universe! I have gazed at the constellation which rules my destiny, and seen that I am not fated to beget children.' To which [God] replied: 'Go forth from thy astrological speculations: Israel is not subject to planetary influences.'

R. Isaac said: He who perfects himself, the Holy One, blessed be He, deals uprightly with him, as it is written, With the merciful thou wilt shew thyself merciful, and with the upright thou wilt shew thyself upright.[23] R. Hoshaia said: If one perfects himself, good fortune will be his,[24] as it is written, Walk before me and be thou perfect;[25] and it is further written, And thou shalt be a father of many nations.[26]

Rabbi[27] said: He who practises enchantment will be harassed by witchcraft, as it is written, For against him, of [the seed of] Jacob, there is enchantment.[28] But surely it is written with lamed aleph?[29] — But he is thus punished as measure for measure.[30] Ahabah the son of R. Zera learnt: He who does not practice enchantment is brought within a barrier [i.e., in proximity to God] which not even the Ministering Angeis may enter, as it is written, For there is no enchantment in Jacob, neither is there any divination in Israel: now it shall be asked [by the angels] of Jacob and Israel, What hath God wrought?[31]

R. Abbahu said in R. Eleazar's name: Why was our Father Abraham punished and his children doomed to Egyptian servitude for two hundred and ten years? Because he pressed scholars into his service, as it is written, He armed his dedicated servants[32] born in his own house.[33] Samuel[34] said: Because he went too far in testing the attributes [i.e., the promises] of the Lord, as it is written, [And he sand, Lord God,] whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?[35] R. Johanan sand: Because he prevented men from entering beneath the wings of the Shechinah, as it is written, [And the king of Sodom said it to Abraham,] Give me the persons, and take the goods to thyself.[36]

And he armed his trained servants, born in his own house.[37] Rab said, he equipped them[38] by [teaching them] the Torah.[39] Samuel sand, he made them bright with gold [i.e., rewarded them for accompanying him]. Three hundred and eighteen:[40] R. Ammi b. Abba sand: Eliezer outweighed them all. Others say, It was Eliezer, for this is the numerical value of his name.[41]

R. Ammi b. Abba also said: Abraham was three years old when he acknowledged the Creator, for it is written, Because [Heb. ‘ekeb] that Abraham obeyed my voice:[42] the numerical value of ‘ekeb is one hundred seventy two.[43] R. Ammi b. Abba also said:

---

(1) Instead of with circumcision.

(2) Ibid. IV, 24. This implies that as soon as he left the road he turned his attention to the inn, arranging his baggage, quarters, etc., instead of immediately circumcising his son.

(3) Var. lec. ‘that angel’. Generally speaking. Satan was regarded as man's adversary and accuser, but without independent power, which be must derive from God. (Cf. Job I, seq., Zech. III. 1f.) In the older Talmudic literature Satan is seldom mentioned, but his name is found more frequently in the amoraic period, and it may well be that the variant reading here (angel) is the original one. V. also Kid. (Son. ed.) p. 142, n. 5.

(4) Ex. IV, 25.

(5) Hathan generally means bridegroom, son-in-law: but in connection with circumcision it refers to the infant to be circumcised

(6) Wrath and anger personified.

(7) As the whole body was swallowed up save the legs. Zipporah understood that this was a punishment for neglecting the circumcision of the foreskin.

(8) Ex. IV, 26.

(9) Ps XXXVII, 8. Af and Hemah are regarded here as proper nouns.

(10) Isa. XXVII, 4. Spoken by God, and according to this interpretation, because Hemah had been slain.

(11) Deut. IX, 19. This refers to the sin of the Golden Calf, which was subsequent to the incident under discussion.

(12) Gen. XVII, 1, in reference to circumcision.

(13) Ibid. XVII, 2. [Indicating that Abraham was to attain perfection through the covenant of circumcision.] Rashi, without pointing out any incorrectness in the text, relates this verse to the next passage; v. next note.

(14) Ex. XXXIV, 27. After the tenor of these words is taken to refer to all God's precepts; by a ‘covenant’, ‘circumcision’ is understood; thus the two — all God's precepts and circumcision — are equated. Rashi appears to have the following reading: As it is written, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words (Ex. XXIV, 8); and it is also written. And I will mike my covenant between me and thee (Gen. XVII, 2). Just as ‘covenant’ in the latter verse refers to circumcision, so also in the former; whilst the end of that verse, ‘concerning all these words’, shews that circumcision is equal in importance to ‘all these words’, i.e., all God's commandments.

(15) V. p. 93, n. 8.

(16) Jer. XXXIII, 25.

(17) Which identifies ‘covenant’ here with circumcision.

(18) [So Pes. 68b. Cur. edd. R. Eliezer.]

(19) Thus, according to him, ‘covenant’ in this verse refers to the Torah, not to circumcision.

(20) Gen. XVII, 1.

(21) For be then understood that the imperfection was not in himself, but in the lack of a formal covenant between him and the Almighty.

(22) Gen. XV, 5.
(23) II Sam. XXII, 26.
(24) Lit., 'the hour will stand by him'.
(25) Gen. XVII, 1.
(26) Ibid. XVII, 4. This should be his good fortune, as a reward for perfecting himself.
(27) Var. lec.: R. Levi.
(28) Num. XXIII, 23.
(29) Lo = not, so that the verse reads, Surely there is no enchantment in Jacob.
(30) I.e., this is not deduced from a Scriptural verse, but from the general axiom that punishment corresponds to the crime. Though the Jewish Sages attributed reality to supernatural agencies in general, they nevertheless sought to discourage superstitious practices; v. M. Joseph. Judaism as Creed and Life. pp. 79-81.
(31) Num. XXIII, 23. The Israelites, through not practising enchantments, are brought into such close contact with God, that they know secrets not entrusted to the angels.
(32) I.e., scholars dedicated to the study of the Torah. The word is treated as a derivative of hanok, to educate, dedicate.
(33) Gen. XIV, 14.
(34) Var. lec.: R. Samuel b. Nahmani.
(35) Gen. XV, 8.
(36) Ibid. XIV, 21. Abraham, by permitting this, instead of taking the persons himself, and teaching them to know' God, is said to have prevented them from coming beneath the wings of the Divine Presence. This dictum seems to indicate that R. Johanan was in favour of proselytes.
(37) Ibid. XIV, 14.
(38) A variant reading is herikan; he emptied them from the Torah, i.e., disregarded their learning and forced them into service, or perhaps, withdrew them from their studies.
(39) Wa-yarek is here connected with yarak to make shine; cf. yerakrak., yellow (shining).
(40) Ibid.
(41) Hebrew letters are also used as numbers, and the numerical value of אליעזר is 318.
(42) Gen. XXVI, 5.
(43) The verse is therefore thus interpreted: 172 years hath Abraham obeyed my voice. As he lived 175 years in all, he was three years old when he acknowledged the Creator.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 32b

The numerical value of ha-satan [Satan] is three hundred sixty four.[1]

R. Ammi b. Abba also said: [First] Abram is written, then Abraham.[2] at first God gave him mastery over two hundred forty three limbs, and later over two hundred forty eight, the additional ones being the two eyes, two ears, and the membrum.[3]

R. Ammi b. Abba also said: What is the meaning of, There is a little city. etc.?[4] 'A little city' refers to the body; and 'a few men within' to the limbs; 'and there came a great king against it and besieged [it]' to the Evil Urge;[5] 'and built great bulwarks against it', to sin; 'Now there was found in it a poor wise man, to the Good Urge; and he by his wisdom delivered the city, to repentance and good deeds; yet no man remembered that same poor man, for when the Evil Urge gains dominion, none remember the Good Urge.

Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty ones which are in the city.[6] 'Wisdom strengtheneth the wise' refers to repentance and good deeds; 'more than ten mighty ones,' viz., the two eyes, two ears, two hands, two feet, membrum and mouth.[7]

R. Zechariah said on R. Ishmael's authority: The Holy One, blessed be He, intended to bring forth the priesthood from Shem, as it is written, And he [sc. Melchizedek] was the priest of the most high God.[8] But because he gave precedence in his blessing to Abraham over God, He brought it forth from Abraham; as it is written, And he blessed him and said. Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth, and blessed be the most high God.[9] Said Abraham to him, 'Is the blessing of a servant to be given precedence over that of his master?' Straightway it [the priesthood] was given to Abraham, as it is written, The Lord said unto my Lord,[10] Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool;[11] which is followed by, The Lord hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever, after the order of Melchizedek,'[12] meaning, 'because of the words of Melchizedek.'[13] Hence it is written, And he was a priest of the most High God, [implying that] he was a priest, but not his seed.[14]

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. THE ONLY DIFFERENCE BETWEEN ONE WHO IS UNDER A VOW NOT TO BENEFIT AUGHT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, AND ONE WHO IS FORBIDDEN TO EAT OF HIS FOOD, IS IN RESPECT OF WALKING [OVER HIS PROPERTY] AND [THE USE OF] UTENSILS NOT EMPLOYED IN THE PREPARATION OF FOOD.[15] IF A MAN IS UNDER A VOW [NOT TO EAT] OF HIS NEIGHBOURS FOOD, THE LATTER MAY NOT LEND HIM A SIFTER, SIEVE, MILL-STONE OR OVEN,[16] BUT HE MAY LEND HIM A SHIRT, RING, CLOAK, AND EARRINGS.[17]

GEMARA. Which Tanna [is the authority of the Mishnah]?[18] — R. Adda b. Ahabah said, It is R. Eliezer. For it was taught: R. Eliezer said: Even the extra [given by a vendor to his customer] is forbidden to him who is under a vow not to benefit [by his neighbour].[19]

IF A MAN IS UNDER A VOW NOT TO [EAT] OF HIS NEIGHROUR'S FOOD, THE LATTER MAY NOT LEND HIM etc.

---

(1) This indicates that his seductive powers over mankind are only for 364 days of the year. On the 365th, viz., the Day of Atonement, he has no power over man.

(2) The original name of Abram, whose numerical value is 243, was changed to Abraham, with the value 248, the numbers of members of man's body. V. Mak. (Sonc. ed.) p. 109. n. 5.

(3) As a reward for his undergoing circumcision he was given mastery over those limbs, which, through hearing and seeing, entice one to immorality; but now he was enabled by his will-power to forbid them to look upon or listen to sin. The last mentioned, of course, refers to the control of the sex-lust. Cf. Maim. 'Guide', III, ch. 49.

(4) Eccl. IX, 14f.

(5) One's evil inclinations personified; in B.B. 16a he is identified with Satan.

(6) Ibid. VII, 19.

(7) I.e., by repentance and good deeds one can conquer the evil desires of all these.

(8) Gen. XIV, 18. The Midrash identifies him with Shem, the son of Noah, Abraham's eighth ancestor.

(9) Ibid. 19f.

(10) Here taken as referring to Abraham; cf. Ber. 7b, where my lord is explicitly so explained.

(11) Ps. CX, 1.

(12) Ibid. CX, 4.

(13) I.e., because of his giving precedence to Abraham.

(14) Though Abraham was a descendant of Melchizedek, and thus the priesthood was inherited by the latter's seed, yet this was through the merit of Abraham, not of Melchizedek. — Ran.

(15) If he is forbidden all benefit, these are forbidden; but if the vow is only in respect of food, these are permitted.

(16) This teaches that not only are those utensils prohibited which are used in the immediate preparation of food for eating, such as a cooking pot. but even those employed in the early stages only.

(17) [Or 'nose-rings].

(18) That even such a trifling benefit as walking over his property is forbidden.

(19) Since R. Eliezer held that the vow applied even to such trifles, he is the authority of our Mishnah.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 33a

But he vowed in respect of food?[1] — Said R. Simeon b. Lakish: This refers to one who said, 'The benefit of your food be forbidden me.'[2] But may it not mean that he is not to chew wheat [to a pulp] and apply it to his wound?[3] — Raba replied: The Mishnah refers to one who said: 'Any benefit from you leading to the enjoyment of food be forbidden me.' R. Papa said: A sack for bringing fruit, an ass for bringing fruit, and even a mere basket, all lead to the enjoyment of food. R. Papa propounded: What of a horse for travelling [to a banquet] or a ring to appear in;[4] or, what of passing over his land?[5] — Come and hear: BUT HE MAY LEND HIM A SHIRT, RING, CLOAK AND EARRINGS. How is this to be understood? Shall I say it is not to appear in them, need this be stated?[6] Hence it must mean to be seen in them, and it is taught that he may lend them to him! — No. After all, it does not mean to appear in them; but because the first clause teaches THE LATTER MAY NOT LEND HIM,[7] the second clause teaches HE MAY LEND HIM.[8]

MISHNAH. AND WHATEVER IS NOT EMPLOYED IN THE PREPARATION OF FOOD, WHERE SUCH ARE HIRED OUT, IT IS FORBIDDEN.[9]

GEMARA. Hence the first clause applies even where such things are not hired. Which Tanna [rules thus]?[10] — Said R. Adda b. Ahabah: It is R. Eliezer.[11]

MISHNAH. IF ONE IS UNDER A VOW NOT TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, THE LATTER MAY PAY HIS SHEKEL,[12] SETTLE HIS DEBTS, AND RETURN A LOST ARTICLE TO HIM. WHERE PAYMENT IS TAKEN FOR THIS,[13] THE BENEFIT MUST ACCRUE TO HEKDESH.[14]

GEMARA. Thus we see that it is merely driving away a lion [from his neighbour's property],[15] and permitted. Which Tanna [rules thus]? — Said R. Hoshaia: This is

---

(1) Which does not include these utensils.

(2) Instead of simply 'Your food be forbidden me'. The additional words, 'b. etc.' are understood to include something besides actual food, viz., utensils for its preparation.

(3) I.e., the longer form may imply that food is forbidden no matter how used, yet still be confined to actual foodstuffs.

(4) So as to be treated as an honoured guest.

(5) On the way to a feast.

(6) For then he does not benefit at all, and it is obvious that he may lend them to him.

(7) This must be taught; v. p. 100, n. 2.

(8) I.e., it is merely to round off the Mishnah, though it is self-evident.

(9) Even to one who is under a vow in respect of food as explained in the Gemara above, for the remission of the hiring fee is a benefit leading to the enjoyment of food.

(10) That even where the benefit is so trifling, since it can be borrowed without a fee, it is forbidden.

(11) V. p. 100, n. 5.

(12) There was an annual tax of half a shekel for the upkeep of the Temple; v. Shek. I, 1; Ex. XXX, 13.

(13) E.g., if he lost work through returning the article; v. B.M. 30b.

(14) V. Glos. This is discussed in the Gemara.

(15) I.e., he is merely performing a neighbourly action, without bestowing real benefit, for even if the other man does not pay the shekel, he still shares in the public sacrifices; also, when his debts are settled, the debtor personally receives nothing.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 33b

Hanan's view.[1] Raba said: You may even say that it agrees with all: [We suppose that] the man who is interdicted by vow not to benefit from his neighbour was lent [money] without obligation to repay.[2]

What is [the ruling of] Hanan? — We learnt: If a man departed overseas, and another arose and supported his wife: Hanan said: He has lost his money.[3] But the sons of the High priests[4] disputed this and maintained: He must swear how much he expended and is reimbursed [by the husband]. R. Dosa b. Harkinas ruled as they did; whilst R. Johanan b. Zakkai said: Hanan has ruled well — it is as though he had placed his money upon a deer's horn.[5]

Now, Raba did not say as R. Hoshaia, because he interpreted our Mishnah to harmonize with all views. R. Hoshaia did not say as Raba: [to settle a debt] that need not be repaid is forbidden as a preventive measure on account of [a debt] that must be repaid.[6]

AND RETURN A LOST ARTICLE TO HIM. R. Ammi and R. Assi [differ thereon] — one said: This is only when the property of the finder[7] is forbidden to the loser, so that in returning it to him, he returns what is his own.[8] But if the property of the loser is forbidden to the finder, he may not return it, because he benefits him by R. Joseph's perutah.[9] But the other maintained: Even if the finder may not benefit from the loser's property, he may return it, and as for R. Joseph's perutah, this is rare.[10]

---

(1) This is explained further on.

(2) The creditor having lent it to be repaid at the debtor's leisure (Ran). Therefore, when his neighbour repays his debt, he confers no benefit upon him. Similarly, he may pay his shekel only when he is not bound to pay it himself, e.g., if he had already sent it and it was lost on the road.

(3) He has no claim upon the husband.

(4) There was a special court of priests, and this may be referred to here; v. Keth. 104b.

(5) I.e., he cannot expect its return.

(6) Lest it be thought that the latter too may be settled.

(7) Lit., ‘restorer’.

(8) So that the loser is not benefiting.

(9) Since when a person is engaged in the performance of one precept, he is exempt from another, the finder, when fulfilling this precept, may decline to give a perutah of charity to a poor man. This is referred to as R. Joseph's perutah, because he based a certain ruling upon this fact. B.K. 56b.

(10) One rarely avails himself of that privilege, hence the finder gains nothing.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 34a

We learnt: WHERE PAYMENT IS TAKEN FOR THIS, THE BENEFIT MUST ACCRUE TO HEKDESH. Now, that is well on the view that even if the finder must not benefit from the loser's property, he may also return it: hence it is taught: WHERE PAYMENT IS MADE FOR THIS, THE BENEFIT MUST ACCRUE TO HEKDESH.[1] But on the view that if the finder may not benefit from the loser he must not return it, why should the benefit accrue to hekdesh?[2] — This law refers to one case only.[3]

Others report it in the following version: R. Ammi and R. Assi differ thereon: one said: This was taught only if the finder may not benefit from the loser's property. R. Joseph's perutah being rare; but if the loser may not benefit from the finder's property, he may not return it, because he [the finder] benefits him. While the other maintained: Even if the loser may not benefit from the finder's property, he may return it, for he is only returning his own.

We learnt: WHERE PAYMENT IS TAKEN FOR THIS, THE BENEFIT MUST ACCRUE TO HEKDESH. Now that is well on the view that even if the loser may not benefit from the finder, he may also return it: thus he justifies WHERE [etc.],[4] but on the view that if the loser may not benefit from the finder, he may not return it, how is WHERE [etc.] explained?[5] This is a difficulty.

---

(1) For since the finder cannot benefit from the loser, he cannot receive his fee from him; on the other hand, the loser is liable for it; therefore it goes to hekdesh; v. p. 104, n 2, for the reverse case.

(2) Since he may not return it, there is no fee.

(3) I.e., where the loser may not benefit from the finder. This is the interpretation of the passage according to our text. But the text of Ran is reversed, and (with its explanation) is as follows: This is well on the view that only if the loser may not benefit from the finder it may be returned, but not in the reverse case. Hence, the fee must go to the Temple treasury. if it is beneath the finder's dignity to accept it, for were the loser to retain it, he would be benefiting from the finder. But on the view that even if the finder must not benefit from the loser it may be returned, why must the fee go to the Temple treasury? If the finder declines it, the loser may retain it, since here is no prohibition upon him. If on the other hand the finder wishes to accept it, why may he not do so: in accepting it he is not benefiting from the loser, but merely being paid for lost time? The Talmud replies that though the law permitting the return of the lost article applies to both cases, the statement that the fee must go to the sanctuary applies only to one, viz., where the loser may not benefit from the finder.

(4) The law referring to this case, as explained above, where it is beneath the finder's dignity to accept the fee.

(5) For then it may be returned only if the loser may benefit from the finder; but in that case, why must the fee be given to hekdesh? If the finder does not accept it, the loser may retain it for himself.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 34b

Raba said: If a hefker loaf[1] lies before a man, and he declares, 'This loaf be hekdesh', and he takes it to eat it,he trespasses in respect of its entire value; if to leave it to his children, he trespasses in respect of its goodwill value only.[2] R. Hiyya b. Abin asked Raba: [What if one says to his neighbour,] 'My loaf [be forbidden] to you,' and then gifts it to him: now, he said, 'my loaf,' meaning only so long as it IS In his own possession;[3] or perhaps, having said '[be forbidden] to you,' he has rendered it to him hekdesh?[4] — He replied: It is obvious that even if he gifted it to him, it is forbidden. For what was it [his vow] to exclude? Surely not the case where it would be stolen from him?[5] — He replied, No: It excludes the case where he invites him for it.[6]

---

(1) V. Glos.

(2) A Zar (i.e., not a priest) is forbidden to eat consecrated food; if he does, he is guilty of trespass. and bound to make restitution of its value plus a fifth (Lev. XXII, 14). Now as soon as he takes this consecrated loaf, with the intent of eating it, he withdraws it from the possession of hekdesh into his own. Hence he has trespassed in respect of the whole of it. But if he merely intends leaving it to his children, he merely benefits by its goodwill value (i.e., the benefit he enjoys through his children's knowing that he wishes to leave it to them) and hence liable for that only. [Had, however, the loaf been his own, he would not have been guilty of a trespass by taking it up with the intent of eating it. Since it was all the time in his possession, both before and after the consecration, he would be treated in regard to it as a Temple Treasurer, to whom the law of trespass does not apply, v. B.K. (Sonc. ed.) p. 103.]

(3) Therefore now that he gave it to him, it is no longer his; hence permitted.

(4) So that the prohibition always remains.

(5) When A says to E, 'My loaf be forbidden to you', thus excluding B from its enjoyment, what is his purpose? Obviously, as long as it is in A's possession it is forbidden to B in any case, since it does not belong to him. Surely A did not intend his vow only in the unlikely event of the loaf being stolen? Hence he must have meant, 'Even if I give you this loaf which is now mine, it shall be forbidden to you.'

(6) I.e., if A should invite B to dine with him off that loaf of bread, it should be forbidden to him; but not if he gives it to him. This interpretation follows Ran. Others explain the passage differently. According to all versions, לאו must be deleted from the text.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 35a

He objected: If A says to B, 'Lend me your cow,' and B replies, 'Konam be [this] cow if I possess [another] for you,'[1] or, my property be forbidden you if I possess any cow but this': [or,] 'Lend me your spade,' and he replies, 'This spade be forbidden me if I possess [another];' or 'my property be forbidden me, if I possess any spade but this', and it is discovered that he possesses [another]. During his, [B's] lifetime it is forbidden [him]; but if he dies, or it is given to him,[2] it is permitted?[3] — Said R. Aha son of R. Ika: That is if it was given to him through another.[4] R. Ashi said: This may be proved too, for it is stated, 'it is given to him,' not 'he gives it to him.'[5]

Raba asked R. Nahman: Does the law of trespass apply to Konamoth?[6] — He replied, We have learnt this: WHERE PAYMENT IS TAKEN FOR THIS, THE BENEFIT MUST ACCRUE TO HEKDESH. This teaches that it is as hekdesh: just as the law of trespass applies to hekdesh, so it applies to Konamoth.

This is dependent on Tannaim: If one Says, 'Konam, this loaf is hekdesh,'[7] then whosoever eats it, whether he or his neighbour, commits trespass; therefore the law of redemption applies to it.[8] [But if he says,] 'This loaf is hekdesh to me'; [by eating it] he commits trespass; but his neighbour does not commit a trespass; therefore the law of redemption does not apply:[9] this is the view of R. Meir. But the Sages maintain: In both cases no trespass is involved, because the law of trespass does not apply to Konamoth.

R. Aha son of R. Avi asked R. Ashi: [If A says to B,] 'My loaf be forbidden to you,'[10] and then makes a gift of it to him, who is liable for trespass? Shall the giver incur it but it is not forbidden to him? Is the receiver to incur it — but he can say, 'I desired to accept what is permitted, not what is forbidden?'[11] — He replied: The receiver incurs the liability when he uses it, for whoever converts money of hekdesh into hullin,[12] thinks that it is hullin, yet he is involved in trespass;[13] so this one too is liable for trespass.

---

(1) The actual wording is difficult, and the commentators attempt various explanations. The literal translation is given here.

(2) V. infra.

(3) This contradicts Raba.

(4) B gave it to C, who gave it to A. Since B voluntarily (in contradistinction to theft) let it out of his possession, his vow loses its validity.

(5) Though the Hebrew word is the same for both, by tradition it was to be read as a niphal, not as a kal.

(6) A term in us technicus for things interdicted by a vow, usually introduced with the formula konam. Since konam is a korban (a sacrifice) when one vows that a thing shall be konam, he declares it to be virtually consecrated, and hence if the vow is violated, it is as though trespass has been committed. Or it may be argued that in spite of its origin, konam is used without the suggestion of consecration, but merely to imply prohibition.

(7) Not specifying to whom, and therefore applying it to all, including himself. [Read with MS. M.: 'This loaf is hekdesh', omitting konam,' v. also Shebu. 22a.]

(8) Since it is so much regarded as consecrated that by eating it one commits trespass, it is also so in respect of redemption, whereby it reverts to hullin (non-consecrated), whilst the redemption money becomes consecrated.

(9) Since it is not regarded as consecrated in respect of all.

(10) Using the formula 'konam'.

(11) The receiver not knowing that this was the forbidden loaf.

(12) V. Glos.

(13) Because the law of trespass applies only to unwitting misuse of hekdesh.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 35b

MISHNAH. AND HE MAY SEPARATE HIS TERUMAH AND HIS TITHES WITH HIS CONSENT.[1] HE MAY OFFER UP FOR HIM THE BIRD SACRIFICES OF ZABIM AND ZABOTH[2] AND THE BIRD SACRIFICES OF WOMEN AFTER CHILDBIRTH, SIN-OFFERINGS AND GUILT-OFFERINGS.[3] HE MAY TEACH HIM MIDRASH, HALACHOTH AND AGGADOTH,[4] BUT NOT SCRIPTURE.[5] YET HE MAY TEACH SCRIPTURE TO HIS SONS AND DAUGHTERS.[6]

GEMARA. The scholars propounded: Are the priests [in sacrificing] our agents or agents of the All-Merciful? What is the practical difference? — In respect of one who is forbidden to benefit [from a priest]: if you say that they are our agents, surely he [the priest] benefits him [by offering up his sacrifices]; hence it is prohibited. But if you say that they are the agents of the All-Merciful, it is permitted. What [then is the ruling]? — Come and hear: We learnt: HE MAY OFFER UP FOR HIM THE BIRD SACRIFICES [etc.]. Now if you say that they are our agents, does he not benefit him? Then on your view, let him [the Tanna] teach, HE MAY OFFER UP SACRIFICES FOR HIM?[7] But those who lack atonement are different.[8] For R. Johanan said: All [sacrifices] require [the owner's] consent,[9] save for those lacking atonement; since a man brings a sacrifice for his sons and daughters when minors, for it is said, This is the law of him that hath issue,[10] [implying] both for a minor or an adult.[11] If so, according to R. Johanan, does, This is the law for her that hath born [a male or a female][12] imply both an adult or a minor? Is a minor capable of childbirth? But R. Bibi recited in R. Nahman's presence: Three women use a resorbent [to prevent conception]: a minor, a pregnant woman, and a woman giving suck: a minor, lest she conceive and die?[13] — That verse, 'This is the law for her that hath born', [teaches,] that it is a]] one whether the woman be sane or an imbecile, since one must offer a sacrifice for his wife, if an imbecile, in accordance with R. Judah's dictum. For it was taught. R. Judah said: A man must offer a rich man's sacrifice[14] for his wife, and all other sacrifices which are incumbent upon her; since he writes thus for her [in her marriage settlement]: [I shall pay] every claim you may have against me from before up to now.[15]

---

(1) If A is forbidden to benefit from B, B (the maddir) may separate terumah on the produce of the former (called the muddar). The Gemara discusses whose consent is meant.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) Lev. XV, 14f, 29f, XII, 6-8. i.e., the maddir, if a priest, may offer these sacrifices for the muddar.

(4) The three branches of Jewish learning. Midrash (from darash, to study, investigate) means any kind of Biblical hermeneutics. In contradistinction to the peshat (literal interpretation) it denotes the deeper investigation into the text of the Bible in order to derive interpretations and laws not obvious on the surface. Halachoth is a term referring to religious law (embracing both civil and ritual law) whether based on Biblical exposition, (and thus arrived at by Midrash) or not. By Aggadah (or Haggadah, from higgid, to narrate) is meant the whole of the non-legal portion of the Talmud. Thus it includes narratives, homiletical exegesis of the Bible (which inculcate morals, beliefs, etc. but no actual laws) medicine, astronomy, dreams, legends and folklore in general.

(5) Lit., 'that which is (to be) read' sc. from a written text. The Pentateuch with its literal interpretations in contradistinction to Midrash, v. Aboth (Sonc. ed.) p. 75, n. 1. As will be seen on 37a, Scripture was generally regarded as the study of children only, adults usually investigating the deeper meaning too.

(6) From this we see that it was usual to teach the Bible to girls, in spite of the Talmudic deduction that daughters need not be educated (Kid. 30a). The opposition of R. Eliezer to teaching Torah to one's daughter (Sot. 20a: He who teaches his daughter Torah is as though he taught her lewdness) was probably directed against the teaching of the Oral Law, and the higher branches of study. [V. Maim. Yad. Talmud Torah, I, 13.] Yet even in respect of this, his view was not universally accepted, and Ben 'Azzai (a.l.) regarded it as a positive duty to teach Torah to one's daughters. The context shows that the reference is to the higher knowledge of Biblical law. In point of fact, there were learned women in Talmudic times e.g., Beruriah, wife of R. Meir (Pes. 62b).

(7) Sacrifices, in general, not lust these.

(8) I.e., those who are unclean, and not permitted to eat holy food (e.g., the flesh of sacrifices) or enter the Sanctuary until their sacrifices have been offered up. This term however does not refer to sinners, whose sacrifice makes atonement for them. The sin- and guilt-offerings mentioned in the Mishnah will also refer to the former.

(9) Before the priest may offer them.

(10) Lev. XV. 32, referring to the sacrifices.

(11) The expression 'this is the law' is emphatic, and hence extends its provisions to include those who might otherwise not have been included. Since a minor cannot bring a sacrifice himself, his father must do so for him. Moreover, a minor has no legal consent. Thus, we see that these sacrifices can be brought without their owner's (i.e., those on whose behalf it is offered) consent. Since their consent is unnecessary, the priests do not act as their agents, and on that account it is permitted.

(12) Ibid. XII, 7.

(13) V. Yeb. 12b. Thus we see that a minor is incapable of childbirth. — Of course, the same might have been stated simply on physiological grounds.

(14) Certain sacrifices were variable, depending on their owner's financial position (v. Lev. V, 1-13; XII, 1-8). Now in a strictly legal sense every married woman is poor, since she has no proprietary rights, everything belonging to her husband. Nevertheless, if he is wealthy, he must bring the sacrifice of a rich person.

(15) [This clause is taken as referring to sacrifices for which she may have become liable after the betrothal.] So curr. edd. Ran omits 'R. Judah said' from the beginning of the Baraitha, and adds at this point: R. Judah said: Therefore, if he divorced her, he is free from this liability, for thus she writes (in the document acknowledging receipt of settlements due to her on divorce): (I free you) from all the liabilities hitherto borne by you in respect of me. From the Rashi in B.M. 104a, it appears that his version there was the same as the Ran's here. Now, reverting to the argument, since R. Judah (and the first Tanna) taught that a husband is liable for his wife's obligatory sacrifices, 'this is the law' may be interpreted as applying to an imbecile too, the liability resting with her husband. For if this principle of the husband's liability were not admitted, this interpretation would be impossible, since an imbecile herself is not a responsible person.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 36a

R. Simi b. Abba objected: If he [the maddir][1] is a priest, he may sprinkle for him the blood of his sin-offering and his guilt-offering?[2] — This refers to the blood of a leper's sin-offering and of a leper's guilt-offering [who lack atonement], as it is written, This shall be the law of the leper:[3] both an adult and a minor.[4]

We learnt: If priests render a sacrifice piggul[5] in the Temple, and do so intentionally, they are liable;[6] This implies [that if they do so] unwittingly, they are exempt, though it was taught thereon:[7] Yet their piggul stands.[8] Now, it is well if you say that they are the agents of the All-Merciful: hence their piggul stands. But if you say that they are our agents, why is it so; let him say to him, 'I appointed you an agent for my advantage, not for my hurt'?[9] — I will tell you: Piggul is different, because the Writ saith, neither shall it be imputed unto him:[10] [implying that it is piggul] in spite of everything.[11]

The [above] text [states]: 'R. Johanan said: All require [the owner's] consent, save for those lacking atonement, since one brings a sacrifice for his sons and daughters when minors.' If so, let one offer a sin-offering on behalf of his neighbour for [eating] heleb,[12] since one brings [a sin-offering] for his insane wife?[13] Why then did R. Eleazar say: If a man set aside a sin-offering for heleb on his neighbour's behalf, his action is invalid?[14] — [Now consider:] In respect to his insane wife, what are the circumstances? If she ate [heleb] whilst insane, she is not liable to a sacrifice;[15] while if she ate it when sane, subsequently becoming insane, [there is the ruling of] R. Jeremiah who said in the name of R. Abbahu in R. Johanan's name: If a man ate heleb, set aside an offering, became insane, and then regained his sanity, it [the sacrifice] is unfit: having been once rejected, it remains so.[16]

Yet if so,[17] a man should be able to offer the passover sacrifice for his neighbour,[18] since he brings it for his sons and daughters, who are minors. Why then did R. Eleazar say: If a man sets aside a passover sacrifice for his neighbour his action[18] is null? — Said R. Zera: [The law, And they shall take to them every man] a lamb, according to the house of their fathers, [a lamb for a house],[19] is not Biblically incumbent [upon minors].[20] And how do we know this? — Because we learnt: If a man says to his sons [who are not of age], 'I will slaughter the passover sacrifice for whomever of you first enters Jerusalem', then as soon as the first of them enters with his head and the greater part of his body, he acquires his portion, and assigns a part thereof to his brothers with him. Now, if you maintain that ‘a lamb, according to the house of their fathers’ is Biblically applicable [to minors], then standing over the flesh, can he transfer a portion to his brethren?[21] If so, why did their father speak thus to them? — In order to stimulate them in [the performance of] precepts. It was taught likewise: it once happened [after their father had spoken thus] that the daughters entered [the city] before the sons, so that the daughters shewed themselves zealous, and the sons indolent.[22]

HE MAY SEPARATE HIS TERUMAH [etc.]

---

(1) V. Glos.

(2) Now. since these offerings are unspecified, they must refer to all, even of those who do not lack atonement.

(3) Lev. XIV, 2, referring to his purificatory sacrifices.

(4) Therefore the same reasoning applies as in the case of a zab.

(5) v. Glos. Such a sacrifice is ‘not acceptable’ and does not acquit its owner of his liability, so that he is bound to offer another.

(6) To compensate the owner of the sacrifice.

(7) This is absent in our text, but supplied from Men. 49a.

(8) Though committed unwittingly, the sacrifice remains piggul.

(9) I.e., such an act committed on behalf of someone else can be repudiated.

(10) Lev. VII, 18.

(11) I.e., the priest is the owner's agent, yet the latter cannot repudiate him, because his power of rendering a sacrifice piggul is absolute and unconditional.

(12) Forbidden fat. The objection is not particularly in regard to this sin-offering, but to all sin-offerings brought on account of transgression. The addition of heleb merely illustrates the type of offering referred to, and is frequently used as the general designation of a sin-offering.

(13) Who also has neither legal consent nor knowledge.

(14) The animal not becoming sanctified.

(15) Not being responsible for her actions.

(16) I.e., when the transgressor lost his reason, his sacrifice became unfit for offering, because an insane person cannot offer, and it remains unfit even if he regains his sanity. Thus we see that even if a sane person sinned, he is not liable to a sacrifice on becoming insane. Therefore, one cannot bring a sin-offering for his insane wife for actual transgression; hence the proposed analogy cannot be drawn.

(17) Still objecting to R. Johanan's first ruling.

(18) Without his knowledge.

(19) Ex. XII, 3.

(20) The Passover sacrifice had to be definitely assigned (before the animal was slain) to a number of persons and anyone not so appointed was subsequently forbidden to cat thereof. But this assignment does not, by Scriptural law, apply to minors at all. For this reason the father could slaughter for them, since they did not need to be appointed. Hence, one cannot argue from this to an adult, to whom the law off appointment applies.

(21) For the assignment of the sacrifice can be made only before it is slain, not after (Pes. 89a). How then can one son assign a portion of the sacrifice to his brothers after it is killed? Therefore we must conclude that by Biblical law they are not bound to be appointed for the eating of the sacrifice at all.

(22) But it is not stated that they lost their portion, proving that assignment is not Biblically incumbent upon them.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 36b

The scholars propounded: If one gives terumah of his own for his neighbour's produce, does he require his consent or not? Do we say, since it is a benefit for him, his consent is unnecessary;[1] or perhaps, [the privilege of performing] the precept is his, and he prefers to perform it himself? Come and hear! HE MAY SEPARATE HIS TERUMAH AND HIS TITHES WITH HIS CONSENT. How is this meant: Shall we say, his own corn is used?[2] Then with whose consent? If with his own, who appointed him an agent?[3] But if it means with the owner's consent — does he not benefit him by acting as his agent?[4] Hence it must mean that he separates his own [i.e., the maddir's] produce for the owner's. Now, with whose consent? If with the owner's, does he not benefit him? Hence it must mean with his own knowledge [without informing the owner].[5] Now if you say that he requires his consent, does he not benefit him?[6] — [No.] After all, it means the owner's [produce] for the owner's produce; and it is as Raba said [elsewhere], That the owner had announced, 'Whoever wishes to separate, let him do so;' here, too, the owner had announced etc.[7]

R. Jeremiah asked R. Zera: If one separates of his own for his neighbour's [produce], to whom does the goodwill [value] belong?[8] Do we say, but for this man's produce, would the other's stack have been made fit to use?[9] Or perhaps, but for this man's stack, the other man's produce would not be terumah?[10] — He replied, Scripture saith, all the increase of thy seed . . . . and thou shalt give.[11]

He objected: HE MAY SEPARATE HIS TERUMAH AND HIS TITHES WITH HIS CONSENT. Now if you say that the goodwill belongs to the owner, surely he [the maddir] benefits him? Hence this proves that the goodwill is his![12] — I will tell you: it is not so. This means that the terumah belongs to the owner; 'HIS CONSENT also referring to the owner, who had announced, 'Whoever wishes to separate, let him do so.'

Come and hear: R. Abbahu said in R. Johanan's name: He who sanctifies the animal must add the fifth, whilst only he for whom atonement is made sanctifies a substitute;[13] and he who gives terumah of his own for another man's produce, the goodwill is his.[14]

HE MAY TEACH HIM MIDRASH, HALACHOTH, AND AGGADOTH, BUT NOT SCRIPTURE. Why not Scripture — because he benefits him? But [by] Midrash too he benefits him? — Said Samuel: This refers to a place where the teaching of Scripture is remunerated, but not that of Midrash. How state this definitely?[15] —

---

(1) As it may be taken for granted.

(2) Lit., '(produce) of the owner of the stack (is separated as terumah, etc.) for produce belonging to the owner of the stack.'

(3) I.e., surely A cannot separate terumah for B, using B's produce, without the latter's consent.

(4) Whereas his vow forbids him to benefit him.

(5) [This is not regarded as a direct benefit, since he does not give him aught; v. Ran.]

(6) For by consenting he shews that he regards it as a benefit.

(7) Though such an announcement is a sufficient authorisation, the maddir is not thereby specially appointed an agent, and so does not directly benefit him.

(8) I.e., if another Israelite paid him something to give the terumah to a particular friend of his, to whom does that thing belong?

(9) Therefore the goodwill should belong to him who renders the terumah.

(10) Produce can he declared terumah only on account of other produce. But one cannot take some corn and declare it terumah.

(11) Deut. XIV, 25. In its context, thou shalt give refers to the changing of produce into money; but it is here taken out of its context and related to all the increase of thy seed, shewing that the goodwill belongs to the owner of the corn, no matter who actually separates the tithe. This is the reading of our text, and also that of Ran. But such forcible disregard of the context is not very plausible. Asheri prefers a preferable reading: (When thou hast made an end of tithing) All the tithes of thine increase . . . and thou shalt give it to the Levite; (Deut. XXVI, 12).

(12) This of course is on the assumption that the naddir gives his own corn as terumah.

(13) If A dedicates an animal for B's sacrifice and it subsequently receives a blemish and must be redeemed, then if A, who sanctified it, redeems it himself, he must add a fifth to its value, but nut if B redeems it (this is deduced from Lev. XXVII, 15). Again, if another animal is substituted for the first, both the original and its substitute are holy (ibid. 10). R. Johanan rules that this is only if B, on whose behalf the animal was sanctified, made the substitution, but not if A did so.

(14) Sc. the man who gives it.

(15) Seeing that the statement in the Mishnah is unqualified.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 37a

He [the Tanna] informs us this: that even where a fee is taken, it may be accepted only for Scripture, but not for Midrash. Now, why does Midrash differ, that remuneration is forbidden: because it is written, And the Lord commanded me at that time to teach you;[1] and it is also written, Behold I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me[2] just as I [taught you] gratuitously, so you must teach gratuitously? Then should not Scripture too be unremunerated? — Rab said: The fee is for guarding [the children]. R. Johanan maintained: The fee is for the teaching of accentuation.[3]

We learnt: HE MAY NOT TEACH HIM SCRIPTURE. Now that is well on the view that remuneration is for the teaching of accentuation. But on the view that payment is for acting as guardian — does an adult need one?[4] — It refers to a child. If so, consider the last clause: BUT HE MAY TEACH SCRIPTURE TO HIS SONS: can a child have children? — It is defective, and teaches thus: HE MAY NOT TEACH HIM SCRIPTURE in the case of a minor: but if he is an adult, HE MAY TEACH SCRIPTURE BOTH TO him and HIS SONS.

An objection is raised: Children are not to study a new portion of Bible on the Sabbath; but they may make a first revision on the Sabbath.[5] This is well on the view that remuneration is for the teaching of accentuation: hence a passage may not be read for the first time on the Sabbath;[6] but on the view that payment is for acting as guardian, why is it forbidden to teach a passage for the first time on the Sabbath, yet permitted to give a first revision on the Sabbath; surely there is pay for guardianship oil the Sabbath?[7] — Now, even according to your reasoning: is remuneration for teaching the accentuation on the Sabbath forbidden? Is it not included [in the weekly or monthly fee], which is permitted? For it was taught: If one engages a [day] labourer to look after a child,[8] or the heifer,[9] or to watch over the crops,[10] he may not pay him for the Sabbath:[11] therefore

---

(1) Deut. IV, 14.

(2) Ibid. 5.

(3) The whole system of punctuation and accentuation being post-Biblical, Moses' prohibition does not apply to it. The meaning of the phrase pisuk te' ammim is not altogether clear. Jastrow translates: 'the division of words into clauses in accordance with the sense, punctuation'. Be that as it may, it must at least refer to a particular manner of dividing the Biblical text with or without signs, over and above that which would naturally suggest itself by the subject matter. This conclusion must be drawn from the fact that it is regarded by Rab as non-Sinaitic: yet the clearly natural division, corresponding to peshat, could not have been thought of as introduced after Moses; what sense then did it make otherwise? There is mention of chanting in Meg. 32a, but there the reference is to the Mishnah as well as the Bible, the former being studied in a sort of chant, and the phrase pisuk te'ammim is not used there. [Berliner, A., however, in Bertr. z. hebr. Gram. p. 29, n. 1, quotes Rashi on Gen. Rab. XXXVI, (according to a M_nchen MS.) as explaining pisuk te'ammim as Tropen, cantillation.]

(4) Hence, Bible teaching to an adult should be unremunerated, in which case it should be permitted in the Mishnah.

(5) I.e., having studied it before, they may revise it even for the first time on the Sabbath.

(6) Because remuneration is made chiefly for teaching a passage for the first time, as that is the most difficult part of instruction. Hence, if a new passage is thus taught on the Sabbath, the teacher is paid chiefly for Sabbath labour, which is forbidden.

(7) What does it matter whether the passage is a new' one or not? The guardianship is the same in both cases, and remuneration for such work on the Sabbath is forbidden.

(8) That he should not ritually defile himself. It was customary for a child to draw the water from a well to mix with the ashes of the red heifer; this child had to be ritually clean.

(9) This refers to the red heifer. The guardian was to take care that 'no yoke came upon it' (Num. XIX, 2).

(10) This refers to the barley specially sown seventy days before Passover (Men. 85a) for the ceremony of 'sheaf waving' (v. Lev. XXIII. 11) and to the wheat of which were made the 'two wave-loaves' on Pentecost (ibid. 17). These crops were specially guarded.

(11) Since each day is separately paid for, and payment for the Sabbath per se is forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 37b

if they are lost [or harmed] [on the Sabbath], he is not responsible. But if he was engaged by the week, month, year or septennate, he is paid for the Sabbath; consequently, if they are lost, he is responsible.[1] But in the matter of the Sabbath a new passage may not be studied for the first time for this reason: that the parents of the children may be free for the observance of the Sabbath. An alternative answer is this: because on the Sabbath they eat and drink [more than on weekdays] and feel sluggish;[2] as Samuel said: The change in one's regular diet is the beginning of digestive trouble.[3]

Now, he who maintains that remuneration is for the teaching of accentuation, — why does he reject the view that it is for acting as guardian? — He reasons: Do daughters then need guarding?[4] And he who maintains that the fee is for guardianship, — why does he reject the view that it is for teaching accents? — He holds that accents are also Biblical;[5] for R. Ika b. Abin said in the name of R. Hananel in Rab's name: What is the meaning of, And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly, and they gave the sense, so that they understood the reading?[6] 'They read in the book, it, the law of God,' refers to Scripture; 'distinctly,' to Targum;[7] 'and they gave the sense', to the division of sentences; 'so that they understood the reading,' to the accentuation; others say, to the masoroth.[8]

R. Isaac said: The textual reading,[9] as transmitted by the Soferim, their stylistic embellishments, [words] read [in the text] but not written, and words written but omitted in the reading, are all halachah from Moses at Sinai.[10] By textual reading is meant words as erez, shamayim, mizraim.[11] Stylistic embellishments: e.g., [and comfort ye your hearts;] after that ye shall pass on.[12] [Let the damsel abide with its a few days, at least ten:] after that she shall go. [Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites;] afterwards, shalt thou be gathered unto thy people.[13] [The singers went before,] the players on instruments followed after.[14] Thy righteousness is like the great mountains.[15]

[Words] read [in the text] but not written: [the word] 'Euphrates' in [the verse] as he went to recover his border at the river [Euphrates];[16] [the word] 'man' in [the verse] And the counsel of Ahitophel . . . was as if a [man] had enquired of the oracle of God;[17] [the word] 'come' in [the verse] Behold, the days [come], saith the Lord, the city shall be built etc.;[18] 'for it' in [the verse] let there be no escape [for it]:[19] 'unto me' in [the verse] All that thou sayest [unto me] I will do; 'to me' [in the verse] And she went down unto the floor;[20] 'to me' in [the verse] And she said, These six measures of barley gave he unto me; for he said [to me],[21] All these [words] are read but not written.[22] The following are written but not read: [the word] 'pray' in forgive;[23]

---

(1) Thus we see that the Sabbath may be paid for providing it is included in the general weekly agreement. Hence, though the main work in teaching lies in the first reading, this should be permitted on the Sabbath, since the fee is included in the general arrangements.

(2) Hence are not fit to study a portion for the first time.

(3) Lit., 'disease of the bowels'. The Sabbath being a day of delight, the parents naturally wish to play and amuse themselves with their children thereon. But if the children study a new passage on that day, since this requires great concentration, the parents may be afraid of distracting their attention. It is interesting to observe from actual life what the Sabbath meant to the people. In spite of the innumerable restrictions pertaining to that day, and on account of which the Sabbath has been severely criticised as an intolerable burden, right from the New Testament times down to the present day, this simple statement, teaching no doctrine or view of the Sabbath, but recording a simple fact, vividly illustrates the utter shallowness of all that misinformed criticism. Cf. Schechter, Studies in Judaism ('The Law and Recent Criticism, pp. 296f). — 'On the one side, we hear the opinions of so many learned professors, proclaiming ex cathedra that the Law was a most terrible burden, and the life under it the most unbearable slavery . . . On the other side we have the testimony of a literature extending over about twenty-five centuries, and including all sorts and conditions of men, scholars, poets, mystics, lawyers . . . schoolmen, tradesmen, workmen, women, simpletons, who all . . . give unanimous evidence in favour of this Law, and of the bliss and happiness of living and dying under it, — and this, the testimony of people who were actually living under the Law, not merely theorising upon it'.

(4) Girls are generally at home and do not venture into the streets; hence require no guarding. Now the Mishnah states in general terms that he may not teach Scripture. Though this, as explained, refers to a minor, yet even so the law holds good both of boys and of girls, since no limitations are given. But if payment is for guardianship, he should be permitted to teach girls, who do not need it. — Another reading is: does an adult need guarding? According to this, the explanation that the Mishnah refers to a minor is rejected as being too farfetched.

(5) I.e., the system of accentuations goes back to Moses: consequently it was included in Moses' prohibition.

(6) Neh. VIII, 8.

(7) Targum, 'translation', generally refers to the Aramaic translation of the Bible. In Mishnaic phraseology it might refer to a translation from Hebrew or the Bible into any language, (v. J. Kid. 59a, where it denotes a Greek version of Aquila; Meg. II, 1; Shab. 115a), but the word Targum by itself was restricted to the Aramaic version of the Bible. This Aramaic translation was publically read in the synagogue, along with the original text, and rules for reading it were formulated (v. Meg. II, 1; Tosef. Meg. II, V). This practice was an ancient institution, dating back to the Second Temple, and according to Rab, going back to Ezra, v. J.E., XII, p. 57.

(8) Masoroth: Tosaf and Asheri refer this to the plene and defective readings, e.g., where the 'o' is represented by waw (plene) and where it is missing (defective); where the 'i' is shewn by yod, and where not. Ran simply states: the traditional readings. The term 'masorah' occurs in Ezek. XX, 37, and means 'fetter'. Thus the masorah is a fetter upon the text, i.e., it fixes its reading. In course of time it was connected with masar (to hand down), and thus came to mean traditional reading. The old Hebrew text was in all probability written without any breaks. it was the work of the Masorites to make the divisions into words, books, sections, paragraphs, etc., and fix the orthography and pronunciation. The traditionally fixed text, especially with a view to its orthography, was called masoreth; the division into sense-clauses, pisuk te'ammim; the traditional pronunciation, mikra. V. J.E. s.v. Masorah.

(9) V. preceding note.

(10) I.e., though these were established by the Soferim (v. Glos.) they are based on usage going back to Moses.

(11) In pause (viz., an ethnahta or sof pasuk) the tone-vowels are lengthened. Since there is nothing in the lettering to indicate this grammatical change, it was the work of the Soferim to teach it.

(12) Gen. XVIII, 5.

(13) Num. XXXI, 2.

(14) Ps. LXVIII, 26.

(15) Ps. XXXVI, 7. In all these examples 'after' is strictly speaking superfluous, for the verses would have made the same sense without it (presumably by the use of the copulative). In the last example, the comparative kaf (like) is also unnecessary, being omitted in the parallel stich: thy judgements are a great deep. But they are inserted in the text in order to give it a smoother flow. Ran: In all these cases, 'after' (Heb. ahar). and in the last example, 'like the mountains' (Heb. keharere) bear a disjunctive accent, so as to elucidate the meaning. E.g., the first example (disregarding the accents) might read, 'and comfort ye your hearts after ye shall have passed', and so the other examples. The last example, owing to the disjunctive of ke-harere, is according to Ran to be translated: Thy righteousness, O God, is as (manifest as) the mountains. These disjunctives are referred to as the embellishments of the Soferim. Goldschmidt, Nedarim a.l. (p. 442, n. 84) observes that a copulative word has been omitted in all these texts, as is shewn by the Samaritan text and some MSS.

(16) II Sam. VIII, 3.

(17) Ibid. XVI, 23.

(18) Jer. XXXI, 38.

(19) Jer. L. 29.

(20) Ruth III, 5.

(21) Ibid. 17.

(22) Wilna Gaon adds the following examples, given in some editions, and also in Soferim VI, 8: But (the children of) Benjamin would not hearken (Jud. XX, 13); Because (Heb. Ki 'al ken: ken is read but not written) the king's son is dead (II Sam. XVIII, 20); The seal of the Lord of (hosts) (II Kings XIX, 31); Adrammelech and Sharaezer (his sons) smote him (Ibid. 37).

(23) II Kings V, 18.

'these' in Now [these] are the commandments.[1] 'let him bend' in Against him that bendeth [let him bend] the bow;[2] 'five' in and on the south side, four thousand and five [five] hundred;[3] 'if' in it is time that [If] I am thy near kinsman.[4] The foregoing are written but not read.[5]

R. Aha b. Adda said: In the West [i.e., Palestine] the following verse is divided into three verses, viz., And the Lord said unto Moses, Lo, I come unto thee in a thick cloud etc.[6]

R. Hama b. R. Hanina said: Moses became wealthy but from the chippings of the tablets, for it is written, Hew thee two tablets of stone like unto the first:[7] their chips be thine.

R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: The Torah was given only to Moses and his seed, for it is written, write thee these words[8] [and] Hew thee:[9] just as the chips are thine so is the writing thine.[10] But Moses in his generosity gave it to Israel, and concerning him it is said, He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed, etc.[11] R. Hisda objected: And the Lord commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments?[12] — He commanded me, and I [passed it on] to you.[13] [A further objection:] Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the Lord my God commanded me?[14] — He commanded me, and I taught you. Now, therefore, write this song for you![15] — This refers to the song alone.[16] That this song be a witness for the against the children of Israel?[17] — But only the [Scripture] dialectics [were given to Moses alone].[18]

R. Johanan said: The Holy One, blessed be He, causes His Divine Presence to rest only upon him who is strong, wealthy, wise and meek;[19] and all these [qualifications] are deduced from Moses. Strong, for it is written, And he spread abroad the tent over the tabernacle;[20] and a Master said, Moses our teacher spread it; and it is also written, Ten cubits shall be the length of the board.[21] Yet perhaps it was long and thin?[22] — But [it is derived] from this verse: And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and broke them.[23] Now, it was taught: The tables were six [handbreadths] in length, six in breadth, and three in thickness.[24] Wealthy, [as it is written] Hew thee, [interpreted] the chips be thine. Wise: for Rab and Samuel both said, Fifty gates of understanding were created in the world, and all but one were given to Moses, for it is said, For thou hast made him [sc. Moses] a little lower than God.[25] Meek, for it is written, Now the man Moses was very meek.[26]

R. Johanan said: All the prophets were wealthy. Whence do we derive this? From Moses, Samuel, Amos and Jonah. Moses, because it is written, I have not taken one ass from them.[27] Now, if he meant without a hiring fee — did he then merely claim not to be one of those who take without a fee?[28] He must hence have meant, even with a fee.[29] But perhaps it was because of his poverty?[30] — But [it is derived] from the verse, Hew thee etc.: the chips be thine. Samuel, because it is written, Behold here I am: witness against me before the Lord, and before his anointed: whose ox have I taken, or whose ass have I taken?[31] Now, if he meant for nothing — did he then merely claim not to be one of those who take without payment? Hence he must have meant, even for payment. But perhaps it was due to poverty? — Rather from this verse, And his return was to Ramah: for there was his house.[32] Whereupon Raba observed, wherever he went, his house went with him.[33] (Raba said: A greater thing is said of Samuel than of Moses: for in the case of Moses it is stated, 'I have not taken one ass from them' implying even for a fee;[34] but in the case of Samuel, he did not hire it even with their consent, for it is written, And they said, thou hast not defrauded us, nor taken advantage of our willingness.)[35] Amos, because it is written, Then answered Amos and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son, but I was a herdman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit;[36] which R. Joseph translated: Behold, I am the owner of flocks, and possess sycamore trees in the valley.[37] Jonah, as it is written [and he found a ship going to Tarshish:] so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it.[38] And R. Johanan observed: He paid for the hire of the whole ship. R. Romanus said: The hire of the ship was four thousand gold denarii.

R. Johanan also said: At first Moses used to study the Torah and forget it, until it was given to him as a gift, for it is said, And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him [. . . two tables of testimony].[39]

MISHNAH. AND HE MAY SUPPORT HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN, THOUGH HE [THE MUDDAR] IS LIABLE FOR THEIR MAINTENANCE.[40] BUT HE MAY NOT FEED HIS BEASTS, WHETHER CLEAN OR UNCLEAN.[41] R. ELIEZER SAID: HE MAY FEED AN UNCLEAN BEAST OF HIS, BUT NOT A CLEAN ONE. THEY [THE SAGES] SAID TO HIM, WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN AN UNCLEAN AND A CLEAN BEAST? HE REPLIED TO THEM, THE LIFE OF A CLEAN BEAST BELONGS TO HEAVEN, BUT THE BODY IS HIS OWN;[42] BUT AN UNCLEAN ANIMAL

---

(1) Deut. VI, 1. Wilna Gaon deletes this example, as in fact 'these' is read. He substitutes 'eth in As the Lord liveth ('eth — sign of the accusative) that made us this soul (Jer. XXXVIII, 16). In Heb. Zoth (this) and 'eth are similar, differing only in one letter, and this may have caused the error in the text.

(2) Jer. LI, 3.

(3) Ezek. XLVIII, 26.

(4) Ruth III, 12.

(5) Wilna Gaon adds the following examples: Ibid. XV, 21 Jer. XXXIX. These are given in Soferim VI.

(6) Ex. XIX, 9. [This is not to imply that in Palestine where the whole of the Pentateuch was read in three years, most verses were divided in two or three (v. Rappaport, Halichoth Kedem pp. 10 and 17). It only means that this was one of the few passages in which there existed a difference of division between the Palestinians and Babylonians; v. Blau, JQR, 1896, p. 143.]

(7) Ex. XXXIV, 1.

(8) Ibid. 27.

(9) Ibid. 1.

(10) The Torah is thy property.

(11) Prov. XXII, 9.

(12) Deut. IV, 24. This proves that it was not given to Moses for himself.

(13) This is the answer, which interprets the verse thus: And the Lord commanded me at that time, (and I determined) to teach you etc.

(14) Ibid. 5.

(15) Ibid. XXXI, 19. 'For you' shews that it was given to the Israelites in the first place.

(16) But the rest of the Torah was originally given to Moses alone.

(17) Deut. XXXI, 19. If the reference is to the song alone, how can that testify against Israel?

(18) And he taught them to the people.

(19) Cf. Maim. Guide, II, ch. 32. It seems strange that wealth should he regarded as a necessary qualification for prophecy. Poverty was not regarded as a fault, many of the Rabbis being poor (e.g., Hillel, before he became nasi; R. Joshua, the opponent of R. Gamaliel; R. Judah), yet were not thought of any the less. CF. also Aboth, VI, 4. Is it possible that 'wealthy' was included in order to oppose the N.T. teachings which imply that poverty in itself is a virtue? [According to Asheri these qualifications are deemed necessary for the gift of permanent prophecy. This would explain the inclusion of wealth, which dowers its possessor with the sense of independence. the better to proclaim the word of God and which commands greater respect.]

(20) Ex. XL, 19.

(21) Ex. XXVI, 16. This then was the height of the tabernacle: to have spread the tent over it he must have been extremely tall, and presumably correspondingly strong.

(22) In which case he would not necessarily be strong.

(23) Deut. IX, 17.

(24) These would be extremely heavy and require great strength to handle.

(25) Ps. VIII, 6.
(26) Num. XII, 3.
(27) Num. XVI, 15.
(28) Surely he did not pride himself on not being a thief!
(29) I.e., he had no need to hire an animal, possessing so many himself. Therefore he must have been wealthy.
(30) I.e., having so few possessions that he did not need one.
(31) I Sam. XII, 3.
(32) Ibid. VII, 17.
(33) I.e., he travelled about with all the retinue and baggage of his house: this could be done only by a wealthy man.
(34) This implies that he did not compel them to hire him an ass. Yet even when he merely requested it, they might have dissimulated their unwillingness through shame and hired it to him.
(35) Ibid. XII, 4.
(36) Amos VII, 14.
(37) Hence I have no need to turn my prophecy to professional uses. Boker, rendered in the A.V. 'herdman', is here translated 'owner of flocks'. [This is the rendering of Targum Pseudo-Jonathan; v. B.K. (Sonc. ed.) p. 9, n. 9.]
(38) Jon. I, 3.
(39) Ex. XXXI, 18. This shews that the two tables (i.e., the Torah) were made a gift to him.
(40) This continues the preceding Mishnahs. Tosaf.: this applies according to the Rabbis supra 33b, to maintenance above the minimum necessities, which is all a husband is liable For.
(41) Because a fattened animal has more value than otherwise; hence it is a direct benefit to the muddar.
(42) I.e., since it may be eaten, he directly benefits by its fattening

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 38b

BELONGS BODY AND LIFE TO HEAVEN.[1] SAID THEY TO HIM, THE LIFE OF AN UNCLEAN BEAST TOO BELONGS TO HEAVEN AND THE BODY IS HIS. FOR IF HE WISHES, HE CAN SELL IT TO A HEATHEN OR FEED DOGS WITH IT.

GEMARA. R. Isaac b. Hananiah said in R. Huna's name: He who is under a vow not to benefit from his neighbour may give him his daughter in marriage. R. Zera pondered thereon: What are the circumstances? If the property of the bride's father is forbidden to the bridegroom, — is he not giving him a servant to serve him?[2] If again the bridegroom's property is forbidden to the father of the bride[3] — but even a greater thing was said: HE MAY SUPPORT HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN. THOUGH HE [THE MUDDAR] IS LIABLE FOR THEIR MAINTENANCE;[4] then you say, He may give him his daughter in marriage! — After all, this refers to the case where the property of the father of the bride is forbidden to the bridegroom, but this treats of his daughter, a bogereth,[5] [who marries] at her own desire. It was taught likewise: He who is under a vow not to benefit from his neighbour may not give him his daughter in marriage; but he may permit his daughter, a bogereth, to marry him at her own desire.

R. Jacob said: If a man imposes a vow on his son [to do no service for him], in order that his son may study,[6] the latter may fill a barrel of water and light the lamp for him.[7] R. Isaac said: He is permitted to broil him a small fish.

R. Jeremiah said in R. Johanan's name: If a man is under a vow not to benefit from his neighbour, the latter may offer him the cup of peace. What is that? — Here [in Babylon] it has been interpreted, the cup drunk in the house of mourning.[8] In the West [Palestine] it was said: the cup of the baths.[9]

BUT HE MAY NOT FEED HIS BEASTS, WHETHER etc. It was taught: Joshua of 'Uzza said: He may feed his Canaanitish [i.e., heathen] bondmen and bondwomen, but not his beasts, whether clean or unclean. Why so? Because slaves are for service;[10] beasts are for fattening.

MISHNAH. IF ONE IS FORBIDDEN TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, AND HE PAYS HIM A VISIT [IN SICKNESS] HE MUST STAND, BUT NOT SIT; HE MAY AFFORD HIM A CURE OF LIFE, BUT NOT A CURE OF MONEY.[11]

---

(1) Since it may not be eaten, he does not benefit through its fattening.

(2) Why is it then permitted? This is on the assumption that the reference is to a na'arah, (v. Glos.), whose labour belongs to her father, and who in turn transfers it to her husband.

(3) And R. Huna teaches that he may marry his daughter, though by maintaining her he indirectly benefits her father.

(4) So that he could support his daughter even when under her father's roof, and he is not considered as thereby benefiting her father. Surely then it is only too obvious that he may marry her.

(5) Over twelve years and six months and one day of age. She is no longer under her father's authority, and the profits of her labour belong to herself.

(6) Without interruption.

(7) For presumably his vow was not directed against such trifling services, which require very little time.

(8) It was customary to drink a special mourner's cup at the meals in a mourner's house. Keth. 8b.

(9) It was the custom to drink a cup of some beverage after a hot bath.

(10) Consequently their master does not gain anything when one feeds them. This refer, to extra food over the slave's requirements. — Ran.

(11) The meaning of this is discussed on 42b.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 39a

GEMARA. What are the circumstances? If the visitor's property is forbidden to the invalid, he may even sit? Whilst if the invalid's property is forbidden to the visitor, he may not even stand?[1] — Said Samuel: In truth, it means that the visitor's property is forbidden to the invalid, and applies to a place where a fee is received for sitting [with an invalid], but not for standing.[2] How state this definitely?[3] — He [the Tanna] teaches us thus: that even where it is customary to take a fee for visiting, one may receive it only for sitting, but not for standing.[4] An alternative answer is this: Just as R. Simeon maintained [elsewhere] that it is feared that he may tarry a long time whilst standing,[5] so here too it is feared that he may stay a long time if he sits.[6] 'Ulla said: After all it means that the invalid's property is forbidden to the visitor, for[7] he did not vow where it affects his health.[8] If so, he may sit too? — Because he can stand.[9]

An objection is raised: If he fell sick, he may enter to visit him; if his son became ill, he may inquire [after his health] in the street.[10] Now this is well according to 'Ulla, who maintains that it means that the invalid's property is forbidden to the visitor, for he did not vow where it affects his own health.[11] But on Samuel's explanation, that the visitor's property is forbidden to the invalid, what is the difference between himself and his son? — He can answer you: Our Mishnah means that the invalid may not benefit from the visitor; in the Baraitha, the case Is reversed. How state this definitely?[12] — Said Raba:

---

(1) For by standing in his house he is regarded as benefiting.

(2) It was customary to have companions or visitors for invalids, to cheer them up. Therefore if the visitor gives the invalid his company without accepting a fee, he is benefiting him.

(3) That money is paid for sitting and not for standing.

(4) One who sits presumably stays a long time; but one who stands pays only a fleeting visit, and hence may not receive a fee.

(5) V. 42b.

(6) I.e., the Mishnah refers to an invalid who is forbidden to benefit from the visitor. The visitor may not sit, lest he stay a long time, which is certainly a benefit to the invalid.

(7) Generally the Heb. kegon states a particular instance. Here, however, it introduces a general statement. — Rashi, Ran, and Asheri.

(8) The invalid never intended that his neighbour should be so stringently forbidden to benefit from him as not even to stand in his house to cheer him up in his illness.

(9) For the invalid would not have the visitor benefit from him more than is strictly necessary.

(10) But not enter his house.

(11) Therefore, if his son fell sick, the visitor may not enter his house, because it is to be assumed that the question of his son's health did not come into consideration at the time of the vow.

(12) On what grounds is this difference based?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 39b

Our Mishnah presents a difficulty to Samuel: Why particularly teach that he may stand but not sit? Hence it must refer to a case where the invalid is forbidden to benefit from his visitor.[1]

Resh Lakish said: Where is visiting the sick indicated in the Torah? In the verse, If these men die the common death of all men, or if they be visited after the visitation of all men etc.[2] How is it implied? — Raba answered: [The verse means this:] If these men die the common death of all men, who lie sick a-bed and men come in and visit them, what will people say? The Lord hath not sent me[3] for this [task]. Raba expounded: But if the Lord make a new thing:[4] if the Gehenna[5] is already created, 'tis well: if not, let the Lord create it. But that is not so, for it was taught: Seven things were created before the world, viz., The Torah, repentance, the Garden of Eden, Gehenna, the Throne of Glory, the Temple, and the name of the Messiah. The Torah, for it is written, The Lord possessed me [sc. the Torah] in the beginning of his way, before his works of old.[6] Repentance, for it is written, Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world . . . Thou turnest man to destruction, and sayest, Repent, ye sons of men.[7] The Garden of Eden, as it is written, And the Lord God planted a garden in Eden from aforetime.[8] Gehenna, as it is written, For Tophet[9] is ordained of old.[10] The Throne of Glory, as it is written, Thy Throne is established from of old.[11] The Temple, as it is written, A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.[12] The name of the Messiah, as it is written, His name [sc. of Messiah] shall endure for ever, and [has existed] before the sun![13] — But Moses said thus: If a mouth has already been created for it [sc. Gehenna], 'tis well; if not, let the Lord create one. But is it not written, There is no new thing under the sun?[14] — He said thus: If the mouth is not near to this spot, let it draw near.

Raba, or as others say, R. Isaac, lectured: What is meant by, The sun and the moon stood still in their zebul?[15] What were they doing in the zebul, seeing that they were set in the raki'a?[16] This teaches that the sun and the moon ascended from the raki'a to the :zebul and exclaimed before Him, 'Sovereign of the Universe! If thou wilt execute judgment for Amram's son,[17] we will give forth our light; if not, we will not shine.' In that moment He shot spears and arrows at them. 'Every day,' He rebuked them, 'men worship you, and yet you give your light. For My honour you do not protest, yet you protest for the honour of flesh and blood.' [Since then,] spears and arrows are shot at them every day before they consent to shine,[18] as it is written, And at the light of thy arrows they go, etc.[19]

It was taught: There is no measure for visiting the sick. What is meant by, 'there is no measure for visiting the sick?' R. Joseph thought to explain it: its reward is unlimited. Said Abaye to him: Is there a definite measure of reward for any precept? But we learnt: Be as heedful of a light precept as of a serious one, for thou knowest not the grant of reward for precepts? But Abaye explained it: Even a great person must visit a humble one. Raba said: [One must visit] even a hundred times a day. R. Abba son of R. Hanina said: He who visits an invalid takes away a sixtieth of his pain.[20] Said they to him: If so, let sixty people visit him and restore him to health? — He replied: The sixtieth is as the tenth spoken of in the school of Rabbi, and [providing further that] he [the visitor] is of his affinity.[21] For it was taught: Rabbi said: A daughter who enjoys maintenance from her brothers' estate receives a tenth of the estate.[22] Said they to Rabbi: If so, if a man leaves ten daughters and one son, the latter receives nothing! He replied: The first [to marry] receives a tenth of the estate; the second, a tenth of the residue; the third, a tenth of what remains. [Now, if they all married at the same time], they redivide equally.[23]

R. Helbo fell ill. Thereupon R. Kahana went and proclaimed:

---

(1) It is certainly true that one who forbids his neighbour to benefit from him does not do so at the cost of his own health. But then he would draw no distinction between standing and sitting, and would desire the visitor to have the benefit of sitting in his house too. Hence on 'Ulla's interpretation the distinction in the Mishnah is wrong; therefore Samuel reverses it.
(2) Num. XVI, 29.
(3) Ibid.
(4) Ibid. 30.
(5) V. p. 19, n. 6.
(6) Prov. VIII, 22.
(7) Ps. XC, 2f. 'Before', etc. applies to 'Repent'.
(8) Gen. II, 8.
(9) Another name for Gehenna.
(10) Isa. XXX, 33.
(11) Ps. XCIII, 2.
(12) Jer. XVII, 12.
(13) Ps. LXXII, 17. Now, according to this, Gehenna was definitely created before the world; how then could Moses be doubtful? — The general idea of this Baraitha is that these things are the indispensable prerequisites For the orderly progress of mankind upon earth. The Torah, the supreme source of instruction, the concept of repentance, in recognition that 'to err is human', and hence, if man falls, he needs the opportunity to rise again; the garden of Eden and the Gehenna symbolising reward and punishment, which, without conceding a purely utilitarian basis for ethical striving, are nevertheless powerful incentives thereto; the Throne of Glory and the Temple, indicating that the goal of creation is that the kingdom of God (represented by the Temple) should be established on earth as it is in Heaven; and finally, the name of Messiah, the assurance that God's purpose shall be eventually achieved.
(14) Ecc. I, 9.
(15) Hab. Ill, 11.
(16) According to tradition, there are seven heavens, zebul being one.
(17) By punishing Korah and his confederates.
(18) Accepting the Almighty's rebuke, they refuse to shine, because of the insult to His glory, until they are forced to.
(19) Ibid.
(20) A variant: his sickness.
(21) As the invalid. Born under the same planetary influence, Asheri; Rashi (and last.) 'of the same age'.
(22) She can, on marriage, demand a tenth of the estate for a dowry and trousseau. V. Keth. 68a.
(23) I.e., after taking one tenth of the estate, and another a tenth of what is left, and a third likewise, etc., they pool the lot together, and divide it equally. — Thus here too, the first visitor with the same affinity takes away a sixtieth of the sickness; the second a sixtieth of the remainder, and so on. Hence he would not be completely cured.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 40a

R. Helbo is sick. But none visited him. He rebuked them [sc. the scholars], saying, 'Did it not once happen that one of R. Akiba's disciples fell sick, and the Sages did not visit him? So R. Akiba himself entered [his house] to visit him, and because they swept and sprinkled the ground before him,[1] he recovered. 'My master,' said he, 'you have revived me!' [Straightway] R. Akiba went forth and lectured: He who does not visit the sick is like a shedder of blood.

When R. Dimi came,[2] he said: He who visits the sick causes him to live, whilst he who does not causes him to die. How does he cause [this]? Shall we say that he who visits the sick prays[3] that he may live, whilst he who does not prays that he should die, — 'that he should die!' can you really think so? But [say thus:] He who does not visit the sick prays neither that he may live nor die.[4]

Whenever Raba fell sick, on the first day he would ask that his sickness should not be made known to any one lest his fortune be impaired.[5] But after that, he said to them [his servants], 'Go, proclaim my illness in the market place, so that whoever is my enemy may rejoice, and it is written, Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth . . . Lest the Lord see it, and it displeases him, and he turn away his wrath from him.[6] whilst he who loves me will pray for me.

Rab said: He who visits the sick will be delivered from the punishments of Gehenna, for it is written, Blessed is he that considereth the poor: the Lord will deliver him in the day of evil.[7] 'The poor' [dal] means none but the sick, as it is written, He will cut me off from pining sickness [mi-dalah];[8] or from this verse: Why art thou so poorly [dal], thou son of the King?[9] Whilst 'evil' refers to Gehenna, for it is written, The Lord hath made all things for himself' Yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.[10] Now, if one does visit, what is his reward? [You ask,] 'what is his reward?' Even as hath been said; 'he will be delivered from the punishment of Gehenna!' — But what is his reward in this world? — The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon the earth; and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.[11] 'The Lord will preserve him'. — from the Evil Urge, 'and keep him alive' — [saving him] from sufferings; 'and he shall be blessed upon the' earth,' — that all will take pride in him;[12] 'and the wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies', — that he may procure friends like Naaman's, who healed his leprosy; and not chance upon friends like Rehoboam's, who divided his kingdom.

It was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: If the young tell you to build, and the old to destroy, hearken to the elders, but hearken not to the young, for the building of youth is destruction, whilst the destruction of the old is building. And a sign for the matter is Rehoboam the son of Solomon.[13]

R. Shisha son of R. Idi said: One should not visit the sick during the first three or the last three hours [of the day], lest he thereby omit to pray[14] for him. During the first three hours of the day his [the invalid's] illness is alleviated; in the last three hours his sickness is most virulent.[15]

Rabin said in Rab's name: Whence do we know that the Almighty sustains the sick? From the verse, The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing.[16] Rabin also said in Rab's name: Whence do we know that the Divine Presence rests above an invalid's bed? From the verse, The Lord doth set himself upon the bed of languishing.[17] It was taught likewise: He who visits the sick must not sit upon the bed, or on a stool or a chair, but must [reverently] robe himself and sit upon the ground, because the Divine Presence rests above an invalid's bed, as it is written, The Lord doth set himself upon the bed of languishing.

Rabin also said in Rab's name: [The swelling of] the Euphrates testifies abundantly to rain in the West.[18] Now, he disagrees with Samuel, who said: A river increases [in volume] from its bed.[19] Now, Samuel is self-contradictory. For Samuel said: Running water does not purify,

---

(1) Asheri: R. Akiba, finding the chamber neglected, gave the necessary orders.

(2) From Palestine.

(3) Lit., 'begs mercy for him'.

(4) Through the lack of his prayers, which might have been accepted, he is said to cause his death.

(5) If his illness became known, people might talk about it and thus affect his fate (Rashi).

(6) Prov. XXIV, 17f.

(7) Ps. XLI, 2.

(8) Isa. XXXVIII, 12.

(9) II Sam. XIII, 4.

(10) Prov. XVI, 4.

(11) Ps. XLI, 3.
(12) Lit., 'all will be honoured in him' — he will be a source of pride to all.
(13) His elder councillors advised him to submit to the malcontents, thus apparently weakening his authority; whilst his young friends advised him to strengthen his rule by rejecting their demands. As a result of listening to the young men his kingdom was split. Kings XII.
(14) Lit., 'dismiss' his mind from mercies.
(15) Consequently, a visitor in the first three hours may think him on the road to recovery, and consider prayer unnecessary; in the last three hours, on the other hand, he may feel that prayer is hopeless.
(16) Ps. XLI, 4.
(17) This is another rendering of the same verse. Rashi suggests another interpretation; for yisa'denu, meaning 'he will strengthen him', read yesharenu, 'he will abide with him'.
(18) Palestine. When it rains in Palestine, which is higher than Babylon, the water flows down and causes the swelling of the Euphrates. This is another way of saying that the rise of a river is due to the rains. The practical bearing of this on ritual law is discussed below.
(19) Lit., 'From its rock': though it appears to swell through the rains, actually more water gushes upwards from the river bed than is added by the rain,

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 40b

except the Euphrates in Tishri.[1] Samuel's father made mikwaoth for his daughters in Nisan[2] and had mats set for them in the days of Tishri.[3]

R. Ammi said in Rab's name: What is meant by the verse, Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee stuff for removing?[4] This is a lamp, plate and

---

(1) Tishri is the seventh month of the Jewish year, generally coinciding with September-October. If a mikweh (ritual bath) is made of collected rain water, it is efficacious only if its water is still, not running or flowing. On the other hand, a well or spring with its water gushing forth from its source is efficacious even when it flows onward. Now, during the whole year, the river may contain more rain water or melted snow than its own natural waters; consequently, it is all considered as rain water, which does not cleanse when in a running state. But in Tishri the rains have ceased, nor is there any melted snow in the river. Then it is like a well or spring, and even though running its water is efficacious for ritual cleansing. Now, according to this, the river's rise is caused mainly by rain. This conflicts with the view that at all times the water from its source is more.
(2) Nisan, the first Jewish month, corresponding to March-April. As the river is then swollen by rain, he did not permit them to take their ritual bath in the running river, but made special enclosed baths for them.
(3) In Tishri they performed their ablutions in the river. Now the bed of the river is miry, and should the feet sink into it, the water cannot reach them and the immersion is invalid; he therefore placed mats in the river bed for them to stand on. Ran gives another explanation: He hung up mats on the shore to serve as a screen, For modesty. [Obermeyer op. cit. p. 278: he set up for them tents made of reeds]. On both explanations this story is mentioned here in support of Samuel's second dictum.
(4) Ezek. XII, 3.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 41a

a rug.[1]

[And thou shalt serve thine enemies . . .] in want of all things.[2] R. Ammi said in Rab's name: This means without a lamp or table. R. Hisda said: Without a wife; R. Shesheth said: Without an attendant; R. Nahman said: Without knowledge. A Tanna taught: Without salt or fat. Abaye said: We have it on tradition that no one is poor save he who lacks knowledge. In the West [palestine] there is a proverb: He who has this, has everything; he who lacks this, what has he? Has one acquired this, what does he lack? Has he not acquired this, what does he possess?

R. Alexandri said in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba: A sick man does not recover from his sickness until all his sins are forgiven him, as it is written, Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases.[3] R. Hamnuna said: He [then] returns to the days of his youth, for it is written, His flesh shall be fresher than a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth.[4]

Thou host turned his bed in his sickness.'[5] R. Joseph said: This means that he forgets his learning. R. Joseph fell ill and forgot his learning; but Abaye restored it to him. Hence it is frequently stated that R. Joseph said, 'I have not heard this law,' and Abaye reminded him, 'You yourself did teach it to us and did deduce it from this particular Baraitha.'

When Rabbi had studied his teaching in thirteen different interpretations, he taught R. Hiyya only seven of them. Eventually Rabbi fell sick [and forgot his learning]. Thereupon R. Hiyya restored to him the seven versions which he had taught him, but the other six were lost. Now, there was a certain fuller who had overheard Rabbi when he was studying them himself; so R. Hiyya went and learned them from the fuller, and then repeated these before Rabbi. When Rabbi met him, he said to him, 'Thou hast taught[6] both R. Hiyya and myself'. Others say that he spoke thus to him: 'Thou hast taught R. Hiyya, and he has taught me.

R. Alexandri also said in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba: Greater is the miracle wrought for the sick than for Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah. [For] that of Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah [concerned] a fire kindled by man, which all can extinguish; whilst that of a sick person is [in connection with] a heavenly fire,[7] and who can extinguish that?

R. Alexandri also said in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba, — others state, R. Joshua b. Levi said: When a man's end has come, all have dominion over him, for it is written, And it will be that whosoever findeth me will slay me.[8] Rab deduced it from this verse: They stand forth this day to receive thy judgments: for all are thy servants.[9]

Rabbah b. Shila was told that a tall man had died. [Now it happened thus:] This man was riding on a little mule and when he came to a bridge, the mule shied and threw the man, and he was killed. Thereupon Rabbah applied to him the verse, They stand forth this day to receive thy judgments etc.

Samuel saw a scorpion borne by a frog across a river, and then stung a man, so that he died. Thereupon Samuel quoted, They stand forth this day to receive thy judgments etc.[10]

Samuel said: Only a sick person who is feverish[11] may be visited. What does this exclude? It excludes those concerning whom it has been taught by R. Jose b. Parta in R. Eliezer's name, viz., One must not visit those suffering with bowel [trouble], or with eye disease, or from headaches. Now the first is well, the reason being through embarrassment;[12] but what is the reason of the other two? — On account of Rab Judah's dictum, viz., Speech is injurious to the eyes and to [people suffering from] headaches.[13]

Raba said: Feverishness, were it not a forerunner of the angel of death,[14] it would be as salutary

---

(1) These are the minimum requisites of a wanderer.

(2) Deut. XXVIII, 48.

(3) Ps. CIII, 3.

(4) Job XXXIII, 25.

(5) Ps. XLI, 4.

(6) Lit., 'made'.

(7) I.e., his temperature rises.

(8) Gen. IV, 14; thus Cain, thinking that his end had arrived, recognised that everything would have power to slay him.
(9) Ps. CXIX, 91. I.e., all become servants to carry out God's judgment of doom.
(10) Though a scorpion cannot swim, he was carried across by the frog, in order to fulfil God's judgment.
(11) Lit., 'when he is wrapped in heat'.
(12) He has his bowels frequently moved.
(13) This is the reading of Asheri; cur. edd. add, 'and is good for fever' and Wilna Gaon amends likewise.
(14) Both in the Bible and in the Talmud death is regarded as coming to man through an angel. Thus we find mention of the 'angel of the Lord' destroying 185,000 men in the Assyrian camp (II Kings XIX, 35); the destroying angel (II Sam. XXIV, 15); 'the angel of the Lord' whom David saw standing 'between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem' (I Chron. XXI, 15). In the Talmud this angel is frequently referred to, and he was conceived as causing death by dropping gall into the mouth of the victim; 'A.Z. 20b; v. J.E. IV, 480ff.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 41b

once in thirty days as thorns which surround [and protect] a palm tree, and as theriak[1] to the body[2] R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [I want] neither it nor its theriak.

Rabbah b. Jonathan said in R. Jehiel's name: 'Arsan is beneficial for healing the sick. What is 'arsan? — Said R. Jonathan: Old peeled barley which sticks to the sieve.[3] Abaye observed: They require boiling as the flesh of an ox. R. Joseph said: It is fine barley flour which sticks to the sieve; [whereupon] Abaye remarked: It needs as much boiling as the flesh of an ox.

R. Johanan said: We must not visit one afflicted with burdam,[4] nor mention its [real] name. What is the reason? — R. Eleazar said: Because it is like a gushing well.[5] R. Eleazar also said: Why is it called burdam? Because it is a gushing well.[6]

THE LATTER MAY AFFORD HIM A CURE OF LIFE BUT NOT A CURE OF MONEY. What does this mean? Shall we say that 'A CURE OF LIFE means without payment, and 'A CURE OF MONEY' is for a fee?[7] Then let him [the Tanna] state: He may heal him without payment, but not for a fee? — But by 'A CURE OF LIFE' his own person is meant: whilst 'A CURE OF MONEY' refers to his cattle.[8] R. Zutra b. Tobiah said in Rab's name: Nevertheless he may tell him: this drug is beneficial for it, that drug is injurious for it.

MISHNAH. HE MAY BATHE TOGETHER WITH HIM IN A LARGE BATH, BUT NOT IN A SMALL ONE,[9] HE MAY SLEEP IN A BED WITH HIM. R. JUDAH SAID: [ONLY] IN SUMMER, BUT NOT IN WINTER, BECAUSE HE [THEREBY] BENEFITS HIM.[10] HE MAY RECLINE ON A COUCH[11] OR EAT AT THE SAME TABLE WITH HIM[12] BUT NOT OUT OF THE SAME DISH;[13] BUT HE MAY DINE WITH HIM OUT OF A BOWL WHICH RETURNS.[14]

GEMARA. It was taught: He may not bathe together with him in a bath, or sleep in a bed with him, whether large or small: this is R. Meir's ruling. R. Judah said: A large one in winter, and a small one in summer are permitted.[15] He may bathe with him in a large bath, and may take a hot air bath with him [even] in a small one.[16] He may recline on a couch with him, and eat at the same table, but not out of the same dish. Yet he may eat out of the same bowl that returns. R. Jose b. Hanina said: that means the bowl that returns to the host.[17]

MISHNAH. HE MAY NOT EAT WITH HIM OUT OF THE BOWL PUT BEFORE WORKMEN,[18] NOR MAY HE WORK WITH HIM ON THE SAME FURROW: THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW. BUT THE SAGES SAY: HE MAY WORK, PROVIDED HE IS AT A DISTANCE.

GEMARA. There is no dispute at all that they may not work near [each other]. They differ only in reference to [working at] a distance. R. Meir maintains: We forbid at a distance as a preventive measure on account of nearby, for he [the maddir] softens the ground before him; while the Rabbis hold: We do not enact a preventive measure.

---

(1) A certain compound believed to be an antidote against poisonous bites.

(2) I.e., the fever has a purging and purifying effect on the body.

(3) On account of its fatness. Lit., 'of the top of the sieve'.

(4) Dysentery, bloody flux; Rashi quotes a version burdas.

(5) Not to shame the one afflicted with it.

(6) The word is a compound; bor dam, a well of blood.

(7) LIFE, Heb. nefesh. will then be the equivalent of desire (nefesh in Heb. sometimes bears that meaning, c.g., Gen. XXIII, 8: If it be your desire, Heb. nafshekem), i.e., of his own free will. The Mishnah then will refer to the doctor being a muddar (v. Glos.), who may not accept a fee from the invalid.

(8) Hence, nefesh in the Mishnah is translated 'his soul', i.e., himself, whilst mamon (money) refers to his chattels. According to this interpretation the invalid is the muddar; nevertheless, the saving of life overrules other considerations. This is so, even if another doctor is available, for the skill of the first may be greater. In fact, the prohibition to heal his cattle holds good only if another doctor can he obtained, — Ran.

(9) In a small one his own body perceptibly raises the level of the water, and also adds to its heat; he thereby benefits him.

(10) By adding warmth.

(11) Even in winter, as no benefit is gained.

(12) This is not forbidden lest he eat of the other's portion.

(13) A large bowl was sometimes placed on the table, from which all ate. The maddir and the muddar may not eat out of the same bowl, lest the former take too little from it and thereby benefit the latter.

(14) This is explained in the Gemara.

(15) In the first case the warmth is not appreciably increased, whilst in the second the increase is of no advantage.

(16) The addition of heat there being of no benefit.

(17) I.e., there is so much in it that it goes back to the host unemptied. Another meaning: that continually goes back to the host to be replenished. In that case the maddir does not benefit the muddar by taking a small portion.

(18) The employer used to provide a large bowl of food for his workmen, out of which they all ate.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 42a

MISHNAH. HE WHO IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, [IF THE VOW WAS IMPOSED] BEFORE THE SEVENTH YEAR,[1] MAY NOT ENTER HIS FIELD [IN THE SEVENTH YEAR][2] NOR TAKE OF THE OVERHANGING [FRUIT].[3] BUT IF [THE VOW WAS IMPOSED] IN THE SEVENTH YEAR, HE MAY NOT ENTER HIS FIELD, BUT MAY EAT OF THE OVERHANGING BRANCHES.[4] IF HE WAS [MERELY] FORBIDDEN IN RESPECT OF FOOD [BUT NOT ALL BENEFIT], [AND THE VOW WAS IMPOSED] BEFORE THE SEVENTH YEAR, HE MAY ENTER HIS FIELD, BUT MAY NOT EAT OF ITS FRUITS; BUT [IF IT WAS IMPOSED] IN THE SEVENTH YEAR, HE MAY ENTER [HIS FIELD] AND EAT [OF ITS FRUITS].

GEMARA. Rab and Samuel both ruled: [If one says to his neighbour], 'This my property [be forbidden] to you', [if he vowed] before the seventh year, he may not enter his field or take of the overhanging [fruits] even when the seventh year arrives. But if he vowed in the seventh year, he may not enter his field, yet may enjoy the overhanging [fruits]. R. Johanan and Resh Lakish both maintained [If one says to his neighbour,] 'This my property [be forbidden] to you'; [if he vowed] before the seventh year he may neither enter his field nor eat of the overhanging [fruits]; when the seventh year arrives, he may not enter his field, yet may eat of the overhanging [fruits].

Shall we say that they differ in this: Rab and Samuel hold that a man can prohibit [unto others] that which is in his ownership, [for the prohibition to be effective] even after it passes out of his ownership;[5] whilst R. Johanan and Resh Lakish maintain: One cannot prohibit [unto others] that which is in his ownership [for the prohibition to continue even] after it leaves his ownership? Now can you reason so? Does anyone rule that a person cannot declare prohibited that which is his, even after it passes out of his ownership? If so, let them differ with reference to 'this property [be forbidden etc.],' and how much more so would it apply to 'this my property!'[6] Moreover, we have learnt that a person can declare prohibited that which is in his ownership for even after it leaves his ownership. For we learnt: If one says to his son, 'Konam, if you benefit from me,' — if he dies, he inherits him.[7] [But if he explicitly stipulates] during his lifetime and after his death,

---

(1) Lev. XXV, 1-7. The seventh year was called the year of release. The land was not to be ploughed or sowed, and its crops, with certain reservations, were free to all.

(2) To gather of its crops, since he is forbidden 'the treading of the foot'. Cf. Mishnah on 32b.

(3) I.e., if the maddir has a tree close to his boundary, and the fruit overhangs the muddar's field, so that it is possible for the muddar to take of the fruit without entering the maddir's land, he is still forbidden to do so.

(4) [Omitted in the printed Mishnayoth version].

(5) Consequently, though in the seventh year the crops do not belong exclusively to their owner, being free to all, yet the vow made before retains its validity, forbidding the muddar to take even of the overhanging fruits.

(6) I.e., even if one says, 'This property be forbidden to you', R. Johanan and Resh Lakish maintain that the vow is ineffective for the seventh year, when the crops are no longer his. The same will hold good with even greater force, if he vows 'this my property' etc., for in that case he appears to limit the incidence of the vow to the period in which it is his.

(7) For it is his by right.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 42b

if he dies he does not succeed him! — Here it is different, because he [explicitly] stated during his lifetime and after his death.[1] Yet at all events there is a difficulty?[2] — But [explain the dispute thus:] There is no dispute at all in respect of 'this property etc.'[3] They differ [only] in respect of 'My property etc.' Rab and Samuel maintain: There is no difference between 'This property' or 'my property': one can prohibit [for all time]. But R. Johanan and Resh Lakish maintain: [By saying,] 'This property,' he can prohibit; my property,' he cannot prohibit. But does anyone maintain that there is no difference between 'this property' and 'my property'? But we learnt: If one says to his neighbour, 'Konam, if I enter your house,' or 'if I purchase your field,' and then the owner dies or sells it, he is permitted [to enter or buy it]. [But if he says, 'Konam], if I enter this house', or 'if I purchase this field,' and the owner dies or sells it, he is forbidden! — But [explain thus:] R. Johanan and Resh Lakish refer to 'my property'; Rab and Samuel to 'this property': and they do not differ.

BUT [IF THE VOW WAS IMPOSED] IN THE SEVENTH YEAR, HE MAY NOT ENTER HIS FIELD etc. Why may he eat of the overhanging [fruits] — because they are [now] ownerless? But the land too is ownerless.[4] — Said 'Ulla: This refers to trees standing on the border.[5] R. Simeon b. Eliakim said: It is forbidden lest he stand and linger there.[6]

MISHNAH. HE WHO IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR MAY NEITHER LEND TO HIM NOR BORROW FROM HIM NOR ADVANCE HIM OR RECEIVE FROM HIM A LOAN.[7] HE MAY NEITHER SELL TO NOR PURCHASE FROM HIM.

---

(1) But otherwise it may well be that the validity of a vow ceases when its subject is no longer under the control of the maddir.

(2) Sc. the first.

(3) The vow remains valid even in the seventh year.

(4) In the sense that every person has the right to enter and take of its crops.

(5) Therefore, since it is unnecessary to enter the field, it is not ownerless.

(6) The land is ownerless only in respect of entering and taking its crops: this done, it reverts to its real owner. But we fear that the muddar, having eaten his fill, may tarry there, which is forbidden to him.

(7) Yalwenu (lawah) and yash'ilenu (sha'al) refer to money and utensils respectively.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 43a

GEMARA. As for 'HE MUST NOT LEND TO HIM,' that is well, since he [thereby] benefits him. But 'HE MUST NOT BORROW FROM HIM' — how does he benefit him? Further, [even] 'HE MUST NOT RECEIVE A LOAN FROM HIM' and 'HE MUST NOT PURCHASE FROM HIM' are well, since he [the muddar] may benefit.[1] But 'HE MUST NOT BORROW FROM HIM': how does he [the muddar] benefit? — Said R. Jose son of R. Hanina: It means e.g., that they made a vow not to benefit from one another. Abaye answered: He is forbidden to borrow, lest he also lend, and the same applies to the other clauses.[2]

MISHNAH. IF ONE SAYS TO ANOTHER, 'LEND ME YOUR COW, TO WHICH THE OTHER REPLIES, 'IT IS NOT FREE'; WHEREUPON HE EXCLAIMS, KONAM, IF I EVER PLOUGH MY FIELD WITH IT', IF HE GENERALly PLOUGHED HIMSELF, HE IS FORBIDDEN,[3] BUT OTHERS ARE PERMITTED. BUT IF HE DID NOT GENERALLY PLOUGH HIMSELF, HE AND ALL MEN ARE FORBIDDEN.[4] IF ONE IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT AUGHT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, AND HE HAS NAUGHT TO EAT, HE [THE MADDIR] CAN GO TO THE SHOPKEEPER AND SAY, SO-AND-SO IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT AUGHT FROM ME, AND I DO NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO'. THE SHOPKEEPER MAY THEN SUPPLY HIM, AND COME AND RECEIVE PAYMENT FROM HIM [THE MADDIR]. IF HE HAD HIS [THE MUDDAR'S] HOUSE TO BUILD, OR HIS FENCE TO ERECT, OR HIS FIELD TO REAP, HE [THE MADDIR] MAY GO TO LABOURERS, AND SAY, 'SO-AND-SO IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT AUGHT FROM ME, AND I DO NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.' THERE UPON THEY WORK FOR HIM [THE MUDDAR]. AND COME AND RECEIVE WAGES FROM HIM [THE MADDIR]. IF THEY ARE WALKING TOGETHER ON THE ROAD, AND HE [THE MUDDAR] HAS NOTHING TO EAT, HE [THE MADDIR] CAN MAKE A GIFT TO A THIRD PERSON, AND HE [THE MUDDAR] IS PERMITTED [TO HAVE] IT. IF THERE IS NO OTHER WITH THEM, HE PLACES IT ON A STONE OR A WALL, SAYING, 'THIS IS FREE TO WHOMEVER DESIRES IT'; AND THE OTHER TAKES AND EATS IT. BUT R. JOSE FORBIDS THIS. GEMARA. R. Johanan said, what is R. Jose's reason? He maintains that hefker[5] is like a gift: just as a gift [is not valid] until it passes from the possession of the giver into that of the receiver, so hefker too [is not valid] until it passes into the ownership of him who acquires it.[6] R. Abba objected: And the other [the muddar] takes and eats it; but R. Jose forbids this. Said R. Jose: When is that? If the vow preceded his renunciation;

---

(1) For the maddir may borrow worn coins, and return new ones. As the value of coins depended to some extent on their weight, the muddar would benefit. Likewise, the maddir may not purchase an article for which there is no demand, and for the same reason.

(2) By 'other clauses' the reference is only to borrowing money. — Asheri.

(3) To plough the field with that cow, if it is subsequently lent to him.

(4) For his vow must have referred to others.

(5) V. Glos.

(6) I.e., when a person declares a thing to be hefker, it does not immediately cease to be his, but remains his property until taken. Thus the muddar takes the maddir's food.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 43b

but if his renunciation preceded his vow, it is permitted. Now if you say [that it belongs to the first owner] until it comes Into the possession of him who acquires it, what does it matter whether his vow preceded his renunciation or the reverse? — He raised the objection and answered it himself:

He who vows has no thought of what he has renounced.

Raba objected: [If the dying person assigned] part [of his property] to the first, and all of it to the second, [and then recovered,] the first acquires, but not the second![1] But Raba said, This is R. Jose's reason: It is a preventive measure, on account of the gift of Beth Horon.[2]

It was taught: If one declares his field hefker: he can retract within the first three days, but not after.[3]

---

(1) V. B.B. 148b. The law of a sick person likely to die is this: If he assigns all his property to anyone, and then recovers, his gift is invalid, it being assumed that it was made only on account of expected death. But if he leaves part for himself, it is valid; for, we argue, were it on account of approaching death, he would have left nothing for himself. Here, when he made the first assignation, part was still left for himself: hence it remains valid on his recovery. But after the assignation of the second nothing is left: consequently, on his recovery, it is null. Now, if it is maintained that a gift is not valid until the recipient actually takes possession, why is it more valid for the first than for the second: just as the portion assigned to the second is the residue left by the first, so that assigned to the first may be regarded as the residue left by the second? — So Rashi. On this interpretation, 'all of it' means 'the rest of it'. Asheri and Tosaf., however, point out that in such a case both gifts would be null on recovery, since he leaves after all nothing for himself. Accordingly, they explain thus: He assigned part of his property to A, then all to B, meaning also that already assigned to A. Consequently his gift to B was the result of a new intention, not borne in mind when making his first gift. Now, just as in making a gift, the donor intends it to apply even to that which he has already given away, as shewn, so when one vows, the vow is made even with respect to that which he has previously declared hefker. This refutes the distinction drawn by R. Abba. — Ran has a variant reading of this passage.

(2) V. 48a. There it is a case of a gift being an obvious evasion; so here too, his declaration of hefker does not appear genuine but as a mere evasion of his vow.

(3) This is in reference to the tithe. No tithe was due on produce taken from ownerless fields. Now, if he either revokes his declaration within the first three days, or takes possession without a formal retraction, his declaration is null: consequently, it has never been ownerless, and the crops must be tithed. But after three days, the declaration has legal force. Naturally, if no one else takes possession thereof, he can do so himself, but whether he or another, it is free from tithe.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 44a

If he declares, 'Let this field be hefker for one day, one week, one year, or one septennate';[1] before possession has been taken thereof, whether by himself or by a stranger, he can retract. But if it has [already] been acquired by himself or by a stranger, he cannot retract. [Must we assume that] the first clause agrees with the Rabbis, and the second with R. Jose?[2] — Said 'Ulla: The second clause too agrees with the Rabbis. If so, why 'before possession has been taken thereof, whether by himself or by a stranger, he can retract?' — [Hefker for] a year or a septennate is different, being unusual.[3] Resh Lakish said, Since the second clause agrees with R. Jose,[4] the first too must agree with him. But this is the reason of the first clause:[5] that the law of hefker may not be forgotten.[6] If so, let it be hefker even from the first day? — Said Rabbah, This is on account of evaders, who may declare their property hefker, and then reacquire it.[7] [Will you maintain] that by Biblical law it is not hefker:[8]

---

(1) After the end of which it is to revert to himself, if no one has taken possession in the meanwhile.

(2) For since he cannot retract after three days even though no person has taken possession, it is evident that hefker is legally valid even before it reaches another. This agrees with the view of the Sages that the maddir can declare his property hefker and the muddar acquire it without its being regarded as passing direct from one to the other. But the second clause, stating that he can retract so long as no one has taken possession, shews that until then it is legally his. This agrees with R. Jose, that the maddir cannot declare his property hefker for the muddar to acquire it.

(3) 'Ulla interprets the whole Baraitha on the view of the Rabbis. Consequently, if one declares his property hefker, it immediately becomes so, and should the first owner take possession thereof, even immediately, the law of hefker applies thereto, rendering it free from tithe. That it is by Biblical law. Since, however, this is manifestly exposed to abuse, for by a legal fiction everyone could thus evade the tithe, the Rabbis enacted that the law of hefker should apply only after three days, during which a stranger can take possession. So Rashi and Asheri appear to interpret it, though according to the latter, if the first owner resumes possession within three days, explicitly declaring that he is acquiring hefker but not retracting, the crops are exempt From tithe. Ran and Tosaf. explain that within the first three days he can retract even if a stranger has already taken possession thereof. In N.M. 273, 9 the first interpretation is accepted. But in the second clause, the declaration itself is weak, being limited to a certain Period. Consequently the Rabbis admit that it is not valid until one has actually taken possession. — It may be asked, if it is hefker even if re-acquired by the first owner, of what use is the enactment? The answer is that to acquire hefker it is insufficient to make a mere declaration of acquisition, but some work must be done in the field. Before the owner has time to do this, he may be forestalled: that is regarded as a sufficient check to evasion (v. Rashi).

(4) Resh Lakish accepts the obvious implications.

(5) That 'after three days, the declaration is binding', even if no one has taken possession thereof.

(6) For if we rule that whenever the owner resumes possession, it is not regarded as hefker. it will be forgotten altogether that hefker is exempt from tithe. Therefore the Rabbis ruled that after three days the declaration is binding. Nevertheless, since on this view it is not, Biblically, hefker even after three days if no stranger has taken possession, the crops are not Free from tithe on the first owner re-acquiring them, for the Rabbis have no power to exempt crops which by Biblical law are liable, as is explained infra.

(7) V. p. 139, n. 5.

(8) V. n. 3.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 44b

but perhaps he will come to tithe from [produce] that is liable for [produce] that is exempt, or vice versa?[1] — He is told, 'When you tithe, tithe for it out of itself.'[2]

An objection is raised: If a man declares his vineyard hefker and rises early on the following morning and vintages it,[3] he is liable to peret,[4] 'oleloth,[5] the forgotten sheaves,[6] and pe'ah,[7] but he is exempt from tithe. Now as for 'Ulla, it is well: it states the rabbinic law, and states the Biblical law.[8] But on the view of Resh Lakish, why is he free from tithe?[9] — He answers you thus: My statement is based on R. Jose; whilst this accords with the Rabbis.[10]

---

(1) The tithe could be separated from one lot of produce upon another (of the same species), providing that both bore the same liability. E.g if one harvests his two fields, he can take From one the tenth of the combined produce. If, however, he separates a tithe of one field, thus freeing the rest, he cannot take another tithe from the same for the second field. Similarly, if he has two lots of corn, one liable to tithe by Biblical law, and the other only by Rabbinical law, so that by Biblical law it is really exempt, he may not separate from the one for the other. Now it has been explained here that according to R. Jose, so long as no stranger has taken possession, it is not hefker by Biblical law even after three days. and consequently Biblically liable. But by Rabbinical law it is hefker, even if the original owner re-acquires it. Nevertheless, as explained on p. 139, n. 5, the Rabbis ordered that he shall tithe it. Thus, in this respect, the Rabbis restored it to Biblical law. But the owner, being told that it is hefker, may regard the liability to tithe as merely a Rabbinical measure, and therefore, if he has any other corn which is only Rabbinically liable, separate from the one, which is really Biblically exempt, For the Biblically liable, or vice versa.

(2) Only in this respect is it regarded as hefker even if the first owner resumes possession.

(3) Thus he resumed possession thereof.

(4) Single grapes fallen off during the cutting, which must be left for the poor. — Lev. XIX, 10.

(5) 'Olelah, 'oleleth, pl. 'oleloth, gleanings reserved for the poor; in general, a small single bunch on a single branch. Ibid. and Deut. XXIV, 21.

(6) Sheaves (here grapes) forgotten in the course of ingathering, which had to be left for the poor. — Deut. XXIV, 19.

(7) Pe'ah — corner; the corner of the field left for the poor. — Lev. XIX, 9.

(8) 'Ulla maintains that the Baraitha in stating that he can retract within the first three days, teaches the Rabbinical law, whereas this Baraitha states the Biblical law according to which it is hefker immediately.

(9) Since he maintains that within the first three days it is not hefker even by Biblical law, and hence subject to tithes, and even after that it is hefker only by Rabbinical law, why is it taught here that on the very next day it is free from tithe? (10) Who maintain in the Mishnah that it is hefker immediately, hence free from tithe.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 45a

Alternatively: One case refers to hefker declared in the presence of two; the other, if declared before three. For R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Jehozadak: Hefker declared in the presence of three is valid, but not in the presence of two.[1] R. Joshua b. Levi said: By the Torah, it is hefker even if declared in the presence of one: why then are three required? So that one can take possession, and the other two attest it.[2] [

---

(1) Until one actually takes possession. Therefore, in the Mishnah, since no person is present, R. Jose maintains that if the maddir declares the food hefker, and the muddar takes it, he receives it directly from the maddir. But the vineyard, we assume, was renounced in the presence of three; therefore even R. Jose agrees that the renunciation is immediately valid. Hence, if he re-acquires it, it is exempt from tithe. The stronger validity of hefker in the presence of three is due to its greater publicity.

(2) For otherwise the first owner can deny his renunciation.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 45b

C H A P T E R V

MISHNAH. IF [TWO] JOINT OWNERS MADE A VOW NOT TO BENEFIT FROM ONE ANOTHER, THEY MAY NOT ENTER THE COURTYARD.[1] R. ELIEZER B. JACOB SAID: EACH ENTERS INTO HIS OWN.[2]

---

(1) Which belongs to both.

(2) He maintains that it is as though it had been stipulated when jointly acquiring the property, that it should belong to each partner separately for his entering therein. Consequently, when he enters, he is not benefiting from the other. The Sages do not accept this view.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 46a

AND BOTH ARE FORBIDDEN TO SET UP A MILL-STONE OR AN OVEN OR BREED FOWLS THEREIN.[1] IF [ONLY] ONE WAS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM THE OTHER, HE MAY NOT ENTER THE COURT. R. ELIEZER B. JACOB SAID: HE CAN MAINTAIN, 'I AM ENTERING INTO MY OWN, NOT INTO YOURS.' HE WHO THUS VOWED IS FORCED TO SELL HIS SHARE [OF THE COURT].[2] IF A MAN FROM THE STREET WAS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM ONE OF THEM, HE MAY NOT ENTER THE COURT. R. ELIEZER B. JACOB SAID: HE CAN MAINTAIN, 'I ENTER YOUR NEIGHBOUR'S PORTION, AND I DO NOT ENTER INTO YOURS. IF ONE IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, AND THE LATTER POSSESSES A BATH-HOUSE OR AN OLIVE PRESS LEASED TO SOMEONE IN THE TOWN, AND HE HAS AN INTEREST THEREIN, HE [THE MUDDAR] IS FORBIDDEN [TO MAKE USE OF THEM]; IF NOT, HE is PERMITTED. IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'KONAM, IF I ENTER YOUR HOUSE', OR 'IF I PURCHASE YOUR FIELD,' AND THEN [THE OWNER] DIES OR SELLS IT TO ANOTHER, HE IS PERMITTED [TO ENTER OR BUY IT]; [BUT IF HE SAYS.] 'KONAM, IF I ENTER THIS HOUSE, OR 'IF I PURCHASE THIS FIELD,' AND [THE OWNER] DIES OR SELLS IT TO ANOTHER, HE IS FORBIDDEN.

GEMARA. The scholars propounded: They differ when they interdicted themselves by vow. But what if each imposed a vow upon the other? Do we say, they differ [only] in the former case, but that in the latter the Rabbis agree with R. Eliezer b. Jacob, since they are involuntarily prohibited;[3] or perhaps the Rabbis dispute even in the latter case?[4] Come and hear: IF [ONLY] ONE WAS FORBIDDEN BY VOW[5] TO BENEFIT FROM THE OTHER . . . and the Rabbis dispute it! — Learn, forbade himself from his neighbour.[6] This is logical too, for the second clause states: NOW, HE WHO THUS VOWED IS FORCED TO SELL HIS SHARE OF THE COURT. Now, this is reasonable if the vow was self-imposed: hence he is compelled. But if you say that a vow was imposed against him, why is he compelled. Seeing that the position is not of his making?[7]

Rabbah said in Ze'iri's name:

---

(1) R. Eliezer b. Jacob admits this, for joint owners can object to this. Consequently, if they do not, each benefits by the permission of the other.

(2) For since he may enter, but not the other (this being taught on the view of the Sages), the second, in resentment, might enter none the less in disregard of the vow.

(3) For if they voluntarily interdict themselves of all benefit, it may be maintained that each thereby renounces also his share, which is inseparable from his partner's. But when each forbids the other, it may be argued that neither can prohibit that which the other enjoys in his own right.

(4) For the prohibition arises because in their opinion it is impossible to distinguish between the portions belonging to each.

(5) Muddar is the hofal, and implies that the vow was imposed upon him by another.

(6) Nadur, passive Kal. implies self-imposed. No emendation is really made in the Mishnah, but the Talmud answers that muddar may be synonymous with nadur, self-imposed.

(7) Lit., 'surely he is under constraint'. I.e., it is equitable to force him to sell, if as a result of his own vow he may come to transgression, but not otherwise.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 46b

The dispute is only if it [the court] is large enough to be divided; but if not, all agree that they are permitted.[1] Said R. Joseph to him: But what of a synagogue which is as a thing which cannot be divided,[2] yet we learnt, Both are forbidden [the use of] the [common] property of the town?[3] — But, said R. Joseph in Ze'iri's name, The controversy is only when it is not [large] enough to divide;[4] but if it is, all agree that both are forbidden. R. Huna said: The halachah is as R. Eliezer b. Jacob; and R. Eleazar said likewise: The halachah is as R. Eliezer b. Jacob.

IF ONE IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR, AND THE LATTER POSSESSES A BATH-HOUSE etc. How much is meant by AN INTEREST THEREIN? — R. Nahman said: A half, third, or a quarter, but not less.[5] Abaye said, Even for less, he is forbidden. Under what conditions is he permitted? If he [the lessee] rents it in return for [the payment of] the land-tax.[6]

---

(1) The smallest area of a court to be of any use as such is four square cubits. Now, only if it contains at least eight square cubits do the Rabbis maintain that each is forbidden to enter, since it is possible for them to divide, and yet each portion shall be large enough itself for a court; for then it cannot be said that when they purchased it jointly, each was entitled to the whole of it, as explained on p. 142, n. 2. But a lesser area cannot be divided, and therefore the original condition of purchase must have been that the whole belongs to each.

(2) Since its essential use is joint worship, and should it be divided, it ceases to be a synagogue.

(3) Infra 48a.

(4) Yet even then the Rabbis maintain that each is forbidden to enter.

(5) Less than a quarter is regarded as negligible. And the muddar is not forbidden to use it on its account. [Var. lec., 'but for eggs it is permitted'. בבצים for בבציר, the reference being to the egg-shaped forms of clay which are placed in the oven of the bath-house for drying. If his interest consists in the use he makes of the bath-house for that purpose, it is not regarded of any consequence.]

(6) The tax must have been very high if the owner was prepared to forego any possible profit. — Taska was the Persian land tax. (v. Obermeyer. p. 221, n. 3), and the Mishnah, which was produced in Palestine, cannot actually refer to this tax. Abaye's interpretation must therefore be regarded merely as an illustration. [Aliter: If he (the lessee) obtained it on a rental; retaining all the profit to himself.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 47a

IF ONE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR etc. Abim[1] propounded: What [if one says to his neighbour.] 'Konam, if you enter this house,' and then he sells it or dies: Can one prohibit that which he owns [for the prohibition] to be effective even when it leaves his ownership, or not? — Said Raba, Come and hear: If one says to his son, 'Konam that you benefit not from me,' and he dies, he is his heir. [But if he explicitly stipulates] during his lifetime and he dies, he does not succeed him. This proves that one can prohibit that which he owns [for the prohibition] to hold good when it leaves his ownership. The proof is conclusive.

We learnt elsewhere: [If one says.] 'Konam be these fruits to me,' or, 'Be they konam for my mouth,' or, 'Be they konam to my mouth': he is forbidden [to benefit] from what has been exchanged for them or grown from them.[2] Rami b. Hama propounded. If he vows, 'Konam be these fruits to So-and-so', what of their exchange? Do we say, With respect to oneself, since he can forbid to himself [even] his neighbour's property, he can [likewise] forbid to himself what is not yet in existence;[3] but as for his neighbour, since one cannot prohibit another's produce to his neighbour, he likewise cannot prohibit what is non-existent;

---

(1) Var. lec.: Abaye.

(2) Infra 57a.

(3) What may be given for the produce subsequent to the vow is regarded as non-existent when the vow is made.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 47b

or perhaps since what is taken in exchange is the same as what grows from its seed, there is no difference between oneself and his neighbour?[1] — Said R. Aha b. Manyumi, Come and hear: If a man says to his wife, 'Konam, if I benefit thee,' she may borrow [money], and the creditors come and exact it from him. Why can the creditors collect it [from him]: surely because what is taken in exchange is not the same as what grows from them?[2] Said Raba, possibly it is forbidden [to make an exchange] in the first place only, but if it has been done, it is valid.[3] But come and hear: If a man betroths [a woman] with 'orlah,[4] she is not betrothed; but if he sells it and betroths her with the money thereof, she is betrothed![5] — [No.] Here too it may be forbidden in the first place only, but if done it is valid. MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR.] 'I AM HEREM TO YOU,' THE MUDDAR IS FORBIDDEN [TO DERIVE BENEFIT]. 'YOU ARE HEREM TO ME,' THE MADDIR IS FORBIDDEN. I AM [HEREM] TO YOU, AND YOU ARE [HEREM] TO ME, BOTH ARE PROHIBITED. BOTH ARE PERMITTED [TO ENJOY THE USE OF] THOSE THINGS WHICH BELONG TO THOSE WHO CAME UP FROM BABYLON [TO PALESTINE],[6] BUT ARE FORBIDDEN [THE USE OF] THINGS THAT BELONG TO THAT TOWN.[7]

---

(1) For it is obvious that the fruit which grows is forbidden to his neighbour, and possibly what is given in exchange is the same.

(2) Thus, in this case, the money she receives is not the same that is repaid.

(3) I.e., it can be maintained that the problem regarding what is exchanged for them, is whether one may deliberately exchange these fruits for something else, so that it shall be permitted to the muddar. But if they were exchanged, they certainly are permitted. Hence, in this case, since the wife receives the money before the creditors exact it from her husband, it is regarded as a fail accompli, the legality of which is not in doubt. (The explanation follows Asheri. Ran gives a different interpretation).

(4) 'Fruit of uncircumcision. V. Lev. XIX, 23.

(5) This proves that the prohibition does not remain upon what has been exchanged for something forbidden.

(6) I.e., the band of immigrants who returned to Palestine under Zerubbabel, and later under Ezra and Nehemiah, who declared certain things inalienable property which can be deemed ownerless.

(7) In which each citizen has a share.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 48a

NOW, WHAT ARE THE THINGS THAT BELONG TO THEM THAT CAME UP FROM BABYLON? E.G., THE TEMPLE MOUNT, THE COURTS OF THE TEMPLE AND THE WELL ON THE MIDROAD.[1] WHAT ARE THE THINGS THAT BELONG TO THAT TOWN, E.G., THE PUBLIC SQUARE, THE BATH-HOUSE, THE SYNAGOGUE, THE ARK [IN WHICH THE SACRED SCROLLS WERE KEPT] AND THE BOOKS [OF THE LAW],[2] AND [THE ESTATE OF] HIM WHO ASSIGNS HIS PORTION TO THE NASI.[3] R. JUDAH SAID: IT IS THE SAME WHETHER HE ASSIGNS IT TO THE NASI OR TO A PRIVATE INDIVIDUAL, BUT WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE? IF HE ASSIGNS IT TO THE NASI, HE NEED NOT [FORMALLY] CONFER TITLE;[4] WHILST IN THE CASE OF AN INDIVIDUAL IT IS NECESSARY TO CONFER TITLE.[5] BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN: FORMAL GRANT OF TITLE IS NECESSARY IN BOTH CASES; THEY MENTIONED THE NASI IN PARTICULAR AS THIS IS USUAL.[6] R. JUDAH SAID: THE GALILEANS NEED NOT ASSIGN [THEIR PORTION], BECAUSE THEIR ANCESTORS HAVE ALREADY DONE SO FOR THEM.

GEMARA. Why is it forbidden?[7] — Said R. Shesheth, The Mishnah teaches thus: How can they repair their position?[8] Let them assign their portion to the nasi.[9]

R. JUDAH SAID: THE GALILEANS NEED NOT ASSIGN [THEIR PORTION]. BECAUSE THEIR ANCESTORS HAVE ALREADY DONE SO FOR THEM. It was taught: R. Judah said: the Galileans were quarrelsome and wont to make vows not to benefit from each other: so their fathers arose and assigned their portions to the nasi.

MISHNAH. IF ONE IS FORBIDDEN BY VOW TO BENEFIT FROM HIS NEIGHBOUR AND HAS NOTHING TO EAT, THE LATTER CAN GIVE IT [FOOD] TO A THIRD PARTY, AND THE FORMER IS PERMITTED TO USE IT. IT HAPPENED TO ONE IN BETH HORON[10] THAT HIS FATHER WAS FORBIDDEN TO BENEFIT FROM HIM. NOW HE [THE SON] WAS GIVING HIS SON IN MARRIAGE;[11] SO HE SAID TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'THE COURTYARD AND THE BANQUET BE A GIFT TO YOU, BUT THEY ARE YOURS ONLY THAT MY FATHER MAY COME AND FEAST WITH US AT THE BANQUET. THEREUPON HE ANSWERED, 'IF THEY ARE MINE, LET THEM BE CONSECRATED TO HEAVEN!' 'BUT I DID NOT GIVE YOU MY PROPERTY TO CONSECRATE IT TO HEAVEN, HE PROTESTED. YOU GAVE ME YOURS SO THAT YOU AND YOUR FATHER MIGHT EAT AND DRINK TOGETHER AND BECOME RECONCILED TO ONE ANOTHER, WHILST THE SIN [OF A BROKEN VOW] SHOULD DEVOLVE UPON HIS HEAD,'[12] HE RETORTED. [WHEN THE MATTER CAME BEFORE] THE SAGES, THEY RULED: EVERY GIFT WHICH IS NOT [SO GIVEN] THAT IF HE [THE RECIPIENT] CONSECRATES IT, IT IS CONSECRATED, IS NO GIFT [AT ALL].

GEMARA. [Does the Mishnah adduce] a Story to contradict [its ruling]?[13] — The text is defective, and was thus taught: But if the end proves [his intention] at the beginning,[14] it is forbidden, and so it happened in Beth Horon, in the case of one whose last action demonstrated his first [as a mere evasion].

Raba said: They [the Sages] taught [that it is forbidden] only if he said, 'They are yours only in order that my father may come [etc.].' But if he said, 'They are yours so that my father may come, he meant, 'It depends on your will.'[15] A different version is this: Raba said: Do not think that he is forbidden only if he said, 'And they are yours only in order that my father may come', but if he said, 'They are yours so that my father may come' it is permitted. [That is not so,] for even if he said, 'They are yours: let my father come,' it is forbidden. What is the reason? Because the banquet proves his intention.

---

(1) Between Babylon and Palestine, for the supply of water to the pilgrims, v. ‘Erub. 104b. These things were declared the property of all Israel.

(2) (Rashi. Asheri: Books purchased by the congregation for the reading of the general public.]

(3) The head of the Sanhedrin in Jerusalem and subsequent places. According to this reading, this portion too would be forbidden. But the Gemara amends the text of the Mishnah.

(4) I.e., by the mere documentary assignation it becomes the Nasi's property.

(5) E.g., one of the recognised methods of acquisition.

(6) For one would fear to assign his portion in communal property to an individual, lest he then forbid it to him. V. also Halevy, Doroth, I, 3, p. 61 and general discussion a.l.

(7) This question is based on the assumption that if the maddir assigns his portion to the nasi, the muddar is still forbidden.

(8) Since the use of communal property as defined in the Mishnah is essential to them.

(9) In cur. edd. a portion of the Mishnah is here reproduced in brackets, viz., ‘R. Judah said, It is the same . . . this is usual’. But the quotation is pointless, and should be deleted.

(10) A border town between Benjamin and Ephraim.

(11) And desired his father's presence.

(12) [Probably a euphemism for ‘my head’. J. reads ‘my head’.]

(13) Surely not! For the Mishnah states that the maddir may make a gift for the muddar to benefit thereby, and then quotes a case where this was forbidden.

(14) That it was a mere device.

(15) Hence it is permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 48b

A certain man had a son who used to carry off bundles of flax. Thereupon his father forbade his property to him.[1] ‘But,’ said others to him, ‘what if the son of your son is a scholar?’[2] He replied, ‘Let him acquire it, and if my[3] grandson be a scholar, it shall be his.’[4] Now, what is the law? — The Pumbedithans[5] ruled, This is a case of ‘Acquire, in order to give possession,’ and such does not give a legal title. R. Nahman said: He [the son] acquires [it], for [the giving of] a sudarium too is a case of ‘Acquire, in order to give possession.’[6] R. Ashi demurred: But in the case of a sudarium, who tells you that if he retains it, it is not his?[7] Moreover, the sudarium is a case of ‘Acquire in order to give possession,’ and ‘Acquire [it] from now.’[8] But as for this property, — when shall he acquire it? When his grandson is a scholar: [but] by then the sudarium [whereby the transference was made] has been returned to its owner.[9] Raba [also] questioned R. Nahman: But the gift of Beth Horon was a case of ‘Acquire, in order to give possession,’ yet it was invalid? Sometimes he answered, Because his banquet proves his intention;[10] sometimes he answered, This is taught in accordance with R. Eliezer, who maintained that even the extra [given by the vendor to a customer] is forbidden to one who is interdicted by vow to benefit.[11]

We learnt, THE SAGES RUled, EVERY GIFT WHICH IS NOT [SO GIVEN] THAT IF HE [THE BENEFICIARY] CONSECRATES IT, IT IS CONSECRATED, IS NOT A GIFT [AT ALL]. Now, what does EVERY include? Surely it includes such as this case of stealing flax?[12] — No. It includes the case of the second version of Raba's ruling.[13] [

---

(1) Though, as stated above, (supra 47a) his son would still inherit it, this story may be explained on the supposition that he had two sons, and wished to give the whole of his estate to the second (Ran).

(2) At the time he had no grandson yet.

(3) This is Rashi's reading. Cur. edd.: and if . . . . [Var. lec. ‘let him not acquire, and if . . .’ v. Bah.]

(4) But if not, it reverts to my other son. — Ran.

(5) A great academy town in Babylonia, at the mouth of the Beditha (which is the meaning of the name), a canal of the Euphrates.

(6) One of the methods of acquisition was by exchange (halifin), in which an object (a sudarium kerchief) was given by the purchaser or recipient to the vendor or donor as a symbolical substitute v. B.M. 47a. Now, actually. this was given merely in order that the latter might give legal possession to the former, and was generally returned, yet it was valid.
(7) I.e., though in fact it was only a symbol, and usually returned, yet it may be retained; but here it was not intended that the son should have possession at all but merely to be the medium of transference, for if his grandson would not be a scholar, the estate was to revert to his second son.
(8) [Ran reads: Acquire in order to give possession from now.] As soon as the vendor acquires the scarf, the purchaser is the legal owner of his purchase.
(9) [At the time when the title was granted the grandson was not yet in existence, and when he is ripe enough to receive the legacy the act of transference had long been a matter of the past, and no longer effective.]
(10) I.e., it was not a genuine gift at all.
(11) On account of this he ruled that he may not even walk over his field (32b), though ordinarily walking over another person's field is not accounted an encroachment of rights. Thus R. Eliezer treats vows far more stringently than other matters. Consequently, here too he rules the gift invalid. But the Sages, who disagree with him, would regard the gift of Beth Horon valid.
(12) That such a gift is invalid, not merely because of the greater stringency of vows, but because 'Acquire in order to give possession' confers no title. [This is the reading of Ran. Rashi and Asheri: Where the condition was repeated or cast in two forms (v. supra p. 149 n. 3). Our text presents a conflation of the two readings.]
(13) V. Supra.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 49a

C H A P T E R V I

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO EAT] WHAT IS COOKED [MEBUSHAL] IS PERMITTED WHAT IS ROASTED OR SEETHED.[1] IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM THAT I TASTE ANY COOKED DISH [TABSHIL]' HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO EAT] FOOD LOOSELY COOKED IN A POT, BUT IS PERMITTED [TO PARTAKE] OF WHAT IS SOLIDLY PREPARED.[2] HE MAY ALSO EAT A HARD BOILED EGG[3] AND REMUZIAN CUCUMBERS.[4] HE WHO VOWS ABSTINENCE FROM FOOD PREPARED IN A POT, IS FORBIDDEN ONLY BOILED DISHES; BUT IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM THAT I TASTE NOT WHATEVER DESCENDS INTO A POT, HE IS FORBIDDEN EVERYTHING PREPARED IN A POT.[5]

GEMARA. It was taught: R. Josiah forbids [them].[6] And though there is no proof of this,[7] there is some indication, for it is said, And they boiled[8] the Passover in fire, according to the law.[9] Shall we say that they differ in this: That R. Josiah holds: Follow Biblical usage; whilst our Tanna maintains: In vows follow the popular usage? No. All agree that in vows we must follow popular usage: but each [rules] according to [the usage] in his district. In the district of our Tanna roast is called roast, and cooked, cooked. But in R. Josiah's, even roast is called cooked. But he adduces a verse? — That is a mere support.[10]

[IF HE SAYS,] 'KONAM THAT I TASTE NOT ANY COOKED DISH [TABSHIL]. But he vowed [abstinence] from a tabshil?[11] — Said Abaye: This Tanna designates everything with which bread is eaten a tabshil.[12] And it was taught [likewise], He who vows [abstinence] from a tabshil is forbidden all cooked food [tabshil], and whatsoever is roasted, seethed, or boiled; he is also forbidden soft preserves of gourds with which the sick eat their bread. But this is not so. For R. Jeremiah fell sick. When the doctor called to heal him, he saw a pumpkin lying in the house. Thereupon he left the house, saying. 'The angel of death is in that house,[13] yet I am to cure him'![14] — That is no difficulty: the former refers to soft preserves; the latter to hard.[15] Raba b. 'Ulla said: The latter refers to the pumpkin itself;[16] the former to its inner contents.[17] For Rab Judah said: The soft part of a pumpkin [should be eaten] with beet; the soft part of linseed is good with kutah.[18] But this may not be told to the ignorant.[19]

Raba said: By 'the sick', scholars are meant.[20] This agrees with another dictum of his. For Raba said:

---

(1) Seethed. Heb. shaluk שלוק, denotes more thoroughly boiled than cooked (mebushal).

(2) Because (tabshil is only applicable to a loose liquid-like substance, but not to a dense mass.

(3) [טורמוטא, Gr.  trembling, hence shrivelled up; v. Gemara. J. explains it as lightly boiled egg; cf. Krauss. T.A. I. pp. 125 and 515.]

(4) This is discussed on 51a.

(5) Both liquids and solids.

(6) Sc. what is roasted or seethed. This refers to the first clause of the Mishnah.

(7) That מבושל includes these.

(8) Heb. ויבשלו, impf. of בשל of which מבושל is a pass. part.

(9) II Chron. XXXV, 13. But the Passover Sacrifice had to be roasted; hence מבושל is applicable to roasts too. Yet this is not actual proof, because as stated infra, in vows the popular usage is the norm.

(10) His ruling, however, is not based thereon.

(11) Which implies both loosely cooked and a dense mass.

(12) But not otherwise; a dense mass cannot be eaten with bread.

(13) I.e the pumpkin is like poison for him.

(14) This shows that they are injurious to invalids.

(15) The soft are beneficial, the hard, injurious.

(16) I.e., the outer portion, which is hard and injurious.

(17) Its heart, which is soft and beneficial

(18) A preserve consisting of sour milk, bread-crusts and salt. — Jast.

(19) Lest they tear up the growing flax to obtain the seed (Ran). Because it will appear absurd to then, (Tosaf).

(20) I.e., in the Baraitha stating that 'the sick' eat their bread with soft preserves of gourds, the Rabbis and students are meant, not the literally sick. Hence there is no contradiction between that and the story of R. Jeremiah.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 49b

In accordance with whom is it that we pray for the invalid and the sick?[1] In accordance with R. Jose.[2] Since he said, 'the invalid and the sick,' It follows that 'invalid' is literal, and 'the sick' [metaphorically] means the Rabbis.[3]

BUT IS PERMITTED [TO PARTAKE] OF A DISH SOLIDLY PREPARED. Our Mishnah does not agree with the Babylonians, for R. Zera said: The Babylonians are fools, eating bread with bread.[4] R. Hisda said: There is none[5] to make enquiries of the epicureans[6] of Huzal[7] how porridge is best eaten, whether a wheat porridge with wheaten bread, and a barley porridge with barley bread, or perhaps [they are best reversed,] wheat with barley, and barley with wheat. Raba ate it with stunted [parched] grains. Rabbah son of R. Huna found R. Huna eating porridge with his fingers. So he said to him, 'Why do you eat with your hands?' He replied, Thus did Rah say, [To eat] porridge with [one] finger is well: how much more so with two or three! Rab said to his son Hiyya, and R. Huna said the same to his son Rabbah, 'If you are invited to eat porridge, [you may even go] a parasang[8] for it; to eat beef, even three parasangs. Rab said to his son Hiyya, and R. Huna said likewise to his son Rabbah: You must never expectorate before your teacher, save [after eating] a pumpkin or porridge, because they are like lead pellets:[9] expectorate this even in the presence of King Shapur.[10]

R. Jose and R. Judah, — one ate porridge with his fingers, and one with a prick.[11] He who was eating with the prick said to him who was eating with the fingers, 'How long will you make me eat your filth?'[12] The other replied, 'How long will you feed me with your saliva?'[13]

Lesbian figs[14] were placed before R. Judah and R. Simeon. R. Judah ate; R. Simeon did not. [Whereupon] R. Judah asked him, 'Why are [you], Sir not eating?' He replied. 'These never pass out at all from the stomach.' But R. Judah retorted, 'All the more [reason or eating them], as they will sustain us tomorrow.'[15] R. Judah was sitting before R. Tarfon, who remarked to him, 'Your face shines to-day.' He replied. 'Your servants went out to the fields yesterday and brought us beets, which we ate unsalted, had we salted them, my face would have shone even more.

A certain matron[16] said to R. Judah, 'A teacher and drunkard!'[17] He replied, You may well believe me that[18] I taste [no wine] but that of Kiddush and Habdalah[19] and the four cups of Passover,[20] on account of which I have to bind my temples from Passover until Pentecost;[21] but a man's wisdom maketh his face shine.[22] A min[23] said to R. Judah. 'Your face is like that of a moneylender or pig breeder.'[24] He replied, 'Both of these are forbidden to Jews; but there are twenty-four conveniences between my house and the School, and every hour I visit one of them.'

When R. Judah went to the Beth ha-Midrash,[25] he used to take a pitcher on his shoulders [to sit on], saying. 'Great is labour, for it honours the worker.'[26] R. Simeon used to carry a basket upon his shoulders, saying likewise, 'Great is labour, for it honours the worker.'

R. Judah's wife went out, brought wool, and made an embroidered cloak. On going to market she used to put it on, whilst when R. Judah went [to synagogue] to pray he used to wear it. When he donned it, he uttered the benediction, Blessed be He who hath robed me with a robe.[27] Now, it happened once that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel proclaimed a fast,[28] but R. Judah did not attend the fast-service.[29] Being informed that he had nothing to wear, he [R. Simeon b. Gamaliel] sent him a robe, which he did not accept.

---

(1) In our daily prayers; v. P.B. p. 47.

(2) V. R.H. 16a. The Rabbis there maintain that a man is judged on New Year, and once he is sentenced, whether to life or death, the verdict cannot be reversed. Consequently, in their opinion it would be futile to pray for the recovery of the sick during the year. Hence the practice of praying for them accords with R. Jose's view, that man is judged every day.

(3) Who are weakened by their intensive studies.

(4) I. e., even food solidly prepared is eaten by them with bread consequently such would be included in the term 'tabhshil' and forbidden.

(5) So the text as emended by Bah. Asheri reads: Is there any one etc.

(6) Lit., 'those who are very careful in their eating'. Rashi and one version of the Ran. Others: the fastidious.

(7) A very old town lying below Nehardea, but nearer to Sura and belonging to the judicial circuit of the latter: Obermeyer, p. 299.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) I.e., it is dangerous to swallow the saliva left in the mouth after eating these.

(10) Known otherwise as Shapur I. He was King of Persia and a friend of Samuel; Ber. 56a

(11) Used as a fork.

(12) They were both eating out of the same dish.

(13) Because the thorn was not wiped each time after being put into his mouth.

(14) Jast. These are very difficult to digest.

(15) As such below, R. Judah was extremely poor; hence this was a consideration to him, though there is probably an element of humour in his retort.

(16) This is mostly used of Roman ladies of noble birth.

(17) מורה ורוי i.e., you are a Sage, yet you are drunk! His faces was always red and shining, giving that impressions.

(18) Lit., 'My faith in the hand of this woman if . . .'

(19) Kiddush: a short blessing of sanctification, recited at the commencement of Sabbaths and festivals. Habdalah, lit., ' separation', a benediction said at the end of Sabbaths and festivals, thanking God for the distinction He created between holy and non-holy days. Both are recited over wine, which is drunk.

(20) Four cups of wine are drunk at the meals on the first evening (without Palestine, two evenings) of Passover.

(21) They gave him such a headache! Doubtlessly a metaphorical exaggeration.
(22) Ecc. VIII, 1.
(23) [So MS.M. (v. Glos.), cur. edd. 'Sadducee'.]
(24) Their faces are always shining because of their great profits!
(25) School House.
(26) Lit., 'its master'. Otherwise he would have had to sit on the floor. It is not clear whether the school was so deficient in equipment that this was really necessary, or he himself wished to shew his appreciation of labour. In the story of the deposition of R. Gamaliel (Ber. 27b-28a). It is stated that many additional seats were placed for the great accretion of new disciples, proving that it was not customary to sit on the floor. R. Judah belonged to the following generation.
(27) There is no such benediction in the statutory liturgy, and R. Judah probably uttered this without the use of the Divine Name and without mention of God's sovereignty. Through the omission of these it is not really a benediction at all, hence R. Judah might recite it. (Real benedictions may not be uttered save where the Rabbis have prescribed them).
(28) Over and above the statutory fasts special fasts were proclaimed in times of drought or on account of national disasters, such as pestilence, evil decrees, etc.; Ta'an. 19a.
(29) A special service was held: Ta'an. 15a.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 50a

Lifting up the mat [upon which he was sitting], he exclaimed to the messengers, 'See what I have here,[1] but I do not wish to benefit from this world.'[2]

The daughter of Kalba Shebu'a[3] betrothed herself to R. Akiba.[4] When her father heard thereof, he vowed that she was not to benefit from aught of his property. Then she went and married him in winter.[5] They slept on straw, and he had to pick out the straw from his hair. 'If Only I could afford it,' said he to her, 'I would present you with a golden Jerusalem.'[6] [Later] Elijah came to them in the guise of a mortal,[7] and cried out at the door. 'Give the some straw, for my wife is in confinement and I have nothing for her to lie on.' 'See!' R. Akiba observed to his wife, 'there is a man who lacks even straw.' [Subsequently] she counselled him, 'Go, and become a scholar.' So he left her, and spent twelve years [studying] under R. Eliezer and R. Joshua. At the end of this period, he was returning home, when from the back of the house he heard a wicked man jeering at his wife, 'Your father did well to you. Firstly, because he is your inferior; and secondly, he has abandoned you to living widowhood all these years.' She replied, 'Yet were he to hear my desires, he would be absent another twelve years. Seeing that she has thus given me permission,' he said, 'I will go back.' So he went back, and was absent for another twelve years, [at the end of which] he returned with twenty-four thousand disciples.[8] Everyone flocked to welcome him, including her [his wife] too. But that wicked man said to her, 'And whither art thou going?'[9] 'A righteous man knoweth the life of his beast,'[10] she retorted. So she went to see him, but the disciples wished to repulse her. 'Make way for her,' he told them, 'for my [learning] and yours are hers.' When Kalba Shebu'a heard thereof, he came [before R. Akiba] and asked for the remission of his vow and he annulled it for him.

From six incidents did R. Akiba become rich: [i] From Kalba Shebu'a.[11] [ii] From a ship's ram. For every ship is provided with the figurehead of an animal. Once this [a wooden ram] was forgotten on the sea shore, and R. Akiba found it.[12] [iii] From a hollowed out trunk.[13] For he once gave four it to sailors, and told them to bring him something [that he needed]. But they found only a hollow log on the sea shore, which they brought to him, saying, 'Sit on this and wait'.[14] It was found to be full of denarii. For it once happened that a ship sunk and all the treasures thereof were placed in that log, and it was found at that time. [iv] From the serokita.[15] [v] From a matron.[16] [vi]

---

(1) My a miracle, upon which he had relied, the place was filled with gold.
(2) This story shows that R. Judah, i.e R. Judah b. Ila'i, was extremely poor. In general the scholars of that generation lived in great poverty, as a result of the Hadrianic persecutions. V. A. Buchler, The Jewish Community of Sepphoris, pp. 67 seq.

(3) V. Git. 56a.
(4) Then a poor shepherd.
(5) An interval generally elapsed between betrothal (kiddushin) and marriage (nesu'in).
(6) A golden ornament with Jerusalem engraved thereon. V. 'Ed. II. 7.
(7) Cf. Sanh. 109a, 113b; v. Tosaf. Hul. 6a. s.v. אשכחיה.
(8) Cur. edd.: 'pairs of disciples'. But 'pairs' is absent in the version of Ket. 62b, and should be deleted here.
(9) Taunting her that she was too humble to be observed by so great a scholar.
(10) Prov. XII, 10.
(11) Who shared his wealth with him.
(12) It contained money.
(13) גווזא < גזע, a stem, trunk: Rashi translates: a ship's coffer, from גנז to hide, and גזא, treasure.
(14) [Lit., 'make this a tarrying place' (Goldschmidt); or 'Let our master make this (a tarrying place)', Rashi.]
(15) 'Aruch translates: Ishmaelite traders. The phrase is missing in 'En Jacob and unnoticed by the commentaries, and is obviously a corrupt dittography of ומן מטרוניתא (Jast.)
(16) A large sum of money was once needed for the school house. R. Akiba borrowed it from a matron, and at her request gave the Almighty and the sea as sureties for its punctual repayment. But when the money fell due, R. Akiba was unwell. Thereupon the matron stood at the edge of the sea did exclaimed, 'Sovereign of the Universe! Thou knowest that to Thee and to the sea have I entrusted my money'. In reply, He inspired the Emperor's daughter with a mad fit, in the course of which she threw a chest full of treasures into the sea, which was washed up at the matron's feet. On his recovery, he brought her the money, with apologies for the delay: but she told him what had happened, and sent him away with many gifts.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 50b

The wife of Turnusrufus.[1] [vi] From Keti'a b. Shalom.[2]

R. Gamada gave four zuz to sailors to bring him something. But as they could not obtain it, they brought him a monkey for it. The monkey escaped, and made his way into a hole. In searching for it, they found it lying on precious stones, and brought them all to him.

The Emperor's[3] daughter said to R. Joshua b. Hananiah: 'Such comely wisdom in an ugly vessel!'[4] He replied. 'Learn front thy father's palace. In what is the wine stored?' 'In earthern jars.' she answered. 'But all [common] people store [wine] in earthern vessels and thou too likewise! Thou shouldst keep it in jars of gold and silver!' So she went and had the wine replaced in vessels of gold and silver, and it turned sour. 'Thus,' said he to her, 'The Torah is likewise!' 'But are there not handsome people who are learned too?' 'Were they ugly they would be even more learned,' he retorted.

A certain woman of Nehardea came before Rab Judah[5] for a lawsuit, and was declared guilty by the court. 'Would your teacher Samuel[6] have judged thus?' she said. 'Do you know him then?' he asked. 'Yes, He is short and big-stomached, black and large teethed.' 'What, you have come to insult him! Let that woman be under the ban!' he exclaimed. She burst and died.

HE MAY ALSO EAT A WELL-BOILED EGG [BEZA TURMITA] — What is beza turmita? — Samuel said: The slave who can prepare one is worth a thousand denarii. For it must be placed a thousand times in hot water and a thousand times in cold, until small enough to be swallowed whole. If one is ulcerated, it attracts the matter to itself, and when it passes out the doctor knows what medicine is required and how to treat him. Samuel used to examine himself with Kulha,[7] [which weakened him so] that his household tore their hair [in despair].

We have learnt elsewhere: If one is working among kelusfin, [Lesbian figs], he may not eat of benoth sheba';[8] among benoth sheba', he may not eat of kelusfin. What are kelusfin? — A species of figs of which pap is made. A certain man once gave his slave to his friend to teach him a thousand different ways of making pap, but he taught him only eight hundred. So he summoned him to a lawsuit before Rabbi. Rabbi remarked, ‘Our fathers said, "We have forgotten prosperity,"[9] but we have never even seen it!’[10]

Rabbi made a wedding feast for his son Simeon, (and did not invite Bar Kappara).[11] He wrote above the banqueting-hall,[12] ‘Twenty-four thousand myriad denarii have been expended on these festivities ‘Thereupon Bar Kappara said, ‘If it is thus with those who transgress His will[13] , how much more so with those who do His will!’ When he [subsequently] invited him, he observed, ‘If it is thus with those who do His will in this world, how much more so [will it be] in the world to come!’

On the day that Rabbi laughed, punishment would come upon the world.[14] So he said to Bar Kappara [who was a humorist]. ‘Do not make me laugh, and I will give you forty measures of wheat.’ He replied. ‘But let the Master see

---

(1) Tineius Rufus, a Roman governor of Judea. After her husband's death she became a convert and married R. Akiba, bringing him in much wealth. V.’A. Z. 20a.

(2) Keti'a b. Shalom was condemned to death by a Roman emperor — probably Hadrian — for giving counsel against the emperor and in favour of the Jews. He made R. Akiba his heir. — ‘A.Z. (Sonc. ed.) 10b, pp. 53ff.

(3) [Hadrian: v. J.E. VII. 291.

(4) He was very ugly.

(5) [At Pumbeditha where he had his school.]

(6) R. Judah was for a short time a pupil of Samuel, after the death of Rab and R. Asst: v. Yeb. 18a.]

(7) A stalk of some plant, which acted in the same way as the beza turmita.

(8) A different species of figs. The reference is to Deut. XXIII, 25: When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, then thou mayest eat grapes until thy fill at thin own pleasure. The Rabbis interpret this as referring to workers, who may eat any of the fruit — not particularly grapes — upon which they are engaged, but must confine themselves thereto.

(9) Cf. Lam. III, 17, implying that they had once known it.

(10) I.e., it is extraordinary that in these bad times he should know as many as he did.

(11) The bracketed phrase is transposed its our editions.

(12) Where the festivities took place.

(13) A reference to the wrong done in not inviting him.

(14) Rabbi suffered internal pains for thirteen years, during which there was never a drought. — B.M. 85a.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 51a

that I may take whatever measure I desire.’ So he took a large basket, pitched it over,[1] placed it on his head, went [to Rabbi] and said to him. ‘Fill me the forty measures of wheat which I may demand front you.’ Thereupon Rabbi burst into laughter, and said to him, ‘Did I not warn you not to jest?’ He replied. ‘I wish but to take the wheat which I may [justly] demand.’

Bar Kappara [once] said to Rabbi's daughter. ‘Tomorrow I will drink wine to your father's dancing and your mother's singing.’[2]

Ben Eleasa, a very wealthy man, was Rabbi's son-in-law, and he was invited to the wedding of R. Simeon b. Rabbi. [At the wedding] Bar Kappara asked Rabbi, What is meant by to'ebah?[3] Now, every explanation offered by Rabbi was refuted by him, so he said to him, ‘Explain it yourself.’ He replied. ‘Let your housewife come and fill me a cup.’ She came and did so, upon which he said to Rabbi, ‘Arise, and dance for me, that I may tell it to you.’ Thus saith the Divine Law, ‘to'ebah’: to'eh attah bah.[4] At his second cup he asked him , ‘What is meant by tebel?’[5] He replied in the same manner as before, [until] he remarked, ‘Do [something] for me, and I will tell you.’ On his complying, he said 'tebel hu' means: Is there tablin [perfume] in it [the animal]? Is intimacy therewith sweeter than all other intimacies?[6] Then he further questioned, 'And what is meant by zimmah?'[7] 'Do as before, [and I will tell you.'] When he did so, he said, 'zimmah' means zu mah hi'.[8] Now, Ben Eleasa could not endure all this, so he and his wife left.

What is [known of] Ben Eleasa? — It was taught: Ben Eleasa did not disburse his money for nothing, but that he might achieve thereby the High Priest's style of hair-dressing, as it is written, They shall only poll their heads.[9] It was taught: [That means] in the Lulian fashion.[10] What was the Lulian style? — Rab Judah said: A unique style of hairdressing. How is that? — Raba said: The end [of one row of hair] reaching the roots of the other, and such was the hairdressing fashion of the High Priest.[11]

AND REMUZIAN CUCUMBERS [DELA'ATH HA-REMUZAH]. What is DELA'ATH HA-REMUZAH? — Samuel said, Karkuz pumpkins.[12] R. Ashi said, cucumbers baked in ashes. Rabina objected to R. Ashi: R. Nehemiah said: Syrian cucumbers, i.e., Egyptian cucumbers, are kil'ayim[13] in respect of Greek and Remuzian [cucumbers!][14] This refutation is unanswerable.

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM FOOD PREPARED IN A POT IS FORBIDDEN ONLY BOILED DISHES. BUT IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM, IF I TASTE AUGHT THAT DESCENDS INTO A POT', HE IS FORBIDDEN EVERYTHING PREPARED IN A POT.[15] GEMARA. It was taught: He who vows [abstinence] from what goes into a boiling pot, may not eat of what goes into a stew pot, because it has already entered the boiling pot before going into the stew pot; from what goes into a stew pot, he may eat of what goes into a boiling pot; from what is [wholly] prepared in a boiling pot, he may eat of what is prepared in a stew pot; from what is wholly prepared in a boiling pot, he may eat what is [partially] prepared in a stew pot. If he vows [abstinence] from what goes into an oven, only bread is forbidden him. But if he declares, 'Everything made in an oven be forbidden me,' he is forbidden everything that is made in an oven.

---

(1) That it should retain the the wheat.

(2) Jast. lit., 'croaking', connecting קירקני will קירקור the croaking of frogs. Asheri, Rosh and Tosaf: 'in the rounds', perhaps connecting it with  circus. (Goldschmidt). Rash: when she fills my clip.

(3) Abomination. Lev. XX, 13, referring to unnatural vice.

(4) Thou errest in respect of her, i e., by forsaking the permitted and indulging in the forbidden.

(5) Disgrace. Lev. XVIII, 23, referring to bestiality: E.V.: 'confusion'.

(6) Lit., 'different from'. That thou leavest thine own kind for it.

(7) Wickedness, Ibid. 17, referring to incest with a wife's daughter.

(8) Who is she, i.e. , through promiscuous intercourse the parentage is unknown, and thus a father might marry his daughter.

(9) Ezek. XLI, 20.

(10) Lulianus was a popular corruption of Julianus. V. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 128 n. 2.

(11) Eleasa expended huge sums to have his hair so dressed. Presumably it was a costly process known only to a few experts.

(12) That do not improve in cooking כרכוז. Obermeyer. op. cit. pp. 35f., identifies it with Circesium on the Euphrates. some 73 parasangs from Pumbeditha on the way to Palestine.

(13) V. Glos.

(14) And mayest be sown together with them, v. Deut. XXII, 9, which applies to all diverse species, cf Kil. I, 5. — This Baraitha proves that remuzah indicates the place of origin, not the manner of its preparation. Obermeyer a.l. regards הרמוצא as a form of הרמאם the river Hirmas which rises by Nisibis.

(15) This is repeated exactly in VI, 1. From Ran it would appear that it was absent in VI, 1, in his edition its correct place being here. Rashi, on the other hand, comments upon it in both places. It is possible that the words MISHNAH and GEMARA should be deleted, the whole being a quotation from the first Mishnah serving as a caption for the discussion in the Gemara (Marginal Gloss to Wilna ed.). — As to the difference between 'boiled dishes' and 'food prepared in a pot', the first term applies to dishes completely boiled therein, the second to food only partially prepared therein and finished elsewhere.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 51b

MISHNAH. [IF HE VOWS ABSTINENCE] FROM THE PRESERVE, HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY PRESERVED VEGETABLES;[1] [IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM,] IF I TASTE PRESERVE', HE IS FORBIDDEN ALL PRESERVES. 'FROM THE SEETHED,' HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY SEETHED MEAT; 'KONAM, IF I TASTE SEETHED HE IS FORBIDDEN EVERY THING SEETHED.

GEMARA. R. Aha the son of R. Awia asked R. Ashi: If one said, 'That which is preserved,' 'that which is roasted,' 'that which is salted', what do these terms imply?[2] — This remains a problem.

MISHNAH. [IF ONE VOWS ABSTINENCE] 'FROM THE ROAST,' HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY ROAST MEAT: THIS IS R. JUDAH'S OPINION. '[KONAM,] IF I TASTE ROAST', HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO PARTAKE] OF ALL FORMS OF ROAST. 'FROM THE SALTED, HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY SALTED FISH; '[KONAM, IF I TASTED SALTED [FOOD].' HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO PARTAKE] OF EVERYTHING PRESERVED IN SALT. '[KONAM,] IF I TASTE FISH OR FISHES,'[3] HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO EAT] THEM, BOTH LARGE AND SMALL, SALTED AND UNSALTED, RAW AND COOKED. YET HE MAY EAT HASHED TERITH,[4] BRINE, AND FISH PICKLE.[5] HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM ZAHANAH.[6] IS FORBIDDEN HASHED TERITH, BUT MAY PARTAKE OF BRINE AND FISH PICKLE. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM HASHED TERITH MAY NOT[7] PARTAKE OF BRINE AND FISH PICKLE.

GEMARA. It was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: [If he vows] '[Konam. If I taste] fish [day],' he is forbidden large ones but permitted small ones '[Konam] if I taste dagah,'[8] he is forbidden small ones , but permitted large ones . '[Konam,] if I taste dag [and] dagah,' he is forbidden both large and small ones. R. Papa said to Abaye: How do we know that '[Konam, If I taste] dag' implies large ones only? because it is written, Now the Lord had prepared a great fish dag] to swallow up Jonah?[9] But is it not written, Then Jonah prayed onto the Lord his God out of the fish's [dagah] belly?[10] — This is no difficulty: perhaps he was vomited forth by the large fish and swallowed again by a smaller one. But [what of the verse] And the fish [dagah] that was in the river died?[11] did only the small fish die, not the Iarge? — Hence dagah implies both large and small, but in vows human speech is followed.[12]

HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM ZAHANAH. etc. Rabina asked R. Ashi: What if one says. 'Zihin be forbidden me'?[13] The problem remains.

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM MILK MAY PARTAKE OF CURD.[14] BUT R. JOSE FORBIDS IT. 'FROM CURD,' HE IS PERMITTED MILK. ABBA SAUL SAID: HE WHO VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM CHEESE, IS INTERDICTED THEREFROM, WHETHER SALTED OR UNSALTED. FROM MEAT,'

---

(1) The use of the def. art. limits the vow to the most common form of preserve.

(2) Are they the equivalent of the definite art, and so limited, or not?

(3) 'Fish' refers to large ones, 'fishes' to small, which are sold in quantities.

(4) A certain fish. This is sold in slices, whereas his vow related to is hole ones only.

(5) This is absent from cur. edd., but is inserted by Bah.

(6) Mud-fish, small fish preserved in brine, similar to terith (Jast.).

(7) This is the reading of Rashi and Asheri. Other editions, likewise Ran, read 'may'.

(8) Fem. of dag used in the collective.
(9) Jon. II, 1.
(10) Ibid. 2, shewing that dagah too refers to large fish.
(11) Ex. VII, 21.
(12) In general usage, dag refers to large fish, dagah to small.
(13) Zihin, a preparation of small fish, is analogous to zahanah. The problem is whether he is allowed brine and fish pickle (muries).
(14) Maim: whey.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 52a

HE MAY PARTAKE OF BROTH AND THE SEDIMENTS OF BOILED MEAT;[1] BUT R. JUDAH FORBIDS THEM]. R. JUDAH SAID: IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT [IN SUCH A CASE] R. TARFON FORBADE US[2] [EVEN] EGGS BOILED THEREWITH. THEY REPLIED, THAT IS SO, BUT ONLY IF HE VOWS, 'THIS MEAT BE FORBIDDEN ME. FOR IF HE VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM SOMETHING, AND IT IS MIXED UP WITH ANOTHER, IF IT [THE FORBIDDEN FOOD] IS SUFFICIENT TO IMPART ITS TASTE [TO THE OTHER]. IT[3] IS FORBIDDEN.[4] IF HE VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM WINE, HE IS PERMITTED [TO FAT] FOOD WHICH CONTAINS THE TASTE OF WINE; BUT IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM IF I TASTE THIS WINE', AND IT FALLS INTO FOOD, IF IT IS SUFFICIENT TO IMPART ITS TASTE [TO THE FOOD]. IT IS FORBIDDEN.

---

(1) Bits of meat that fall away from the piece in boiling and form a jelly.
(2) Ear. Iec. me.
(3) That other food.
(4) But if one vows abstinence from meat in general, the eggs boiled therewith, likewise the soup and meat sediment, are permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 52b

GEMARA. But the following contradicts this. [If one vows abstinence] from lentils, lentil cakes are forbidden him; R. Jose permits then,![1] — There is no difficulty: each Master [rules] according to [the usage] of his locality. In that of the Rabbis, milk is called milk, and curd, curd; but in that of R. Jose, curd too is called curd of milk.

It was taught: He who vows [abstinence] from milk, is permitted curd; from curd,is permitted milk; from milk, is permitted cheese; from cheese, is permitted milk; from broth, is permitted meat sediment; from meat sediment, is permitted broth. If he says, 'This meat be forbidden me,' the meat itself, its broth and its sediment, are forbidden him. If he vows [to abstain] from wine, he may partake of food which contains the taste of wine; but if he says, 'Konam that I taste not this wine,' and it falls into food, if the taste of wine is [perceptible] therein, it is forbidden.

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM GRAPES IS PERMITTED WINE: FROM OLIVES, IS PERMITTED OIL. IF HE SAYS, KONAM. THAT I TASTE NOT THESE OLIVES AND GRAPES', BOTH THEY AND THEIR JUICE[2] ARE FORBIDDEN.

GEMARA. Ram b. Hama propounded: Is 'these' essential, or 'that I taste not' essential?[3] (But, if you can think that 'these' is essential, why add 'that I taste not'? — He [the Tanna] may teach this [by the addition]: even if he Says. 'that I taste not.' yet only if he declares, 'these' is he prohibited, but not otherwise.) — Raba said. Come and hear: [If one says Konam be these fruits to me,'[4] 'Be they konam to my mouth,' he is forbidden [to benefit] from what is exchanged for them or what grows of their seeds. This implies that he may benefit from their juice![5] — In truth, even their juice is forbidden; but he [the Tanna] prefers to teach that what is exchanged for them is the same as what grows from their seeds.[6] Come and hear: 'That I eat not or taste not of them,' he is permitted [to benefit] from what is exchanged for them or what grows of their seeds.[7] This implies that their juice is forbidden![8] — Because the first clause does not mention their juice, the second clause omits it too.[9]

Come and hear: R. Judah said: It once happened that [in such a case] R. Tarfon forbade us [even] eggs boiled therewith. They replied, that is so. By only if he vows, 'This meat be forbidden me.' For if he vows [to abstain] from something, and it is mixed up with another, if it [the forbidden food] is sufficient to impart its taste [to the other], it is forbidden![10] — There is no question about 'these': that is certainly essential.[11] The problem is with respect to 'that I taste not': is that essential or not?[12] — Come and hear: ['Konam that I taste not fish or fishes'], he is forbidden [to eat] them, both large and small, salted and unsalted, raw and cooked. Yet he may eat hashed terith and brine![13] — Raba said: Providing it [the brine] had already issued from them [before the vow].[14]

---

(1) Infra 53b. Thus R. Jose permits what is made from the forbidden substance, whilst in the Mishnah he declares curd forbidden under the term milk.

(2) Lit., 'what comes from them'.

(3) Since an ordinary vow does not interdict the juice (If grapes and olives, whilst in the second clause thus is forbidden, the question arises, on account of which particular phrase are they prohibited? Is it because he vowed 'these grapes', or because he added 'that I taste not', superfluous in itself, being implied in konam, and therefore perhaps extending the vow to oil and wine?

(4) Infra 57a.

(5) Though he said 'these'. This proves that the essential clause in the Mishnah is 'that I taste not'.

(6) Though the firmer is an entirely different thing: how much more than that which actually issues therefrom!

(7) This continues the quotation.

(8) For, according to the last answer, this is more likely to be forbidden than the others. Hence, were this permitted, it would be explicitly stated. This too proves that the essential clause is 'that I taste not'.

(9) For the sake of uniformity. But actually it may be permitted.

(10) This definitely proves that 'this' is essential.

(11) I.e., it is certain that 'these' alone extends the vow as indicated.

(12) Is that phrase alone sufficient to extend its scope?

(13) Brine is the juice that issues from the fish, yet it is permitted, though he said, 'that I taste not'. This proves that that alone is insufficient.

(14) But the brine which issues thereafter may be forbidden: hence the problem remains.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 53a

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM DATES IS PERMITTED DATE HONEY; FROM WINTER GRAPES,'[1] HE IS PERMITTED VINEGAR MADE FROM WINTER GRAPES — R. JUDAH B. BATHYRA SAID: IF IT BEARS THE NAME OF ITS ORIGIN,[2] AND HE VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM IT,[3] HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM WHAT COMES FROM IT. BUT THE SAGES PERMIT IT.

GEMARA. But the Sages are identical with the first Tanna? — They differ in respect of the following which was taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar laid down this general rule: Whatever is eaten itself, and what comes from it too is eaten, e.g., dates and the honey of dates, and he vowed [abstinence] from the substance itself, he is forbidden that which comes from it;[4] but if he vows [abstinence] from what comes from it, he is also forbidden the substance itself.[5] But if the substance is not eaten itself, whilst what comes from it is,[6] and he vowed [abstinence] from the substance itself, he is forbidden only what comes from it,[7] because he meant nought else but what comes from it.[8]

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM WINE MAY PARTAKE OF APPLE-WINE [CIDER]; FROM OIL HE IS PERMITTED SESAME OIL;[9] FROM HONEY, HE IS PERMITTED DATE HONEY; FROM VINEGAR, HE IS PERMITTED THE VINEGAR OF WINTER GRAPES; FROM LEEKS, HE IS PERMITTED PORRET;[10] FROM VEGETABLES, HE IS PERMITTED FIELD HERBS,[11] BECAUSE IT IS A QUALIFYING EPITHET.[12]

GEMARA. It was taught: He who vows [to abstain] from oil: to Palestine sesame oil is permitted him, but he is forbidden olive oil; in Babylon, he is forbidden sesame oil but permitted olive oil. In the place where they are both commonly used, both are forbidden. But that is obvious? — It is necessary to teach it only when most people use one: I might think that the majority must be followed. We are therefore taught that a doubtful prohibition is [resolved] stringently.[13]

He who vows [abstinence] from vegetables, in normal years is forbidden garden vegetables but permitted wild vegetables; in the seventh year. He is forbidden wild vegetables but permitted garden vegetables.[14] R. Abbahu said on the authority of R. Hanina b. Gamaliel:

---

(1) סתוניות < סתוא winter, remaining on the tree till winter.

(2) As here, the vinegar being called 'winter grapes vinegar'.

(3) Sc. the article of its origin, i.e., winter grapes.

(4) T. J. has 'permitted', which Wilna Gaon regards as correct.

(5) V. preceding note.

(6) E.g winter grapes.

(7) If the substance is foresworn.

(8) The first Tanna, who rules that vinegar of winter grapes is permitted, disagrees with R. Simeon b. Eleazar, whilst the Sages agree with him. Hence, 'the Sages permit it', refers to the substance itself, when not usually eaten, but not to what comes from it

(9) שומשום (pl. שומשמין) probably fr. שמש (sun-flower), sesame.

(10) קפלוט pl. קפלוטות (), is a species of leek with a head (porrum capitatum).

(11) Wild vegetables.

(12) The reason of all these is that is where a qualifying epithet is normally added to the name of the substance it is not included in the unspecified term: thus, in speaking of wine (unspecified), grape wine is meant, not apple wine: and so the rest.

(13) Consequently, though a particular oil is used by a minority only, yet if its usage is sufficiently prevalent to warrant the assumption that the vow may have been meant to include it, it is forbidden.

(14) Since none are planted then, by the unspecified term wild vegetables are meant.

This was taught only where vegetables are not imported into Palestine from abroad;[1] but where they are imported into Palestine from abroad, [garden vegetables] are forbidden. This is dependent on Tannaim: Vegetables may not be imported from abroad into Palestine; R. Hanina b. Gamaliel said: We may import them. What is the reason of him who prohibits it? — R. Jeremiah said: On account of the clods of earth.[2]

MISHNAH. [HE WHO VOWS TO ABSTAIN] FROM CABBAGE IS FORBIDDEN ASPARAGUS;[3] FROM ASPARAGUS, HE IS PERMITTED CABBAGE;[4] FROM POUNDED BEANS, HE IS FORBIDDEN MIKPEH:[5] R. JOSE PERMITS IT. [IF ONE VOWS TO ABSTAIN] FROM MIKPEH, HE IS FORBIDDEN GARLIC. R. JOSE PERMITS IT; FROM GARLIC, HE IS PERMITTED MIKPEH. FROM LENTILS, LENTIL CAKES ARE FORBIDDEN HIM. R. JOSE PERMITS THEM. FROM LENTIL CAKES, LENTILS ARE PERMITTED HIM. [IF ONE SAYS] 'KONAM, IF I TASTE HITTAH, HITTIN',[6] BOTH THE FLOUR THEREOF AND THE [BAKED] BREAD ARE FORBIDDEN TO HIM: IF I TASTE GERIS, GERISSIN',[7] HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO PARTAKE] OF THEM WHETHER RAW OR COOKED. R. JUDAH SAID: [IF ONE DECLARES], 'KONAM, IF I TASTE HITTAH OR GERIS,' HE MAY CHEW THEM RAW.

GEMARA. It was taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: [If one vows 'Konam,] if I taste hittah [wheat]', baked wheat [i.e., flour] is forbidden him, but he may chew it raw; '[Konam,] if I taste hittin,'[8] he may not chew them raw, but if baked, they are permitted;[9] 'If I taste hittah, hittin', he may neither eat them baked nor chew them raw. [If he says. 'Konam,] if I taste geris', it is forbidden cooked, but may be chewed [raw]; '[Konam], if I taste gerrissin', he is forbidden either to cook them or chew them raw. [

---

(1) Lit., 'outside the Land (of Israel)'.

(2) Which may adhere to the roots when they are brought: these clods were considered unclean, v. Shab. 15b.

(3) Being considered a species of the genus 'cabbage' (Jast.).

(4) The part is included in the whole, but the whole is not included in the part.

(5) A stiff mass of oil, grist, and onions (Jast.).

(6) hittah, a grain of wheat, also (generically) wheat; pl. hittim (in popular speech the Aramaic plural hittin, was used).

(7) Geris, a pounded bean, also used collectively: pl. gerissim.

(8) Wheat, but plural in form.

(9) Such are the respective meanings assigned in common speech to hittah and hittin: the same difference occurs in geris and gerissin.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 54a

C H A P T E R V I I

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM VEGETABLES IS PERMITTED GOURDS. R. AKIBA FORBIDS THEM. THE [SAGES] SAID TO HIM, BUT WHEN A MAN SAYS TO HIS AGENT 'FETCH ME VEGETABLES, HE REPLIES, I COULD OBTAIN ONLY GOURDS. HE ANSWERED, EXACTLY: BUT WOULD HE SAY, 'I COULD OBTAIN ONLY PULSE?'[1] BUT THAT GOURDS ARE INCLUDED IN VEGETABLES, WHILST PULSE IS [DEFINITELY] NOT. HE IS [ALSO] FORBIDDEN FRESH EGYPTIAN BEANS. BUT PERMITTED THE DRY SPECIES].[2]

GEMARA. HE WHO VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM VEGETABLES etc. But he vowed [to abstain] from vegetables![3] — Said 'Ulla: This refers to one who vows. 'The vegetables of the pot [be forbidden] to me.'[4] But perhaps he meant vegetables which are eaten [with food cooked] in a pot?[5] — He said: 'Vegetables that are cooked in a pot [he forbidden] to me.'[6]

Wherein do they differ? — The Rabbis maintain: Whatever an agent must inquire about does not belong to the same species;[7] but R. Akiba maintains, Whatever the agent needs inquire about is of the same species.[8] Abaye said: R. Akiba admits in respect to punishment that he is not flagellated.[9]

We learnt elsewhere: If the agent carried out his commission, the principal[10] is guilty of a trespass; if he did not carry out his commission, he himself is guilty of a trespass.[11] With which Tanna does this agree? R. Hisda said: Our Mishnah does not agree with R. Akiba. For we learnt:[12] Thus, if he said to him, 'Give the guests meat, and he gave them liver; '[give them] liver,' and he gave them meat, the agent is guilty of a trespass.[13] But if this agrees with R. Akiba: did he not say. Whatever an agent must inquire about, belongs to that species? In that case, the principal, and not the agent, should be liable to a trespass-[offering]?[14] Abaye said, This may agree even with R. Akiba:

---

(1) If only pulse were obtainable, he would simply report that vegetables were unobtainable.

(2) These are two different species, the fresh regarded as a vegetable, the dry a cereal, because it is ground into flour.

(3) Which gourds are certainly not.

(4) And since gourds are boiled in pots, R. Akiba maintains that they are included.

(5) E.g., onions, which are put in a pot for seasoning.

(6) This most refer to something prepared for itself, and not mere seasoning.

(7) A servant, being told to buy vegetables and finding only gourds, would ask his master whether these would do.

(8) For if not, he would reject them immediately.

(9) For eating them. Though he forbids them, it is not certain that they are vegetables.

(10) Lit., 'householder'.

(11) V. Me'il, 20a. The reference is to hekdesh (q.v. Glos.), which must not be appropriated for secular use; if it is (unwittingly), a trespass-offering must be brought, v. Lev. V, 14. Now, if one instructs his agent to do this, and his instructions are exactly carried out, he is responsible; if not, the agent is held to have acted of his own accord and is himself responsible.

(12) Continuing the Mishnah quoted.

(13) It should be observed that by offering this hekdesh to the guests the agent has already misappropriated it by withdrawing it from sacred to secular ownership. The sacrifice is due for that withdrawal; hence when the guests eat it. It is no longer sacred, and no obligation rests upon them.

(14) For if one is sent to buy meat and finds only liver, he should certainly consult his master about it. Therefore, if the servant gave liver when ordered to give meat, on R. Akiba's view he carried out his master's instructions.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 54b

does not R. Akiba admit that he must consult [his principal]?[1] When this discussion was repeated before Raba, he remarked, Nahmani hath said well.[2]

Which Tanna disagrees with R. Akiba? — R. Simeon b. Gamaliel. For it was taught: He who vows [to abstain] from meat, is forbidden every kind of meat; he is also forbidden the head, feet, windpipe, liver, heart, and fowl; but he is permitted the flesh of fish and locusts. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: He who vows [to abstain] from meat is forbidden every kind of meat, but permitted the head, feet, windpipe, liver, heart and fowl, and it is superfluous to mention the flesh of fish and locusts.[3] And thus R. Simeon b. Gamaliel used to say: The entrails are not meat, and he who eats them is no man. In respect of what is this said?[4] [To teach that] he who eats them as meat is no man in respect of purchase.[5]

Why does the first Tanna declare fowl forbidden? Because the agent is wont to inquire about it! But the same applies to flesh of fish in regard to which the agent too, if he can obtain no meat, consults [his master] saying. 'If I cannot obtain meat, shall I bring fish?' Hence it should be forbidden? — Said Abaye: This refers to one who was bled [just before his vow] who [consequently] would not eat fish.[6] If so he would not eat fowl either, for Samuel said: If one is bled, and then eats fowl, his heart will palpitate like a fowl's. And it was taught: One must not be bled and eat fish, fowl, or pickled meat. And it was taught: If one is bled, he must not eat milk, cheese, eggs, cress owl, or pickled meat! — Fowl is different, because it may be eaten after being thoroughly boiled. Abaye [also] said:[7] It refers to one whose eyes ache, fish being injurious to the eyes. If so, he should eat fish, for Samuel said, Nun, Samek, 'Ayin[8] [read] Nuna [fish] sama [are a healing] la-'enayim [to the eyes]! — That is at the end of the illness.[9]

---

(1) Though maintaining that it is of the same species, R. Akiba agrees that a servant should not take meat when ordered to get liver without further instructions. Consequently his action is regarded as his own.

(2) Abaye was an orphan brought up in the house of Rabbah b. Nahmani, who called him by the name of his father, v. Git. (Sonc. ed.) p. 240, n. 6.

(3) Thus he maintains that liver is not included in meat, and so differs from R. Akiba.

(4) Thus the reading as emended by Hart. Since R. Simeon does not exclude the entrails from the things forbidden, in what respect are they not meat?

(5) I.e., If one likes them as much as other meat and is prepared to pay the same price, he is regarded as irrational (Rashi). Tosaf. in Meil. 20b s v. קרביים explains this: If one buys an animal and finds that the entrails are unfit fir food, he cannot demand that the sale be nullified in that account, since they are not meant for human consumption.

(6) It was considered unhealthy to eat fish after being bled. Since then he would not have eaten fish in any case, his vow was not directed against it.

(7) 'Also' must be added if this reading be retained, since the first answer was also Abaye's. In Me'il. loc. cit., however, the reading is 'R. Papa'.

(8) Three letters of the Hebrew alphabet in order.

(9) When the eyes are recovering, fish is beneficial, but at the beginning of the ailment of fish is injurious.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 55a

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM DAGAN [GRAIN] IS FORBIDDEN DRY EGYPTIAN BEANS: THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW, BUT THE SAGES SAY: ONLY THE FIVE PIECES ARE FORBIDDEN HIM.[1] R. MEIR SAID: IF HE VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM TEBU'AH,[2] HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY THE FIVE SPECIES; BUT ONE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM DAGAN, IS FORBIDDEN ALL; YET HE IS PERMITTED THE FRUITS OF THE TREE AND VEGETABLES.

GEMARA. Shall we say that DAGAN implies anything that can he heaped up?[3] To this R. Joseph objected: And as soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first-fruits of corn [dagan] wine and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.[4] But should you say that DAGAN implies everything that can be heaped up, what is meant by, And as soon as the commandment came abroad they brought in abundance?[5] — Abaye answered: It is to include the fruits of the tree and vegetables.

R. MEIR SAID: IF ONE VOWS [TO ABSTAIN] FROM TEBU'AH, etc. R. Johanan said: All agree that if one vows [to abstain] from tebu'ah, the five species only are forbidden to him. It was taught likewise: And both[6] agree that if one vows [abstinence] from tebu'ah, only the five species are forbidden. But that is obvious? — Tonight argue, tebu'ah implies everything: therefore he teaches that it does not imply everything. R. Joseph objected: And as soon as the commandment came abroad, they brought in abundance etc.?[7] — Raba answered: Tebu'ah is one thing: tebu'ath sadeh is another.[8]

The Son of Mar Samuel ordered that thirteen thousand zuz worth of 'allalta[9] from Nehar Pania[10] should be given to Raba. So Raba sent [an enquiry] to R. Joseph: what is meant by 'allalta? — R. Joseph replied, It is [taught in] a Baraitha: And all agree that if he vows [abstinence] from tebu'ah, the five species only are forbidden him. Said Abaye to him. How compare? Tebu'ah implies only the five species, [whereas] 'allalta implies everything. When this was repeated before Raba, he observed, I am in no doubt that 'allalta means everything. My problem is this: What of the rent of houses and the hire of ships? Shall We say, Since they depreciate, they are not included in 'allalta,' or perhaps since the depreciation is imperceptible they [too] are termed 'allalta?[11] The scholars narrated this to R. Joseph, 'Since he does not need us!' he exclaimed, 'why did he send to us?' And so R. Joseph was annoyed. When Raba learnt this, he went before him on the eve of the Day of Atonement, and found his attendant mixing him a cup of wine.[12] 'Let me prepare it for him,' said he. So he gave it to him, and he mixed the cup of wine. On drinking it he observed, 'This mixture is like that of Raba the son of R. Joseph b. Hama. 'It is indeed he,' was his reply. He then said to him, 'Do not take your seat[13] until you have explained this verse to me. [Viz.,] What is meant by, 'And from the wilderness, Mattanah; and from Mattanah, Nahaliel; and from Nahaliel, Bamoth'?[14] — He replied , When one makes himself as the wilderness, which is free to all,[15] the Torah is presented to in from the field', is wider in scope, and applies to everything brought in from the field, even fruit and vegetables. him as a gift [mattanah] as it is written, 'And from the wilderness, Mattanah'. And once he has it as a gift, God gives it to him as an inheritance [nahaliel],[16] as it is written, 'And from Mattanah, Nahaliel;' And when God gives it him as an inheritance, he ascends to greatness' as it is written, 'And from Nahaliel, Bamoth [heights']. But if he exalts himself, the Holy One, blessed be He, casts him down, as it is written, 'And from Bamoth, the valley'.[17] Moreover, he is made to sink[18] into the earth, as it is written, Which is pressed down[19] into the desolate soil. But should he repent, the Holy One, blessed be He, will raise him again,

---

(1) Viz., Wheat, barley, rye, oats, and spell.

(2) Field produce.

(3) Heb. midgan: this being the reason that R. Meir forbids dry Egyptian beans under the term DAGAN.

(4) II Chron. XXXI, 5: The emphasis laid upon the abundance of their offering implies that they brought more tithes than required by Biblical law.

(5) Since they were obliged to tithe DAGAN by Biblical law, and DAGAN includes all things that can be heaped up, what did they add to the Biblical ordinance? (Rashi). Asheri explains: since DAGAN includes all things that can be heaped up, what else be implied by the phrase 'and all the increase of the field'?

(6) R. Meir and the Sages.

(7) 'And all the increase of the field' (tebu'ath sadeh) is not confined there to the five species only (Rashi). Tosaf. remarks: And Abaye has already interpreted it as referring to vegetables and fruit.

(8) I.e. tebu'ah does mean the five species only: but tehu'ath sadeh, lit., 'that which is brought

(9) 'Allalta, connected with Heb. עלל (cf. Lam. I, 22: and do unto them, as thou has done unto me ועולל למו כאשר עוללת לי) denotes that which is produced (in the fields), and is the Aramaic equivalent of tebu'ah.

(10) [Harpania, a rich agricultural town in the Mesene district S. of Babylon situated on a hill and canal. Obermeyer (op. cit.) p. 198ff.]

(11) 'Allalta, perhaps derived by popular etymology from עלל to enter, to come in (as revenue), applies to that which appreciates, not depreciates. viz., field produce, which from the time of sowing until it is ready for food appreciates in value. Once ready, it cannot depreciate as food, whereas a house, even when still fit for its purpose, continuously depreciates.

(12) Wine was not drunk raw, but had to be diluted with water.

(13) Lit., 'sit on your legs'. V. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 87, n. 7.

(14) Num. XXI, 19f.

(15) I.e., is prepared truly to teach the Torah to all.

(16) I.e., it becomes his safe possession.

(17) From the heights he is hurled down into the valley.

(18) Var. lec. pressed down — שוקפין — which has a more obvious connection with the verse adduced.

(19) ונשקפה E.V. 'which looketh', is here connected with שקף to strike (down).

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 55b

as it is written, Every valley shall be exalted.[1]

It was taught: He who vows [to abstain] from dagan is also forbidden dry Egyptian beans; yet moist ones are permitted. He is also permitted rice, grist, groats and pearl-barley. He who vows [to abstain] from the fruits of that year, is forbidden all the fruit of that year, but is permitted goats, lambs, milk, eggs, and fledglings [of that year].[2] But if he vows, 'The growths of this year [be forbidden] to me,' all these are forbidden. He who vows [abstinence] from the fruits of the earth is forbidden all the fruits of the earth, yet is permitted mushrooms and truffles; but if he vows, 'that which grows from the earth [be forbidden] to me,' all these are forbidden him. But this contradicts the following: For that which does not grow from the earth, one must recite the benediction, 'by whose word all things exist.'[3] And it was taught: For salt, brine mushrooms, and truffles, 'by whose word all things exist' is said![4] — Abaye answered, They do indeed grow out of the earth, but draw their sustenance from the air,[5] and not from the earth. But he [the Tanna] states: For that which does not grow out of the earth?[6] — Read: For that which does not draw its sustenance from the earth.[7]

MISHNAH. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM GARMENTS IS PERMITTED SACK-CLOTH,[8] CURTAIN,[9] AND BLANKET WRAPPING. IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM, IF WOOL COMES UPON ME,' HE MAY COVER HIMSELF WITH WOOL FLEECES;[10] [KONAM] IF FLAX COMES UPON ME', HE MAY COVER HIMSELF WITH FLAX BUNDLES.[11] R. JUDAH SAID: IT ALL DEPENDS UPON THE PERSON WHO VOWS, [THUS:] IF HE IS LADEN [WITH WOOL OR FLAX] AND PERSPIRES AND HIS ODOUR IS OPPRESSIVE, AND HE VOWS 'KONAM' IF WOOL OR FLAX COME UPON ME,' HE MAY WEAR THEM, BUT NOT THROW THEM [AS A BUNDLE] OVER HIS BACK.[12]

GEMARA. It was taught: He who vows [not to benefit] from garments is permitted sack-cloth, curtain, and blanket wrapping. But he is forbidden a belt,[13] fascia,[14] scortea, a leather spread, shoes,[15] knee breeches breeches and a hat. What is a scortea? — Rabbah b. But Huna said: a leather coat.

It was taught: One may go out [on the Sabbath] wearing a thick sack-cloth, a coarse blanket, a curtain, and a blanket wrap, to keep off the rain;[16] but not with a box, basket[17] or matting for the sane purpose. Shepherds may go out with sacks;[18] not only shepherds, but all men, but that the Sages spoke of what is usual.

R. JUDAH SAID, IT ALL DEPENDS UPON THE PERSON WHO VOWED, etc. It was taught: How did R. Judah say, it all depends upon the person who vows? If he is wearing wool, and he is irritated and he vows 'Konam, if wool comes upon me,' he is forbidden to wear, but permitted to carry it; if he is laden with flax and perspires and vows, 'Konam, if flax comes upon me, he may wear but must not carry it.

---

(1) Isa. XL, 4.

(2) Though metaphorically they too might be regarded as the fruits of the year, the vow must be understood literally.

(3) This deals with the blessings to be recited before partaking of food or drink.

(4) The combination of these two statements proves that mushrooms and truffles are not earth-grown, and thus contradicts the ruling that a vow to abstain from what grows from the earth includes them.

(5) Therefore they are included in the vow, 'growths of the earth'; yet since their sustenance is drawn chiefly from the air, they are not regarded as earth grown in respect of a benediction.

(6) Whilst according to Abaye they do.

(7) This is hardly an emendation, but rather an interpretation; cf. p. 3, n. 2.

(8) [Of goats-hair, v. Kel. XXVII, 1.]

(9) Some kind of rough, ready garment, which was not a garment proper.

(10) Because the vow implies garments which can he worn.

(11) אניצי פשתן flax — stalks after they are soaked, beaten and baked (Jast.).

(12) For in the circumstances it is evident that his vow referred to it as a load, not as a garment.

(13) The פונדא was a hollow belt used as a pouch.

(14) A band or sash; Lat. fascia.

(15) The word is the plural of , impilia (pair of) felt shoes (Jast.).

(16) These, though not actually garments, are nevertheless counted as such, and hence permissible on the Sabbath.

(17) Placed over the head to ward off the rains.

(18) In the first clause, 'sack-cloth' would seem to refer to a rough garment; in the second, 'sacks' is probably to be understood literally', put over one's head to ward off the rain.

MISHNAH. ONE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM A HOUSE IS PERMITTED THE UPPER STOREY:[1] THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW. BUT THE SAGES SAY: THE UPPER STOREY IS INCLUDED IN 'HOUSE'. HE WHO VOWS [NOT TO HAVE THE USE OF] THE UPPER STOREY IS PERMITTED [THE USE OF] THE HOUSE.

GEMARA. Which Tanna taught: [And I put a plague of leprosy] in a house [of the land of your possession]:[2] this includes the side-chambers;[3] 'in a house', this includes the upper storey? — R. Hisda said, It is R. Meir's teaching. For if the Rabbis', why require 'in a house' to include the upper storey, since they say that an upper storey is an integral part of the house? Abaye said, it may agree even with the Rabbis, yet a verse is necessary. For you might think, [since] it is written, 'in a house of the land of your possession': that which is [directly] attached to the land[4] is called 'house', but the upper storey, not being attached to the land, [is not called 'house']. With whom does the following dictum of R. Huna b. Hiyya in 'Ulla's name agree? Viz., [If one says,] I sell you a house[5] within my house,' he can offer him an upper storey. Hence it is only because he says, 'I sell you a house within my house';[6] but in the case of 'house' without definition he cannot offer him the upper storey. Shall we say, It agrees with R. Meir? — You may even say, It agrees with the Rabbis: by 'aliyyah, the best[7] of his houses is meant.[8]

MISHNAH. ONE WHO VOWS [ABSTINANCE] FROM A BED IS PERMITTED DARGESH:[9] THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW. BUT THE SAGES SAY: DARGESH IS INCLUDED IN 'BED'. IF HE VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM A DARGESH, HE IS ALLOWED [THE USE OF] A BED.

GEMARA. What is dargesh? — 'Ulla said: A bed reserved for the domestic genius.[10] Said the Rabbis to 'Ulla: But we learnt, When he [sc. the High Priest] was given the mourner's meal,[11] all the people sat on the ground, whilst he reclined on the dargesh. Now, in normal times[12] he does not sit upon it, yet on that day he does! Rabina demurred to this: Let it be analogous to meat and wine, of which at other times[12] he partakes or not, as he pleases, whereas on that day we give them to him?[13] But this is the difficulty. for it was taught: The dargesh was not lowered[14] but stood up [on its legs]. Now if you say that it is the bed of the domestic genius, has it not been taught: He who lowers his bed, lowers not merely his own bed [as mourner], but all the beds of the house? — This is no difficulty:

---

(1) These were quite distinct, often belonging to separate owners; cf. B.M. 116b.

(2) Lev. XIV, 34.

(3) יציע, V. B.B. 61a. So curr edd. Ran and Wilna Gaon emend it to צבוע painted walls, because side chambers are excluded in the Sifra from the laws of leprosy, and the teaching is that even these are subject to the lass of house leprosy. This is necessary, because leprosy in garments only applies to undyed materials. — Neg. XI, 3.

(4) This soil.

(5) [בית may mean either an apartment or a whole house, v. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 247. n. 6.]

(6) 'Apartment'.

(7) מעולה fr. עלה, lit., 'the highest'.

(8) I.e., the purchaser can demand the best of his houses, the phrase in Hebrew בית שבביתי denoting the superlative. But if he simply sold him a בית he could give him an upper storey.

(9) V. Gemara.

(10) I.e., one not put to any use, but to bring good luck to the house.

(11) The first meal eaten by mourners after the funeral was called the סעודת הבראה meal of comfort or restoration, v. Sanh. 20a.

(12) Lit., 'the whole year'.

(13) [On the wine drunk at the house of the mourner, v. Keth. 8a. There is however no law stated anywhere else that meat had to form part of the mourner's meal of comfort. The only reference in Sem. XIV speaks merely of a local custom (cf. Tur Yoreh De'ah, 282). It should however be noted that the parallel passages (Sanh. 20a and M.K. 27a) read: 'Let it be analogous to eating and drinking', and this is also the reading of MS.M. here.]

(14) As is the rule with all other stools and beds in a house of mourning.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 56b

for it may be similar to the trestle[1] reserved for utensils. For it was taught, If there was a trestle reserved for utensils [in the house], he need not lower it. But if there is a difficulty, it is this: For it was taught: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: As for the dargesh, its thongs are untied and it automatically collapses;[2] but if the dargesh is the bed of the domestic genius, has it then thongs? When Rabin came,[3] he said, I consulted one of the scholars named R. Tahlifa b. Tahlifa of the West,[4] who frequented the leather-workers' market, and he told me, What is dargesh.? A leather bed.[5] It has been stated: What is a mittah, and what a dargesh? — R. Jeremiah said, [In] a mittah [a bedstead] the strapwork is drawn on top; a dargesh has the strapwork inside.[6]

An objection is raised: From when are wooden articles ready to receive uncleanliness?[7] A mittah and a cradle from when they are smoothed [by being rubbed] with fish skin.[8] Now if the mittah has its strapwork drawn up on top, why must it be smoothed with fish skin?[9] But both [the mittah and the dargesh] have their strappings drawn inside: a mittah has its straps drawn in and on through slits [in the boards]; those of a dargesh go in and on through loops.

R. Jacob b. Aha said in Rabbi's name: A mittah whose poles[10] protrude [downwards][11] is set up [on its side], and that is sufficient.[12] R. Jacob b. Idi said in R. Joshua b. Levi's name: The halachah is as R. Simeon b. Gamaliel.[13]

MISHNAH. ONE WHO VOWS [NOT TO BENEFIT] FROM A TOWN, MAY ENTER THE TOWN TEHUM:[14] BUT MAY NOT ENTER ITS OUTSKIRTS.[15] BUT ONE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM A HOUSE, IS FORBIDDEN FROM THE DOOR-STOP[16] AND WITHIN.

GEMARA. Whence do we know that the outskirts of a town are as the town itself? — R. Johanan said, Because it is written, and it came to pass, when Joshua was in Jericho etc.[17] Now, what is meant by 'in Jericho'? Shall we say, actually in Jericho: but is it not written. Now Jericho was straitly shut up because of the children of Israel?[18] Hence it must mean in its outskirts.[19] Then say that it means even in the tehum?[20] — But with respect to the tehum it is written, And ye shall measure without the city [in the east side two thousand cubits etc.].[21]

BUT ONE WHO VOWS [ABSTINENCE] FROM A HOUSE IS FORBIDDEN FROM THE DOOR-STOP AND WITHIN. But not from the door-stop and without.[22] R. Mari objected: Then the priest shall go out of the house;[23] I might think that he goes home and then has it probably of the width. To these a cross-piece was attached, the whole forming a frame over which a net or curtain was slung. shut up; therefore it is taught, to the door of the house.[24] If [I had only to go by] 'to the door of the house,' I might think that he stands under the lintel and closes it; therefore, it is written, ['Then the priest shall go] out of the house', implying that he must go right out of it — How so? He must stand at the side of the lintel and close it. Yet how do we know that if he goes home and has it closed, or stands under the lintel and shuts it, that it is validly shut? From the verse, And shut up the house,[25] implying no matter how it be done.[26] — In the case of the [leprous] house it is different, because it is written 'out of the house', implying that he must go right out of the house.

---

(1) מטה mittah, lit., 'bed'; this trestle must have been similar in shape to a bed.

(2) This too refers to a house of mourning.

(3) From Palestine.

(4) The Palestinian.

(5) Its strapping consisted of leather instead of ropes. Not being supported by long legs it stood very low. For this reason it is disputed in the Mishnah whether it is included in bed or not, and also whether it needs lowering during mourning. v.

Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 107, n. 1.
(6) The straps are attached on the inside through slits in the frame.
(7) An article cannot become unclean unless it is completely finished for rise.
(8) To polish the surface, v. Kel. XXI, 1.
(9) By the mittah the bedstead itself, i.e., the framework, is understood. If this framework is always overlaid with straps; why need it he smoothed at all?
(10) נקליטין, two poles fixed at the head and foot of the bedstead, in the centre
(11) I.e., below the level of the bedding to the space underneath.
(12) The reference is to a house of mourning. Such a bed, if actually lowered, may appear to he standing in its usual position, since then the poles protrude upwards.
(13) That the thongs of a dargesh must be untied in a house of mourning.
(14) A distance of two thousand cubits right round the town boundaries.
(15) 70 2/3 cubits from the town borders. The two thousand cubits which is the permitted journey outside the town on the Sabbath, are calculated from the outer edge of these 70 2/3 cubits, v. ‘Er. 52b.
(16) The moulding of the door frame against which the door shuts.
(17) Josh. V, 13.
(18) Ibid. VI, 1.
(19) Which are referred to as the town itself.
(20) Perhaps Joshua was stationed within the tehum of Jericho which is spoken of as ‘in Jericho’.
(21) Num. XXXV. 5.
(22) I.e., the steps or threshold up to the doorstep are permitted.
(23) Lev. XIV, 38. The priest, after inspecting the leprous house for the first time, was to go out and have it sealed up for a week.
(24) Lev. XIV, 38.
(25) Ibid.
(26) Now, when one is outside the lintel, he is also, of course, outside the door-stop: yet he is not regarded here as being right out of the house, thus contradicting the implication of the Mishnah that without the door-stop is not part of the house.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 57a

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS]. ‘KONAM BE THESE FRUITS TO ME, BE THEY KONAM FOR MY MOUTH,’ OR ‘BE THEY KONAM TO MY MOUTH,’ HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM WHAT IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR WHAT GROWS FROM THEM. [IF HE SAYS KONAM] IF I EAT OR TASTE OF THEM, HE IS PERMITTED [TO BENEFIT] FROM WHAT IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR WHAT GROWS OF THEM, [THAT IS] IN A THING OF WHICH THE SEED ITSELF PERISHES: BUT IF THE SEED DOES NOT PERISH,[1] EVEN THAT WHICH GROWS OUT OF THAT WHICH [FIRST] GREW FROM IT IS FORBIDDEN. IF HE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, ‘KONAM BE THE WORK OF YOUR HANDS TO ME,’ .’KONAM BE THEY FOR MY MOUTH, OR ‘KONAM BE THEY TO MY MOUTH’:[2] HE IS FORBIDDEN THAT WHICH IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR GROWN FROM THEM. [IF HE SAID, KONAM] IF I EAT OR TASTE [THEREOF]’. HE IS PERMITTED WHAT IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR WHAT IS GROWN FROM THEM, THAT IS IN A THING OF WHICH PERISHES THE SEED ITSELF, BUT IF THE SEED DOES PERISH, EVEN THAT WHICH GROWS OUT OF THAT WHICH [FIRST] GREW FROM IT IS FORBIDDEN. [IF HE SAYS TO HIS WIFE, ‘KONAM THAT] WHAT YOU WILL PRODUCE I WILL NOT EAT THEREOF UNTIL PASSOVER’ OR ‘THAT WHAT YOU WILL PRODUCE, I WILL NOT WEAR UNTIL PASSOVER’, HE MAY EAT OR WEAR AFTER PASSOVER OF WHAT SHE PRODUCES BEFORE PASSOVER. ‘[THAT] WHAT YOU PRODUCE UNTIL PASSOVER I WILL NOT EAT’, OR ‘[THAT] WHAT YOU PRODUCE UNTIL PASSOVER I WILL NOT WEAR’, HE MAY NOT EAT OR WEAR AFTER PASSOVER WHAT SHE PRODUCES BEFORE PASSOVER.[3] [IF HE SAYS, KONAM] BE ANY BENEFIT YOU HAVE FROM ME UNTIL PASSOVER, IF YOU GO TO YOUR FATHER'S HOUSE UNTIL THE FESTIVAL[4] IF SHE GOES BEFORE PASSOVER SHE MAY NOT BENEFIT FROM HIM UNTIL PASSOVER:

---

(1) E.g., garlic or onions; these, when placed in the soil, do not rot away, but grow so that their growths always contain part of the original.

(2) And she was paid by means of agricultural produce.

(3) The reference is to her earnings in general, which he may not expend on food or clothing.

(4) [הַחַג where unspecified denotes generally the Festival of Succoth, cf. I Kings VIII, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 57b

IF SHE GOES AFTER PASSOVER[1] SHE IS SUBJECT TO, HE SHALL NOT BREAK HIS WORD.[2] ['KONAM] BE ANY BENEFIT YOU HAVE FROM ME UNTIL THE FESTIVAL IF YOU GO TO YOUR FATHER'S HOUSE BEFORE PASSOVER', IF SHE GOES BEFORE PASSOVER, SHE MAY NOT BENEFIT FROM HIM UNTIL THE FESTIVAL, BUT IS PERMITTED TO GO AFTER PASSOVER.

GEMARA. IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS WIFE, 'KONAM BE THE WORK OF YOUR HANDS TO ME,' 'FOR MY MOUTH,' OR 'TO MY MOUTH, etc.' Ishmael, of Kefar yama,[3] — others say, Kefar Dima[4] — propounded[5] the case of an onion that has been pulled up in the seventh year and planted in the eighth, and its growth exceeds the stock. And this is what he asked: The growth is permitted, whilst the stock is forbidden:[6] but since the growth exceeds the stock, the permitted growth comes and annuls what is forbidden;[7] or is it not so?[8] He came before R. Ammi, and he could not solve it. He then went before R. Isaac the smith,[9] who solved it from the following dictum of R. Hanina of Torata[10] in R. Jannai's name: If one plants an onion of terumah, and its increase exceeds the stock, it is [all] permitted.[11] Said R. Jeremiah, others state, R. Zerika, to him, Do you abandon two and follow one? Now who are the two? — [i] R. Abbahu, who said in R. Johanan's name: If a young tree[12] already with fruit is grafted on an old one, even if it multiplies two hundredfold, it [the original fruit] is forbidden.[13] [ii] R. Samuel son of R. Nahmani said in R. Jonathan's name: If an onion is planted in a vineyard and the vineyard is [subsequently] removed, it [the onion] is forbidden.[14]

Then he [Ishmael] again went before R. Ammi, who solved it from the following: For R. Isaac said in R. Johanan's name: If a litra[15] of onions was tithed[16] and then planted, the whole of it must be re-tithed.[17] This proves that the yield nullifies the stock.[18] Perhaps, however, this is different, being in the direction of greater stringency![19] — But [it can be solved] from the following: For it was taught: R. Simeon said:

---

(1) After having enjoyed benefit from him.

(2) Num. XXX, 3.

(3) The former and modern Jabneel near Tiberias. V. Horowitz, Palestine, pp. 322ff.]

(4) In the original the difference is denoted by the single letter.

(5) Lit., 'brought up in his hand'.

(6) The produce of the seventh year, if retained for private use after a certain period, were forbidden for use. V. p. 183, n. 16.

(7) If something forbidden becomes mixed up with something permitted, the latter exceeding the former (the ratio of excess differs: generally it must be sixty times as much), the latter annuls the former, and it is all permitted. Here too, the stock is used with the increase.

(8) Rashi, Tosaf. and Asheri regard the problem as referring only to annulment, but that it is certain that the increase itself is permitted. Ran, however, interprets the problem as relating to the increase: either it is permitted, in which case it also annuls the stock, or all is forbidden since it grew from prohibited stock.

(9) The Rabbinate being unpaid (cf. infra 37a), many Rabbis were tradesmen or workers. E.g., Hillel was a woodcutter before he became nasi; R. Joshua was a charcoal maker, and there was a R. Johanan who was a sandal maker.

(10) This is the conjectured meaning of תריתאה otherwise תורתייה.

(11) To a lay Israelite. So likewise in our problem.

(12) I.e., less than three years old, the fruit of which, called 'orlah, is forbidden.

(13) Though elsewhere 'orlah is nullified by such an increase.

(14) For when growing there together, they were 'forbidden mixture', (Deut. XXII, 9) and hence the onion was forbidden. Though the vines were removed, and the further growth of the onion permitted, yet the original remains forbidden. (Ran.: yet it is all, including the increase, forbidden). Both these statements are opposed to the first in R. Jannai's name.

(15) , the Roman Libra, a pound.

(16) I.e., all the priestly dues were separated from it.

(17) I.e., both the stock and the increase.

(18) Though the stock had been tithed once, the whole must he re-tithed, the original being assimilated to the increase.

(19) I.e., whereby assimilating the original to the increase the law is more stringent, it is so assimilated. But the problem is whether the original is regarded as nullified though thereby a prohibition is raised.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 58a

For everything [forbidden] which can become permitted, e .g., tebel,[1] second tithe,[2] hekdesh,[3] and hadash,[4] the Sages declared no limit.[5] But for everything which cannot become permitted. e.g., terumah, the terumah of the tithe,[6] hallah,[7] 'orlah,[8] and kil'ayim of the vineyard,[9] the Sages declared a limit.[10] Said they to him, But seventh year produce cannot become permitted, yet the Sages set no limit to it. For we learnt: Seventh year produce of no matter what quality renders its own kind forbidden![11] He replied, my[12] ruling too is only in respect of removal; but as for eating, [it renders it forbidden] only if sufficient to impart its taste thereto.[13] But perhaps this too is different, since [the nullification] is in the direction of greater stringency. But solve it from the following: We learnt: Onions [of the sixth year] upon which rain fell, and which grew [in the seventh], — if the leaves are blackish, they are forbidden; if greenish, they are permitted.[14] R. Hanina b. Antigonus said: If they can be pulled up by their leaves, they are forbidden.[15] Conversely, on the termination of the seventh year they are permitted.[16] This proves that the increase, which is permitted, nullifies that which is forbidden.[17] But perhaps it refers to crushed [onions]?[18] — But [it may be solved] from the following. For it was taught:

---

(1) V. Glos. This is forbidden for use, 'but becomes permitted oil payment of the priestly dues.

(2) A tithe which had to be eaten in Jerusalem, but forbidden elsewhere. It could, however, be redeemed, by allocating its value, plus a fifth, to he expended in Jerusalem, after which it might be enjoyed anywhere.

(3) Anything dedicated to the Temple which cannot be offered as sacrifice may be put to secular use after it is redeemed.

(4) Lit., 'new'. The new crops which are forbidden until the offering of the 'Omer, v. Lev. XXIII, 10-14.

(5) If these are mixed up with permitted food, the Sages do not rule that if the latter exceeds the former by a certain ratio the whole is permitted, as in the next clause. The reason is, since it is possible to cancel the prohibition in itself, there is no need to have recourse to nullification through excess.

(6) Of the tithe which the Levite received from the Israelite, he had to give one tenth to the priest.

(7) V. Glos. The last three are forbidden to a lay Israelite, and the prohibition itself cannot be cancelled.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) V. Glos.

(10) If these became mixed with other permitted substances, the latter nullifies them, providing they exceed them by certain fixed amounts.

(11) If mixed with other produce of the same kind, not of the seventh year, the latter is forbidden.

(12) So cur. edd., also Rashi and Asheri. Ran.: their ruling, which is more suitable to the context.

(13) The seventh year produce might he kept by its owner for his personal use only as long as like produce is still growing in the fields, and available to wild beasts. Once the produce has ceased from the fields the gathered species of the same produce must be 'removed'. That time, the exact limits of which are given in Sheb. IX. 2 et seqq. is called the time of removal. Now R. Simeon answers the difficulty thus: If seventh year produce, of no matter what quality, is mixed with other produce before the time of removal, it all becomes as the former, and must be eaten before the time of removal. For, since it is permitted until then, there is no need to have recourse to nullification by excess. But if after the time of removal (and this has not been removed, so that it may not be eaten). He permitted produce is forbidden only if there is sufficient of the prohibited to impart its taste to the whole mixture. Of course, where they are both of the same kind, this is strictly speaking impossible, but it is calculated on the basis of two different kinds. Now what has been said with respect of a mixture of two lots of produce, seventh year and non-seventh year, also applies to a single plant which is partly seventh and partly non-seventh year produce. E.g., if a sixth year onion is planted and grows no matter how slightly in the seventh, the addition, even if but the smallest fraction of the original, renders the whole as seventh year produce, which is subject to the law of removal. This we see that the increase, though grown out of that which is permitted, is reckoned as distinct from the original, and can render it forbidden. Hence, contrariwise, if the increase is permitted and of sufficient quantity, it can nullify the prohibition attaching to the original.

(14) Whilst the onion is growing naturally from the soil, its leaves have a blackish tint. But sometimes, after its natural growth has ceased, the rain inflates it, giving it a sort of over-ripeness. Then its leaves bear a greenish and faded appearance. Hence in this case, if the leaves are blackish, it is a sign that the onion has naturally grown in the seventh year, and therefore the addition renders it all forbidden, i.e. 'imposes upon the whole the law of seventh year produce. But if they are greenish, it has grown of itself, and hence permitted.

(15) Even if the leaves are not blackish, yet if they are strong enough for the whole onion to be pulled up by them without their breaking off, it is a sign if normal growth, and so forbidden.

(16) If seventh year onions were left in the soil and grew in the eighth, if the leaves go blackish, it is a sign of natural growth in the eighth, and therefore the whole onion is permitted. — Asheri observes that the two cases are not exactly similar. For the sixth year onion is

(17) And this solves the problem.

(18) I.e., if the onions were crushed and grated, so that the forbidden part no longer preserves its separate identity; in that case it is nullified by excess. But the problem arises only if the onion is intact.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 58b

If [a workman] is engaged in weeding leek plants[1] for a Cuthean,[2] he may make a light meal of them and must separate the tithes from them as certain.[3] R. Simeon b. Eleazar said: If [the labourer is employed by] an Israelite suspected of violating the laws of the seventh year,[4] he may make a light meal thereof [if working] in the eighth year.[5] This proves that the growth, which is permitted, nullifies [the original stock], which is rendered forbidden even by a slight increase in the seventh, whereas he seventh under the same conditions is rendered permitted only by an increase in the eighth at least greater than the original. Nevertheless, the general principle, that blackishness of the leaves indicates natural growth, is the same in both. forbidden. But perhaps it refers to a plant whose seed perishes [in the soil]? — But it is taught: The following are leek plants: The lof,[6] garlic and onions.[7] But Perhaps it refers to crushed plants?[8] — This teaches of one who is suspected of violating the Sabbatical year.[9] But perhaps it refers to a mixture?[10] — This teaches of one who is engaged in weeding.[11] Now, shall we say that this refutes R. Johanan and R. Jonathan?[12] — Said R. Isaac: The Sabbatical year produce is different; since the interdict is through the soil,[13] its nullification too is through the soil.[14] But the prohibition of the tithe is likewise through the soil,[15] yet it is not nullified by the soil. For it was taught: If a litra of tithe, itself tebel,[16] is sown in the soil and it improves [i.e.. increases], and is the equivalent of ten litras, it [sc. the whole] is liable to tithe[17] and [is subject to the laws of] the Sabbatical year,[18] whilst as for the [original] litra, a tithe thereof must be seperated from elsewhere,[19] according to calculation.[20]

---

(1) The Talmud explains below what this is.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) If he wishes to make of them a regular meal. The obligation of tithing vegetables is Rabbinical only, not Biblical. When crops are tithed, and then resown, the new produce is again liable to the priestly dues. Nevertheless, a labourer engaged in working on crops may make a light meal of them. If, however, the crops originally sown were tebel (v. Glos.)

one may not even make a light meal of their produce whilst working on them. Now, this Baraitha is to some extent self-contradictory, but in reality represents a compromise. Thus, the Cutheans disregarded their tithe obligations. Consequently, it must be assumed with certainty that they have not set aside the tithes from their produce, of which no regular meal may be made without tithing. This is not regarded as a doubtful tithe, viz. , that it is not known whether the Cuthean fulfilled his obligations or not, but as a certain tithe. Yet since the entire obligation is Rabbinical only, the Rabbis did not carry through this assumption to its extreme logical conclusion and forbid a labourer engaged thereon to enjoy even a snack, but permitted it, as ordinary tithed plants which are resown. This leniency is based on another possible assumption, viz., only if crops are taken in through the front of the house they are tebel in the sense that one may not even make a light meal thereof before the priestly dues are rendered. Here it is possible that these crops were never thus taken in (Tosaf.).

(4) I.e., that he planted them in the seventh year.

(5) Lit., 'the termination of the Sabbatical year'. Though the original is forbidden as seventh year produce, the increase nullifies it, and hence it is permitted to the labourer.

(6) A plant similar to colocasin, with edible leaves and roots, and bearing beans; and it is classified with onions and garlic (Jast.).

(7) Thus proving that it applies even to those plants whose original stock remain.

(8) The crushing obliterates the original stock.

(9) He would not trouble to crush it in order to evade the prohibition.

(10) I.e., the labourer may eat it only when it is mixed up with other plants, the excess of which nullifies the original forbidden stock.

(11) The labourer may eat while engaged in the act of weeding, though there is no mixture. Thus this definitely proves that the increase nullifies the original.

(12) V. supra 57b.

(13) Lev. XXV, 2: Then the land shall feet a sabbath unto the Lord

(14) But 'orlah is prohibited through immaturity, and 'diverse seeds' (kil'ayim) through mixture.

(15) I.e., by replanting. For if one sows tithed grains the produce in tebel: thus, by putting it into soil, it becomes prohibited.

(16) I.e., the tithe of which had not been given, v. p. 183, n. 9.

(17) Although itself a tithe, the ordinary law of tebel applies to it, and it must be retithed (and terumah too must be given).

(18) If it grew in that year.

(19) I.e., a tithe — the terumah of the tithe due in the first place — must be given to the priest. This tithe must not be taken out of the resultant crop, but from the previous year's, of which the litra was part, because one must not tithe one year's grain with another's.

(20) This proves that the forbidden nature of the untithed tithe remains, in spite of the fact that it was sown in the soil.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 59a

— I will tell you: The tithe obligation is caused by the storing up [of the grain].[1] Rami b. Hama objected: [If a man says,] 'KONAM BE THESE FRUITS TO ME, 'BE THEY KONAM FOR MY MOUTH, OR 'BE THEY KONAM TO MY MOUTH,' HE IS FORBIDDEN [TO BENEFIT] FROM WHAT IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR WHAT GROWS FROM THEM. [IF HE SAYS, 'KONAM] IF I EAT OR TASTE OF THEM,' HE IS PERMITTED [TO BENEFIT] FROM WHAT IS EXCHANGED FOR THEM OR WHAT GROWS OF THEM, [THAT IS] IN A THING OF WHICH THE SEED ITSELF PERISHES; BUT IF THE SEED DOES NOT PERISH, EVEN THAT WHICH GROWS OF THAT WHICH [FIRST] GREW FROM IT IS FORBIDDEN![2] — Said R. Abba: Vows[3] are different: since if he wishes he can demand absolution from tithes, they are as [forbidden] things that may become permitted and [hence] are not nullified by excess.[4] But with terumah likewise he may, if he wishes, demand absolution from it,[5] and yet it can be nullified?[6] For we learnt : If a se'ah[7] of unclean terumah falls into less than a hundred of hullin it must [all] rot.[8] [This implies. but if it falls] into a hundred [se'ahs of hullin], it is nullified? — I will tell you: This refers to terumah in the priest's hands, in regard to which he can demand no absolution.[9] If so, consider the second clause: If it was undefiled, it should [all] be sold to a priest.[10] But this refers to [terumah in the hands of] an Israelite, who inherited it from his maternal grandfathers a priest.[11] But the second clause teaches, It must be sold to a priests save for the value of that se'ah?[12] — But answer thus: As for vows, it is well, since it is meritorious to seek absolution from them on account of R. Nathan's dictum, Viz., He who vows, is as though he built a high place; and he who fulfils it, is as though he burned incense thereon. But what merit is there in seeking absolution from terumah.?[13]

The text [above] states: 'R. Johanan said: If a litra of onions was tithed and then planted, the whole of it must be retithed'. Now Rabbah[14] was sitting and stating this law, whereupon R. Hisda said to him: Who will obey you and R. Johanan your teacher: whither has the permitted portion in them departed? He replied: But did we not learn something similar? Viz., 'Onions [of the sixth year] upon which rain fell, and which grew [in the seventh], —

---

(1) Until the grain is harvested and actually piled up in a stack, there is no obligation for the priestly dues. Thus it is not an obligation caused by the soil.

(2) This proves that the increase does not nullify the original, thus refuting R. Ammi's view.

(3) Konamoth, Lit., 'Vows expressed by Konam'.

(4) V. p. 183, n. 8.

(5) If one declares certain grain terumah in error, he can have this declaration nullified, and the grain reverts to its former state.

(6) Cur. edd. add 'by mere excess'. Wilna Gaon deletes this, since mere excess is insufficient, a hundred times its quantity being required.

(7) V. Glos.

(8) Unclean terumah may not he eaten by anyone, and therefore nothing can be done with the mixture.

(9) The Israelite who declares it terumah can have his declaration nullified only before it reaches the hands of the priest but not after.

(10) Obviously then it was still in the hands of an Israelite.

(11) Thus it had already belonged to a priest, and cannot be revoked.

(12) Which belongs to the priest as terumah. But under the circumstances here posited, even that se'ah too belongs to the Israelite.

(13) Therefore something prohibited by a vow is treated as that which can become permitted, since it ought to be revoked; but this does not apply to terumah.

(14) Var. lec.: Raba.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 59b

if the leaves are blackish, they are forbidden; if greenish, they are permitted.'[1] But even if blackish, why are they forbidden? Let us say, whither has the permitted portion in them departed? — He replied: Do you think that it refers to the original stock? [Only] with respect to the increase is it taught. They are forbidden. If so, what does R. Simeon b. Gamaliel come to teach? For it was taught [thereon:] R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: That which grew under the obligation [of removal][2] is under that obligation: that which grew in a state of exemption is exempt. Surely the first Tanna too says thus? — The whole Mishnah is stated by R. Simeon h. Gamaliel.[3] Yet you learn R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's view [to be thus] only where he took no trouble;[4] but where one takes trouble,[5] it [the stock] is nullified by the excess [of the increase].[6] Now, where one takes trouble, is it nullified by the excess? But what of the case of the litra of tithe, itself !ebel, where he took trouble, yet it is taught, 'whilst as for the original litra, a tithe thereof must he separated from elsewhere according to calculation'?[7] — The tithe is different, because Scripture saith, Thou shalt surely tithe all the increase of thy sowing.'[8] and people sow what is permitted, but do not sow what is forbidden.[9]

The text [above states:] 'R. Hanina of Torata said in R. Jannai's name: If one plants an onion of terumah, and its increase exceeds the stock, it is [all] permitted.' Shall we say that the permitted increase

(1) V. 58a.

(2) Viz., in the Sabbatical year.

(3) The second clause is merely stating a reason for the ruling in the first.

(4) As in this case, the sixth year onions having been left in the earth during the seventh year.

(5) Where he plants the onions.

(6) This is Rabbah's remark: though it would appear that R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's view is opposed to his, in reality it is not.

(7) V. supra 58b.

(8) Deut. XIV, 22.

(9) U.e., we oblige him to give terumah on the original tithe, since he did wrong in sowing it without rendering the terumah. It is thus in the nature of a fine, that he should not profit by his neglect. But normally the original stock is nullified, when lahour is required to produce the excess.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 60a nullifies the forbidden [stock]? But we learnt: What grows from terumah is [likewise] terumah? — He [R. Haninah] refers to the second growth.[1] But we learnt this too: The second growth [of terumah] is hullin.?[2] — He teaches us this: (this is so] even where the stock does not perish in the earth. But we learnt: The growth of tebel is permitted in the case where the seed thereof [which is tebel] perishes [in the earth], but if it does not perish, [even] its second growth is forbidden! — He teaches us [that the second growth is permitted] when it exceeds the original.[3]

CHAPTER VIII

MISHNAH. [IF ONE VOWS,] 'KONAM, IF I TASTE WINE TO-DAY, HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY UNTIL IT GETS DARK; [IF HE SAYS] 'THIS SABBATH,'[4] HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE WEEK AND THE SABBATH BELONGS TO THE PAST;[5] 'THIS MONTH,' HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE OF THAT MONTH, BUT THE BEGINNING OF THE [FOLLOWING] MONTH BELONGS TO THE FUTURE;[6] 'THIS YEAR,' HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE YEAR, WHIlst THE BEGINNING OF THE [FOLLOWING] YEAR BELONGS TO THE FUTURE; THIS SEPTENNATE,'[7] HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE OF THAT SEPTENNATE, AND THE [FOLLOWING] SABBATICAL YEAR BELONGS TO THE PAST.[8] BUT IF HE SAYS, 'ONE DAY,' 'ONE SABBATH,' 'ONE MONTH,' 'ONE YEAR,' [OR] 'ONE SEPTENNATE,' HE IS FORBIDDEN FROM DAY TO DAY.[9] [IF ONE VOWS,] 'UNTIL PASSOVER, HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL IT ARRIVES; 'UNTIL IT BE' [PASSOVER], HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL IT GOES;[10] 'UNTIL PENE[11] PASSOVER,' R. MEIR SAID: HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL IT ARRIVES; R. JOSE SAID: UNTIL IT GOES.

GEMARA. 'KONAM, IF I TASTE WINE' etc. R. Jeremiah[12] said: At nightfall he must obtain absolution iron, a Sage.[13] What is the reason? — R. Joseph said: 'To-day' is forbidden as a precautionary measure on account of 'one day'[14]

(1) I.e., an onion of terumah having been planted and its yield replanted, the second crop is permitted, but the first is terumah.

(2) Then what does R. Hanina teach?

(3) Whilst the Mishnah stating that it is forbidden holds good only if the growth does not exceed the original.

(4) 'Sabbath' denotes both the Sabbath day and a calendar week.

(5) I.e., the Sabbath following his vow, belongs to the current week, not the following.

(6) And hence permitted

(7) I.e., the seven-year cycle.

(8) I.e., it ends the Septennate in which the vow was made, and hence is included. An alternate rendering of the whole passage is this: 'This Sabbath' (that is the actual word of the Mishnah; v. n. I): e.g., if one vows on the Sabbath day, the whole week is forbidden, and the Sabbath of the past week too, i.e., the day of his vow, though belonging to the past week, while the vow obviously refers to the coming one, is nevertheless included. 'This month', e.g., if he vows on new moon (Rosh hodesh), the whole of the following month is forbidden, and the new moon itself is also accounted to the next month. 'This year', i.e., if one vows on new year's day, the whole of the year is forbidden, including that day, which belongs to the future. 'This septennate', i.e., if one vows in the Sabbatical year, the following septennate is forbidden, and the Sabbatical year itself in which he vows, though really belonging to the past Septennate. — On this interpretation, if a vow is made on the Sabbath, New Moon, New Year's day or in a Sabbatical year, for a Sabbath (i.e., calendar week), month, year, or septennate respectively, the day itself on which the vow is made, and in the last case, the Sabbatical year itself, are forbidden. The different phraseology used to indicate this, reference being made to the future in two cases and to the past in two others, intimates the law, if one vows in the middle of the week, etc. Thus, if in the middle of the week or septennate, the following Sabbath

(9) I.e., a day of twenty-four hours; likewise a month of thirty days, a year of twelve months, and a septennate of seven years.

(10) I.e., the future tense is regarded as future perfect.

(11) [Var. lec.: lifene. Either word may denote (a) the turn of; (b) the face of; (c) until before.]

(12) Asheri in his 'Pesakim' reads: R. Jeremiah b. Abba.

(13) But the vow is not lifted automatically.

(14) If when one vows 'to-day', he is told that the vow' automatically ends at nightfall, he may think the same of 'one day', which binds him, however, twenty-four hours.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 60b

Said Abaye to him: If so, let 'One day' be forbidden on account of 'to-day'?[1] — He replied: 'To-day' may be mistaken for 'one day', but 'one day' cannot be mistaken for 'to-day'.[2]

Rabina said: Meremar told me: Thus said your father in R. Joseph's name: With whom does this statement of R. Jeremiah b. Abba agree? With R. Nathan. For it was taught: R. Nathan said: Whoever vows is as though he built a high place, and who fulfils it, is as though he burnt incense thereon.[3] and Sabbatical year are forbidden; in the middle of the month or year, the following New Moon or New Year's day are permitted. Ran, Asheri and Tosaf. prefer the former interpretation: Rashi the latter.

THIS SABBATH, HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE WEEK [AND THE SABBATH BELONGS TO THE PAST]. This is obvious? — I might think that he meant the [week] days of the Sabbath:[4] we are therefore taught [otherwise].

'THIS MONTH,' HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE OF THAT MONTH, BUT THE BEGINNING OF THE [FOLLOWING] MONTH BELONGS TO THE FUTURE. This is obvious? — It is necessary only when the [following] Month is defective: I might think that the new Moon belongs to the past, and is forbidden: it is therefore intimated that people call it new moon.[5]

'THIS YEAR,' HE IS FORBIDDEN THE WHOLE YEAR. The scholars propounded: What if one vows, 'Konam, if I taste wine a day'? is its law as 'to-day' or 'one day'? — Come and hear [a solution] from our Mishnah. 'KONAM, IF I TASTE WINE TO DAY HE IS FORBIDDEN WINE ONLY UNTIL IT GETS DARK; hence 'a day' is as 'one day'! Then consider the second clause: IF HE SAYS, 'ONE DAY,' HE IS FORBIDDEN FROM DAY TO DAY: hence a day' is as 'to-day'?[6] Thus nothing can be deduced from this.

R. Ashi said, Come and hear: 'Konam, if I taste wine this year,'[7] if the year was intercalated, he is forbidden for the year and the extra month. How is this meant?

---

(1) I.e., if he vows 'one day', let him be forbidden until the nightfall of the following day. Otherwise, if he terminates his vow in the middle of the day, twenty-four hours after its commencement, he may think that had he stated 'today', he could likewise end it in the middle of the day of his vow.

(2) I.e , if he vows 'one day', he may think that it ends at nightfall, just as 'to-day'; but if he vows 'to-day', he cannot possibly think that it ends before the nightfall of the same day, since in 'one day' the vow lasts beyond nightfall and includes part of the following day too.

(3) I.e., because one does wrong in vowing at all, he is treated stringently and ordered to obtain absolution for his vow when it should lapse automatically. In Rashi's opinion, this conflicts with the reason given by R. Joseph. But Asheri regards it as complementary thereto: whilst accepting the reasoning, he regards the fear of mistaking 'to-day' for 'one day' as insufficient in itself to justify this precautionary measure: hence he adds the reason drawn from R. Nathan's dictum.

(4) The Sabbath being a day of delight, it might be assumed that he never intended to deny himself wine on that day, since week-days too are implied in that term.

(5) The months of the Jewish year consist of either twenty-nine or thirty days and generally alternate. Hence, if the following month is detective (i.e., of twenty-nine days), this one is full. In the month following a full one, the first two days are designated 'new moon', the first being really the thirtieth day of the past full month. Hence, if one vowed in a full month, it might be thought that he is bound on the first new moon day of the next. Therefore the Mishnah teaches that since it is called new moon, People generally regard it as part of the next month, and hence he is permitted thereon. — This is the reading of Asheri, Ran and Tosaf. But our editions, and Rashi too. have: I might think that the new moon belongs to the past, and should not be forbidden. This reading cannot be reconciled with the first interpretation of the Mishnah, but agrees with the second (q.v. p. 190, n. 5). If he vowed 'this month' on the first new moon day, I might think that since it actually belongs to the past month he is not forbidden thereon. Therefore it is taught that since it is designated new moon, he must have meant to include it.

(6) In Heb. 'one' is expressed by אחד, but the indef. 'a' is unexpressed, lit., 'day', and hence the problem, and the differentiation between 'a day' and one day'.

(7) Lit., 'the year'.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 61a

Shall we say, [literally,] as taught? [Then] why state it?[1] Hence it must surely mean that he vowed 'a year':[2] this proves that 'a year' is as 'this year', and [consequently], 'a day' as 'to-day'! — No! In truth, it means that he vowed, 'this year'; yet I might think that the majority of years should be followed, which have no intercalated months;[3] therefore we are taught [otherwise].

The scholars propounded: What if one vows, 'Konam, if I taste wine a Jubilee':[4] Is the fiftieth year [counted] as before the fiftieth or as after?[5] Come and hear: For a conflict of R. Judah and the Rabbis has been taught: And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year:[6] you must count it as the fiftieth year, but not as the fiftieth and as the first year [of the following jubilee].[7] Hence they [the Sages] said: The Jubilee is not part of the [following] septennate. R. Judah maintained: The Jubilee is counted as part of the septennate. Said they to R. Judah, But Scripture saith, six years shalt thou sow thy field,[8] whereas here there are only five![9] He replied: But on your view, Surely it is said, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.'[10] whereas here there are four![11] But it can be referred to other Sabbatical years; hence mine too[12] must be thus explained.

'UNTIL PASSOVER', HE IS FORBIDDEN etc. Shall we say that R. Meir holds that a man does not place himself.

---

(1) It is obvious, since the addition is an integral part of the year.

(2) Only then is it necessary to state that the addition is forbidden him, i.e., 'a year' is as 'this year': for if it implied 'one year', he should be forbidden exactly twelve months.

(3) Hence the intercalated month is permitted.

(4) Ran observes that since the former problem is left unsolved, a day' would be the equivalent of 'one day' (since when in doubt the more stringent interpretation is adopted), and consequently a jubilee as one jubilee, and the problem cannot arise. Therefore he must have vowed 'this (the) jubilee'.

(5) On the former supposition it is forbidden; on the latter it is permitted.

(6) Lev. XXV, 10.

(7) I.e., that year is the fiftieth, the jubilee, and it cannot be counted also as the first of the following fifty and seven year. cycles.

(8) Ibid. 3.

(9) Since there is no sowing in the jubilee year.

(10) Ibid. 21.

(11) The forty-eighth year produce must suffice for itself, the forty-ninth, which is a Sabbatical year, the fiftieth, which is Jubilee, and until the harvesting of the fifty-first. This is a difficulty on any view, R. Judah's included: he posits it merely to prove that the Biblical statements about the Sabbatical year do not in any case apply to the Jubilee period, even on the view of the Rabbis.

(12) I.e., the verse by which you desire to refute me.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 61b

in a doubtful position, whilst R. Jose maintains that he does place himself in a doubtful position?[1] But the following contradicts it: If a man has two groups of daughters by two wives, and he declares, 'I have given one of my elder daughters in betrothal,[2] but do not know whether it was the eldest of the senior[3] group or of the junior group, or the youngest of the senior group, who is older than the eldest of the junior group': they are all forbidden,[4] except the youngest of the junior group:[5] this is R. Meir's view. R. Jose said: They are all permitted except the eldest of the senior group.[6] — Said R. Hanina b. Abdimi in Rab's name: The passage must be reversed.[7] And it was taught [even so]: This is a general principle: That which has a fixed time, and one vows, until the turn [pene] thereof, — R. Meir said: It means, until it goes; R. Jose maintained: Until it arrives.

MISHNAH. [IF HE VOWS,] 'UNTIL THE HARVEST, 'UNTIL THE VINTAGE, OR, UNTIL THE OLIVE HARVEST,' HE IS FORBIDDEN (ONLY UNTIL IT ARRIVES. THIS IS A GENERAL RULE WHATEVER HAS A FIXED TIME AND ONE VOWS, 'UNTIL IT ARRIVES, HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL IT ARRIVES; IF HE DECLARES, 'UNTIL IT BE', HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL IT GOES. BUT WHATEVER HAS NO FIXED TIME, WHETHER ONE VOWS, 'UNTIL IT BE,' OR 'UNTIL IT ARRIVES,' HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY UNTIL IT ARRIVES. [IF HE SAYS,] 'UNTIL THE SUMMER [HARVEST],'[8] OR, 'UNTIL THE SUMMER [HARVEST] SHALL BE,' [HE IS FORBIDDEN] UNTIL PEOPLE BEGIN TO BRING [THE FIGS] HOME IN BASKETS;' UNTIL THE SUMMER [HARVEST] IS PAST,' [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE KNIVES[9] ARE FOLDED UP [AND LAID AWAY].[10]

GEMARA. A tanna taught: The basket referred to is the basket of figs, not of grapes.[11] It was taught: He who vows [abstinence] from summer fruits, is forbidden only figs. R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: Grapes are include din figs.[12] What is the reason of the first Tanna? He holds that figs are plucked off by hand, whilst grapes are not plucked off by hand;[13] whereas R. Simeon b. Gamaliel maintains, Grapes too are plucked off by hand when quite ripe.[14]

UNTIL THE SUMMER [HARVEST] IS PAST,' [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE KNIVES ARE FOLDED UP [AND LAID AWAY]. A Tanna taught: Until most of the knives have been put away.

---

(1) The expression until pene — or lifene — is a doubtful one. v. supra p. 191. n. 3. R. Meir, on this hypothesis, holds that when one vows he intends his words to hear only that meaning which can with certainty be attributed to them, not desiring to be in a position of doubt; while R. Jose controverts it.

(2) A father could betroth his daughter, if a minor, even without her knowledge; though v. Kid. 41a.
(3) I.e., by his first wife.
(4) Both to the groom, since they may be sisters of the betrothed, and to others, being possibly betrothed themselves.
(5) Who is permitted to strangers, since she is definitely not 'the elder'.
(6) This shews that in R. Meir's view one intends his words or actions to bear even a meaning which can be attributed to it only with doubt, and R. Jose holds the opposite.
(7) I.e., the authorities of our Mishnah.
(8) The time for this is not fixed.
(9) Used for cutting off the figs from the tree.
(10) Other meanings: until the figs are arranged in layers; until the matting, on which the gigs are dried, is folded up.
(11) I.e., he is forbidden only until the figs are brought in in baskets, not the grapes, which are gathered in slightly later.
(12) I.e., in summer fruits.
(13) קַיִץ, the Heb. for summer (fruits), denotes the gathering or plucking (of the fruits). But as grapes are cut off from the vine with a pruning knife, the term is inapplicable in their case.
(14) Lit., 'when about to be detached' (from the tree). Asheri. [Rashi: 'overripe'. Jast: 'when their stems are thin', cf. Ran.]

A Tanna taught: If most of the knives have been put away, they [the remaining figs] are permitted [to strangers] as far as theft is concerned, and are exempt from tithes.[1]

Rabbi and R. Jose son of K. Judah came to a certain place when most of the knives had been folded. Rabbi ate;[2] R. Jose son of R. Judah did not. Their owner came and said to them, 'Why do the Rabbis not eat? most of the knives have been folded!' Nevertheless R. Jose son of R. Judah did not eat, believing that the man had spoken [sarcastically] in a grudging spirit.

R. Mama son of R. Hanina came to a place when most of the knives had been folded. He ate; but [when] he offered [some] to his attendant, he would not eat. 'Eat,' said he; 'thus did R. Ishmael son of R. Jose tell me on his father's authority: When most of the knives have been folded, they [the remaining figs] are permitted [to strangers] as far as theft is concerned 'and are exempt from tithes'.

R. Tarfon was found by a man eating [of the figs] when most of the knives had been folded, [whereupon] he threw him into a sack and carried him, to cast him in the river. 'Woe to Tarfon,' he cried out, 'whom this man is about to murder!' When the man heard this,[3] he abandoned him and fled. R. Abbahu said on the authority of R. Hananiah b. Gamaliel: All his lifetime that pious man grieved over this, saying. 'Woe is me that I made [profane] use of the crown of the Torah!'[4] For Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in R. Johanan's name: Whoever puts the crown of the Torah to [profane] use, is uprooted from the world.[5] This follows a fortiori. If Belshazzar, who used the holy vessels which had become profaned, as it is written, For the robbers shall enter into it, and profane it:[6] [teaching], since they had broken in, they were profaned; yet he was uprooted from the world, as it is written, In that night was Belshazzar slain:[7] how much more so he who makes [profane] use of the crown of the Torah, which endureth for ever!

Now since R. Tarfon ate when most of the knives were folded, why did that man ill-treat him? — Because someone had been stealing his grapes all the year round, and when he found R. Tarfon, he thought that it was he. If so, why was he grieved [at revealing his identity]?[8] — Because R. Tarfon, being very wealthy, should have pacified him with money.[9]

It was taught: That thou mayest love the Lord thy God and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him:[10] [This means] that one should not say, I will read Scripture that I may be called a Sage.' I will study, that I may be called Rabbi, I will study,[11] to be an Elder, and sit in the assembly [of elders];[12] but learn out of love, and honour will come in the end, as it is written, Bind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart,'[13] and it is also said, Her ways are ways of pleasantness;[14] also, She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her: and happy is everyone that retaineth her.[15]

R. Eliezer son of R. Zadok said: Do [good] deeds for the sake of their Maker,[16] and speak of them[17] for their own sake. Make not of them a crown wherewith to magnify thyself, nor a spade to dig with.[18] And this follows a fortiori. If Belshazzar, who merely used the holy vessels which had been profaned, was driven from the world; how much more so one who makes use of the crown of the Torah!

Raba said: A man may reveal his identity where he is unknown, as it is said, but I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth.[19] But as for the difficulty of R. Tarfon,[20] — he was very wealthy, and should have pacified him with money.

Raba opposed [two verses]: It is written, But I thy servant fear the Lord for in my mouth,' whilst it is also written, Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth?[21] One refers to a place where he is known; the other, to where he is unknown.

Raba said: A rabbinical scholar may assert, I am a rabbinical scholar; let my business receive first attention;[22] as it is written, And David's sons were priests,'[23] just as a priest receives [his portion] first, So does the scholar too. And whence do we know this of a priest? — Because it is written, Thou shalt sanctify him therefore, for he offereth the bread of thy God:[24] whereon the School of R. Ishmael taught: 'Thou shalt sanctify him' — in all matters pertaining to holiness:

---

(1) Because once the knives are put away, the owner has, in effect, shewn that the remaining figs are unwanted by him and free to all, i.e., hefker, from which there are no priestly dues; cf. p. 139, n.2.

(2) Of the figs left on the fields.

(3) That he was R. Tarfon.

(4) I.e., over saving his life by revealing his identity.

(5) This is in accordance with the general view held that one should derive no benefit whatsoever from the Torah. Cf supra 37a and Aboth, IV,5. (Sonc. ed.) p. 47, n. 3.

(6) Ezek. VII, 22.

(7) Dan. V, 30.

(8) His grief would have been justified had the keeper been angry on account of R. Tarfon's action alone: For instead of saving himself by disclosing his name, he should have told him the law on the subject and offered to pay for what he had eaten, but if he was mistaken for an habitual thief, what else could he have done: should he have offered to make good the depredations of the whole year!

(9) Precisely so.

(10) Deut. XXX, 20.

(11) [So Bah. cur. edd.: אשנן 'I will teach.' I.e. he teaches others, so that his fame may spread and he may obtain a seat in the Academy.]

(12) 'Elder' may simply mean scholar (cf. Kid. 32b), or more exactly a member of the Sanhedrin; cf. Joseph. Ant. XII, 111, p. 3.

(13) Prov. VII, 3: i.e., make it an integral part of thyself, not as something outside thee, cherished only for its worldly advantages.

(14) Ibid. III, 17.

(15) Ibid. 18: this is quoted to shew that honour comes eventually.

(16) I.e., God Who decreed them (Ran.). [Or. 'the performance of them', i.e., for the sake of doing good (Bahja Ibn Pakuda, Duties of the Heart, Introduction.]

(17) VIz., the words of the Torah.

(18) In I Sam. XIII, 20. and Ps. LXXIV, 5, kardom means an axe. Possibly it was a two-sided tool, one side serving as a spade and the other as an axe.

(19) I Kings XVIII, 12

(20) V. supra.

(21) Prov. XXVII, 2.

(22) Lit., 'dismiss my case first'. E g., in a shop or market place. cf. the story in Kid. 70a.

(23) II Sam. VIII, 18. They were not priests, of course; hence the verse means that as scholars they were entitled to certain priestly privileges.

(24) Lev. XXI, 8.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 62b

to be the first to commence [the reading of the Law],[1] the first to pronounce the blessing,[2] and first to receive a good portion.[3]

Raba said: A rabbinical scholar may declare, I will not pay poll-tax, for it is written, [also we certify to you, that touching any of the priests . . . or ministers of this house of God,] it shall not be lawful to impose mindah [tribute,] belo [custom,] or halak [toll,] upon them:[4] whereon Rab Judah said: ‘mindah’ is the king's portion [of the crops]; ‘belo’ is a capitation tax, and ‘halak’ is arnona.[5] Raba also said: A Rabbinical scholar may assert, ‘I am a servant of fire, and will not pay poll-tax.’[6] What is the reason? Because it is [only] said in order to drive away a lion.[7] R. Ashi owned a forest, which he sold to a fire-temple. Said Rabina to R. Ashi: But there is [the injunction]. Thou shalt not put a tumbling-block before the blind![8] — He replied: Most wood is used for [ordinary] heating.[9]

MISHNAH. [IF HE VOWS,] ‘UNTIL THE HARVEST,’ [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE PEOPle BEGIN REAPING THE WHEAT HARVEST, BUT NOT THE BARLEY HARVEST.[10] IT ALL DEPENDS ON THE PLACE WHERE HE VOWED:[11] IF IN A HILL-COUNTRY. THE HILL-COUNTRY [HARVEST]; IF IN THE PLAIN, [THE HARVEST OF] THE PLAIN [IS MEANT].[12] [IF HE VOWS,] ‘UNTIL THE RAINS,’ [OR], ‘UNTIL THE RAINS SHALL BE’, [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE SECOND RAINFALL DESCENDS.[13] R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID: UNTIL THE [NORMAL] TIME FOR THE [FIRST] RAINFALL IS REACHED.[14] [IF HE VOWS,] ‘UNTIL THE RAINS CEASE,’ [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE END OF NISAN:[15] THIS IS R. MEIR'S VIEW. R. JUDAH SAID: UNTIL PASSOVER IS PAST.

GEMARA. It was taught: He who vows in Galilee, ‘until the fruit-harvest,’ and then descends to the valleys, though the fruit harvest has begun in the valley, he is forbidden [by his vow] until the fruit-harvest in Galilee.

[IF HE VOWS,] ‘UNTIL THE RAINS,’ [OR] ‘UNTIL THE RAINS SHALL BE,’ [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE SECOND RAINFALL DESCENDS. R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID, etc. R. Zera said: The dispute is only if he said, ‘until the rains’;[16] but if he declared, until the rain,’ he [certainly] meant, until the time of the [first] rain.[17]

---

(1) In ancient times the public reading of the Law was done by those ‘called up’. The priest was to be called to read the first portion. v. Git. 59a.

(2) I.e., the blessing for bread prior to the meal, and grace after the meal.

(3) At a meal he must be served first. — Asheri: when sharing anything with an Israelite, the latter must divide the thing to be shared in two equal portions and give choice of pick to the priest.

(4) Ezra VII, 24.

(5) Or ‘annona’, produce tax. Jast. conjectures that הלך probably means a tax for the sustenance of marching troops.

(6) To the Persian it would suggest a fire worshipper, who was free from poll-tax. But the scholar making (his assertion should mean that he worships the Lord, who is designated ‘consuming fire’ in Deut. IV, 24. (Under Chapter II, fire worship became the national and state-aided religion of the Persians, and in order to win converts to that religion fire worshippers enjoyed exemption from poll-tax: v. Funk, S. Die Juden in Babylonien II. p. 3.)

(7) I.e., in self-defence, against irregular extortion. Ran states that Raba's dictum means that even a Rabbinical student may act thus, and it is not regarded as an untruth; the ordinary person may certainly do so.

(8) Lev. XIX. 14: i.e., nothing must be done to aid idolatry.

(9) Not for idolatrous service,

(10) Which is earlier.

(11) I.e., though normally ‘harvest’, unspecified, means the wheat harvest, if in a particular place one refers thus to the barley harvest it means until then. Likewise, as the Mishnah proceeds to explain.

(12) Harvesting is later in a hill-country than in a plain.

(13) I.e., until it commences. There are three winter rainfalls in Palestine. Their times are discussed on 63a. When he states, ‘until the rainfall’, without specifying which, it is assumed that he means the middle one, as he would have defined the first or last by name.

(14) Even if it does not rain then. Since the times of the rainfalls are not exact, he must have meant when the rainfall commences.

(15) The first month in the Jewish year, corresponding to March-April.

(16) The first Tanna maintains that the plural implies, until there shall have been at least two rainfalls; whilst in R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's opinion the terms of the vow are fulfilled when the time for the second rainfall comes, even though it did not actually rain.

(17) So Rashi.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 63a

An objection is raised: What is the time of the rainfall?[1] The earliest is on the third [of Marheshwan],[2] the middle [i.e., the second] on the seventh, and the last on the twenty-third: this is R. Meir's view. R. Judah said: The seventh, the seventeenth, and the twenty-third. R. Jose said: The seventeenth, the twenty-third, and the new moon of Kislew.[3] And R. Jose used likewise to rule that individuals must not fast [for rain] until Kislew has commenced.[4] Now we observed thereon: As for the first rainfall, it is well: [they differ] in respect of petitioning;[5] the third [likewise] is in respect of fasting.[6] But [as for] the second, in respect of what [is the controversy]? And R. Zera answered: In respect of one who vows.[7] Whereon we observed: With whom does the following Baraitha agree: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said: If the rain descends for seven days in succession, it is counted as the first and second rainfall?[8] With whom does this agree? With R. Jose![9] — That refers to one who vows, 'Until the rains.'

MISHNAH. [IF HE VOWS,] 'KONAM THAT I TASTE NOT WINE FOR A YEAR', IF THE YEAR IS INTERCALATED.[10] HE IS FORBIDDEN DURING THE YEAR AND ITS EXTENSION. [IF HE SAYS.] 'UNTIL THE BEGINNING OF ADAR,'[11] [IT MEANS] UNTIL THE BEGINNING OF THE FIRST ADAR; 'UNTIL THE END OF ADAR,' UNTIL THE END OF THE FIRST ADAR.[12]

GEMARA. Thus we see that by stating Adar, without qualification, the first is meant. Shall we say that our Mishnah reflects R. Judah's views? For it was taught: For the first Adar, one writes 'The first Adar'; for the second, simply 'Adar': this is R. Meir's view. R. Judah said: For the first Adar, one writes 'Adar'; for the second, one writes 'the second Adar'![13] — Abaye said: You may say that it agrees even with R. Meir: the latter is where he knew that it was a leap year; the former [i.e., the Mishnah], if he did not know.[14]

---

(1) Sc. the winter rain, which generally came in three periods, as explained here. There was also, of course, the Spring rain. V. Ta'an. 6a.

(2) Marheshwan is the eighth month of the year, corresponding to October-November.

(3) Kislew is the ninth month of the year, corresponding to November-December.

(4) And rain has not yet fallen.

(5) For rain. A short prayer for rain — טל ומטר '(give) dew and rain', called she'elah, request or petition, is inserted in the eighth benediction of the 'amidah when the first rainfall is due. V. Ta'an. 10a.

(6) A public fast was proclaimed if the drought continued after the time of the third rainfall had arrived. V. Ta'an. I, 4-7: II, 1.

(7) I.e., if one vows, 'until the rains', it means until the second rainfall: hence the controversy as to when it is due.

(8) As we have seen, R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's own view is that the line of the rainfall is the deciding factor, whether it actually rains or not. But since the Rabbis maintain that the vow means until it rains, R. Simeon argued that even on their view, if it rains for seven days in succession, it should be considered as two rainfalls, and hence terminates the vow. It is now assumed that no dictinction is here made how he expressed his vow. But on R. Zera's view, that they all agree that where he says 'until the rain', the time of the first rainfall is the deciding factor, R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's remark is irrelevant.

(9) For in R. Meir's view there are only four days between the two rain-falls, and in R. Judah's there are ten.

(10) The Jewish year being lunar, an extra month is periodically intercalated to make it agree with the Solar year; v. J.E. art. 'Calendar'.

(11) The twelfth month of the year == February-March.

(12) Var. lec.: SECOND ADAR. When a year is intercalated, a month is added after Adar, which is called the second Adar.

(13) This is in reference to the dating of documents.

(14) If he knew and stated Adar, without qualification, the second is meant, in R. Meir's view. But if he did not know, he must have meant the first, since he does not wish to be in doubt as to the length of his vow, that he should include the second Adar if the year is subsequently intercalated.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 63b

And it was taught even so: [If one writes.] 'until the new moon of Adar,' [it means] until the new moon of the first Adar; but if it was a leap year, until the new moon of the second Adar. Now, this proves that the first clause does not refer to leap year?[1] Hence the latter clause means, if he knew that it was a leap year; the former, if he did not know.

MISHNAH. R. JUDAH SAID: [IF ONE VOWS,- 'KONAM THAT I TASTE NO WINE UNTIL PASSOVER SHALL BE,' HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY UNTIL THE PASSOVER NIGHT,[2] FOR HE MERELY MEANT, UNTIL THE EVENING OF PASSOVER, UNTIL THE HOUR WHEN MEN ARE WONT TO DRINK WINE.[3] IF HE VOWS, 'KONAM THAT I TASTE NO MEAT UNTIL THE FAST [I.E., THE DAY OF ATONEMENT] SHALL BE,' HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY UNTIL THE EVE OF THE FAST, FOR HE MERELY MEANT, UNTIL PEOPLE USUALLY EAT MEAT.[4] R. JOSE, HIS SON, SAID: [IF HE VOWS,] KONAM, IF I TASTE GARLIC UNTIL THE SABBATH, HE IS FORBIDDEN ONLY UNTIL SABBATH EVE [I.E., FRIDAY NIGHT], FOR HE MEANT, UNTIL IT IS CUSTOMARY FOR PEOPLE TO EAT GARLIC.[5] IF HE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR 'KONAM, IF I BENEFIT FROM YOU, IF YOU DO NOT COME AND ACCEPT FOR YOUR SONS A KOR OF WHEAT AND TWO BARRELS OF WINE, THE LATTER MAY ANNUL HIS VOW WITHOUT RECOURSE TO A SAGE, BY DECLARING, 'DID YOU VOW FOR ANY OTHER PURPOSE BUT TO HONOUR ME? THIS [NON-ACCEPTANCES] IS MY HONOUR. LIKEWISE, IF HE SAYS TO HIS NEIGHBOUR, 'KONAM, IF YOU BENEFIT FORM ME, IF YOU DO NOT GIVE MY SON A KOR OF WHEAT AND TWO BARRELS OF WINE' — R. MEIR RULES: HE IS FORBIDDEN UNTIL HE GIVES; BUT THE SAGES MAINTAIN: HE TOO CAN ANNUL HIS VOW WITHOUT A SAGE, BY DECLARING, I REGARD IT AS THOUGH I HAVE RECEIVED IT. IF HE WAS URGING HIS NEIGHBOUR TO MARRY HIS SISTER'S DAUGHTER, AND HE EXCLAIMED, 'KONAM, IF SHE EVER BENEFITS FROM ME'; LIKEWISE, IF HE IS DIVORCING HIS WIFE AND VOWS, 'KONAM, IF MY WIFE HAS EVER BENEFIT FROM ME, — THEY ARE PERMITTED TO BENEFIT FROM HIM, BECAUSE HE MEANT ONLY MARRIAGE. IF HE WAS URGING HIS NEIGHBOUR TO EAT IN HIS HOUSE, AND HE REPLIED, 'KONAM, IF I ENTER, OR, 'THE DROP OF WATER THAT I DRINK, HE MAY ENTER HIS HOUSE AND DRINK COLD WATER BECAUSE HE ONLY MEANT EATING AND DRINKING IN GENERAL.[6] [

---

(1) That is obviously impossible, since in that case 'until the new moon of the first Adar' is meaningless.

(2) So in Mishnayoth edd.

(3) This is the reading as amended by Bah.

(4) It was a widespread custom to eat meat on the eve of Atonement day. The point of these two rulings, as of the next too, is that although the expression might mean until Passover shall have been, etc., the imperfect being intended as a fut. perfect, yet since it is customary to drink wine in the first evening, he is assumed to have meant until it comes, which is also a possible rendering of his words. And the same applies to the vow regarding meat.

(5) I.e., on the eve if Sabbath; the institution thereof is ascribed to Ezra; v. B.K. 82a and supra 31a.

(6) But did not mean the expression to be taken literally.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 64a

C H A P T E R I X

MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER SAID: ONE MAY SUGGEST TO A MAN AS AN OPENING [FOR ABSOLUTION][1] THE HONOUR OF HIS FATHER AND MOTHER BUT THE SAGES FORBID.[2] SAID R. ZADOK: INSTEAD OF GIVING THE HONOUR OF HIS FATHER AND MOTHER, LET US SUGGEST THE HONOUR OF THE ALMIGHTY AS AN OPENING.[3] IF SO, THERE ARE NO VOWS.[4] BUT THE SAGES ADMIT TO R. ELIEZER THAT IN A MATTER CONCERNING HIMSELF AND HIS FATHER AND MOTHER THEIR HONOUR IS SUGGESTED AS AN OPENING. R. ELIEZER ALSO RULED: A NEW FACT[5] MAY BE GIVEN AS AN OPENING; BUT THE SAGES FORBID IT. E.G., IF A MAN SAID, 'KONAM THAT I BENEFIT NOT FROM SO AND SO, AND HE [THE LATTER] THEN BECAME A SCRIBE,[6] OR WAS ABOUT TO GIVE HIS SON IN MARRIAGE,[7] AND HE DECLARED, 'HAD I KNOWN THAT HE WOULD BECOME A SCRIBE OR WAS ABOUT TO GIVE HIS SON IN MARRIAGE, I WOULD NOT HAVE VOWED;' [OR IF HE SAID,] 'KONAM, IF I ENTER NOT THIS HOUSE,' AND IT BECAME A SYNAGOGUE, AND HE DECLARED, HAD I KNOWN THAT IT WOULD BECOME A SYNAGOGUE, I WOULD NOT HAVE VOWED: R. ELIEZER PERMITS IT,[8] BUT THE SAGES FORBID IT.

GEMARA. What is meant by THERE ARE NO VOWS? — Abaye said: If so, Vows are not properly revoked.[9]

---

(1) Lit., 'open for man'.

(2) V. p. 61, n. 7. Since vows are discreditable (v. supra 9a), to make them is to cast a reflection upon one's parents.

(3) One dishonours God by committing anything unworthy.

(4) The Talmud discusses the meaning of this. According to our text, this is still R. Zadok's speech, and a refutation of R. Eliezer. But Ran, Tosaf. and Asheri read: They (the Sages) said to him: If so, there are no vows. On this reading. R. Zadok agrees with R. Eliezer, but goes beyond him, whilst the Sages maintain that even on R. Eliezer's view, one could not go so far as to suggest the honour of God as an opening, for if so, there are no vows. But, as is evident from the Mishnah, they disagree with R. Eliezer too.

(5) Lit., 'newly-born', 'unexpected'.

(6) I.e., a school teacher, whose services the maddir might require for his child; others: a notary, whose services might be essential to him.

(7) And the maddir wished to take part in the festivities.

(8) As an opening for absolution.

(9) Because a vow can be annulled only on grounds, which, when suggested, need not necessarily make him regret his vow, in which case when he is moved to repent, it is to be assumed that his repentance is genuine. But when it is suggested to him that by vowing he dishonoured God, no person is so impudent as to maintain that he would have vowed notwithstanding, even if he would have done so; consequently, his vow is not properly revoked.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 64b

Raba explained: If so no one will seek a Sage's absolution for his vow.[1]

We learnt: BUT THE SAGES ADMIT TO R. ELIEZER THAT IN A MATTER CONCERNING HIMSELF AND HIS FATHER AND MOTHER, THEIR HONOUR IS SUGGESTED AS AN OPENING. Now, as for Abaye, who explains [it as meaning], if so, vows are not properly revoked, it is well: here, since he has been [so] impudent, he is impudent.[2] But on Raba's explanation. Viz., if so, none will seek a Sage's absolution for his vow, why is such an opening suggested to him here?[3] — I will tell you. Since all [other] vows cannot be annulled without a Sage,[4] it may be offered as an opening here too.[5] R. ELIEZER ALSO RULED: A NEW FACT MAY BE GIVEN AS AN OPENING, etc. What is R. Eliezer's reason? — R. Hisda said: Because Scripture saith, [And the Lord said unto Moses in Midian, Go, return into Egypt:] for all the men are dead [which sought thy life].[6] But death was a new fact:[7] this proves that a new fact is given as an opening. What then is the reason of the Rabbis? — They argue thus: Did these men die? Surely R. Johanan said on the authority of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Wherever nizzim [quarrelling] or nizzawim [standing] is mentioned, the reference is to none but Dathan and Abiram?[8] But, said Resh Lakish, they had become poor.[9]

R. Joshua b. Levi said: A man who is childless is accounted as dead, for it is written, Give me children, or else I am dead.[10] And it was taught: Four are accounted as dead: A poor man, a leper, a blind person, and one who is childless. A poor man, as it is written, for all the men are dead [which sought thy life].[11] A leper, as it is written, [And Aaron looked upon Miriam, and behold, she was leprous. And Aaron said unto Moses . . .] let her not he as one dead.[12] The blind, as it is written, He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.[13] And he who is childless, as it is written, Give me children, or else I am dead.[14]

---

(1) Since God's honour may apply to all vows, if such is suggested, every person will annul his vow himself, and thus the solemnity of vows be destroyed.

(2) For obviously, if he has been so impudent as to make such a vow, he is sufficiently brazen not to offer regard for his parents' honour as a ground for absolution, unless he has genuinely repented of having acted so contumaciously toward them.

(3) Since one can thus annul his own vow.

(4) This not being accepted as a ground in other vows.

(5) On account of other vows, it will be the practice to apply for absolution to a Sage, and that will be adhered to even in such an isolated ease as this, which is an exception to the general rule.

(6) Ex. IV. 19: the Talmud states below that Moses had vowed to Jethro not to return to Egypt, on account of the men who sought his life, and now God absolved Moses of his vow on the grounds that they were dead.

(7) I.e., one that arose subsequent to Moses' vow.

(8) Cf. Ex. II, 13: And when he went out on the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together (nizzim), with: That is that Dathan and Abiram, which were famous in the congregation, who strove against (hizzu. of which nizzim is a participle) Moses against Aaron. Cf. also, Ex. V, 20: And they met Moses and Aaron, who (sc. they) stood (nizzawim) in the way, with Num. XVI, 27. And Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood (nizzawim) etc. The similarity of language leads to the assumption that the same people are referred to in all cases, viz., Dathan and Abiram Now, it was on their account that Moses fled from Egypt, and God told him that they were dead. But they reappear in Korah's rebellion. Hence the statement that they were dead cannot be taken literally.

(9) Lit., 'they had descended from their property'. V. supra p. 16, n. 3 Now, though impoverishment was also a new fact, yet since it is of common occurrence (here regarded as more likely than death, as he left them, presumably, in good health), the Rabbis regard it as one which might be foreseen, and therefore a legitimate ground for absolution.

(10) Gen. XXX, 1.

(11) V. n. 2.

(12) Num. XII, 10-12.

(13) Lam. III, 6: this is interpreted: he hath set me in dark places, just as the blind, who are accounted as long since dead.

(14) Possibly the inclusion of the poor and childless was directed against the early Christian exaltation of poverty and celibacy.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 65a

It was taught: He who is forbidden to benefit from his neighbour can have the vow absolved only in his [neighbour's] presence.[1] Whence do we know this? — R. Nahman said: Because it is written, And the Lord said unto Moses, In Midian, go, return into Egypt, for all the men are dead which sought thy life.[2] He said [thus] to him: 'In Midian thou didst vow; go and annul thy vow in Midian.' [How do we know that he vowed in Midian?] — Because it is written, And Moses was content [wa-yo'el] to dwell with the man;[3] now alah[4] can only mean an oath, as it is written, and hath taken an [alah] oath of him.[5]

And also against King Nebuchadnezzar he rebelled, who had adjured him by the living God.[6]

What was [the nature of] his rebellion? — Zedekiah found Nebuchadnezzar eating a live rabbit.[7] 'Swear to me,' exclaimed he, 'not to reveal this, that it may not leak out!' He swore. Subsequently he grieved thereat, and had his vow absolved and disclosed it. When Nebuchadnezzar learned that they were deriding him, he had the Sanhedrin[8] and Zedekiah brought before him, and said to them, 'Have ye seen what Zedekiah has done? Did he not swear by the name of Heaven not to reveal it?' They answered him, 'He was absolved of his oath.' 'Can then one be absolved of an oath?' he asked them. 'Yes,' they returned. 'In his presence or even not in his presence?'[9] — '[Only] in his presence,' was their reply. 'How then did ye act?' said he to them: 'why did ye not Say this to Zedekiah?' Immediately, 'The elders of the daughter of Zion sit upon the ground, and keep silence.'[10] R. Isaac said: This teaches that they removed the cushions from under them.[11]

MISHNAH. R. MEIR SAID: SOME THINGS APPEAR AS NEW FACTS, AND YET ARE NOT [TREATED] AS NEW;[12] BUT THE SAGES DO NOT AGREE WITH HIM.[13] E.G., IF ONE SAYS, 'KONAM THAT I DO NOT MARRY SO AND SO, BECAUSE HER FATHER IS WICKED,' AND HE IS [THEN] TOLD, HE IS DEAD, OR, HE HAS REPENTED; 'KONAM, IF I ENTER THIS HOUSE, BECAUSE IT CONTAINS A WILD DOG, OR, 'BECAUSE IT CONTAINS A SERPENT,' AND HE IS [THEN] INFORMED, THE DOG IS DEAD, OR, THE SERPENT HAS BEEN KILLED, THESE ARE AS NEW FACTS, YET ACTUALLY NOT [TREATED] AS NEW FACTS. BUT THE SAGES DO NOT AGREE WITH HIM.[14]

GEMARA. 'KONAM, IF I ENTER THIS HOUSE, BECAUSE IT CONTAINS A WILD DOG, etc.' But if it died, it really is a new fact?[15] — Said R. Huna: It is as though he conditioned his vow by this fact. R. Johanan said: He was told, 'He has already died,' or, 'already repented.'[16]

---

(1) If A vowed not to benefit from B, A cannot have his vow absolved except in the presence of B. In the Jerusalem Talmud two reasons are given for this: (i) if his neighbour does not know of his absolution, he may suspect him of breaking his vow, (ii) he who vowed not to benefit from his neighbour — presumably for his neighbour's benefit — he should be put to shame for his niggardly spirit and he made to seek absolution in his presence. Therefore it is insisted upon.

(2) Ex. IV, 19.

(3) Ibid. II, 21.

(4) The root of wa-yo'el

(5) Ezek. XVII, 13.

(6) II Chron. XXXVI. 13.

(7) Other: a raw rabbit.

(8) The Jewish court.

(9) Sc. of the person to whom the oath was sworn.

(10) Lam. II, 10.

(11) A sign of their unworthiness and deposition.

(12) I.e., though occurring after the vow, they might have been anticipated.

(13) Var. lec.: and the Sages agree with him.

(14) Var. lec.: and the Sages agree with him.

(15) Not only in appearance.

(16) I.e., before the vow, and the vow was thus made in error. Therefore R. Meir teaches that in the former it is not treated as a novel occurrence and absolution may be granted on that score. The Sages disagree, holding that it may not be granted, as a precautionary measure.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 65b

R. Abba objected: [If one Vows,] 'Konam that I do not marry that ugly woman, whereas she is beautiful; 'that black[skinned] woman,' whereas she is fair; 'that short woman,' who in fact is tall, he is permitted to marry her. Not because she was ugly and became beautiful [after the vow], black and turned fair, short and grew tall, but because the vow was made in error. Now, as for R. Huna, who explained it, It is as though he conditioned his vow by this fact, it is well: he [the Tanna] teaches the case of one who makes his vow dependent upon a fact, and the case of an erroneous vow. But according to R. Johanan, who explained [this Mishnah as meaning] that he had already died or repented,[1] why teach [two instances of erroneous vows]? This is a difficulty. MISHNAH. R. MEIR ALSO SAID: AN OPENING [FOR ABSOLUTION] MAY BE GIVEN FROM WHAT IS WRITTEN IN THE TORAH, AND WE SAY TO HIM. 'HAD YOU KNOWN THAT YOU WERE VIOLATING [THE INJUNCTIONS]. THOU SHALT NOT AVENGE, THOU SHALT NOT BEAR A GRUDGE AGAINST THE CHILDREN OF THY PEOPLE. THOU SHALT LOVE THY NEIGHBOUR AS THYSELF.[2] OR THAT THY BROTHER MAY LIE WITH THEE;[3] OR THAT HE MIGHT BECOME POOR AND YOU WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO PROVIDE FOR HIM,[4] [WOULD YOU HAVE VOWED]?' SHOULD HE REPLY, 'HAD I KNOWN THAT IT IS SO, I WOULD NOT HAVE VOWED,' HE IS ABSOLVED.

GEMARA. R. Huna son of R. Kattina said to the Rabbis:[5] But he can reply. Not all who become poor fall upon me [for support]; and as for my share of the [general] obligations, I can provide for him together with everyone else?[6] — He replied: I maintain, He who falls [upon the community] does not fall at the beginning into the hands of the charity overseer.[7]

MISHNAH. A WIFE'S KETHUBAH[8] MAY BE GIVEN AS AN OPENING [FOR ABSOLUTION]. AND THUS IT ONCE HAPPENED THAT A MAN VOWED NOT TO BENEFIT FROM HIS WIFE.[9] AND HER KETUBAH AMOUNTED TO FOUR HUNDRED DENARII.[10] HE WENT BEFORE R. AKIBA, WHO ORDERED HIM TO PAY HER THE KETHUBAH [IN FULL]. SAID HE TO HIM, 'RABBI, MY FATHER LEFT EIGHT HUNDRED DENARII, OF WHICH MY BROTHER TOOK FOUR HUNDRED AND I TOOK FOUR HUNDRED: IS IT NOT ENOUGH THAT SHE SHOULD RECEIVE TWO HUNDRED AND I TWO HUNDRED?' — R. AKIBA REPLIED: EVEN IF YOU SELL THE HAIR OF YOUR HEAD YOU MUST PAY HER HER KETHUBAH. HAD I KNOWN THAT IT Is SO,' HE ANSWERED, I WOULD NOT HAVE VOWED.' THEREUPON R. AKIBA PERMITTED HER [TO HIM].[11]

GEMARA. Is then movable property under a lien for the kethubah?[12] — Abaye said: [It refers to] real estate worth eight hundred denarii. But the hair of his head is mentioned, which is movable property! — It means thus: Even if you must sell the hair of your head for your keep.[13] This proves that the debtor's means are not assessed?[14] — Said R. Nahman son of R. Isaac: [No].

---

(1) So that it was a vow in error.

(2) Lev. XIX. 18.

(3) Ibid. XXV, 36; e.g., when one forbids another to benefit from him.

(4) So the reading in Ran and Asheri.

(5) Asheri reads: Rabbah.

(6) I.e., I can still give my share through the communal charitable institutions. since it is not directly for him.

(7) Only as a last resource does one apply for communal relief. But in the first place one seeks private relief, which the man who made the vow is debarred from affording.

(8) Marriage settlement.

(9) He, being unable to live without benefiting from her, must divorce her and pay her marriage settlement.

(10) The kethubah as variable. The minima are two hundred denarii and one hundred denarii for a virgin and a widow respectively; Keth. 10b.

(11) Thus annulling the vow.

(12) This is the subject of a dispute between R. Meir and the Rabbis in Keth. 81b. — It is now assumed that the eight hundred denarii were in the form of movables.

(13) Lit., 'and eat'. Even so, you are hound to hand over your real estate in payment of the kethubah.

(14) For the purpose of exempting him of payment, in whole or in part. This is disputed in B.M. 114a.

It means that the kethubah deed is not torn up.[1]

MISHNAH. THE SABBATHS AND FESTIVALS[2] ARE GIVEN AS AN OPENING. THE EARLIER RULING WAS THAT FOR THESE DAYS THE VOW IS CANCELLED, BUT FOR OTHERS IT IS BINDING; UNTIL R. AKIBA CAME AND TAUGHT: A VOW WHICH IS PARTIALLY ANNULLED IS ENTIRELY ANNULLED. E.G., IF ONE SAID, KONAM THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM ANY OF YOU, IF ONE WAS [SUBSEQUENTLY] PERMITTED [To BENEFIT HIM], THEY ARE ALL PERMITTED. [BUT IF HE SAID, 'KONAM] THAT I DO NOT BENEFIT FROM A, B, C, ETC.', IF THE FIRST WAS PERMITTED, ALL ARE PERMITTED; BUT IF THE LAST-NAMED WAS PERMITTED, HE ALONE IS PERMITTED, BUT THE REST ARE FORBIDDEN. (IF THE MIDDLE PERSON WAS PERMITTED, THOSE MENTIONED AFTER HIM ARE [ALSO] PERMITTED, BUT THOSE MENTIONED BEFORE HIM ARE FORBIDDEN.)[3] [IF ONE VOWS,] 'KORBAN BE WHAT I BENEFIT FROM THIS [MAN], KORBAN BE WHAT I BENEFIT FROM THAT [MAN],' AN OPENING [FOR ABSOLUTION] IS NEEDED FOR EACH ONE INDIVIDUALLY. [IF ONE VOWS.] 'KONAM, IF I TASTE WINE, BECAUSE IT IS INJURIOUS TO THE STOMACH: WHEREUPON HE WAS TOLD, BUT WELL-MATURED WINE IS BENEFICIAL TO THE STOMACH, HE IS ABSOLVED IN RESPECT OF WELL-MATURED WINE, AND NOT ONLY IN RESPECT OF WELL-MATURED WINE, BUT OF ALL WINE. KONAM, IF I TASTE ONIONS, BECAUSE THEY ARE INJURIOUS TO THE HEART', THEN HE WAS TOLD, 'BUT THE WILD ONION[4] IS GOOD FOR THE HEART,' — HE IS PERMITTED TO PARTAKE OF WILD ONIONS, AND NOT ONLY OF WILD ONIONS, BUT OF ALL ONIONS. SUCH A CASE HAPPENED BEFORE R. MEIR, AND HE GAVE ABSOLUTION IN RESPECT OF ALL ONIONS.

GEMARA. IF THE LAST-NAMED WAS PERMITTED, HE ALONE IS PERMITTED, BUT THE REST ARE FORBIDDEN. Which Tanna [ruled thus]? — Raba said: It is R. Simeon, who maintained, unless he declared 'i swear' to each one separately.[5]

'KONAM, IF I TASTE WINE,' etc. But let it follow [from the fact] that it is not injurious?[6] — R. Abba said: It means: Moreover, it is beneficial.[7]

'KONAM, IF I TASTE ONIONS,' etc. But let it follow [from the fact] that they are not injurious? — Said R. Abba: It means: Moreover, they are beneficial.

MISHNAH. A MAN'S OWN HONOUR, AND THE HONOUR OF HIS CHILDREN, MAY BE GIVEN AS AN OPENING. [THUS:] WE SAY TO HIM, 'HAD YOU KNOWN THAT TO-MORROW IT WILL BE SAID OF YOU, THAT IS HIS REGULAR HABIT TO DIVORCE HIS WIFE"; AND OF YOUR DAUGHTERS THEY WILL SAY, THEY ARE THE DAUGHTERS OF A DIVORCED WOMAN. WHAT FAULT DID HE FIND IN THIS WOMAN TO DIVORCE HER?"'[8] IF HE REPLIES, 'HAD I KNOWN THAT IT IS SO. I WOULD NOT HAVE VOWED,' HE IS ABSOLVED.

[IF ONE VOWS,] 'KONAM IF I MARRY THAT UGLY WOMAN, WHEREAS SHE IS BEAUTIFUL; THAT BLACK [-SKINNED] WOMAN, WHEREAS SHE IS FAIR; 'THAT SHORT WOMAN, WHO IN FACT IS TALL, HE IS PERMITTED TO MARRY HER, NOT BECAUSE SHE WAS UGLY, AND BECAME BEAUTIFUL, OR BLACK AND TURNED FAIR, SHORT AND GREW TALL, BUT BECAUSE THE VOW WAS MADE IN ERROR. AND THUS IT HAPPENED WITH ONE WHO VOWED NOT TO BENEFIT FROM HIS SISTER'S DAUGHTER, AND SHE WAS TAKEN INTO R. ISHMAEL'S HOUSE AND MADE BEAUTIFUL. MY SON,

EXCLAIMED R. ISHMAEL TO HIM, 'DID YOU VOW NOT TO BENEFIT FROM THIS ONE!' 'NO,' HE REPLIED, WHERE UPON R. ISHMAEL PERMITTED HER [TO HIM]. IN THAT HOUR R. ISHMAEL WEPT AND SAID, 'THE DAUGH TERS OF ISRAEL ARE BEAUTIFUL, BUT POVERTY DISFIGURES THEM.'[9] AND WHEN R. ISHMAEL DIED, THE DAUGHTERS OF ISRAEL RAISED A LAMENT, SAYING, YE DAUGHTERS OF ISRAEL WEEP FOR R. ISHMAEL. AND THUS IT IS SAID TOO OF SAUL, YE DAUGHTERS OF ISRAEL, WEEP OVER SAUL.[10]

GEMARA. A story [is quoted] contradicting [the ruling]![11] — The text is defective[12] and was thus taught: R. Ishmael said: Even if she was ugly and became beautiful, black and turned fair, or short and grew tall. AND THUS IT HAPPENED WITH ONE WHO COWED NOT TO BENEFIT FROM HIS SISTER'S DAUGHTER; SHE WAS TAKEN INTO R. ISHMAEL'S HOUSE AND MADE BEAUTIFUL, etc.

---

(1) I.e.. though the debtor may he exempted of part payment now, the debt always remains, in case his prospects improve later. Thus R. Akiba merely meant that the debt of the kethubah would always hang over him.

(2) Here the reading is, The Festivals and the Sabbaths; but on 25b it is quoted in the order given here, and Asheri gives the same reading here too.

(3) This is quoted on 26b, but as part of a Baraitha, not a Mishnah; hence it should he omitted, and Asheri too omits it.

(4) Or, Cyprus onions.

(5) V. Shebu. 38a. If a man is dunned by a number of creditors, and he takes a false oath, saying, 'I swear that I owe nothing to you, nor to you, nor to you etc.,' he is liable only to one sacrifice, as for one false oath; unless he declares, 'I swear that I owe nothing to you', 'I swear that I owe nothing to you', 'I swear that I owe nothing to you', etc., in which case he is liable to a sacrifice for each false oath — this is R. Simeon's view. Thus here too, if he declared, 'Korban be what I benefit from A', 'Korban be what I benefit from B', etc., mentioning 'Korban' in the case of each separately, each is regarded as a separate vow. Otherwise they would all be forbidden or permitted alike by the same vow, or its absolution. (The earlier clause in which 'Korban' was not mentioned in the case of each refers to an enumeration in which each person was made dependent upon the preceding). Although the caption of this passage is. IF THE LAST-NAMED, ETC., it appears from Ran, Asheri and Tosaf. that the deduction as to authorship is based on 'KORBAN BE WHAT I BENEFIT FROM THIS (MAN).

(6) Even if not beneficial, that is sufficient to annul the vow.

(7) I. e., firstly. it is not injurious, which itself is sufficient; but what is more, it is even beneficial.

(8) I.e., there must he something wrong with her, and her daughters probably follow in her footsteps. This refers to a vow to divorce one's wife.

(9) R. Ishmael flourished during the latter portion of the first century and the early part of the second C.E. This period, falling roughly between the destruction of the Temple and the Bar Cochba revolt, and extending some time beyond the fall of Bethar is 135 C.E., must have been one of hardship and poverty for many Jews.

(10) II Sam. I, 24. — In ancient days women were professional mourners, and chanted dirges in chorus at the bier of the dead.

(11) The Mishnah, after ruling that the vow is annulled only if she was actually beautiful when it was made, then quotes a story in which R. Ishmael annulled it in respect of a woman who was subsequently made beautiful.

(12) Cf. p. 2, n. 3.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 66b

A Tanna taught: She had a false[1] tooth, and R. Ishmael made her a gold tooth at his own cost. 'When R. Ishmael died, a professional mourner commenced [the funeral eulogy] thus: Ye daughters of Israel, weep over R. Ishmael, who clothed you etc.[2]

A man once said to his wife, 'Konam that you benefit not from me, until you make R. Judah and R. Simeon taste of your cooking.' R. Judah tasted thereof, observing, 'It is but logical:[3] If, in order to make peace between husband and wife, the Torah commanded, Let My Name, written to sanctity, be dissolved in "the utters that curse" ,[4] though ‘tis but doubtful,[5] how much more so I!’ R. Simeon did not taste thereof, exclaiming, ‘Let all the widows’ children perish,[6] rather than that Simeon be moved from his standpoint, lest they fall into the habit of vowing.’

A man once said to his wife, ‘Konam that you benefit not from me until you expectorate on R. Simeon b. Gamaliel.’ She went and spat upon his garment, and he [R. Simeon b. Gamaliel] absolved her.[7] R. Aha of Difti[8] said to Rabina: But his aim was to insult him! — He replied: To expectorate upon the garments of R. Simeon b. Gamaliel is a great insult.

A man once said to his wife, ‘Konam that you benefit not from me, until you shew aught beautiful[9] in yourself to R. Ishmael son of R. Jose.’ Said he to them:[10] ‘Perhaps her head is beautiful?’ — ‘It is round,’ they replied.[11] ‘Perhaps her hair is beautiful?’ — ‘It is like stalks of flax .’ ‘Perhaps her eyes are beautiful?’ — ‘They are bleared.’ ‘Perhaps her nose is beautiful?’ — ‘It is swollen.’ ‘Perhaps her lips are beautiful?’ — ‘They are thick.’ ‘Perhaps her neck is beautiful?’ — It is squat .’’Perhaps her abdomen is beautiful?’ — ‘It protrudes.’ ‘Perhaps her feet are beautiful?’ — ‘They are as broad as those of a duck.’ ‘Perhaps her name is beautiful?’ — ‘It is liklukith.’[12] Said he to them, ‘She is fittingly called liklukith, since she is repulsive through her defects’; and so he permitted her [to her husband].

A certain Babylonian went up to the Land of Israel and took a wife [there]. ‘Boil me two [cows’] feet,’ he ordered, and she boiled him two lentils,[13] which infuriated him with her. The next day he said, ‘Boil me a griwa’,.[14] so he boiled him a griwa. ‘Go and bring me two bezuni;’[15] so she went and brought him two candles.[15] ‘Go and break them on the head of the baba.’[16] Now Baba b. Buta was sitting on the threshold, engaged in judging in a lawsuit. So she went and broke them on his head. Said lie to her[17] , ‘What is the meaning of this that thou hast done?’ — She replied, ‘Thus my husband did order me.’ ‘Thou hast performed thy husband's will,’ he rejoined; ‘may the Almighty bring forth from thee two sons like Baba b. Buta.

C H A P T E R X

MISHNAH. IN THE CASE OF A BETROTHED MAIDEN,[18] HER FATHER AND HER BETROTHED HUSBAND ANNUL HER VOWS.[19]

---

(1) Lit., ‘An inserted tooth’.

(2) Continuing as in II Sam. I, 24, q.v.

(3) Lit., ‘(it follows) a fortiori’ (that I should do so.

(4) V. Num. V, 23.

(5) Whether the wife was guilty of adultery.

(6) I.e., let the husband die, so that she becomes a widow, and all her children — of course, hardly to he taken literally.

(7) So emended by Bah.

(8) Identified with Bibtha in the vicinity of Wasit on the lower reaches of the Tigris; Obermeyer, op. cit., p. 197.

(9) So Bah. [Cur. ed. ‘a becoming defect’.]

(10) Either to the husband and wife, or to those who reported the matter to him.

(11) Perhaps it was Esquimaux-shaped, which both in the East and in the West would hardly he considered beautiful.

(12) Which means repulsive.

(13) Misunderstanding his Babylonian pronunciation, and mistaking telafe (feet) for telaf he (lentils) Rashi. Another version: Boil me two (meaning ‘some’) lentils, and she boiled him (just) two lentils, taking him literally.

(14) A large measure (of lentils). Thinking that she had intentionally boiled only two the previous day through laziness or meanness, he asked for an extraordinary large quantity, believing that she would scale it down.

(15) Denoting either ‘melons’ or ‘candles’.

(16) Threshold; i.e., break them on the top of the threshold.

(17) no note.

(18) There were two stages of marriage. (i) erusin, betrothal, and (ii) nissu'in, hometaking. The betrothed maiden was called arusah, and her husband arus. Erusin was as binding as marriage, and could be annulled only by divorce, but cohabitation was forbidden, and the arusah remained in her father's house until the nissu'in. By maiden — na'arah — a girl between twelve years and one day and twelve and a half years plus one day old is meant, after which she becomes a bogereth. The reference to a maiden here is to exclude a bogereth, not a minor.
(19) V. Num. XXX, 3ff. But not separately, because she is partly under the authority of both. A bogereth is not under her father's authority, and is therefore excluded.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 67a

IF HER FATHER ANNULLED [HER VOW] BUT NOT THE HUSBAND, OR IF THE HUSBAND ANNULLED [IT] BUT NOT THE FATHER, IT IS NOT ANNULLED; AND IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING IF ONE OF THEM CONFIRMED [IT].

GEMARA. But that[1] is the same as the first clause. HER FATHER AND HUSBAND ANNUL HER VOWS! — I might think that either her father or her husband is meant;[2] therefore we are taught [otherwise].

AND IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING IF ONE OF THEM CONFIRMED [IT]. Then why teach it? If we say that annulment by one without the other is invalid, what need is there to state 'IF ONE OF THEM CONFIRMED [IT]?' — It is necessary, in the case where one of them annulled it and the other confirmed it, and then the latter sought absolution of his confirmation.[3] I might think, that which he confirmed, he has surely overthrown;[4] there fore we are taught that they must both annul simultaneously.[5]

IN THE CASE OF A BETROTHED MAIDEN, HER FATHER AND HER HUSBAND ANNUL HER VOWS. Whence do we know this?[6] — Rabbah[7] said: The Writ saith, And if she be to an husband, when she vowed [. . . then he shall make her vow . . . of no effect]:[8] hence it follows that a betrothed maiden, her father and her husband annul her vows.[9] But perhaps this verse refers to a nesu'ah? — In respect to a nesu'ah there is a different verse, viz., And if she vowed in her husband's house, etc.[10] But perhaps both refer to a nesu'ah,[11] and should you object, what need of two verses relating to a nesu'ah? It is to teach that a husband cannot annul pre-marriage vows?

---

(1) Viz., IF HER FATHER ANNULLED, etc.
(2) The 'and', Heb. ו, having the disjunctive force of 'or'.
(3) By a Rabbi, who granted it to him just as he would for a vows.
(4) Either that the very revoking of his confirmation is in itself the equivalent of nullification, or, having revoked his confirmation, he is now free to nullify the vow.
(5) Not literally, for even if one annulled in the morning, and the other in the evening, it is valid. But there must be no invalidating act between the two nullifications, and here, since one confirmed it, the nullification of the other previous thereto is void.
(6) That her husband may annul her vows, though she has not yet entered his home.
(7) Yalkut reads: Raba.
(8) Num. XXX, 7-9.
(9) This verse is preceded by, But, if her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vow . . . shall stand . . . because her father disallowed her. Then follows: And if she be etc. Now, Rabbah reasons thus: Since we have a different verse for a nesu'ah (a married woman, v. Glos.), as explained below, this verse must refer to an arusah, and consequently, the copulative 'and' must mark a continuation of the preceding verse; i.e., if in her father's house, the father has power to annul her vow, and if at the same time she is married, viz., an arusah, her husband too, in conjunction with her father, exercises this authority. For if the 'and' introduces a separate law, namely, that the husband of arusah can disallow her vows without her father, the verse referring to a nesu'ah is superfluous: if the husband can himself annul the vows of an arusah, surely it goes without saying that he can do so for a nesu'ah! Now this reasoning is implicit in the first verse quoted, but the Talmud proceeds to elucidate it by means of question and answer.

(10) Ibid. II.

(11) But in the case of an arusah the father alone can annul her vows.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 67b

— But does that not follow in any case?[1] Alternatively, I might say 'to be' implies kiddushin.[2] But perhaps the father himself can annul?[3] — If so, what is the need of, 'and bind himself by a bond, being in the father's house . . . if her father disallow . . . not any of her vows shall stand . . . because her father disallowed her'?[4] If the father can annul them alone even when there is an arus, surely he can do so when there is no arus! But perhaps the father needs the arus, but the arus can annul alone? And should you reply, If so, why does Scripture mention the father?[5] It is to shew that if he confirmed, the confirmation is valid![6] — If so, why write, 'and if she vowed in her husband's house': [since] it follows a fortiori: if the arus can annul alone even where there is a father,[7] is it necessary [to state it] when she is no longer under her father's control! But perhaps, 'and if she vowed in her husband's house', teaches that he cannot annul pre-marriage vows?[8] — From that fact itself [it is proved. That] an arus can annul pre-marriage vows: surely, that is [only] because of his partnership with the father.[9]

---

(1) Rashi, Ran, and one alternative in Asheri explain: 'And if she vowed in her husband's house', which obviously refers to a nesu'ah, teaches at the same time that the vow must have been made in her husband's house, and not before marriage. So that 'and if she be, etc.', must refer to an arusah.

(2) The phrase 'if she be' denotes mere betrothal; it therefore refers to an arusah.

(3) Though it has been shewn that the husband can annul only in conjunction with the father, the latter, on the other hand, can perhaps act alone.

(4) Num. XXX, 4-6.

(5) I.e., why is and if she be at all to an husband coupled with because her father disallowed her; as explained p. 217, n. 5, that the and combines the two. But why combine them, if the arus can annul entirely without the father?

(6) I.e., the father still retains that authority. But if he is neutral, the arus alone can annul.

(7) I.e., when she is still under the paternal roof and to some extent under his authority; e.g., her earnings belong to her father.

(8) The question here is not the same as on 67a. There it was suggested that both 'and if she be to an husband' and, 'and if she vowed in her husband's house' refer to a nesu'ah, the latter verse teaching that the husband cannot annul pre-marriage vows. Here the question is: perhaps the first verse refers to an arus, and means that he can annul alone, and the second to a husband (after nissu'in)? But it does not teach that in the second case too he can annul, since this is obvious from the first a fortiori, but implies a limitation: that he cannot annul pre-marriage vows.

(9) It is obvious that an arus alone cannot wield greater authority than a husband. Hence, when we find that in one respect his power is greater, it must be because he does not exercise it alone, but in conjunction with the father, who can disallow his daughter's vows whenever made under his authority.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 68a

The School of R. Ishmael taught: [These are the statutes which the Lord commanded Moses] between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, [being yet in her youth in her father's house]:[1] this teaches that in the case of a betrothed maiden both her father and her husband annul her vows.[2] Now, according to the Tanna of the School of Ishmael, what is the purpose of 'and if she be to an husband'?[3] — He utilizes it for Rabbah's other dictum.[4] Now, how does Raba utilize the verse adduced by the Tanna of the School of Ishmael?[5] — It is necessary to teach that the husband can annul vows which concern himself and his wife.[6]

The scholars propounded: Does the husband cut [the vow] or weaken [it]?[7] How does this problem arise? E.g., If she [the betrothed maiden] vowed not to eat the size of two olives [of anything],[8] and the arus heard of it and annulled the vow, and she ate them. Now, if we say that he cuts the vow apart, she is flagellated; but if he weakens it, it is merely forbidden.[9] What [is the law]? — Come and hear: When was it said that if the husband died, his authority passes over[10] to the father? In the case where the husband did not hear [the vow] before he died, or heard and annulled it, or heard it and was silent,[11] and died on the same day: this is what we learnt: If the husband died, his authority passes over to the father;[12]

---

(1) Num. XXX, 17.

(2) The verse is interpreted as referring to one and the same woman; hence it states that her father and her husband have authority over her, and that is possible only in the case of a betrothed maiden.

(3) Which was utilized on 67a for this teaching.

(4) V. 70a.

(5) Since he deduces this from 'and if she be etc'.

(6) Deduced from 'between a man and his wife', i.e., only such vows as concern them and their mutual relationship.

(7) Does he completely nullify half the vow, leaving the other half for the father, or does he weaken the whole vow, whilst actually nullifying nothing of it? [The same question applies equally to the father (Ran).]

(8) Nothing whatsoever may be eaten of that which is forbidden, but the size of an olive is the smallest quantity for which punishment is imposed.

(9) If he cuts the vow in two, then the size of one olive remains forbidden in its full stringency, and therefore she is flagellated for the violation of her vow. But if he weakens the whole of the vow, though leaving it all forbidden, the prohibition is not so stringent that punishment should be imposed.

(10) Lit., 'emptied out'.

(11) So emended by Bah.

(12) In all these cases the husband had no actually confirmed the vow; therefore the father is left with the full authority to annul it.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 68b

but if he heard and confirmed it, or heard it and was silent, and died on the following day,[1] he [the father] cannot annul it.[2] If the father heard and annulled it, and died before the husband managed to hear of it, — this is what we learnt: If the father died, his authority does not pass over to the husband.[3] If the husband heard and annulled it, and died before the father managed to hear of it, — in this case we learnt: If the husband died, his authority passes over to the father.[4] If the husband heard and annulled it, and the father died before he managed to hear of it, the husband cannot annul it,[5] because the husband can annul only in partnership.

---

(1) Having thus ipso facto confirmed it.

(2) Once the husband has confirmed, the father cannot annul it, even after the former's death.

(3) Infra 70a. With his death his annulment is void, and the husband is not empowered to nullify the vow himself, though in the reverse case the father could do so.

(4) The first clause of the Mishnah means that the father heard it before the husband's death; this clause, that the husband died before the father heard it. Now I might think that only if he had heard it in the husband's lifetime, and so could have annulled it together with him, does he inherit his authority, but if he had not heard of it in her husband's lifetime, his authority is not transmitted. Therefore this clause teaches otherwise,

(5) I.e., act in lieu of her father.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 69a

If the father heard and annulled it, and the husband died before he managed to hear of it, the father can again annul the husband's portion. R. Nathan said; That is the view of Beth Shammai; but Beth Hillel maintain: He cannot annul it [a second time]. This proves that according to Beth Shammai, he cuts it apart, whilst in the view of Beth Hillel he weakens it.[1] This proves it.[2]

Raba propounded: Can absolution be sought from confirmation,[3] or not? Should you say, no absolution can be sought front confirmation, is there absolution from annulment, or not?[4] — Come and hear: For R. Johanan said: One can seek absolution from confirmation but not from annulment.

Rabbah propounded: What if [he said], 'It is confirmed to thee, it is confirmed to thee,' and then sought absolution of his first confirmation? — Come and hear: For Raba said: If he obtained absolution from the first, the second becomes binding upon him.[5]

Rabbah propounded: What if [he declares]. 'It be confirmed unto thee and annulled unto thee, but the confirmation be not valid unless the annulment had operated?'[6]

---

(1) Hence, according to Beth Shammai, when the father annulled it, the husband's portion remains, as it were, intact in all its stringency. The husband's right to annul the other half is sufficiently tangible, since that half is as stringent in itself as the whole, to be transmitted to the father. But in the views of Beth Hillel annulment by the father, as by the husband, merely weakens it; hence the husband's right to wipe off entirely a prohibition that is already weakened is too intangible to be transmitted to the father. — But in the first clause, where without the father having annulled his share, the husband annuls it and then dies, since the father can annul his own share he can annul too the weakened share of the husband (Asheri).

(2) And since in all disputes between Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel the halachah is in the latter, the final ruling is that the husband weakens the incidence of the whole vow.

(3) By a Sage, after expressing 'regret'.

(4) The confirmation of a vow is as a vow; hence the question whether it can be revoked. The revocation of the annulment of a vow should not be in question, since it might be assumed that one cannot revoke in order to impose a prohibition, but that elsewhere (76b) we find the two likened to each other.

(5) V. supra 18a: just as there, so here too, and hence the second confirmation retains its full force.

(6) Without the stipulation it is obvious that the annulment is invalid, for a vow once confirmed cannot be annulled. Since, however, one is made dependent upon the other, the question arises whether the annulment cancels the confirmation or not.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 69b

— Come and hear [a solution] from the controversy of R. Meir and R. Jose; For we learnt: [If one declares,] 'This [animal] be a substitute for a burnt-offering, a substitute for a peace-offering,' it is a substitute for a burnt-offering [only]; this is R. Meir's view. But R. Jose ruled: If that was his original intention,[1] since it is impossible to pronounce both designations simultaneously, his declarations are valid.[2] Now, even R. Meir asserted [that the second statement is disregarded] only because he did not say, 'Let the first not be valid unless the second take effect'; but here that he declared, 'but the confirmation be not valid unless the annulment has operated,' even R. Meir admits that the annulment is valid.

Rabbah propounded: What [if he declares], 'It be confirmed unto thee and annulled to thee simultaneously?'[3] — Come and hear: For Rabbah said: Whatever is not [valid] consecutively, is not valid even simultaneously.[4]

Rabbah propounded: What [if he declares], 'It be confirmed to thee to-day? Do we rule, it is as though he had said to her, 'but it be annulled unto thee to-morrow' [by implication], or perhaps he in fact did not declare thus?

---

(1) To declare it a substitute for both.

(2) V. Lev. XXVII, 33; He shall not search whether it be good or bad, neither shall he change it: and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy. This is interpreted as meaning that if an animal he dedicated for a particular sacrifice, e.g., a peace-offering, and then a second substituted for it, both are holy, the second having exactly the same holiness as the first. Now, R. Meir rules that if he declares it a substitute for two other consecrated animals in succession, only the first declaration is valid, and the second disregarded. But R. Jose maintains that if the second statement was not added as an afterthought, but formed part of the original intention, the whole is valid. Consequently, the animal must be sold, and the money expended half for a burnt-offering and half for a peace-offering.

(3) [Or, if he said at one and the same time 'It be confirmed and annulled to thee'].

(4) If one marries two sisters in succession, the second marriage is obviously invalid; hence, if one makes a simultaneous declaration of marriage to two sisters, such declaration is entirely null, v. Kid. 50b. Thus here too, since they could not both take effect if pronounced in succession, they are null when pronounced simultaneously. It is therefore as though he has not spoken at all, and he remains at liberty to confirm or annul the vow, as he pleases.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 70a

Now, if you say, he did not in fact declare thus, what if he declares, 'It be confirmed unto thee to-morrow';[1] do we rule, he is unable to annul it for to-morrow, since [by implication] he confirmed it for today;[2] or perhaps, since he did not state, 'It be confirmed unto thee to-day,' by declaring, 'It be annulled unto thee to-morrow,' he really meant from to-day? Now, should you say that even so, since he [implicitly] confirmed it to-day,[3] it is as though in force to-morrow too,[4] what if he declares, 'It be confirmed unto thee for an hour?' Do we say, It is as though he declared, 'It be annulled unto thee thereafter'; or perhaps, he in fact did not say thus to her? Should you rule, he did not in fact declare thus, what if he did explicitly annul it?[5] Do we say, Since he confirmed it, he confirmed it [for good]; or perhaps, as he is empowered to confirm and annul it the whole day, if he says, 'It be annulled unto thee after an hour,' his statement is efficacious? — Come and hear: [If a woman vows], 'Behold, I will be a nazirite'; and her husband on hearing it, exclaimed 'And l'; he cannot [subsequently] annul it.[6] But why so? Let us say that his exclamation, 'And I,' referred to himself only [viz.,] that he would be a nazirite, but as for her vow, 'Behold, I will be a nazirite,' he confirmed it [but] for one hour;[7] whilst thereafter, if he wishes to annul it, why cannot he do so? Surely it is because having confirmed it, he confirmed it [for good]! — No. He [the Tanna of that Mishnah] holds that every 'And I' is as though one declares, 'It be permanently confirmed unto thee.'

MISHNAH. IF THE FATHER DIES, HIS AUTHORITY DOES NOT PASS OVER TO THE HUSBAND; BUT IF THE HUSBAND DIES, HIS AUTHORITY PASSES OVER TO THE FATHER. IN THIS RESPECT, THE FATHER'S POWER IS GREATER THAN THE HUSBAND'S. BUT IN ANOTHER, THE HUSBAND'S POWER IS GREATER THAN THAT OF THE FATHER, FOR THE HUSBAND CAN ANNUL [HER VOWS] AS BOGERETH[8] BUT THE FATHER CANNOT ANNUL HER VOWS AS BOGERETH.[9]

GEMARA. What is the reason?'[10] — Because the Writ saith, In her youth, she is in her father's house.[11]

IF THE HUSBAND DIES, HIS AUTHORITY PASSES OVER TO HER FATHER. Whence do we know this?[12] — Said Rabbah:[13] Because it is written, And if she be at all to an husband and her vows be upon her:[14] [

---

(1) Without first asserting, 'It be disallowed thee to-day'.

(2) A vow can be annulled only on the day the husband or father hears of it. — Num. XXX, 6-9, 13.

(3) Accepting the first alternative.

(4) Having confirmed it for the first day, he no longer has the power to annul it; hence his nullification from the morrow is invalid.

(5) I.e., it be confirmed to thee for an hour and thereafter annulled.

(6) Mishnah, Nazir 20b.

(7) Since he merely attached his vow to that of his wife, he must have meant momentarily to confirm the vow.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) The father can annul his daughter's vow only if a na'arah (v. Glos.)

(10) That the father's authority is not transmitted to the husband, as it is in the reverse case.

(11) Num. XXX, 17: i.e., as long as she is in her youth, she is under parental control. Hence if her father dies, his authority is not transferable.

(12) The first question was 'what is the reason thereof', because, granted that the husband's authority is transmitted, as stated in the second clause, why is the father's not? But now the Talmud asks, how do we know that the husband's authority is transmitted?

(13) This is alluded to in 68a, where the reading is Raba.

(14) Ibid. 7. The word for 'being' is repeated, from which it is deduced that two betrothals are referred to. This is preceded by a verse dealing with the father's powers of annulment, and as stated above (p. 217, n. 5), the 'And' commencing v. 7 combines the two verses, teaching that even in the case of marriage the father may still retain his authority.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 70b

hence the [vows made by her] previously to her second betrothal are assimilated to [those made] previously to her first betrothal;[1] just as those made before the first betrothal, the father can annul alone, so also those made before the second betrothal, the father can annul alone. But perhaps this is only in the case of vows which were unknown to the arus,[2] but those which were known to the arus the father is not able to annul?[3] — As to vows unknown to the arus, these[4] follow from 'in her youth, she is in her father's house'.[5]

IN THIS RESPECT, THE FATHER'S POWER IS GREATER THAN THE HUSBAND'S etc. How is this meant?[6] Shall we say, that he betrothed her[7] whilst a na'arah, and then she became a bogereth? But consider: [her father's] death frees her from her father's authority, and the bogereth stage frees her from her father's authority; then just as at death, his authority does not pass over to her husband, so on puberty, his authority should not pass over to her husband?[8] Again, if he betrothed her as a bogereth, surely that has already been taught once, viz., A bogereth who tarried twelve months?[9] (Now this is self-contradictory. You say, 'a bogereth who tarried twelve months': in the case of a bogereth, why twelve months? thirty days are sufficient?[10] — Read: A bogereth and one [viz., a na'arah] who tarried twelve months.) But still the difficulty remains?[11] — I can answer either that here it is specifically taught, whilst there bogereth is mentioned because it is desired to state the controversy between R. Eliezer and the Rabbis. Or, alternatively, bogereth [there] is specifically taught; but [here], because the first clause states 'IN THIS RESPECT etc.,' a second [contrary] clause IN THIS RESPECT, is added.[12]

---

(1) I.e., since the verse implies a reference to two betrothals, they are equalized, and therefore the periods preceding them too. The period preceding the second betrothal is of course after the first husband's death.

(2) Lit., 'which were not seen by the arus'. I.e., the first arus died before becoming aware of them.

(3) Just as the vows made prior to her first betrothal.

(4) Sc. that the father can annul these alone after the death of the arus.

(5) Which implies that as long as there is no other authority over her, her father is in authority, and the very least to which this can be applied is to vows of which the arus was not aware, hence the deduction from, 'and if she be at all to an husband' must apply even to vows known to the arus before his death

(6) That the husband (arus) can annul the vows of a bogereth.

(7) I.e. by kiddushin, making her an arusah.

(8) Since she was under parental control when she made the vow.

(9) V. infra 73b; there it is seen that the arus can annul the vows of a bogereth.

(10) V. p. 216, n. 1; in the case of a na'arah the interval between kiddushin (erusin) and nissu'in might not be more than twelve months; in the case of a bogereth, not more than thirty days. After that, even if the nissu'in were not celebrated, the arus is responsible for her maintenance, though she is still in her father's house.

(11) Viz., that we know from elsewhere that the arus can annul the vows of a bogereth.

(12) Though really unnecessary here.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 71a

MISHNAH. IF ONE VOWED AS AN ARUSAH, WAS DIVORCED ON THAT DAY AND BETROTHED [AGAIN] ON THE SAME DAY, EVEN A HUNDRED TIMES,[1] HER FATHER AND LAST BETROTHED HUSBAND CAN ANNUL HER VOWS. THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE: AS LONG AS SHE HAS NOT PASSED OUT INTO HER OWN CONTROL FOR [BUT] ONE HOUR, HER FATHER AND LAST HUSBAND CAN ANNUL HER VOWS.[2]

GEMARA. Whence do we know that the last arus can annul vows known[3] to the first arus? — Said Samuel: Because it is written, And if she be at all to an husband, and her vows are upon her:[4] this implies, the vows that were already 'upon her'.[5] But perhaps that is only where they [sc. her vows] were not known to her first arus, but those which were known to her first arus, the last arus cannot annul? — 'Upon her' is a superfluous word.[6] It was taught in accordance with Samuel: A betrothed maiden, her father and her husband annul her vows. How so? If her father heard and disallowed her, and the husband died before he managed to hear, and she became betrothed [again] on the same day, even a hundred times, her father and her last husband can annul her vows. If her husband heard and disallowed her, and before the father heard it the husband died, the father must again annul the husband's portion.[7] R. Nathan said; That is the view of Beth Shammai; but Beth Hillel maintain: He cannot re-annul.[8] Wherein do they differ?

---

(1) To a hundred.

(2) I.e., that she has never been completely married (with nissu'in) and divorced, in which case she would be her own mistress.

(3) Lit., 'seen by'.

(4) Num. XXX, 7.

(5) I.e., before she was betrothed.

(6) Because Scripture could state, now if she be at all to an husband, then as for her vows, or the utterance of her lips etc. Hence 'upon her' is added to intimate that the last arus can annul vows made during the first betrothal. Now actually the Mishnah may simply mean that if she was betrothed a number of times, the power of annulment always lies with her father and her last husband, and does not necessarily refer to vows made during an earlier betrothal; whilst the phrase 'on that day' may be due to her father, who of course can annul only on the day he heard her vow. But Samuel assumed that it does in fact refer to such vows, and therefore the passage may be understood as though it read, Samuel said; Whence do we know, etc.? Hence this law is ascribed to Samiel rather than to the Mishnah, and consequently the Talmud proceeds to quote a Baraitha in support of Samuel's ruling.

(7) It goes without saying that he must annul his own portion. But the Baraitha teaches that he must also annul the husband's portion, because the latter's action is rendered void by his death.

(8) Without the co-operation of the second arus. Thus, according to Beth Hillel the second arus has a right of annulment over the vows known to the first arus, which is in support of Samuel.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 71b

— Beth Shammai maintain that even in respect to vows known to the arus, his [the husband's] authority passes over to the father; also he [the husband] cuts [the vow] apart;[1] whilst Beth Hillel maintain: Her father and second husband [together] must annul her vow, and the husband does not cut it apart.[2]

The scholars propounded; Is divorce as silence or as confirmation?[3] What is the practical difference? E.g., if she vowed, her husband heard it, divorced and remarried her on the same day:

now, if you say it is as silence, he can now disallow her; but should you rule that it is as confirmation, he can not?

---

(1) V. p. 220, n. 4; because he cuts the vow apart, therefore his powers therein are finished when he has annulled it, and consequently, even if she remarries, the father can annul the vow entirely alone, without the co-operation of the second arus.

(2) Therefore the husband only weakens it; hence he is not finished with it, and so, on remarriage, his authority is transmitted to the second husband (Ran). Asheri, however, explains that the question whether the father needs the co-operation of the second husband is independent of whether the husband cuts the vow apart or weakens the stringency of the whole; it is mentioned here merely because, as was stated on 69a, they do differ on this question too.

(3) If a woman made a vow, and her husband heard it and divorced her on that day, without first annulling the vow.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 72a

— Come and hear; When was it said that if the husband dies his authority passes over to the father? If the husband did not hear [the vow], or heard and annulled it, or heard it, was silent, and died on the same day.[1] Now, should you say that divorce is as silence, let him [the Tanna] also teach, 'or heard it and divorced her'? Since it is not taught thus, it follows that divorce is as confirmation! — Then consider the second clause: But if he heard and confirmed it, or heard it, was silent, and died on the following day, he [the father] cannot annul it.[2] But if you maintain that divorce [too] is as confirmation, let him also state, 'or if he heard it and divorced her.' But since this is omitted, it proves that divorce is tantamount to silence! Hence no deductions can be made from this; if the first clause is exact, the second clause is stated [in that form] on account of the first; if the second is exact, the first is so taught on account of the second.[3]

Come and hear; IF SHE VOWED AS AN ARUSAH, WAS DIVORCED ON THAT DAY AND BETROTHED [AGAIN] ON THE SAME DAY, EVEN A HUNDRED TIMES, HER FATHER AND HER LAST HUSBAND CAN ANNUL HER VOWS; this proves that divorce is the equivalent of silence, for if it is as confirmation, can the second arus annul vows which the first arus confirmed?[4] — No. This refers to a case where the first arus did not hear thereof. If so, why particularly state ON THE SAME DAY? The same holds good even after a hundred days! — This refers to a case where the arus did not hear thereof, but her father did; so that he can annul only on the same day, but not afterwards.

Come and hear: If she vowed on one day, and he divorced her on the same day and took her back on the same day, he cannot annul it.[5] This proves that divorce is as confirmation! — I will tell you. This refers to a nesu'ah,[6] and the reason that he cannot annul is because a husband cannot annul pre-marriage vows.[7]

---

(1) V. 68a, b, and notes.

(2) The silence of a whole day is the equivalent of confirmation.

(3) I.e., one clause must have been taught with exactitude, and the omission of divorce is intentional; but the other has been stated inexactly, for though divorce could have been included therein, it was omitted for the sake of parallelism.

(4) Surely not!

(5) Now it is assumed that it refers to mere betrothal.

(6) I.e., when she finally becomes married to him.

(7) I.e., in the case of a nesu'ah; v. supra 67a.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 72b

MISHNAH. IT IS THE PRACTICE OF SCHOLARS,[1] BEFORE THE DAUGHTER OF ONE OF THEM DEPARTS FROM HIM FOR NISSU'IN], TO DECLARE TO HER, 'ALL THE VOWS

WHICH THOU DIDST VOW IN MY HOUSE ARE ANNULLED'. LIKEWISE THE HUSBAND, BEFORE SHE ENTERS INTO HIS CONTROL [FOR NISSU'IN] WOULD SAY TO HER, 'ALL VOWS WHICH THOU DIDST VOW BEFORE THOU ENTERST INTO MY CONTROL ARE ANNULLED'; BECAUSE ONCE SHE ENTERS INTO HIS CONTROL HE CANNOT ANNUL THEM.[2]

GEMARA. Rami b. Hama propounded: Can a husband annul [a vow] without hearing [it]:[3] is, and her husband heard it,[4] expressly stated,[5] or not — Said Raba: Come and hear: IT IS THE PRACTICE OF SCHOLARS, BEFORE THE DAUGHTER OF ONE OF THEM DEPARTS FROM HIM, TO DECLARE TO HER, 'ALL THE VOWS WHICH THOU DIDST VOW IN MY HOUSE ARE ANNULLED'. But he did not hear them![6] — Only when he hears them does he annul them. If so, why make a declaration before he hears?[7] — He [the Tanna] informs us this: that it is the practice of scholars to go over such matters.[8] Come and hear, from the second clause: LIKEWISE THE HUSBAND, BEFORE SHE ENTERS INTO HIS CONTROL, WOULD SAY TO HER [etc.]! — Here too it means that he said, 'When I hear them.'[9]

Come and hear: If one says to his wife, 'All vows which thou mayest vow until I return from such and such a place are confirmed,' his statement is valueless;[10] [If he said] 'Behold, they are annulled,' R. Eliezer ruled: They are annulled. But he has not heard them![11] — Here too [it means] that he said, 'When I hear them.' Why then state it now? Let him disallow her when he hears it? — He fears, I may then be busily occupied.[12]

Come and hear: If one says to a guardian,[13] 'Annul all the vows which my wife may make between now and my return from such and such a place', and he does so: I might think that they are void, therefore Scripture teaches, her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.[14] This is the view of R. Josiah. Said R. Jonathan to him: But we find in the whole Torah that a man's agent is as himself![15] Now, even R. Josiah ruled thus only because it is a Scriptural decree, 'her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void': but both agree that a man's agent is as himself;[16] but he [the husband] did not hear the vows![17]

---

(1) Lit., 'disciples of the Sages'.

(2) Because they are pre-nissu'in vows.

(3) I.e., can he declare that if his wife has vowed, he vetoes her vows?

(4) Num. XXX, 8.

(5) That he can annul only if he heard it.

(6) The fact that he generalises, 'ALL THE VOWS' proves this.

(7) Since his present annulment is, on this hypothesis, invalid.

(8) I.e., to mention this at frequent intervals; the daughter, on hearing this, may confess that she has vowed so and so, and then the father really annuls it.

(9) According to the reading of our text, this answer differs from the previous. There it was stated that the father can annul the vows only when he hears them, his purpose in generalizing being to induce his daughter to reveal that she had vowed. Here, however, the answer is that this general annulment will automatically become valid when the husband hears the vow, and another declaration is unnecessary. The reason for the difference is this: since she became a nesu'ah, and entirely freed from parental control, the father will not be in a position to annul her vows when he hears them; hence he cannot annul them in anticipation either. The husband, on the contrary, will have her even more under his authority when she actually vows; therefore his anticipatory veto is valid.

(10) So that he can subsequently annul them.

(11) Proving that this is unnecessary.

(12) And overlook it; hence the annulment is made now.

(13) I.e., one appointed to be in charge of his household in his absence.

(14) Num. XXX, 14.

(15) Hence the guardian's annulment is valid.

(16) So that but for the decree, the annulment would be valid.
(17) And if it were necessary for him to hear them before making them void, his authorisation to the guardian would be invalid, since a man cannot invest an agent with authority which he himself lacks.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 73a

— Here too it means that he said, 'When I hear of it, annul it.' But when he hears it, let him annul it himself? — He fears, I may then be busily occupied.

Rami b. Hama propounded: Can a deaf man disallow [the vows of] his wife? Now, should you rule that a husband can annul without hearing, that is because he is capable of hearing; but a deaf man, who is incapable of hearing, falls within R. Zera's dictum, viz., That which is eligible for mixing, [the lack of] mixing does not hinder its validity; whilst that which is not eligible for mixing, [the lack of] mixing hinders its validity?[1] Or perhaps, 'and her husband heard it'[2] is not indispensable? — Said Raba, Come and hear: 'And her husband heard', — this excludes the wife of a deaf man. This proves it.

The scholars propounded: Can a husband disallow [the vows of] his two wives simultaneously: is the word 'her' particularly stated, or not?[3] — Said Rabina, Come and hear: Two suspected wives are not made to drink[4] simultaneously, because each is emboldened[5] by her companion.[6] R. Judah said: It is not [forbidden] on that score, but because it is written, and he shall make her drink.'[7] implying, her alone.[8]

---

(1) The reference is to a meal-offering, in which the flour was mixed with oil. Not more than sixty 'esronim ('isaron, pl. 'esronim, is the tenth part of an ephah) could be thoroughly mixed with oil in the vessels used for that purpose. Hence, if a person vowed a meal-offering of sixty-one 'esronim, sixty were brought in one vessel, and one in another. Whereon R. Zera observed, though the meal-offering is in fact valid even if not mixed with oil at all, it must be capable of being mixed, and therefore sixty-one esronim in one utensil would be invalid. So here too, though it may be unnecessary for the husband actually to hear the vow, he must be physically able to hear it.
(2) I.e., the hearing of the husband.
(3) Num. XXX, 9, 'but if her husband disallow her'. I.e., when Scripture uses the singular 'her' in this connection, does it expressly teach that only one wife can be disallowed at a time, or is no particular emphasis to be laid thereon, the singular being the usual mode of expression?
(4) V. Num. V, 2 ff.
(5) Lit., 'her heart swells'.
(6) The consciousness that another is undergoing the same ordeal emboldens each not to confess.
(7) Ibid. 27; In Tosef. Neg. the verse quoted is, and the Priest shall bring her near, ibid. 16. [MS.M. reads: because it is written 'her', the reference either to verse 16 or 19, 'The priest shall cause her to swear'. V. Sot. (Sonc. ed.) p. 32. n. 2.]
(8) Hence the same applies to vows: in R. Judah's view, two wives cannot have their vows disallowed simultaneously; in the opinion of the first Tanna, they can.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 73b

MISHNAH. [IN THE CASE OF] A BOGERETH WHO TARRIED TWELVE MONTHS, AND A WIDOW [WHO TARRIED] THIRTY DAYS,[1] — R. ELIEZER SAID; SINCE HER [BETROTHED] HUSBAND IS RESPONSIBLE FOR HER MAINTENANCE, HE MAY ANNUL. [HER VOWS]. BUT THE SAGES SAY: THE HUSBAND CANNOT ANNUL UNTIL SHE ENTERS INTO HIS CONTROL.[2]

GEMARA. Rabbah said: R. Eliezer and the early Mishnah[3] taught the same thing. For we learnt; A virgin is given twelve months to provide for herself.[4] When the twelve months expire,[5] she must be supported by him [i.e., her arus] and may eat terumah.[6] But the yabam[7] does not authorize her to eat terumah.[8] If she spent six months in the lifetime of[9] her husband [the arus], and six months in that of the yabam,[10] or even the whole period less one day in the lifetime of her husband, or the whole period less one day in that of the yabam, she may not eat terumah: this is the early Mishnah. But a subsequent Beth din[11] rules: No woman can partake of terumah until she enters the huppah.[12] Said Abaye to him, Perhaps it is not so. The early Mishnah informs us in respect of [her] eating terumah, which is [forbidden merely by] a Rabbinical enactment;[13] but as for vows, which are Biblically binding, I may say that it is not so. And you know R. Eliezer's view[14] only in respect to vows for the reason which R. Phinehas said in Raba's name, viz.: Every [woman] who vows, vows conditionally upon her husband's assent.[15] But as for terumah, it may well be that though [forbidden only by] a Rabbinical precept,[16] she may not eat thereof.

---

(1) V. supra 70b.

(2) V. supra, 70b.

(3) 'Early Mishnah' bears various connotations. Sometimes it simply means the earlier view of a particular school, which subsequently gave a different ruling (v. Hag. 2a, where, however, the term does not occur in the Mishnah itself but is used by an Amora to differentiate between the earlier and the later views of Beth Hillel). Elsewhere it may denote the collection of Mishnaic material made by the 'elders of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel'; as such it is brought into contrast with the rulings of later Rabbis, e.g., R. Akiba; v. Sanh. III, 4; 'Ed. VII, 2. But it is also used to differentiate between the views of earlier and later Rabbis. Thus, in the present instance, the term connotes the views of R. Tarfon and R. Akiba (v. Keth. 57a), with which 'a later Beth din' (v. text infra) differed; here, too the term is so used by an Amora.

(4) I.e., to make the necessary preparations for marriage, such as acquiring a trousseau; the reference is to an arusah, and twelve months is the maximum that may elapse before the nissu'in without either side having legal cause for complaint.

(5) While nissu'in was still postponed.

(6) If the daughter of an Israelite is betrothed to a priest, she may eat terumah, as is deduced from Lev. XXII, 11. By a Rabbinical law, however, she is forbidden until after the nissu'in: but if twelve months have elapsed, she is permitted.

(7) The levir, v. Glos.

(8) V. n. 5: on the priest's death she reverts to her former status, and even if there is no issue, so that she is bound to marry the yabam, this tie does not permit her to eat terumah.

(9) Lit., 'in the presence of'.

(10) I.e., the arus having died within the twelve months.

(11) 'Beth din', which is now generally taken to mean a court of law, was originally the court or college which decided on civil and religious questions; (v. J.E., s.v. Beth din.)

(12) V. Glos. i.e., until the home-taking, v. Keth. 57a. — Thus both R. Eliezer in our Mishnah and the early Mishnah maintain that after twelve months they are regarded as completely married: R. Eliezer, in that the husband can annul her vows; the early Mishnah, in that his wife may eat terumah.

(13) V. p. 231, n. 5.

(14) That the period of twelve months establishes quasi nissu'in.

(15) Though the stipulation is not expressed, in recognition of her dependence upon him, since he maintains her. Hence the same holds good of an arus after twelve months, who also must provide for her.

(16) This interpretation of the phrase terumah of the Rabbis follows Asheri.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 74a

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN WAITS FOR A YABAM,[1] WHETHER FOR ONE OR FOR TWO,[2] — R. ELIEZER RULED: HE [THE YABAM] CAN ANNUL [HER VOWS]. R. JOSHUA SAID: [ONLY IF SHE WAITS] FOR ONE, BUT NOT FOR TWO. R. AKIBA SAID; NEITHER FOR ONE NOR FOR TWO. R. ELIEZER ARGUED: IF A MAN CAN ANNUL THE VOWS OF A WOMAN WHOM HE ACQUIRED HIMSELF, HOW MUCH THE MORE CAN HE ANNUL THOSE OF A WOMAN GIVEN TO HIM BY GOD![3] SAID R. AKIBA TO HIM; IT IS NOT SO; IF YOU SPEAK OF A WOMAN WHOM HE ACQUIRES HIMSELF, THAT IS BECAUSE OTHERS HAVE NO RIGHTS IN HER; WILL YOU SAY [THE SAME] OF A WOMAN GRANTED TO HIM BY GOD, IN WHOM OTHERS TOO HAVE RIGHTS![4] R. JOSHUA SAID

TO HIM: AKIBA, YOUR WORDS APPLY TO TWO YEBAMIM; BUT WHAT WILL YOU ANSWER IF THERE IS ONLY ONE YABAM? HE REPLIED, THE YEBAMAH IS NOT AS COMPLETELY UNITED TO THE YABAM[5] AS AN ARUSAH IS TO HER [BETROTHED] HUSBAND.[6]

GEMARA. It is well according to R. Akiba, for he maintains that the bond [wherewith she is bound to the yabam] involves no legal consequences;[7] also according to R. Joshua, who maintains that the tie is a real one.[8] But what is R. Eliezer's reason? Even if the tie is a real one, selection is not retrospective?[9] — R. Ammi answered: [The circumstances are] e.g., that he [the yabam] made a [betrothal] declaration,[10] R. Eliezer ruling with Beth Shammai that a declaration completely acquires.[11] But R. Joshua says thus: That applies only to one yabam, but not to two yebamin; for can there be such a case that though when his brother comes he can prohibit her to him by cohabitation or divorce, and yet he [the first] can annul![12] Whilst R. Akiba maintains that the bond carries with it no legal consequences. Now, according to R. Eleazar,[13] who maintained that in the opinion of Beth Shammai a declaration is binding only in that it renders her co-wife[14] ineligible,[15] what can be said?[16] — The reference here is to one who had come before Court and been ordered to support her;[17] and [the law] is in accordance with the dictum of R. Phineas in Raba's name: Every woman who vows, vows conditionally upon her husband's assent.

---

(1) This is the designation of the widow between the death of her husband and her union with or rejection by the yabam.

(2) If there is more than one, she waits for all, as anyone may marry or free her.

(3) Lit., 'heaven'. The yabam acquires his sister-in-law through a Biblical precept.

(4) I.e., all the brothers of the deceased have the same rights in her.

(5) [MS.M.: HER HUSBAND v. infra p. 236, n. 3.]

(6) The meaning of this is discussed below.

(7) Lit., 'there is no real tie'. E.g., in respect of vows this tie gives him no right of veto.

(8) Hence, if there is only one yabam, he can annul her vows, but not if there are two, since it is not clear which will take her.

(9) Bererah, a term denoting retrospective validity of a subsequent selection. CF. supra Mishnah 45b, v. Glos. Thus, here, when she vows, it is not clear which yabam will eventually marry her. [Unlike, however, elsewhere in the Talmud where this principle is debated and gives rise to difference of opinion, its application here would not be retro-active, as we are not considering whether the annulment by one yabam before marriage becomes effective after marriage, but whether it takes effect immediately. And in regard to this it is taken as axiomatic that there is no bererah, as in the case of two yebamim it cannot be stated with certainty which of the two will be her husband (cf. Adereth. S. Kiddushin). The term bererah is accordingly used here in a loose sense and in fact does not occur in the parallel passage, Yeb. 29b; v. a.l.]

(10) מאמר in reference to a yabam means a formal declaration, 'be thou betrothed to me'.

(11) I.e., by means of this declaration she is his wife in all legal respects; hence that yabam can annul her vows. — The view of Beth Hillel is that only cohabitation effects this.

(12) I.e., even in Beth Shammai's view a declaration is a legal betrothal only if there is but one yabam, but not if there are two. Because even after the declaration, if the other cohabited with her or divorced her, she is forbidden to the first.

(13) An amora; the Tanna in the Mishnah is R. Eliezer.

(14) Two or more wives of the same husband are co-wives (Zaroth) to each other.

(15) Lit., to reject the co-wife'. In the following case; A, B and C, are three brothers, A and B being married to X and Y, two sisters. If A dies childless and C makes a declaration to X (but does not consummate the marriage), and then B dies childless too, Beth Shammai rule that X, A's widow, remains C's wife; hence Y, B's wife and the would-be co-wife of X, is ineligible to him, since one cannot take in marriage a yebamah who is also his wife's sister. Thus we see that Beth Shammai rule that the declaration made by C is Biblically valid as betrothal, for otherwise he would be regarded as having become the yabam of two sisters simultaneously, in which case a different law applies. Thereon R. Eleazar observed, only in this respect did Beth Shammai hold a declaration to be Biblically binding; but should he subsequently desire to free her, a divorce is not sufficient (as it would be had the marriage been consummated), but halizah too is needed.

(16) Since then she is not his wife in all respects, why can he annul her vows?

(17) If the yabam delayed to marry or free her, she could claim support from him. V. Yeb. 41b.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 74b

We learnt: R. ELIEZER ARGUED, IF HE CAN ANNUL THE VOWS OF A WOMAN WHOM HE ACQUIRED HIMSELF, SURELY HE CAN ANNUL THOSE OF A WOMAN GIVEN TO HIM BY GOD! But if it means that he made her a declaration, it is [also] a case of acquiring her himself? — It means that he acquired her himself through the instrumentality of Heaven.[1]

You may [now] solve Rabbah's problem? [Viz.,] in the view of Beth Shammai, does a declaration effect erusin or nissu'in?[2] You can solve it that it effects nissu'in; for if it effects erusin, surely we learnt, [In the case of] a betrothed maiden, her father and [betrothed] husband [jointly] annul her vows?[3] Said R. Nahman b. Isaac: What is meant by 'He can annul [her vows]'? He can annul [them] in conjunction with her father.[4]

It was taught likewise as R. Ammi: If a woman waits for a yabam, whether for one or for two, — R. Eliezer ruled: he can annul [her vows]; R. Joshua said: [Only if she waits] for one, but not for two; R. Akiba said, Neither for one nor for two. R. Eliezer argued: If a woman, in whom he has no portion at all until she comes under his authority [by marriage], yet once she comes under his authority, she is completely his;[5] then a woman in whom he has a portion even before she comes under his authority,[6] when she does come under his authority, she is surely completely his! Said R. Akiba, No. If you say this in the case of a woman whom he acquires himself, that is because just as he has no portion in her [before marriage], so have others no portion in her; will you say [the same] of a woman gifted to him by God, in whom, just as he has a portion, so have others too a portion in her! Thereupon R. Joshua said to him: Akiba, your words apply to two yebamim: what will you answer in respect of one yabam? He replied: Have we then drawn a distinction [in other respects] between one yabam and two yebamim, whether he makes her a declaration or not? and just as it is in reference to other matters, so it is in reference to vows.[7] Thus did Ben 'Azzai lament, 'Woe to thee, Ben 'Azzai, that thou didst not study under R. Akiba.'[8] How

---

(1) Scripture in the first place giving him a unique right in her.

(2) On the hypothesis that the Mishnah refers to a yabam who made a declaration.

(3) Whilst this Mishnah merely mentions the yabam.

(4) Though the Mishnah does not state it, that is merely because it deals only with the question whether a yabam has annulment rights at all, without inquiring into the extent of such rights.

(5) That he may annul her vows either alone (after nissu'in) or in conjunction with her father.

(6) The yabam has a presumptive claim upon her as soon as her husband dies childless.

(7) The reference is explained on 75a; — hence, since one of two yebamim cannot annul, one himself is also unable to annul. Lit., 'wait in attendance upon R. Akiba'.

(8) He was so impressed with the keen intellect displayed by R. Akiba in this controversy, that he voiced his regret at not having studied under him. — Ben 'Azzai was a younger contemporary of Akiba, and in spite of this lament he followed R. Akiba in halachah and exegesis; whilst his tone towards him is that of a pupil to his teacher. For that reason the amoraim concluded that he was a disciple-colleague. V. Weiss. Dor. II, 112. Jer. B.B. IX, 17b; Bab. ibid. 158b; Jer. Shek. III, 47b.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 75a

does this Baraitha support R. Ammi? — Because it states, 'whether he made her a declaration or not.'[1] Alternately, [it follows] from the first clause, which States, 'then when she does come under his authority, she is surely completely his': but if he did not betroth her, how is she completely his? Hence it follows that he had made a declaration to her.

What is meant by ‘and just as it is in reference to other matters, so it is in reference to vows’? — Said Raba, It means this: Do you not admit that one is not stoned for [violating] her, as in the case of a betrothed maiden?[2] R. Ashi said, The Mishnah too supports [this interpretation]:[3] THE YEBAMAH IS NOT AS COMPLETELY UNITED TO HER [BETROTHED] HUSBAND AS AN ARUSAH TO HER [BETROTHED] HUSBAND.[4]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS TO HIS WIFE, ‘ALL VOWS WHICH YOU MAY VOW FROM NOW UNTIL I RETURN FROM SUCH AND SUCH A PLACE ARE CONFIRMED,’ THE STATEMENT IS VALUELESS; [IF HE SAID] ‘BEHOLD, THEY ARE ANNULLED,’ — R. ELIEZER RULES, THEY ARE ANNULLED; THE SAGES MAINTAINED, THEY ARE NOT ANNULLED. SAID R. ELIEZER: IF HE CAN ANNUL VOWS WHICH HAVE ALREADY HAD THE FORCE OF A PROHIBITION,[5] SURELY HE CAN ANNUL THOSE WHICH HAVE NOT HAD THE FORCE OF PROHIBITION! THEY SAID TO HIM: BEHOLD, IT IS SAID, HER HUSBAND MAY ESTABLISH IT, AND HER HUSBAND MAY ANNUL IT:[6] THAT WHICH HAS ENTERED THE CATEGORY OF CONFIRMATION, HAS ENTERED THE CATEGORY OF ANNULMENT;[7] BUT THAT WHICH HAS NOT ENTERED THE CATEGORY OF CONFIRMATION, HAS NOT ENTERED THE CATEGORY OF ANNULMENT.

GEMARA. The scholars propounded: In R. Eliezer's view, do they take effect and [then] become annulled, or do they take no effect at all? What is the practical difference?

---

(1) Which proves that the former is the case here, as otherwise this is irrelevant.

(2) Even if a declaration was made, her seducer is not stoned: this proves that she is not yet his wife, and therefore the same is true of vows.

(3) [That R. Akiba based his argument on the penalty for violation, and consequently that the Mishnah deals with the case where a declaration was made, (cf. Rashi).]

(4) [Since he is designated as her husband, this shows that we deal with a case where he made a declaration (Rashi); v. supra p. 233, n. 1.] And the reference can only be to the penalty for violation.

(5) I.e., after they are made.

(6) Num. XXX, 14.

(7) Having been made, it can be confirmed, and hence annulled too.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 75b

— E.g., if another man makes a vow dependent on this.[1] Now, if you say that [the wife's vows] take effect, the dependence is a real one;[2] but if you say that they take no effect, there is no substantiality in it.[3] What [is the law]? — Come and hear: SAID R. ELIEZER, IF HE CAN ANNUL VOWS WHICH HAVE ALREADY HAD THE FORCE OF A PROHIBITION, SURELY HE CAN ANNUL VOWS WHICH HAVE NOT HAD THE FORCE OF PROHIBITION! This proves that they take no effect at all. — [No.] Is it then stated, which do not have the force etc.: WHICH HAVE NOT HAD THE FORCE OF PROHIBITION is taught, [meaning], which have not yet had the force of a prohibition.[4]

Come and hear: R. Eliezer said to them. If where a man cannot annul his own vows, once he has vowed,[5] he can nevertheless annul his own vows before making them;[6] then where he can annul his wife's vows after she vowed, how much the more should he be able to annul them before she vows! Now, surely this means that his wife's [vows] are like his: just as his vows take no effect at all,[7] so his wife's vows too would take no effect at all! — No: each is governed by its own laws.[8]

Come and hear: They answered R. Eliezer: If a mikweh,[9] though it raises the unclean front their uncleanness, cannot nevertheless save the clean from becoming unclean;[10] then a man, who cannot raise the unclean from their uncleanness,[11] how much the more can he not save the clean from becoming unclean.[12] This proves that they[13] take no effect at all.[14]

---

(1) Lit., 'attached to them'. I.e., if the wife vowed, 'Behold, I will be a nazirite'; and another person exclaimed, 'And I likewise'.

(2) Hence the second vow is valid.

(3) And the vow made dependent upon the wife's vow is invalid.

(4) Yet they may take effect only, however, to be immediately made void.

(5) I.e., every person excepting a married woman.

(6) By an anticipatory declaration of annulment; v. supra 23b.

(7) If preceded by a declaration of annulment; for if they did take effect, only a Rabbi could grant absolution. Moreover, the anticipatory annulment, forgotten at the time of actual vowing, renders it a vow made in error, which ab initio is no vow. Cf. supra 23b.

(8) Though one is deduced from the other, it is not necessary to assume similarity in all respects. An anticipatory annulment of one's own vows prevents them from taking effect at all, whilst if applied to his wife's, they may take effect and become void.

(9) A ritual bath, by immersion in which unclean persons or things are purified.

(10) I.e., one cannot take a ritual bath to be kept clean, should he subsequently come into contact with defiling matter.

(11) Rashi; if a man swallowed an unclean ring and then took a ritual bath, the ring, since it is within him, is not purified, but remains defiled after excretion.

(12) If he swallows a clean ring, and then comes in contact with the dead, the ring ought to become unclean, whereas the law is that it remains clean (Ran), v. Hul. 71a. — So also, though a husband can annul a vow when made, he cannot before. So cur. edd. and Rashi. Asheri and Ran have a simpler and more effective reading: They replied to R. Eliezer, Let the mikweh prove it, which frees the unclean from their uncleanness, yet cannot prevent the clean from becoming unclean. So also, a husband may annul his wife's vow after it has become binding, but not before.

(13) Sc. the wife's vows annulled in anticipation.

(14) Since they draw an analogy from a mikweh, which cannot prevent a clean man from becoming unclean, it follows that in R. Eliezer's view the husband's annulment prevents the vow from taking effect at all.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 76a

Then consider the second clause: They [the Rabbis] said to R. Eliezer: If an unclean utensil is immersed in order to purify it, shall a clean utensil be immersed, so that on [subsequently] becoming defiled it shall [simultaneously] become clean![1] This proves that they do take effect.[2] — I will tell you: The Rabbis were not clear as to R. Eliezer's standpoint. Hence they said thus to him: What is your opinion? If you maintain that they [the vows] take effect, but are annulled, you are refuted by [the analogy of] a utensil; whilst if you do not hold that they take effect, the mikweh is your refutation.

Come and hear: R. Eliezer said to them: If defiled seeds are rendered clean by being sown in the soil, how much more so if [already] sown and rooted [in the soil]![3] This proves that they do not take effect at all.

Now, do not the Rabbis admit the validity of [such] an ad majus conclusion? Surely it was taught: I might think that a man can sell his daughter when a na'arah:[4] — But you can argue a minori: if she who was already sold goes free,[5] is it not logical that if not sold yet, she cannot be sold [now]![6]

---

(1) Surely not.

(2) Since they compare it to the prior immersion of a utensil to render it clean after it has become defiled.

(3) That they certainly cannot be defiled. Thus also vows: if a vow can be annulled when already in force, surely the annulment can operate to prevent it from coming into force!

(4) The reference is to Ex. XXI, 7.

(5) On attaining the na'arah stage.

(6) V. Kid. 4a. This reasoning is exactly analogous to R. Eliezer's. The Talmud interposes that no verse is required.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 76b

— Yes: elsewhere they do draw an ad majus conclusion, but here it is different, because Scripture writes, Her husband may confirm it, and her husband may annul it:[1] [teaching], that which has entered the category of confirmation, has entered the category of annulment; but that which has not entered the category of confirmation, has not entered the category of annulment.

MISHNAH. [THE PERIOD ALLOWED FOR] THE ANNULMENT OF VOWS IS THE WHOLE DAY:[2] THIS MAY RESULT IN GREATER STRINGENCY OR GREATER LENIENCY.[3] THUS, IF SHE VOWED ON THE NIGHT OF THE SABBATH, HE CAN ANNUL ON THE NIGHT OF THE SABBATH AND ON THE SABBATH DAY UNTIL NIGHTFALL. IF SHE VOWED JUST BEFORE NIGHTFALL,[4] HE CAN ANNUL ONLY UNTIL NIGHTFALL: FOR IF NIGHT FELL AND HE HAD NOT ANNULLED IT, HE CAN NO LONGER ANNUL IT.

GEMARA. It was taught: [The period allowed for] the annulment of vows is the whole day. R. Jose son of R. Judah and R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon maintained: Twenty-four hours.[5] What is the reason of the first Tanna? — Scripture saith, [But if her husband disallowed her] on the day that he heard it.[6] And what is the reason of the Rabbis? — Because it is written, [But if her husband altogether holds his peace at her] from day to day.[7] But on the view of the first Tanna, surely it is written, 'from day to day'? — That is necessary. For were [only] 'on the day that he heard it' [written], I would say, only by day,[8] but not by night; therefore it is written, 'from day to day'.[9] Now, according to him who cites 'from day to day', is it not written, 'on the day that he heard it'? — That is necessary. For were only 'from day to day' written, I would think that he can annul her vows from [e.g.,] the first day of one week to the first day of the following;[10] therefore it is written, 'on the day that he heard it'.

R. Simon b. Pazzi said in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi: The halachah is not in accordance with that pair.[11] Levi wished to give a practical decision in accordance with these Tannaim; whereupon Rab said to him, Thus said my dear relative,[12] The halachah is not in accordance with that pair. Hiyya b. Rab used to shoot arrows and at the same time examine [a person] desirous of absolution;[13] Rabbah b. R. Huna would [repeatedly] sit down and stand up.[14]

---

(1) Num. XXX, 14.

(2) In which the husband or father learns of the vow.

(3) 'Stringency' and 'leniency' are not quite relevant in this connection, the meaning being that by thus fixing a calendar day, i.e., a night and a day, the period for annulment may be shorter or longer, as the case might be.

(4) At the close of the Sabbath.

(5) Lit., 'from time to time', from the hour the vow is made until the same hour the following day.

(6) Num. XXX, 9. By 'day' a calendar day is understood: V. n. 6.

(7) Num. XXX. 15: v. p. 239, n. 8: the same is implied in 'from day to day.'

(8) I.e., he can annul the vow.

(9) Which naturally includes the night.

(10) So interpreting the phrase.

(11) Viz., R. Jose b. R. Judah and R. Eliezer b. R. Simeon.

(12) Sc. Hiyya b. Rab, his uncle.

(13) Hiyya b. Rab just having been mentioned, another thing is stated about him, viz., that he took absolution very lightly, granting it even whilst engaged in other pursuits.

(14) In the earnestness of his examination, he could not keep in his place. [Cf. supra 23a. Ran: 'would keep seated or standing', not taking the matter too seriously.]

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 77a

We learnt elsewhere: Vows may be annulled[1] on the Sabbath, and absolution from vows[2] may be sought where it is necessary for the Sabbath.[3] The scholars propounded: May vows be annulled on the Sabbath only if it is needed for the Sabbath, or perhaps, even if it is unnecessary?[4] Come and hear: For R. Zuti, of the school of R. Papi, learnt: Vows may be annulled [on the Sabbath] only if necessary for the Sabbath. Said R. Ashi: But we did not learn thus; IF SHE VOWED JUST BEFORE NIGHTFALL, HE CAN ANNUL ONLY UNTIL NIGHTFALL. But if you rule [that he can annul] only when it is necessary for the Sabbath, but not otherwise, why say, UNTIL NIGHTFALL; he cannot annul even by day,[5] since it is unnecessary for the Sabbath?[6] — It is a controversy of Tannaim: [The period allowed for] the annulment of vows is the whole day. R. Jose son of R. Judah and R. Eliezer son of R. Simeon maintained: Twenty-four hours. Now, on the view that [they can be annulled only] the whole of that day, but not thereafter, [it follows that] he can annul them even if unnecessary for the Sabbath;[7] but on the view [that he has] twenty-four hours, [he can annul] only if it is necessary for the Sabbath, but not otherwise.

'And absolution from vows may be sought where it is necessary for the Sabbath'. The scholars propounded: Is that only if one had no time [to seek absolution before the Sabbath], or perhaps even if he had time? — Come and hear: For the Rabbis gave a hearing to the son of R. Zutra son of R. Ze'ira [to grant him absolution] even for vows for which there was time before the Sabbath.[8]

Now, R. Joseph thought to rule that absolution may be granted[9] on the Sabbath only by a single ordained scholar, but not by three laymen, because it would look like a lawsuit.[10] Said Abaye to him: Since we hold that [those who grant it] may stand, be relatives, and [absolve] even at night, it does not look like a lawsuit.[11]

R. Abba said in the name of R. Huna in the name of Rab: The halachah is that vows may be annulled on the Sabbath. But this is [explicitly taught in] our Mishnah: IF SHE VOWED ON THE NIGHT OF THE SABBATH [ETC.]?[12] — But say thus: The halachah is that absolution[13] may be sought at night. R. Abba said to R. Huna, Did Rab really say thus? Said he, He was silent.[14] Do you say, 'He was silent', or, 'he was drinking'? asked he.[15] — R. Ika b. Abin said: Rab gave a hearing to Rabbah [to grant him absolution]

---

(1) By a husband or father, as the case may he.

(2) From a sage.

(3) I.e., where the absolution is necessary for the Sabbath. E.g., if one vowed not to eat, which clashes with the joyous spirit of the Sabbath.

(4) I.e., does the last condition, 'where it is necessary for the Sabbath,' refer to the whole Mishnah, or only to absolution? — By 'annulment' the annulment by a father or husband is meant.

(5) The reference being to a vow made on the Sabbath; v. Mishnah.

(6) The vow having been made just before nightfall, it cannot be necessary for the sake of the Sabbath to annul it.

(7) Since we cannot abrogate his right of annulment altogether.

(8) Lit., 'whilst yet day.'

(9) Lit., 'sought'.

(10) Three judges are necessary for that, and it must not take place on the Sabbath.

(11) Because in a lawsuit the judges must be seated, may not be relatives of the litigants, and it may not take place at night.

(12) Which shows that the husband can annul vows on Sabbath.

(13) From a Sage.

(14) Heb. אישתיק; this bears a close resemblance to drinking, and R. Abba seems not to have quite caught his reply.

(15) So Rashi: Do you mean that you stated this halachah before him and that he remained silent, which you interpreted as assent: or that he was drinking at the time, and could make no comments? Other versions, based on different readings:

R. Huna asked, Would you offer me a drink, or do you say that he was silent, i.e., do you question me because you agree, and desire Rab's authority for it, or do you disagree, and suggest that Rab was silent when I stated this law, deeming it unworthy even of refutation? Or: do you offer me a drink (in approval), or silence me (in disapproval)? — In all these cases, the alternatives are expressed by words very similar to each other.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 77b

in a chamber of the College, whilst standing, alone, and at night.[1]

Raba said in R. Nahman's name: The halachah is that absolution from vows may be granted standing, alone, and at night, on the Sabbath, by relatives, and even if there was time before the Sabbath [to seek absolution]. 'Standing'? But it was taught: R. Gamaliel descended from the ass, wrapped himself [in his robe], sat down, and absolved him?[2] — R. Gamaliel held that [the Rabbi] must give an 'opening' for regret, so that the vow may be revoked ab initio; this requires deep thought; therefore he sat down.[3] But in R. Nahman's opinion no opening for regret Is necessary;[4] therefore he [the Rabbi] can stand.[5]

Raba said to R. Nahman: Behold, Master, a scholar, who came from the west [i.e., Palestine], and related that the Rabbis gave a hearing to the son of R. Huna b. Abin and absolved him of his vow, and then said to him, 'Go, and pray for mercy, for you have sinned. For R. Dimi, the brother of R. Safra, learnt: He who vows, even though he fulfils it, is designated a sinner.' R. Zebid said: What verse [teaches this]? — But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee;[6] hence, if thou hast not forborne, there is sin.

It was taught: If a man says to his wife, '[In respect to] all vows which you may make, I object to your vowing,' or, 'they are no vows,' the declaration is valueless.[7] [If he says,] 'You have done well,' or, 'there is none like you,'[8] or, 'had you not vowed, I myself would have imposed a vow upon you.'[9] — these declarations are effective.[10]

A man should not say to his wife on the Sabbath, 'It is annulled for you,' or, 'made void for you,' as he would say on week-days, but, 'Take and eat it,' 'Take and drink it,'[11] and the vow becomes automatically void.[12] R. Johanan observed: Yet he must annul it in his heart.[13] It was taught: Beth Shammai say: On the Sabbath he must annul it in his heart; on week-days he must express [his annulment] with his lips. But Beth Hillel say: In both cases he may annul it in his heart, and need not express it with his lips.[14]

R.Johanan said: If a Sage employs a husband's phraseology, or a husband that of a Sage, their pronouncements are invalid.[15] For it was taught: This is the thing [which the Lord hath commanded]:[16] [this teaches], only a Sage may absolve, but a husband cannot absolve.[17] For I might think, If a Sage, who cannot annul, can absolve, surely a husband, who may annul, can also absolve! Therefore it is stated,

---

(1) The former question is left unanswered, but this incident is quoted to show that Rab himself acted on this ruling. — So cur. edd. But other readings introduce this by 'come and hear.

(2) This happened once when R. Gamaliel was travelling from Acco to Chezib. On the way he was accosted by a man who demanded to be absolved from a vow.

(3) The Rabbi must find grounds sufficiently strong to make him regret his now (v. supra 21b). Such grounds are not easily found. But sitting is not essential for the actual granting of absolution.

(4) [Even if he expresses no regret for ever having made the vow, but merely wishes to be absolved from it from now on, the Sage may revoke it; (v. Rashi 'Er. 64a).]

(5) So cur. edd. and Rashi, Ran and Asheri reverse the reading, though the final result remains unaltered. Thus: R. Gamaliel held that mere (present) regret does not afford an 'opening', i.e., grounds for absolution, but some fact, which, had it been present to the mind of the person vowing, would have caused him to desist, so that the vow may be voided from its very beginning, etc.

(6) Deut. XXIII, 23.

(7) Because it is not the correct way of annulment. — So Rashi, on the basis of our reading, and likewise one version of Ran.

(8) An expression of satisfaction.

(9) This must not be taken that in Talmudic times the husband could impose a vow upon his wife, the expression merely being one of approval. In the chapter dealing with vows (Num. XXX) the husband is merely given powers of annulment, not to impose vows; in fact, no person is empowered to impose vows upon another; but v. Weiss, Dor. 1, p. 15.

(10) I.e., they are perfect confirmations, which cannot be withdrawn by subsequent annulment. — 'Effective' is followed by two dots(:), which denotes the completion of a subject, the next word commencing a new one. As, however, the next passage is not preceded in our text by 'It was taught' nor by any other word which generally introduces a new passage, it is possible that the dots have crept into the editions in error. But in the version of Ran the next passage is preceded by 'It has been taught' (v. Marginal Glosses to Wilna edition).

(11) If she vowed not to eat or drink.

(12) To preserve the sanctity of the Sabbath one should not use the same phraseology as of week-days.

(13) Formally: 'it is annulled for thee.'

(14) Of annulment, it being sufficient to say 'Take and eat it.'

(15) A husband must say, מופר לך 'It is annulled for thee'; a Sage, מותר לך 'It is permitted thee'. [The difference in the phraseology employed by Sage and husband is determined by the distinct function of each. The Sage revokes the vow, rendering it void ab initio, whereas the husband annuls it that it may not be binding for the future (Ran).]

(16) Num. XXX, 2. 'This is the thing' implies that the following enactments must be exactly carried out.

(17) Absolution by a Sage is deduced from the next verse.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 78a

'This is the thing', [implying] only a Sage can absolve, but a husband cannot absolve. Another [Baraitha] taught: 'This is the thing', [teaches,] [only] a husband may annul, but a Sage cannot annul. For I might think, If a husband, who cannot absolve, can annul; surely a Sage, who may absolve, can also annul! Therefore it is stated, 'This is the thing', [implying,] a husband can annul, but a Sage cannot annul. [Further:] It is here stated, This is the thing; whilst elsewhere, in connection with [sacrifices] slaughtered without [the Temple Court], it is also written, This is the thing [which the Lord hath commanded]:[1] just as in the latter case, Aaron, his sons, and all Israel [are included in the law],[2] so does the chapter on vows relate to Aaron, his sons, and all Israel; and just as here, the heads of the tribes [are particularly addressed],[3] so there too [the reference is] to the heads of the tribes. In respect of what law [is this deduced] in the chapter of vows? — Said R. Aha b. Jacob: To teach that three laymen are qualified [to grant absolution]. But is not 'the heads of the tribes' stated?[4] — R. Hisda, — others state R. Johanan — answered: [That intimates that] a single ordained scholar [can absolve].[5] For what purpose are the heads of the tribes related to [sacrifices] slaughtered without? — R. Shesheth said: To teach that the law of revocation applies to hekdesh.[6] But according to Beth Shammai, who maintained that hekdesh cannot be revoked, for what purpose are the heads of the tribes related to [sacrifices] slaughtered without? — Beth Shammai do not admit [the validity of] this gezerah shawah. Now, for what purpose is 'this is the thing' written in the chapter on vows? — To teach that only a Sage may absolve, but a husband cannot absolve; and that only a husband can annul, but a Sage cannot annul. Why is 'this is the thing' related to [sacrifices] slaughtered without? — To teach that one incurs guilt only for slaughtering [without the prescribed place], but not for wringing [a bird's neck outside].[7]

Then on the view of Beth Shammai, whence do we know that three laymen are valid?[8] — They deduce it from [the teaching reported by] R. Assi b. Nathan. For it is written, And Moses declared unto the children of Israel the set feasts of the Lord.[9] Whereon it was taught. R. Jose the Galilean said: The festivals were stated, but not the Sabbath of the Creation[10] with them: Ben ‘Azzai said: The festivals were stated, but not the chapter on vows with them. Now, this Baraitha was unintelligible to R. Assi b. Nathan, so he went to Nehardea, before R. Shesheth. Not finding him there, he followed him to Mahuza,[11] and said to him: ‘The festivals were stated, but not the Sabbath of the Creation with them’: but the Sabbath is written together with them![12] Furthermore, the festivals were stated, but not the chapter on vows with them, but that is written alongside thereof![13] — Said he to him, It means this:

---

(1) Lev. XVII. 2.

(2) The verse commences, Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel.

(3) Num. XXX, 2: And Moses spake unto the heads of the tribes concerning the children of Israel.

(4) This, in the case of vows, implies the ordained scholars.

(5) For since the gezerah shawah (v. Glos.) based on ‘this is the thing’ relates all Israel to vows, whilst ‘the heads of the tribes’ specifies scholars, the discrepancy can be reconciled only by assuming that either one ordained scholar or three laymen may absolve. — One layman being insufficient, three (not two) are required, as in the case of a Beth din.

(6) V. Glos. I.e., if one consecrates an animal, which is really a form of vow, and then slaughters it without the Temple court, he can be absolved of his vow, thus revoking his consecration, whereby he is found to have slaughtered an unconsecrated animal.

(7) The passage reads: This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded . . . what man that slaughtered an ox . . . and bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, etc.; yishhat (‘slaughtered’), implies cutting the throat (cf. shehitah). A bird sacrifice was killed by its neck being wrung, Lev. I, 15.

(8) Since they reject the gezerah shawah by which it is deduced in the Baraitha.

(9) Lev. XXIII, 44.

(10) Lit., ‘the Sabbath of the beginning’. I.e., the Sabbath, so called because God rested on the seventh day.

(11) A large Jewish town on the Tigris, where Raba had his academy.

(12) At the beginning of Lev. XXIII, v. 3 and also in v. 38.

(13) Num. XXVIII-XXIX deal with the festivals, and XXX treats of vows.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 78b

[only] the festivals of the Lord need sanctification by Beth din,[1] but not the Sabbath of the Creation;[2] (further] the festivals of the Lord require an ordained scholar,[3] but absolution of vows requires no ordained scholar, for even a Beth din of laymen [may grant it]. But in the chapter on vows ‘the heads of the tribes’ is stated! — R. Hisda, others state, R. Johanan, said: That refers to a single ordained scholar.

R. Hanina said: He who keeps silence [when his wife vows] in order to provoke her[4] can annul even after ten days. Raba objected: When was it said that if the husband dies his authority is transferred to the father? If the husband did not hear [the vow], or heard it and was silent, or heard and annulled it and died on the same day. But if he heard and confirmed it, or heard it, was silent, and died on the following day, he [the father] cannot annul.[5] Now, surely it means that he kept his silence in order to vex her?[6] — No. It means that he was silent in order to confirm it. If so, it is tantamount to ‘or if he heard and confirmed it?’[7] — But it means that he kept silent without specifying [his intentions].

R. Hisda objected: Confirmation is more stringent than annulment, and annulment is more stringent than confirmation. [Thus:] Confirmation is more stringent,

---

(1) Beth din must declare which day is new moon, and thereby sanctify it, and thence the festival was calculated.

(2) The seventh day of the week is automatically sacred.

(3) To declare the sanctification of the New Moon, which cannot be done by a layman.

(4) Intending to annul the vow eventually, but keeping silence in the meantime to vex his wife, who may wish to be freed.

(5) V. supra 68a.

(6) And yet if he died the following day, his silence is regarded as confirmation.

(7) Why teach it in two clauses?

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 79a

since silence confirms, but does not annul;[1] and if he confirms in his heart, he has confirmed it, [whereas] if he annuls in his heart, it is not annulled; [moreover], if he confirmed, he cannot annul, and if he annulled, he cannot confirm.[2] Now, this teaches that silence confirms. Surely it means silence in order to provoke? — No; [it means] that he was silent in order to confirm. If so, it is identical with 'if he confirms in his heart?' — But it means that he was silent with no specified intention.

Now we have seen that confirmation is more stringent than annulment; where do we find that annulment is more [stringent] than confirmation? — Said R. Johanan: One may seek absolution from confirmation, but not from annulment.

R. Kahana objected: But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day.[3] Scripture refers to silence in order to vex. You say, in order to vex. Perhaps this is not so, the reference being to silence with intention to confirm? Now, when it is said, because he held his peace at her,[4] Scripture already refers to silence in order to confirm; hence, to what can I apply the phrase, 'but if the husband altogether hold his peace at her? To silence in order to vex. That is indeed a refutation.[5] But let one [verse] be applied to silence in order to confirm, and the other to silence without specified intentions? — Additional verses are written.[6]

Raba objected: IF SHE VOWED JUST BEFORE NIGHTFALL, HE CAN ANNUL ONLY UNTIL NIGHTFALL: FOR IF NIGHT FELL AND HE HAD NOT ANNULLED IT, HE CAN NO LONGER DO SO: but why? Let it [at least] be counted as though he were silent in order to provoke her! This is a refutation.

R. Ashi objected: [If the husband declares,] 'I know that there were vows, but did not know that they could be annulled,' he may annul them [now].[7] 'I knew that they could be annulled, but did not know that this is a vow,'[8] R. Meir ruled: He cannot annul [now];[9] whilst the Sages maintain: He can annul. But why [not, according to R. Meir]; let it [at least] be as though he were silent in order to provoke! This is a refutation.

C H A P T E R X I

MISHNAH. NOW THESE ARE THE VOWS WHICH HE[10] CAN ANNUL: VOWS WHICH INVOlve SELF-DENIAL.[11] [E.G.,]. 'IF I BATHE,' OR, 'IF I DO NOT BATHE,' 'IF I ADORN MYSELF,' OR, 'IF I DO NOT ADORN MYSELF.'

---

(1) Which is viewed as greater stringency.

(2) This is not stated as an aspect of greater stringency in one or the other, but merely teaches a law.

(3) Num. XXX, 15.

(4) Ibid.

(5) Of R. Hanina.

(6) The idea of silence is expressed three times in that verse, But if her husband altogether keep silence — expressed in Heb. by הֶהֱרִישׁ יְהֵרִישׁ, which is a double expression, and, because he has kept silence — a third time; therefore every form of silence is meant.

(7) Because only when he knows his authority is the day regarded as 'the day on which he heard it.'

(8) Rashi: of a binding nature; Ran such as the husband may annul, (v. next Mishnah).

(9) For since he knew that the husband could annul vows, the day that he first learnt of his wife's vow is the day that he heard it.

(10) The husband.

(11) Cf. Num. XXX, 13.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 79b

R. JOSE SAID: THESE ARE NOT VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL, BUT THE FOLLOWING ARE VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL: VIZ., IF SHE SAYS, 'KONAM BE THE PRODUCE OF THE [WHOLE] WORLD TO ME', HE CAN ANNUL; 'KONAM BE THE PRODUCE OF THIS COUNTRY TO ME,' HE CAN BRING HER THAT OF A DIFFERENT COUNTRY;[1] '[KONAM BE] THE FRUITS OF THIS SHOP-KEEPER TO ME', HE CANNOT ANNUL; BUT IF HE CAN OBTAIN HIS SUSTENANCE ONLY FROM HIM,[2] HE CAN ANNUL: THIS IS R. JOSE'S OPINION.

GEMARA. [He can annul] only vows of self-denial, but not if they involve no self-denial? But it was taught: Between a man and his wife, between thee father and his daughter:[3] this teaches that a husband can annul vows which [affect the relationship] between himself and his wife? — I will tell you: He can annul both; but vows of self-denial he can permanently annul;[4] but if they involve no self-denial, annulment is valid only so long as she is under him, but if he divorces her, the vow becomes effective. [This refers however] to matters affecting their mutual relationship but involving no self-denial; but if they involve self-denial, the vow does not become effective. Now, do vows involving no self-denial become effective if he divorces her? But we learnt: R. Johanan b. Nuri said: He must annul it, lest he divorce her and she thereby be forbidden to him.[5] This proves that if he divorces her after first having annulled the vow, the annulment remains valid? — I will tell you: in both cases the annulment stands; but vows of self-denial he can annul in respect of both himself and strangers,[6] whereas if they involve no self-denial, he can annul in respect of himself only, not of others;[7] and it is thus meant: THESE ARE THE VOWS WHICH HE CAN ANNUL in respect of both himself and others, viz., VOWS THAT INVOLVE SELF-DENIAL.

'IF I BATHE.' What does this mean? Shall we say, that she declared, 'Konam be the fruit of the world to me, if I bathe'? then why annul it? Let her not bathe, and so the fruit of the world will not be prohibited to her! Moreover, could R. Jose maintain in this case that THESE ARE NOT VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL: perhaps she bathes, and the fruit of the world become forbidden to her?

---

(1) Hence it is not a vow of self-deprival.

(2) E.g., if he must buy on credit, and no other tradesman trusts him.

(3) Num. XXX, 17.

(4) Even if he subsequently divorces her.

(5) If a woman vows that the work of her hands be forbidden to her husband, though the vow, through seeking to deprive the husband of his legal due, is invalid, R. Johanan b. Nuri ruled that the husband should nevertheless annul it. For, should he divorce her, the vow becomes valid, and therefore be could not remarry her, v. infra 85a.

(6) I.e., even if she marries another, the annulment holds good.

(7) I.e. if he divorces her and she marries another, the vow resumes its force.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 80a

Again, if she said, 'Konam be the pleasure of bathing to me for ever, if I bathe [once]', and the reason he can annul is because what can she do? if she bathes [once], the pleasure of [subsequent] bathing is forbidden her; if not, she becomes repulsive; whilst R. Jose maintains that she need not bathe, her repulsiveness being of no concern to us. But if so, it should be taught thus: R. Jose said:

This condition involves no self-denial? — Hence she must have vowed, 'Konam be the pleasure of bathing to me for ever, if I bathe to-day,' R. Jose maintaining that the disfigurement of one day's [neglect of bathing] is not disfigurement.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 80b

You have explained, 'IF I BATHE': how is 'IF I DO NOT BATHE' meant? Shall we say that she vowed, 'The pleasure of bathing be forbidden me forever, if I do not bathe to-day, 'why does she need annulment — let her bathe! — Said Rab Judah: [It means] that she said, 'The pleasure of bathing be forbidden me for ever, if I do not bathe in the water of steeping.'[1] Then by analogy, 'IF I DO NOT ADORN MYSELF' means, 'If I do not adorn myself with naphtha': but that renders her filthy![2] — Said Rab Judah, She vowed, 'The pleasure of bathing be forbidden me for ever, if I bathe to-day, and I swear not to bathe [to-day]'; 'the pleasure of adornment be forbidden me for ever, if I adorn myself to-day, and I swear not to adorn myself [to-day]'. Rabina said to R. Ashi: If so, the Mishnah should state, THESE ARE THE VOWS and oaths! — He replied: Learn, THESE ARE THE VOWS and oaths. Alternatively, oaths too are included in vows, for we learnt, [if one says,] As the vows of the wicked, he has vowed in respect of a nazirite vow, a sacrifice and an oath.[3]

Now, did the Rabbis rule that bathing involves self-denial when one refrains therefrom? But the following contradicts it: Though all these are forbidden,[4] kareth[5] is incurred only for eating, drinking and performing work. But if you maintain that in refraining from bathing there is self-denial, then if one bathes on the Day of Atonement he should be liable to kareth?[6] — Raba answered: In each case our ruling is based on the Scriptural context. In reference to the Day of Atonement, where it is written, Ye shall afflict your souls,[7] something whereby affliction is there and then perceptible [is implied];[8] whereas [to refrain from] bathing is not an immediately perceptible affliction. But of vows, where it is written, Every vow and every binding oath to afflict the soul,[9] something which leads to affliction [is indicated],[10] and not to bathe [for a long time] results in affliction.

One ruling of R. Jose contradicts another of his: With respect to a well belonging to townspeople, when it is a question of their own lives or the lives of strangers,[11] their own lives take precedence;[12] their cattle or the cattle of strangers, their cattle take precedence over those of strangers; their laundering or that of strangers,[13] their laundering takes precedence over that of strangers. But if the choice lies between the lives of strangers and their own laundering, the lives of the strangers take precedence over their own laundering. R. Jose ruled: Their laundering takes precedence over the lives of strangers.[14] Now, if to (refrain merely from] washing one's garment is a hardship in R. Jose's view,

---

(1) I.e., the water in which flax was steeped; such water is foul and noisome, and it is an act of mortification to bathe therein.

(2) Surely 'adorn' would not be used in that sense!

(3) V. supra 9a.

(4) Viz., eating, drinking, etc., on the Day of Atonement.

(5) V. Glos.

(6) Since kareth is the penalty for not 'afflicting one's soul' — i.e., undergoing mortification; Lev. XXIII, 29.

(7) Ibid. XVI, 29.

(8) E.g., abstention from food.

(9) Num. XXX, 14.

(10) That follows from the infinitive.

(11) The well being the sole source of supply, sufficient only for the townspeople or for strangers, but not for both.

(12) They have a prior right thereto.

(13) The water being used for laundering purposes.

(14) In his opinion there is great self-denial in wearing unlaundered linen.

how much more so with respect to the body? — I will tell you: In R. Jose's opinion laundering is indeed of greater importance than bathing. For Samuel said: Scabs of the head [caused by not washing] lead to blindness; scabs (arising through the wearing] of (unclean] garments cause madness; scabs (due to neglect] of the body cause boils and ulcers.[1]

They sent word from there (sc. Palestine]:[2] Be on guard against scabs; take good care (to study] in company[3] and be heedful (not to neglect] the children of the poor,[4] for from them Torah goeth forth, as it is written, The water shall flow out of his buckets (mi-dalyaw]:[5] [meaning], from the dallim [poor] amongst them goeth forth Torah.[6] And why is it not usual for scholars to give birth to sons who are scholars? — Said R. Joseph, That it might not be maintained, The Torah is their legacy.[7] R. Shisha, the son of R. Idi, said: That they should not be arrogant towards the community. Mar Zutra said: Because they act high-handedly against the community.[8] R. Ashi said: Because they call people asses.[9] Rabina said: Because they do not first utter a blessing over the Torah.[10] For Rab Judah said in Rab's name: What is meant by, Who is the wise man, that he may understand this [. . . for what is the land destroyed etc.]?[11] Now, this question was put to the Sages, Prophets, and Ministering Angels,[12] but they could not answer it, until the Almighty Himself did so, as it is written, And the Lord said, Because they have forsaken my law which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein:[13] but is not 'have not obeyed my voice' identical with, 'neither walked therein'? — Rab Judah said in Rab's name: [It means] that they did not first recite a benediction over the Torah.[14]

Isi b. Judah did not come for three days to the college of R. Jose. Wardimus, the son of R. Jose, met him and asked, 'Why have you Sir, not been for these last three days at my father's school?' He replied, 'Seeing that I do not know your father's grounds [for his rulings], why should I attend?' 'Please repeat, Sir, what he told you,' he urged; 'perhaps I may know the reason.' Said he, 'As to what was taught, R. Jose said: Their laundering takes precedence over the lives of strangers, whence do we know a verse [to support this]? Said he, Because it is written, And the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts [hayyatham].[15] Now, what is meant by hayyatham: Shall we say, 'beasts' — but beasts are included in cattle? But if hayyatham means literally 'their lives', is it not obvious?[16] Hence it must surely refer to laundering,[17] since [neglect of one's clothes] causes the pains of scabs.[18]

R.JOSE SAID: THESE ARE NOT VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL. The scholars propounded: In the view of R. Jose, can he [the husband] annul them as matters affecting their mutual relationship?[19] — Come and hear: R. JOSE SAID: THESE ARE NOT VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL, implying however that they are matters affecting their mutual relationship.[20] — [No.] Perhaps he argues to them on their view. [Thus:] In my opinion they are not even matters affecting their mutual relationship: but you who maintain that they are vows of self-denial, should at least concede to me that these are not vows of self-denial.[21] What [is our decision on the matter]? — Adda b. Ahabah said: He can annul them, R. Huna said: He cannot annul,

---

(1) Madness is the worst of the lot.

(2) This always refers to R. Eleazer b. Pedath — Sanh. 17b.

(3) This ensures greater keeness and understanding than studying alone.

(4) Or, not to neglect their teaching (Ran).

(5) Num. XXIV, 7.

(6) Adopting reading of 'En Yakob. Water being symbolic of Torah: cf. Is. LV, 1.

(7) I.e., others should not complain that it is useless for them to study, or that they themselves should not think study unnecessary.

(8) Var. lec.: because they are arrogant etc.

(9) These observations shew that there was a mutual antipathy between the scholars and the masses. Cf. Graetz, Gesch. IV, p. 361. It is noteworthy however that, as evidenced by this passage, many Rabbis themselves criticised the attitude of scholars.

(10) As required.

(11) Jer. IX, 11.

(12) 'And ministering angels' is absent from our text, but added from the parallel passage in B.M. 85a.

(13) Ibid. 10.

(14) This follows since the Almighty Himself had to answer; had they neglected it altogether, the reason would have been patent to all. Hence it must mean that though they studied it, their motives were selfish, and not based on an appreciation of its own intrinsic worth. This is expressed by saying that they did not recite a benediction over it, i.e., they did not value it for itself. Ran.

(15) Num. XXXV, 3.

(16) That they use it to benefit their own lives.

(17) I.e., wells in their suburbs shall be put to this use.

(18) And as it is expressed by a word meaning life, we deduce that its importance is so great that it takes precedence over the lives of strangers.

(19) For the husband may assert that he personally is affected by his wife's refusal to bathe or adorn herself. On the difference between the grounds of annulment, v. supra, 79b.

(20) For otherwise he should simply state that the husband cannot annul them (Ran and Asheri).

(21) So that if you persist in conceding the husband the right to annul, it should be on the grounds of mutual concern, not mortification.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 81b

because no fox dies in the earth of its own lair.[1]

It was taught in accordance with R. Adda b. Ahabah: Vows involving self-denial he [the husband] can annul in respect of both himself and herself, and in respect to herself and strangers;[2] but if they involve no self-denial, he can annul in respect of himself and herself, but not in respect to herself and strangers. E.g., if she vows, 'Konam be fruit unto me'? he can annul: 'Konam that I prepare nought for my father,' 'for your brother,' 'for your father,' 'for my brother,' or 'that I place no straw before your cattle,' or, 'water before your herds,' he cannot annul.[3] '[Konam] that I may not paint or rouge or cohabit,' he can annul as a matter affecting their mutual relationship; 'that I do not make your bed,' or, 'prepare[4] you drink,' or, 'wash your hands or feet,' he need not annul.[5] R. Gamaliel said: He must annul [them], as it is written, he shall not break his word.[6] Alternatively, 'he shall not break his word' teaches that a Sage cannot absolve himself from his own vows. Now, whom do we know to regard [a vow], 'that I paint not nor rouge' as matters affecting their mutual relationship [and not of self-denial]? R. Jose;[7] yet it is stated that he can annul them as matters affecting their mutual relationship.

The Master said: ' . . . "or cohabit," he can annul as a matter affecting their mutual relationship.' How so? If she vows, 'The pleasure of cohabitation with me [be forbidden] to you', why annul it, seeing that she is bound to afford it to him?[8] — But it means that she vowed, 'the pleasure of cohabitation with you be forbidden me,' and it accords with R. Kahana's dictum, viz., [If she vows,] 'The pleasure of cohabitation with me [be forbidden] to you,' she is compelled to grant it; but if she vows, 'The pleasure of cohabitation with you [be forbidden] to me,' he must annul it, because no person may be fed with what is forbidden to him. Who is the author of what was taught: Things that are in themselves permissible, and yet are treated by others as forbidden, you may not treat them as permitted in order to nullify them? Who is the author? — R. Gamaliel. For it was taught: R. Gamaliel said: He must annul them, as it is written, he shall not break his word;[9] alternatively, 'he shall not break his word' teaches that a Sage cannot absolve himself from his own vows.[10]

Raba asked R. Nahman: In the Rabbis' view, is [a vow to refrain from] cohabitation [a vow of] self-denial or a matter affecting their mutual relationship? — He replied, We have learnt this: [If she vows,] 'May I be removed from all Jews,'[11]

---

(1) I.e., being accustomed to it, he cannot be harmed thereby. Likewise, the husband, being accustomed to his wife, is unaffected by her refusal to bathe.

(2) V. 79b.

(3) Because it is not a vow of mortification, nor is she under any obligation to do these things.

(4) Lit., 'mix the cup' (of wine with water).

(5) Such vows are automatically invalid, since she is under an obligation to do these things.

(6) Num. XXX, 3; i.e., by a Rabbinical decree he must annul it, that she may not treat vows lightly. The law is not deduced from the verse, which is cited merely to shew the solemnity of vows.

(7) For the Rabbis of the Mishnah hold it to be a vow of mortification.

(8) Hence it is automatically invalid.

(9) Just as there, a self-imposed prohibition may not be lightly treated, so here too.

(10) Thus the text as amended by Bah.

(11) That no Jew shall cohabit with me.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 82a

he must annul his own part, and she shall minister to him, whilst remaining removed from all Jews.[1] But if you say that this is a vow of self-denial, why does she remain forbidden to all Jews?[2] This proves that it is [only] a matter affecting their mutual relationship! — [No.] This is asked according to the Rabbis, whereas 'May I be removed from the Jews' is the teaching of R. Jose [only]. For R. Huna said: This entire chapter states the ruling of R. Jose. Whence is this deduced? Since the Mishnah teaches, R. JOSE SAID: THESE ARE NOT VOWS OF SELF-DENIAL, why state again HE CAN ANNUL: THIS IS R. JOSE'S OPINION? It therefore follows that from this onward [the author] is R. Jose.[3]

Samuel said on Levi's authority: All vows the husband can annul to his wife, except 'my benefit [be forbidden] to so and so,' which he cannot annul.[4] But he can annul [the vow], 'the benefit of so and so [be forbidden] to me.'[5]

We learnt: '[KONAM] BE THE FRUIT OF THIS COUNTRY TO ME,' HE CAN BRING HER THAT OF A DIFFERENT COUNTRY?[6] — Said R. Joseph: It means that she vowed, '[KONAM BE THE FRUIT OF THIS COUNTRY TO ME] which you may bring'.[7] Come and hear: 'KONAM BE THE FRUIT OF THIS SHOP-KEEPER TO ME,' HE CANNOT ANNUL? — Here too it means that she said, 'which you may bring.' [But does it not state:] BUT IF HE CAN OBTAIN SUSTENANCE ONLY FROM THIS SHOP-KEEPER, HE CAN ANNUL. Now if you maintain that she vowed, 'which you may bring,' why can he annul it?[8] Hence, since the second clause must mean [even] those not brought by the husband, the first clause [too must refer to even] what she herself brings? — But in the first clause he cannot annul, though [her vow forbade even what] she herself brings;

---

(1) I.e., if he divorces her.

(2) Since the husband can annul vows of self-denial.

(3) The Talmud leaves the problem unsolved and proceeds to another subject.

(4) Not being a vow of mortification; this is self-evident, but is mentioned as a contrast to the next clause.

(5) Though she may not be immediately in need thereof, she may need it later, and therefore it is a vow of mortification.

(6) If abstention from the produce of an entire country is no mortification, surely to be forbidden benefit from a single person is none!

(7) Hence there is no self-denial. But had she entirely forbidden them, it would certainly entail deprivation, and the same holds good if she forbids benefit from a single person.

(8) Let some other person, or herself, obtain supplies.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 82b

and our Mishnah states R. Jose's view. For R. Huna said: This entire chapter states the ruling of R. Jose. And what is meant by HE CANNOT ANNUL? On the score of self-denial, but he can annul it as a vow affecting their mutual relationship.[1]

Rab Judah said in Rab's name: If she vows [to abstain] from two loaves, [abstention from] one of which is self-denial, but not from the other:[2] since he [the husband] can annul in respect of that which causes self-denial, he can also annul in respect of the other. R. Assi said in R. Johanan's name: He can annul only in respect of that which causes self-denial, but not in respect of the other. Others say, R. Assi asked R. Johanan: What if she vows [to abstain] from two loaves, [abstention from] one of which is self-denial, but not from the other? — He answered: He can annul in respect of that which causes self-denial, but not in respect of the other. He objected: If a woman made a vow of a nazirite, and drank wine or defiled herself through the dead,[3]

---

(1) Because he may find it necessary to maintain his wife with the provisions of that particular tradesman, and by forbidding benefit from him, his wife puts him to inconvenience. — Now, to revert to the subject, since this is the view of R. Jose only, in the Rabbis' opinion he could annul it as a vow of self-denial, in which case the annulment is wider in scope, as stated on 79b, and Samuel's dictum is in accordance with the Rabbis (Rashi and Ran). Asheri and Tosaf. explain that there may be two different answers here. Thus: (i) The Mishnah is taught according to R. Jose, whereas Samuel's dictum agrees with the Rabbis. Alternatively, (ii) by HE CANNOT ANNUL is meant that he cannot annul it as a vow of self-denial, but as a vow affecting them both. But Asheri and Tosaf. disagree on the interpretation of (ii). Asheri: and therefore Samuel's dictum may agree even with R. Jose, for Samuel too meant that he can annul it only as a vow affecting their mutual interests. Tosaf.: alternatively, the first clause could accord even with the Rabbis, who agree with R. Jose that this is no vow of mortification, being so limited in scope, yet it may be annulled as a vow of mutual concern, and Samuel too meant it in the same way.
(2) E.g., if one loaf was of fine flour and the other of coarse.
(3) Both of which are forbidden to a nazirite, Num. VI, 3, 6.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 83a

she receives forty [lashes].[1] If her husband disallowed her and she did not know that he disallowed her, and she drank wine and defiled herself through the dead, she does not receive forty [lashes]. But if you maintain, He can annul [only] in respect of that which causes self-denial, but not in respect of that which does not, perhaps he annulled her vow only in respect of wine, since [abstention therefrom] is a deprivation, but not of the kernels or husks [of grapes], abstention from which is no deprivation; hence let her receive forty?[2] — R. Joseph replied: There is [no state of] semi-neziruth.[3] Said Abaye to him: Does that imply that there is a sacrifice for semi-neziruth?[4] But, said Abaye, there is no semi-neziruth,[5] nor is there a sacrifice for semi-neziruth.

An objection is raised: If a woman made a vow of neziruth, set aside an animal, and then her husband disallowed her: she must bring the sin-offering of a bird, but not burnt-offering of a bird.[6] But if you say, a sacrifice is not incurred for half [the period of] neziruth, why must she bring the sin-offering of a bird? — What then: a sacrifice is incurred for half [the period of] neziruth — then she should bring three animals, [viz.,] a sin-offering, a burnt offering and a peace-offering?[7] But after all no sacrifice is incurred for half neziruth; whilst, as for the sin-offering of a bird which she must bring, that is because such is due even in case of doubt.[8]

He [further] objected: If a woman made a vow of a nazirite and became defiled, and then her husband disallowed her, she must bring the sin-offering of a bird, but not the burnt-offering of a bird. But if you rule, he can annul [only] in respect of what involves self-denial, but cannot annul that which involves no self-denial,

---

(1) The usual punishment for violating a negative injunction. Actually only thirty-nine lashes were given.

(2) For 'she goes unpunished' implies for no matter which injunction of a nazirite she transgresses. By 'perhaps' etc., 'surely can annul only' is meant.

(3) One is either completely a nazirite or not at all. But the vow to abstain from two loaves is divisible.

(4) Surely not! Since R. Joseph replied that there is no state of semi-neziruth, it follows that there may be a sacrifice for semi-neziruth. E.g., if a woman vowed to become a nazirite, whose duration, if unspecified, is thirty days, and after fifteen her husband learnt of her vow and annulled it. Now, his annulment cancels the following fifteen days, but not the previous, and Abaye expresses his surprise that, as is implied in R. Joseph's answer, the sacrifices are to be offered for half the period of neziruth.

(5) I.e., that some provisions of neziruth shall apply whilst others do not.

(6) On the expiration of the neziruth, three sacrifices are due, a burnt-offering, a sin-offering, and a peace-offering; Num. VI, 14. If, however, a nazir comes defiled through the dead within his period he must bring one animal as guilt-offering and two turtle-doves or young pigeons, one as a sin-offering and the other as a burnt-offering, and then recommence the full period afresh; ibid. 10f. Now, this is the meaning of the Baraitha. If a woman made the vow of a nazirite, and separated the animal for a guilt-offering, became defiled, and then had the vow annulled, she must offer only the pigeon sin-offering, but not the pigeon burnt-offering. Tosaf. and Asheri both question the purpose of the clause 'and set aside her animal,' which is apparently irrelevant, and leave the difficulty unresolved. Ran explains that its purpose is to shew that even if she had gone so far as to dedicate her guilt-offering, annulment cancels the neziruth retrospectively.

(7) Since the annulment by the husband is not retrospective (v. supra p. 244, n. 1) the short period in which she practised neziruth stands and is for her regarded as the whole, at the termination of which the three animals enumerated above are due. Cf. Num. VI, 13: And this is the law of the nazirite, when the days of his separation are fulfilled etc. Since her husband annulled the vow, her days are fulfilled by whatever period she observed.

(8) E.g., if a pregnant woman miscarried, and it is unknown whether the fetus had attained viability, in which case the sacrifices of childbirth are due, or not, she must bring a fowl sin-offering. Since this sacrifice is brought even for a doubtful liability, she must also bring it here for the sin of having vowed to be a nazirite; cf. 10a.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 83b

perhaps he disallowed her [only] in respect of wine, [abstention from] which is a real hardship, but not in respect of defilement through the dead, since no hardship is involved?[1] I will tell you: [The prohibition of] defilement through the dead too involves hardship, for it is written, and the living will lay it to his heart;[2] whereon it was taught: R. Meir used to say, What is meant by. and the living will lay it to his heart? He who laments will be lamented; he who weeps will be wept for; he who buries will be buried.[3]

MISHNAH. [IF SHE VOWS], 'KONAM, IF I MIGHT BENEFIT FROM MANKIND,'[4] HE CANNOT ANNUL,[5] AND SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH.[6] [IF A MAN SAYS] 'KONAM BE THE BENEFIT WHICH PRIESTS AND LEVITES HAVE FROM ME, THEY CAN SEIZE (THEIR DUES] AGAINST HIS WILL.[7] [BUT IF HE VOWS,] 'KONAM BE THE BENEFIT THESE PRIESTS AND LEVITES HAVE FROM ME,' OTHERS TAKE [THE DUES].

GEMARA. Thus we see that she may derive her sustenance from his [her husband's goods],[8] thus proving that her husband is not included in 'MANKIND' (in the sense of her vow]. Then consider the second clause: AND SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH; but she may not eat of her husband's, which proves that he is included in 'MANKIND'? — Said 'Ulla: After all, the husband is not included, and [the Mishnah] teaches thus: moreover, he cannot annul because SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH.[9] Raba said: In truth, the husband is included in 'mankind', and (the second clause] states a reason. [Thus:] Why cannot he annul?[10] Because SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH.[11] R. Nahman said: In truth, the husband is not included in 'MANKIND', and the Mishnah teaches thus: if she was divorced, SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH.[12]

---

(1) On 'perhaps etc.' v. p. 258, n. 1. Hence in spite of the annulment she ought to complete the full period and then offer the usual sacrifices. Tosaf. objects that the same answer could be given here as above, viz., there is no state of semi-neziruth; and replies that this perhaps holds good only of the kernels and husks of grapes, and everything appertaining thereto. But the prohibition of defilement is quite distinct from that of wine, (as is illustrated by a Samson nazirite. V. Nazir 4a) and therefore one may exist without the other.

(2) Ecc. VII, 2.

(3) I.e., one who pays the last respects to the dead will be similarly honoured, and, by implication, he who refrains will be likewise treated with contempt. It is therefore a matter of self-denial to abstain from death defilement, since thereby one forfeits the respects of his fellow-men at his own death.

(4) Lit., 'creatures'.

(5) Discussed in the Gemara.

(6) These are free to all. Since these are hefker (v. Glos.), she does not benefit from mankind in taking them.

(7) Since these belong to them, he cannot prohibit them.

(8) As otherwise it is certainly a vow of self-denial, which he may annul. It is now assumed that 'AND SHE CAN . . . PE'AH' does not give the reason why he cannot annul, but is an independent statement. For surely abstention from all mankind, including her husband, is no less deprivation than abstention from a tradesman from whom alone the husband can obtain supplies, which is regarded as mortification (v. supra 79b), though there too recourse might be had to gleanings, etc.! (Ran.).

(9) I.e., in the first place he cannot annul because his own substance is available to her, but an additional reason is that SHE CAN, etc. This furnishes a reason only when taken in conjunction with the first, but not independently (Ran. v. n. 5).

(10) Seeing that she cannot benefit even from her husband.

(11) As for the argument in n. 5, Raba will maintain that abstention from a tradesman from whom alone the husband can obtain supplies constitutes mortification only in winter, when gleanings, etc. are not available (Ran).

(12) I.e., though the husband is not included when she vows, he is after divorcing her, and then she must have recourse to gleanings, etc.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 84a

Raba objected before R. Nahman: Now, is the husband not included in the term 'MANKIND'? But we learnt: [If she vows,] 'May I be removed from all Jews,' he must annul his own portion therein, and she shall minister unto him, whilst remaining removed from all Jews.[1] But if you say that the husband is not included in MANKIND,[2] it is a vow of self-denial, which he should permanently annul?[3] — Here it is different, because it is obvious that she forbids to herself [primarily] what is [normally] permitted.[4]

SHE CAN BENEFIT FROM THE GLEANINGS, FORGOTTEN SHEAVES, AND PE'AH. Now the poor tithe is not included;[5] but it was taught in the Baraitha: And [she can benefit] from the poor tithe? — Said R. Joseph: That is no difficulty: one [teaching] agrees with R. Eliezer, the other with the Rabbis. For we learnt, R. Eliezer said: One need not designate the poor-tithe of demai;[6]

---

(1) If she is divorced or becomes a widow. Infra 90a.

(2) [The terms 'Jews' and 'mankind' are taken to denote the same thing in relation to the husband.]

(3) For if the husband is not included in 'mankind', her vow cannot refer to cohabitation, which is forbidden in any case, but to benefit in general, and hence is a vow of mortification, which he can permanently annul (as stated on 79b); why then state 'whilst remaining removed from all Jews,' which, on this hypothesis, means that she may never benefit from them. So cur. edd. and as rendered by Asheri. Ran, Tosaf. and the chief reading of Asheri are much simpler: But if the husband is not included in mankind, why annul his own portion therein, seeing that the vow never referred to him?

(4) Hence she must have meant her husband too, it being altogether unlikely that her vow bore reference to after divorce. But normally the term does not include her husband.

(5) In the third and sixth years of the septennate a tithe was separated for the poor, the owner of the field giving it directly to whomsoever of the poor he pleased.

(6) V. next note.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 84b

whilst the Sages say: He must designate [it], but need not separate it.[1] Now surely he who maintains that the doubt[2] renders it tebel,[3] also holds that he [the owner] possesses the good will thereof,[4] and that being so, he may not benefit [her].[5] Whilst he who maintains that no designation is necessary, is of the view that the doubt does not render it tebel;[6] and wherever the doubt does not render it tebel, he [the owner] enjoys no goodwill therein,[7] and therefore she may benefit therefrom.[8] Said Abaye to him: [No.] All agree that the doubt renders it tebel, but R. Eliezer and the Rabbis differ in this: R. Eliezer maintains that the 'amme ha-arez are not suspected of withholding the poor tithe, since should he renounce the title to his property and thus become a poor man, he may take [the tithe] himself; hence he suffers no loss.[9] But the Rabbis hold that no one will renounce ownership of his property, for he fears that another may acquire it;[10] therefore they are suspected.[11] Raba said: Here [the Mishnah] refers to the poor tithe distributed in the [owner's] house,[12] in connection wherewith 'giving' is mentioned, [viz.,] and thou shalt give it unto the Levite, the stranger, etc.;[13] therefore one [who vows not to benefit from mankind] may not benefit therefrom.[14] Whilst there [in the Baraitha] the reference is to the poor tithe distributed in the threshing floor; since it is written thereof, And thou shalt leave it at thy gates,[15] one may benefit therefrom.

'KONAM BE THE BENEFIT PRIESTS AND LEVITES HAVE FROM ME,' THEY CAN SEIZE, ETC. Thus we see that goodwill benefit has no monetary value.[16] Then consider the last clause: [BUT IF HE VOWS]. 'KONAM BE THE BENEFIT THESE PRIESTS AND LEVITES HAVE FROM ME.' OTHERS TAKE [THE DUES]: but not these, thus proving that goodwill benefit has monetary value? — Said R. Hoshaia:[17] There is no difficulty: the one [clause] accords with Rabbi, the other with R. Jose son of R. Judah. For it was taught: If one steals his neighbour's tebel and consumes it, he must pay him the value of the tebel:[18] that is Rabbi's ruling. R. Jose son of R. Judah said: He must pay him only for the value of its hullin. Now presumably they differ in this:

---

(1) Demai, lit., 'of what (nature),' 'dubious' is the technical term for produce bought from a person who is not trusted to render the tithes, generally the 'am ha-arez; (v. Glos.) such produce had to be tithed by the purchaser. R. Eliezer maintains that it is unnecessary to designate any portion thereof as the poor tithe, because even if the first owner has definitely not separated the poor lithe the produce is permitted. But the Sages hold that as long as the poor tithe has not been separated the produce may not be eaten; therefore, since the original owner is under suspicion, he must designate the poor tithe himself, i.e., declare, 'this part of the produce is the poor tithe.' On the other hand, he is not compelled to give it to the poor, as he can challenge them, 'Prove that the first owner did not render the poor tithe.'

(2) Whether the poor tithe has been set aside or not.

(3) V. Glos.

(4) I.e., the owner can give the poor tithe to whomsoever of the poor he wishes.

(5) For the owner confers a definite benefit upon the person of his choice, since he could have given it to some other. Consequently, if a woman vows not to benefit from all mankind, she cannot take the poor tithe.

(6) Actually, according to this view, even if the poor tithe has definitely not been separated, it is not tebel; but since the discussion refers to demai, the doubt is mentioned.

(7) But must give it to the first poor man who applies. The interdependence of goodwill and tebel is deduced from Scripture.

(8) Lit., ‘one’. For she does not benefit from the owner, but takes it in virtue of her own right.
(9) It is assumed that no person transgresses a law which he can observe without loss to himself. Hence there is no fear that the ‘am ha-arez does not separate the poor-tithe. For he can designate part of the produce as poor tithe, formally renounce ownership if all his possessions, acquire the tithe, and then reacquire their possessions. Therefore when one purchases cereals from an ‘am ha-arez, he may assume that the poor tithe has been separated, or that by formally renouncing ownership the peasant has exempted it.
(10) For such renunciation had to be in the presence of witnesses, supra 45a, one of whom might forestall the first owner and acquire it himself.
(11) Since Abaye had refuted R. Joseph's answer, the difficulty remains, and Raba proceeds to dispose of it.
(12) If for any reason the poor tithe was not distributed in the threshing floor, as it should have been, it must be done in the house.
(13) Deut. XXVI, 12.
(14) For ‘thou shalt give’ implies that the owner possesses disposal rights therein.
(15) Ibid. XIV, 28; this implies that it must be left for whomever wishes to take it, and that the owner cannot allot it to any line in particular.
(16) Since the priest and Levites, who may not benefit from him, can seize the dues against his wishes, though he possesses the right of disposing of them at will.
(17) Var. lec.: Joseph.
(18) I.e., the value of the hullin (v. Glos.) it contains and the monetary value of his disposal rights over the terumah and tithes therein.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 85a

Rabbi holds that goodwill benefit has money value, whilst R. Jose son of R. Judah holds that goodwill benefit has no money value.[1] — No. All agree that goodwill benefit has no monetary value, but here they disagree over unseparated [priestly] dues.[2] But since goodwill benefit has no monetary value, what does it matter whether they have been separated or not?[3] — But this is Rabbi's reason: the Rabbis penalised the thief, that he may not steal; whereas R. Jose son of R. Judah maintains that the Rabbis penalised the owner, that he should not delay with his tebel.[4] Raba said:[5] Terumah is different, this being the reason that they can take it against his will: for terumah is fit only for priests, and since he came and forbade it to them, he rendered it just like dust.[6]

MISHNAH. [IF SHE VOWS,] ‘KONAM THAT I DO NOT AUGHT FOR[7] MY FATHER,’ ‘YOUR FATHER,’ ‘MY BROTHER,’ OR, ‘YOUR BROTHER,’ [THE HUSBAND] CANNOT ANNUL IT. ‘THAT I DO NOT AUGHT FOR YOU,’ HE NEED NOT ANNUL.[8] R. AKIBA SAID: HE MUST ANNUL IT, LEST SHE EXCEED HER OBLIGATIONS.[9] R. JOHANAN B. NURI SAID: HE MUST ANNUL IT, LEST HE DIVORCE HER AND SHE THEREBY BE FORBIDDEN TO HIM.

GEMARA. Samuel said: The halachah is as R. Johanan b. Nuri. Shall we say that in Samuel's opinion a man can consecrate that which is non-existent?[10] But the following contradicts it: If a man consecrates his wife's handiwork [which she will produce],

---

(1) Hence the first clause of the Mishnah under discussion agrees with R. Jose b. R. Judah, and the second with Rabbi.
(2) Rabbi regards the whole as hullin, whilst R. Jose b. R. Judah maintains that since they would have had to be separated eventually, they are regarded as though already removed from the whole, and therefore he must pay only for its hullin.
(3) Since they must eventually be separated.
(4) But render its dues immediately after harvesting. He therefore receives a payment only for its hullin. Presumably he is nevertheless required to render the priestly dues or their value on the stolen produce.
(5) In reconciling the discrepancy between the two clauses.
(6) I.e., entirely valueless, as far as he is concerned, and therefore the priests can take it.

(7) Lit., ‘for the mouth’.

(8) Since she is bound to work for him.

(9) The amount of work she is obliged to do for him is prescribed in Keth. 64b. Her vow is valid in respect of everything above that, and therefore the husband must annul the vow.

(10) Lit., ‘a thing that has not come into the world’. For the prohibition of a vow is a manner of consecration, v. p. 105, n. 8. Now, according to R. Johanan b. Nuri that prohibition is effective in respect of anything she may do after he divorces her, though as yet she is neither divorced nor has she produced anything: hence, just as a vow is valid in respect of the non-existent, so is consecration too, and since Samuel accepts this ruling as the halachah, it must be his view too.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 85b

she may work and provide for herself, and as for the surplus, R. Meir[1] rules that it is hekdesh.[2] R. Johanan the sandal-maker ruled that it is hullin.[3] Whereon Samuel said: The halachah is as R. Johanan the sandal-maker, thus proving that a man cannot consecrate the non-existent. And should you reply that he ruled that the halachah is as R. Johanan b. Nuri only in respect of the excess;[4] then he should have said, The halachah is as R. Johanan b. Nuri in respect of the excess, or, the halachah is as the first Tanna,[5] or, the halachah is not as R. Akiba? — But, said R. Joseph, konamoth[6] are different: since a man can interdict his neighbour's fruit to himself, he can prohibit to himself the non-existent.[7] Said Abaye to him: It is proper that one may prohibit his neighbour's fruit to himself, since he can forbid his own fruit to his neighbour: but shall he forbid the non-existent to his neighbour, seeing that he cannot interdict his neighbour's fruit to his neighbour![8] — But, said R. Huna the son of R. Joshua, it means that she vowed, ‘My hands be consecrated in respect of what they may produce’;[9] [the vow is valid even after divorce,] because her hands are already in existence. But if she vowed thus, would they be consecrated [and forbidden]? surely her hands are pledged to her husband.[10] She vowed, ‘When he divorces me.’ But now at least she is not divorced: how then do you know that such a declaration is valid?

---

(1) Var. lec.: Tarfon.

(2) Because one can consecrate the non-existent.

(3) He holds that one cannot consecrate the non-existent.

(4) For since R. Johanan b. Nuri rejects R. Akiba's reason, it follows that in his opinion the surplus belongs to the husband, not to the wife.

(5) Who also holds that the excess belongs to the husband, since he maintains he need not annul.

(6) I.e., prohibitions, arising as a result of vows, v. supra p. 105, n. 8.

(7) For in real consecration one cannot consecrate his neighbour's property.

(8) Abaye objects that the analogy is defective. For in both cases cited by R. Joseph. viz., prohibiting his neighbour's produce and prohibiting the non-existent to himself, there is when vowing one element of the vow under his control — himself. But if a woman interdicts her earnings to her husband, neither her husband nor her future earnings are in her control when she vows.

(9) So that whatever my hands produce shall be forbidden.

(10) And since the vow cannot take immediate effect, it cannot become effective after divorce.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 86a

— Said R. Elai: What if a man declares to his neighbour, ‘Let this field which I am selling you be consecrated when I buy it back from you’, — is it not consecrated?[1] R. Jeremiah demurred to this: How compare! [In the case of] ‘Let this field which I sell you [etc.],’ it is now in his possession; but is it in a woman's power to consecrate the work of her hands?[2] This is [rather] to be compared only to a man who says to his neighbour, ‘Let this field, which I have sold to you, be consecrated when I repurchase it from you,’ — is it consecrated?[3] R. Papa demurred to this: How compare! In the case of purchase the matter is definitely closed;[4] but as for a woman, is the matter definitely closed?[5] This can only be compared to a man who declares to his neighbour. ‘Let this field, which I have mortgaged to you, be consecrated when I redeem it from you', — is it not consecrated? R. Shisha the son of R. Idi demurred to this: How compare! As for the field, it is in his power to redeem it; but does it lie with a woman to be divorced? This is [rather] to be compared to one who says to his neighbour. 'Let this field, which I have mortgaged to you for ten years, be consecrated on its redemption,' — is it not consecrated?[6] R. Ashi demurred to this: How compare! There is a definite term [for redemption]; has then a woman a definite term [when she can encompass her divorce]?[7]

---

(1) Surely it is! So here too the vow is valid in respect of a future state through it is not valid when made.

(2) Obviously not.

(3) Surely not. Thus, he argued, this analogy proves on the contrary that the woman's vow is invalid.

(4) Neither the field nor its produce belongs, for the time being, to the vower.

(5) For her body at least still belongs to herself.

(6) Surely it is, though it cannot be redeemed before a certain date; so in the case of a woman too, though she cannot procure her divorce. As far as actual law is concerned this Rabbi agrees with the preceding: he merely varies the analogy for the sake of greater accuracy, though the result is the same.

(7) Obviously not; hence it should follow that her vow is invalid.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 86b

But, said R. Ashi, konamoth are different, since they have the force of intrinsic sanctity;[1] and [it is] in accordance with Raba's dictum, For Raba said: Hekdesh,[2] [the prohibition of] leaven, and manumission [of a slave] release from [the burden of] mortgage.[3] If so, why state LEST HE DIVORCE HER?[4] — Learn: moreover, LEST HE DIVORCE HER.[5]

MISHNAH. IF HIS WIFE VOWED, AND HE TOUGHT THAT HIS DAUGHTER HAD VOWED, OR IF HIS DAUGHTER VOWED AND HE THOUGHT THAT HIS WIFE HAD VOWED; IF SHE TOOK THE VOW OF A NAZIRITE, AND HE THOUGHT THAT SHE HAD VOWED [TO OFFER] A SACRIFICE, OR IF SHE VOWED (TO OFFER] A SACRIFICE, AND HE THOUGHT THAT SHE VOWED A NAZIRITE VOW; IF SHE VOWED [TO ABSTAIN] FROM FIGS, AND HE THOUGHT THAT SHE VOWED FROM GRAPES, OR IF SHE VOWED [TO ABSTAIN] FROM GRAPES AND HE THOUGHT THAT SHE VOWED FROM FIGS,[6] HE MUST ANNUL [THE VOW] AGAIN.

GEMARA. Shall we say that ['if her husband] disallow her'[7] is precisely meant?[8]

---

(1) Lit., 'bodily sanctity'. I.e., of objects consecrated in themselves, and which are offered on the altar; these are irredeemable. The term is opposed to 'monetary consecration,' i.e., objects which are consecrated so that they may be redeemed and their redemption money dedicated to Temple Service. As seen above (p. 105, n. 8), konam is really a form of consecration, and it is here stated that its prohibition is as strong as that which is intrinsically consecrated.

(2) V. Glos.

(3) If one pledges an unblemished animal for repayment of a debt, and then consecrates it, the intrinsic sanctity it acquires liberates it from the bond and the creditor cannot seize it in payment. Similarly, if one pledges leaven to a Gentile, the advent of Passover and the resultant prohibition cancels the pledge, and the Jew is bound to destroy it, like any other leaven. Likewise, if one mortgages a slave and then manumits him, he is released from the pledge, and the creditor cannot take him on payment. Hence, if a woman declares her hands konam, she thereby destroys their pledged character, and the vow is valid.

(4) For according to this the vow is valid even before.

(5) I.e., actually the vow is valid even now, since konam has the force of intrinsic consecration. But should you dispute this, for the Rabbis strengthened the husband's rights, so that not even konam may cancel them, the husband must still annul the vow, lest he divorce her. The objections raised above to the assumption that the vow has after-divorce validity are now inapplicable. Since in fact the vow should be valid immediately, but that the Rabbis, by a special decree, strengthened the husband's rights and rendered it valid, it follows that on divorce the law is restored to its proper basis.

— In Keth. 59b the text reads: ‘the Rabbis strengthened the husband's rights, so that the consecration should not be valid from now’; and the reading of Rashi, Tosaf. and Asheri is the same here too. Cur. edd., however, and also Ran, have the reading as given.

(6) And on these assumptions he annulled the vow.

(7) Num. XXX, 9.

(8) I.e., he must intend to disallow her, not a different person.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 87a

But what of the rents [for the dead], concerning which, for . . . for . . . is written, viz., [Then David took hold on his clothes and rent them . . .] for Saul and for Jonathan his son:[1] yet it was taught: If he was informed that his father had died, and he rent [his garments], and then it was discovered that it was his son, he has fulfilled the duty of rending?[2] — I will tell you: there is no difficulty. The one [teaching] refers to an unspecified action; the other to a specified one.[3] And it was taught [likewise]:[4] If he was informed that his father had died, and he rent his garments, and then it was discovered to be his son, he did not fulfil the duty of rending. If he was told that a relation of his had died, and thinking that it was his father, he rent [his garments], and then it was discovered to be his son, he fulfilled the duty of rending.[5] R. Ashi said: The one means [that he realised his error] within the period of an utterance;[6] the other, [that he realised it] after the period of an utterance. ([Thus:] Your ruling that his duty of rending is fulfilled holds good when it is discovered to be his son within the period of an utterance, whilst your ruling that his obligation remains unfulfilled is [if he learnt it] after such period of an utterance.)[7] And it was taught likewise: If one has all invalid in his house, who falls into a swoon and appears to be dead, and he rends his garments, and then he [the invalid] dies, his duty of rending is unfulfilled.[8] Said R. Simeon b. Pazzi in the name of R. Joshua b. Levi on the authority of Bar Kappara. This was taught only if he died after the period of an utterance; but [if he died] within the period of an utterance, he need not rend his garments again.[9] Now, the law is that [that which follows an action] within the period of an utterance is as [though it were simultaneous with] the utterance,[10] except in the case of blasphemy, idolatry, betrothal and divorce.[11]

MISHNAH. IF SHE VOWS, ‘KONAM, IF I TASTE THESE FIGS AND GRAPES, AND HE [THE HUSBAND] CONFIRMS [THE VOW] IN RESPECT OF FIGS, THE WHOLE [VOW] IS CONFIRMED; IF HE ANNULS IT IN RESPECT OF FIGS, IT IS NOT ANNULLED, UNLESS HE ANNULS IN RESPECT OF GRAPES TOO. IF SHE VOWS, ‘KONAM IF I TASTE FIGS’ AND ‘IF I TASTE GRAPES’, THEY ARE TWO DISTINCT VOWS.[12]

GEMARA. Who is the author of our Mishnah? — R. Ishmael. For it was taught: Her husband may confirm it, or her husband may make it void:[13] If she vows, ‘Konam, if I taste these figs and grapes’, and he [the husband] confirms [the vow] in respect of figs, the whole vow is confirmed;

---

(1) II Sam. I, 11f. The repetition of ‘for’ implies that he made a rent for each specifically.

(2) Though it appears from the verse quoted that the rent must be for a particular person; the same then should hold good of annulment of vows.

(3) I.e., the Baraitha means that he rent his garment without specifying for whom (v. Tosaf.), but in the Mishnah he explicitly designated the wrong person.

(4) והתניא, v. note 6.

(5) Thus if he had explicitly rent his garments for the wrong person, his obligation is unfulfilled; but not if his error was a mental one only. [Some texts omit the last clause. The Baraitha just cited is thus regarded as contradictory to the first. On this reading והתניא (v. n. 5) introduces a question and is to be rendered ‘But was it not taught’. V. Asheri, 4a.)

(6) I.e., almost immediately after he rent his garments, within the time that it would take to make an utterance, e.g., a greeting, v. Nazir 20b.

(7) [On this reading, which is that of cur. edd., R. Ashi's main object is to reconcile the two Baraithas (v. n. 6), though his distinction in regard to the time when the error was discovered might serve also to explain our Mishnah (Ran). Some texts; however, omit the bracketed passage. On this latter reading R. Ashi's reply is intended solely to reconcile our Mishnah and the first cited Baraitha; v. Asheri, cur. edd. which retain the 'last clause' (v. n. 6) and this bracketed passage, present, on the view of Asheri, a conflated text.]

(8) Since he was alive when the garments were rent, that rending is invalid.

(9) So the text as emended by Bah.

(10) Hence cancelling or modifying the action, as the case may be.

(11) If one commits blasphemy or practises idolatry, and immediately, within the period of utterance, retracts, his retraction is unavailing. If a woman accepts kiddushin or a divorce, and immediately thereafter withdraws her consent, such withdrawal is invalid.

(12) And each can be annulled or confirmed without the other.

(13) Num. XXX, 14.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 87b

but if he annulled it in respect of figs, it[1] is not annulled, unless he annuls in respect of the grapes too: this is R. Ishmael's opinion. R. Akiba said: Behold, it is written, her husband may [yekimennu] confirm it or her husband may annul it [yeferenu]: just as yekimennu implies mimmennu [part of it],[2] so yeferenu means part thereof.[3] And R. Ishmael?[4] — Is it then written, he shall annul [part] thereof? And R. Akiba?[5] — Annulment is assimilated to confirmation: just as confirmation [denotes a part] thereof, so annulment too [denotes a part] thereof. R. Hiyya b. Abba said in R. Johanan's name: These are the views of R. Ishmael and R. Akiba. But the Sages maintain: Confirmation is assimilated to annulment: just as in the case of annulment, that which he annulled is void, so also in respect to confirmation, that which he confirmed is confirmed.[6]

IF SHE VOWS, 'KONAM, IF I TASTE FIGS' [AND 'IF I TASTE GRAPES, etc.']. Raba said: Our Mishnah agrees with R. Simeon, who ruled: He must say 'I swear' to each one separately.[7]

MISHNAH. [IF THE HUSBAND DECLARES,] 'I KNOW THAT THERE WERE VOWS, BUT DID NOT KNOW THAT THEY COULD BE ANNULLED', HE MAY ANNUL THEM [NOW]. [BUT IF HE SAYS:] 'I KNOW THAT ONE CAN ANNUL, BUT DID NOT KNOW THAT THIS WAS A VOW,' R. MEIR RULED: HE CANNOT ANNUL IT, WHILST THE SAGES MAINTAIN: HE CAN ANNUL.[8]

GEMARA. But the following contradicts this: [Or if he smote him with any stone, wherewith a man may die,] seeing him not [. . . then the congregation shall restore him to the city of his refuge]:[9] this excludes a blind man;[10] that is R. Judah's view. R. Meir said: It is to include a blind person![11] —

---

(1) [a. Either the whole vow; or b. the part he did not annul (Ran); v. p. 270, n. 5.]

(2) Yekimennu is taken as a contraction of yakim mimmenu, 'he shall confirm part of it'.

(3) Though yeferenu itself cannot bear that meaning, it is nevertheless so rendered by analogy with yekimennu. Hence if he annulled part thereof, the entire vow is annulled.

(4) How does he justify his view?

(5) And how does he dispose of this objection?

(6) On this reading, the Sages regard it as axiomatic that part of a vow can be annulled, and by analogy rule likewise for confirmation. Hence the statement of the Mishnah, that if he annulled the vow in respect of figs it is not annulled, must mean that the vow is not entirely void; the conflict in the Baraitha must also be interpreted on the same lines. But in the Tosefta it appears that if one annulled only part thereof the entire vow remains valid. Consequently the reading of some editions is preferable: But the Sages maintain, just as in the case of annulment, even that part which he annulled is not void, so is confirmation too — even that which he confirmed is not confirmed (Ran).

(7) V. supra p. 211, n. 3; so here too, only if she says 'If I taste' for each separately, is it regarded as two distinct vows.

(8) V. supra 79a for notes.

(9) Num. XXXV, 23f.

(10) Who is not exiled to the refuge cities for manslaughter.

(11) In Deut. XIX, 5, it is stated, as when a man goeth into a wood with his neighbour, etc. This implies that the unwitting murderer must have known where his victim was, but that he killed him unintentionally. If, however, he did not know of his presence, the law of exile is inapplicable. Now a blind person does not see his victim, nevertheless, owing to the greater keenness of his other faculties he senses the presence of the victim, though not knowing exactly where he is. R. Judah maintains that the partial knowledge of the blind is regarded as full knowledge, and would be sufficient for the law to operate. Consequently, when Scripture states, 'seeing him not', which implies that he might however have seen him, it must teach the exclusion of the blind. R. Meir's view is that partial knowledge is in itself not regarded as complete knowledge; hence, without any verse one would assume that a blind person is excluded. Consequently, 'seeing him not' cannot exclude the blind, since for that no verse is necessary, but must be translated, 'though not seeing him', i.e., though unable to see him, and the verse extends the law to the blind. Thus this contradicts the Mishnah, for there R. Meir rules that since he possessed the partial knowledge that a husband can annul vows, he is regarded as having possessed the complete knowledge, and therefore cannot annul after the day of hearing. Likewise R. Judah here is opposed to the Sages in the Mishnah, by whom R. Judah is meant, when they are in opposition to R. Meir (Rashi). Ran, Asheri and Tosaf. give different interpretations.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 88a

Raba answered: In each case (the ruling follows] from the context.[1] R. Judah reasons: Concerning a murderer it is written, As when a man goeth into a wood with his neighbour, etc.,[2] implying whoever can go into a 'wood', and a blind person too can enter a wood. Now, should you say that 'seeing him not' teaches the inclusion of the blind, that could be deduced from 'a wood'. Hence 'seeing him not' must exclude the blind. But R. Meir maintains: It is written, [Whoso killeth his neighbour] without knowing,[3] [which implies] whoever that can know, whereas a blind person cannot know. Now, should you say that 'seeing him not' excludes the blind, that would follow from, 'without knowing'. Consequently, 'seeing him not' must teach the inclusion of the blind.[4]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN IS UNDER A VOW THAT HIS SON-INLAW SHALL NOT BENEFIT FROM HIM,[5] AND HE DESIRES TO GIVE MONEY TO HIS DAUGHTER, HE MUST SAY TO HER, 'THIS MONEY IS GIVEN TO YOU AS A GIFT, PROVIDING THAT YOUR HUSBAND HAS NO RIGHTS THEREIN, (FOR ONLY THAT IS YOURS] WHICH YOU MAY PUT TO YOUR PERSONAL USE.'[6]

GEMARA. Rab said: We learnt this only if he says to her, 'WHICH YOU MAY PUT TO YOUR PERSONAL USE.' But if he says, 'Do what you please,' the husband acquires it.[7] Samuel said: Even if he declares, 'Do what you please,' the husband has no rights therein. R. Zera demurred to this:

---

(1) So cur. edd. Ran reads: In this case (sc. of a murderer) the ruling follows from the context.

(2) Deut. XIX, 5.

(3) Ibid. 4; i.e., by throwing a stone without knowing where it will fall.

(4) Thus their dispute does not centre on the question whether partial knowledge is as full knowledge or not, and hence has no bearing on our Mishnah.

(5) The text is uncertain.

(6) Lit., 'put into your mouth.'

(7) For since she is able to put it to any use, her rights are automatically transferred to her husband.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 88b

With whom does this ruling of Rab agree? With R. Meir, who said: The hand of a woman is as the hand of her husband.[1] But the following contradicts it: How is a partnership formed in respect of an alley way?[2] One [of the residents] places there a barrel [of wine] and declares, 'This belongs to all the residents of the alley way': and he transfers ownership to them through his Hebrew slave, male or female, his adult son or daughter, or his wife.[3] But if you say, her husband acquires it, the 'erub[4] has not left the husband's possession?[5] — Raba replied: Although R. Meir said, The hand of a woman is as the hand of her husband, he agrees in respect to 'partnership',[6] that since his object is to transfer it to others, she can acquire it from her husband. Rabina objected before R. Ashi: The following can acquire it on their behalf: his adult son or daughter, his Hebrew slave, male or female. But the following can not acquire it on their behalf: his son or daughter, if minors, his Canaanite slave, male or female, and his wife![7] — But, said R. Ashi, the Mishnah[8] holds good [only] when she possesses a court in that alley way,[9] so that since she can acquire part ownership [in the 'erub] for herself,[10] she can also acquire it on behalf of others.

MISHNAH. BUT EVERY VOW OF A WIDOW AND OF HER THAT IS DIVORCED . . . SHALL STAND AGAINST HER.[11] HOW SO? IF SHE DECLARED, BEHOLD, I WILL BE A NAZIRITE AFTER THIRTY DAYS', EVEN IF SHE MARRIED WITHIN THE THIRTY DAYS, HE CANNOT ANNUL IT.

---

(1) I.e., she has no independent rights, v. Kid. 23b.

(2) By a legal fiction a partnership was formed by all the Jewish residents of an alley in respect thereto, that it might rank as a private domain, and carrying therein be permitted on the Sabbath. This was effected by placing in it some food of which all the residents became joint-owners, v. 'Er. 73b.

(3) Who accept it from him on behalf of the residents.

(4) Lit., 'mixture', 'combination', the technical terms for the thing deposited (v. Glos.).

(5) And that law is contained in an anonymous Mishnah, the author of which is R. Meir.

(6) Shittuf. The technical term for the partnership created for the purposes of the Sabbath law.

(7) The reference is the same as above. This shews that the wife, having no powers of acquisition apart from her husband, cannot be the medium of transference, and thus contradicts the Mishnah just quoted. This difficulty arises in any case, but Rabina adduces it here to refute the distinction posited by Raba.

(8) In 'Er.

(9) E.g., if she had inherited it before marriage, and the groom had written a deed renouncing all rights therein.

(10) Because that is in the husband's own interest, for carrying is forbidden in the alley unless every resident — and the wife ranks as one in her own rights, since she possesses a court — is part owner of the 'erub, whereas the other teaching (a Baraitha) refers to the case where she has no court of her own.

(11) Num. XXX, 10.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 89a

IF SHE VOWS WHILE UNDER HER HUSBAND'S AUTHORITY, HE CAN DISALLOW HER. HOW SO? IF SHE DECLARED, 'BEHOLD! I WILL BE A NAZIRITE AFTER THIRTY DAYS,' [AND HER HUSBAND ANNULLED IT], EVEN THOUGH SHE WAS WIDOWED OR DIVORCED WITHIN THE THIRTY DAYS, IT IS ANNULLED. IF SHE VOWED ON ONE DAY, AND HE DIVORCED HER ON THE SAME DAY AND TOOK HER BACK ON THE SAME DAY, HE CANNOT ANNUL IT. THIS IS THE GENERAL. RULE: ONCE SHE HAS GONE FORTH AS HER OWN MISTRESS [EVEN] FOR A SINGLE HOUR, HE CANNOT ANNUL.

GEMARA. It was taught: If a widow or a divorced woman declares, 'Behold! I will be a nazirite when I marry,' and she marries, — R. Ishmael said: He [the husband] can annul. R. Akiba ruled: He cannot annul. (And the mnemonic is Yelaly).[1] If a married woman declares, 'Behold! I will be a nazirite when I am divorced,' and she is divorced: R. Ishmael ruled: He cannot annul;[2] R. Akiba said: He can annul.[3] R. Ishmael argued: Behold, it is said, But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced . . . shall stand against her,[4] implying that the [incidence of] the vow must be in the period of widowhood or divorce.[5] [But] R. Akiba maintains: It is written, with whatever she hath bound her soul,[4] implying that the binding of the vow must be [created] in the period of widowhood or divorce.[6]

R. Hisda said: Our Mishnah agrees with R. Akiba.[7] Abaye said: It may agree even with R. Ishmael: in the Mishnah she made herself dependent upon a time factor; the period may end without her being divorced or the period may end without her being married;[8] but in the Baraitha she made the vow dependent upon marriage.[9]

'This is the general rule,' taught with respect to a betrothed maiden,[10] is to extend the law to where the father accompanied the [betrothed] husband's messengers, or the father's messengers accompanied the [betrothed] husband's messengers, — that in the case of a betrothed maiden her vows are annulled by her father and husband.[11] 'THIS IS THE GENERAL RULE,' taught in the chapter,[12] 'Now these are the vows,' is meant to extend [the law] to where the father delivered her to her [betrothed] husband's messengers, or where the father's agents delivered her to the messengers of the [betrothed] husband, [and it teaches] that the husband cannot annul [vows] made [by her] previously.[13]

MISHNAH. THERE ARE NINE MAIDENS WHOSE VOWS[14] STAND:[15] [i] A BOGERETH WHO [VOWED] AND IS AN ORPHAN;[16] [ii] A MAIDEN [WHO VOWED] AND [THEN] BECAME A BOGERETH AND IS AN ORPHAN;

---

(1) I.e., in the clause just quoted, R. Ishmael rules Yafer, he may annul; R. Akiba: Lo yafer, he cannot annul. In the next clause it is the reverse, R. Ishmael says, Lo Yafer; and R. Akiba: Yafer.

(2) The husband's annulment whilst she is married is invalid after divorce.

(3) Thus in both cases R. Ishmael maintains that the woman's status when the vow is to take effect is the deciding factor, and R. Akiba holds that it depends on her status when she vows.

(4) Num. XXX, 10.

(5) And that in that case it 'shall stand against her', i.e., it cannot be annulled, proving that the incidence of the vow is what matters.

(6) I.e., that she makes the vow then, and that in that case her husband cannot annul.

(7) Since in both clauses of the Mishnah the matter is determined by the time when the vow was made.

(8) Adopting the reading of Bah. v. Ran.

(9) If she is unmarried, and vows to be a nazirite when she marries, there must he a change of status between the making of the vow and its incidence; in that case R. Ishmael rules that we regard the latter. But if she merely postpones the incidence of the vow, she may bear the same status when the vow becomes operative as when it is made; there R. Ishmael may admit that we regard the time of making the vow.

(10) Supra 71a. Whenever a general rule is stated, it is always meant to add to the specific case actually given.

(11) When the father gives over his daughter to the messengers of the husband to escort her to her new home, she is regarded as a nesu'ah, and has passed out of her father's authority. But if he or his messengers accompany her, together with her husband's messengers, she is yet under his authority, and he still shares the power to annul with her husband. On this home-taking ceremony v. Keth. 48b.

(12) I.e., in the present Mishnah, which forms part of Chapter XI.

(13) I.e., vows made before her homecoming. Having passed out of her father's authority, (v. n. 2) she is her own mistress until she enters her husband's home, and if she vowed in the interval, he cannot annul.

(14) 'Maidens' is not used here in the restricted sense of na'arah, but means girls and women in general who were betrothed while still in the stage of na'arah.

(15) I.e., they cannot be annulled.

(16) The reference is to 'an orphan during her father's lifetime,' i.e., one who was married with nissu'in, and then widowed or divorced. Even if she is still a minor, her father no longer has any authority over her, so she is called 'an orphan during her father's lifetime.'

[iii] A NA'ARAH WHO IS NOT YET A BOGERETH, AND IS AN ORPHAN;[1] [iv] A BOGERETH [WHO VOWED] AND WHOSE FATHER DIED;[2] [v] A NA'ARAH [WHO VOWED] AND IS NOW A BOGERETH AND WHOSE FATHER DIED;[2] [vi] A NA'ARAH WHO IS NOT YET A BOGERETH AND WHOSE FATHER DIED; [vii] A MAIDEN WHOSE FATHER DIED, AND AFTER HER FATHER DIED SHE BECAME A BOGERETH;[3] [viii] A BOGERETH[4] WHOSE FATHER IS ALIVE; [ix] A MAIDEN TURNED BOGERETH, WHOSE FATHER IS ALIVE.[5] R. JUDAH SAID: ALSO ONE WHO MARRIED HIS DAUGHTER WHILST A MINOR, AND SHE WAS WIDOWED OR DIVORCED AND RETURNED TO HIM [HER FATHER] AND IS STILL A NA'ARAH.

GEMARA. Rab Judah said in Rab's name: These are the words of R. Judah. But the Sages say: The vows of three maidens stand: [i] a bogereth; [ii] an orphan; and [iii] an orphan during her father's lifetime.[6]

MISHNAH. [IF SHE VOWS,] 'KONAM THAT I BENEFIT NOT FROM MY FATHER OR YOUR FATHER IF I PREPARE AUGHT FOR YOU,'[7] OR, 'KONAM THAT I BENEFIT NOT FROM YOU, IF I PREPARE AUGHT FOR MY FATHER OR YOUR FATHER,' HE CAN ANNUL.

GEMARA. It was taught: [If she vows, 'Konam] that I benefit not from my father or your father, if I prepare aught for you,' — R. Nathan said: He cannot annul;[8] the Sages maintain: He can annul.[9] 'May I be removed from Jews,[10] if I minister to you,' — R. Nathan said: He cannot annul: the Sages rule: He can annul.

A man once vowed not to benefit from the world if he should marry before having studied halachah:[11] he ran with ladder and cord,[12] yet did not succeed in his studies. Thereupon R. Aha son of R. Huna came and led him into error,[13] and caused him to marry;

---

(1) So Asheri: A na'arah who vowed before becoming a bogereth, and was orphaned (and is still not a bogereth). [These three belong to the group of maidens whose vows cannot be annulled because they are orphans (as defined).]

(2) [She made a vow as na'arah, lost her father and is still a na'arah. These three belong to the group of maidens whose vows cannot be annulled because they have no fathers.]

(3) [She lost her father, vowed, and then became a bogereth.]

(4) I.e., who vowed as a bogereth.

(5) I.e., who vowed as a na'arah, but comes to enquire about annulment when she is a bogereth. [These three belong to the group of maidens whose vows cannot be annulled because they have reached the status of bogereth.]

(6) V. p. 275, n. 7. There is actually no conflict, R. Judah's nine being included in the Sages' three. R. Judah's enumeration is merely in greater detail, and intended to sharpen his disciples' minds (T. J. a.l.).

(7) Lit., 'for thy mouth'.

(8) He does not regard it as a vow of self-denial, for she can refrain from doing anything for her husband.

(9) Since she is in duty bound to serve her husband.

(10) Cf. p. 279, n. 7.

(11) Laws. For a discussion of the full meaning of the term halachah v. Weiss, Dor. I, 70.

(12) גפא is the ladder by which one ascends the palm tree to gather its dates; תוביל is the cord whereby its branches are pulled down, to facilitate gathering whilst one stands on the ground. — The expression is metaphorical: he made every possible effort.

(13) By making him believe that if he married the vow would not be valid.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 90a

then daubed him with clay[1] and brought him before R. Hisda.[2] Said Raba: Who is so wise as to do such a thing if not R. Aha son of R. Huna, who is [indeed] a great man? For he maintains: Just as the Rabbis and R. Nathan disagree in reference to annulment, so also with respect to absolution.[3] But R. Papi said: The disagreement is only in respect to annulment, R. Nathan holding that the husband cannot annul unless the vow has already become operative, for it is written, Then the moon shall be confounded;[4] whilst the Rabbis maintain: The husband can annul even before the vow takes effect, as it is written, He maketh void the intentions of the crafty.[5] But as for absolution, all agree that a Sage cannot permit anything until the vow is operative, for it is written, He shall not break his word.[6]

Shall we say that the following supports him? [If he vows,] 'Konam that I benefit not from So-and-so, and from anyone from whom I may obtain absolution for him,' he must obtain absolution in respect of the first, and then obtain absolution in respect of the second.[7] But if you say, absolution may be granted even before the vow takes effect, surely he can be absolved in whatever order he pleases![8] — And who knows whether this one is first and that the other is the second?[9]

Shall we say that this supports him: [If he vows,] 'Konam that I benefit not from So-and-so, and behold! I will be a nazirite if I be absolved therefrom'; he must be absolved of his vow, and then of his naziriteship.[10] But if you say, absolution may be granted before the vow takes effect, if he wishes, let him first be absolved of his vow; and if he wishes, let him first be absolved of being a nazirite? — This agrees with R. Nathan.[11]

Rabina said: Meremar told me: Thus did your father say in R. Papi's name: The controversy is only in reference to annulment, but in respect to absolution all agree that he [the Sage] may grant it even before the vow is operative,[12] because it is written, 'He shall not break his word,'

---

(1) I.e., his garments. To show him that the services of other people were indispensable: he would straightway need someone to clean his garments (Ran).

(2) For absolution.

(3) V. supra 89b. R. Nathan maintains that since the vow is not yet operative, he cannot annul, whilst the Rabbis hold that he can annul it though as yet inoperative. So with reference to absolution: in R. Nathan's view, one can be absolved from his vow only when it is in effect etc. For that reason he caused him to marry first, and did not have the vow annulled immediately.

(4) Isa. XXIV, 23; Heb. והפדה הלבנה. This is merely quoted as a sign. וחפרה is similar to והפרה (and he shall disallow her), whilst הלבנה is connected with בנה to build, and thus, by a play on words, the phrase is translated: and he shall disallow her, when the edifice (of the vow) be erected, i.e., when the vow is operative, but not before. [It is however omitted from MS.M.]

(5) Job V, 12, i.e., even when a vow is as yet merely an intention, not having taken effect, it can be annulled.

(6) Num. XXX, 3: Rashi translates: he (the Rabbi) shall not break (i.e., grant absolution for) his vow, i.e., as long as it is only a word, which has not yet taken effect. Asheri observes: from this we deduce, he (who vowed) may not break his word, but another (sc. a Sage) may break it, i.e., grant absolution, but that is only when 'he must do according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth,' viz., when the vow is operative.

(7) I.e., the Sages who became subject to the vow on account of having granted absolution.

(8) Lit., 'if he wishes, he can be absolved of this one first, and if he wishes, he can be absolved of the other first.' — Thus this supports R. Papa's contention.

(9) I.e., indeed that is so: 'first' and 'second' need not refer to the order in which he vowed, but to the order of absolution.

(10) Here it is explicitly stated that be can only be absolved of being a nazirite after absolution of his vow, when his conditional vow to be a nazirite has taken effect.

(11) I.e., R. Abba b. R. Huna may be correct in asserting that this is a matter of dispute, and this Baraitha is taught according to R. Nathan.

(12) The reverse of what was said above.

intimating that no act had yet taken place.[1]

An objection is raised: [If he vows,] 'Konam that I benefit not from So-and-so, and from anyone from whom I obtain absolution for him'; he must be absolved in respect of the first, and then obtain absolution in respect of the second. But why so? Let him be absolved in whichever order he pleases![2] — Who knows which one is first or which one is second?[3]

An objection is raised: [If he vows,] 'Konam that I benefit not from So-and-so, and behold! I will be a nazirite if I be absolved therefrom': he must be absolved of his vow, and then of his naziriteship. But why so? If he wishes, let him first be absolved of his vow, and if he wishes, let him first be absolved of being a nazirite! This is indeed a refutation.

MISHNAH. AT FIRST IT WAS RULED THAT THREE WOMEN MUST BE DIVORCED AND RECEIVE THEIR KETHUBAH:[4] SHE WHO DECLARES: I AM DEFILED TO YOU';[5] OR 'HEAVEN IS BETWEEN YOU AND ME';[6] AND 'MAY I BE REMOVED FROM JEWS.'[7] BUT SUBSEQUENTLY, TO PREVENT HER FROM CONCEIVING A PASSION FOR ANOTHER[8] TO THE INJURY OF HER HUSBAND,[9] THE RULING WAS AMENDED THUS: SHE WHO DECLARED, 'I AM DEFILED UNTO YOU,' MUST BRING PROOF: 'HEAVEN IS BETWEEN ME AND YOU' — THEY SHOULD ENGAGE IN PRAYER,[10] AND 'MAY I BE REMOVED FROM JEWS' — HE [THE HUSBAND] MUST ANNUL HIS PORTION,[11] AND SHE SHALL MINISTER TO HIM, WHILST REMAINING REMOVED FROM JEWS.

GEMARA. The scholars propounded: If she declared to her husband, 'I am defiled to you,'[12] may she eat of terumah?[13] — R. Shesheth ruled: She may eat thereof, so as not to cast a stigma upon her children.[14] Raba said: She may not eat, for she can eat hullin.[15] Raba said: Yet R. Shesheth admits that if she was widowed,[16] she may not eat: is his reason aught but that she should not cast a stigma upon her children? But if she was widowed or divorced [and she ceases to eat of terumah], it will be said, It is only now that she was seduced.[17]

R. Papa said, Raba tested us: If the wife of a priest was forcibly ravished,[18] does she receive her Kethubah or not? Since forcible seduction in respect to a priest is as voluntary infidelity in respect to an Israelite, she does not receive her Kethubah;[19] or perhaps she can plead, 'I personally am fit;[20]

---

(1) V. p. 278, n. 2; the vow was not yet operative, and we deduce that the Sage can cause him, by absolution, to break his word. So Ran. Rashi: thus asserting that the act (sc. of R. Abba b. R. Huna, v. 89b end) was unnecessary.

(2) V. p. 278, n. 4.

(3) V. p. 278, n. 5.

(4) V. Glos.

(5) I.e., unfaithful.

(6) I.e., her husband is impotent — a thing that, apart from herself, can be known only to Heaven.

(7) Including her own husband. By this vow she shewed that cohabitation was unbearable to her, and therefore could demand to be divorced and receive her Kethubah.

(8) Lit., 'casting her eyes at another man.'

(9) [מקלקלת על בעלה. A difficult phrase. According to the rendering adopted, the meaning is: She will purposely make one of these declarations in order to obtain her freedom against his will. Ran explains: She may go to a place where nothing is known of her vow and marry there. He seemed to have taken this phrase as denoting: She will act unseemly (whilst still) with her husband, and as referring only to the declaration 'May I be removed from Jews'.]

(10) That his impotency might cease (Tosaf.) [Lit., 'They should act by way of a request'. Ran: attempts should be made to placate the wife. Rashi: the husband should be asked to agree to a divorce.]

(11) I.e., as far as he personally is concerned.

(12) This refers to the wife of a priest.

(13) If it is true, she certainly must not. Yet the Mishnah in its second recession ruled that she must first prove it. Now the question arises, Do we disbelieve her in all respects, in which case she may eat of terumah, or only in respect of a divorce?

(14) If she refrains, it will be assumed that she told the truth, in which case her children may be bastards.

(15) None will observe that she consistently refrains from eating terumah and no aspersions will be cast upon her children.

(16) Rashi and Tosaf. read: or divorced.

(17) Thus her refraining leaves the honour of her children unaffected.

(18) If the wife of an Israelite is seduced: if voluntarily, she becomes forbidden to him; if forcibly, she remains permitted. But the wife of a priest is forbidden in both cases.

(19) As is the case of an Israelite's wife who committed adultery of her own free will.

(20) Having been forcibly ravished, she has committed no wrong.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 91a

it is only the man whose field has been ruined?'[1] And we answered him, It is [taught in] our Mishnah: (SHE WHO DECLARES,] 'I AM DEFILED TO YOU,' RECEIVES HER KETHUBAH. Now to whom does this refer? Shall we say, to the wife of an Israelite: If of her own free will, does she receive her Kethubah? Whilst if by force, is she forbidden to her husband?[2] Hence it must refer to the wife of a priest: now, if of her own free will, does she receive the Kethubah? Is she of less account[3] than the wife of an Israelite, [who sinned] voluntarily? Hence it must surely mean by force; and it is stated that she receives her Kethubah.

The scholars propounded: What if she declares to her husband, 'You have divorced me'?[4] — R. Hamnuna said: Come and hear: SHE WHO DECLARES, 'I AM DEFIled TO YOU': Now even according to the later Mishnah,[5] which teaches that she is not believed, it is [only] there that she may lie, in the knowledge that her husband does not know;[6] but with respect to 'You have divorced me,' of [the truth of] which he must know, she is believed, for there is a presumption [that] no woman is brazen in the presence of her husband.[7] Said Raba to him: On the contrary. even according to the first Mishnah, that she is believed, it is [only] there, because she would not expose herself to shame;[8] but here it may happen that she is stronger [in character] than her husband,[9] and so indeed be brazen.

R. Mesharsheya objected: 'HEAVEN IS BETWEEN ME AND YOU,' as ruled by the early Mishnah, refutes Raba's view; for here it involves no shame for her, yet it is stated that she is believed? — Raba holds that there, since she cannot avoid declaring whether the emission is forceful or not, were it not as she said, she would not make the charge.[10]

But let 'HEAVEN IS BETWEEN US,' as ruled by the later Mishnah, refute R. Hamnuna's view, for here she knows that her husband knows,[11] yet it is taught that she is not believed? — R. Hamnuna maintains that here too she would argue to herself, 'Granted that he knows that cohabitation has taken place, does he know whether the emission is forceful'?[12] Therefore she may be lying.

A certain woman was accustomed to rise [in the morning] and wash her husband's hands whenever intimacy had taken place. One day she brought him water to wash. 'But,' exclaimed he, 'nothing has taken place to-day'! 'If so,' she rejoined, [it must have been] 'one of the gentile

---

(1) I.e., it is his sanctity, not my wrong-doing, that prohibits me to him.

(2) Surely not! and there is no need to divorce her.

(3) I.e., is her sin of less account?

(4) Is she believed in spite of his denial, or may it be a ruse to gain her freedom?

(5) I.e., the Mishnah as it was subsequently amended.

(6) Whether her statement is true.

(7) I.e., she would not be brazen enough to tell such a lie in his presence, wherefore she is believed.

(8) If she had not actually been ravished.

(9) So Ran. Rashi: her husband might have ill-treated her; she has conceived a strong passion for (another) man.

(10) I.e., since it is a charge of extreme delicacy and unpleasantness, she would not make it if it were untrue.

(11) Whether the charge is true or not.

(12) Surely not, for only the woman can feel that.

Talmud - Mas. Nedarim 91b

perfume sellers[1] who were here to-day; if not you, perhaps it was one of them.' Said R. Nahman: She had conceived a passion for another, and her declaration has no substance.[2]

A certain woman shewed displeasure with her husband. Said he to her, 'Why this change now?' She replied, 'You have never caused me so much pain through intimacy as to-day.' 'But there has been none to-day!' he exclaimed. 'If so,' she returned, [it must have been] 'the gentile naphtha sellers who were here to-day; if not you, perhaps it was one of them.' Said R. Nahman: Disregard her; she had conceived a passion for another.

A certain man was closeted in a house with a [married] woman. Hearing the master [her husband] entering, the adulterer broke through a hedge and fled.[3] Said Raba: The wife is permitted; had he committed wrong, he would have hidden himself [in the house].[4]

A certain adulterer visited a woman. Her husband came, whereupon the lover went and placed himself behind a curtain before the door.[5] Now, some cress was lying there, and a snake [came and ate] thereof; the master [her husband] was about to eat of the cress, unknown to his wife. 'Do not eat it,' warned the lover, 'because a snake has tasted it.' Said Raba: The wife is permitted: had he committed wrong, he would have been pleased that he should eat thereof and die, as it is written, For they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands.[6] Surely that is obvious? — I might think that he had committed wrong, and as for his warning, that is because he prefers the husband not to die, so that his wife may be to him as stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant;[7] therefore he teaches otherwise.

---

(1) Lit., 'dealers in aloe'.

(2) I.e., she is disbelieved. The reference here is to the wife of a priest; v. p. 280, n. 9. For if she were the wife of an Israelite, she would not be forbidden to him even if it were true. Ran.

(3) [In the presence of the husband ('Aruch).]

(4) That the husband should remain in ignorance of his presence.

(5) So Ran. 'Aruch: and placed himself in a concealed arch by the gate.

(6) Ezek. XXIII, 37.

(7) Prov. IX, 17. Though this Tractate ends with a number of stories referring to adultery, these are not to be taken as reflecting general conditions. The strong opposition to unchastity displayed by the Prophets and the Rabbis, as well as the practice of early marriage, would have conduced to higher moral standards. V. J.E. art. 'Chastity'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 2a

C H A P T E R I

MISHNAH. ALL THE SUBSTITUTES FOR THE NAZIRITE VOW[1] ARE EQUIVALENT TO NAZIRITE VOWS. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I SHALL BE [ONE].' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I SHALL BE COMELY, A NAZIRITE, A NAZIK,[2] A NAZIAH[2] A PAZIAH. HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I INTEND TO BE LIKE THIS,' OR 'I INTEND TO CURL [MY HAIR].' OR 'I MEAN TO TEND [MY HAIR].' OR 'I UNDERTAKE TO DEVELOP TRESSES,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS.] 'I TAKE UPON MYSELF [AN OBLIGATION INVOLVING] BIRDS,' R. MEIR SAYS HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, BUT THE SAGES SAY HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE.

GEMARA. Seeing that the Tanna[3] is teaching the order Nashim,[4] why does he speak of the nazirite? — The Tanna had in mind the scriptural verse, Then it cometh to pass if she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some unseemly thing in her,[5] and he reasons thus. What was the cause of the woman's infidelity? Wine. Further, he proceeds, whosoever sees an unfaithful wife in her degradation[6] will take a nazirite's vow and abjure wine.[7]

[How is it that in enunciating the general rule,[8] the Mishnah] mentions first 'substitutes' and then gives examples of 'allusions'?[9] — Raba, others say Kadi,[10] said: There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah] and it should read as follows: 'All the substitutes for the nazirite vow are equivalent to nazirite vows, and all allusions to the nazirite vow are equivalent to nazirite vows. The following are allusions. If a man says.I shall be [one]." he becomes a nazirite [etc.].' Ought not then the substitutes to be enumerated first?[11] — It is customary for the Tanna to explain first what he mentions last. Thus we learn: With what materials may [the Sabbath lamp] be kindled, and with what may it not be kindled?[12] and the exposition begins: It is forbidden to kindle etc. [Again, we learn:] With what materials may [hot victuals] be covered [on the Sabbath,][13] and with what may they not be covered?[14] and the exposition begins: It is forbidden to cover etc. [Again:] What may a woman 'wear when she goes out [on the Sabbath], and what may she not wear when she goes out?[15] and the exposition begins: She must not go out etc.

But have we not learnt: With what trappings may an animal go out [on the Sabbath]. and with what may it not go out?[16] whilst the exposition begins: The camel may go out etc.; [and again:] Some both inherit and bequeath,[17] and some inherit but do not bequeath. Some bequeath and do not inherit, and some neither inherit nor bequeath,[18] whilst the exposition begins: The following both inherit and bequeath? The truth is that the Tanna adopts sometimes one method and sometimes the other, [according to circumstances]. In the first set of cases adduced, because the prohibition is a personal one,[19] this personal prohibition is expounded first. On the other hand, in the case of the animal, since the prohibition arises primarily through the animal,[20] those things which are permitted are mentioned first.

---

(1) V. Num. VI, 2-22.

(2) These 'substitutes' are mutilations of the Hebrew word nazir. Cf. Ned. 10b.

(3) v. Glos.

(4) Nashim, the third of the six orders of the Mishnah contains the laws pertaining to women. The inclusion of the nazirite regulations appears at first sight incongruous.

(5) Deut. XXIV, 1. The verse is quoted in the concluding paragraph of M. Gittin. This suggests that the order of the treatises assumed was Gittin, Nazir, Sotah, the order of the Jerusalem Talmud. In Sot. 2a, a different reason is given assuming the order of the Babylonian Talmud, viz.: — Nedarim, Nazir, Sotah. V. however Tosaf. s.v. מאי

(6) Cf. Num. v, 11-31.

(7) For this reason Nazir is followed by Sotah.

(8) I.e., all the substitutes for the nazirite vow, etc.
(9) Viz., 'I shall be one' etc. Allusions, Heb. yadoth; lit., 'handles', phrases suggesting the nazirite's vow.
(10) Aliter, others quote the statement anonymously.
(11) Cf. Ned. 2bff
(12) Shah. 20b.
(13) To retain their warmth.
(14) Ibid. 47b.
(15) Ibid. 57a.
(16) Ibid. 52b.
(17) I.e., to those from 'whom they inherit.
(18) B.B. 108a.
(19) He himself is forbidden to do the action.
(20) He may not allow the animal to wear the trappings.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 2b

With inheritance, again. the basic type of inheritance is dealt with first. Granted all this, [in the case of the nazirite vow] why should not the substitutes be enumerated first? — There is a special reason, viz., that [the rule regarding the efficacy of] the allusions is derived [from the scriptural text] by a process of inference[1] and therefore the Tanna set a special value on it. Then why does he not mention them first? — For opening the subject the Tanna prefers to mention the basic type of vow,[2] but in his exposition, he illustrates the allusions first.

IF A MAN SAYS I SHALL BE [ONE].' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. But might he not mean, 'I shall keep a fast day'?[3] — Samuel said: We must suppose that a nazirite is passing by [when he makes this declaration]. Are we to infer from this that Samuel is of the opinion that allusions, the significance of which is not manifest,[4] have not the force of a direct statement?[5] — Let me explain. [What Samuel means is that] if a nazirite is passing by, there is no reason to suspect a different intention,[6] but without question, if no nazirite is passing by, we say that he might mean, 'I shall keep a fast day.'[7] But perhaps his purpose was to free the other from his sacrifices?[8] — [We presume it to be known] that he added mentally ['a nazirite']. If so, it is surely obvious [that he becomes a nazirite]? It might be thought that we require his utterance and his intention to coincide, and so we are told [that this is not so].

I SHALL BE COMELY .. . HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. Perhaps he means, 'l shall be comely before Him in [the performance of] precepts. as has been taught: [The verse]. This is my God and I will glorify[9] Him[10] means, I will glorify Him in [the performance of] precepts; I shall build an attractive booth,[11] procure a faultless palm-branch.[11] wear elegant fringes, write a mangificent Scroll of the Law and provide it with wrappings of choicest silk? — Samuel said: [We assume that] he takes hold of his hair[12] when he says, 'I shall be comely.'

[Seeing that to become] a nazirite is in a way a sin,[13] can it be termed comely? —

---

(1) They are not mentioned explicitly, but are inferred from the redundant sequence of references to the Nazirite vow in Num,. VI, 2. V. Ned. 3a.
(2) Heb. 'Korban', 'sacrifice', the generic term for every kind of vow. The 'substitutes' are considered essential forms of the vow, the 'allusions' subsidiary forms.
(3) Lit., 'I shall be in a fast'.
(4) As would be the case if a nazirite did not pass by at the time.
(5) Kid. 5a reports Samuel as holding the opposite.
(6) [Although the allusion is not particularly manifest, in accordance with Samuel's view, in Kid. loc. cit. Cf. Asheri.]
(7) And in the absence of an allusion of any likely significance, there is no obligation at all. Cf. Asheri.

(8) I.e., defray their cost. His meaning would then be, 'I shall be in his place for the purpose of offering his sacrifices;' cf. Num,. VI, 14ff..

(9) 'Glorify' and 'comely' are from the same Hebrew root.

(10) Ex. XV, 2.

(11) For the Feast of Tabernacles. Cf. Lev. XXIII, 42 and 40.

(12) And so the reference is to the naziriteship, when his hair would grow long.

(13) Because he denies himself that which the Torah has permitted.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 3a

Yes. For even R. Eliezer ha-Kappar who says that a nazirite is accounted a sinner, means only the nazirite who has contracted ritual impurity; for, since he must nullify [his previous abstinence][1] in accordance with the rule laid down by the Merciful One, But the former days shall be void, because his consecration was defiled,[2] there is a danger that he may break his nazirite vow.[3] But a nazirite who remains ritually clean is not termed a sinner.[4]

I INTEND TO BE LIKE THIS: Granted that he takes hold of his hair, he does not say 'I intend to be through this,'[5] [but only 'like this']? — Samuel said: We suppose that a nazirite is passing by at the time.

I INTEND TO CURL[6] [MY HAIR]. How do we know that this [word MESALSEL] refers to the curling of the hair? — From a remark made by a maidservant[7] of Rabbi's household, who said to a certain man: How much longer are you going to curl [mesalsel] your hair? But perhaps [it refers to] the Torah[8] in accordance with the verse, Extol her [salseleha] and she will exalt thee?[9] — Samuel said: Here, too, we suppose that he takes hold of his hair.

I MEAN TO TEND[10] [MY HAIR]. How do we know that this [word MEKALKEL] refers to the tending of his hair? — From what we learnt: 'With regard to orpiment.[11] R. Judah said that there must be sufficient to depilate the kilkul,'[12] and Rab commented: [This means the hair of] one of the temples.[13] But might it not mean tending the poor. in accordance with the verse, And Joseph sustained [wa-yekalkel] his father and his brothers?[14] — Samuel said: Here too. we assume that he takes hold of his hair.

I UNDERTAKE TO DEVELOP[15] TRESSES,'[16] HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. How do we know that this [word] shilluah signifies increase? — From the verse, Thy shoots [shelohayik] are a park of pomegranates.[17] But perhaps it has the significance of 'removal'[18] in accordance with the verse, And sendeth [we-sholeah] waters upon the fields?[19] — The occurrence of the word pera' [tresses] in connection with the nazirite gives the tanna the clue. It says here, He shall be holy. he shall let the locks [pera'] grow long.[20] and it says elsewhere regarding an ordinary priest,[21] Nor' suffer their locks [pera'] to grow long [yeshallehu].[22] Alternatively, we can say that the sholeah used of water,[23] also signifies increase,[24] for when produce is watered it shoots up.

[IF HE SAYS] 'I TAKE UPON MYSELF [AN OBLIGATION INVOLVING] BIRDS,' R. MEIR SAYS HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. What is R. Meir's reason? — Resh Lakish said: [In making this vow] he has in mind the birds that are coupled with hair in the scriptural verse, Till his hair was grown long like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.[25] R. Meir is of the opinion that a man will refer to one thing when he means something else occurring in the same context,[26]

---

(1) The period which elapsed before he became unclean.

(2) Num. VI, 22.

(3) He may not be able to control his desire for wine for the longer period.

(4) Cf. infra 29a, where the opposite is asserted.

(5) The text is uncertain. The meaning would apparently be: I intend to discipline myself through my hair, reading בזה instead of כזה in cur. edd.
(6) Heb. mesalsel.
(7) This maidservant always spoke Hebrew, v. Meg. 28a.
(8) I.e., he vows to engage in the study of Torah.
(9) Prov. IV, 8.
(10) Heb. mekalkel.
(11) Heb. sid, usually lime, here orpiment, used as a depilatory.
(12) The transference of this amount from a private to a public domain on the Sabbath constitutes an indictable offence.
(13) Shah. 80b.
(14) Gen. XLVII, 12.
(15) Heb. leshaleah.
(16) Heb. pera'.
(17) Cant. IV, 13.
(18) I.e., he vows to remove his hair.
(19) Job V, 10. I.e. transports the waters from field to field (cf. the context).
(20) Num. VI, 5.
(21) I.e., not the High Priest, who is subject to stricter regulations. V. Sanh. 22b.
(22) Ezek. XLIV, 20. In Sanh. 22b this same comparison is made to show that pera' means a growth of thirty days' duration (the normal duration of a nazirite vow). Thus whether shilluah means 'grow' or remove', the nazirite vow is implicit in the word pera'.
(23) In the verse of Job.
(24) [Cur. edd. add in brackets, 'as R. Joseph translated,' referring to the Targum on the Prophets ascribed to R. Joseph. V. B.K. (Sonc. ed.) p. 9, n. 9. The reading that follows is, however, not found in our Targum.]
(25) Dan. IV, 30. It is assumed that he takes hold of his hair, or a nazirite is passing by (Rashi). Cf. below.
(26) Lit., 'he is seized by what is close to it.' E.g., here, he says 'birds' when he means 'hair'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 3b

whilst the Rabbis are of the opinion that a man will not refer to one thing when he means another. R. Johanan said: Both [R. Meir and the Rabbis] are agreed that a man will not refer to one thing etc.,[1] and R. Meir's reason is that we take account of the possibility that what he had undertaken was to bring the birds of a ritually unclean nazirite.[2]

But if we are to take [possible meanings] into account, why should we not say that he was undertaking [to bring] a free will offering of birds? — in that event, he would have said, 'I undertake to bring a nest.'[3]

But perhaps he meant: I undertake [to bring] the birds of a leper?[4] — We must suppose that a nazirite passes by at the time. But perhaps it was a ritually unclean nazirite and he desired to free him from his [obligatory] sacrifices? — We must suppose that a ritually clean nazirite passes by at the time.[5]

What [practical] difference is there between them?[6] — There would be a difference [for example] if he should say: I take upon myself [an obligation involving] the birds mentioned in the same context as hair. According to R. Johanan, notwithstanding that he says this, he becomes a nazirite if one is passing at the time, but not otherwise;[7] whereas according to R. Simeon b. Lakish, even though no nazirite passes by at the time [he becomes a nazirite].[8] But is there any authority who disputes that a man may refer to one thing and mean another occurring in the same context? Has it not been taught: If a man says, '[By] my right hand,' it is accounted an oath.[9] Now, surely the reason for this is the verse, When he lifted up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and swore by Him who liveth for ever?[10] — Not so. It is because the expression '[By my] right hand,' is itself an oath, as it has been taught: How do we know that if a man says. '[By] my right hand,' it is accounted an oath? From the verse, The Lord hath sworn by his right hand.[11] And how do we know that if a man says. 'By my left hand,' it is accounted an oath? Because the verse continues, And by the arm of his strength.[11]

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE [TO ABSTAIN] FROM PRESSED GRAPES, OR FROM GRAPE STONES, OR FROM POLLING, OR FROM [CONTRACTING] RITUAL DEFILEMENT, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE AND ALL THE REGULATIONS OF NAZIRITESHIP APPLY TO HIM.

GEMARA. The Mishnah is not in agreement with R. Simeon, for it has been taught: R. Simeon says that he does not incur the liabilities [of a nazirite] unless he vows to abstain from everything [that is forbidden to a nazirite], whilst the Rabbis say that even though he vows to abstain from one thing only, he becomes a nazirite.

What is R. Simeon's reason?-Scripture says. [He shall eat] nothing that is made of the grape-vine, from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone.[12] And what is the Rabbis' reason? — The verse reads, He shall abstain[13] from wine and strong drink.[14] What does R. Simeon make of the statement, 'He shall abstain from wine and strong drink'? — He requires it to prohibit wine the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional. What is this [wine the drinking of which is obligatory]? The wine of Kiddush[15] and Habdalah,[15] [is it not]?

---

(1) And therefore R. Meir's reason is not the one given by Resh Lakish.

(2) V. Num. VI, 10. [I.e., he undertook to bring such birds should he afterwards become unclean during his proposed naziriteship; hence he becomes a nazirite (Rashi).]

(3) As this was the usual manner in which free-will offerings of birds were made.

(4) Cf. Lev. XIV, 4. [That is he undertook to bring birds for a leper freeing him from his obligatory sacrifices. Asheri.] This question creates a difficulty both for R. Johanan and Resh Lakish (Rashi).

(5) And as such a one has not to bring the offering of birds, he must have referred to himself.

(6) Between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish.

(7) As he may simply be undertaking to bring an offering of birds.

(8) [That is, according to R. Meir; v. Rashi and Tosaf. This difference will, however, apply also on the view of the Rabbis, for where he explicitly states....'the birds mentioned in the same context as hair,' the Rabbis would also agree according to Resh Lakish that he becomes a nazirite; cf. Rashi 2b (top).]

(9) Tosaf. Ned. I, e.g., if he says, 'My right hand that I shall eat this loaf.'

(10) Dan. XII, 7; and when he refers to his right hand he means the oath in the same context.

(11) Isa. LXII. 8. ['Arm of his strength' refers to the left hand; ,'. Ber. 6a.]

(12) The emphasis is laid on the word 'nothing', so that the vow must expressly include everything. Num. VI, 4.

(13) Lit., 'vow to abstain'.

(14) Ibid. VI, 3. Thus it is sufficient if his vow refers specifically to wine only. This verse is made here to refer to the actual taking of the nazirite vow; though from the context it might he thought to he part of the enumeration of objects forbidden the nazirite.

(15) V. Glos.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 4a

But surely here he is bound by the oath taken on Mount Sinai?[1] — We must therefore suppose the following dictum of Raba to be indicated, [Viz.:] — [If a man says,] 'I swear to drink [wine]' and later says, 'I wish to be a nazirite,' the nazirite vow operates despite the oath.[2]

And do not the Rabbis also require [this verse] to prohibit wine, the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional? — If this were its [sole] purpose, only wine need have been mentioned in the verse! [What is the purport of the addition] of 'strong drink'! It is to enable us to infer both things.[3] And R. Simeon?[4] — He [will hold] that the reason for the addition of strong drink is to guide us in the interpretation of the same expression when used in connection with the Temple service, in the verse, Drink no wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee.[5] Just as for the nazirite, only wine is forbidden but not other beverages, so in connection with the Temple service, only wine is forbidden [to the priests], but not other intoxicating beverages. This conflicts with the opinion of R. Judah, for it has been taught: R.Judah said that [a priest] who eats preserved figs from Keilah,[6] or drinks honey or milk, and then enters the Temple, is guilty.[7] Alternatively,[8] R. Simeon rejects the Principle that a prohibition can come into operation when a prohibition [on a different count] is already present,[9] as has been taught: R. Simeon says that a man who eats carrion[10] on the Day of Atonement is not liable [to a penalty for breach of observance of the day].[11]

What do the Rabbis make of the verse, ['He shall eat] nothing that is made of the grapevine'?[12] The Rabbis will tell you that this teaches that [the various kinds of food] forbidden to a nazirite can combine together.[13] R. Simeon. on the other hand, does not require a rule about combination, for it has been taught: R. Simeon says that a mite [of forbidden food] is sufficient [to entail liability] to stripes; a quantity equivalent to an olive is required only where a sacrifice is [the appropriate penalty].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] 'I VOW TO BE LIKE SAMSON,[14] THE SON OF MANOAH, WHO WAS THE HUSBAND OF DELILAH, OR 'WHO PLUCKED UP THE GATES OF GAZAH,'[15] OR 'WHOSE EYES THE PHILISTINES PUT OUT,'[16] HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON. GEMARA. Why must [the Mishnah] specify all these expressions? — All are necessary. For if he were to say. 'I wish to be like Samson,' I might think that some other Samson [was intended], and so we are told [that he must add] 'like the son of Manoah.' Again, if he were to add [only] 'the son of Manoah,' I might think that there is someone else so named, and so we are told [that he must add], 'like the husband of Delilah,' or 'like him whose eyes the Philistines put out.'[17]

MISHNAH. WHAT DIFFERENCE IS THERE BETWEEN A NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON AND A LIFE-NAZIRITE?[18] A LIFE-NAZIRITE. WHENEVER HIS HAIR BECOMES BURDENSOME, MAY THIN IT WITH A RAZOR AND THEN OFFER THREE ANIMAL SACRIFICES,[19] WHILST SHOULD HE BE RITUALLY DEFILED, HE MUST OFFER THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT.[20] THE NAZIRITE LIKE SAMSON IS NOT PERMITTED TO THIN HIS HAIR SHOULD IT BECOME BURDENSOME, AND IF [RITUALLY] DEFILED, DOES NOT OFFER THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT.

GEMARA. How does the life-nazirite come in here?[21] — There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah]. and it should read as follows: If a man says, 'I intend to be a life-nazirite,' he becomes a life-nazirite. What difference is there between a nazirite like Samson and a life-nazirite? A life-nazirite whenever his hair becomes burdensome may thin it with a razor and then offer three animal sacrifices, whilst should he be ritually defiled, he must offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement. The nazirite like Samson is not permitted to thin his hair with a razor should it become burdensome,

---

(1) I.e., surely his vow cannot annul obligations in existence since the giving of the law on Mount Sinai, so Rashi. Tosaf. (Rabbenu Tam) replaces the last two sentences by the following: 'Can it be that the wine of Kiddush and Habdalah is indicated? But is he then bound by an oath taken on Mount Sinai?' According to this view there is no scriptural obligation to drink wine at Kiddush and Habdalah. This is the view usually accepted.

(2) I.e., although this is wine the drinking of which is incumbent on him.

(3) Viz.: (i) wine the drinking of which is an obligation is forbidden the nazirite. (ii) though he vows to abstain from one thing only he becomes a nazirite.

(4) How will he meet the argument of the Rabbis?
(5) The verse was addressed to Aaron as High priest. Lev. x, 9.
(6) A town in the lowlands of Judea, cf. Josh. XV, 44' v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 481, n. 6.
(7) Of transgressing the prohibition against strong drink in Lev. X, 9.
(8) An alternative reason for R. Simeon's opinion that he does not become a nazirite unless he vows to abstain from everything, is being given (Rashi).
(9) In other words, an act already prohibited cannot he prohibited on another count. Hence, once his vow to abstain from wine begins to operate, he can no longer become a full nazirite (Rashi). This interpretation considers the statement, 'I declare myself a nazirite (to abstain) from pressed grapes' to consist of two parts in the following order: (i) I vow to abstain from pressed grapes; (ii) I declare myself a nazirite. For other interpretations, v. Tosaf. and Asheri.
(10) Heb. nebelah, v. Glos.
(11) Carrion being already in itself prohibited.
(12) V. supra p. 7, n. 4.
(13) I.e., supposing he eats less of each kind than the minimum size of an olive, yet the total quantity consumed is the size of an olive, he is liable to stripes.
(14) Samson was a nazirite to a limited extent only. V. next Mishnah.
(15) V. Judg. XVI, 3.
(16) V. Judg. XVI, 21.
(17) Thus the first three expressions are de rigueur, but for the third equivalents may he used.
(18) One who declares himself a nazirite for life. Samson was also a nazirite for life.
(19) A nazirite on terminating his abstinence was required to offer three animal sacrifices. V. Num. VI, 13ff
(20) Defilement of a nazirite. Num. VI, 9.
(21) Lit., 'who mentioned its name'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 4b

and if ritually defiled does not offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement. [You say that the nazirite like Samson] does not have to offer the sacrifice [prescribed] for defilement,[1] enabling me to infer that he is subject to the nazirite obligation [which forbids him to defile himself]. Who then is [the author of] our Mishnah, [seeing that] it can be neither R. Judah nor R. Simeon? For it has been taught: R. Judah said that a nazirite like Samson is permitted to defile himself [deliberately, by contact] with the dead, for Samson himself did so; R. Simeon says that if a man declares. '[I intend to be] a nazirite like Samson,' his statement is of no effect, since we are not aware that Samson personally ever pronounced a nazirite vow.[2] [We ask then:] Who [is the author of our Mishnah]? It cannot be R. Judah, for he says that [a nazirite like Samson] may even [defile himself] intentionally. whereas our Mishnah [merely] states [that no sacrifice need be offered] if he has become defiled [accidentally]; nor can it be R. Simeon since he says that the vow does not become operative at all! — Actually it is R. Judah [and the nazirite like Samson is permitted to defile himself] but because in referring to the life-nazirite,[3] the Mishnah uses the expression 'SHOULD HE BE [RITUALLY] DEFILED.' the same expression is used in referring to the nazirite like Samson.[4]

May we say that the difference [of R. Judah and R. Simeon] is essentially the same as that of the following Tannaim? For it has been taught: [If a man says.] 'This [food] shall be [as forbidden] for me as a firstling,'[5] R. Jacob says he may not eat it, but R. Jose says he may.[6] May we not say then that R. Judah agrees with R. Jacob in holding that the object [with which the comparison is made,][7] need not itself be one forbidden as the result of a vow, whilst R. Simeon agrees with R. Jose in holding that the object [with which comparison is made] must be one forbidden as the result of a vow? — This is not so. Both [R. Judah and R. Simeon] are agreed that it is necessary for the object [with which comparison Is made] to be one forbidden as the result of a vow, but the case of the firstling is different, since in the verse, [When a man voweth a vow][8] unto the Lord,[9] [the superfluous words 'unto the Lord'] include the firstling[10] [as a legitimate object of comparison].

What does R. Jose reply [to this argument]? — He will say that the expression ‘unto the Lord’ serves to include the sin-offering and the guilt-offering[11] [but not the firstling]. [We may ask him:] On what ground, then, are the sin-offering and the guilt-offering included rather than the firstling? — [He would reply:] The sin-offering and the guilt-offering are included because they have to be expressly dedicated,[12] but the firstling is excluded since it need not be expressly dedicated. And R. Jacob? — He can rejoin: Firstlings too, are expressly dedicated, for it has been taught: [The members] of our Teacher's household[13] used to say: How do we know that when a firstling is born in a man's flock, it is his duty to dedicate it expressly [for the altar]? Because it says, The males shalt thou dedicate.[14] And R. Jose? — He can reply: Granted that it is a religious duty to dedicate it [expressly], yet if he fails to do so, is it not nevertheless sacred?[15]

[It may be said:] In the case of the nazirite, too, is there not a phrase ‘Into the Lord’?[16] — This is required for the purpose taught [in the following passage]: Simon the Just[17] said: In the whole of my life, I ate of the guilt-offering of a defiled nazirite [only once].[18] This man who came to me from the South country, had beauteous eyes and handsome features with his locks heaped into curls. I asked him: ‘Why, my son, didst thou resolve to destroy such wonderful hair?’ He answered: ‘In my native town. I was my father's shepherd, and, on going down to draw water from the well, I used to gaze at my reflection [in its waters]. Then my evil inclination assailed me, seeking to compass my ruin,[19] and so I said to it, "Base wretch! Why dost thou plume thyself on a world that is not thine own, for thy latter end is with worms and maggots. I swear[20] I shall shear these locks to the glory of Heaven!"’ Then I rose, and kissed him upon his head. and said to him: ‘Like unto thee, may there be many nazirites in Israel. Of such as thou art, does the verse say, When a man shall clearly utter a vow, the vow of a nazirite to consecrate himself unto the Lord.’[21]

But was not Samson a nazirite [in the ordinary sense]?[22] Surely the verse states, For the child shall be a nazirite into God from the womb![23] — It was the angel who said this.

How do we know that [Samson] did defile himself [by contact] with the dead? Shall I say, because it is written, With the jawbone of an ass have I smitten a thousand men,[24] but it is possible that he thrust it at them without touching them? But [we know it] again from the following. And smote thirty men of then and took their spoil.[25] But it is possible that he stripped them first and slew them afterwards? — It says clearly [first]. And he smote, [and then,] And took. But it is still possible that he [merely] wounded them mortally[26] [before stripping them]! — [We must say], therefore, that it was known by tradition [that he did come into contact with them]. Where does it state [in the Scriptures] that a life-nazirite [may thin his hair]? — It has been taught: Rabbi said that Absalom was a life-nazirite, for it says, And it came to pass at the end of forty years that Absalom said to the king: [pray thee, let me go and pay my vow which I have vowed unto the Lord in Hebron.[27] He used to cut his hair every twelve months, for it says. [And when he polled his head,] now it was at every year's [yamim] end [that he polled it],[28]

---

(1) I.e., if he becomes unclean.

(2) Tosef. Nazir I, 3.

(3) Who is forbidden to defile himself.

(4) And the if is not to he pressed.

(5) The firstlings of clean domestic animals were the perquisite of the priests and could be eaten by them only. V. Num. XVIII, 15.

(6) V. Ned. 13a.

(7) E.g.. the firstling or Samson. It is impossible to vow not to eat a firstling as it is holy from birth.

(8) From this phrase we infer that the object used for comparison must be itself prohibited as the result of a vow. V. Ned. 13a.

(9) Num. XXX, 3.

(10) Since it must he dedicted unto the Lord by the owner.

(11) Being obligatory, they might he thought not to count as things dedicated by a vow.
(12) Lit., 'they are seized by a vow'. Although the obligation to offer a sin-offering does not result through a vow, yet the animal to be used must he dedicated by the owner, 'This is my sin-offering.'
(13) Probably R. Gamaliel III son of R. Judah ha-Nasi I (called simply Our Teacher) cf. Halikoth 'Olam I, 3.
(14) Deut. XV, 19.
(15) And so the firstling must he excluded as an object of comparison.
(16) Num. VI, 2. And so should it not he possible to vow to become a nazirite like Samson?
(17) High Priest circa 300 B.C.E., v. however Aboth (Sonc. ed.) p. 2, n. 1.
(18) He feared that nazirites, after defilement would regret their vows because of the inevitable prolongation. As the sacrifice would then retrospectively prove to have been unnecessary, he refused to eat of it.
(19) Lit., 'drive me from the world'.
(20) Lit., 'by the (Temple) service', a common form of oath at this period.
(21) Num. VI, 2. [The story has a parallel in the familiar Narcissus story, Ovid, Metamorphoses, III, 402ff; but its moral in endowing the youth with the power of self-mastery is evidently superior.]
(22) I.e., was not his naziriteship the result of a vow?
(23) Judg. XIII, 5.
(24) Judg. XV, 16.
(25) Judg. XIV, 19.
(26) [Defilement is communicated only after the last breath of life is gone.]
(27) The verse following states that Absalom vowed to serve the Lord. This, together with the known length of his hair, leads to the conclusion that he was a life-nazirite. II Sam. XV, 7.
(28) II Sam. XIV, 26; yamim usually means 'days'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 5a

and the meaning of the word 'yamim' here is decided by its meaning when used in connection with houses in walled cities;[1] just as there it means twelve months,[2] so here it means twelve months. R. Nehorai said: [Absalom] used to poll every thirty days. R. Jose said: He used to poll on the eve of each Sabbath,for princes usually poll on the eve of each Sabbath.

[We have said that] Rabbi's reason [for interpreting 'yamim' as a year] is because of its occurrence in connection with houses in walled cities. But has not Rabbi himself said that 'yamim' [in that connection] means not less than two days?[3] — The only reason that he uses the comparison at all[4] is because of the reference to the heaviness [of Absalom's hair],[5] and two days' growth is not heavy.[6]

Why should it not be two years, in accordance with the verse, And it came to pass at the end of two full years?[7] From a text containing 'yamim' without mention of years' conclusions may be drawn concerning another text containing 'yamim' without mention of years';[8] but no conclusion can be drawn here from this verse where there is mention of 'years'.

Why should it not be thirty days, for there is a verse, but a whole month?[9] — From a text mentioning 'yamim' without 'months', conclusions may be drawn concerning another text mentioning 'yamim' without 'months',[10] but this verse affords no indication since 'months' are mentioned therewith.

Why should not the inference be made from mi-yamim yamimah ['from days to days']?[11] — Conclusions may be drawn concerning a text containing 'yamim'. from another' [text] containing 'yamim', but not from one containing 'yamimah'.

But what is the difference [between 'yamim' and 'yamimah']? Have not the school of R. Ishmael taught that in the verses, And the priest shall come again,[12] Then the priest shall come in,[12] 'coming again' and 'coming in' mean one and the same thing?[13] — Inference [from nonidentical expressions] is permissible where there is no identical expression [on which to base the inference], but where an identical expression exists, the inference must be drawn from the identical expression.[14]

Another reply [to the suggestion that inference be made from 'yamimah']: How do we know [with certainty] that [they went] once every three months? May not the four times per annum have occurred alternately at intervals of four months and of two months?[15]

'R. Nehorai said: [Absalom] used to poll every thirty days.' What is his reason? — [Ordinary] priests [poll every thirty days][16] because [their hair] becomes burdensome, and so here it would become burdensome [after thirty days].[17]

'R. Jose said: He polled on the eve of each Sabbath, [etc.]' What difference then was there between him and his brothers?[18] — When a festival occurred in mid-week, his brothers polled, but he did not do so. Alternatively, his brothers [if they wished] could poll on Friday morning, but he could not do so until the late afternoon. What were the forty years referred to [by Absalom]?[19] — R. Nehorai, citing R. Joshua, said that it means 'forty years after [the Israelites] had demanded a king.'[20] It has been taught: The year in which they demanded a king, was the tenth year [of the principate of] Samuel the Ramathean.[21]

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITE VOW OF UNSPECIFIED DURATION [REMAINS IN FORCE] THIRTY DAYS.

GEMARA. Whence is this rule derived?-R. Mattena said: The text reads He shall be [yihyeh] holy,[22] and the numerical value[23] of the word yihyeh is thirty.[24] Bar Pada said: [The duration of the vow] corresponds to the number of times that parts of the root nazar are found in the Torah,[25] viz., thirty less one.[26] Why does not R. Mattena derive [the number of days] from the [occurrences of the various] parts of nazar? — He will tell you that [some of] these are required for teaching special lessons. [Thus the verse.] He shall abstain [yazzir] from wine and strong drink,[27] is required to prohibit wine the drinking of which is a ritual obligation as well as wine the drinking of which is optional;[28] [whilst the verse,] Shall clearly utter a vow, the vow of a nazirite to consecrate himself,[29] teaches that one nazirite vow can be superimposed on another.[30]

---

(1) V. Lev. XXV, 29.

(2) Since the word 'year' is used explicitly in the same connection.

(3) V. 'Ar. 31a, where he infers from this text that redemption cannot take place before the second day, though it may take place any time within the year.

(4) The Gezerah shawah (v. GIos.).

(5) V. II Sam. XIV, 26.

(6) Hence the comparison must he with yamim in the sense of year, which it also hears in this passage; v. n. 4.

(7) Lit., 'two years of yamim', Gen. XLI, 1.

(8) E.g., from Lev. XXV, 29 to II Sam. XIV, 26.

(9) Lit., 'a month of yamim', Num. XI, 20.

(10) V. supra p. 14, n. 10.

(11) The reference is to Jephthah's daughter, visited by the Israelitish maidens 'four days in the year', i.e., apparently, at equal intervals of three months. Judg. XI, 40.

(12) Lev. XIV, 39-44. referring to an infected house.

(13) For purposes of inference, v. Hot. (Sonc. ed.). p. 57. n. II. How much more so then with words so similar as 'yamim' and 'yamimah'!

(14) I.e., since there is another context where the word 'yamim' occurs, we learn from that and not from 'yamimah'.

(15) It is impossible therefore to give an exact value to 'yamimah'.

(16) V. Ta'an. 17a.

(17) And Absalom polled when his hair became heavy. II Sam. XIV, 26.

(18) Since all princes poll weekly.
(19) In II Sam. XV, 7.
(20) V.I Sam. VIII, 5'
(21) V. Seder 'Olam XIV.
(22) Num, VI, 5.
(23) Gematria, v.Sanh. (Sonc.ed.),p. 121, n. 4.
(24) יהוה Y = 10; H= 5; Y=10; H= 5. In Hebrew, as in Greek, the letters have numerical values.
(25) I.e., in the section on the nazirite vow. Num. VI, 1ff. Parts of the root nadar are included in the computation, but the nazar of verse 7 is omitted since it does not mean 'separation', but 'crown'.
(26) V. infra.
(27) Num. VI, 3.
(28) V. supra p. 8.
(29) Ibid. VI, 2.
(30) If he repeats the vow, he becomes a nazirite twice.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 5b

To which Bar Pada can reply: Is there not even one [recurrence of a part of nazar] that is not needed for a special lesson? Since this one may be used for computation. ail may be used for computation.[1] We have learnt: A NAZIRITE VOW OF UNSPECIFIED DURATION [REMAINS IN FORCE] THIRTY DAYS. Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but how can it be reconciled with Bar Pada's view?[2] — Bar Pada will tell you that because [the period of the vow closes with] the thirtieth day, on which the nazirite polls and brings his sacrifices, [the Mishnah] says thirty [days].

We have learnt: If a man says, 'I declare myself a nazirite,' he polls on the thirty-first day.[3] Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but how is it to be reconciled with Bar Pada's view? — Bar Pada will say: Consider the clause which follows, [viz.:] Should he poll on the thirtieth day, his obligation is fulfilled. We see, then, that the second clause [of this Mishnah] lends support to his view, whilst the original clause [must be read] as though it contained the word [I declare myself a nazirite for thirty] 'whole' [days].[4] Does not this second clause need to be reconciled with R. Mattena's view?[5] — He considers part of a day equivalent to a whole day.[6]

But have we not learnt: '[Should someone say,] "I intend to be a nazirite for thirty days," and poll on the thirtieth day, his obligation is not fulfilled'?[7] — [We presume that] he said, 'whole days'.

We have learnt: If a man undertakes two naziriteships, he polls for the first one on the thirty-first day, and for the second on the sixty-first day.[7] This fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena

---

(1) As well as for teaching special lessons.
(2) According to which the period should be 29 days.
(3) V. infra 162.
(4) And therefore he polls on the 31st day.
(5) According to which the polling should he on the thirty-first day.
(6) Thus though he polls on the thirtieth day, he has kept thirty days of naziriteship.
(7) Infra p. 53.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 6a

but how is it to be reconciled with Bar Pada's view? — Bar Pada will say: Consider the clause which follows, [viz.:] If, however, he should poll for the first on the thirtieth day, he can poll for the second on the sixtieth day. Thus the second clause lends support to his view, whilst the original clause [must be read] as though it contained the words ‘whole days’.

Is not R. Mattena in conflict with this second clause?[1] — R. Mattena can reply: This must be interpreted in the light of the next clause, which says that the thirtieth day counts as belonging to both periods.[2] This is taken to signify then that part of a day is equivalent to a whole day. But has he [the Tanna] not stated this once already?[3] — It might be thought that this is only true for one naziriteship but not for two, and so we are told [that it is also true for two].[4]

We have learnt: Should he poll on the day prior to the sixtieth, he has fulfillied his obligation. since the thirtieth day is included in the [required] number.[5] Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but for Bar Pada what necessity is there [for this statement], since he says that [the normal duration] is thirty days less one? — He will say: This is the very passage on which I rely for my opinion.

We have learnt: If a person says, ‘I intend to be a nazirite’ and contracts ritual defilement on the thirtieth day, the whole period is rendered void.[5] Now, this fits in well enough with the view of R. Mattena, but does it not conflict with that of Bar Pada? —

---

(1) Cf. 11. 4.

(2) As end of the first and beginning of the second naziriteship.

(3) As an inference from another clause of the same Mishnah (v. supra, p. 17); what necessity is there then for this latter clause?

(4) That one part of the day belongs to one and the other to the second period.

(5) Infra p. 53.

Bar Pada will say: Consider the subsequent clause [which reads]: R. Eliezer says: Only the [next] seven days are void.[1] Now if you assume that thirty days are necessary [as the minimum period of nazirite separation], should not all be void?[2] [R. Mattena, however, will reply:] R. Eliezer is of the opinion that part of a day is equivalent to the whole.[3]

We have learnt: [If a man says] ‘I intend to be a nazirite for one hundred days,’ and contracts ritual defilement on the hundredth day, the whole period is rendered void. R. Eliezer said that only thirty days are rendered void.[4] Now, if we assume[5] that R. Eliezer considers part of a day to be equivalent to a whole day, surely only seven days should be annulled?[1] Again [on the other hand] if we assume[6] that he does not regard part of the day as equivalent to a whole day, should not the whole period be annulled?[7] — In point of fact, we do not regard part of a day as equivalent to a whole day. In that case, why is not the whole period annulled? — Said Resh Lakish: R. Eliezer's reason is as follows: Scripture says, And this is the law of the nazirite, [on the day] when the days of his consecration are fulfilled.[8] Thus the Torah expressly declares that if he contracts ritual defilement on the day of fulfilment, the law for a nazirite vow [of unspecified duration] is to be applied to him.[9] May we say [that the difference between R. Mattena and Bar Pada] is the same as that between the following Tannaim? [For it was taught:] From the verse, Until the days be fulfilled,[10] I can only infer that the vow must continue in force at least two days,[11] and so the text adds, He shall be holy; he shall let the locks grow long,[12] and hair does not ‘grow long’ in less than thirty days. This is the view of R. Josiah. R. Jonathan, however, said that this [reasoning] is unnecessary, for we have the text, Until the days be fulfilled.[12] What days then are those which have to be ‘fulfilled’? You must say the thirty days [of the lunar month].[13] May we assume that R. Mattena agrees with R. Josiah, and Bar Pada with R. Jonathan? — R. Mattena can maintain that both [authorities] agree that thirty days is the necessary period and the point at issue between them is whether the word ‘until’ [preceding a number] signifies the inclusion or exclusion [of the last unit of that number].[14] R. Josiah is of the opinion that in the term 'until' [the last unit] is not included,[15] whereas R. Jonathan is of the opinion that by the use of 'until', [the last unit] is included.[16] The Master stated: What days then are those which have to be 'fulfilled'? You must say, The thirty days [of a lunar month]. But could it not be a week[17] — [In the case of] a week, what deficiency is there to make up?

---

(1) Since he is unable to offer his nazirite sacrifices until he has been sprinkled with the ashes of the red heifer on the third and seventh days. V. Num. XIX, 1ff.

(2) Because the defilement takes place while the vow is still in force.

(3) Hence when the defilement takes place, the vow is no longer in force.

(4) Infra P. 53.

(5) As does R. Mattena.

(6) As does Bar Pada.

(7) For then the naziriteship is not complete until the close of the hundredth day and defilement during the naziriteship nullifies the whole preceding period.

(8) Num. VI, 13.

(9) I.e., he is to be a nazirite again for 30 days. [i.e., not more and not less, irrespective of the question whether or not part of the day is equivalent to a whole day (Tosaf.).]

(10) Ibid. 5.

(11) 'Two' being the minimum to which the plural 'days' could he applied.

(12) Num. VI, 5.

(13) An ordinary lunar month contains 29 days, a 'full' month 30 days.

(14) I.e., whether e.g. 'until 30' means 30 or 29.

(15) And the number thirty is derived by means of the rest of the verse, 'He shall let the locks grow long'.

(16) And the number thirty is obtained from 'Until the days be fulfilled'.

(17) Lit., 'a Sabbath', i.e., six working days completed by the Sabbath to make a week.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 7a

Could it then not be a year?[1] — Are these reckoned in days? Surely the Rabbis of Caesarea[2] have said: How do we know that a year is not reckoned in days? Because Scripture says, months of the year:[3] [this signifies that] months are counted towards years but not days.

MISHNAH. IF HE SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE LONG [PERIOD,' OR] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE SHORT [PERIOD],' THEN EVEN [IF HE ADDS, 'FOR AS LONG AS IT TAKES TO GO] FROM HERE TO THE END OF THE EARTH,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS.

GEMARA. Why is this so? Has he not said, 'from here to the end of the earth'?[4] — His meaning is: For me this business is as lengthy as if it would last from here to the end of the earth. We have learnt: [If a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite as from here to such and such a place,' we estimate the number of days' journey from here to the place mentioned, and if this is less than thirty days, he becomes a nazirite for thirty days; otherwise he becomes a nazirite for that number of days.[5] Now why should you not say in this case also that [his meaning is]: For me, this business seems as if it would last from here to the place mentioned?[6] — Raba replied: We assume that [when he made the declaration] he was setting out on the journey.[7] Then why should he not [observe a naziriteship of thirty days] for each parasang?[8] R. Papa said: We speak of a place where they do not reckon [distances] in parasangs. Then let him [observe a naziriteship] for every stage [on the road]; for have we not learnt that [a man who says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite as the dust of the earth,' or 'as the hair of my head,' or 'as the sands of the sea,' becomes a life-nazirite, polling every thirty days?[9] — This [principle][10] does not apply to [a nazirite vow in which] a definite term is mentioned,[11] and this has indeed been taught [explicitly]: [A man, who says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite all the days of my life,' or 'I intend to be a life-nazirite,' becomes a life-nazirite,[12] but even [if he says] 'a hundred years,' or 'a thousand years,' he does not become a life-nazirite,[13] but a nazirite for life.[14]

Rabbah said: Hairs are different [from parasangs or stages], since each is separate from the others.[15]

In the case of days, do we not find the verse, And there was evening and there was morning, one day?[16] — There it is not because [days] are discrete entities [that the verse says one day] but to inform us that a day with the night [preceding it] together count as a day,[17] though they are really not discrete entities.

Raba said: Why raise all these difficulties? The case [in which he says 'FROM HERE TO THE END OF THE EARTH'] is different, because he has already said: I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE [SINGLE PERIOD].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS ONE DAY,' OR 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS AN HOUR,' OR 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, ONCE AND A HALF,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR TWO [PERIODS].

GEMARA. What need is there [for the Mishnah] to specify all these cases?[18] — They are all necessary. For had it mentioned only, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS ONE DAY,' [it might have been thought] that here only do we apply the rule that 'there is no naziriteship for a single day,' and so he must reckon two [periods], whereas [when he says] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, PLUS AN HOUR,' he is to reckon thirty one days. So this case is mentioned explicitly

---

(1) And the ordinary year may be considered 'deficient' by the side of a leap year.

(2) [On the Rabbis of Caesarea v. Lieberman, S. The Talmud of Caesarea, pp. 9ff.]

(3) Ex, XII, 2.

(4) And he should be a nazirite for life.

(5) Infra p. 23.

(6) And his naziriteship should in any case not extend beyond thirty days.

(7) The presumption is, then, that the journey and the length of naziriteship are connected.

(8) A Persian mile.

(9) Infra p. 23.

(10) That he has to observe a succession of periods of naziriteship. polling at the end of each period.

(11) E.g., from here to such and such a place.

(12) And polls every thirty days.

(13) Having mentioned a definite term.

(14) I.e., he keeps one long naziriteship during which he can never poll. Tosef. Naz. I, 3.

(15) But distance is continuous. Hence if he mentions hairs, he is understood to mean a succession of short naziriteships, but if he mentions a distance, one long one.

(16) And so distance in terms of days is also discrete, yet the Mishnah quoted above confines the naziriteship to a single period, and not to a succession equal in number to the number of days.

(17) For the reckoning of Sabbaths and Festivals.

(18) One would be enough, and we could infer the others.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 7b

Again.if it had simply added, '[I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE] PLUS AN HOUR,' [it might have been thought that he must count two periods] because he was [clearly] not speaking with precision,[1] whereas the expression 'ONCE AND A HALF' is precise, and it might therefore have been thought that he should not reckon two [periods].[2] And so we are told that in each case, he becomes a nazirite for two periods.

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS PLUS AN HOUR,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY-ONE DAYS, SINCE THERE IS NO NAZIRITESHIP FOR HOURS.

GEMARA. Rab said: This applies[3] only when he says, 'thirtyone days,' but if he says, 'thirty days plus one day,' he becomes a nazirite for two periods.[4] Rab follows R. Akiba whose method it was to lay stress on superfluities of expression, as we have learnt: [If a man sells a house, the sale includes] neither the cistern nor the cellar, even though he inserted the depth and the height [in the deed of sale]; he must, however, purchase for himself a right-of way.[5] This is the opinion of R. Akiba, but the Sages say that he need not purchase a right-of-way for himself.[6] R. Akiba does admit, however, that if he explicitly excludes [pit and cellar], he does not have to purchase a right-of-way.[7]

---

(1) Since naziriteships are reckoned in days only.

(2) But forty-five days.

(3) The assumption of the Mishnah that a man can become a nazirite for thirty-one days.

(4) See last Mishnah and Gemara.

(5) I.e., He does not retain a right-of-way to the cistern and cellar, unless he explicitly reserves it for himself.

(6) Since the sale does not include the cistern and cellar, he may be presumed to have reserved a right of way to them.

(7) The insertion of this superfluous clause is taken by R. Akiba to indicate that he wished to retain a right of way; v. B.B. 64a.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 8a

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE HAIRS OF MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA,' HE BECOMES A LIFE-NAZIRITE, POLLING EVERY THIRTY DAYS. RABBI SAID THAT SUCH A MAN DOES NOT POLL EVERY THIRTY DAYS;[1] THE MAN WHO POLLS EVERY THIRTY DAYS IS THE ONE WHO SAYS, 'I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIPS[2] AS THE HAIR ON MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA.' [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE CAPACITY OF THIS HOUSE, OR AS THE CAPACITY OF THIS BASKET,' WE INTERROGATE HIM. IF HE SAYS THAT HE HAS VOWED ONE LONG PERIOD OF NAZIRITESHIP, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, BUT IF HE SAYS THAT HE HAS VOWED WITHOUT ATTACHING ANY PRECISE MEANING [TO HIS STATEMENT], WE REGARD THE BASKET AS THOUGH IT WERE FULL OF MUSTARD SEED, AND HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THE WHOLE OF HIS LIFE.[3] [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AS FROM HERE TO SUCH AND SUCH A PLACE,' WE ESTIMATE THE NUMBER OF DAYS' [JOURNEY] FROM HERE TO THE PLACE MENTIONED. IF THIS IS LESS THAN THIRTY DAYS, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS; OTHERWISE HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THAT NUMBER OF DAYS. [IF HE SAYS], 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AS THE NUMBER OF DAYS IN A SOLAR YEAR'' HE MUST COUNT AS MANY NAZIRITESHIPS AS THERE ARE DAYS IN THE SOLAR YEAR. R. JUDAH SAID: SUCH A CASE ONCE OCCURRED, AND WHEN THE MAN HAD COMPLETED [HIS PERIODS], HE DIED.

GEMARA. WE REGARD THE BASKET AS THOUGH IT WERE FILLED WITH MUSTARD SEED, AND HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR THE WHOLE OF HIS LIFE. But why [mustard seed]? Surely we could regard it as though it were full of cucumbers or gourds, and so provide him with a remedy?[4] — Hezekiah said: This is a matter on which opinions differ, the author [of our Mishnah] being R. Simeon, who has affirmed that people do undertake obligations in which the use of an ambiguous formula results in greater stringency than the use of a precise one.[5] For it has been taught: [If a man has said,] 'I intend to be a nazirite provided this heap [of grain] contains a hundred kor,[6] and on going to it, he finds that it has been stolen or lost, R. Simeon declares him bound [to his vow] since whenever in doubt as to a nazirite's liabilities, we adopt the more stringent ruling.[7] R. Judah, however, releases him since whenever in doubt as to a nazirite's liabilities, we adopt the more lenient ruling.[8]

R. Johanan said: It is even possible that [the author of the Mishnah] is R. Judah. For in the case just mentioned, the man has possibly not entered into a naziriteship at all [if there were not one hundred kor in the heap],[9] whereas in this case [mentioned in the Mishnah,] he does at any rate enter into a naziriteship.[10] On what grounds can he be released from it?[11] But why not regard the basket as though it were full of cucumbers and gourds, and so provide him with a remedy?[12] — Such an idea ought not to cross your mind, for he has undertaken one [unbroken] naziriteship,[13]

---

(1) But becomes a nazirite for life and may never poll.

(2) נזירות

(3) (a) One naziriteship for every grain of mustard, [or, (b) one long naziriteship during which he can never poll].

(4) [By enabling him to poll at the end of every thirty days (according to (b) p. 23, n. 6).]

(5) As here, the reference to a basketful without specifying its contents, results in naziriteship for life.

(6) A dry measure; v. Glos.

(7) So that, as we are not certain that the heap contained less than 100 kor, he must observe the naziriteship.

(8) Tosef. Naz. II, 2.

(9) And therefore we do not declare him a nazirite lest he should eventually bring profane animals into the sanctuary, v. infra p. 102.

(10) For some period of time, whatever the basket is regarded as containing.

(11) And therefore he must he a nazirite for life.

(12) I.e., let him keep as many naziriteships as the basket will contain gourds or cucumbers. The questioner imagines that in R. Judah's view he becomes a life-nazirite, who can poll every thirty days. cf. supra, p. 21, n. 4.

(13) And if he brings his sacrifices at the termination of the number of days that the basket would contain gourds or cucumbers, he may he bringing profane animals into the sanctuary, as his naziriteship may he of longer duration. Thus he becomes a nazirite for life, during which he can never poll.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 8b

R. Judah agreeing with Rabbi, as we have learnt: RABBI SAID THAT SUCH A MAN DOES NOT POLL EVERY THIRTY DAYS. THE MAN WHO POLLS EVERY THIRTY DAYS IS THE ONE WHO SAYS, 'I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIPS AS THE HAIR OF MY HEAD, OR THE DUST OF THE EARTH, OR THE SANDS OF THE SEA.'

Is it then a fact that R. Judah agrees with Rabbi? Have we not learnt: [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE AS THE NUMBER OF DAYS IN A SOLAR YEAR,' HE MUST COUNT AS MANY NAZIRITESHIPS AS THERE ARE DAYS IN THE SOLAR YEAR. R. JUDAH SAID: SUCH A CASE ONCE OCCURRED, AND WHEN THE MAN HAD COMPLETED [HIS PERIODS], HE DIED? Now if you say that this man, [by using this formula,][1] undertook [consecutive] naziriteships,[2] we can understand why [R. Judah says that] when he finished,[3] he died. But if you say that he undertook a single naziriteship,[4] could it ever be said of such a man that he had 'COMPLETED'?[5] Moreover, could [R. Judah] possibly agree with Rabbi, seeing that it has been taught: R. Judah said: [If a man says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite, as the number of heaps of the fig crop,[6] or the number of ears [in the field] in the Sabbatical year,'[7] he must count naziriteships as the number of heaps of the fig crop, or the number of ears [in the field] in the Sabbatical year?[8] — [Where he explicitly mentions the word] 'number',it is different.

But does Rabbi make a distinction where the word 'number' [is used]? Has it not been taught: [If a man says,] 'I intend to be a nazirite as the number of days in a solar year,' he must count as many naziriteships as there are days in the solar year; if [he says] 'as the days of a lunar year,' he must count as many naziriteships as there are days in a lunar year. Rabbi said that this does not hold unless he says, 'I undertake naziriteships as the number of days in the solar year or as the number of days in the lunar year'?[9] — R. Judah agrees with Rabbi on one point, and differs from him on the other. He agrees with him on one point, viz: that what is undertaken is a [single] naziriteship,[10] but differs from him on the other, for whilst R. Judah distinguishes between [the cases] where the word 'number' is mentioned and where it is omitted, Rabbi does not so distinguish.

Our Rabbis taught: [A man who says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite all the days of my life,' or 'I wish to be a life-nazirite,' becomes a life-nazirite. Even if he says a hundred years, or a thousand years, he does not become a life-nazirite, but a nazirite for life.[11]

Our Rabbis taught: [If a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite plus one,' he must reckon two [naziriteships]. [If he adds,] 'and another,' he must reckon three, and if he then adds 'and again'. he counts four. Surely this is obvious? — It might be thought that the words 'and again' refer to the whole [preceding number], making six in all, and so we are told that this is not so.

Our Rabbis taught: [When a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite,' Symmachos affirmed [that by adding] hen,[12] [he must reckon] one; digon,[13] two; trigon,[13] three; tetragon,[13] four; pentagon,[13] five [naziriteships].[14]

Our Rabbis taught: A house that is round, or digon,[15] or trigon,[15] or pentagon,[15] does not contract defilement through the plague [of leprosy]. One that is tetragon[15] does. What is the reason? — For Scripture, both in the latter part and in the earlier part of the passage [dealing with the leprosy of houses], puts walls [in the plural][16] instead of wall [in the singular], thus making four walls in all.[17] [

---

(1) 'I intend to he a nazirite, etc.'

(2) 365 naziriteships, each of thirty days duration.

(3) At the end of thirty years.

(4) He would then mean, 'I undertake to be a nazirite for the number of the sun's days, i.e., for ever.' (Rashi). [Alternatively: If you say he undertook a single naziriteship (i.e. of 365 days duration) could it be said of him that he had completed the amount of naziriteships required by the Rabbis, in support of whose view R. Judah cites the incident; v. Tosaf.]

(5) He could never bring sacrifices.

(6) Aliter; paths of the fig-gatherers. v. Kohut, Aruch.

(7) Aliter; field.paths in the Sabbatical year.

(8) Tosef. Naz. I. Whereas Rabbi holds that in such a case he would have to count only as many days as there are heaps of figs.

(9) Tosef. Naz. I. And, according to Rabbi, the same would be the case if he omitted the word 'number', the important thing being the use of the term, 'nazirite' or 'naziriteships'.

(10) I.e., when he says, 'I intend to be a nazirite as the capacity of this house'.

(11) Tosef. Naz. I, 3, and supra p. 21.

(12) Gr. , once.

(13) The last syllable is probably a Hebraisation of  Thus digon —  — twice; and so on. V. Kohut, Aruch.

(14) Tosef. Naz. I.

(15) Here we have the normal meaning, two-sided, and so on.

(16) Lev. XIV, 39, and 37.

(17) Cf. Neg. XII, I.

C H A P T E R II

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS.] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS', BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE [IN THE ORDINARY SENSE].[1] BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA IS OF SOME EFFECT]. THEY MEANT ONLY WHERE HE SAID,[2] 'THEY ARE [FORBIDDEN] TO ME, AS IS A SACRIFICE.'[3]

GEMARA. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS, BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE: But why? Does not the Divine Law say, nothing that is made of the grape-vine?[4] — Beth Shammai adopt the view of R. Meir, who said that a man does not make a declaration without meaning something,[5] whilst Beth Hillel adopt the view of R. Jose that a man's intentions are to be gathered from[6] the concluding portion of his statement [equally with the first portion], and [in consequence] the vow here carries with it its annulment.[7]

But surely Beth Shammai also agree that the vow here carries with it its annulment? — We must therefore say, that Beth Shammai adopt the view of R. Meir, who said that a man does not make a declaration without meaning something, and so immediately he utters the words 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE', he becomes a nazirite, and in adding '[AND ABSTAIN] FROM DRIED FIGS AND PRESSED FIGS, his purpose is to obtain release[8] [from his vow], and Beth Shammai [reject this] in accordance with their general principle that there can be no release from [vows made for] sacred purposes, and since there can be no release from [vows made for] sacred purposes, there can be no release from naziriteship. Beth Hillel, on the other hand, agree with R. Simeon, as we have learnt:[9] R. Simeon declared him free[10] [of obligation], since his offering was not undertaken in the customary manner:

---

(1) I.e., he must abstain from wine and grapes.

(2) I.e., he added (Rashi). [Tosaf: . . as if he said'; Asheri: . . .here he intended'].

(3) They then become forbidden, but he does not become a nazirite even according to Beth Shammai.

(4) Num. VI, 4, which would show that naziriteship applies only to wine etc.

(5) Even though taken altogether his words are meaningless, and we therefore select that part which has a meaning and hold him to it.

(6) Lit., 'a man is held by'.

(7) Lit., 'its door' for escape; by his concluding remarks, he has withdrawn from his nazirite vow.

(8) Lit, 'to ask for remission.

(9) In connection with one who vowed to bring a meal-offering of barley flour; v. infra.

(10) From bringing the offering, since a meal-offering could be brought only of wheaten flour.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 9b

Our Mishnah is not in agreement with the following tanna. For it has been taught: R. Nathan said that Beth Shammai declare him both to have vowed [to abstain from figs] and to have become a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare him to have vowed [to abstain from figs], but not to have become a nazirite. [Here,] Beth Shammai agree with R. Meir[1] and R. Judah,[2] and Beth Hillel with R. Jose.[3] According to another report, R. Nathan said that Beth Shammai declare him to have vowed [to abstain from figs], but not to have become a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare him neither to have vowed, nor to have become a nazirite. [Here,] Beth Shammai agree with R. Judah, and Beth Hillel with R. Simeon.[4]

We have learnt elsewhere: A man who says, 'I undertake to bring a meal-offering of barley-flour,' must [nevertheless] bring one of wheaten flour.[5] If he says, 'of coarse meal,' he must [nevertheless] bring fine meal. If,'without oil and frankincense,' he must [nevertheless] add oil and frankincense; 'of half a tenth,' he must offer a whole tenth; 'of a tenth and a half', he must offer two tenths. R. Simeon declared him, free [of obligation], since his offering was not undertaken in the customary manner.[6]

Who is the Tanna [who asserts that] if anyone undertakes to bring a meal-offering of barley-flour, he must bring one of wheaten flour? — Hezekiah replied: The matter is a subject of controversy, [the Tanna here] representing Beth Shammai. For have not Beth Shammai averred that when a man says ['I intend to be a nazirite and abstain] from dried figs and pressed figs,' he becomes a nazirite? So too, if he says 'of barley-flour', he must bring one of wheatenflour. R. Johanan, on the other hand, replied that it is possible to maintain that [the passage quoted] represents the views of both [Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel] and that it refers to a man who says, 'Had I known that such vows are not made, I should not have vowed in this wise, but in the [correct] manner

Hezekiah said: The rule just laid down applies only where he said 'of barley', but if he says 'of lentils',[7] he need bring nothing at all. [Can this be so?] Consider: To whom does Hezekiah ascribe the Mishnah [containing this ruling]? To Beth Shammai! Now lentils in regard to a meal-offering, are as dried figs to a nazirite, and there Beth Shammai declare him to be a nazarite?[8] Hezekiah relinquished that opinion.[9] Why did he relinquish it? —[10] Raba said: Because he found that Mishnah difficult to understand. Why does it say 'barley' and not 'lentils'?[11] And so Hezekiah concluded that Beth Shammai's assertion was what R. Judah [maintained it to be].[12] R. Johanan, on the other hand, affirmed that [the rule of the Mishnah is applicable] even if he says 'of lentils'. But was it not R. Johanan who averred that [he only brings the offering if] he affirms: Had I known that such vows are not made, I should not have vowed in this wise, but in the [correct] manner?[13] — He[14] was arguing on Hezekiah's premises. You relinquished your former opinion,[15] because [the Mishnah] does not mention [the case] 'of lentils'. But might it not be a case of progressive argument, viz, not only is it true that when he says, 'of lentils' he must bring a proper mealoffering, since we may hold that he is there repenting [of his vow], and so we lay stress upon the opening portion of his statement, but even if he says 'of barley', where we could take it as certain that his intention is: If it can become consecrated after the manner of the 'Omer meal-offering,[16]

---

(1) That a man does not make a declaration without meaning something.

(2) Of our Mishnah.

(3) That a man's intention may be gathered from the concluding portion of his statement, and not like R. Simeon; cf. n. 7.

(4) That a vow must be undertaken in the customary manner.

(5) Which alone was permissible for a meal-offering. v. Lev. II. 2: And when anyone bringeth a meal-offering unto the Lord, his offering shall be of fine flour; and he shall pour oil upon it and put frankincense thereon.

(6) M. Men. 103a.

(7) There was an obligatory offering of barley for the 'Omer but no offering of lentils at all (v. Lev. XXIII, 10ff.).

(8) And so here he ought to bring a meal-offering of wheaten Hour if he says 'of lentils'.

(9) That the Tanna of the Mishnah of Men. 103a is Beth Shammai. [He will consequently accept the explanation of R. Johanan (Tosaf.).]

(10) He could still have maintained that the Mishnah of Men. represents the view of Beth Shammai, and retract from the second statement holding that the ruling applies even if the man said 'of lentils'!

(11) If the view of Beth Shammai is that we hold a man to the first portion of his vow, then even if he says, 'I intend to offer a mealoffering of lentils', he should be obliged to bring one of wheaten flour.

(12) [The text is in disorder, and the interpretations suggested are many and varied. It appears to be best understood on the basis of Rashi's interpretation of R. Judah's statement in our Mishnah, viz., that he actually added, THEY ARE FORBIDDEN TO ME AS IS A SACRIFICE (v. supra p. 28, n. 2). On this view, even according to Beth Shammai, where he vowed to bring a meal-offering from barley, he would not be obliged to bring one of wheat unless he, e.g., explicitly stated that had he known that such vows are not made, he would have vowed in the correct manner, as R. Johanan (supra p. 30), but while such a plea would be accepted if he vowed barley because it could have been a bona-fide error, it could not be admitted if he undertook to offer 'lentils'. Granted this, the Mishnah in Men. can represent the views of both Beth Hillel and Beth Shammai, as R. Johanan stated, hence the reason for Hezekiah relinquishing his former opinion (v. p. 30, 11. 4).]

(13) [A plea which is not admitted if he vowed to bring 'lentils', v. n. 4.]

(14) [R. Johanan, in affirming that the ruling is applicable even if he says 'of lentils'.]

(15) [V. supra p. 30, n.4.]

(16) Which was of barley. v. Lev.XXIII, 10ff.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 10a

or the meal-offering of the faithless wife,[1] then I desire it to become consecrated, but not otherwise — even there we are told that he must bring one of wheaten flour.[2]

MISHNAH. IF HE SAYS, 'THIS HEIFER IS SAYING I SHALL BECOME A NAZIRITE IF I RISE,'[3] OR 'THIS DOOR IS SAYING I SHALL BECOME A NAZI RITE IF I OPEN', BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA WAS OF SOME EFFECT], IT WAS ONLY WHERE HE SAYS:[4] 'THIS HEIFER SHALL BE [FORBIDDEN] TO ME AS IS A SACRIFICE, IF IT SHOULD STAND UP [OF ITSELF]'.

GEMARA. Is it possible for a heifer to talk? — Rami b. Hama replied: [The Mishnah] here, refers to where a heifer lay crouching before him, and he said, 'This heifer thinks that it is not going to stand up. I intend to be a nazirite [and abstain] from its flesh, if it stands up of its own accord,' and it then arose of its own accord. Beth Shammai now apply their customary view and Beth Hillel their customary view. Beth Shammai who affirm that [in spite of his saying], 'from dried figs and pressed figs', he becomes a nazirite, assert here that [even] when he says 'from its flesh', he becomes a nazirite, whilst Beth Hillel declare that he does not become a nazirite.

But have not Beth Shammai asserted this once, already? Raba replied: A second and a third time[5] [did they repeat it]. R. Hiyya, too, taught it a second and a third time, and so did R. Oshaia teach it a second and a third time, and they are all necessary statements; For if the rule had been stated merely in the case of dried figs and pressed figs, [it might have been argued] that Beth Shammai were of the opinion there that his words take effect and he becomes a nazirite because [figs and] grapes can be confused,[6] whereas flesh and grapes cannot be confused. Similarly had it been affirmed regarding flesh [it might have been argued] that Beth Shammai were of the opinion in this instance that he becomes a nazirite, because flesh and wine [are naturally associated],[7] but it would not apply to dried figs and pressed figs, and so this case also is given explicitly. Again, had it been affirmed in these two cases [only, it might have been argued] that only in these cases was Beth Shammai's assertion to be applied, whilst as concerns the door, they would defer to Beth Hillel.[8] Further, had only the door been referred to, [it might have been argued] that only in this case do Beth Hillel dissent, but in the other two they defer to Beth Shammai, and so we are told that this is not so.

[Nevertheless,] said Raba, does the Mishnah say if [the cow] rises of its own accord?[9] But, said Raba, we must explain thus: The heifer, for example, is recumbent before him, and he says, 'I undertake to bring it as a sacrifice'.

This is all very well as regards the heifer which can be offered as a sacrifice but can a door be sacrificed?[10] — Raba therefore [corrected himself and] said: The heifer, for example, is recumbent before him,[11]

---

(1) This was also barley, v. Num. V, 15.

(2) I.e. although his vow ban a certain meaning even if taken at face value, and there is no need for us to emphasise the first clause to the exclusion of the second, yet we do so.
(3) Apparently this is taken as a clumsy way of saying: 'If I do not make this cow get up, I vow abstinence from its flesh.'
(4) Cf. supra p. 28, n. 2.
(5) The case of the DOOR.
(6) So that when he said figs he may have meant grapes.
(7) And when he spoke of the one, he thought of the other.
(8) Because there is no association between a door and grapes.
(9) Whilst admitting the necessity of restating the principle in our Mishnah, Raba objects to the explanation of Rami b. Hama on the ground that the word 'rises' might mean with the help of others, whereas according to Rami b. Hama the vow is effective only when the heifer rises of its own accord.
(10) Since the case of the door in the Mishnah is parallel to that of the heifer, any explanation applying to the heifer must hold good if the door is substituted.
(11) And appears as if it will never rise, even if force is used.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 10b

and he says, 'I undertake a nazirite-vow [to abstain] from wine if it does not stand up,' and it then stood up of its own accord. In Beth Shammai's opinion, the substance[1] of this man's vow lay in his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force,[2] and this he did not do,[3] whereas Beth Hillel are of the opinion that [the vow was made] because [the heifer] was recumbent,[4] and it has risen.[5]

If this is [the meaning of the Mishnah], how is the subsequent clause to be understood, viz.: R. JUDAH SAID: EVEN THOUGH BETH SHAMMAI DID AFFIRM [THAT THE FORMULA WAS OF SOME EFFECT], IT WAS ONLY WHERE HE SAYS, AND SHALL BE FORBIDDEN TO ME AS A SACRIFICE ETC.'? Does [his vow] then, attach to the heifer at all?[6] — [It must be] therefore, that he said, for example, 'I undertake a nazirite vow [to abstain] from its flesh if it should not stand up,' and it then stands up of its own accord. In Beth Shammai's opinion, the substance of this man's VOW is his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force, and this he has not done, whereas according to Beth Hillel, the substance of his vow lies in the fact that [the heifer] was recumbent, and it has risen.[7]

But are Beth Hillel of the opinion that if [the heifer] does not stand up, [the man] becomes a nazirite? Have they not said that [by a vow to abstain] from flesh, he does not become a nazirite?[8] — They were arguing on the premises of Beth Shammai. In our opinion, he does not become a nazirite even if [the heifer] should not stand up, but you who say that he does become a nazirite[9] should at least admit that the substance of his vow lay in the fact that [the heifer] was recumbent, and it has since risen. Beth Shammai reply that this is not so, and the substance of the man's vow lay in his intention to cause [the heifer] to rise by force, and this he has not done.[10]

---

(1) Lit., 'the obligation'.
(2) Lit., 'with his hand'. The word 'stand up' being taken to mean 'stand up through me'.
(3) He therefore becomes a nazirite.
(4) And can only take effect if it remains recumbent.
(5) He does not therefore become a nazirite.
(6) The words 'it is forbidden to me as a sacrifice' imply that the heifer itself was the object of the vow, whereas in Raba's explanation it is the heifer's not standing up which is the condition for the operation of the man's naziriteship, and he has no intention of attaching any sanctity to the heifer.
(7) But if it did not rise he would be a nazirite.
(8) Even as in the case of a vow to abstain from pressed figs, v. supra p. 32.
(9) Where he says simply, 'I undertake to he a nazirite (and abstain) from flesh.'

(10) And so he becomes a nazirite.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 11a

MISHNAH. IF A CUP OF WINE DULY TEMPERED[1] IS OFFERED TO A MAN, AND HE SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE IN REGARD TO IT,' HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. ON ONE OCCASION A CUP OF WINE WAS OFFERED TO A WOMAN ALREADY INTOXICATED AND SHE SAID, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE IN REGARD TO IT. THE SAGES RULED THAT ALL THAT SHE MEANT WAS TO FORBID IT TO HERSELF, AS A SACRIFICE [IS FORBIDDEN]. GEMARA. You cite a case to disprove [the rule]! You begin by saying that HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, and then quote the case of the woman [who does not become a nazirite], from which I should conclude that [by means of this formula] he forbids to himself only this [cup that is offered to him] but is allowed to drink other wine? — There is a hiatus [in the Mishnah], which should read: 'If a cup of wine duly tempered is offered to a man, and he says "I undertake a nazirite vow [to abstain] from it", he becomes a nazirite.' If, however, he was [already] intoxicated when he said 'I intend to be a nazirite [and abstain] from it',he does not become a nazirite,[2] (since he is accounted as having merely forbidden it to himself as a sacrifice is forbidden. If you should object that he ought to have said so [unambiguously], [the reply is] that he thought they would bring a fresh one and importune him, and so he thought, 'I will say something to them which will leave them in no doubt [as to my intention]). ON ONE OCCASION, TOO, A WOMAN [ALREADY INTOXICATED etc.].

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE, ON CONDITION THAT I CAN DRINK WINE, OR CAN HAVE CONTACT WITH THE DEAD', HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE, AND ALL THESE THINGS ARE FORBIDDEN HIM. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I WAS AWARE THAT THERE IS SUCH A THING AS NAZIRITESHIP BUT I WAS NOT AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE', HE IS BOUND [TO HIS VOW].[3] R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, RELEASES HIM.[4] [IF HE SAYS,] 'I WAS AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE,[5] BUT I IMAGINED THAT THE SAGES WOULD GIVE ME PERMISSION, SINCE I CANNOT DO WITHOUT WINE', OR 'SINCE I AM A SEXTON',[6] HE IS RELEASED.[7] R. SIMEON, HOWEVER, BINDS HIM [TO HIS VOW].[8] GEMARA. Why does R. Simeon not dissent from the first ruling [also]? — R. Joshua b. Levi said: R. Simeon did in fact dissent from the first ruling also. Rabina said: In the opening clause, R. Simeon does not dissent, because the condition [there attached to the vow][9] is contrary to an injunction of the Torah, and whenever a condition is contrary to an injunction of the Torah, it is void.[10] R. Joshua b. Levi, on the other hand, considered that the words ON CONDITION here are equivalent to 'except'.[11]

It has been taught in support of Rabina's view: If he said, 'I declare myself a nazirite, on condition that I may drink wine, or have contact with the dead,' he becomes a nazirite and all these things are forbidden to him, since the condition he lays down is contrary to an injunction of the Torah; and whenever a condition is contrary to an injunction of the Torah,it is void.[12]

[IF HE SAYS] I WAS AWARE THAT A NAZIRITE IS FORBIDDEN TO DRINK WINE [etc.]: In the preceding clause,[13] we find it is [the Rabbis] who bind him [to his vow] and R. Simeon who releases him [and why is it not the same here]? — Here, too, it should read: [The Rabbis] bind him whilst R. Simeon releases.

Alternatively, you need not reverse the text,

---

(1) Wine in ancient times was never drunk neat.

(2) His intention being to cease from drinking.

(3) I.e. be becomes a full nazirite

(4) He does not become a nazirite at all, P. Simeon being of opinion that a nazirite vow is not effective unless it comprises all the things forbidden to a nazirite, v. supra 3b.

(5) [Add, 'or that a nazirite may have no contact with the dead.']

(6) [And therefore thought the Rabbis would permit me to come in contact with the dead.]

(7) He does not become a nazirite at all.

(8) He becomes a full nazirite.

(9) That he should be allowed to touch a dead body or drink wine.

(10) And therefore the vow stands.

(11) Hence the vow was not all-inclusive, and therefore R. Simeon regards it as null.

(12) Tosef. Naz. II, 1.

(13) Where he says he did not know that wine is forbidden.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 11b

[and we may explain thus]. In the first clause, where he makes a nazirite vow [to abstain] from one thing[1] only, according to the Rabbis, who hold that [the nazirite vow takes effect] even though he forswears one thing only, he becomes a nazirite and [the things forbidden to a nazirite] are forbidden to him; whereas according to R. Simeon who holds that [the nazirite vow does not take effect] until he forswears all of them, [all the things forbidden to a nazirite] are permitted to him. In the subsequent clause where he forswears all, and desires release as regards one thing, according to the Rabbis who declare him to be a nazirite even though he forswears one thing only, if he desires release as regards one only, he is released [from all]; according to R. Simeon who requires him to forswear them all, he cannot obtain release from one, until he obtains release from all. This is the reason we have the reading [in the second clause]: R. SIMEON BINDS HIM.

Yet another solution is possible. The controversy concerns vows [broken] under pressure,[2] and the difference [between R. Simeon and the Rabbis] is the same as that between Samuel and R. Assi [in the following passage]. For we have learnt: Four types of vows were remitted by the Sages,[3] incentive Vows,[4] vows of exaggeration,[5] inadvertent vows[6] and vows [broken] under pressure.[7] And [commenting thereon] R. Judah said: 'R. Assi ruled that it was necessary with these four types of vow to seek remission from a Sage. When I told this to Samuel, he said to me, The Tanna says that the Sages have remitted them, and you say that they must still be asked to remit them!' The Rabbis agree with Samuel,[8] R. Simeon with R. Assi.[9]

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE',[10] AND SHOULD HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY: 'I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE', THEN, IF THEY ARE CLEVER THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER; OTHERWISE THEY MUST POLL OTHER NAZIRITES.

GEMARA. The question was propounded: If his companion, on hearing [his vow], says [simply]: 'I TOO', what are the consequences? Does [the remark] 'I TOO' embrace the whole of the original statement,[11] or does it embrace only half of it? If it should be decided that it embraces only half of the statement,is this to be the first half or the second half? — Come and hear: [AND HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAYS:] I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE, THEN IF THEY ARE CLEVER THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER. From the fact that he is made to say both I TOO' and 'I UNDERTAKE ,it may be inferred that 'I TOO' has reference to half of the statement only.

Quite so: it has reference to half of the statement only, but is this the first half or the second half? — This follows from the same [passage]. For since he is made to say AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL'[12] it follows that 'I Too' has reference to the first half.

R. Huna, the son of R. Joshua said to Raba: How can we be sure that this is so? May we not suppose that 'I TOO' really refers to the whole statement, and that the additional 'AND I UNDERTAKE', merely confirms his Undertaking? For if you do not admit this, [what do you make of] the subsequent [Mishnah] that reads: [Should a man say:] 'I undertake half the polling of a nazirite', and should his companion, hearing this, say: 'I too, I undertake half the polling of a nazirite'?[13] Are there here two sections to which he can be referring? We can only suppose that there he is merely repeating 'I have undertaken this obligation', and in this case too [it is possible] that he is merely repeating 'I have undertaken this obligation.' Raba replied: How now! If you are prepared to say that in the first [Mishnah the words 'I UNDERTAKE ETC.'] are of importance, but not in the subsequent one, then they are repeated in the subsequent one — unnecessarily, it is true — because they are included in the first one where it is important,[14] but if you maintain that it is of importance neither in the first [Mishnah] nor in the subsequent one, would it be included unnecessarily in both? R. Isaac b. Joseph citing R. Johanan said: If a man instructs his representative

---

(1) I.e., one of the things forbidden a

(2) Viz., his inability to live without wine.

(3) I.e., without the need of remission being asked for.

(4) E.g.. 'I vow . . . if I pay more', made during bargaining to show himself in earnest.

(5) E.g., 'I vow . . . if there were not a million people there', the number being obviously exaggerated.

(6) E.g., 'I vow . . . if I was there,' and he later remembers that he was there.

(7) E.g., through illness. V. Ned. 20b.

(8) Since it is impossible for a nazirite to be a sexton, the vow is null of itself and he is not a nazirite.

(9) Though he cannot be a nazirite, the vow must be remitted by a Sage.

(10) I.e., enable a nazirite to poll by providing his sacrifices.

(11) I.e., both (i) 'I wish to be a nazirite,' and (ii) 'I undertake to poll a nazirite.'

(12) And not merely 'I Too'.

(13) Mishnah infra 12b.

(14) I.e., the second Mishnah repeats the phrasing of the first, for the sake of parallelism.

to go and betroth for him a wife, without specifying any woman, he becomes [in the meanwhile] forbidden [to marry] any woman in the world, since it is presumed that the messenger carries out his commission, and since he did not specify [the woman], he does not know which he betrothed for him.[1] Resh Lakish raised an objection against R. Johanan [from the following]: If a dove of an indeterminate pair[2] should fly away into the air, or amongst those sin-offerings that have to be killed,[3] or if one of the pair should perish, a partner is to be taken for the other one.[4] [This implies that] with a determinate pair there is no remedy;[5] though all other pairs [in the world] would be valid.[6] Now why should this be so? Should we not say of each one, perhaps this is one [that flew away]?[7] He replied: I spoke of a woman who is stationary and you raise objections from prohibited things that are mobile![8] Should you argue further that here too the woman may be mobile, for it is possible that he may have met her in the street and betrothed her, [the cases are still different] for the woman returns to her customary place, but can the same be said of the bird-pair?

Raba said: R. Johanan would admit that a woman who has [among her unmarried relatives] neither daughter, daughter's daughter, nor son's daughter; neither mother nor maternal grandmother, nor sister, although she may have a sister who was divorced after [the representative was sent] — such a woman would be permitted to him,[9] because at the time that he gave his instructions, [the sister] was still married, and when a person appoints a deputy, it is [to perform] something that is possible at the time,[10] but for something that is not possible at the time he does not appoint a deputy.[11]

We have Iearnt: [SHOULD A MAN SAY:] 'DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE, AND I[11]

UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE,' AND SHOULD HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY: 'I TOO, AND I UNDERTAKE TO POLL A NAZIRITE, THEN, IF THEY ARE CLEVER, THEY WILL POLL EACH OTHER; OTHERWISE THEY MUST POLL OTHER NAZIRITES. Now this [suggestion][12] is all very well as regards the latter, since the former had become [a nazirite] first,[13] but as to the former, was the latter a nazirite [when he made his vow]?[14]

---

(1) Any woman may therefore be a relative, of a forbidden degree of kinship, of his betrothed wife.

(2) A pair of doves of which it has not yet been determined which is to be the sin-offering and which the burnt-offering.

(3) v. Kin. 1, 2.

(4) The pair is then to be determined in the usual way; Kin. II, I.

(5) Since it is not known which is the survivor.

(6) We assume that a random pair does not contain the missing dove, as we are guided by the majority.

(7) [And could not be offered except on behalf of the owner who originally determined it.]

(8) Where the objects are stationary (קבוע), a majority is not considered decisive, but any minority is as potent as the majority (cf. Sanh. [Sonc. ed.] p. 531. n. 4) and so there is an even chance that any woman is a near kinswoman of his betrothed wife.

(9) I.e., to betroth before the deputy returns.

(10) Here, to betroth an unmarried woman.

(11) Hence the deputy could not possibly have betrothed the other sister.

(12) Viz., that they should poll each other.

(13) Lit., 'since the former was in his presence'; and so his vow to poll a nazirite can be understood as applying to the former.

(14) How then can his vow apply to the latter, if we accept Raba's contention that a man can appoint an agent only for something which is possible at the time.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 12b

It follows therefore that he must have meant: 'If I should find one who is a nazirite, I shall poll him'; and so here too, perhaps he means: 'If you find one who is divorced, [you can] betroth her on my behalf'? — We may put [our maxim] thus. A person can appoint a deputy only for a commission that he himself can execute at the moment, but he cannot appoint him for a commission that he himself cannot execute at the moment [but can only do later].

But is that so? Come and hear: If a man says to his agent,[1] 'You are to declare void any vows that my wife makes from the present moment until the time I return from such-and-such a place,' and he does so,it might be imagined that they become void, but Scripture says: Her husband may let it stand, or her husband may make it void.[2] This is the opinion of R. Josiah. R. Jonathan said: In all circumstances do we find that a man's representative is equivalent to himself.[3] Now, [R. Josiah's] reason derives from the statement of the Divine Law, Her husband may let it stand, or her husband may make it void, and but for this, the agent would be able to declare them void, whereas where [the husband] himself is concerned, it has been taught: Should a man say to his wife, 'All the vows that you may make from the present moment until I return from such-and-such a place are to stand,' this is of no effect. [Should he say,] 'They are to be void,' R. Eliezer declares them void, but the Sages say that they are not void.[4] Now assuming that R. Josiah agrees with the Rabbis that he himself could not make them void, [we nevertheless find that] had not the Divine Law said, Her husband may let it stand or her husband may make it void, the agent could have declared them void?[5] — It is possible that he agrees with R. Eliezer that [the husband] can make them void [in advance]. If that is so, why does he trouble to appoint a deputy? Why does he not declare them void himself? — He fears that [at the moment of departure][6] he might forget, or be angry, or be too busy.

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] 'I UNDERTAKE THE POLLING OF HALF A NAZIRITE,'[7] AND HIS COMPANION, HEARING THIS, SAY 'I, TOO; I UNDERTAKE THE POLLING OF HALF A NAZIRITE,' THEN, ACCORDING TO R. MEIR, EACH MUST POLL A NAZIRITE COMPLETELY, BUT THE SAGES SAY: EACH POLLS HALF A NAZIRITE.

GEMARA. Raba said: All agree that if he Says, 'I undertake half the sacrifices[7] of a nazirite,' he is obliged to bring only half the sacrifices;[8] if he says 'I undertake the sacrifices of half a nazirite,' he must bring a complete set of sacrifices, since partial naziriteship is impossible.[9] Where they differ is when the phraseology of the Mishnah [is used].[10] R. Meir considers that as soon as he says 'I undertake [to poll]' he becomes liable to the complete sacrifice of naziriteship, and when he [afterwards] specifies half a naziriteship, it is no longer within his power [to limit his obligation].[11] The Rabbis, on the other hand, look upon it as a vow accompanied by its own modification.[12]

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY,] '[11] UNDERTAKE TO BECOME A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON,' AND A SON BE BORN TO HIM, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE. IF THE CHILD BORN BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. SHOULD HE SAY, WHEN I SHALL HAVE A CHILD,' THEN EVEN IF IT BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE.

---

(1) A person left by a man in charge of his household while he is away.

(2) Num. XXX, 14.

(3) Ned. 72b.

(4) Ned. 72a.

(5) Which seems to show that a man can appoint an agent for something which cannot be done at once but can be done later.

(6) Until then, he wishes to retain his option of declaring his wife's vows void or not, at his pleasure.

(7) I.e.,to bring half the sacrifices accompanying the polling of a nazirite.

(8) Because there is no ambiguity.

(9) The phrase 'half a nazirite' is meaningless and must therefore be replaced by 'a nazirite', since it is presumed that he intended to undertake a real obligation.

(10) Here the actual obligation, which is to provide sacrifices, is not mentioned explicitly but must be inferred. The position of the word 'half' is no longer decisive, since no other position yields more sense. Accordingly, its significance must be determined.

(11) Limitation is now only possible on application to a Sage, and so he must bring a complete sacrifice.

(12) And therefore only the modified vow comes into operation and it is sufficient for him to bring half the sacrifices. V. supra p. 28, n. 7.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 13a

SHOULD HIS WIFE MISCARRY, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. R. SIMEON SAID: [IN THIS CASE] HE MUST SAY, IF IT WAS A VIABLE CHILD, I AM A NAZIRITE OBLIGATORILY; OTHERWISE I UNDERTAKE A NAZIRITESHIP VOLUNTARILY.'[1] SHOULD [HIS WIFE] LATER BEAR A CHILD,[2] HE THEN BECOMES A NAZIRITE. R. SIMEON SAID: HE SHOULD SAY, 'IF THE FIRST WAS A VIABLE CHILD, THE FIRST [NAZIRITESHIP] WAS OBLIGATORY, AND THE PRESENT ONE WILL BE VOLUNTARY, OTHERWISE, THE FIRST ONE WILL HAVE BEEN VOLUNTARY, AND THE PRESENT ONE IS OBLIGATORY.

GEMARA. For what purpose are we told this?[3] — Because of the subsequent clause, viz.: — IF IT BE A DAUGHTER, OR SEXLESS, OR AN HERMAPHRODITE, HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. But is not this obvious? — It might be thought that his meaning was 'If I beget a child'[4] and so we are told that this is not so SHOULD HE SAY 'WHEN I SHALL HAVE A CHILD' etc.: But is not this obvious? — It might be thought that he only meant the child that is reckoned amongst men,[5] and so we are told [that any child is meant].

SHOULD HIS WIFE MISCARRY HE DOES NOT BECOME A NAZIRITE. The author of this statement is the R. Judah of the heap of grain.[6]

R. SIMEON SAID: HE SHOULD SAY, 'IF THE CHILD WAS VIABLE, THEN I AM A NAZIRITE OBLIGATORILY; OTHERWISE I UNDERTAKE NAZIRITESHIP VOLUNTARILY.' — R. Abba put the following question to R. Huna: Should a man say, 'I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son', and his wife miscarries, and he set aside a sacrifice,[7] and then his wife gave birth [to a son],[8] what is the law?[9] From whose standpoint [was this problem propounded]? If from the standpoint of R. Simeon, what problem is there? Does not R. Simeon say that wherever there is a doubt in questions concerning naziriteship we adopt the more stringent ruling?[10] — It must therefore be from the standpoint of R. Judah, who maintains that in questions concerning naziriteship,if there is a doubt the more lenient ruling is adopted. The query then is whether [the animal] became sacred or not,[11] But what [practical] difference can it make [which it is]?[12] — [There would be the question of] whether he might shear it, or work with it.[13] The problem was unsolved. Ben Rehumi put the following question to Abaye: [Should a man say,] 'I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son, and his companion, hearing this, add 'And I undertake likewise,' what would be the law? Is the reference to his words[14] or to him himself?[15] Should your finding be that the reference is to him himself,[16] then if a man should say, 'I undertake to become a nazirite when I shall have a son,' and his companion, hearing this, add 'I too , what would be the law? Is the reference to himself, I or does he mean, 'I am as much your good friend as you are yourself'?[17] Should your finding be that whenever the other is present

---

(1) And in either case he becomes a nazirite.

(2) After her miscarriage.

(3) That if a son is born, he becomes a nazirite.

(4) The Hebrew word בֵּן son', is a denominative of בָּנָה 'to beget children', and might be used for any child (Rashi).

(5) I.e., a son through whom the family is propagated.

(6) v. supra 8a.

(7) To bring at the end of his proposed naziriteship.

(8) As a result of the same confinement.

(9) I.e., what about the sacrifice between the time it was set aside, and the time the second child was born. The question is made clearer anon.

(10) So that the husband was a nazirite in law, and the sacrifice properly set aside from the first.

(11) [Does the birth of the second child prove that the first was the result of the same pregnancy and consequently not premature and viable, or do we assume that it was the result of a later pregnancy and thus premature and non-viable?]

(12) Since it is now sacred.

(13) In the interval between the birth of the first and second child, as no benefit might be derived from sacred property.

(14) I.e., 'I also undertake to become a nazirite when I have a son'.

(15) The former, i.e., I also undertake to become a nazirite when you have a son'.

(16) The latter, meaning, 'I too shall be a nazirite when I have a son'.

(17) I.e., 'I too shall be a nazirite when you have a son'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 13b

he would be ashamed [to refer to himself],[1] then if a man should say, 'I undertake to be a nazirite when so-and-so has a son,' and his companion, hearing this, add 'I too,' what would be the law? Would it be said then that because the other is not present he is referring to himself,[2] or does he mean, 'I am as good a friend to him as you are'?[3]

The problem was left unsolved.

MISHNAH. [IF A MAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE [NOW] AND A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON', AND BEGINS TO RECKON HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP]. AND THEN HAS A SON BORN TO HIM, HE IS TO COMPLETE HIS OWN NAZIRITESHIP] AND THEN RECKON THE ONE ON ACCOUNT OF HIS SON. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND A NAZIRITE [ON MY OWN ACCOUNT]', AND HE BEGINS TO RECKON HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP] AND THEN HAS A SON BORN TO HIM, HE MUST INTERRUPT HIS OWN [NAZIRITESHIP], RECKON THE ONE ON ACCOUNT OF HIS SON, AND THEN COMPLETE HIS OWN. GEMARA. Raba put the following question. If he should say, 'I wish to be a nazirite[4] after twenty days time,' and then 'For one hundred days commencing now', what would be the law? Seeing that these hundred days will not be complete in twenty, are they to be inoperative [for the time being][5] or, seeing that there will remain sufficient time afterwards[6] for the hair to grow long,[7] do they come into operation [immediately]?[8]

Why does [Raba] not [first] raise the question of a [second] naziriteship of short duration?[9] It is a problem within a problem that he has raised:

---

(1) And he must have meant, 'I shall be a nazirite when you have a son.'

(2) I.e., 'I too shall be a nazirite when I have a son.'

(3) I.e., 'I too shall be a nazirite when so-and-so has a son.

(4) An ordinary naziriteship of thirty days.

(5) I.e., till thirty days after the twenty.

(6) At the termination of the ordinary naziriteship.

(7) A nazirite could not poll until his hair had grown for thirty days.

(8) He will count twenty days, observe an ordinary naziriteship of thirty days, and then count eighty days to complete the naziriteship of one hundred days.

(9) 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days', and then, 'An (ordinary) nazirite commencing now.'

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 14a

Suppose it is decided that with a short naziriteship, since only ten days remain,[1] these ten days would certainly not be reckoned,[2] [what are we to say] of a naziriteship of a hundred days?[3] Seeing that eighty remain, would these [eighty days] be reckoned[2] or not?

And again, suppose it is decided that [the naziriteship] [in this case] operates [immediately], what would be the law if he were to say 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days time' and then 'I wish to be a life nazirite now',[4] would this become operative [at once] or not?[5] And again, supposing it is decided that in all these cases, since it is possible to secure release,[6] they become operative [at once],[7] what would be the law if he were to say 'I wish to become a nazirite like Samson in twenty days time', and then 'I wish to be an ordinary nazirite now'? In this case, since release cannot be secured,[8] would it become operative or not?

If he were to say, 'I desire to be as Moses on the seventh of Adar,'[9] what [would his meaning be]?[10]

Of these [questions], decide the first, [For it was taught: Should a man say] 'I wish to be a nazirite after twenty days time,' and then 'For a hundred days from now,' he reckons twenty days, and then thirty days, and then eighty days to complete the first naziriteship.[11] [SHOULD HE SAY, 'I WISH TO BE A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND A NAZIRITE ON MY OWN ACCOUNT etc.']

If he contracts ritual defilement[12] during the period [of naziriteship] on account of his son, R. Johanan said: This renders void [the first[13] period as well], but Resh Lakish said: It is not void. 'R. Johanan said that it becomes void,' — because [the whole] is one long period of naziriteship; 'but Resh Lakish said that it is not void,' — since his own naziriteship, and the one on account of his son are distinct.

---

(1) If it is interrupted by a naziriteship after twenty days.

(2) As completing the first naziriteship by adding them to the twenty days, since ten days do not allow for the hair to grow long and therefore this naziriteship does not commence until the other one is finished.

(3) Is it on the same footing as the short one, or does it commence at once?

(4) Though a life-nazirite polls every thirty days, the naziriteship is continuous and cannot be interrupted. Thus once the life-naziriteship operates it is impossible for the ordinary naziriteship to take effect.

(5) I.e. , shall the life-naziriteship be suspended until the ordinary naziriteship has been observed, or does it become operative and he must obtain release from the other naziriteship.

(6) From the naziriteship which is to become operative in twenty days time.

(7) And he must secure release from the naziriteship which was to have operated after twenty days.

(8) A nazirite like Samson could never be freed from his vow, since Samson could not be freed.

(9) Supposed to be the date of the birth and death of Moses, v. Kid. 38a.

(10) Either 'As after the death of Moses on the seventh of Adar'; when presumably many nazirite vows were made by the Israelites, or, 'As after the birth of Moses on the seventh of Adar', a festive occasion.

(11) Tosef. Nazir II.

(12) With the dead.

(13) The period counted before his son's naziriteship came into operation.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 14b

If he contracts ritual defilement during the period that he is leprous.[1] R. Johanan said: This renders void [the earlier period of naziriteship]; but Resh Lakish said: It is not void. 'R. Johanan said that it becomes void,' — since he is in the midst of his period of naziriteship,[2] 'but Resh Lakish said that it is not void,' — because the period of leprosy and the naziriteship are distinct.

And it is necessary [to have both these controversies on record]. For if only the first[3] were recorded, [we might say that] there R. Johanan was of the opinion that [the first period] becomes void because the same term, naziriteship, applies to both, whereas in the other he would agree with Resh Lakish that the nazirite period and the leprosy are distinct. Similarly had only the other [regarding leprosy] been recorded, [we might suppose that] only there did Resh Lakish hold [the two periods to be distinct], whereas in the first he would agree with R. Johanan. Thus the necessity [for recording both controversies] is demonstrated. If he becomes unclean on a day [during the period that] his hair is growing.[4] — Rab said: This does not render void [the earlier period]; this even according to R. Johanan who said [above] that the [earlier period] does become void, for this is only so [when the uncleanness is incurred] during the naziriteship itself, but not during the period his hair is growing which is merely the complement of the naziriteship.[5] Samuel, on the other hand, said: It does render void [the earlier period]; and this even according to Resh Lakish who said [above] that [the earlier period] does not become void, for whereas there, there are two distinct naziriteships, here[6] there is but one naziriteship.[7]

R. Hisda said: All would agree that should his hair be still unshorn[8] when the blood [of his sacrifice had been sprinkled],[9] he would have no remedy.[10] With whose opinion does this statement accord? It cannot be with that of R. Eliezer,[11] for seeing that in his opinion polling estops [him from drinking wine, the uncleanness][12] is still prior to the 'fulfilment of his [consecration]'[13] and [the whole period] should become void![14] Nor can it accord with the Rabbis, Seeing that they say that the polling does not estop [him from drinking wine]![15] -In point of fact, it does accord with the opinion of the Rabbis, the phrase, ‘he would have no remedy’, meaning, ‘he would have no means of fulfilling the precept of polling [in purity]’.

R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: A nazirite whose period is completed,is scourged for contracting ritual defilement,[16] but not for polling or for [drinking] wine. Why is he scourged for ritual defilement? [Assuredly] because Scripture says. All the days that he consecrateth himself unto the Lord [he shall not come near to a dead body],[17] thus including the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment! But in that case, for polling too he should be liable to scourging seeing that the All-Merciful Law Says. All the days of his naziriteship there shall cone no razor upon his head,[18] thereby including the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment. Again, All the days of his naziriteship shall he eat nothing that is made of the grape-vine,[19] should also include the days after fulfilment equally with the days before fulfilment? —

---

(1) One who becomes leprous during his naziriteship completes it when the leprosy is cured.

(2) As is proved by the fact that when he recovers from his leprosy he completes his period.

(3) Relating the naziriteship on account of his son.

(4) If he had his hair polled by force, his naziriteship is not interrupted thereby and he completes his period. If this is less than thirty days, he must nevertheless allow his hair to grow for thirty days. The additional days constitute the ‘period that his hair is growing’.

(5) And not an integral part of it.

(6) When he allows his hair to grow after having been polled by force.

(7) The additional days are an integral part of naziriteship and not a mere complement.

(8) Lit., ‘hallowed’, cf. Num. VI, 11.

(9) And he became unclean.

(10) In regard to polling and wine drinking-so it is assumed at present.

(11) V. infra 472.

(12) He cannot drink wine after polling

(13) Cf. Num. VI, 13.

(14) Cf. ibid. 12, and he begins a new period at the end of which he finds the remedy.

(15) And defilement after the termination of his period does not affect the naziriteship.

(16) Before offering his sacrifices.

(17) Num. VI, 6.

(18) Ibid. VI, 5.

(19) Num. VI. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 15a

[Defilement] is different, for the All-Merciful Law says, And he defile his consecrated head,[1] showing that [the penalty for defilement lies] wherever the nazirite ship depends on the head.[2]

An objection was raised: A nazirite who has completed his period is forbidden to poll, or drink wine, or have contact with the dead. Should he poll or drink wine, or have contact with the dead he is to receive the forty stripes. [This is] a refutation of R. Jose son of R. Hanina.

MISHNAH. [SHOULD A MAN SAY.] ‘I UNDERTAKE TO BECOME A NAZIRITE WHEN I SHALL HAVE A SON, AND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE HUNDRED DAYS [ON MY OWN ACCOUNT],’ AND A SON BE BORN TO HIM BEFORE THE EXPIRATION OF SEVENTY DAYS, HE LOSES NONE OF THIS PERIOD;[3] BUT IF AFTER SEVENTY DAYS, THESE SEVENTY DAYS ARE VOID, SINCE THERE CAN BE NO POLLING FOR LESS THAN THIRTY DAYS.[4]

GEMARA. Rab said: The seventieth day itself is reckoned as part of both periods.[5]

We learnt: IF [A SON] BE BORN TO HIM BEFORE THE EXPIRATION OF SEVENTY DAYS, HE LOSES NONE OF THIS PERIOD. Now if you assume that [the day of birth] is reckoned as part of both periods,[not only does he not lose but] he actually profits![6] — Strictly speaking there should have been no mention of the period-before the seventieth day,[7] but because it says in the subsequent clause [of the Mishnah], that [birth] after the seventieth day renders these seventy days void, the period before the seventieth day is mentioned in the first clause.

Come [then] and hear the subsequent clause: 'IF IT BE BORN AFTER THE SEVENTIETH DAY,[8] THE SEVENTY DAYS ARE VOID[9] — The meaning of 'AFTER' is, after [the day] after [the seventieth day] ,[10] You say then that [a birth on] the day after [the seventieth day] itself,[11] would not render void [the previous period]. But if this is so, why should we be told that if the birth occurs before the seventieth day none of the period is lost, seeing that the same is true [of a birth occurring] on the day after the seventieth day? — It is consequently to be inferred that 'AFTER' means [the day] after literally, and thus the Mishnah unquestionably [contradicts] Rab.

Whose authority was Rab following in making this assertion? Shall we say it was Abba Saul, [in connection with whom] we have learnt: If a man bury his dead three days before a festival, the enactment of seven days' [full mourning] ceases to apply to him, if eight days before the festival, the enactment of thirty days [halfmourning] ceases to apply, and he may trim his hair on the eve of the festival. Should he, however, fail to trim his hair on the eve of the festival, he is not permitted to do so afterwards [until the thirty days' half-mourning elapse].

---

(1) Num. VI, 9.

(2) I.e., as long as his head is unpolled. though the 'days of his consecration are fulfilled'.

(3) I.e., He counts a naziriteship of thirty days on account of his son, and then completes the hundred days on his own account.

(4) And since there are not thirty days left over from the first naziriteship, the whole of it becomes void, and he has to start his one hundred days over again.

(5) So that on the one hand seventy days of his own naziriteship are completed, and on the other he need only reckon twenty-nine more days for the naziriteship following the birth of his son. The same will of course be true of the last day of this naziriteship, when he must again commence the remainder of his own (Rashi).

(6) For each of the days between the naziriteships counts as two.

(7) Because there is no manner of doubt as to what the law should be and he does in fact gain.

(8) I.e., as we should suppose on the seventy-first.

(9) Whereas if Rab be right, a birth on the seventy-first day should not render void the previous period, since reckoning both ways, thirty days remain.

(10) I.e., The seventy-second day, which on any reckoning would not leave more than twenty-nine.

(11) I.e., seventy-first day.

Abba Saul said: Even if he should fail to trim his hair before the festival, he is permitted to do so afterwards,for just as the observance of three days [before the festival] causes the enactment of seven days [full mourning] to lapse, so the observance of seven days [full-mourning before the festival] causes the enactment of thirty days [half-mourning] to lapse. Now, Abba Saul's reason is surely that the seventh day is reckoned as part both of [the full-mourning] and of [the halfmourning]![1] — Possibly Abba Saul only makes this avowal in connection with the periods of the seven days'[2] mourning which are a rabbinic enactment, whereas he would not do so in connection with naziriteship, a scriptural enactment?[3] It must therefore be that Rab follows R. Jose. for it has been taught: R. Jose said that a woman, 'on the wait' for gonorrhoenic issue,[4] on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled, on the second day [of her waiting], and who later [in the same day] observes an issue, may not eat [of the passover],[5] and does not have to prepare the second passover.[6] Now R. Jose's reason is surely because in his opinion, part of the day counts as a whole day, so that she becomes unclean only from the moment [of observing the issue] and thereafter.[7]

Is this indeed R. Jose's opinion?[8] Has it not been taught: R. Jose said that a sufferer from gonorrhoea who has observed unclean issue on two occasions, and on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled 'on the seventh day [of his impurity], and Similarly a woman, on the wait' for gonorrhoeic issue on whose behalf [the paschal lamb] has been slaughtered and [its blood] sprinkled — if they afterwards observe an unclean issue, then even though they render unclean couch and seat[9] retrospectively, they are not obliged to offer the second passover?[10] — [The uncleanness] is retrospective only by enactment of the Rabbis. This is indeed evident, for if it were scriptural, on what grounds would they be exempt from the second passover?[11] [No!][12] In point of fact it would be possible for the uncleanness [to be retrospective] in biblical law also, the concealed impurity[13] of gonorrhoea not being reckoned a ban [to the offering of the passover].

R. Oshaya. too, is of the opinion that the retrospective incidence is rabbinic in origin,[14] for it has been taught:[15] R. Oshaia said that one who observes a gonorrhoeic issue on his seventh day, renders void the preceding [seven days]. R. Johanan said to him: Only that day itself becomes void. But consider! [What is R. Johanan saying?] If it renders void at all, it should render all [seven days] void, otherwise it should not render void even the same day? — Read therefore: [R. Johanan said that] it does not even render void the same day,

---

(1) In the same way as Rab reckons the 70th day twice over.

(2) The argument applying with greater force to the period of half-mourning.

(3) Hence Rab cannot appeal to his authority.

(4) V. Lev. XV, 25ff. Should a woman observe issue after her menstrual period, she becomes unclean until evening. From that time she is 'on the wait', and if there is an issue on the second day, she becomes unclean for seven days. A third day certifies her as gonorrhoeic, and she must then bring a sacrifice after purification; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 577. n. i. Whilst unclean she must not eat the flesh of sacrifices.

(5) For she is now unclean for seven days.

(6) On the 14th day of the following month, Iyar; v. Num. IX, 9ff.

(7) She was fit to offer the Passover, although she cannot now eat it. Adopting the reading of Tosaf., Asheri and others.

(8) That she becomes unclean only from that moment.

(9) Cf. Lev. XV, 4.

(10) Since they render unclean couch and seat retrospectively, the day must count as belonging wholly to the unclean period!

(11) Since they were already unclean when the paschal lamb was killed.

(12) This would afford no proof.

(13) Lit., 'impurity of the abyss', a technical term for an impurity of which there is no sign until its issue.

(14) In the opinion of R. Jose.

(15) [var. Iec.: For R. Oshaia said].

. [R. Oshaia] replied: You have on your side R. Jose, who said that the uncleanness is incident [according to the Scripture] from the moment [of observation] and thereafter. Now was it not R. Jose who said that the uncleanness was retrospective? We see therefore that the retrospective incidence must [in his opinion] be rabbinic.[1]

Now seeing that R. Jose is of the opinion that part of a day counts as a whole day, how is it ever possible for there to be a certified[2] female sufferer from gonorrhoea to offer the [prescribed] sacrifice, for if the issue is observed in the second half of the day, then the first half of the day counts as the period of 'waiting'?[3] — It is possible either if she should have continual issue for three days, or alternatively, if she observes the issue on each of the three days shortly after sunset, so that there is no part of the day that can be reckoned [as a period of cleanness].

CHAPTER III

MISHNAH. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE', HE POLLS ON THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY, BUT SHOULD HE POLL ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HIS OBLIGATION IS FULFILLED. [IF, HOWEVER, HE SAYS] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS,' AND POLLS ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HIS OBLIGATION IS NOT FULFILLED. IF A MAN UNDERTAKES TWO NAZIRITESHIPS, HE POLLS FOR THE FIRST ONE ON THE THIRTY-FIRST DAY, AND FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTY-FIRST DAY. IF, HOWEVER, HE SHOULD POLL FOR THE FIRST ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE CAN POLL FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTIETH DAY, WHILST SHOULD HE POLL ON THE DAY PRIOR TO THE SIXTIETH, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION; FOR THIS WAS THE TESTIMONY THAT R. PAPAIAS BORE CONCERNING ONE WHO UNDERTAKES TWO NAZIRITESHIPS, VIZ., THAT IF HE SHOULD POLL FOR THE FIRST ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE IS TO POLL FOR THE SECOND ON THE SIXTIETH DAY, WHILST SHOULD HE POLL ON THE DAY PRIOR TO THE SIXTIETH DAY, HE HAS FULFILLED HIS OBLIGATION, THE THIRTIETH DAY COUNTING TOWARDS THE REQUIRED NUMBER. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE,' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THE SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, THE WHOLE PERIOD IS VOID. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR ONE HUNDRED DAYS,' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDREDTH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS[4] : ONLY THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. IF HE CONTRACTS DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDRED AND FIRST DAY, THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID.

GEMARA. IF A MAN SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE' AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THE SEVEN DAYS ARE VOID.

---

(1) Otherwise he would he contradicting himself.

(2) One who has observed an issue on three successive days.

(3) During which she has been clean. and being clean part of the day. she is considered to have been clean all day.

(4) no note.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 16b

R. Eliezer is of the opinion that any [defilement contracted] after the fulfilment'[of the period] renders only seven days void.[1]

[IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE THIRTIETH DAY, THE WHOLE PERIOD IS VOID. Here, R. Eliezer does not dissent because [we assume that] the man said, 'whole days'.[2]

[IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE FOR A HUNDRED DAYS, AND CONTRACTS RITUAL DEFILEMENT ON THE HUNDREDTH DAY, HE RENDERS VOID

THE WHOLE PERIOD. R. ELIEZER SAYS: ONLY THIRTY DAYS ARE VOID. All this may be taken [in two ways,] according as we follow Bar Pada or R. Mattena as explained above.[3]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE REMAINS THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED,[4] AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. IF HE LEAVES[5] IT AND RE-ENTERS,[6] [THE PERIOD][7] IS RECKONED, AND HE MUST BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT. R. ELIEZER SAID: NOT [IF HE RE-ENTERS] ON THE SAME DAY, FOR IT SAYS, BUT THE FORMER DAYS SHALL BE VOID,[8] [IMPLYING] THAT THERE MUST BE 'FORMER DAYS'

GEMARA. It has been stated: If a man makes a nazirite vow whilst in a graveyard, then according to R. Johanan the naziriteship takes effect, but according to Resh Lakish it does not take effect. R. Johanan says: The naziriteship does take effect because he considers it merely to be suspended and in readiness, so that whenever he becomes ritually clean, it commences to operate; whereas Resh Lakish holds that, the naziriteship does not take effect; if he repeats [the vow] later [when he is clean], it will commence to operate, but not otherwise.

R. Johanan raised an objection to Resh Lakish [from the following]: IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE REMAINS THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED, AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. [This implies, does it not,] that it is only the sacrifice [prescribed] for ritual defilement that he does not have to bring, but [the vow] does take effect? — He replied: [Not so;] he does not come within the scope of the law, either of ritual defilement or of the sacrifice.

An objection was again raised by him [from the following]: If a man is ritually defiled, and vows to become a nazirite, he is forbidden to poll, or to drink wine, or to touch a dead body. Should he poll, or drink wine, or touch a dead body, he is to receive the forty stripes.[9] If now you admit that [the vow] takes effect, then we see why he receives the forty stripes; but if you say that it does not take effect, why should he receive the forty stripes? —

---

(1) V. supra 6b.

(2) And the thirty are not yet completed.

(3) According to H. Mattena a naziriteship whose duration is not specified lasts thirty days, whilst Bar Pada says that it lasts twenty-nine days. The full discussion of the Mishnah occurs above, fols. 5b-7a.

(4) I.e., the naziriteship does not begin.

(5) [And submits to the process of purification.]

(6) After becoming clean, v. infra.

(7) He is considered an ordinary nazirite from the time he becomes clean until he re-enters the graveyard.

(8) Num. VI, 12.

(9) Tosef. Naz. II, 9.

We are dealing here with the case in which he left [the graveyard] and re-entered it.[1]

A [further] objection was raised by him [as follows]: The only difference between a person ritually defiled who makes a nazirite vow, and a ritually clean nazirite who becomes unclean, is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship], whereas the latter does not reckon his seventh day [of purification] as part of his [new] period. If now you assume that [the vow of the unclean person] does not take effect, how is [the seventh day] to be counted [in his period]? — Mar b. R. Ashi said: Both [R. Johanan and Resh Lakish] agree that [the vow] does take effect; where they differ is whether there is [to be a penalty of] stripes.[2] R. Johanan is of the opinion that since [the vow] takes effect, he suffers the penalty of stripes, but Resh Lakish is of the opinion that there is no penalty of stripes, although [the vow] does take effect.

R. Johanan raised an objection to Resh Lakish [from the following]: IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE SHOULD REMAIN THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED, AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. [This implies, does it not,] that it is only the sacrifice prescribed for ritual defilement that he does not have to bring, but he does suffer stripes? — Strictly speaking, it should have stated that he does not receive stripes, but since it was requisite in the subsequent clause to mention that where HE LEAVES [THE GRAVEYARD] AND RE-ENTERS, THE [PERIOD] IS RECKONED, AND HE MUST BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT, the initial clause, too, mentions that he need not bring the sacrifice [prescribed] for ritual defilement.[3]

Come and hear: The only difference between a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite-vow, and a ritually clean nazirite who becomes unclean, is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship], whereas the latter does not reckon his seventh day as part of his period. [Does not this imply] that as regards stripes, they are on a par? — He[4] replied: Not so. Where they are on a par is as regards polling.

[You aver, then,] that the latter receives stripes,[5] but the former does not do so. Why is this not mentioned? — The [Baraitha] is referring to that which is serviceable[6] to him, not to that which is to his detriment.[7]

Come and hear: Whosoever was ritually defiled and vowed to be a nazirite is forbidden to poll, or to drink wine. If he should poll, or drink wine, or come into contact with the [human] dead, he is to receive the forty stripes? This is undeed a refutation.[8]

Raba enquired: If a man vows to be a nazirite whilst in a graveyard, what is the law? Has he to be [in the graveyard] a certain time[9] for him to be liable to stripes, or not?

What are the circumstances? If he was told not to make a nazirite vow, why should any length of stay be necessary? What is the reason why no length of stay [in the graveyard] is necessary for the [ritually clean] nazirite [to be liable to stripes]? It is because he was forewarned;[10] and here too he was forewarned!

---

(1) When he had become clean and repeated the vow.

(2) [For contracting defilement whilst making his vow in the graveyard.]

(3) Thus making the two clauses symmetrical in form.

(4) Resh Lakish.

(5) For defilement.

(6) To know when to commence the naziriteship.
(7) To receive stripes.
(8) Of Resh Lakish
(9) A minimum period. V. Shebu. 17a.
(10) Of the prohibition against defiling himself.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 17b

We must suppose, therefore, that he entered [the graveyard] in a box, or a chest, or a portable turret,[1] and his fellow came and broke away the covering.[2] [The question then arises] whether [the rule requiring] a certain length of stay[3] was only laid down with reference to [defilement within] the Temple precincts, but not outside,[4] or whether there is no distinction.[5] The problem was unsolved.

R. Ashi raised the following question: If a man vows to become a nazirite whilst in a graveyard, is he required to poll or not? Is polling required only of a ritually clean nazirite who has contracted ritual defilement, because he has defiled his consecration,[6] and not of a ritually unclean person who makes a nazirite vow, or is there no difference [between the two]? — Come and hear: IF A MAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW WHILST IN A GRAVEYARD, THEN EVEN IF HE REMAINS THERE FOR THIRTY DAYS, THESE ARE NOT RECKONED, AND HE DOES NOT HAVE TO BRING THE SACRIFICE [PRESCRIBED] FOR RITUAL DEFILEMENT. [This implies, does it not,] that it is only the sacrifice prescribed for ritual defilement that need not be brought, but that polling is necessary! [That is not so.] The statement is made as a reason [for something else]. The reason that he need not bring the sacrifice prescribed for ritual defilement is that polling is unnecessary.[7]

Come and hear: The only difference between a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite vow and a ritually clean nazirite who contracts ritual defilement is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship], whereas the latter does not reckon his seventh day as part of his [new] period. Surely, then, as regards polling both are on the same footing? — No! Where both are on the same footing is as regards stripes. In the case of polling, [you aver that] one polls and the other does not. Then why not mention this? — The seventh day is mentioned, and includes all observances dependent upon it.[8]

Come and hear: I am only told here[9] that the period of his ritual defilement is not reckoned [in the days of his naziriteship]. How do we know [that the same is true] of the period of declared leprosy?[10] This can be derived from an analogy [between the two]. Just as after the period of ritual defilement he is required to poll and bring a sacrifice, so after the period of declared leprosy he is required to poll and bring a sacrifice; and so just as the period of ritual defilement is not reckoned, the period of declared leprosy ought not to be reckoned. — Not so! For in the case of the period of defilement, it may he because this renders void the former reckoning[11] that it is not reckoned, whereas the period of declared leprosy does not render void the former reckoning,[12] and therefore it should itself be reckoned. — I will put the argument differently. Seeing that 'a nazirite in a graveyard',[13] whose hair is ripe for polling,[14] does not count [the days spent in the graveyard as part of his naziriteship], surely the period of declared leprosy, when his hair is not ripe for polling,[15] should not be counted.[16] Now surely polling as a result of his defilement is meant?[17] — No! the reference may be to polling [after observing the nazirite vow] in ritual purity.[18] This is indeed evident.

---

(1) And therefore did not con-tract uncleanness when in the graveyard, being in a separate place.
(2) After he had vowed to become a nazirite.
(3) Viz., sufficient for prostration. V. Shebu. 17a.
(4) To cases not connected with the Temple, e.g.. when a nazirite becomes unclean inside the graveyard.
(5) And therefore in the graveyard also a certain length of stay is required.

(6) V. Num. VI, 9.
(7) The problem therefore remains.
(8) The seventh day is counted as part of his naziriteship because he need not bring a sacrifice, and he does not bring a sacrifice since he does not poll.
(9) In Num. VI, 22.
(10) Cf. Lev. XIII, 3ff.
(11) The period of naziriteship counted before defilement.
(12) The period counted before leprosy.
(13) I.e., one who made the vow of naziriteship in a graveyard.
(14) For he will poll automatically at the end of the seven days of purification, just as a ritually clean nazirite polls at the end of his naziriteship. This is the initial interpretation of the argument as understood by the Gemara.
(15) There is no definite period at which he has to poll, but he must wait until he recovers from the disease.
(16) The whole of the above paragraph is a quotation from Sifre on Num. VI, 12.
(17) I.e., surely the phrase 'whose hair is ripe for polling' means that he must poll as a result of his defilement in the graveyard, so that R. Ashi's question is answered in the affirmative.
(18) So that the argument is: Seeing that 'a nazirite in a graveyard' whose hair will be ripe for polling after he has purified himself and observed the period of his naziriteship, does not count etc., surely the leper, whose hair is not ripe for polling as part of his naziriteship because he must poll on recovery from his disease before he commences to count the naziriteship, ought not to count etc.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 18a

For if you assume that polling as a result of the defilement is intended, does he not have to poll after the period of declared leprosy?[1] — No, [this does not constitute proof, for] the reference is to the polling on account of the naziriteship.[2]

Come and hear: The verse, And he defile his consecrated head[3] refers to a ritually clean [nazirite] who contracts ritual defilement; it enjoins on such a one to remove his hair and sacrifice birdofferings, but [by implication] exempts one, who vows to become a nazirite at a graveside, from removing his hair and sacrificing bird-offerings. For you might argue a fortiori: if the ritually clean [nazirite] who contracts ritual defilement must remove his hair and sacrifice bird-offerings, all the more must one who commenced [his naziriteship] whilst defiled remove his hair and sacrifice bird-offerings; therefore the text says expressly, 'And he defile his consecrated head', [implying] that only the ritually clean [nazirite] who contracts ritual defilement is required by Scripture to remove his hair and sacrifice bird-offerings, but not the person who vowed to become a nazirite at a graveside. This proves then [that the latter is exempt].

Who is the author of the following dictum, taught by the Rabbis, [viz.,] The only difference between a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite vow, and a ritually clean nazirite who contracts ritual defilement, is that the former reckons his seventh day [of purification] as part of his period [of naziriteship],[4] whilst the latter does not reckon his seventh day as part of his [new] period? — R. Hisda said: It is Rabbi, for Rabbi has said that the naziriteship [after defilement] does not recommence until the eighth day of purification, for if you were to say it is R. Jose son of R. Judah, surely he holds that the naziriteship [after defilement] begins to operate on the seventh day of purification.

Where are these opinions of Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah [to be found]? — It has been taught: And he shall hallow his head that same day;[5] Rabbi says [that this refers to] the day on which he offers his sacrifices,[6] but R. Jose son of R. Judah says [it refers] to the day on which he polls.[7]

And who is the author of the teaching that, 'A nazirite who contracts ritual defilement many times brings a single sacrifice only'?[8] — R. Hisda said: It is R. Jose son of R. Judah, who has said that the naziriteship [after defilement] recommences on the seventh day of purification. Thus the case [contemplated] could arise if he were to contract defilement on the seventh day [of purification][9] and then again on the seventh day after that,[10] nevertheless since there was no period when he could have brought his sacrifice,[11] he need offer one sacrifice only [for both defilements]. According to Rabbi, however, if he contracted ritual defilement on the seventh day and then again on the seventh day,[12] the whole is one long period of ritual defilement,[13] whilst if we suppose he contracts ritual defilement upon the eighth day and again upon the eighth day, then there is a point of time [on each occasion] when he could bring his sacrifice.[14]

What is Rabbi's reason [for his opinion]? — The verse says [first], And make atonement for him that he sinned by reason of the dead,[15] and then, And he shall hallow his head.[16] And what does R. Jose son of R. Judah [say to this]? — If this is its intention, the text should read simply, 'And he shall hallow his head'.

---

(1) So that the two cases are exactly analogous, and we cannot call one 'ripe for polling' and the other 'not ripe for polling'.

(2) The defiled nazirite has to poll because he is a nazirite, whereas the leper polls because he was a leper. There would thus still be room for the argument even if the meaning were that 'a nazirite in a graveyard' must poll.

(3) Num. VI. 9.

(4) I.e., the seventh day is counted as the first day of his thirty days of naziriteship.

(5) Num. VI, 12.

(6) The eighth day after the occurrence of the defilement.

(7) The seventh day after the occurrence of the defilement.

(8) Ker. II, 3.

(9) After he has bathed.

(10) After the occurrence of the second defilement, so that this is a separate defilement. But if he became unclean on the sixth day, it would be the same defilement.

(11) Which has to be brought on the 8th day.

(12) After the occurrence of the second defilement.

(13) Hence we cannot say 'many times' as in the passage quoted.

(14) And he must bring a sacrifice for each period of defilement.

(15) Num. VI, 11.

(16) Hence the naziriteship is to recommence after the offering of the sacrifice, which took place on the eigth day.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 18b

What is the purpose of [the additional phrase], 'that day'? Since it cannot refer to the eighth day,[1] we may take it as referring to the seventh day. And Rabbi? He can say that the purpose of the phrase 'that day' is to tell us that even if he should fail to bring his sacrifices [the naziriteship commences].

Now what compelled R. Hisda to ascribe the authorship of this dictum to R. Jose son of R. Judah? Why should he not have interpreted it as referring to where he became unclean on the eighth night,[2] and ascribed the authorship to Rabbi?[3] Are we to understand from the fact that he does not ascribe the authorship to Rabbi, that in his opinion the night [before the day that his sacrifice is due] is not regarded as belonging to the preceding period?[4] — R. Adda b. Ahaba replied: One thing depends on the other. If we hold that the night [before the day his sacrifice is due] is regarded as belonging to the preceding period, then, since he can offer his sacrifice only in the morning, the naziriteship does not begin to operate until the morning;[5] whereas if the night [before the day his sacrifice is due] is not regarded as belonging to the preceding period, the naziriteship after purification [from defilement] begins in the evening.[6]

Our Rabbis taught:[7] If [a nazirite][8] contracts defilement on the seventh day [of purification], and then he again contracts defilement on the seventh day [following], he is only required to offer one sacrifice. If he contracts defilement on the eighth day, and then once more on the eighth day [following], he is required to offer a sacrifice for each [defilement]. He begins to reckon [the new naziriteship] immediately;[9] this is the opinion of R. Eliezer, but the Sages say: He is required to offer but one sacrifice for all [the defilements] so long as he has not yet offered his sin-offering.[10] If he has brought his sin-offering and then contracts defilement, and again offers his sin-offering and again contracts defilement, he is required to furnish a [full] sacrifice for each defilement. If he has furnished his sin-offering, but not his guilt-offering, he [nevertheless] commences to reckon [the new naziriteship]. R. Ishmael, the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka said: Just as his sin-offering estops him [from commencing to reckon the new naziriteship], so does his guilt-offering.

Now, all is in order according to R. Eliezer, for the verse says, And he shall hallow his head that same day,[11] even though he may not yet have provided the sacrifices. [And likewise] the Rabbis [explain] 'that [day]', [implying], even though he may not yet have provided the guilt-offering.[12] But what does R Ishmael, the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka make of the words 'that [day]'? — He will reply: [His naziriteship commences] 'that [day]', even though he may not yet have provided the burnt offering. And the Rabbis? — They do not consider it necessary to have an excluding phrase for [permission to dispense with] the burnt offering, since it is [brought] simply as a gift.[13]

What is the Rabbis' reason [for stating that the guilt-offering is no bar]? — It has been taught: What is the implication of the verse, And he shall consecrate unto the Lord the days of his Naziriteship, and shall bring a he-lamb of the first year for a guilt-offering?[14] Since we find that all other guilt-offerings mentioned in the Torah are a bar [to atonement so long as they are not brought], it might have been thought that this one is also a bar,

---

(1) For if it did, it would be superfluous.

(2) I.e., the night preceding the eigth day.

(3) So that the defilements are separate, though in regard to sacrifices they would be considered one, seeing that no sacrifice can be brought at night.

(4) Lit., 'wanting time. Although the sacrifice cannot be brought till the next day.

(5) So that there would still be only one defilement.

(6) And he would have to bring, according to Rabbi, a sacrifice for each defilement.

(7) [So Rashi; cur. edd., read, 'The text (states)'. This term, however, would not have the same meaning here as elsewhere in the Talmud where the reference is to a text previously cited; v. Asheri.]

(8) Who became unclean.

(9) Though he has not yet offered his sacrifices.

(10) The sacrifice of a nazirite who had become unclean consisted of two doves, one a sin-offering, the other a burnt-offering, and also a he-lamb as a guilt-offering. V. Num. VI, 10-12.

(11) Num. VI, 11.

(12) But the new naziriteship cannot commence till he has brought the others.

(13) [And not to effect atonement, as the other sacrifices, v. Zeb. 7b.]

(14) Num. VI, 12.

and so the text says, 'And he shall consecrate . . . and shall bring [a guilt-offering]' implying that even though he may not yet have brought [the guilt-offering], he is to consecrate. R. Ishmael, son of R. Johanan b. Beroka said: 'And he shall consecrate . . . and shall bring'. When does he consecrate? After he has brought.[1]

Who is the Tanna of the following [teaching] taught by the Rabbis: 'If a woman undertakes a nazirite vow, and contracts ritual defilement, and then her husband declares [her vow] void, she must bring the sin-offering of a bird, but not the burnt-offering of a bird'? — R. Hisda replied: It is R. Ishmael.[2] How comes [R. Ishmael] to this ruling? — If he holds that the husband nullifies [his wife's vow],[3] then she should not be required to bring the sinoffering of a bird, whilst if he holds that the husband only terminates[4] [the vow],[5] why should she not be required to bring the burnt-offering of a bird as well? — Actually he is of the opinion that a husband nullifies [his wife's vow], and he further agrees with R. Eleazar ha-Kappar. For it has been taught: R. Eleazar ha-Kappar, Berabbi,[6] said: Why does the Scripture say, And make atonement for him, for that he sinned by reason of the soul.[7] Against what 'soul' did he then sin? It can only be because he denied himself wine.[8] If then this man who denied himself wine only is termed a sinner, how much more so is this true of one who is ascetic in all things!

But the verse is referring to an unclean nazirite,[9] whilst we are applying it even to a ritually clean nazirite? — R. Eleazar ha-Kappar[10] is of the opinion that a ritually clean nazirite is also a sinner, and the reason that Scripture teaches this [lesson in connection] with a defiled nazirite is that he repeats his sin.[11]

IF HE LEAVES IT AND RE-ENTERS, THE DAYS ARE RECKONED. It is stated that they are reckoned.[12] Does then the naziriteship begin to operate merely because he has left [the graveyard]?[13] — Samuel said: [We are speaking of] where he has left it, been sprinkled [a first and] a second time and bathed.[14] But [are we to infer that] if he re-enters, then only are they reckoned, whilst if he does not re-enter, they are not reckoned? — The argument is progressive. Not only [do they count] if he leaves, but [they count] also if he re-enters [immediately after purification].[15]

R. Kahana and R. Assi asked Rab: Why have you not explained [the Mishnah] to us in this manner? — He replied: I was under the impression that you did not require [to be told]. R.ELIEZER SAID: NOT IF HE DOES SO ON THE SAME DAY, FOR IT SAYS, AND THE FORMER DAYS SHALL BE VOID, IMPLYING THAT THERE MUST BE FORMER DAYS. 'Ulla said: R. Eliezer was referring only to a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite vow, but a ritually clean nazirite who contracts ritual defilement, makes [his naziriteship] void, even on the first day.[16]

---

(1) The naziriteship begins anew after he has brought the guilt-offering.

(2) [Who, in contradistinction to the Rabbis, holds that the burnt-offering is not brought as a mere gift, but specifically as a sacrifice of a nazirite, and since her naziriteship is void, she brings no sin-offering.]

(3) Lit., 'uproots , i.e., that his action is retrospective and the vow has never been valid.

(4) Lit., 'cuts off'.

(5) When he disallows it; until then it was effective.

(6) [Or 'Berebi'. Designation by which Bar Kappara is known in order to distinguish him from his father who bore the same name. The meaning of the title is uncertain: (a) a compound of 'house', be, and 'rabbi', i,e., belonging to the school of an eminent teacher (Jast.), or (b) a compound of 'son', 'bir', and 'rabbi', 'a son of a scholar', i.e., 'a scholar', v. J.E. III, 52.]

(7) נפש, E.V.: 'dead'. Num. VI, II.

(8) And so the woman must bring the sin-offering because she wished to deny herself wine.

(9) The section of which it forms part begins (Num. VI, 9), If any man die suddenly upon him, so that he becomes defiled,. . .he shall bring two turtle doves, of which one was a sin-offering brought because, . . .he sinned by reason of the soul.

(10) Cf., however, supra 3a, where R. Eleazar ha-Kappar is reported as saying that a ritually clean nazirite is not a sinner.

(11) For the period before defilement is void and he must now recommence to count thirty days.

(12) So that he must bring the sacrifices of a nazir who becomes unclean.

(13) For he is still unclean.

(14) I.e., undergone the purification rites. V. Num. XIX, 19.

(15) In which case we might think that he is as at first.

(16) When there are no 'former days'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 19b

Raba added: R. Eliezer's reason[1] is that the text continues, Because his consecration was defiled,[2] i.e., because he undertook the naziriteship during defilement.

Abaye raised an objection [from the following]. [If a man says,] 'I wish to be a nazirite for one hundred days,' and contracts ritual defilement at the very beginning of them, it might be held that this makes void [the naziriteship], but the text reads, 'And the former days shall be void'; there must first be 'former days', and here there are no former days. If he contracts ritual defilement at the end of the hundred days, it might be held that this makes void [the naziriteship], but the text reads, 'And the former days shall be void', implying that there are later days too' and here there are no days to come. If he contracts ritual defilement on the ninety-ninth day. It might be held[3] that he should not make void the naziriteship, but the text reads, And the former days shall be void, implying that there must be days to come, and here there are both former days[4] and days to come. Now it cannot be said that we are dealing with a ritually defiled person who makes a nazirite vow, since the account begins. "'I wish to be a nazirite for a hundred days," and he contracts defilement at the very beginning of them,' and yet it says that former days are necessary. — This indeed is a refutation [of 'Ulla].

R. Papa asked Abaye: Regarding the days that are required, is it sufficient if one has passed and [the defilement occurs when] the second begins, or must two pass, and [the defilement occur when] the third has begun? — [Abaye] had no information on the subject, so [Rab Papa] went and asked Raba. He replied: The text reads they shall fall away.[5]

Both the word 'days', and the [plural] form, 'they shall fall away' are needed,[6] for if the Divine Law had used the word 'days' and not the form 'they shall fall away', it might have been held that it is sufficient if one day has passed, and the second begun,[7] and so the Divine Law wrote 'they shall fall away'. And if it had used the form 'they shall fall away', and not [the plural] 'days', it might have been held that even one day is sufficient, and so the Divine Law uses the word days.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN VOWS A NAZIRITESHIP OF LONG DURATION AND COMPLETES IT AND THEN ARRIVES IN THE LAND [OF ISRAEL], BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT HE IS A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HIS NAZIRITESHIP COMMENCES AGAIN AS AT FIRST. IT IS RELATED THAT QUEEN HELENA,[8] WHEN HER SON WENT TO WAR,[9] SAID: 'IF MY SON RETURNS IN PEACE FROM THE WAR, I SHALL BE A NAZIRITE FOR SEVEN YEARS. HER SON RETURNED FROM THE WAR, AND SHE OBSERVED A NAZIRITESHIP FOR SEVEN YEARS. AT THE END OF THE SEVEN YEARS, SHE WENT UP TO THE LAND [OF ISRAEL][10] AND BETH HILLEL RULED THAT SHE MUST BE A NAZIRITE FOR A FURTHER SEVEN YEARS. TOWARDS THE END OF THIS SEVEN YEARS, SHE CONTRACTED RITUAL DEFILEMENT, AND SO ALTOGETHER SHE WAS A NAZIRITE FOR TWENTY-ONE YEARS. R. JUDAH SAID: SHE WAS ONLY A NAZIRITE FOR FOURTEEN YEARS.[11]

GEMARA. The first clause reads: BETH SHAMMAI SAY [HE] IS A NAZIRITE FOR THIRTY DAYS, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT HIS NAZIRITESHIP COMMENCES AGAIN AS AT FIRST. May we say that the ground on which they differ is that Beth Shammai are of the opinion [Rabbis declared] foreign lands [to be unclean] on account of their soil,

---

(1) For making a distinction between one who undertook the naziriteship in purity, and an unclean person who undertakes a naziriteship, where we require former days'.

(2) Num. VI, 12.

(3) Since there is only one day to come and not 'days'.
(4) Viz., part of the ninety-ninth and the hundredth.
(5) Meaning that two complete days must have passed. So Rashi.
(6) [The text could have read 'And he shall hallow his head on that day apart from the previous days' (Tosaf.)]
(7) Because part of a day is like the whole. The reading of Rashi and the Bah. has been adopted. Our printed text reads: It might have been held that it is necessary for two days to have passed and the third begun, and so the Divine Law used the form 'they shall fall away'. Thus the inference conflicts with the usually accepted interpretation of Raba's reply. The objection to it is that the Gemara above appears to imply that the two phrases are weak forms needing to be strengthened by the appearance of both. The printed text, on the other hand, at the last treats 'days' as a strong form.
(8) Queen of the Adiabene, circa 40 C.E., Mother of Izates, V. Josephus Ant. XX, 2-4.
(9) Possibly the war of the restoration of Artabanus as King of Parthia. Ibid. 3.
(10) Also recorded by Josephus 2, 5.
(11) V. the Gemara, infra.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 20a

whilst Beth Hillel are of the opinion that it was on account of the air also?[1] — No! All are agreed that the enactment was because of the soil, but Beth Shammai are of the opinion that we penalise[2] him by [the imposition of] a naziriteship of normal length, whilst Beth Hillel are of the opinion that he is penalised from the very commencement of his naziriteship.

IT IS RELATED THAT QUEEN HELENA etc.: The question was asked: [Does R. Judah agree that] she contracted impurity, in which case his statement concurs with Beth Shammai's opinion,[3] or does he 'deny that she contracted impurity, in which case his statement concurs with Beth Hillel's opinion?[4]

Come and hear: SHE WENT UP TO THE LAND [OF ISRAEL]. AND BETH HILLEL RULED THAT SHE MUST OBSERVE NAZIRITESHIP FOR A FURTHER SEVEN YEARS ETC. Now if you assume that she did contract impurity, and that [R. Judah] concurs with Beth Shammai, then the text should read: R. Judah said: She was a nazirite for fourteen years and thirty days, instead of [simply] fourteen years! There has also been taught in the same sense: R. Judah quoting R. Eliezer said that the implication of the verse, And this is the law of the Nazirite [on the day when the days of his separation are fulfilled][5] is: the Torah says that if he contracts ritual defilement on the day of his fulfilment, he is to be given the law of a nazirite.[6]

MISHNAH. WHERE TWO GROUPS OF WITNESSES GIVE EVIDENCE CONCERNING A MAN, ONE SAYING THAT HE VOWED TWO NAZIRITESHIPS[7] AND THE OTHER THAT HE VOWED FIVE, BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT THE EVIDENCE IS CONFLICTING [IN TOTO], AND NO NAZIRITESHIP OPERATES AT ALL, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT 'FIVE' INCLUDES 'TWO', SO THAT HE BECOMES A NAZIRITE FOR TWO PERIODS.

GEMARA. The Mishnah disagrees with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: R. Ishmael, the son of R. Johanan b. Beroka, said that Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel did not dispute that five included two where there are two groups of witnesses one saying five and one two. Where they differed was when of a single pair of witnesses, one says five and the other two, Beth Shammai averring that this is conflicting evidence, whilst Beth Hillel maintained that [here also], five includes two.

Rab said: All are agreed that where [the witnesses] enumerate [the evidence is conflicting]. R. Hama said to R. Hisda: What does this mean? It cannot mean that one says it was five and not two, and the other it was two and not five, for they plainly contradict each other. And if again it means that one says, [he vowed] a first and a second time, and the other a third, fourth and fifth time.

(1) Hence according to Beth Hillel the defilement which he has contracted by being on a foreign land is much more severe.

(2) For incurring a defilement instituted by the Rabbis though not recognised by the Torah.

(3) That only thirty days are required, the second seven years being due to the impurity.

(4) That seven years are required, the fourteen being made up of the original seven, and the seven imposed because of absence from Palestine.

(5) Num. VI, 13.

(6) The implication is probably that R. Judah does require a nazirite who becomes defiled in his last day to observe thirty more days, so we are entitled to make an inference from the brief form 'fourteen years as is done in the text.

(7) So Tosaf. Rashi renders 'years of naziriteship'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 20b

[we may ask,] what need is there for the se cond to repeat [the first two]?[1] Seeing that [the second witness] testifies to the more stringent ones,[2] then he certainly testifies to [the first two] that are less stringent?[3] — In the West[4] they maintain that where there is enumeration, there is no conflicting [of evidence].[5]

CHAPTER IV

MISHNAH. SHOULD A MAN SAY, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HIS COMPANION OVERHEAR AND ADD 'I TOO,' [AND THE NEXT REPEAT] 'I TOO', ALL BECOME NAZIRITES. IF THE FIRST IS RELEASED [FROM HIS VOW],[6] ALL ARE [AUTOMATICALLY] RELEASED, BUT IF THE LAST ONE IS RELEASED, HE ALONE BECOMES FREE, THE OTHERS REMAINING BOUND [BY THEIR VOWS]. IF HE SAYS, 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HIS COMPANION OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'LET MY MOUTH BE AS HIS MOUTH AND MY HAIR AS HIS HAIR, HE [ALSO] BECOMES A NAZIRITE. [IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HIS WIFE OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'I TOO,' HE CAN DECLARE HER [VOW] VOID,[7] BUT HIS OWN REMAINS BINDING. [IF A WOMAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HER HUSBAND OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'I TOO,' HE CANNOT DECLARE [HER VOW] VOID.[8] [IF HE SHOULD SAY IN CONVERSATION WITH HIS WIFE,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE. WHAT ABOUT YOU?' AND SHE ANSWER 'AMEN,' HE CAN DECLARE HER [VOW] VOID, BUT HIS OWN REMAINS BINDING. [BUT IF SHE SHOULD SAY,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, WHAT ABOUT YOU?' AND HE ANSWER, 'AMEN,' HE CANNOT DECLARE [HER VOW] VOID.[8]

GEMARA. Resh Lakish was [once] seated in the presence of R. Judah the Prince,[9] and discoursed as follows: [They become nazirites by saying 'I too,'] only if they all attach their vows within the interval of a break in conversation.[10] And how much is the length of such an interval? The time sufficient for a greeting. And how much is this? The time taken by a disciple to greet his master.[11] [R. Judah] said to him: You do not allow a disciple any further opportunity.[12]

(1) There is still no conflict, although there is enumeration, for seeing that, etc.

(2) To the existence of a third, fourth, and fifth naziriteship.

(3) In this paragraph, the reading of Tosaf. has been adopted. [According to printed texts, render: 'Why was it necessary to state this; seeing that Rab ruled to this effect in a more stringent case, would he not rule likewise in a less stringent one?' The stringent case referred to is where the enumeration is made by two groups of witnesses, in which case Rab ruled (in a passage which Rashi cites from J. Sanh. V) that the evidence is conflicting.]

(4) I.e., in Palestine, cf. J. Sanh. V, 2.

(5) He is therefore required to observe two naziriteships, Rab's opinion being wrong. The second witness is not really contradicting the first, and thus there are two witnesses to the first two naziriteships.

(6) Under certain conditions release can be obtained from a vow on application to an authorised Rabbi. V. Ned. 78a.

(7) The husband has the power of confirming or declaring void his wife's vows 'on the day that he hears them' — v. Num. XXX, 9.

(8) For by attaching his vow to hers, he incidentally confirms her vow.

(9) Nesi'ah; R. Judah II.

(10) I.e., the normal interval between the remarks of two persons holding a conversation. Lit., 'within the time sufficient for (the next) remark.' The point of Resh Lakish's statement is that we do not consider the remark 'I too' as being like one of the 'allusions' of the beginning of the first chapter, but its validity depends solely on its being obviously a reference to the original vow. Hence it must follow it, as though they were part of the same conversation.

(11) I.e., to say the three words, Shalom 'aleka Rabbi; 'Peace unto Thee, Master'.

(12) Both to greet his master and say 'I too', ואני (one word), if he wishes to. According to Rashi, R. Judah agreed with Resh Lakish, but other commentators consider that he disagreed with Resh Lakish and allowed four words as the interval in this case.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 21a

The same principle[1] is taught in the following passage: If a man says, 'I intend to be a nazirite' and his companion overhear and delay long enough to make a break in conversation and then add, 'I too,' he himself is bound [by his vow], but his companion is free. The length of a break in conversation is the time taken by a disciple to greet his master.[2]

May we say that the following [passage] corroborates [Resh Lakish's statement]? [For the Mishnah says:] SHOULD A MAN SAY, I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HIS COMPANION OVERHEAR AND ADD 'I TOO,' [AND THE NEXT REPEAT] 'I TOO,' [ALL BECOME NAZIRITES];[3] and carries the series no further?[4] — Do you expect the Tanna to string together a list like a pedlar [crying his wares]?[5] Then why should he not mention ['I too'] once only and leave us to infer the rest?[6] — He could very well have done so, but because in the clause that follows he says: IF THE FIRST IS RELEASED [FROM HIS VOW] ALL ARE [AUTOMATICALLY] RELEASED, BUT IF THE LAST ONE IS RELEASED, HE ALONE BECOMES FREE, THE OTHERS REMAINING BOUND [BY THEIR vows], thus [using a phrasing which] implies that there is a person [or persons] in between, he mentions 'I too,' twice [in the opening clause].[7]

The question was propounded: Does each link up with his immediate predecessor, or do they all link up with [the utterance of] the first? The practical issue involved is whether the process can be continued indefinitely. If each links up with his immediate predecessor, then it would be possible to continue indefinitely,[8] but if they all link up with the first one, the process could not continue for longer than the space of a break in conversation.[9] What then is the law? — Come and hear: SHOULD A MAN SAY, I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE,' AND HIS COMPANION OVERHEAR AND ADD 'I TOO,' [AND THE NEXT REPEAT] 'I TOO'; without going further; and so we can infer that they all link up with the first,[10] for if it be the case that each links up with his immediate predecessor, why should not the phrase 'I too' be repeated many more times? — Do you expect the Tanna to string together a list like a pedlar [crying his wares]? Then let him mention ['I too'] once, and indicate all the rest in this manner?[11] — Since he continues: IF THE FIRST IS RELEASED [FROM HIS VOW] ALL ARE [AUTOMATICALLY] RELEASED, BUT IF THE LAST ONE IS RELEASED, HE ALONE BECOMES FREE, THE OTHERS REMAINING BOUND [BY THEIR VOWS; thus using a phrasing] which implies that there are persons in between, he therefore mentions 'I too' twice [in the first clause].[12]

Come and hear: IF THE FIRST IS RELEASED [FROM HIS VOW] ALL ARE RELEASED; [it follows that] only [on the release of] the first are the others released, but not [on the release of] an intermediate one, and so we can infer that they all link up with the first one![13] — I can reply that actually each links up with his immediate predecessor, and the reason [why the first is mentioned] is that [the Tanna] desired to say that 'ALL ARE RELEASED', and if he had stated this in connection with the intermediate one there would have remained the first one unreleased; therefore he preferred to mention in this connection the first.[14]

Come and hear: IF THE LAST ONE IS RELEASED, HE ALONE BECOMES FREE, THE OTHERS REMAINING BOUND [BY THEIR VOWS]. [Now the reason for this is presumably because] there are no others following him,[15] but if the second one, who is followed by others, [were released,] these would also become free,[16] and so we can infer that each links up with his immediate predecessor! — In point of fact, I can argue that they all link up with the first, and that the expression 'THE LAST' [as used by the Tanna] refers to those in between [also], but because he speaks [in the preceding clause] of 'THE FIRST', he refers to the others as THE LAST.[17]

Come and hear [the following passage] where it is taught explicitly: If the first is released they all become free; if the last is released he alone becomes free, the rest remaining bound; if an intermediate one is released, those following him also become free, but those preceding him remain bound. This shows conclusively that each links up with his immediate predecessor.[18]

[IF HE SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE' AND HIS COMPANION OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'LET MY MOUTH BE AS HIS MOUTH AND MY HAIR AS HIS HAIR,' [HE ALSO BECOMES A NAZIRITE]: Simply because he says, 'LET MY MOUTH BE AS HIS MOUTH AND MY HAIR AS HIS HAIR,' does he become a nazirite?[19]

---

(1) According to the other commentators: To the same effect as Resh Lakish, as opposed to R. Judah.

(2) Tosef. Naz. III, 1.

(3) Which would show' that only two can attach themselves.

(4) The argument is: If the Tanna merely desired to state that any number of persons can become nazirites by saying 'I too', he should not have stopped after two. Since he does stop, he must have had a different aim, viz to fix the length of the interval that can elapse and the formula still be valid. The interval is naturally that of a break in conversation.

(5) Although the expression 'I too', is repeated only twice, there may be no limit to the number of persons who could become nazirites in this

(6) Viz. That it is possible for any number to become nazirites by saying 'I too'.

(7) To provide the extra person in between the first and the last.

(8) Since any number of persons could become nazirites by each saying 'I too' within the specified interval after his immediate predecessor's declaration, 'I too'.

(9) I.e., within the specified interval after the first person's declaration, 'I intend to be a nazirite.'

(10) So that not more than two persons can say 'I too', consecutively and became nazirites.

(11) I.e., since the Tanna does not wish to give a long list, why should he mention even as many as two persons. All the information is contained in the first statement that by saying 'I too' it is possible to become a nazirite.

(12) Thus indicating the person in between the first and the last.

(13) For otherwise all those who had spoken after any one of the intermediate ones should he released with that one.

(14) But in point of fact if any one of the others is released, all the succeeding ones are released.

(15) There are in existence several readings of the text at this point. We have adopted that of Tosaf., which keeps very close to the usual printed text.

(16) The Mishnah is taken to mean: Only if it is the last one who is released, do all the others remain bound by their vows.

(17) But his intention is to exclude only the first.

(18) The Gemara frequently attempts to obtain a ruling from a Mishnah even though a Baraitha states explicitly what is required.

(19) Which would seem to show that if he says, 'My mouth is a nazirite,' he is a nazirite.

Does not this conflict with the following passage? [It has been taught that if a man says,] 'Let my hand be a nazirite,' or 'Let my foot be a nazirite,' his words are of no effect. [But if he says,] 'Let my head be a nazirite,' or 'let my liver be a nazirite,' he becomes a nazirite. The rule is: If the organ is one upon which life depends, he becomes a nazirite![1] — Rab Judah replied: [In the Mishnah] he is presumed to say, 'Let my mouth be as his mouth as regards wine,' or 'my hair as his hair as regards shearing.'[2] [IF A WOMAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, AND HER HUSBAND OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'I TOO,' HE CANNOT DECLARE [HER VOW] VOID: The question was propounded: Does the husband nullify[3] or does he only terminate [the vow]?[4] The difference is of importance for deciding the case of a woman who vows to be a nazirite and whose companion overhears and says, 'I too,' and whose husband subsequently hears of the matter and declares her vow void. If it be decided that he nullifies [her vow], her companion is also set free,[5] but if it be decided that he merely terminates [the vow], she herself will be released, and her companion will remain bound [to the vow]. What, then, is the law? Come and hear: [IF A WOMAN SAYS,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE,' AND HER HUSBAND OVERHEARS AND ADDS, 'I TOO,' HE CANNOT DECLARE [HER VOW] VOID. Now, should you suppose that the husband terminates [the vow], he ought to be able to declare his wife's [vow] void, whilst remaining bound himself.[6] It surely follows, therefore, [from the fact that he cannot do so] that a husband nullifies [his wife's vow]?[7] — Not at all! Strictly speaking, the husband [in general] only terminates [the wife's vow,] and here by rights he should be able to declare her vow void,[8] and the reason why he cannot do so is because his saying, 'I too,' is equivalent to saying, 'I confirm it for you,'[9] and so if he [later] seeks to have the confirmation revoked,[10] he can then declare [his wife's vow] void,[11] but not otherwise.

Come and hear: If a woman undertakes a nazirite vow and sets aside the requisite animal [for the sacrifice] and her husband subsequently declares [the vow] void, then, if the animal was one of his own, it can be put to pasture with the herd,[12] but if it was one of hers, the sin-offering is to be left to die [etc.].[13] Now, should you suppose that the husband nullifies [the vow, the animal] should become profane?[14] It surely follows, therefore, that the husband [merely] terminates [the vow]?[15] — In point of fact, we can maintain that the husband nullifies [the vow], but [the animal remains sacred] for this reason. Since she no longer requires atonement,[16] [the case] is similar to that of a sin-offering whose owner has died, and it is a tradition that sin-offerings whose owners have died are left to die.

Come and hear: If a woman undertakes a nazirite vow and then drinks wine or is defiled by a corpse, she is to receive forty stripes.[17] What exactly are the circumstances? If her husband has not declared [the vow] void, would it have been necessary to tell us this?[18] Obviously, then, her husband must have declared [the vow] void.[19] Now if you suppose that the husband nullifies [the vow], why should she receive forty stripes?[20] It surely follows, therefore, that the husband [only] terminates [the vow]?[21] — In point of fact, we can maintain that the husband really nullifies [the vow], but [in this case] because we are told in the clause that follows: If her husband declares it void without her being aware of it, and she drinks wine or is defiled by a corpse, she does not receive the stripes;[22]

---

(1) But it is possible to live without hair or mouth-hence the conflict. Tosef. Naz. III, 1.

(2) Thus expressly referring to the obligations of a nazirite. The statement is now very similar to the 'allusions' of Chapter I.

(3) Lit., 'uproot'.

(4) I.e., is it as though the vow had never been made, or is the vow only cancelled from the time it is declared void? V. Num, XXX, 7ff.

(5) Since the words 'I too' have no object of reference.

(6) She would be free hereafter, whilst he would remain a nazirite. Because the termination, while freeing her, in no wise affects the force of his 'I too'.

(7) And so he cannot declare his wife's vow void, for by so doing, he would incidentally retract his own vow, which is forbidden.

(8) Since the termination of her naziriteship does not affect his own naziriteship.

(9) Once the husband has confirmed his wife's vow, he can no longer declare it void; v. Num. XXX, 16.

(10) By applying to a Sage.

(11) And he himself will remain a nazirite.

(12) I.e., it ceases to be sacred and may be returned to the fold.

(13) I.e., it is still sacred, v. infra 24a.

(14) For the naziriteship is null, and the animal was set aside in error, v. infra 31a.

(15) And the animal is actually a sin-offering, but cannot be offered since the woman is no longer a nazirite.

(16) For she has ceased to be a nazirite; thus Rashi and the printed text, Tosaf. and other MSS. read: 'Since she requires atonement,' i.e., because she denied herself wine (v. supra 19a).

(17) Infra 23a.

(18) Viz., that she receives stripes. For she is no different from any other nazirite.

(19) After his wife drank wine.

(20) For we now see that she was not really a nazirite when she violated the rules of naziriteship.

(21) And though she is no longer a nazirite, she must receive stripes for drinking wine when she was a nazirite,

(22) Infra 23a.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 22a

we are also taught in the first clause that, [if her husband does not annul her naziriteship,] she does receive [stripes].[1]

Come and hear: If a woman undertakes a nazirite vow and contracts ritual defilement, and then her husband declares [the vow] void, she is to bring a bird as a sin-offering, but not one as a burnt-offering.[2] Now if you suppose that the husband terminates [the vow], she ought also to bring a bird as a burnt-offering?[3] — What then would you have us think? That [the husband] nullifies [the vow]? Then she ought not to bring a bird as a sin-offering either?[4] — That is so. Here, however, we are being given the opinion of R. Eleazar ha-Kappar, for it has been taught: R. Eleazar ha-Kappar Berabbi said: [It may be asked,] Why does Scripture say, [And make atonement for him] for that he sinned by reason of the soul?[5] For against what soul has he sinned? [The reply is,] however, that because he denied himself wine, he is called a sinner. If then this man who denied himself wine only is called a sinner, how much more so is this true of one who is ascetic in all things![6]

Come and hear the following where it is taught explicitly: If a woman vows to be a nazirite and her companion overhears and says, 'I too, and then the husband of the first woman declares [her vow] void, she is released [from her vow] but her companion remains bound.[7] From this it follows that the husband terminates [the vow].[8] R. Simeon however says[9] that where [her companion] says to her, 'I undertake the same [obligation] as you,' both become free.

---

(1) Though here it is obvious,

(2) A nazirite who contracts defilement must bring one bird as a burnt offering and one as a sin-offering, (cf. Num. VI, 10, 11); v. supra 19a.

(3) For the husband does not affect the period before his declaration that the vow is to be void.

(4) Since she was not really a nazirite when she violated her vow.

(5) For notes v. supra p. 64.

(6) Thus she must bring a sin-offering even though the husband nullifies the vow, because she had denied herself wine.

(7) Tosef. Naz. III, 5.

(8) Continuation of the cited Baraitha.

(9) Since otherwise both women should become free together.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 22b

Mar Zutra, the son of Rab Mari said: The same problem is raised here as was raised by Rami b. Hama.[1] For Rami b. Hama wished to know the effect of saying, 'Let these [victuals] be, as far as I am concerned, as the flesh of [this] peace-offering.'[2] Does a man, in thus linking one thing with another, refer to the original state [of the subject of comparison],[3] or to its ultimate state?[4]

But surely [the two cases] do not bear comparison?[5] For when he says in that case, 'Let these [victuals], as far as I am concerned, be as the flesh of this peace-offering,' [the fact remains that] even though once the blood is sprinkled, this may be eaten outside [the Temple precincts, yet it] is still sacred.[6] In our case, on the other hand, if we suppose that she has the ultimate state in mind, then the husband [of the first woman] has declared [the vow] void![7] Some consider that our problem and that of Rami b. Hama are undoubtedly identical.[8]

If [a woman] says to her [companion], 'I intend to be a nazirite in your wake,'[9] what would the law be? Does 'in your wake' [mean,] 'I intend to follow in your wake in every respect,' so that she becomes free, or does it refer to her [companion's] condition before her husband declared [the naziriteship] void, so that she remains bound?

Come and hear: If a woman vows to be a nazirite and her husband overhears and adds, 'I too',[10] he cannot declare [her vow] void. Now should you assume that when he says, 'I intend to follow in your wake,'[11] he has in mind the original situation,[12] why should he not be able to declare her [vow] void, whilst allowing his own to remain? Does it not follow, therefore, that what he refers to is the situation with all its developments, and so [it is only when] he himself [is involved that he] cannot declare [the vow] void,[13] but where [another] woman says, 'I intend to follow in your wake,' she would also be freed?[14] — This is not the case. In point of fact, he may be referring to the original situation, but in this case, when he says, 'I too,' it is as though he says. 'I confirm it for you,' and so if he consults [a wise man] in order to have his ratification upset, he will be able to declare [her vow] void, but not otherwise.

[IF HE SHOULD SAY IN CONVERSATION WITH HIS WIFE,] 'I INTEND TO BE A NAZIRITE, WHAT ABOUT YOU'[15] AND SHE ANSWER' AMEN,' HE CAN DECLARE HER [VOW] VOID, BUT HIS OWN REMAINS BINDING: The following passage seems to contradict this statement. [If a man says to his wife,] 'I intend to be a nazirite. What about you?'[16] if she answers 'Amen,' both become bound [to their vows],[17] but otherwise both are free, because he made his vow contingent on hers?[18] — Rab Judah replied: You should [emend the Baraitha to] read, He can declare her [vow] void, but his own remains binding.

Abaye said: It is even possible to leave the reading intact. The Baraitha supposes him to say to her, 'I intend to be a nazirite with you,' thus making his vow contingent on her vow;[19]

---

(1) I.e., whether the vow of the second woman remains binding or not depends, not on the precise force of the husband's declaration that a vow is void, but on the alternatives enunciated by Rami b. Hama.

(2) This might not be eaten before its blood was sprinkled on the altar, but could be eaten afterwards.

(3) Here, the flesh before the sprinkling of the blood; so that the victuals indicated would also become forbidden. This problem is treated differently in Ned. 11b (q.v.).

(4) After the sprinkling of the blood, when the flesh may be eaten. Similarly in the case of the second woman the problem is: — Did she contemplate the original state of the first woman, so that she remains a nazirite, or did she also consider the possibility of the husband declaring the vow void, when her own would also become void. As the Baraitha says that her vow remains binding we may also infer that in Rami b. Hama's case the original state was meant and the victuals are forbidden. The word צננא used to convey the idea of a final state is usually taken from the root meaning 'cold', i.e., 'when it had cooled down'. L. Goldschmidt suggests that it may be derived from a Syriac word 'zenana' meaning the savour of roast meat,' and refers to the time when the flesh is prepared for food.

(5) And therefore the solution of the one problem obtained from the Baraitha, does not give the solution of the other.
(6) For it may be eaten for a limited period only, viz.: two days and one night (v. Zeb. V, 7), and so the victuals might also be subject to this restriction. Hence whichever of the alternatives enunciated by Rami is adopted, there is a restriction on the victuals.
(7) And the vow of the second will not operate. But she must have meant something by the vow, and we are therefore forced to conclude that she had only the original state in mind. Thus the solution of this problem given by the Baraitha affords no clue to the solution of Rami's problem.
(8) These do not consider the distinction drawn above decisive, for the woman may have considered it sufficient if she abstained from wine until the husband of the first one declared the vow void, and so once more we have two alternatives.
(9) And then the vow of the other is declared void.
(10) This is taken to be the same as 'in your wake', for since the husband can declare her vow void and the outcome of her vow is in his power, he would be referring to her ultimate as well as her present state.
(11) And all the more if he says, 'I too', to his wife.
(12) And he himself is not affected by any change in her vow.
(13) Since he would be freeing himself.
(14) If the husband annuls the first woman's vow'.
(15) Lit., 'I intend . . . and thou . . .'
(16) Lit., 'I intend . . . and thou.'
(17) But our Mishnah empowers him to declare her vow void,
(18) Tosef. Naz. III.
(19) Thus he cannot declare her vow void, for he would be nullifying his own at the same time.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 23a

whilst our Mishnah supposes him to say to her, 'I intend to be a nazirite. What about you?'[1] And so he may declare her [vow] void but his own remains binding.

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN UNDERTAKES A NAZIRITE VOW AND THEN DRINKS WINE OR IS DEFILED BY A CORPSE,[2] SHE IS TO RECEIVE FORTY [STRIPES]. IF HER HUSBAND DECLARES IT VOID WITHOUT HER BEING AWARE OF IT, AND SHE DRINKS WINE OR IS DEFILED BY A CORPSE, SHE DOES NOT RECEIVE THE FORTY [STRIPES]. R. JUDAH SAID: ALTHOUGH [IT MAY BE A FACT THAT] SHE DOES NOT RECEIVE THE FORTY [STRIPES]. SHE SHOULD RECEIVE THE STRIPES INFLICTED FOR DISOBEDIENCE.[3]

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: [In the verse,] Her husband hath made them void,' and the Lord will forgive her,[4] Scripture is speaking of a woman whose husband has declared her [vow] void without her knowledge .[5] [intimating] that she requires atonement and forgiveness. When R. Akiba reached this verse. he wept: 'For if one who intended to take swine's flesh and by chance takes lamb's flesh[6] stands in need of atonement and forgiveness, how much more so does one who intended to take swine's flesh and actually took it, stand in need thereof'?[7]

A similar inference may be made [from the verse]. Though he know it not, yet is he guilty and shall bear his iniquity.[8] If of one who intends to take lamb's flesh and by chance takes swine's flesh, for instance in the case of [one who ate] a slice of fat concerning which it was uncertain whether it was of the permitted or the forbidden kind,[9] the text says, 'and shall bear his iniquity', how much more so [is this true] of one who intended to take swine's flesh and actually took it.

Isi b. Judah interpreted [the verse], Though he know it not, yet is he guilty and shall bear his iniquity, [as follows]. If of one who intends to take lamb's flesh and takes swine's flesh for instance in the case of [one who eats one of] two slices[10] of fat one of which is forbidden fat and the other permitted fat, the text says, and shall bear his iniquity, how much more so [is this true] of one who intended to take swine's flesh and actually took it. For this let them grieve that are fain to grieve.

But what need is there for all these cases?[11] — They are all necessary. For if we had only been told about the woman, [we might have thought] that atonement and forgiveness are necessary there,[12] because from the very beginning her intention was to do that which is forbidden, whereas with the slice concerning which it is uncertain whether it is forbidden or permitted fat, where his intention was to do that which is permitted,[13] [we might have thought] that atonement and forgiveness are not necessary. If, on the other hand, we had only been told about the latter, [we might have thought] that it is because there is a definite prohibition involved,[14] whereas the woman whose husband has declared her [vow] void and whose act is [consequently] permitted, should not require atonement and forgiveness. Again, if we had only been told of these two cases, we might have thought that in these two cases atonement and forgiveness suffice, since the presence of something forbidden is not definite, whereas with two slices of which one is forbidden and one permitted fat, where the presence of something forbidden is definite, atonement and forgiveness do not suffice.[15] We are therefore told that there is no difference.

Rabbah b. Bar Hana, quoting R. Johanan, said:[16] The verse, For the ways of the Lord are right, and the just do walk in them,' but transgressors do stumble therein,[17] may be illustrated by the following example. Two men roast their paschal lambs.[18] One eats it with the intention of fulfilling the precept[19] and the other eats it with the inten tion of having an ordinary meal. To the one who eats it to fulfil the precept [applies]. 'And the just do walk in them,' but to the one who eats it to have an ordinary meal [applies], 'but transgressors do stumble therein'. Resh Lakish remarked to him: Do you call such a man wicked? Granted that he has not fulfilled the precept in the best possible manner, he has at least carried out the passover rite. Rather should it be illustrated by two men, each of whom had his wife and his sister staying with him. One chances upon his wife and the other chances upon his sister. To the one who chances upon his wife [applies], 'And the just do walk in them', and to the one who chances upon his sister [applies], 'but transgressors do stumble therein'.

But are the cases comparable? We speak [in the verse] of one path, whereas here [in the example given] there are two paths.[20] Rather is it illustrated by Lot when his two daughters were with him.[21] To these [the daughters], whose intention it was to do right,[22] [applies], 'the just do walk in them', whereas to him [Lot] whose intention it was to commit the transgression [applies], 'but transgressors do stumble therein'.

But perhaps it was his intention also to do right? — [Do not think this for a moment, for][23] R. Johanan has said: The whole of the following verse indicates [Lot's] lustful character. And Lot lifted up[24] is paralleled by, And his master's wife lifted up her eyes upon;[25] 'his eyes' is paralleled by, for she hath found grace in my eyes[26] 'and beheld' is paralleled by, And Shechem the son of Hamor beheld her;[27] 'all the kikar ['plain'] of the Jordan' by For on account of a harlot, a man is brought to a kikar ['loaf'] of bread,'[28] and 'fat' it was well watered everywhere' by, I will go after my lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and my drink.[29]

But [Lot] was the victim of compulsion?[30] — It had been taught on behalf of R. Jose son of R. Honi that the dot[31] over the letter waw [_ 'and'] in the word U-bekumah ['and when she arose'][32] occurring in [the story of] the elder daughter, is to signify that it was her lying down that he did not notice, but he did notice when she arose. But what could he have done, since it was all over? — The difference is that he should not have drunk wine the next evening.

Raba expounded as follows: What is the significance of the verse, A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city;

---

(1) Thus his own naziriteship is independent of hers.

(2) Intentionally.

(3) These were administered at the discretion of the court and are Rabbinical in origin.
(4) Num. XXX, 13.
(5) Since the same words in verse 9 refer to a woman who knows that her husband has declared her vow void.
(6) I.e., the woman who thought to drink wine during her naziriteship, but was not really a nazirite.
(7) Tosef. Naz. III, 6.
(8) Lev. V, 27. with reference to the offering of a guilt-offering.
(9) Heb. Heleb, 'suet'. Animal fat used in the sacrificial rite. This fat might not be eaten even in the case of ordinary animals.
(10) Isi b. Judah holds that this guilt-offering was not brought if he ate a slice concerning which it was doubtful whether it was permitted or forbidden fat, but only if he ate one of two slices and did not know if it was the permitted or the forbidden slice.
(11) R. Akiba's interpretation of the nazirite woman and the two cases of one who may have eaten forbidden fat.
(12) The passage in Lev. V. 27, says that a guilt-offering must be brought for 'atonement' and the offender will be 'forgiven'.
(13) He thought it was the permitted kind of fat.
(14) For the slice might in fact be forbidden fat.
(15) And there must also be expiation. A guilt-offering could be brought only to make as atonement for an unintentional transgression.
(16) The whole passage from here to the next Mishnah occurs again in Hor. 10b-12b; for fuller notes v. Hor. (Sonc. ed.). p. 73.
(17) Hosea XIV, 20.
(18) The passover was to be eaten as the final course of the evening meal when the guests had already eaten their fill.
(19) To eat the passover offering. V. Ex. XII, 8.
(20) Each has done a different act.
(21) After the destruction of Sodom. V. Gen. XIX, 32.
(22) Viz., to preserve the human species, for they imagined that the rest of mankind had perished. V. Gen. XIX, 31.
(23) Inserted from 'En. Jacob.
(24) Gen. XIII, 10.
(25) E.V., 'east' her eyes; Potiphar's wife to Joseph. Gen. XXXIX, 7.
(26) E.V., 'For she pleaseth me well'; Samson of the Philistine woman. Jud. XIV, 3.
(27) Gen. XXXIV, 2.
(28) Prov. VI, 16.
(29) Hosea II, 7. 'Watered' and 'drink' are from the same root.
(30) His daughters first made him drunk.
(31) One of the puncta extraordinaria. V. Ges. K. Grammar, sec. 5n.
(32) 'And the first born went in and lay with her father; and he knew not when she lay down,' nor 'when she arose'. Gen. XIX, 33.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 23b

And their contentions are like the bars of a castle?[1] 'A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city', refers to Lot who separated from Abraham,[2] 'And their contentions are like the bars of a castle', for he gave rise to contentions [between Israel and Ammon][3] for An Ammonite or a Moabite shall not enter into the assembly of the Lord.[4]

Raba and some say R. Isaac, expounded as follows: What is the significance of the verse, He that separateth himself seeketh his own desire and snarleth against all sound wisdom?[5] 'He that separateth himself seeketh his own desire' refers to Lot. 'And snarleth [yithgale'] against all sound wisdom', tells us that his disgrace was published [nithgaleh][6] in the Synagogues and Houses of Study, as we have learnt: An Ammonite and a Moabite[7] are forbidden [in marriage] and the prohibition is perpetual.[8]

'Ulla said: Both Tamar[9] and Zimri[10] committed adultery. Tamar committed adultery and gave birth to kings and prophets.[11] Zimri committed adultery and on his account many tens of thousands of Israel perished.[12]

R. Nahman b. Isaac said: A transgression performed with good intention is better than a precept performed with evil intention.[13] But has not Rab Judah, citing Rab, said: A man should always occupy himself with the Torah and [its] precepts, even though it be for some ulterior motive,[14] for the result will be that he will eventually do them without ulterior motive?[15] — Read then: [A transgression performed with good intention is] as good as a precept performed for an ulterior motive, as it is written, Blessed above women shall Jael be, the wife of Heber the Kenite. Above women in the tent shall she be blessed,[16] and by 'women in the tent', Sarah, Rebecca, Rachel and Leah are meant.[17]

R. Johanan said: That wicked wretch [Sisera] had sevenfold intercourse [with Jael] at that time, as it says. At her feet he sunk, he fell, he lay,' etc.[18] But she derived pleasure from his intercourse? — R. Johanan said:[19] All the favours of the wicked are evil to the righteous, for it says, Take heed to thyself that thou speak not to Jacob either good or bad.[20] Now [that he was not to speak] bad we can understand, but why was he not to speak good? Thus it may properly be inferred that the good of such a one is an evil. The above text [states]: Rab Judah, citing Rab, said: A man should always occupy himself with the Torah and [its] precepts, even though it be for some ulterior motive, for the result will be that he will eventually do them without ulterior motive. For as reward for the forty-two sacrifices which the wicked Balak offered,[21] he was privileged to be the progenitor of Ruth, for R. Jose son of R. Hanina has said that Ruth was descended from[22] Eglon, [the grandson of Balak,][23] king of Moab.

R. Hiyya b. Abba, citing R. Johanan. said: How do we know that the Holy One, blessed be He, does not withhold the reward even for a decorous expression? The elder daughter [of Lot] called her son Moab[24] and so the All-Merciful One said [to Moses]:[25] Be not at enmity with Moab, neither contend with them in battle.[26] Only war was forbidden, but they might be harassed. The younger daughter, on the other hand, called [her son's] name Ben-Ammi[27] and so it says, Harass them not, nor contend with them.[28] They were not to be harassed at all.

R. Hiyya b. Abin said: R. Joshua b. Korha said: A man should always be as alert as possible to perform a precept, for as reward for anticipating the younger by one night, the elder daughter [of Lot]

---

(1) Prov. XVIII, 19.

(2) Thereby offending him. V. Gen. XIII, 11.

(3) Corrected from Hor. 10b. Thus Moab and Ammon, Lot's descendants, were barred from intermarriage with Israel because Lot offended Abraham. [The text here reads: 'like bolts and the palace.' I.e., the contentions constitute the bolts which bar the admission of Ammon and Moab into the house of Israel — the palace.]

(4) Deut. XXIII, 4.

(5) Prov. XVIII, 1.

(6) A play on the Hebrew roots indicated.

(7) But not an Ammonite woman or a Moabite woman.

(8) Yeb. 76b.

(9) With her father-in-law, Judah. V. Gen. XXXVIII, 14.

(10) With the Midianitish woman. V. Num. XXV, 14.

(11) David and his descendants were of the tribe of Judah; Amos and Isaiah are traditionally said to have been of the tribe of Judah. V. Sot. 10b.

(12) In the plague; v. Num. XXV, 9.

(13) For an example see below.

(14) לשמה 'for its own sake'.
(15) An example of this occurs below.
(16) Jud. V, 24.
(17) The word 'tent' occurs in connection with each of these (Tosaf.). Rashi omits Rebecca and says that the reference is to the fact that each of the other three gage their handmaidens to their husbands with ulterior motive.
(18) The words 'he sunk', 'he fell', occur three times each, and the words 'he lay' once. Jud. V. 27.
(19) Var. lec., R. Johanan said R. Simon b. Yohai said (Hor. 10b).
(20) Gen. XXXI, 29.
(21) On the occasion of Balaam's attempt to curse Israel. V. Num. XXIII-XXIV.
(22) Lit., 'the granddaughter of', cf. Tosaf.
(23) Inserted from Hor. 10b.
(24) Lit., 'of my father'.
(25) Inserted from Hor. 10b.
(26) Deut. II, 9.
(27) Lit., 'son of my people'. A less shameless appellation.
(28) Deut. II, 19.

was privileged to appear in the genealogical record of the royal house of Israel, four generations[1] earlier.

MISHNAH. IF A WOMAN MAKES A NAZIRITE VOW AND SETS ASIDE THE REQUISITE ANIMAL [FOR THE SACRIFICE] AND HER HUSBAND SUBSEQUENTLY DECLARES [THE VOW] VOID, THEN, IF THE ANIMAL WAS ONE OF HIS OWN, IT CAN BE PUT TO PASTURE WITH THE HERD,[2] BUT IF IT WAS ONE OF HERS, THE SIN-OFFERING IS TO BE LEFT TO DIE, THE BURNTOFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED AS AN [ORDINARY] BURNTOFFERING, AND THE PEACE-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED AS AN [ORDINARY] PEACE-OFFERING. THIS [LAST], HOWEVER, MAY BE EATEN FOR ONE DAY [ONLY],[3] AND REQUIRES NO LOAVES.[4] IF SHE HAS A LUMP SUM OF MONEY[5] [SET ASIDE FOR THE PURCHASE OF SACRIFICES]. IT IS TO BE USED FOR FREE-WILL OFFERINGS;[6] IF EARMARKED MONEY,[7] THE PRICE OF THE SIN-OFFERING IS TO BE TAKEN TO THE DEAD SEA;[8] THE USE OF IT IS FORBIDDEN, BUT INVOLVES NO MALAPPROPRIATION;[9] FOR THE SUM SET ASIDE FOR THE BURNT-OFFERING, A BURNT-OFFERING IS TO BE PROVIDED, THE USE OF WHICH INVOLVES MALAPPROPRIATION;[10] WHILST FOR THE SUM SET ASIDE FOR THE PEACE-OFFERING, A PEACE-OFFERING IS TO BE PROVIDED, WHICH MAY BE EATEN FOR ONE DAY [ONLY] AND REQUIRES NO LOAVES.[11]

GEMARA. Who is the Tanna [of our Mishnah, who intimates] that the husband is not liable for the wife's [sacrifices]?[12] — R. Hisda said: It is the Rabbis, for if you suppose it is R. Judah [then since he is liable,] why should [the animals] be sent to pasture with the herd?[13] For it has been taught: R. Judah says: A man [who can afford to do so] must offer the rich man's sacrifice[14] on his wife's behalf, as well as all other sacrifices for which she may be liable. For thus does he write to her [in the marriage settlement, viz.: I shall pay] every claim you may have against me from before up to now.[15]

Raba said: It may even be R. Judah. [The reply to R. Hisda's objection being that the husband] is liable only for something which she needs, but not for something which she does not need.[16] Another version [of the above discussion is as follows]. Who is the Tanna [of our Mishnah]? — R. Hisda said: It is R. Judah,[17] [the husband, however,] being liable only for something that she needs, but not for something that she does not need.[18] For if it were the Rabbis [do they not say that] he is not liable for her [sacrifices] at all?[19] The only possible interpretation of the liability [implicit in the Mishnah][20] would be that he transferred [the animals] to her, but on transference it becomes her own property.[21]

---

(1) Obed, Jesse, David and Solomon through Ruth; while Rehoboam was a son of Naamah, the Ammonitess.

(2) I.e., it ceases to be sacred and may be returned to the fold.

(3) Until midnight, the period allowed for a nazirite offering (v. Zeb. V, 6); whereas an ordinary peace-offering could be eaten for two days and a night. (V. Ibid. V, 7).

(4) Whereas a nazirite offering does require them. V. Num. VI, 15.

(5) I.e., if the sums to be spent on the separate sacrifices were still unspecified.

(6) Burnt-offerings, whose hides became the perquisite of the priests.

(7) I.e., divided into portions for the separate sacrifices.

(8) 'Taken to the Dead Sea' is the usual Talmudic mode of saying, 'not applied to any useful purpose.'

(9) I.e., there is no penalty. For the rules regarding the unauthorised use of sacred property. v. Lev. V, 15.

(10) Heb. me'ilah, the diversion of sacred or priestly things to secular or lay uses. E.V. uses 'trespass', but 'mal-appropriate' expresses better the sense of the Hebrew word (cf. N.E.D.).

(11) Thus earmarked money is treated in the manner prescribed for sacrifices.

(12) By declaring that if she sets aside his animals without his consent, they do not remain sacred at all.

(13) They ought to remain sacred, because she had the right to take them.

(14) Where the kind of sacrifice to be offered depends upon a man's means. e.g., Lev. V, 7.

(15) This clause is taken as referring to sacrifices for which she may have become liable after the betrothal. This shows that in R. Judah's opinion the husband is liable. Other versions read instead of the last sentence: For thus does she write (in the receipt for her marriage-settlement when she claims it after divorce): And every claim that I may have had against you before now (is hereby discharged).

(16) And his annulment of her vow shows that there was no need for her sacrifice, which thereby loses its sanctity.

(17) Who says that a man must offer a rich man's sacrifice for his wife.

(18) And therefore when the husband declares the vow void, the animals lose their sanctity.

(19) What need therefore for the rule? She cannot make his animal sacred at all.

(20) Which in saying that the animals are sent to pasture only if the husband declares her vow void, implies that if he does not declare it void, they become sacred.

(21) And this ease is considered in the second clause of the Mishnah: 'BUT IF IT WAS ONE OF HERS. Thus this interpretation on the view of the Rabbis is impossible.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 24b

Raba said: It may even be the Rabbis, for even when he transfers it to her [his intention is] to provide something which she needs, but he does not transfer it to provide something she does not need.[1]

IF IT WAS ONE OF HERS, THE SIN-OFFERING IS TO BE LEFT TO DIE, THE BURNT-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED: Where did she get it from, seeing that it has been affirmed that whatever a woman acquires becomes her husband's? — R. Papa replied: She saved it out of her housekeeping money.[2] Another possibility is that it was given to her by a third person with the proviso that her husband should have no control over it.

THE BURNT-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED AS AN [ORDINARY] BURNT-OFFERING, AND THE PEACE-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED [etc.]. Samuel said to Abbahu b. Ihi: 'You are not to sit down[3] until you explain to me the following dictum: 'The four rams that do not require loaves [as an adjunct of the sacrifice] are the following: — his, hers, and those after death and after atonement!'[4] — [He explained as follows:] 'Hers' is the one referred to [in our Mishnah]. 'His' is referred to in the following [Mishnah]: For we learnt: A man is able to impose a nazirite vow on his son, whereas a woman cannot impose a nazirite vow on her son. Consequently, if [the lad] polls himself [within the period of his naziriteship] or is polled by his relatives, or if he protests[5] or his relatives protest on his behalf, then if a lump sum was set aside, it is to be used to provide free-will offerings, and if earmarked monies, the price of the sin-offering is to be taken to the Dead Sea, [the use of it is forbidden, but involves no malappropriation];[6] for the price of the burnt-offering, a burnt-offering is to be provided and this can involve malappropriation, whilst for the price of the peace-offering, a peace-offering is to be provided which may be eaten for one day only and requires no loaves.[7] Whence do we know [this of] 'the one after death'? — For we have learnt: Should a man set aside money for his nazirite offerings, the use of it is forbidden but involves no malappropriation since it may all be expended on the purchase of a peace-offering.[8] If he should die, monies not earmarked are to be used for providing freewill-offerings, whilst with regard to earmarked monies, the price of the sin-offering is to be taken to the Dead Sea, the use of it is forbidden but involves no malappropriation; for the price of the burnt-offering, a burnt-offering is to be provided, and this does involve malappropriation; whilst for the price of the peace-offering, a peace-offering is to be provided, which may be eaten for one day [only] and requires no loaves.[9]

[That] 'the one after atonement' [requires no loaves] we learn by a process of reasoning. For the reason that the 'one after death' does not [require loaves] is because it is not eligible for the purposes of atonement,[10] but then neither is the 'one after atonement' eligible for the purpose.[11]

But are there no more? What of the following [passage that Levi taught]:[12] All other peace-offerings of a nazirite, not slaughtered in the prescribed manner[13] are fit [for the altar], but they do not count as fulfilment of their owner's obligation;[14] they may however be eaten for one day [only],[15] and do not require loaves or [the gift of] the shoulder[16] [to the priest]?[17] — The enumeration [of Samuel] includes [animals offered] in the prescribed manner but omits those not [offered] in the prescribed manner.

['If he should die,] and have a lump sum of money it is to be used for providing free-will offerings'.[18]

---

(1) The transference is thus provisional, and this case is not the same as that of the second clause.

(2) Lit., 'scraped it off her dough.'

(3) [Lit., 'sit on your legs.' with reference to their custom of sitting on the ground with the legs crossed under them, v. Orah Mishor, a.l.]

(4) 'After atonement' means an animal that was lost and replaced and then found. The others are explained below.

(5) Even if be does not poll.

(6) Added with R. Akiba Eger (d. 1837) from the Mishnah text infra 28b.

(7) Infra 28b. For the various terms used see our Mishnah (24a) and notes.

(8) A peaceoffering could not be malappropriated until after the ritual sprinkling of its blood, v. Me'il, 6b. For the other offerings extra money could be provided.

(9) Me'il III, 2.

(10) For the owner is dead and no further atonement is necessary.

(11) Because the atonement has already been made, and so here too loaves are not required.

(12) So Bah, cf. Men. 48b.

(13) The prescribed peace-offering for a nazirite is a ram of the second year.

(14) And he must offer another beast.

(15) V. supra p. 85, n. 10.

(16) V. Num. VI, 19.

(17) V. Tosef. Naz. IV.

(18) Quoted from Mishnah Me'il, cited above.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 25a

But money for a sinoffering is included in it?[1] — R. Johanan said: This is a traditional rule[2] relating to the nazirite. Resh Lakish said: The Torah says, [in the verse] Whether it be any of their vows or any of their-freewill offerings.[3] This indicates that anything left over from [money subscribed for] vowed offerings is to be spent on freewill-offerings.[4]

Now if we accept the view of R. Johanan who says that this ruling concerning the nazirite is traditional, we can understand why it [applies only to] a lump sum of money and not to earmarked money.[5] But on Resh Lakish's view that it is derived from the verse, Whether it be any of their vows, or any of their freewill offerings, why should it apply only to money in a lump sum? Surely it should also apply to earmarked monies? — Raba replied: You cannot maintain that the reference is also to specific monies, for a Tanna of the School of R. Ishmael has already given a [different] decision [as follows]: The verse, Only thy holy things which thou hast and thy vows,[6] speaks of the offspring and substitutes[7] of sacred animals. What is to be done with them? Thou shalt take [them] and go unto the place which the Lord shall choose.[6] It might be thought [from this] that they are to be taken to the Temple and kept without food and drink until they perish, but Scripture continues, And thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh and the blood,[8] as much as to say, as you do with the burnt-offering so do with its substitute,[9] as you do with the peace-offering so do with its offspring [and substitutes]. It might further be thought that the same applies to the offspring [and substitutes] of a sin-offering and the substitute of a guiltoffering,[10] but the text states 'only' [precluding these].[11] The above is the opinion of R. Ishmael. R. Akiba says that it is unnecessary [to use this argument for the guilt-offering], for it says. It is a guiltoffering,[12] which shows that it retains its status.[13]

[The above passage] states: 'It might be thought that they are to be taken to the Temple and kept without food and drink until they perish, but Scripture continues, And thou shalt offer thy burntofferings, the blood and the flesh.' But why [should one think this]; seeing that only in regard to the sin-offering is there a traditional teaching that it is left to perish?[14] — Were it not for the verse, it might have been thought that the offspring of the sin-offering [may be allowed to perish] anywhere,

---

(1) Should not this be 'taken to the Dead Sea'?

(2) Lit., 'a halachah'.

(3) Lev. XXII, 18.

(4) And here there is money left over from the naziriteship money.

(5) For presumably the tradition mentioned one and not the other.

(6) Deut. XII, 26. The words in themselves are superfluous.

(7) Substitution of a sacrifice was not allowed, and if it was attempted both animals became sacred, v. Lev. XXVII, 33.

(8) Deut. XII, 27.

(9) I.e., sacrifice it in the same way. 'Offspring' is not mentioned in connection with the burnt-offering or guilt-offering because these are males.

(10) That they be offered as guilt-offerings or sin-offerings.

(11) The particle, רק only, is one of the particles invariably considered to indicate a limitation of the rule that follows it.

(12) Lev. V, 19.

(13) The word הוא 'it is', is emphatic in the Hebrew'. Hence if money is ear-marked for a sin-offering etc., it cannot be used for voluntary offerings, but must be used in the manner described in the Mishnah.

(14) Tem. 21b.

whilst the offspring of other sacred animals [are left to perish] in the Temple only;[1] hence we are told that they are not [left to perish at all].

It also states above: It might further be thought that the same applies to the offspring [and substitutes] of sin-offerings and the substitute of a guilt-offering, but the text states 'only' precluding [these]. But what need is there of a verse, for there is a traditional ruling that the offspring of a sin-offering is to perish? — That is so; but the verse is required for the guilt-offering.

But for the guilt-offering, too, there is a traditional ruling viz., that wherever [an animal] if intended as a sin-offering, is left to perish, if intended as a guilt-offering it is allowed to pasture [until a blemish appears]?[2] — If we had only the traditional ruling, it might be thought that the traditional ruling [is indeed so], but [nevertheless] should someone sacrifice [the animal] he would incur no guilt by so doing; hence the verse tells us that if someone should sacrifice it, he has transgressed a positive precept.[3]

'R. Akiba says that it is unnecessary [to use this argument for the guilt-offering] for it says, It is a guilt-offering, which shows that it retains its status.' What need is there of the verse, since we have it as a traditional ruling that wherever [an animal] if intended as a sin-offering is left to perish ' if intended as a guilt-offering it is to pasture [until a blemish appears]? — That is so, and the verse is only necessary for [the case described by] Rab. For R. Huna. citing Rab, said: If a guilt-offering which had been relegated to pasture[4] [until a blemish appears] was slaughtered as a burntoffering, it is a fit and proper [sacrifice].[5] This is true only if it was [already] relegated, but not otherwise, for the verse says, 'It is [a guilt-offering,' implying] that it retains its status.[6]

The master said [above]: 'This is a traditional ruling[7] concerning the nazirite.' Are there then no other spheres [in which it applies]? Has it not been taught: 'And all others[8] required by the Torah to offer a nest of birds,[9]

---

(1) Since it says, 'Thou shalt take (them) etc.'

(2) When it would be sold and the money devoted to sacred purposes.

(3) Viz.: that only the others are to be sacrificed and not this one. A prohibition inferred from a positive command, as here, is called a positive precept.

(4) Lit., 'was transferred (from the category of guilt-offering) to pasture.'

(5) And the flesh may be burnt on the altar.

(6) As a guilt-offering and if offered as a burntoffering, the flesh is not fit for the altar.

(7) That no account is taken of the presence of money that should have gone to purchase a sin-offering, but the whole of the money if in a lump sum is utilised for freewill-offerings.

(8) As well as the nazirite.

(9) E.g., a leper who must offer on recovery a sin-offering and a burnt-offering, and may provide birds if he cannot afford animals; v. Lev. XIV, 21ff.

who set aside money for this purpose and then desire to use it to provide an animal[1] as sin-offering, or as burnt-offering can do so. Should such a one die and leave a lump sum of money, it is to be used to provide freewill-offerings'?[2] — He mentions the nazirite, meaning also [to include] those required to offer birds whose case is similar,[3] but excluding [the following case]. For it has been taught: If a man, under an obligation to offer a sin-offering, says, 'I undertake to provide a burnt-offering,' and sets aside money saying, 'This is for my obligation,' should he then desire to provide from it either a sin-offering or a burnt-offering he must not do so.[4] Should he die and leave a lump sum of money, it is to be taken to the Dead Sea.[5]

R. Ashi said: In the statement[6] that moneys earmarked must not be used [for freewill-offerings], you should not presume [the meaning to be] that he said, 'This [portion] is for my sin-offering, this for my burnt-offering, and this for my peace-offering,' for even if he says simply, '[All] this is for my sin-offering, burnt-offering and peace-offering,' it counts as earmarked money.[7] Others say that R. Ashi said, Do not presume that he must say, '[All] this is for my sin-offering, burnt-offering and peace-offering,' for even if he says, '[All] this is for my obligation,' it is regarded as earmarked money.[8] Raba said: Though we have said that a lump sum of money is to be used for freewill-offerings, yet if the money for the sin-offering becomes separated from the rest,[9] all is regarded as earmarked. [

---

(1) If they become more affluent.

(2) Thus the ruling applies to these as well as to the nazirite.

(3) Since their obligation to provide both a sin-offering and a burnt-offering springs from a single source, and they are not separate obligations.

(4) Here the obligations are separate. What he must do is to add more money and buy both animals at the same time (Tosaf.).

(5) The traditional ruling does not apply here, and there is now no remedy since a sin-offering cannot be brought after death. Tosef. Me'il. I, 5.

(6) In the various texts quoted above.

(7) And must not be used for freewill-offerings.

(8) And the sums required are regarded as unspecified only if he put them aside without stating their purpose.

(9) E.g., if sufficient for a sin-offering is lost, the rest is to be used as to half for a peace-offering and half for a burnt-offering.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 26b

. It has been taught in agreement with Raba: [If a nazirite says,] 'This is for my sin-offering and the remainder for the rest of my nazirite obligations,' [and then dies,] the money for the sinoffering is to be cast into the Dead Sea, and the rest is to be used, half to provide a burnt-offering, and half, a peace-offering.[1] The law of malappropriation applies to the whole of it,[2] but not to any separate part of it.[3] [If he says,] 'This is for my burnt-offering and the remainder for the rest of my nazirite obligations,' [and then dies,] the money for the burnt-offering is to be used for a burntoffering and it can suffer malappropriation, whilst the rest is to be used to provide freewill-offerings and can suffer malappropriation.[4] Rab Huna, citing Rab, said that [our rule][5] applies only to money, but animals would be regarded as earmarked.[6] R. Nahman added that the animals that would be regarded as earmarked would only be unblemished animals, but not blemished ones.[7] [Three] bars of silver, on the other hand, would be counted as earmarked.[8] R. Nahman b. Isaac, however, considered even bars of silver as unspecified,[9] but not [three] piles of timber.[10]

R. Shimi b. Ashi asked R. Papa: What is the reason [for the distinctions made] by these Rabbis?[11] Is it that they interpret money',[12] as meaning neither animals, nor bars of silver, nor piles of timber [as the case may be]? For if so, they should also say money' but not birds.[13] Should you reply that they do make this distinction too, how comes R. Hisda to say that birds[14] do not become earmarked except [when earmarked] by the owner at their purchase, or by the priest at their preparation,[15] seeing that our tradition is that only money [is regarded as unspecified]? —

---

(1) In agreement with Raba.

(2) Since the money for the burnt-offering can suffer malappropriation.

(3) Since the money for the peace-offering may be in the part used, and a peace-offering does not suffer malappropriation.

(4) Adopting an emendation of the Wilna Gaon after the text of Tosef. Me'il. I, 5. Our texts read: 'The law of malappropriation applies to the whole of it, but not to any part of it.' This cannot be the case since all the rest is to be used for freewill burnt-offerings which suffer malappropriation.

(5) Regarding the disposition of a lump sum of money.

(6) Even if they were not the animals that a nazirite must bring (v. Tosaf. and Asheri for various explanations of the distinctions). Possibly the reason is that it can be assumed that he intended to exchange each one for one of the animals suitable for his sacrifice.

(7) He would have to sell these first in order to purchase others, and would not think of them In terms of animals but in terms of money.

(8) He would not sell the silver to buy animals, in order not to lose on the two transactions, but would await his opportunity to barter for animals.

(9) They are easily convertible into money at a very small loss, and would therefore naturally be thought of in terms of money.

(10) Which would not be sold, in order to avoid loss, but bartered for animals.

(11) Rab, R. Nahman and R. Nahman b. Isaac.

(12) In the phrase, 'money in a lump sum,' occurring in our Mishnah and the other texts.

(13) I.e., they should regard birds as specified.

(14) Lit., 'nests', i.e., the pair of birds brought as offerings; cf. e.g., Lev. XII, 8.

(15) But not by the mere purchase. Hence if the owner dies, the pair is indeterminate and becomes a freewill-offering in the cases considered, contrary to the assumption that this is true only of money.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 27a

He replied: But on your own argument [that all these are unspecified], how are we to explain [the following] which we learnt: R. Simeon b. Gamaliel said that if [a nazirite] brings three animals and does not say explicitly [what they are for], the one which is fit to be a sin-offering shall be offered as a sin-offering,[1] the one fit to be a burnt-offering[2] shall be offered as a burnt-offering and the one fit for a peace-offering[3] shall be offered as a peace-offering?[4] Now why should this be so? Do you not say that animals are not regarded as earmarked?[5] — [R. Shimi b. Ashi][6] rejoined: [The explanation is this.[7] In R. Hisda's case] the reason[8] is because the All-merciful has said, And she shall take [two turtle doves, the one for a burnt-offering and the other for a sin-offering],[9] and also, And [the priest] shall take [the one for a sin-offering and the other for a burntoffering[10] showing that they can be earmarked] either when the owner takes them or when the priest offers them. [In R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's case] too

---

(1) The ewe lamb; v. Num, VI, 14.

(2) The one year old male lamb.

(3) The two year old ram.

(4) Infra 45a.

(5) Surely therefore we must regard them as earmarked and take the expression 'money' as excluding all else from being regarded as unspecified.

(6) So Asheri. According to Rashi, R. Papa is still speaking; but v. Yoma 41a where the statement following is attributed to R. Shimi b. Ashi.

(7) R. Shimi now assumes that unless there has been explicit earmarking, everything is unspecified, and he therefore goes on to explain why R. Hisda allows the priests to earmark the birds and the reason for R. Simeon b. Gamaliel's statement.

(8) That it is possible for the priest to sacrifice the birds even if the owner does not specify them, although birds are otherwise specified.

(9) Lev. XII, 8.

(10) Lev. XV, 30.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 27b

would it be possible to say that the one that should be the sin-offering is to be the burnt-offering, seeing that one is female and the other male?[1]

R. Hamnuna raised an objection: Do we really say that an animal which has a blemish is regarded as unspecified? Come [then] and hear [the following]: What are the circumstances in which a man is permitted to poll at the expense of his father's naziriteship? Suppose his father had been a nazirite and had set apart the money for his nazirite sacrifices and died, and [the son then] said, 'I declare myself a nazirite on condition that I may poll with my father's money,'[2] [then he may do so].[3] If he leaves unspecified moneys, they fall to [the Temple treasury to provide] freewillofferings. If there were animals set apart, the sin-offering is left to die, the burnt-offering is to be offered as a burnt-offering, and the one for a peace-offering is to be offered as a peaceoffering.[4] Is not this the case even if the animal is blemished?[5] — No; only if it is without blemish. But if a blemished one is unspecified, why is money' mentioned?[6] The text ought to read: If he left a blemished animal, it is to be used to provide freewill-offerings?[7] — That is precisely what it means. For a blemished animal is made sacred purely in respect of the price it will bring; and this price is [included in] 'money'.

Raba raised an objection: [It has been taught: The expression] his offering[8] [signifies] that he can discharge his obligation with his own offering but not with that of his father. It might be thought [that this means merely] that an obligation with regard to a serious offence cannot be discharged with an offering set aside by his father for a less serious offence or vice versa, whereas he could discharge an obligation entailed by a less serious offence, with an offering set aside by his father for a similar offence, or [an obligation] entailed by a more serious offence, with [an offering set aside for] a similar offence. Hence Scripture repeats the words, his offering,[9] [to show that] he can discharge an obligation with his own offering but not with that of his father [even in this instance]. Again, it might be supposed that [the rule that] he cannot discharge an obligation with his father's offering applies only if it is an animal set aside by his father albeit for an offence of a similar degree of gravity, since [there is a similar rule] that a man cannot make use of his father's [nazirite] animal for polling in respect of [his own] naziriteship,[10] but that he could discharge his obligation with motley set aside by his father, and even [transfer it] from a serious offence to one less serious or vice versa, for a man can make use of his father's [nazirite] money for polling in respect of [his own] naziriteship,

---

(1) And so formal earmarking is not necessary, but in all other cases it is necessary and without it they are regarded as unspecified. Thus R. Shimi b. Ashi disagrees with the Rabbis mentioned above. Maim. Yad Neziruth IX, 5, also rules in agreement with this interpretation of R. Shimi's views.

(2) I.e., buy the sacrifices that must be offered on polling with my father's money.

(3) The quotation is incomplete. V. the Tosef. and cf. infra 30b.

(4) Tosef. Naz. III, 9.

(5) Viz., that it is left to die or to be used to provide a burnt-offering or a peace-offering, as the case may be. How then does R. Nahman (R. Hamnuna's contemporary) distinguish between blemished and unblemished animals?

(6) In the opening clause of the Baraitha.

(7) This is a finer distinction than the one between animals and money.

(8) Used with reference to the sacrifice a ruler must bring if he sins in error, Lev. IV. 23.

(9) Used also with reference to the goat brought as a sacrifice by one of the common people who sins in error, Lev. IV, 28.

(10) V. infra 30a.

always provided that it is a lump sum and not earmarked money.[1] Hence Scripture repeats the expression his offering[2] [a third time, to show] that he can discharge his obligation with his own offering, but not with that of his father [even in this instance]. It might be thought, further, [that we can only lay down] that he is unable to discharge an obligation with money set aside by his father, albeit for an offence of equal gravity, but that he could discharge his obligation with an offering he himself has set apart, [even transferring it] from a less serious to a more serious offence, or vice versa. Hence Scripture uses the expression, his offering . . . for his sin,[3] to show that the offering must be for the particular sin. It might be argued, again, that [we can only lay down that] he cannot discharge his obligation with an animal which he has set apart for himself whether for an equally serious offence or for an offence of a different degree of gravity, since [we know that] if he sets aside an animal [to make atonement] for [the offence of eating] forbidden fat,[4] and [by mistake] sacrifices it for [the offence of eating] blood, or vice versa, he has not been guilty of malappropriation and [consequently] has not procured atonement;[5] but [we might think] that he could discharge his obligation with money which he set aside for himself whatever be the degree of gravity of the offence, since [we know that] if he set aside money for himself [to make atonement] for [the offence of eating] forbidden fat, and used it [by mistake] for [the offence of eating] blood, or vice versa, he is guilty of malappropriation and [consequently] does procure atonement,[6] and so Scripture says, for his sin[7] to show that the offering must be for the particular sin [even in such circumstances].[8] Now this passage refers simply to an animal.[9] Surely this includes even a blemished one?[10] — Not at all. One without blemish is meant. But if a blemished animal is regarded as not earmarked, why go on to speak of money set aside by his father when it could speak of an animal which has a blemish [instead]?[11] — That is precisely [what is meant], for the only use [of such an animal for sacrificial purposes] is for the price it will bring, and this price is 'money'. MISHNAH. IF ONE OF THE KINDS OF BLOOD[12] HAS BEEN SPRINKLED ON HER BEHALF, [THE HUSBAND] CAN NO LONGER ANNUL [THE VOW].[13] R. AKIBA SAYS, IF EVEN ONE OF THE ANIMALS HAS BEEN SLAUGHTERED ON HER BEHALF, HE CAN NO LONGER ANNUL [THE VOW]. THE ABOVE IS TRUE ONLY IF SHE IS POLLING[14] [AFTER OBSERVING THE NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY, BUT IF SHE IS POLLING AFTER RITUAL DEFILEMENT, HE CAN [STILL] ANNUL [THE VOW], BECAUSE HE CAN SAY, 'I CANNOT TOLERATE AN UNSEEMLY WIFE,'[15] RABBI[16] SAYS THAT HE CAN ANNUL [HER VOW] EVEN IF SHE IS POLLING [AFTER OBSERVING THE NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY, SINCE HE CAN AVER THAT HE CANNOT TOLERATE A WOMAN WHO IS POLLED.

GEMARA. Our Mishnah does not agree with R. Eliezer, for R. Eliezer says that polling is a bar [to the drinking of wine],[17] and since she has not polled, she is forbidden wine, and so since she is [still] unseemly, he is able to annul [her vow].

---

(1) Ibid.

(2) Used also with reference to the lamb brought as a sacrifice by one of the common people who sins in error, Lev. IV, 32.

(3) 'He shall bring for his offering a goat . . . for his sin which he hath sinned.' Lev. IV, 28.

(4) Heb Heleb.

(5) He is guilty of malappropriation if he transfers an object in error from sacred to profane use, This cannot be done with animals intended for the altar, but only with objects intended for general temple use. Since an animal intended for the altar cannot be transferred from sacred to profane use, it cannot possibly become his again, and so once he sets aside an animal for the offence of eating forbidden fat, he cannot gain possession of it in order to use it to atone for his offence of eating blood.

(6) For malappropriating sacred money renders it his and it can now be used for any purpose he likes; v. note 2.

(7) Lev. IV, 18. The phrase used is the same as that from which the last inference was drawn. Rashi uses the verse in Lev. IV, 16, 'as concerning his sin'; but the parallel quotation in Ker. 27b is identical with this.

(8) And so, although the transference in error was valid, he is unable to transfer it at will. This Baraitha occurs also in Ker. 27b.

(9) In mentioning that a nazirite cannot poll with his father's animal.

(10) And so we see that a blemished animal is regarded as specific.

(11) And so make the distinction finer.

(12) I.e., the blood of one of the sacrifices.

(13) And her hair must be shorn.

(14) I.e., bringing the sacrifices at the polling.

(15) A teetotaller. This is based on the verse in Zach. IX, 1. 'New wine shall make the maids flourish.'

(16) Some versions read R. Meir.

(17) No wine may be drunk until after polling.

Our Tanna [on the other hand] takes the view that as soon as the blood is sprinkled on her behalf, she is permitted to drink wine and as a result she is no longer unseemly, whilst R. Akiba is of the opinion that even though the animal has only been slaughtered, he is no longer able to annul [her vow] since destruction of sacred property [would result].[1]

R. Zera objected: But why [should there necessarily be destruction of sacred property, in such a case]? Could not the blood be sprinkled as though it were some other [sacrifice],[2] when it would be permitted to eat the flesh? For has it not been taught: If the lambs prepared for the Festival of Assembly[3] were slaughter ed as though they were a different sacrifice, or before or after the proper time,[4] the blood is to be sprinkled and the flesh can be eaten. Should [the mistake] occur on a Sabbath, [the blood] is not to be sprinkled, but if [notwithstanding] it is sprinkled, [the sacrifice] is acceptable, but the portions belonging to the altar must be roasted after dark?[5] — The reply is this. If it were the burntoffering or the peace-offering that had been slaughtered,[6] this [procedure] could be followed, but [the Mishnah] assumes that the sin-offering was slaughtered first [as could in fact happen], for we have learnt: If [the nazirite] polls after [the sacrifice] of any one of the three, his duty is performed.[7]

THE ABOVE IS TRUE ONLY IF SHE IS POLLING [AFTER OBSERVING THE NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY, BUT IF SHE IS POLLING AFTER RITUAL DEFILEMENT, HE CAN [STILL] ANNUL [THE VOW], BECAUSE HE CAN SAY, 'I CANNOT TOLERATE AN UNSEEMLY WIFE.' RABBI SAYS THAT HE CAN ANNUL [HER VOW] EVEN IF SHE IS POLLING [AFTER OBSERVING THE NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY, SINCE HE CAN AVER THAT HE CANNOT TOLERATE A WOMAN WHO IS POLLED. The first Tanna [does not allow this objection] because she can wear a wig, but Rabbi considers that [the husband] will not be satisfied with a wig because of the dirt [it collects].[8]

MISHNAH. A MAN IS ABLE TO IMPOSE A NAZIRITE VOW ON HIS SON,[9] BUT A WOMAN CANNOT IMPOSE A NAZIRITE VOW ON HER SON. IF[10] [THE LAD] POLLS HIMSELF OR IS POLLED BY HIS RELATIVES, OR IF HE PROTESTS OR HIS RELATIVES PROTEST ON HIS BEHALF, THEN IF [THE FATHER] HAD SET ASIDE AN ANIMAL [FOR THE SACRIFICE], THE SIN-OFFERING IS LEFT TO DIE, THE BURNT-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED AS AN [ORDINARY] BURNT-OFFERING, AND THE PEACE-OFFERING IS TO BE OFFERED AS AN [ORDINARY] PEACE-OFFERING. THIS [LAST], HOWEVER, MAY BE EATEN FOR ONE DAY [ONLY], AND REQUIRES NO LOAVES. IF HE HAD UNSPECIFIED MONIES, THEY FALL [TO THE TEMPLE TREASURY] TO PROVIDE FREEWILL-OFFERINGS: WHILST WITH REGARD TO EARMARKED MONIES, THE PRICE OF THE SIN-OFFERING IS TO BE TAKEN TO THE DEAD SEA, IT BEING NEITHER PERMISSIBLE TO USE IT, NOR POSSIBLE TO MALAPPROPRIATE IT; FOR THE PRICE OF THE BURNT-OFFERING, A BURNT-OFFERING IS TO BE PROVIDED AND THIS CAN SUFFER MALAPPROPRIATION, WHILST FOR THE PRICE OF THE PEACE-OFFERING, A PEACEOFFERING IS TO BE PROVIDED, WHICH MAY BE EATEN FOR ONE DAY ONLY AND REQUIRES NO LOAVES.

GEMARA. A man can [subject the son to a nazirite vow], but not a woman. Why? — R. Johanan said: It is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite.[11] R. Jose son of R. Hanina,

---

(1) For the flesh could not be eaten. R. Akiba, however, would admit her right to drink wine after the sprinkling of the blood.

(2) Lit., 'be sprinkled not in its own name.'

(3) Pentecost.

(4) [In the absence of a fixed calendar there was always the possibility of the festival sacrifice being offered on a day earlier or later, and this Baraitha explains the procedure to be followed should such an incident occur.]
(5) And thus we see that an animal slaughtered as though it were some other sacrifice need not be destroyed, but can be eaten.
(6) On behalf of the nazirite woman.
(7) And so if the husband is allowed to annul the vow, this sin-offering would have to be destroyed as is asserted by R. Akiba, like all sin-offerings the owners of which no longer stand in need of atonement. Infra 45a.
(8) And so in order not to provoke ill-feeling between them, the husband should be allowed to annul the vow and save her from polling.
(9) Until what age wall be discussed in the Gemara.
(10) [So Tosaf. and Asheri, omitting כיצד ('how?') in our texts which Bertinoro however explains: How (shall the offerings be treated) if the lad polls himself, etc.?]
(11) And requires no other justification. A tradition has the force of a Biblical injunction.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 29a

citing Resh Lakish, said: So as to train him to [carry out his] religious duties.[1] If so, why should not a woman also be able to do so? — [Resh Lakish] holds that it is a man's duty to train his son to [carry out his] religious duties, but not a woman's duty to train her son.[2] Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite vow, we can understand why he can do this with his son but not with his daughter,[3] but according to Resh Lakish, ought not the same to be true of a daughter? — He holds that it is his duty to train his son, but not to train his daughter.

Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, we can understand why he can impose naziriteship [on his son], but not [ordinary] vows;[4] but on Resh Lakish's view, why should he not be able [to impose ordinary] vows too? — [The Mishnah] argues progressively.[5] Not only is it his duty to train [his son] by [imposing upon him] vows which do not make him unseemly, but it is even his duty to impose a naziriteship, although this will make him unseemly.

Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, we can understand how it teaches: IF HE PROTESTS OR HIS RELATIVES PROTEST ON HIS BEHALF [THE NAZIRITESHIP IS VOID];[6] but on Resh Lakish's view, as cited by R. Jose son of R. Hanina, have relatives the power to tell [the father] not to instruct [the son] in religious duties? — He holds that [the son] objects to any training which is undignified.[7]

Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, we can understand why [the boy] is permitted to poll,[8] although [this means] rounding [the corners of the head];[9] but on Resh Lakish's view as cited by R. Jose son of R. Hanina that it is in order to train him to [carry out his] religious duties, he would be [transgressing] in rounding [the corners of his head]?[10] — [Resh Lakish] holds that the rounding of the whole head[11] is [prohibited only by] a rabbinic enactment,[12] and since training is [a duty] imposed by the Rabbis, [the duty as to] training imposed by the Rabbis can overrule the rabbinic enactment against rounding [the whole head].

Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, we can understand why [the boy] is allowed to poll and offer the sacrifices [of a nazirite]; but on the view of Resh Lakish as cited by R. Jose son of R. Hanina that it is in order to train him to [carry out his] religious duties, he would be bringing profane [animals] into the Temple court?[13] — [Resh Lakish] holds that [the prohibition against the bringing of] ordinary animals into the Temple-court is not Scriptural.[14]

Now on R. Johanan's view that it is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, we can understand why if he contracts ritual defilement, he may bring an offering of a pair of birds, which the priest will eat after pinching off [the head];[15] but on Resh Lakish's view, as cited by R. Jose son of R. Hanina, he will be eating carrion?[16] — [Resh Lakish] agrees with R. Jose son of R. Judah that fowl do not require to be [ritually] slaughtered in Torah law, and considers that [the prohibition against bringing] non-sacred [fowl] into the Temple court is not Scriptural.[17]

Is this in fact R. Jose's opinion? Has it not been taught: R Jose son of R. Judah said: Whence do we infer that a sin-offering of fowl, brought in a doubtful case [of childbirth][18] is not to be eaten?[19] From the verse, And of then that have an issue, whether it be a man or a woman.[20] Woman is here compared to man.[21] Just as a man is required to bring an offering for [a transgression],[22] which has certainly been committed so must the woman bring an offering for [a childbirth] which has certainly occurred;[23] and just as there is an offering to be brought by a man after a doubtful [transgression], so must an offering be brought by a woman after a doubtful [childbirth]. Again, just as a man brings [an offering of] the same kind in a case of doubtful [transgression] as he does after a certain one,[24] so must a woman bring [an offering of] the same kind after a doubtful [childbirth] as she does after a certain one.[25] [Shall we] then [infer further that] just as [in a doubtful case] a man brings an offering that is eaten,[26] so is the offering brought by the woman to be eaten?

---

(1) I.e., it is Rabbinic in its origin.

(2) And so she has not the power to impose upon him an obligation involving the offering of sacrifices.

(3) For the tradition was only known with regard to sons.

(4) The Mishnah mentions only naziriteship and not other vows.

(5) And the inference that he cannot impose ordinary vows is wrong.

(6) This being part of the tradition.

(7) On account of the need to shave his head. And so the relatives can protest on his behalf.

(8) On completing the term of naziriteship.

(9) Which is otherwise forbidden; v. Lev. XIX, 27.

(10) [Which vitiates the whole value of the training.]

(11) Which is the manner in which a nazirite polls.

(12) The Scriptural verse says that ‘the corners’ are not to be rounded, and this is taken to mean the corners by themselves, but not in conjunction with the rest of the head.

(13) I.e., offer profane animals on the altar, for as he is not a nazirite the animals do not become sacred. This is forbidden.

(14) And is therefore permitted in this instance.

(15) Birds offered as sacrifices were not slaughtered ritually with a knife, but the priest pinched off their heads with his thumb nail.

(16) Since there was no obligation to offer birds, these birds are not really an offering and should be killed in the usual way.

(17) There is a controversy on this point in Hul. 27b.

(18) After childbirth, or even a miscarriage, a mother was required to offer certain sacrifices, including a bird as sin-offering (v. Lev. XII, 6). In this Baraitha R. Jose son of R. Judah explains what is to happen if there is a doubt as to a birth (i.e., a true miscarriage) having taken place (cf. also Ker, I, 1).

(19) Although after certain childbirth it was eaten.

(20) Lev. XV. 33’

(21) I.e., cases in which a man (as well as a woman) is required to furnish an offering, with the ease in which only a woman can do so, viz.: childbirth,

(22) When the Torah prescribes an offering for some offence, e.g., the eating of forbidden fat, it is understood that there is to be no doubt that an offence was committed. Where a doubt existed a different offering, the guilt-offering, was prescribed (v. Lev. V, 17).

(23) I.e., Lev. XII, 6. which describes the offering, is referring to a certain and not a doubtful childbirth.

(24) Viz., an animal (and not a bird) in both cases if the offence is, e.g., the eating of forbidden fat.

(25) Including a sin-offering of a bird in both cases.

(26) [The flesh of a guilt-offering for a doubtful transgression was eaten, v. Zeb. 54b.]

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 29b

You cannot say so. Whilst this applies in the case of a man where only one forbidden act is involved,[1] you cannot argue that this should also be the case with a woman where two forbidden acts are involved. Now what are the two forbidden acts referred to? Are they not the prohibition against the eating of carrion,[2] and the prohibition against the entry of profane [sacrifices] into the Temple court?[3]

R. Aha, the son of R. Ika [however] demurred [to this inference[4] being drawn], for it is surely possible that [the eating was forbidden][5] because it would appear as though two rabbinic enactments were being transgressed.[6]

Can we say that [the controversy between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish] is the same as that between [the following] Tannaim? [For it has been taught:] Rabbi says that he can impose a nazirite vow on his son until his majority;[7] but R. Jose son of R. Judah says, [only] until he reaches the age of making vows [for himself].[8] Now surely [the controversy between R. Johanan and Resh Lakish] is the same as [that between these] Tannaim, Rabbi considering it to be a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite, so that though [the son] may have reached the age of making vows [for himself, the father] can still impose a [nazirite] vow on him until he attains his majority, whereas R. Jose son of R. Judah who asserts [that he can do so only] until [the son] reaches the age of making vows [for himself] is of the opinion that [the father may impose a naziriteship] in order to train him to [carry out his] religious duties, and, now that he has passed out of his [father's] control,[9] there is no longer an obligation [to train him]?[10] — I will tell you; not at all. Both [Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah may] agree that this is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite. Where they differ is about [the vows of] one who can discriminate[11] [but] who has not quite reached manhood. Rabbi considers that [a youth] who can discriminate [but] who has not quite reached manhood is [permitted to make vows] only by enactment of the Rabbis and so the right granted by the Torah [to the parent][12] overrules the Rabbinical right [of the youth];[13] whereas R. Jose son of R. Judah considers that [a youth] who can discriminate [but] who has not quite reached manhood, has a Scriptural right [to make vows].[14]

Alternatively, it may be that both [Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah] would agree that [the father may impose a naziriteship] in order to train him to [carry out his] religious duties, and that [the right of a youth,] who can discriminate [but] who has not quite reached manhood, [to make vows] is Rabbinic. Rabbi, on the one hand, holds that [the parent's duty] to train, which is itself Rabbinic, overrules [the right of the youth,] who can discriminate [but] who has not quite reached manhood, [to make vows for himself] which is also Rabbinic;[15] whilst R. Jose son of R. Judah, who says [that the father's right lasts only] until [the lad] reaches the age of making vows, holds that the Rabbinic duty to train [the lad] does not set aside [the right of a youth] who can discriminate [but] who has not quite reached manhood [to make his own vows, although this is also Rabbinic].[16]

Can we say that [the controversy between] the above Tannaim[17] is the same as that between the following Tannaim?[18] For it has been taught: It is related that R. Hanina's father once imposed a nazirite vow upon him and then brought him before R. Gamaliel. R. Gamaliel was about to examine him to discover whether or not he had reached his majority[19] — according to R. Jose[20] it was to discover whether he had reached the age of making vows[21] — when [the young Hanina] said to him, 'Sir, do not exert yourself to examine me. If I am a minor, then I am a nazirite because of my father's [imposition], whilst if I am an adult,[22] I undertake it on my own account.' Thereupon R. Gamaliel rose and kissed him upon his head, and said, 'I am certain that this [lad] will be a religious leader[23] in Israel.' It is said that in a very short space of time, he became in fact a religious leader in Israel.[24]

Now on R. Jose son of R. Judah's view that [the father's control lasts only] until [the boy] reaches the age at which he can make vows [for himself], we can understand why he should have said, 'If I am a minor,[25] I shall be [a nazirite] because of my father's [action, and so on].' But on Rabbi's view that [it lasts] until manhood, [of what value was the statement], 'whilst if I am an adult, I undertake it on my own account,'

---

(1) If he was not in fact guilty, a profane animal was sacrificed on his behalf. This the Tanna of the Baraitha considers is forbidden.

(2) The bird, having its neck pinched, is carrion, pinching being only permitted to a true sacrificial bird.

(3) And thus we see that R. Jose considers both these acts forbidden by the Torah, in contradiction to the statement attributed to him above.

(4) That the above acts are forbidden by the Torah.

(5) Our text has, instead of this inserted phrase, 'She is liable', which gives no sense. We have therefore followed all the commentators and omitted it.

(6) I.e., the eating of the bird brought by the woman was forbidden not because the comparison with the guilt-offering brought by the man did not extend to cover it, but because two enactments of the Rabbis were involved, and this outweighs the analogy with the guilt-offering.

(7) Lit., 'until two hairs appear', i.e., until there is definite evidence that he has reached puberty, usually after the end of the thirteenth year.

(8) I.e., between the twelfth and thirteenth birthdays, when he understands the significance of a vow.

(9) For he can now make his own vows.

(10) And therefore he cannot impose one.

(11) I.e., who realises the significance of a vow.

(12) To impose a naziriteship. A halachah or traditional ruling has the force of a scriptural enactment.

(13) To make vow's himself.

(14) And when he reaches this age, his father can no longer impose a naziriteship upon him.

(15) And the father can impose a naziriteship until the boy is thirteen.

(16) And when the boy reaches the age of making vows, the father's right to impose a naziriteship ceases.

(17) Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah.

(18) This is put as a question although the answer in this case is not negative. This is not uncommon (Asheri).

(19) Lit., 'produced two hairs', as a sign of puberty. On this view, he was thirteen years old at the time.

(20) I.e., R. Jose son of R. Judah. V. Tosaf.

(21) The boy was only twelve years old according to R. Jose.

(22) In regard to making vows.

(23) Lit., will render halachic decisions.'

(24) Tosef. Nid. V.

(25) It is here supposed that all the young R. Hanina meant was, 'If I cannot yet make vows myself,' no special significance attaching to his use of the word minor'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 30a

seeing that he was still under his father's control?[1] — [Rabbi will reply that] he really said, 'I intend to be one on my father's account [if he still has the right to impose it],[2] and on my own account [otherwise].' Now if he had in fact reached manhood at that time, his own naziriteship would take effect; if [he reached manhood] after [observing the naziriteship], he would have observed his father's naziriteship.[3] But suppose he reaches [manhood] during this period, what is to happen then?[4] Now on R. Jose son of R. Judah's view that [the father's right lasts] until the age at which he can make vows [for himself], all will be well,[5] but on Rabbi's view that [the right lasts] until he reaches manhood, how will you explain what happened?[6] — In point of fact, on Rabbi's view no other solution is possible,[7] than that he should observe [naziriteships] both on the father's account and on his own account.[8]

MISHNAH. A MAN CAN POLL [WITH OFFERINGS DUE FOR] HIS FATHER'S NAZIRITESHIP.[9] BUT A WOMAN CANNOT DO SO. WHERE, FOR EXAMPLE, A MAN'S FATHER HAD BEEN A NAZIRITE, AND HAS SET APART A LUMP SUM OF MONEY FOR [THE SACRIFICES OF] HIS NAZIRITESHIP AND DIED AND [THE SON THEN] SAID, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE ON CONDITION THAT I MAY POLL WITH MY FATHER'S MONEY. R. JOSE SAID THAT THESE MONEYS ARE TO BE USED FOR FREEWILL-OFFERINGS AND THAT SUCH A MAN CANNOT POLL AT THE EXPENSE OF HIS FATHER'S NAZIRITESHIP. WHO CAN DO SO? HE WHO WAS A NAZIRITE TOGETHER WITH HIS FATHER, AND WHOSE FATHER HAD SET APART A LUMP SUM OF MONEY FOR HIS NAZIRITE [SACRIFICES] AND DIED. [ONLY] SUCH A MAN CAN POLL AT THE EXPENSE OF HIS FATHER'S NAZIRITESHIP.[10]

GEMARA. Why [cannot a woman poll with her father's money]? — R. Johanan said: It is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite.[11] Surely this is obvious and so what purpose does [the ruling] serve, for a son inherits his father but a daughter does not do so?[12] — It is not necessary, except in the case where he had a daughter only.[13] It might have been thought that the tradition received was that [all] heirs [could poll][14]

---

(1) So that although he could make vows himself, his father could still impose a naziriteship on him.

(2) I.e., minor means 'under my father's control.'

(3) This is the explanation of R. Han. quoted in Tosaf.

(4) For his father's naziriteship will automatically lapse on his reaching manhood; v. Tosef. Naz. III.

(5) For on his reaching the age of making vows, vows imposed by his father beforehand are unaffected, and manhood is a long way off.

(6) I.e., how do you account for the acceptance by Rabban Gamaliel of the double vow without further ado, since R. Hanina might reach manhood during the naziriteship.

(7) If the boy does not wish to be examined.

(8) I.e,, observe a naziriteship of sixty days, instead of thirty, so that all contingencies are covered.

(9) I.e., may purchase the sacrifices due on polling with money set apart for his father's sacrifices.

(10) Many MSS. (v. Tosaf.) reverse these two examples, making R. Jose permit him to poll if he becomes a nazirite afterwards, but not if he is a nazirite together with his father. In the parallel passage Tosef. Naz. III, there is the same MS. confusion. Cf. also supra 17b, and infra 30b,

(11) No justification is therefore needed.

(12) And so she could not obtain the money. For the rules of inheritance, v. Num. XXVII, 6ff.

(13) In such a case the daughter inherits (ibid.).

(14) So that where there was no son, the daughter could poll.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 30b

and so the ruling tells us [that this is not so].

The question was asked: Do the Rabbis differ from R. Jose or not;[1] and if it should be decided that they differ, whether with the first clause [only] or with the subsequent clause also?[2] Come and hear: In what circumstances was it said that a man may poll at the expense of his father's naziriteship? Where his father who had been a nazirite set apart money for [the sacrifices of] his naziriteship and died, and [the son then] said, 'I declare myself a nazirite on condition that I may poll with my father's money,' he [the son] is permitted to poll with his father's money. But where both he and his father were nazirites together, and his father set apart money for [the sacrifices of] his naziriteship and died, the money is to be used for freewill-offerings. The above is the opinion of R. Jose.[3] R. Eliezer,[4] R. Meir and R. Judah said: Just such a one may poll with his father's money.[5]

Rabbah raised the problem: Suppose [the nazirite] has two sons, both nazirites,[6] what is the law?

Did the tradition state [simply] that there is a halachah,[7] so that the one who was first [to become a nazirite] may poll, or did it state [that the son may use the money because it is his] inheritance and so they divide it?

Raba raised the problem: Suppose [the sons were] the firstborn[8] and another, what would the law be? Was the tradition received as a halachah and [the first-born] is therefore not entitled to receive for polling the same proportion as he receives [of the rest of the estate], or is [the money for the nazirite sacrifices, part of his] inheritance, and just as he takes a double portion there, so also is it with the [money for] polling?

Should it be decided that [the money for the nazirite sacrifices is part of] the inheritance, so that [the first-born] receives for polling in proportion to what he receives [of the rest of the estate], does [the first-born] receive a double portion only when [the money] is profane, but not when it becomes sacred,[9] or is there no difference, seeing that he has acquired [a double portion] for polling?[10]

Suppose his father was a life-nazirite[11] and he an ordinary nazirite, or his father an ordinary nazirite and he a life-nazirite, what would the law be?[12] Was the halachah received only with regard to ordinary naziriteships,[13] or is there no difference?[14]

Should it be decided that [such is the case] here [because] both the naziriteships[15] were discharged in ritual purity,[16] [then] R. Ashi raised a [further] problem. Suppose his father were an unclean nazirite[17] and he a clean nazirite,[18] or his father were a clean nazirite[19] and he an unclean nazirite,[20] what would be the law? The problem was unsolved.

CHAPTER V

MISHNAH. BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT CONSECRATION IN ERROR IS [EFFECTIVE] CONSECRATION,

---

(1) The problem arises because of the wording of our Mishnah. If no one differs from R. Jose, why say 'R. Jose said'?

(2) I.e., do they permit the son to poll in both cases, or do they permit the one R. Jose forbids and vice versa.

(3) The opinion here ascribed to R. Jose is not that of our version of the Mishnah, but is that of the MS. versions. One or other must be emended, for consistency (v. Tosaf.).

(4) Our text, R. Eliezer, is a common scribal error for R. Eleazar b. Shamua, the colleague of the other Rabbis mentioned.

(5) Tosef. Naz. III. 9. Hence, (a) these Rabbis differ from R. Jose. (b) the difference covers both cases, for the 'Just such a one' is emphatic. So Rashi. Tosaf., Maim. Yad. (Neziruth VIII, 15), and most other commentators, however, consider that in the opinion of these Rabbis he may use his father's money under all circumstances.

(6) And then dies, leaving money for sacrifices.

(7) A ruling. Viz.: that it is possible for the son to use the money left by his father for his own naziriteship, no reason being given as to why he may do so.

(8) Who is entitled to a double portion of the heritage. V. Deut. XXI, 17.

(9) I.e., he receives two thirds of the money left towards his own nazirite sacrifices, but after the animals have been slaughtered and sacrificed he must return part of the sacred meat to his brother, so that each obtains just half of the meat which is to be eaten. — This question is raised because except for unslaughtered peace-offerings a first-born does not obtain a double portion of the sacred animals left at his father's death.

(10) And so he will also keep a double portion of the meat.

(11) And he put aside money for his naziriteship and died.

(12) I.e., may the son use the money for his own naziriteship or not?

(13) And he may not use the money.

(14) And he may use the money.

(15) Of the father and of the son.

(16) And there is no distinction between the kind of naziriteship undertaken.

(17) And he had set aside money to buy the sacrifices required for purification (v. Hum. VI, 10), and then died.

(18) I.e., may the son use the money towards the sacrifices he must offer on completing his naziriteship.

(19) And he had set aside money for the sacrifices and then died.

(20) I.e., may the son use the money towards the sacrifices of an unclean nazirite.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 31a

BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT IT IS NOT EFFECTIVE. FOR EXAMPLE, IF SOMEONE SAYS, THE BLACK BULL THAT LEAVES MY HOUSE FIRST SHALL BE SACRED,' AND A WHITE ONE EMERGES, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT SACRED, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT IT IS NOT SACRED. [OR IF HE SAYS,] 'THE GOLD DENAR THAT COMES INTO MY HAND FIRST SHALL BE SACRED, AND A SILVER DENAR CAME TO HIS HAND BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT SACRED, WHILST BETH HILLEL SAY THAT IT IS NOT SACRED. [AGAIN, IF HE SAYS,] 'THE CASK OF WINE THAT I COME ACROSS FIRST SHALL BE SACRED,' AND HE COMES ACROSS A CASK OF OIL, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT SACRED, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT IT IS NOT SACRED.

GEMARA. BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT CONSECRATION, etc.: Beth Shammai's reason is that they compare original consecration[1] with secondary consecration.[2] Just as substitution, even when made in error, is effective,[3] so [original] consecration, even when made in error, is effective. Beth Hillel, however, contend that this is true only of substitution,[4] but that no consecration in error can take effect in the first instance.

But suppose, according to Beth Shammai, someone says, 'This [animal] is to replace that [one] at midday,' it would surely not become a substitute [immediately] from that moment, but only when midday arrives, and so here too, [surely, consecration should not take effect] until the condition [under which it was made] becomes realized?[5] — R. Papa replied: The reason that [the word] 'FIRST' was mentioned by him was [simply] to indicate that one [of his black oxen] which should emerge first.[6] — But the text says, 'the black bull,' and surely it contemplates the case where he may have only the one?[7] — In the case considered, he is assumed to have two or three.[8] Beth Hillel, however, contend that if this [was his intention][9] it should have said, '[The black hull] that leaves earliest.'[10] — Raba of Barnesh[11] said to R. Ashi; Is this [called] consecration in error? It is surely intentional consecration?[12] — [He replied:] Quite so, but [it is called consecration in error] because at first the expression he used gave a wrong impression.[13]

Is it indeed Beth Shammai's opinion that consecration in error is not effective consecration?[14] Have we not learnt: If a man, who vows to be a nazirite, sets aside an animal [for the sacrifice], and [then] applies to the Sages [for absolution from his vow] and they release him, [the animal] goes forth and pastures with the flock.[15] Beth Hillel said to Beth Shammai: Do you not admit that this is a case of consecration in error,[16] and yet [the animal] goes forth and pastures with the flock?[17] Whence[18] it follows [does it not] that Beth Shammai hold consecration in error to be effective? — No; Beth Hillel were mistaken. They took the reason for Beth Shammai's view[19] to be that consecration in error is effective, but the latter replied that [the consecration is effective] not because it was consecration in error, but because at first the expression he used gave a wrong impression.[20]

But is it Beth Shammai's opinion that consecration in error is not effective? Come [then] and hear: If [some people] were walking along the road

---

(1) Consecration of a profane object.

(2) Lit., 'final consecration'. If anyone substitutes a profane animal for one already sacred, the substitution is not effective, but the profane animal becomes sacred too (v. Lev. XXVII, 20). Substitution is termed 'secondary consecration'.

(3) V. Tem. 27a.

(4) Since one animal was already sacred.

(5) But not where the stipulation was not fulfilled, as, e.g., a white bull emerged and not a black one. Thus the comparison with substitution is not borne out.

(6) R. Papa rejects the explanation of Beth Shammai's opinion given above, and says that even on Beth Shammai's view, it is the black bull that emerges first which becomes sacred. In other words we do not set aside his statement because a white bull emerged first, as 'FIRST' may be understood as applying to the black oxen only (Tosaf.).

(7) In which case, he could not mean 'the first of the black bulls.'

(8) I.e., unless he has two or three black bulls, the question of one bull becoming sacred does not arise.

(9) Viz., that the first black bull to emerge should become sacred, irrespective of whether others came out before it.

(10) [שיצא בראשון 'at first', which may also denote the first (black bull) that leaves.]

(11) [Near Sura, v. Obermeyer. Die Landschaft Babylonien, p. 296.]

(12) For on R. Papa's view, he intended to make the first black bull to emerge sacred.

(13) For he appears to mean that the black bull must come out before any other bull.

(14) As is maintained by R. Papa.

(15) I.e., it ceases to be holy.

(16) For when he consecrated the animal he believed himself liable, whilst his subsequent release showed that he was not.

(17) Infra 31b.

(18) From Beth Hillel's remark.

(19) That the first black bull is sacred.

(20) I.e., he really meant that bull to be sacred, but appeared to be saying something else.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 31b

and [saw] someone coming towards them, and one said, 'I declare myself a nazirite if it is So-and-so,' whilst another said, 'I declare myself a nazirite if it is not So-and-so,' [and a third man,] 'I declare myself a nazirite if one of you is a nazirite, [a fourth, 'I declare myself a nazirite] if neither of you is a nazirite, [a fifth, 'I declare myself a nazirite] if both of you are nazirites,' [and a sixth, 'I declare myself a nazirite] if all of you are nazirites,' Beth Shammai say that all [six] of them are nazirites.[1] Now this is a case of consecration in error,[2] and yet [the Mishnah] teaches that all of them are nazirites? — From this it certainly follows that Beth Shammai are of the opinion that consecration in error is effective, but not from the other.[3]

Abaye said: You should not assume that [the declaration] was made in the morning.[4] We speak here of a case where it was already midday, and he then said, 'The black bull that left my house first [to day] shall be sacred,'[5] and when informed that a white one left [first], he remarked, 'Had I known that a white one left, I should not have said black.'[6] But how can you say that it refers to what took place at midday,[7] seeing that the text reads: THE GOLD DENAR THAT COMES?[8] — Read, 'that has come.'[9] [But the text also reads,] THE CASK OF WINE THAT I COME ACROSS?[8] — Read, 'that I came across.[9]

R. Hisda said: Black [oxen] amongst white [ones] spoil the herd.[10] White [patches] on black [oxen] are a blemish.

We have learnt: [IF SOMEONE SAYS,] 'THE BLACK BULL THAT IS THE FIRST TO LEAVE MY HOUSE [SHALL BE SACRED,' AND A WHITE ONE EMERGES, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE] IT SACRED. Now when a person consecrates, he does so with an ill grace,[11] and yet Beth Shammai say that [the white bull] is sacred?[12] Do you suggest then that a person consecrates with a good grace?[13] [If so, how can we explain the following clause: IF HE SAYS,] 'THE GOLD DENAR THAT COMES INTO MY HAND FIRST [SHALL BE SACRED],' AND A SILVER

DENAR CAME TO HIS HAND, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT SACRED?[14] — Do you submit, then, that a person consecrates with an ill grace? [Consider then the following: IF HE SAYS,] 'THE CASK OF WINE THAT I COME ACROSS FIRST [SHALL BE SACRED],' AND HE COMES ACROSS A CASK OF OIL, BETH SHAMMAI DECLARE IT SACRED,' and yet oil is superior to wine? — That raises no difficulty, for it was taught with reference to Galilee where wine is superior to oil. But the first clause [of our Mishnah] seems to contradict R. Hisda? — R. Hisda will reply: My statement[15] referred to Carmanian[16] oxen.

R. Hisda also used to say: A black ox for its hide, a red one for its flesh, a white one for ploughing.[17] But R. Hisda said that black [oxen] amongst white ones spoil the herd?[18] — He said that with reference to Carmanian oxen.

MISHNAH. IF A MAN VOWS TO BE A NAZIRITE AND THEN SEEKS RELEASE FROM A SAGE[19] BUT IS FORBIDDEN [TO ANNUL HIS VOW], HE CAN RECKON [THE NAZIRITESHIP] FROM THE TIME THAT THE VOW WAS MADE.[20] IF HE SEEKS RELEASE FROM A SAGE AND IS ABSOLVED AND HAS AN ANIMAL SET ASIDE [FOR A SACRIFICE], IT GOES FORTH TO PASTURE WITH [THE REST OF] THE HERD.[21] BETH HILLEL SAID TO BETH SHAMMAI: DO YOU NOT ADMIT THAT HERE WHERE THE CONSECRATION IS IN ERROR,[22] [THE ANIMAL] GOES FORTH TO PASTURE WITH THE HERD?[23] BETH SHAMMAI REPLIED: DO YOU NOT ADMIT THAT IF A MAN IN ERROR CALLS THE NINTH [ANIMAL], THE TENTH,[24] OR THE TENTH THE NINTH, OR THE ELEVENTH THE TENTH, EACH BECOMES SACRED?[25] BETH HILLEL RETORTED: IT IS NOT THE ROD THAT MAKES THESE SACRED,[26] FOR SUPPOSE THAT IN ERROR HE PLACED THE ROD UPON THE EIGHTH OR UPON THE TWELFTH, WOULD THIS HAVE ANY EFFECT? [THE FACT IS] THAT SCRIPTURE WHICH HAS DECLARED THE TENTH TO BE SACRED, HAS ALSO DECLARED SACRED THE NINTH

---

(1) Mishnah, infra 32b. q.v.

(2) Since they become nazirites whether or no their conditions are fulfilled.

(3) I.e., not from our own Mishnah, which is only apparently but not really a case of consecration in error, as explained by R. Papa and R. Ashi.

(4) I.e., that when the man said, 'The black bull etc.' he was referring to a future event and not a past one.

(5) [Vocalizing יצא instead of יצא]

(6) The case is now analogous to substitution in error, and Beth Shammai's reason will be that they infer consecration in error from substitution in error.

(7) I.e., to a past event.

(8) 'Left' and 'will leave' have the same consonants in Hebrew but are pronounced differently (v. p. 112, n. 7); but in these cases, the past has different consonants from the future and so cannot be confused with it.

(9) I.e., change the reading. Instead of יעלה read עלה and instead of תעלה read עלתה.

(10) Because black oxen are inferior to white ones.

(11) Lit., 'malevolent eye'. He does not wish anything more than he has specified to become sacred.

(12) And so white bulls must be worth less than black ones.

(13) Lit., 'benevolent eye'.

(14) Thus he is satisfied to give a silver coin instead of a gold one, but had he consecrated with a good grace, the silver would not become sacred.

(15) That white oxen are better than black.

(16) Carmania, a province of Persia, the oxen of which were generally employed for ploughing.

(17) I.e., each kind is most suitable for the purpose mentioned. Thus in respect to its hide, a black ox is superior to a white one. [V. Lewysohn, Zoologie, p. 131.]

(18) Yet here he says that their hides are superior.

(19) It is presumed that he had drunk wine in the interval.

(20) I.e., presumably, his transgression has not affected the validity of the period past.

(21) I.e., it ceases to be holy.
(22) Because his release shows that no sacrifice was necessary.
(23) And so no consecration in error should be effective.
(24) During tithing of cattle; cf. Lev. XXVII, 32.
(25) Thus consecration in error is effective.
(26) I.e., it is not his error in striking the wrong animal with the tithing rod that makes it sacred.

AND THE ELEVENTH.[1]

GEMARA. Who can the author of [the first paragraph of] our Mishnah be? For it [agrees] neither with R. Jose nor with the Rabbis. For it has been taught: If a man vows [to be a nazirite] and transgresses a rule of his naziriteship, his case is not examined,[2] unless he [first] observes in [nazirite] abstinence as many days as he has passed in indulgence.[3] R. Jose said that thirty days are enough.[4] Now if [the author] be the Rabbis, [the case also of] naziriteship for a long period offers difficulty,[5] whilst if it be R. Jose, [the case of] naziriteship for a short period offers difficulty?[6] — It may be maintained either that [the author] is R. Jose, or that [the authors] are the Rabbis. It may be maintained that [the author] is R. Jose, by supposing that [the Mishnah refers] to a long period of naziriteship [only],[7] and [the Baraitha] to a short period of naziriteship [as well].[8] It can also be maintained that [the authors] are the Rabbis, in which case we must read [in the Mishnah] not, 'FROM THE TIME THAT THE VOW WAS MADE,'[9] but 'equal [to the period which has elapsed] since the vow was made.'[10]

IF HE SEEKS RELEASE FROM THE SAGES, AND THEY ABSOLVE HIM etc.: R. Jeremiah said: From [the opinion of] Beth Shammai we can infer that of Beth Hillel. Do not Beth Shammai assert that consecration in error is effective and yet when it becomes clear[11] that the nazirite vow is not valid, [the animal] goes forth to pasture with the herd? So too, for Beth Hillel. Although they say that substitution in error is effective substitution, this is only true where the original consecration remains,[12] but where the original consecration is revoked,[13] [the consecration resulting from] the substitution is also revoked.[14]

The Master said: 'DO YOU NOT ADMIT THAT IF HE CALLS THE NINTH THE TENTH, etc. It has been stated: In the case of the tithe, R. Nahman said that [this is the rule only] if this is done in error, not if it is done intentionally.[15] R. Hisda and Rabbah b. R Huna, however, said that [it is certainly the rule] if it is done in error, and all the more so if it is done intentionally.[16]

Raba said to R. Nahman: According to you who assert that [it is the rule only] if it is done in error and not if done intentionally, when Beth Shammai asked Beth Hillel, DO YOU NOT ADMIT THAT IF HE CALLED THE NINTH THE TENTH, THE TENTH THE NINTH, OR THE ELEVENTH THE TENTH, THAT ALL THREE ARE SACRED? and Beth Hillel were silent,[17] why could they not have answered that the case of tithes is different since these[18] cannot be made sacred intentionally?[19] — R. Shimi b. Ashi replied: The reason that they did not do so is because of an afortiori argument that might be based on this [by Beth Shammai].[20] For [Beth Shammai might have argued that] if tithes that cannot be consecrated [out of turn] intentionally can be so consecrated in error, then ordinary consecration that can be done intentionally should certainly take effect [in error].[21] This [argument], however, would be unsound, for [ordinary] consecration depends entirely upon the intention of the owner.[22] MISHNAH. IF A MAN VOWS TO BE A NAZIRITE AND ON GOING TO BRING HIS ANIMAL [FOR THE SACRIFICE] FINDS THAT IT HAS BEEN STOLEN, THEN IF HE HAD DECLARED HIMSELF A NAZIRITE BEFORE THE THEFT OF HIS ANIMAL,[23] HE IS [STILL] A NAZIRITE,

---

(1) If they are struck in error; v. infra for source.

(2) Should he desire to be released from his vow.

(3) I.e., the number of days which have elapsed between his transgression and his seeking for absolution.

(4) Tosef. Ned. I; i.e., if his period of transgression was longer than thirty days, he is made to keep a naziriteship of thirty days, before being released.

(5) The Mishnah allows him to reckon in all cases the days of his transgression as part of his naziriteship, whilst the Rabbis do not do so.

(6) They would conflict in regard to the short period in the manner explained in the previous note. In regard to the long period they would not conflict, since R. Jose allows him to reckon all the period of transgression, which is more than thirty days, and it could be argued that this is all that the Mishnah means. The text adopted here is that of Tosaf.; Asheri, Maim. and most other commentators, agreeing with the quotation in Ned. 200. Our printed text, which reads that the short period offers a difficulty for the Rabbis and the long period for R. Jose, assumes a reading of the Tosefta which would agree with most MSS. of the Tosef. (Ned. I, 11) and with the Jerusalem Talmud (J. Naz. V, 4), but requires an argument at once more complicated and subtle.
(7) There being no conflict with R. Jose's view, as explained in the previous note.
(8) In this case only does R. Jose require the whole of the period of transgression to be counted afresh.
(9) Which implies that the period when there was transgression forms part of the naziriteship and so conflicts with the view of the Baraitha.
(10) Mishnah and Baraitha now agree.
(11) By the release that was granted.
(12) I.e., when the first animal for which the second is substituted is not afterwards declared profane.
(13) [E.g., owing to the remission of the naziriteship for which the animal was reserved.]
(14) I.e., the animal substituted also becomes profane.
(15) If he intentionally strikes the ninth animal as though it were the tenth, it does not become sacred.
(16) I.e., in either case the animal becomes sacred.
(17) I.e., they found no flaw in the argument itself, but were compelled to reply that it is only in this case that Scripture has declared consecration in error effective.
(18) I.e.,the ninth or eleventh animal.
(19) And since they did not say this, it follows that even if he strikes the ninth animal intentionally, it becomes sacred.
(20) If it is assumed that the cases are comparable.
(21) And Beth Hillel do not admit that consecration in error is effective.
(22) Whereas a man is bound to tithe his animals, and so the rules applying in the one case need bear no resemblance to those applying in the other. Hence R. Nahaman cannot be refuted from this (Tosaf.).
(23) I.e., the three animals which a nazirite offers on completing his vow.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 32b

BUT IF HE HAD DECLARED HIMSELF A NAZIRITE AFTER THE THEFT OF HIS ANIMAL, HE IS NOT A NAZIRITE.[1] IT WAS ON THIS POINT THAT NAHUM THE MEDE FELL INTO ERROR WHEN NAZIRITES ARRIVED [IN JERUSALEM] FROM THE DIASPORA AND FOUND THE TEMPLE IN RUINS.[2] NAHUM THE MEDE SAID TO THEM, 'HAD YOU KNOWN THAT THE TEMPLE WOULD BE DESTROYED, WOULD YOU HAVE BECOME NAZIRITES?' THEY ANSWERED, NO, AND SO NAHUM THE MEDE ABSOLVED THEM.[3] WHEN, HOWEVER, THE MATTER CAME TO THE NOTICE OF THE SAGES THEY SAID: WHOEVER DECLARED HIMSELF A NAZIRITE BEFORE THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE IS A NAZIRITE, BUT IF AFTER THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE, HE IS NOT A NAZIRITE.

GEMARA. Rabbah said: The Rabbis overruled R. Eliezer and laid down [the law] in accordance with their own views. For we have learnt: It is permitted to grant release on the ground of improbable contingencies;[4] this is the opinion of R. Eliezer, but the Sages forbid this.[5]

Rabbah[6] said further: Although the Rabbis said that improbable contingencies cannot be made the grounds for release, yet conditions involving improbable contingencies can be made a ground for release. For example, it would have been possible to say to them: Suppose someone had come and said to you[7] that the Temple would be destroyed, would you have uttered your vow?

R. Joseph said: Had I been there, I should have said to them:[8] Is it not written, The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, are these,[9] which points to [the destruction of] the first and second temples?[10] — Granted that they knew it would be destroyed, did they know when this would occur?[11]

Abaye objected: And did they not know when? Is it not written, Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city?[12] — All the same, did they know on which day?[13]

MISHNAH. IF [PEOPLE] WERE WALKING ALONG THE ROAD AND [SAW] SOMEONE COMING TOWARDS THEM, AND ONE SAID, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF IT IS SO-AND-SO, WHILST ANOTHER SAID, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF IT IS NOT SO-AND-SO,' [AND A THIRD MAN,] '[7] DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF ONE OF YOU IS A NAZIRITE,' [A FOURTH, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE] IF NEITHER OF YOU IS A NAZIRITE,' [A FIFTH, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE] IF BOTH OF YOU ARE NAZIRITES,' [AND A SIXTH, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE] IF ALL OF YOU ARE NAZIRITES.' BETH SHAMMAI SAY THAT ALL [SIX] OF THEM ARE NAZIRITES, BUT BETH HILLEL SAY THAT ONLY THOSE WHOSE WORDS WERE NOT FULFILLED, ARE NAZIRITES.[14] R. TARFON SAID: NOT ONE OF THEM IS A NAZIRITE. IF [THE PERSON APPROACHING] TURNED AWAY SUDDENLY[15] [WITHOUT BEING IDENTIFIED], HE[16] IS NOT A NAZIRITE. R. SIMEON SAYS: HE SHOULD SAY, 'IF I WAS RIGHT,[17] I AM A NAZIRITE OBLIGATORILY, OTHERWISE I WISH TO BE A NAZIRITE, VOLUNTARILY.

GEMARA. Why should the ones whose words were not fulfilled become nazirites?[18] — Rab Judah replied: Read, 'those whose words were fulfilled.'

---

(1) As his vow had been made under a misapprehension.

(2) The nazirite vow was binding until the sacrifices had been offered.

(3) As the vow had been made under a misapprehension.

(4) I.e., the grounds for release need not have been anticipated at the time the vow was entered into.

(5) Mishnah, Ned. IX, 1. Here in Nazir, on the other hand, R. Eliezer's view is not quoted, showing that it was not considered permissible to rely on it under any circumstances whatsoever.

(6) Our text, in error, has Raba.

(7) When you were about to declare yourselves nazirites.

(8) To those who contended that the destruction of the Temple, being an event which could not have been foreseen, could not be used as a ground for release (Asheri).

(9) Jer. VII, 4.

(10) Since it indicates that there would be three temples. Thus the destruction was foretold and could have been anticipated.

(11) And so they could not anticipate it.

(12) Dan. IX, 24. This prophecy was uttered at the beginning of the seventy years captivity in Babylon. From the restoration to the second destruction is said to have been 420 years, making in all 490. i.e., seventy weeks of years.

(13) And since they did not know, they expected to offer their sacrifices before the destruction.

(14) This is explained in the Gemara.

(15) Lit., 'he shuddered back'.

(16) I.e., one whose naziriteship was contingent oil the identity of the person approaching.

(17) In my identification.

(18) According to Beth Hillel.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 33a

Abaye replied: We suppose him to have added, for example, 'even if it be not So-and-so I intend[1] to be a nazirite,' the meaning of the phrase HIS WORDS WERE NOT FULFILLED [used in the Mishnah] being, his first words were not fulfilled but his later ones were.[2]

IF [THE PERSON APPROACHING] TURNED AWAY SUDDENLY [WITHOUT BEING IDENTIFIED] HE IS NOT A NAZIRITE etc.: The reason [that he is not a nazirite] is because the other turned away, which would show that had the other come before us, he would become a nazirite. Who is the author [of this opinion)?[3]

---

(1) [Read אי הוי for איהוי.]

(2) And so he becomes a nazirite.

(3) There is no Gemara on 33b, this page being taken up with Tosaf.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 34a

Should you say it is R. Tarfon, would he become a nazirite? For since he did not know at the time he uttered the nazirite vow whether it was So-and-so or not, would the naziriteship have become operative [at all]? For have we not been taught: R. Judah on behalf of R. Tarfon said that not one of them[1] is a nazirite because naziriteship is not intended except when assumed unequivocally?[2] — It must,therefore, be R. Judah [who indicated this in connection] with the heap of grain. For it has been taught: [If a man says,] 'I declare myself a nazirite, provided that this heap of grain contains one hundred kor,' and then finds that [the heap] has been stolen or is lost, R. Simeon binds [him to a naziriteship], whilst R. Judah frees him [from the vow].[3] R. Simeon holds that since, had it not been stolen, it might have been found to contain one hundred kor, in which case he would have become a nazirite, he must now also become a nazirite. Here,[4] too, since, had the other come before us and we had known that it was So-and-so, he would have become a nazirite, now [that the other has not come] he also becomes a nazirite.

MISHNAH. IF [ONE MAN] SAW A KOY[5] AND SAID, 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS A BEAST OF CHASE, [AND ANOTHER] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS NOT A BEAST OF CHASE,' [A THIRD SAID] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS CATTLE,' [A FOURTH SAID,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS NOT CATTLE,' [A FIFTH SAID,] I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS BOTH A BEAST OF CHASE AND CATTLE,' [AND A SIXTH SAID,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF THAT IS NEITHER BEAST OF CHASE NOR CATTLE.' [THEN A SEVENTH SAID,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF ONE OF YOU IS A NAZIRITE,' [AN EIGHTH SAID,] I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF NOT ONE OF YOU IS A NAZIRITE,' [WHILST A NINTH SAID,] 'I DECLARE MYSELF A NAZIRITE IF YOU ARE ALL NAZIRITES, THEN ALL OF THEM BECOME NAZIRITES.

GEMARA. In one [Baraitha] it is taught that nine [can become] nazirites,[6] and in another that nine naziriteships [can be undertaken].[7] Now there would be nine nazirites if, for example, a number of men referred to [the Koy] one after another;[8] but how is it possible for nine naziriteships [to be undertaken] by one man? There could indeed be six, as enumerated in our Mishnah,[9] but how could the other three be undertaken? — R. Shesheth replied: He could say,[10] 'I declare myself a nazirite and undertake the naziriteships of you all.'[11]

C H A P T E R V I

MISHNAH. THREE THINGS ARE FORBIDDEN TO A NAZIRITE, VIZ.:- RITUAL DEFILEMENT, POLLING, AND PRODUCTS OF THE VINE. ALL PRODUCTS OF THE VINE CAN BE RECKONED TOGETHER[12] WHILST THERE IS NO PENALTY UNLESS HE EATS AN OLIVE'S BULK OF GRAPES,

---

(1) One of those, mentioned in our Mishnah, who undertook a naziriteship if the person approaching were So-and-so.

(2) Tosef. Naz. III.

(3) Thus in R. Judah's view unless the vow is free from all doubt it does not become operative. Tosef. Naz. II. Cf., however, Ned. 192, where the view of R. Judah here, and R. Judah on behalf of R. Tarfon and held by R. Ashi to be identical.

(4) I.e., in the Mishnah.

(5) The Rabbis were uncertain whether the Koy, an animal permitted for food, should be considered of the genus cattle, בהמה or a beast of chase, חיה. V. Aruch s.v. כוי. [It is generally taken as a cross between a goat and some species of gazelle; v. Lewysohn, op. cit. p. 215.]

(6) By using different formulae and making the vow contingent on the Koy being a beast of chase or cattle.

(7) I.e., one man can undertake nine naziriteships by using different formulae with reference to the Koy.

(8) As described in our Mishnah.

(9) For the first six formulae could all be uttered by one man.

(10) Referring to nine men who had each undertaken a naziriteship in the manner of the Mishnah.

(11) I.e., 'I undertake a naziriteship for each one of you who is a nazirite.

(12) To form a total of an olive's bulk in the case of solids, or as the earlier Mishnah has it, a quarter of a 108 in the case of fluids, for the consumption of which there is a penalty, viz. stripes. (Meiri's interpretation of a very difficult passage).

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 34b

[OR,] ACCORDING TO THE EARLIER MISHNAH,[1] UNLESS HE DRINKS A QUARTER [OF A LOG][2] OF WINE. R. AKIBA SAID THAT THERE IS A PENALTY EVEN IF HE SOAKS HIS BREAD IN WINE AND ENOUGH [is ABSORBED] TO MAKE UP ALTOGETHER[3] AN OLIVE'S BULK.[4]

THERE IS A SEPARATE PENALTY FOR WINE, FOR GRAPES, FOR HARZANIM AND FOR ZAGIM.[5] R. ELEAZAR B. AZARIAH SAID: THERE IS NO PENALTY [IN THE CASE OF THE LAST TWO SPECIES] UNLESS HE EATS TWO HARZANIM AND ONE ZAG.

BY HARZANIM AND ZAGIM ARE MEANT THE FOLLOWING. ACCORDING TO R. JUDAH, HARZANIM MEANS THE OUTER PORTION [OF THE GRAPE].[6] ZAG THE INNER PORTION,[7] BUT R. JOSE SAID: THAT YOU MAY NOT ERR, [THINK OF] THE ZOG [BELL] OF AN ANIMAL,[8] OF WHICH THE OUTER PART IS TERMED THE ZOG [HOOD].[9] AND THE INNER PART THE INBAL [CLAPPER].

GEMARA. THREE THINGS ARE FORBIDDEN TO A NAZIRITE, VIZ.: RITUAL DEFILEMENT etc.: Products of the vine are [forbidden] but not the vine itself, so that our Mishnah differs from R. Eleazar, for it has been taught: R. Eleazar said that even leaves and shoots [of the vine] are included [in the things forbidden to a nazirite].

Some draw the inference[10] from the subsequent clause, viz.: WHILST THERE IS NO PENALTY UNLESS HE EATS AN OLIVE'S BULK OF GRAPES. GRAPES only [carry a penalty] but not the vine itself, so that our Mishnah differs from R. Eleazar, for it has been taught: R. Eleazar said that even leaves and shoots are included.

In what [essentially] does the difference [between R. Eleazar and the Rabbis of our Mishnah] lie?-R. Eleazar interprets [certain scriptural passages as consisting of] 'amplifications and limitations,'[11] whilst the Rabbis interpret [them as] general statements and specifications.[12] R. Eleazar [argues as follows:] He shall abstain from wine and strong drink[13] is a limitation,[14] whilst, Nothing that is made of the grape-vine[15] is an amplification. When a limitation is followed by an amplification all things are embraced.[16] What then does the amplification serves to include [here]? Everything [coining from the vine],[17] and what does the limitation exclude? Only the twigs.

The Rabbis, on the other hand, [argue as follows:] 'He shall abstain from wine and strong drink' is a specification;[18] '[He shall eat] nothing that is made of the grape-vine' is a general statement; 'from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone'[19] is again a specification. When we have a specification, a generalisation, and a [second] specification, only what is similar to the specification may be adjudged [to be within the scope of the prohibition]. In the specification fruit[20] and fruit refuse[21] are particularised, and so whatever is fruit[22] or fruit refuse [is prohibited].[23] Should you object that in the specification ripe fruit is particularised, and so only what is ripe fruit [is prohibited],[24] the reply is that [in this view] nothing would be left implicit in Scripture, everything being explicitly mentioned.[25] Fresh grapes and dried grapes are mentioned, as are also wine and vinegar. It follows that the inference must be drawn not in the latter form,[26] but in the first form. Again, seeing that we finally include everything [similar to fruit or fruit refuse], for what purpose is 'from pressed grapes even to the grape-stone mentioned [separately from the other specification]?[27] To tell us that wherever a specification is followed by a general statement it is not permissible to extend [the terms of the specification] so as to include only whatever is similar to it, but the general statement widens the scope of the specification,[28] unless Scripture indicates the specification in the manner in which it is indicated in the case of the nazirite.[29]

The Master said: 'In the specification fruit and fruit refuse are particularised, and so whatever is fruit or fruit refuse [is prohibited].' 'Fruit' means grapes, but what is 'fruit refuse'? — Vinegar. What is meant by 'Whatever is fruit'? — Unripe grapes. And by 'whatever is fruit refuse'? — R. Kahana said that this serves to include worm-eaten grapes.[30] [And what is the significance of] 'even to the grape-stone'?[31] Rabina said that this serves to include the intermediate part.[32]

The Master said: 'Should you object that in the specification raw ripe fruit is particularised, and so only what is ripe fruit [is prohibited], the reply is that [on this view] nothing would be left implicit in Scripture, everything being explicitly mentioned. Fresh grapes and dried grapes are mentioned, as are also wine and vinegar. It follows that the inference must be drawn not in the latter form, but in the first form. Again, seeing that we finally include everything [similar to fruit or fruit refuse], for what purpose is from pressed grapes even to the grape-stone mentioned [separately from the other specification]? To tell us that wherever a specification is followed by a general statement it is not permissible to extend [the terms of the specification] as as to include only whatever is similar to It, but the general statement widens the scope of the specification, unless Scripture indicates the specification

---

(1) [Or 'First Mishnah', a collection of Halachoth the compilation of which began according to Geonic accounts as early as Hillel and Shammai; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 163, n. 7.]

(2) A quarter of a log is between 50 and 60 c.c. (== the bulk of one and a half average-sized eggs).

(3) I.e., along with the bread.

(4) According to R. Akiba, an olive's bulk (less than 10 c.c.) carries with it a penalty in the case of liquids.

(5) There is no need to consume more than one variety to incur the penalty. All four species are mentioned in Num. VI, 3-4. harzanim being usually translated 'pressed grapes' and zag, 'grape-stone', following the opinion of R. Judah given later in the Mishnah.

(6) The skin.

(7) The stone.

(8) The bell suspended at the animal's neck.

(9) And so, too, zag of a grape is its skin.

(10) That our Mishnah and R. Eleazar differ.

(11) Ribbni u-Mi'ut. I.e., as consisting of clauses that amplify and clauses that restrict.

(12) Kelal u-ferat. The significance of these technical terms will become clearer in the argument set out below. For a full explanation of these terms, v. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) p. 12, n. 3.

(13) Num. VI, 3.

(14) The things prohibited are confined to the things mentioned.

(15) Num. VI, 3. Lit., Of everything that is made . . he shall not eat.

(16) I.e., the scope, in this case of the prohibition, is as wide as possible, the restriction serving merely to exclude some one thing, here the twigs.
(17) And so also the leaves and the shoots.
(18) Of the things forbidden.
(19) Num. VI, 4; the concluding half of the last verse quoted.
(20) Grapes and wine.
(21) Vinegar.
(22) Including unripe grapes.
(23) Worm-eaten grapes.
(24) And thus unripe grapes would be excluded.
(25) I.e., there is no form of ripe fruit different from those mentioned in the verses quoted.
(26) Restricted to ripe fruit.
(27) I.e., why does not the whole specification precede the generalisation.
(28) And includes also things not similar to the specification.
(29) With the general statement interrupting it.
(30) That went bad before they ripened.
(31) In Num. VI, 3.
(32) What remains of the flesh after the wine has drained off.

in the manner in which it is indicated in the case of the nazirite.

Now, R. Eleazar b. Azariah utilises the clause, 'from the pressed grapes even to the grape stone' for the inference that there is no penalty unless he eats two pressed grapes and one grape-stone.[1] Where does he find a [second] specification?[2] -He will agree with R. Eleazar who interprets [the passage as a clause that] amplifies [followed by a clause] that limits.[3] Alternatively, it can be argued that he agrees with the Rabbis, for [he might say] if [the sole object of this clause were the inference] of R. Eleazar b. Azariah, the Torah could have included, 'from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone' with the other items specified.[4] Why then does it appear after the general statement? To show that the text is to be construed as a general statement followed by a specification. But why should not this be its sole object?[5] If this were so, the verse should have read either 'pressed grapes and grape-stones [with both words in the plural] or 'pressed grape and grape-stone [with both in the singular]. The reason why the All-merciful says, 'from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone' can only be that we should both interpret as a general statement followed by a specification and infer [that there is no penalty] unless he eats two pressed-grapes and one grape-stone.

Now R. Eleazar interprets [the text as consisting of] a clause that amplifies and a clause that limits. Where then does he find [in the Scripture the typical example of] specification, general statement and second specification?-R. Abbahu said that he finds it in the following verse. If a man deliver unto his neighbour an ass, or an ox, or a sheep,[6] is a specification; or any beast is a generalisation; to keep is a further specification[7] and so we may infer only what is similar to the specification.[8]

Raba said that [R. Eleazar] could find one in the following verse. And if [his offering] be of [the flock][9] is a specifications the flock a general statement, and [whether of] the sheep, [or of] the goats a further specification, and so we may infer only what is similar to the specification.[10]

Rab Judah of Diskarta[11] asked Raba: Why should not [R. Eleazar] find it in the following verse? [Ye shall bring your offering] of[12] is a specification the cattle [beasts] a general statement, and [of] the herd [or of] the flock a further specification, and so only what is similar to the specification can be inferred?[13] — He replied: This is not a clear case, for if [he inferred it] from there it could be argued that [in the expression] ‘the cattle’,

---

(1) V. our Mishnah supra.

(2) To be able to continue the argument as the Rabbis do.

(3) In R. Eleazar's argument no second specification is needed.

(4) In the verse preceding.

(5) Leaving no room for R. Eleazar b. Azariah's further ruling.

(6) As a bailment. Ex. XXIII, 9.

(7) For it excludes beasts of prey which cannot be ‘kept’, i.e. guarded.

(8) Domestic animals of any kind and also poultry.

(9) Lev. I, 10. The inference depends on the Hebrew construction which could have read ‘And if flock’, so that the expression ‘of the flock’ does limit the choice permitted.

(10) In this example it is not clear from the verse what is excluded. An animal that had been worshipped as a deity would be forbidden as a sacrifice, but the commentators differ as to whether Raba could have had this in mind.

(11) [Deskarah, sixteen parasangs N.E. of Bagdad Obermeyer op. cit. p. 146.]

(12) Lev. 1, 2. (V. note 4).

(13) Viz.: domestic clean animals, though the age would be immaterial.

cattle includes beasts of chase.[1] — [Rab Judah] retorted: Could beasts of chase be included In ‘cattle’ [in this instance]? For ‘the herd and the flock’[2] are mentioned, making in fact a specifications a general statement, and a specifications and only what is similar to the specification can be inferred![3]

How do we know that [the rule] is correct?[4] -It has been taught: And thou shalt bestow the money for whatsoever thy soul desireth[5] is a general statement, for oxen or for sheep or for wine or for strong drink a specification, and or for whatsoever thy soul asketh of thee a further general statement, making a general statement, a specification and a second general statement. Only what is similar to the specification may be inferred,[6] and so because the specification particularises the product of that which is itself a product ,[7] whose sustenance is drawn from the earth ,[8] whatever is a product of a product-bearing species that draws its sustenance from the earth [may be purchased].[9]

Seeing that when there is a general statement, a specifications and a general statement, we infer whatever is similar to the specification, what is then the function of the second general statement? It is to add whatever resembles the things specified.[10] Again, seeing that when there is a specifications a general statement, and a specifications what is similar to the specification is inferred, what is the purpose of the second specification? — But for its presence it would be said that it is a case of general statement being added to the [first] specification.[11] Further, seeing that both when there are two general statements [separated by] a specification and when there are two specifications [separated by] a general statement, what is similar to the specification is inferred, what then is the difference between the two cases? — It is that whereas in the former case we include even things that resemble the specification In one respect only,[12] in the latter case we include only what resembles [the specification] in two respects, but not what resembles it in one respect.[13]

Seeing that when a specification is followed by a general statement, the general statement supplements the specification, all things being included, and again when a limitation is followed by an amplifying clause, this amplifies to the fullest extent, all things being included, what then is the difference between [the two cases]? — The difference is that whereas in the case of a specification followed by a general statement, both shoots and leaves [say],[14] would be included, in the case of a limitation followed by an amplifying clause, Only the shoots, but not the leaves [would be included].[15] R. Abbahu said: R. Johanan said that what is permitted is not reckoned together with what is forbidden[16] in the case of any prohibition of the Torah with the exception of the prohibitions of the nazirite where the Torah says explicitly, [Neither shall he drink] that which is soaked in grapejuice.[17]

---

(1) And so the second specification is in any case necessary to exclude these, and we cannot use it to derive the method of specification etc.

(2) Which are domestic clean animals and not beasts of chase, and their mention serves to exclude beasts of chase.

(3) Thus beasts of chase would be automatically excluded by the operation of the rule, so that the rule can be applied.

(4) Viz.: that when there is more than one specification, whatever is similar can be inferred (Rashi).

(5) Deut. XIV, 26, referring to money converted from the second tithe.

(6) Thus the presence of a second generalisation alters the rule that applies when there is a single clause of each kind. The same is taken to be true when there is a second specification.

(7) Mineral substances are thus excluded.

(8) In contrast to fish.

(9) E.g., poultry also.

(10) Without the second general statement, only the things actually specified would be included in the scope of the subject under discussion.

(11) [In which case the rule is that even things that do not resemble the specification are included.]

(12) E.g., in the case of the second tithe we do not also require the thing purchased to be attached to the soil and so exclude poultry.

(13) And so, for example, vine shoots are not forbidden the nazirite although they may be edible.

(14) This is not referring to any particular case, but is simply an illustration of how the difference might arise.

(15) V. Shebu. (Sonc. ed.) p. 12, n. 3.

(16) I.e., there is no penalty unless a full olive's bulk of the forbidden food is consumed. Thus half an olive's bulk of forbidden fat and half of permissible meat would entail no penalty.

(17) E.V. ‘liquor’. Num. VI, 3. Hence an olive's bulk of, e.g., bread soaked in wine carries the penalty.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 36a

Ze'iri said: Another [exception] is leaven which it is prohibited to burn [on the altar] .[1] According to whom [will Ze'iri infer this? Evidently] after the manner of R. Eleazar who interprets the particle kol [any].[2] But then should not another exception be leaven [on passover]?[3] — Quite so. But [Ze'iri wished to indicate his] dissent from the opinion of Abaye that the burning of even less than an olive's bulk counts as an offering,[4] and so he [incidentally] tells us that the burning of less than an olive's bulk does not count as an offering.[5]

As R. Dimi was once sitting and repeating the above reported decision [of R. Johanan][6] Abaye raised the following objection. [A Mishnah says:] If part of a stew of terumah[7] containing garlic and oil of hullin[8] is touched by a [defiled person who] had bathed that day,[9] the whole is rendered unfit [to be eaten].[10] If part of a stew of hullin containing garlic and oil of terumah is touched by a [defiled person who] had bathed that day, only that part that was touched becomes unfit [to be eaten].[11] Now, in discussing this it was asked why the part touched should become unfit[12] and Rabbah b. Bar Hanah quoting R. Johanan replied: The reason is that a layman[13] would be scourged for eating an olive's bulk.[14] Surely this

---

(1) Lev. II, 11.

(2) Ibid. ‘any leaven’ as a sign that even in combination it is forbidden, with the full penalty for transgression.

(3) For here R. Eleazar explicitly makes this interpretation of kol, (v. Pes. 43b), and so why does not Ze'iri mention it.

(4) So that even if the total bulk burnt is less than an olive, there is a penalty. V. Men. 58a.

(5) Although not all the olive's bulk need be leaven. That leaven on passover is another exception we are expected to infer.

(6) That what is permitted does not combine with what is forbidden.

(7) The priestly heaveoffering (v. GIos.). It had to be kept in ritual purity.

(8) 'Profane food' i.e. not terumah.

(9) And would become ritually pure after sunset. Although counted as clean for many purposes he could still defile terumah.

(10) Including the garlic and the oil, which are regarded as though absorbed in the terumah.

(11) Teb. Y. II, 3.

(12) Seeing that hullin predominates.

(13) A non-priest who is forbidden to eat terumah.

(14) Thus the predominance of hullin does not take away the sacred character of the terumah contained in the mixture.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 36b

is because permitted food combines with forbidden?[1] — [R. Dimi] replied: No! [What R. Johanan means] by an olive's bulk is that an olive's bulk [of actual terumah][2] would be consumed during the time taken to eat a peras.[3] [Abaye objected:] Is then the time taken to eat a peras [reckoned] as a meal by the Torah?[4] — [R. Dimi] replied: It is. Then, [Abaye asked], why do the Rabbis differ from R. Eleazar as regards Babylonian kutah?[5] [R. Dimi] replied: Let Babylonian kutah alone,[6] since there is no olive's bulk [of leaven] consumed in the time it takes to eat a peras. For if a man does gulp down [a large quantity] at once, we disregard such a fancy as being quite exceptional,[7] whilst if one merely dips [other food] into it, you will not find an olive's bulk [of the leaven] consumed in the time taken to eat a peras.[8]

He [Abaye] raised objection against [R. Dimi's ruling from the following passage]. [It has been taught:] If two [spice] mortars, one containing terumah and the other hullin stood near two pots, one containing terumah and the other hullin, and [the contents of] the first pair fell into the other pair,[9] both [dishes] may be eaten,[10] for we assume that hullin fell into hullin and terumah into terumah. Now if it is a fact that the consumption of an olive's bulk within the time taken to eat a peras is [prohibited by] the Torah, why do we make this assumption?[11] — But if, [granting your view, replied R. Dimi] permitted and forbidden foods combine, how again could the assumption be justified?[12] The fact is that no argument can be based on the terumah of spices, [for its sanctity is the result] of a rabbinic enactment.[13]

He [Abaye] raised a [further] objection. [It has been taught:] If two baskets, one containing terumah and the other hullin stood near two vessels,[14] one of terumah and the other of hullin and the former pair were tipped into the latter, both are permitted, for we assume that hullin fell into hullin and terumah into terumah.[15] Now if it is a fact that an olive's bulk consumed within the time taken to eat a peras is [prohibited by] the Torah, how can we make such an assumption?

---

(1) Seeing that scourging is the penalty for eating an olive's bulk of the mixture.

(2) Not of the mixture.

(3) Lit. 'piece', a piece of bread equal in size to four average eggs. This interval constitutes a single meal (Ker. III, 3). Since the quantity of terumah contained in the amount of stew eaten in this interval was an olive's bulk, there would be a penalty of scourging for a layman. [According to Maimonides, Yad, Erubin I, 9, peras is equal to three average 'eggs'].

(4) So that stripes would be inflicted even if other food is taken in the same interval.

(5) A preserve of sour milk, bread crusts and salt used as a source. R. Eleazar considered it to be prohibited on Passover by the Torah, so that its consumption entailed a penalty, whilst the Rabbis considered it to be forbidden only by rabbinic decree; v. Pes. 43a.

(6) For if indeed permitted and forbidden foods combined, you would be still harder put to it to explain why the Rabbis would not consider it forbidden by the Torah-law! (So the text in yes. 44a).

(7) Because ordinary people do not use it as a food, his eccentric eating of it is not treated as eating to entail a penalty.

(8) And so it is only forbidden by rabbinic decree.

(9) Without it being known which was tipped into which.

(10) I.e., the dish of hullin may still be eaten by a layman.
(11) Since a mixture of terumah and hullin would be forbidden in Torah-law, our doubt concerning the dishes should be resolved (as it always is in cases of Torah-law) in the stricter sense, and both declared terumah.
(12) For then the doubt would certainly be concerned with Torah-law, so that both dishes should be forbidden.
(13) The Torah does not require terumah to be separated from spices. Hence the doubt concerns only what is forbidden by the Rabbis and so is resolved in the more lenient sense.
(14) Heb. Sa'in, plural of Sa'ah, a large dry measure, here assumed to contain grain.
(15) Tosef. Ter. VI, 15.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 37a

On my view that what is permitted and what is forbidden combine fin general], this will offer no difficulty, for it may be taken for granted that hullin predominated;[1] whereas on your view [that there is a prohibition whenever] an olive's bulk is consumed within the time taken to eat a peras, what difference would the predominance of hullin make?[2] — [R. Dimi] replied: Do not seek to argue from terumah at the present time, for [its sanctity] is rabbinic.[3]

Abaye asked [R. Dimi]: What ground is there for assuming that the purpose of the phrase 'soaked in'[4] is to indicate that what is permitted and what is forbidden combine,[5] for may not its purpose be to indicate that the taste is equivalent to the substance itself?[6] (Is not this curious? First Abaye is perplexed by R. Dimi's statement[7] and points out all the above contradictions, and then he suggests that perhaps, after all, the flavour is equivalent to the substance![8] — After [R. Dimi] had answered him,[9] he went on to suggest that perhaps its purpose is to indicate that the taste is equivalent to the substance itself.)[10] For it has been taught: The phrase 'soaked in' makes the taste equivalent to the substance itself, so that if [the nazirite] soaked grapes in water and this acquired the taste of wine, there would be a penalty [for drinking it].[11] From this case, an inference may be drawn applicable to all prohibitions of the Torah. For seeing that in the case of the nazirite where the prohibition is not permanent,[12] where he is not forbidden to derive any benefit [from wine],[13] and where he may even have the prohibition removed,[14] the taste was declared to be equivalent to the substance, then in the case of mixed seeds in the vineyard[15] where the prohibition is permanent, where it is forbidden to derive any benefit from them, and where there is no way in which the prohibition can be removed it surely follows that the flavour is to be equivalent to the substance itself. The same argument applies to Orlah[16] which has two [of these properties].[17] — [R. Dimi] replied:[18] The above represents the view of the Rabbis, whereas R. Abbahu, in making his statement [on behalf of R. Johanan],[19] was following the opinion of R. Akiba. To what [statement of] R. Akiba [does this refer]? Shall I say that it is the [dictum of] R. Akiba to be found here [in our Mishnah] where we learn: R. AKIBA SAID THAT THERE IS A PENALTY EVEN IF HE SOAKS HIS BREAD IN WINE AND ENOUGH [IS ABSORBED] TO COMBINE INTO AN OLIVE'S BULK;[20] But whence [do you know that the olive's bulk includes the bread eaten]?[21] May it not mean that the wine alone must be an olive's bulk! And should you object that the statement would then be obvious?[22] [To this we may reply] that its object is to indicate dissent from the opinion of the first Tanna[23] [that there is no penalty] Unless he drinks a quarter [of a log] of wine! It must therefore be the [statement of] R. Akiba to be found in the following Baraitha where it is taught: R: Akiba said that a nazirite who soaks his bread in wine and eats an olive's bulk of the bread and wine is liable [to the penalty]. R. Aha, the son of R. Iwia, asked R. Ashi: Whence will R. Akiba, who interprets the phrase 'whatever is soaked in' as implying that permitted and forbidden foods combine, derive the rule that the taste is equivalent to the substance itself?[24] — He can derive it from [the prohibition of] meat and milk [seethed together],[25] for there is no more than the mere taste in that case[26] and yet it is forbidden, whence we may infer that the same is true here.[27] The Rabbis do not allow this inference to be made from meat and milk because it is an anomalous [prohibition].[28]

What constitutes its anomaly? Shall I say it is the fact that each constituent is permitted separately, while the combination is forbidden? Surely also in the case of mixed [seeds][29] each constituent is permitted separately and the combination is forbidden![30] — It is, therefore, the fact that If soaked in milk all day long, [the meat] remains permitted, and yet on seething it becomes forbidden.[31]

Must not R. Akiba, too, agree that [the seething together of] meat and milk is an anomalous [prohibition]?[32] — It must therefore be

---

(1) So that there would no longer be a Torah-prohibition, for the predominance of the hullin causes the terumah to lose its identity in Torah-law. This argument could not be used of spices since its flavour which permeates the whole dish is too strong to become neutralised.

(2) For it is unlikely that the Baraitha is assuming that there was so little in the baskets that a peras of the mixed contents afterwards contained less than an olive's bulk of the contents of one of them. The Torah-doubt would therefore remain.

(3) After the destruction of the Temple and the depopulation of Judea, many scriptural precepts, including the separation of tithes and terumah were still observed by the people, although not strictly binding on them in Torah law.

(4) V. supra p. 128, n. 6.

(5) In the case of the nazirite prohibitions only, as asserted by R. Dimi quoting R. Johanan. V. supra 35a, end.

(6) I.e., anything flavoured with a forbidden substance is equally forbidden, even as the forbidden substance itself. [That is, provided the forbidden substance consisted originally of the size of an olive. This requirement distinguishes Abaye's principle from the one reported by R. Dimi in virtue of which what is permitted combines with what is forbidden, even though the Iatter is less in size than an olive's bulk.]

(7) And considers that the same should be true of all prohibitions, not merely the nazirite prohibition.

(8) Thus rejecting the inference in toto!

(9) All the questions he put to him.

(10) The bracketed passage is an interjection.

(11) And so why does not R. Johanan make the same inference as the author of this Baraitha? The rest of the paragraph contains the concluding portion of the Baraitha.

(12) But lasts as long as the naziriteship, which may be as little as thirty days.

(13) He may, for example, sell it.

(14) By giving sufficient grounds for this to a Sage.

(15) It was forbidden to sow grain between the vines, v. Deut. XXII, 9.

(16) The fruit of a tree during its first three years after planting, v. Lev. XIX, 23.

(17) The prohibition is permanent, and it is forbidden to derive any benefit from it, but after the 3rd year the fruit may be eaten. — This ends Abaye's argument.

(18) [So Var. lec. Cur. edd.: ‘A certain scholar said to him’.]

(19) Supra 35b, that permitted and forbidden foods combine in the case of the nazirite prohibition.

(20) Supra 34b.

(21) To enable us to infer that permitted and forbidden foods combine.

(22) In which case there would have been no point in having it in the Mishnah.

(23) The Tanna of the ‘earlier Mishnah’ mentioned in our Mishnah.

(24) It is assumed that R. Akiba admits this rule.

(25) V.Ex. XXIII, 19.

(26) Since the meat by itself is forbidden owing to the taste of the milk it absorbed.

(27) I.c., that water having the taste of wine is forbidden the nazirite.

(28) And 50 cannot be made the basis of a general rule.

(29) The planting of mixed seeds in a vineyard, v. Deut. XXII, 9.

(30) So that milk and meat are not unique in this respect.

(31) Thus it is not the taste but the seething that is at the root of the prohibition.

(32) From which no analogies can be drawn.

that he derives the rule from the [necessity for] scalding the vessels of a Gentile.[1] For the

All-Merciful Law has said, Everything that may abide the fire [ye shall make go through the fire etc,][2] telling us that they are [otherwise] forbidden. Now the scalding of a Gentile's vessels [must be done] because the mere taste is forbidden, and so here too, the same is true.

Then why should not the Rabbis also infer this rule from the scalding of a Gentile's vessels? — [Rab Ashi] replied: There [too] the prohibition is anomalous for everywhere else in the Torah whatever imparts a worsened flavour is permitted,[3] whereas in the case of the scalding of a Gentile's vessels a worsened [flavour][4] is forbidden.

Must not R. Akiba agree that this case is anomalous?[5] — R. Huna b. Hiyya replied: According to R. Akiba, the Torah only forbade utensils that had been used [by a gentile] on the same day, in which case the flavour is not detrimental.[6] And the Rabbis? — They considered that even with a pot that had been used on the same day it was impossible for the flavour not to be slightly detrimental. R. Aha, the son of R. Iwia, said to R. Ashi: The Rabbis' opinion should throw a certain light on the views of R. Akiba. For the Rabbis say that [the phrase] 'whatever is soaked in' has as its object to indicate that the taste is equivalent to the substance itself, and [further] that a rule may be derived from this applicable to all prohibitions of the Torah. And so, ought not R. Akiba also, who interprets this same [phrase] 'whatever is soaked in' as implying that what is permitted combines with what is forbidden, infer [further] from it a rule applicable to all prohibitions of the Torah?[7] [R. Ashi] replied: [He does not do so] because the nazirite and the sin-offering[8] are dealt with in two verses [of Scripture] from which the same inference[9] is possible, and whenever there are two verses from which the same inference is possible no other cases may be inferred.[10]

The nazirite [passage] is the one just explained.[11] What is [the inference from] sin-offering? It has been taught: [The verse] Whatsoever [food] shall touch the flesh thereof[12] shall be holy[13] might be taken to imply that [it becomes holy] even if none [of the sin-offering] is absorbed by it.[14] Scripture [however] says the flesh thereof, [this indicates that it becomes sacred] only when It absorbs from its flesh;[15] 'it [then] shall be holy', [that is, have the same degree of sanctity] as [the sin-offering] itself.[16] If the latter is ritually unfit [to be eaten][17] the other becomes unfit also, whilst if it is still permitted, the other is also permitted, only under the same conditions of stringency [as the sinoffering].[18]

What can the Rabbis [say to this argument]?[19] — They will contend that both verses are necessary.[20] For if the All-Merciful had inscribed only the verse relating to the sin-offering it would have been said that we have no right to infer from it the case of the nazirite, for we could not infer anything about the nazirite from [regulations applying to] sacrificial meats.[21] Again, had the All-Merciful inscribed only the verse relating to the nazirite, It could have been argued that no rule can be derived from the nazirite, since the prohibitions in his case are very severe indeed for he is forbidden even the skin of the grape. On this ground we should have been able to infer nothing. [Thus both verses are necessary.]

What is R. Akiba's reply [to this argument]? — He will reply that both verses are certainly not necessary. Granted that had the All-Merciful inscribed only the verse relating to the sin-offering, we could not have deduced the case of the nazirite because what is profane cannot be inferred from [regulations applying] to sacrificial meats,[22] yet the All-Merciful could have inscribed only the verse relating to the nazirite, and the case of the sin-offering could have been deduced from this, since [in any case] all other prohibitions of the Torah are inferred from the nazirite prohibition.[23] And the Rabbis? — They [can] reply that while the [verse relating to] sin-offering [tells us] that permitted and forbidden foods combine, we cannot infer from [regulations applying to] sacrificial meats any rule concerning profane food,[24] [whereas] when the phrase 'whatever is soaked in' tells us that the taste is equivalent to the substance itself, a rule is inferred from this applicable to all prohibitions of the Torah. And R. Akiba? — He considers that both verses are intended to tell us that what is permitted combines with what is forbidden, so that these are two verses from which the same inference can be made, and when two verses occur from which the same inference can be made, no other cases may be inferred.[25] R. Ashi said to R. Kahana: How are we to explain the following, where it is taught: '[The verse] Nothing that is made of the grape-vine, from the pressed grapes even to the grape-stone,[26] teaches that the things forbidden to a nazirite can combine together'?[27] For seeing that it is possible, according to R. Akiba, for what is permitted to combine with what is forbidden, need we be told that the same is true of two species of forbidden substances? — [R. Kahana] replied: What is permitted [combines with] what is forbidden only [if they are eaten] together, whereas two species of forbidden substances combine even [if eaten] consecutively.

Now R. Simeon

---

(1) Before they can be used by Jews.

(2) Referring to the vessels captured by the Jews during the campaign against Midian. Num. XXXI, 23. The scalding prescribed causes the sides of the vessel to exude forbidden flavours that may have been absorbed.

(3) And consequently does not cause what is permitted to become forbidden. For the derivation of this rule v. A.Z. 67b.

(4) Any flavour exuded from the sides of a cooking-utensil nor properly scalded of course worsens the food.

(5) And so bow can it form the basis of our rule.

(6) And we may properly infer that the flavour of a forbidden substance is forbidden.

(7) Whereas R. Johanan, who is following the opinion of R. Akiba, expressly confines the rule to nazirite prohibitions only; v. supra 35b.

(8) This is explained immediately below.

(9) Viz.: That a permitted and a forbidden substance combine.

(10) Ordinarily a rule is derived from a single passage. If another passage occurs from which exactly the same rule would follow, it can only be because there is in fact no rule, and both the cases are exceptional; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 458, n. 9.

(11) Whatever is soaked in... Num. VI, 3-

(12) I.e. of the sin-offering.

(13) Lev. VI, 20.

(14) The meaning is: It might have been taken as implying this if the word flesh had not been used.

(15) In which case the permitted and forbidden foods have combined. R. Akiba's deduction now follows. [The text of cur. edd. is difficult. A better reading is preserved in the Sifra a.l. 'till it absorbs', omitting the words, 'into its flesh.]

(16) The sin-offering could be eaten only 'by the males of the priesthood, within the hanging of the court, the same day and evening until midnight'. (M. Zeb. V, 3; Singer's P. B. p. 12). For other meats there were other, often less stringent regulations. (Ibid.).

(17) E.g. because it is after midnight.

(18) See note 10.

(19) If the verses relating to nazirite and sin-offering both lead to the same inference how do they establish their rule about taste and substance?

(20) I.e. That it is in fact impossible to infer the rule from either one of the passages taken alone, since its presence would have been put down to other properties of the sinoffering or the nazirite, which are really irrelevant as far as the rule is concerned.

(21) Since no rule about profane things can be inferred from sacred ones. This is a general principle.

(22) So that the inference that could be drawn from the sin-offering is admittedly not exactly the same as that drawn from the nazirite prohibitions

(23) By the Rabbis. For no mention of the sin-offering is made in the Baraitha (supra 37a). Thus this verse would be altogether superfluous, and the principle of 'two verses from which the same inference can be drawn' can be applied.

(24) And so this principle is confined to sacred meats.

(25) And that is why R. Akiba confines the principle to the nazirite prohibitions.

(26) Num. VI, 4.

(27) So that provided an olive's bulk is consumed there is a penalty, even if the quantity of each constituent is less than this.

does not require the principle of combination.[1] What interpretation does he put on the verse, 'Nothing that is made etc.'? — He requires it for the rule that one cannot become a nazirite without undertaking explicitly to abstain from all the things [that are forbidden a nazirite].[2]

R. Abbahu, quoting R. Eleazar, said: In none of the instances In the Torah requiring a quarter [of a log][3] does what is permitted combine with what is forbidden, with the exception of the quarter [of a log] of the nazirite, where the Torah uses the phrase 'soaked in'.[4] What is the difference between R. Johanan[5] and R. Eleazar? — It is that the former includes solid foods,[6] the latter liquids only but no other things. R. Eleazar said that there are ten quarters [of a log][7] and R. Kahana knew for a fact[8] that five [involved] red [liquids][9] and five white.[10] For the five red ones [there is the following mnemonic]:[11] A nazirite and a celebrant of the passover who delivered judgment in the sanctuary and died. 'A nazirite' indicates the quarter [log] of wine [entailing a penalty] for the nazirite [who drinks it].[12] 'A celebrant of the passover' refers to the following dictum quoted by Rab Judah on behalf of Samuel viz: — Each of these four cups[13] should contain sufficient [undiluted wine] to make a quarter of a log [of diluted wine].[14] 'Who delivered judgment' [refers to the law that] one who has partaken of a quarter of a log of wine must not render a decision.[15] 'In the sanctuary [refers to the law that a priest] who drinks a quarter of a log of wine and then enters the sanctuary renders himself liable to death penalty.[16] 'And they died' [indicates the following teaching]: For it has been taught, whence do we infer that a quarter of a log of blood taken from two corpses renders unclean the contents of a tent? Because it is said, Neither shall he go to any dead body.[17]

The five white [fluids are indicated in the following mnemonic]: The cake of a nazirite or a leper who were disqualified on the Sabbath. 'The cake' [signifies] the quarter of a log of oil for the cake;[18] 'of a nazirite', the quarter of a log of oil [that must be brought] by a nazirite;[19] 'or a leper,' the quarter of a log of water [that must be used] for a leper.[20] 'Disqualified' [indicates] what we have learnt: Other ritually defiled liquids render the body unfit[21] if a quarter of a log [is partaken of].[22] 'On the Sabbath' [indicates] what we have learnt: For all other liquids [the legal quantity][23] is a quarter of a log, and for all waste liquids [the legal quantity] is a quarter of a log.

But is there no instance other than [the ten mentioned, requiring a quarter of a log?] There is surely the case: 'With a quarter [of a log of water] the hands of one person, and even of two may be washed [before food]'![24] Disputed cases are not included.[25] But we have [also the following case]: He brought an earthenware phial and poured into it half a log of water from the laver.[26] According to R. Judah it was only a quarter of a log'?[27] — Disputed cases are not included.

But we have [also the following]: 'How much water must be poured [into the chamber-pot]?[28] As little as one pleases. R. Zakkai said: It must be a quarter of a log'.[29] — Disputed cases are not included.

But there is also the ritual-bath?[30] — [There are ten cases] besides this one, for the Rabbis [subsequently] disallowed this quantity.[31]

---

(1) Because in his opinion there is a penalty even for a minute quantity of any one of the things forbidden the nazirite. V. supra 4a.

(2) Supra 3b.

(3) E.g., The quarter-log of blood that spreads defilement throughout a tent; Cf. infra 54a.

(4) Num. VI, 3.

(5) Who uses the term 'all the prohibitions of the Torah' instead of 'all quarters (of a log) in the Torah'. Supra 35b.

(6) In the scope of the application of the principle.

(7) In ten instances the quantity of fluid required by the Law is a quarter of a log.
(8) Lit., 'held in his hand'.
(9) Wine or blood.
(10) Water or oil.
(11) Each term of the mnemonic indicates one of the instances.
(12) Mishnah supra 34b
(13) That must he partaken of at the passover meal; v. Pes. X, 1.
(14) Wine was usually diluted with three parts of water, v. Pes. 108b.
(15) Inferred from the juxtaposition of the forbidding of wine to priests about to enter the sanctuary (Lev. X, 9) and the statement that a priest's duty is to 'teach (lit., 'render decisions for') the children of Israel'. (Ibid. V, 11).
(16) M. Ker. III, 3, inferred from Lev. X. 9.
(17) Lev. XXI, 11. Heb. 'nafshoth' in the plural, and so two or more corpses, v. Sanh. 4a.
(18) I.e., the unleavened portion of the thankoffering, which required half of what was brought for the whole thank-offering. V. Lev. VII, 12 and Men. 8 (Tosaf).
(19) Num. VI, 15.
(20) Lev. XIV, 5.
(21) I.e., ritually unclean.
(22) V. Me'il. 17b. [There the reading is 'all liquids'. Our text is difficult to explain; cf. Bertinoro on Mik. x, 7.]
(23) The removal of which from a public to a private domain carries with it a penalty for breach of the Sabbath.
(24) Yad. I, 1.
(25) This is not a unanimous opinion, R. Jose contending that each person requires a quarter of a log (ibid.).
(26) The Mishnah is describing the preparation of the 'bitter waters' to be drunk by a faithless wife. V. Lev. V, 17.
(27) Sotah II, 2.
(28) To enable one to say one's prayers in the same room.
(29) Ber. 25b.
(30) A ritual-bath containing a quarter of a log might be used for dipping small vessels such as needles to remove ritual defilement; v. Pes. 17b.
(31) And enacted that only a full-size ritual-bath containing 40 seahs was to be used even for needles. V. Hag. 21b.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 38b

WHILST THERE IS NO PENALTY UNLESS HE EATS AN OLIVE'S BULK OF GRAPES etc.:] The first Tanna[1] does not put all the things forbidden a nazirite on the same footing as drinking,[2] whereas R. Akiba, because of the verse nor eat fresh grapes nor dried,[3] says that just as in eating an olive's bulk [entails a penalty], so for all the prohibitions[4] an olive's bulk [is sufficient to entail a penalty].

THERE IS A SEPARATE PENALTY FOR WINE etc. Our Rabbis taught: [The verse,] 'Nor eat fresh grapes nor dried' indicates that there is a penalty for [eating] the one by itself, and a penalty for [eating] the other by itself.[5] From here a rule may be derived applicable to all prohibitions of the Torah.[6] Just as here where we have a single species [grapes] known by two different names [fresh and dried], each entails a distinct penalty, so wherever we find a single species known by two different names, each entails a penalty distinct from the other. In this way, new wine and grapes are included.[7]

Abaye said: For eating pressed-grapes [the nazirite] is scourged twice;[8] For eating grape-stones he is scourged twice; for eating both pressed-grapes and grape-stones he is scourged three times. Raba[9] said: He is scourged once only [in the first two cases] since we do not scourge for [breach of] the prohibition expressed in general terms.

R. Papa raised an objection: [It is taught] R. Eleazar said that a nazirite who drank wine all day long would be scourged once only. If, however, he was warned, 'Do not drink', and again 'Do not drink', [and so on], there would be a penalty for each [warning]. If he ate fresh grapes, dried grapes, pressed-grapes, grape-stones, and squeezed a cluster of grapes and drank [the liquor] he would be scourged five times.[10] Now if [Abaye is right] he should be scourged six times, including once on account of 'He shall eat nothing [that is made of the grape-vine]'? — [Abaye replied:] He mentioned some and omitted others.[11] But what other [count] is omitted, that the one referred to[12] should have been omitted?[13] — He omitted, He shall not break his word.[14] Had this last, however, been the only one, it would not have been considered an omission,[15] [as it could be argued that R. Eleazar] mentioned only [those prohibitions] that are not found elsewhere, whereas this one is found in connection with ordinary vows too.[16]

Rabina of Parazikia[17] said to R. Ashi: But he has in any case omitted the intermediate portion of the grape![18] — But said R. Papa[19] [in reply to the various arguments advanced]: Five is not actually mentioned [in the Baraitha].[20] But [R. Papa]

---

(1) I.e. the 'earlier Mishnah' of our text, which prescribes a different legal quantity for drinking (viz.: a quarter of a log) than for eating.

(2) And so in other cases an olive's bulk entails a penalty. Thus the first Tanna makes no use of the arguments of R. Akiba given later at all.

(3) Num. VI, 3, the first half of which is the prohibition against drinking.

(4) Including drinking.

(5) So that in eating both together there will be a double penalty.

(6) Tosaf. has the preferable reading 'all prohibitions of the nazirite'.

(7) Although the first can be obtained simply by squeezing the second, a nazirite who partakes of both is scourged twice.

(8) The general prohibition contained in the verse, 'He shall eat nothing that is made of the grape-vine' is held by Abaye to add one scourging to the total number entailed by eating forbidden substances.

(9) In Pes. 41b, where this controversy also occurs, the names are interchanged, Raba's appearing before the statement here attributed to Abaye. V. D.S. a.l

(10) Tosef. Naz. IV, 1. (Here there is a variation based on the Mishnah infra 42a).

(11) I. e. 'five' does not represent the total number of counts, but there are five scourgings in addition to others on counts not mentioned.

(12) Viz., The general prohibition 'He shall eat nothing etc.'

(13) It is assumed that the Tanna would not ordinarily omit one count only.

(14) Num. XXX, 3. There would be stripes for breach of this injunction also.

(15) And so its omission cannot be used as a counter argument against Raba (Tosaf). Aliter 'This is not an omission at all, for R. Eleazar etc.' so that the original contradiction remains.

(16) There is thus a good reason for its omission, and so no objection to its being the only one omitted. (Tosaf.)

(17) [Or Parazika, Farausag, near Bagdad, Obermeyer, p. 269. Var. lec. Raba of Parazikia, v. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 15.]

(18) The pulp, which entails a separate penalty, (v. supra, 34b near end). This would be present in the squeezed cluster, so that there should be six counts apart from the other two.

(19) [Var. lec. Rabina; cf. n. 7.]

(20) The correct reading is '. . . he would be scourged on each count', so that both Abaye and Raba can interpret it to suit their opinions. Incidentally the objection of Rabina of Parazikia is also disposed of.

quoted the passage in contradiction [of Abaye] because of the five [scourgings], and if five is not mentioned in it, why did he quote it as a contradiction? — R. Papa said [to himself]: I imagined that [Abaye's opinion] was not a tradition [he had received], and so he would retract [on hearing my quotation], for I did not know that it was a tradition and that he would not retract.[1]

R. ELEAZAR B. AZARIAH SAID etc.: R. Joseph said: In agreement with whom is the rendering in the Targum[2] as 'from the kernels even unto the skins'?[3] — In agreement with the opinion of R.

Jose.[4]

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITESHIP OF UNSPECIFIED DURATION LASTS THIRTY DAYS.[5] SHOULD [THE NAZIRITE] POLL HIMSELF OR BE POLLED BY BANDITS,[6] THIRTY DAYS ARE RENDERED VOID.[7] A NAZIRITE WHO POLLS HIMSELF, NO MATTER WHETHER HE USES A SCISSORS OR A RAZOR, OR WHO TRIMS [HIS HAIR] HOWEVER LITTLE, INCURS A PENALTY.

GEMARA. [The Academy] wished to know whether the growth of the hair takes place at the roots or at the tips.[8] [The knowledge] is of importance for the case of a nazirite polled by bandits who left enough [of each hair] for the end to be curled in towards the root.[9] If [the hair] grows at the roots the consecrated part has been removed,[10] but if it grows at the tips, then the part he consecrated is still there.[11]

Judge from the live nit found at the root of a strand [of hair], for if it were true that the growth is at the root ought it not to be found at the tip?[12] — The growth may well be at the tip, but the nit, being alive, continually moves down [towards the root].

Judge[13] from a dead nit [that is found] at the end of a strand[of hair], for if it were true that the growth takes place at the end, ought it not to be found near the root? There again [it may well be] because it has no power [to grasp the hair][14] that it slides more and more along it.

Judge from the pigtails of heathens[15] that loosen near the root after growing [for some time]![16] There too, [it may well be] because of its being creased by his lying on it that it grows loose.[17]

Judge from the sekarta[18] for the wool grows fresh again underneath [the marking], and this is something which we learned [in a Mishnah];[19] further when old men dye their beards, these grow white again

---

(1) Instead he tried to explain away the Baraitha as quoted, and so R. Papa explained that there was in fact no contradiction.

(2) V. Targum Onkelos on Num. VI, 4.

(3) Instead of from the ‘pressed-grapes (skins) even to the grape-stone as our versions have.

(4) V. Our Mishnah.

(5) This statement is repeated here (from supra 5a) to explain the rule of the next sentence.

(6) Before bringing his sacrifices.

(7) So that he should have a nazirite's poll when his sacrifices are offered and the vow terminated.

(8) I.e., Does the growth of the hair result from new portions emerging from beneath the scalp, so that the part at first in contact with the scalp is afterwards found at a distance from it; or does this part remain where it is, and the growth take place in the visible part of the hair?

(9) I.e., a seven-days growth, v. infra 39b.

(10) And so this nazirite would have to observe a further thirty days as enjoined in the Mishnah.

(11) And he may proceed to bring his sacrifices and poll in the ordinary manner. In this argument it is taken for granted that a nazirite consecrates the hair on his head at the time of his vow.

(12) Assuming that the nit stays on the same point of the strand all the time.

(13) Lit., ‘come and hear’.

(14) Now that it is dead.

(15) [Heb. belorith (etym. obscure), a heathen fashion of growing locks from the crown of the head hanging down in plaits at the back; v. Krauss, TA I, 645.]

(16) So that new hair must have appeared near the roots.

(17) And not because new hair has grown.

(18) A red paint with which the tenth animals were marked during tithing, v. Bek. IX, 7 (58a).

(19) The Mishnah (Bek. IX, 7) would not have suggested marking with sekarta if the markings were to become hidden shortly afterwards by a new growth. Mishnaic verification is always preferable to a mere argument.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 39b

at the roots.[1] From this we can justly infer that hair increases at the roots. This proves it.

But it has been taught [as follows]: A nazirite polled by bandits who left sufficient [of each hair] for the end to be curled inwards towards the root is not required to render void [his naziriteship].[2] Now if it is true that the hair grows from beneath, why should he not render it void? — It is here assumed that they polled him after the termination [of his naziriteship], and the author is R Eliezer in whose opinion whatever happens after the termination of the naziriteship renders void only seven days,[3] his reason being that he applies the same rule to polling in ritual purity[4] as to polling after defilement. Just as in polling after defilement seven days become void,[5] so in polling in ritual purity seven days are to be come void; and the Rabbis knew for a fact that every seven days enough hair grows for the tip to be curled inwards towards the root.[6]

A NAZIRITE WHO POLLS HIMSELF, NO MATTER WHETHER HE USES A RAZOR OR A SCISSORS,[7] OR WHO TRIMS [HIS HAIR] HOWEVER LITTLE INCURS A PENALTY: Our Rabbis taught: [From the word] razor,[8] I only know [that he is forbidden to use] a razor. How do I know that if he pulls [his hair] out, or plucks it [with tweezers] or trims it however little [he is equally culpable]? The verse continues, He shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow long.[9] The above is the opinion of R. Josiah, whereas R. Jonathan said that 'razor' implies razor only, and if he plucks [his hair] or pulls it out, or trims it but a little there is no penalty.[10] But it says, He shall be holy etc.?[11] — This is to tell us that if he removes it with a razor, he has transgressed both a positive and a negative precept.[12]

Another [Baraitha] taught: 'Razor' tells me only [that he is forbidden to use] a razor. How do l know that if he pulls out [his hair], or plucks it, or trims it but a little [he is equally culpable]? The verse reads, [A razor] shall not come upon his head.[13] Now seeing that we are finally [intended] to include all means [of removing the hair], why are we told that a razor shall not come upon his head? This is because we should not otherwise be able to infer that the final polling must be done with a razor.[14] For it is impossible to derive this from the leper[15]

---

(1) So that the same is true of human hair as of sheep's wool.

(2) But may proceed to bring his sacrifices and Poll in the ordinary manner.

(3) This view is stated in connection with a nazirite who contracted defilement after the termination of his period. V. supra. Mishnah and Gemara 160.

(4) I.e. polling after the termination of the vow in ritual purity. Before the termination, in both cases thirty days become void according to R. Eliezer; Ibid.

(5) Viz.: the seven days during which he is unclean.

(6) So that if this amount was already left by the bandits, he need not wait at all.

(7) In the Mishnah the order is, scissors or razor'.

(8) 'There shall no razor come upon his head' (Num. VI, 5) — of the nazirite.

(9) Indicating that the objection is to removing the hair and not simply to the use of a razor, as the means of removing it.

(10) It is not even forbidden to do this according to R.Jonathan (v. Tosaf.).

(11) Implying at least that it is forbidden to remove his hair by any means, even if there is no penalty (see previous note).

(12) I.e., the implication is also a razor only, the prohibition of its use being merely strengthened.

(13) Interpreted, omitting the first word 'razor', as 'he shall not remove (the hair) of his head'.

(14) At the termination of the naziriteship; v. Num. VI, 18, where the instrument to be used for polling is not mentioned, and so we infer it from the mention of the razor earlier in the passage.

(15) Who is also required to poll; v. Lev. XIV, 8-9.

, since we could not argue to the less stringent[1] from the more stringent[2] and impose [on the former] greater stringency.[3] Rabbi said: This argument is unnecessary.[4] For the text [can be] read, A razor shall not come upon his head until [the days of his naziriteship] are fulfilled,[5] so that the Torah says explicitly that after fulfilment, polling is to be carried out only with a razor.

But it [also] says, A razor shall not come upon his head?[6] — This is to provide for a penalty on two counts.[7]

R. Hisda said that stripes are incurred by [removing] one hair; [the completion of his naziriteship] is held up if two hairs [remain];[8] [the naziriteship] does not become void unless the greater part of his hair is removed by a razor.

[Are we to understand that] a razor only [is meant by R. Hisda] but no other method? Is it not taught 'How do we know that all other methods of removing [the hair are equally forbidden] etc.'? — You must therefore say [in R. Hisda's dictum] 'removed as though by a razor.'[9]

Likewise has it been taught: A nazirite who pulls out [his hair], or plucks it, or trims it but a little [incurs a penalty, but he][10] does not render void [the previous period] unless [he shaves] the greater part of his head with a razor.[11] R. Simeon b. Judah in the name of R. Simeon said: Just as two hairs [if they are left] hold up [the termination of the naziriteship], so also [the removal of] two hairs renders void [the previous period].[12]

We learn elsewhere: There are three who must poll, and whose polling is a religious duty, the nazirite, the leper, and the levites.[13] If any one of them polled without a razor, or left behind two hairs, his act is invalid.[14]

The Master said, 'There are three who must poll and whose polling is a religious duty.' Surely this is obvious?[15] It might have been thought that they are simply required to remove their hair, and even smearing it with nasha[16] [is valid] and so we are told that this is not so.[17]

It is [also] stated, 'If any one of them polled without a razor etc. Now we can grant this in the case of a nazirite where there is written, There shall no razor come upon his head,[18] and of the levites where there is written, And let them cause a razor to pass over all their flesh,[19] but how do we know that a leper must use a razor? Should you reply that this can be inferred from the levites [by the following argument, viz.] The levities require to poll, and the polling must be performed with a razor, and so I will infer of the leper who is required to poll that the polling must be performed with a razor; [your argument] can be refuted. For although it is true of the levites [that they must use a razor, this may be] because they had to be offered as a wave-offering,[20] which is not the case with the leper. You will therefore attempt to infer it from the nazirite.[21] But [it may be asked] although it is true of the nazirite, [this may be] because his sacrifice must be accompanied by cakes,[22] whereas a leper's does not require this. It being thus impossible to infer what is required from one by itself, you will try to infer it from both together in the following way. You will infer it [using the above argument] from the levites. [To the objection] that although it is true of the levites [this may be] because they had to be offered as a wave-offering, [you will reply that] the nazirite will show [that this cannot be the reason].[23] [To the objection that] although it is true of the nazirite [this may be] because his sacrifice must be accompanied by cakes, [you will reply that] the levites show [that this cannot be the reason].[24] The argument thus goes round; what applies to one side does not apply to the other; and what applies to the other side does not apply to the one side. What they have in common is that they both require to poll[25] and this polling must be done with a razor, and so I will infer with regard to the leper[26] who is also required to poll that his polling must be done with a razor.

Said Raba of Barnesh[27] to R. Ashi: But can it not be objected that another common property of [the levites and the nazirite] is

---

(1) The nazirite who polls only his head.
(2) The leper who must shave his wholy body.
(3) Requiring a razor to be used, because the leper uses a razor. It might well be that a nazirite could use any means for removing his hair.
(4) Viz.: The argument that because the word razor is superfluous in v. 5, polling in v. 18 means with a razor.
(5) By altering the punctuation in v. 5, which concludes 'Until the days of his naziriteship are fulfilled he is holy to the Lord'.
(6) Implying equally that a razor only is forbidden during the naziriteship.
(7) There is a penalty for removing the hair, and a second penalty if a razor is used during the naziriteship.
(8) The polling is invalidated thereby, and the procedure at the termination cannot continue as long as these remain.
(9) I.e. close to the scalp.
(10) Added from the Tosef. agreeing with the reading of the various commentators.
(11) Thus the Baraitha agrees with R. Hisda.
(12) Tosef. Naz. IV, 2.
(13) When first appointed to office the levites had to poll. V. Num. VIII, 7.
(14) Neg. XIV, 4.
(15) For in each case there is a verse requiring them to poll.
(16) Or nesa, a plant the sap of which was used as a depilatory. [Others regard it as a poisonous drug. Krauss, op. cit. I, 642, takes nasa as a variant of nasam mentioned in Neg. X, 10.]
(17) But that a razor is essential.
(18) Num. VI, 5. From this it is inferred that only a razor may be used at the final polling. V. supra.
(19) Num. VIII, 7.
(20) V. Num. VIII, 11. To refute an argument of the above kind, it is sufficient to show some difference however trivial between the procedure to he followed in both cases.
(21) By an argument similar in the above.
(22) V. Num. VI, 15.
(23) For a nazirite was not required to be offered as a wave-offering yet had to use a razor.
(24) For although the same was not true of the levites, yet they had to use a razor.
(25) And it must be this common property that determines the other common property, viz.: that a razor must be used.
(26) Lit., 'add to them the leper . . .'
(27) [Near Matha Mehasia, a suburb of Sura; Obermeyer op. cit. p. 297].

that their sacrifice could not be offered in poverty,[1] whereas the sacrifice of a leper could be offered in poverty?[2]

Raba b. Mesharsheya said to Raba: This Tanna first asserts that [the rule of the nazirite] could not be deduced from that of the leper[3] because we must not argue to the less stringent from the more stringent in order to impose on it the same stringency, and then he goes on to say that [the case of the leper itself] should be inferred by argument,[4] whereas in fact we are not able to infer it from any argument![5] — [Raba] replied: The former discussion is based on the view of the Rabbis,[6] the latter on that of R. Eliezer,[7] for we have learnt:[8] Whilst there is no penalty[9] unless he plucks out [the hair] with a razor. R. Eliezer said that even if he plucks it with tweezers or with a rohitni[10] he incurs a penalty.[11]

What is the reason of the Rabbis?[12] It has been taught: Why does Scripture mention his beard?[13]

Because we find elsewhere[14] the verse, Neither shall they shave off the corners of their beards,[15] it might be thought that this applies even to [a priest who is] a leper. We are therefore told [that the leper must shave] 'his beard'.[16] Whence [do we know] that he must use a razor? — It has been taught: [The verse,] Neither shall they shave off the corners of their beards[17] could mean that even if they shaved it with scissors there would be a penalty, and so we are told [elsewhere], Neither shalt thou mar [the corners of thy beard].[18] [This last verse alone] could mean that even if he plucks it out with tweezers or a rohitni there is a penalty, and so we are told, Neither shall they shave the corners of their beards. How [do we make the inferences from these verses]? The kind of shaving that also mars [the beard] is with a razor.[19]

But how does it follow?[20] For may it not well be that even if [the leper] uses tweezers or a rohitni he has carried out his religious duty, the purpose of the verse[21] being to tell us that even if he uses a razor there is no penalty? — I will explain. If you assume that even if he uses tweezers or a rohitni he has carried out his religious duty, the verse should have remained silent on the subject[22] and I should have argued as follows. Seeing that a nazirite, who has done what is forbidden,[23] is nevertheless obliged [to use a razor], then [the leper] who is here doing a religious duty[24] should certainly [be allowed to use a razor].

---

(1) A nazirite or a levite who could not afford the necessary sacrifices was given no alternative but had to wait until he could do so.

(2) For a leper who was poor, special sacrifices of doves were permitted (v. Lev. XIV, 21ff.). Hence the leper is less stringent than either of the others, and so should perhaps not be obliged to use a razor for his ritual shaving.

(3) Thus assuming that a leper certainly has to use a razor (v. supra 39b end). Raba b. Mesharsheya is here taking it for granted that the two Baraithas to which he makes reference form a single text.

(4) For the gathering together of the three cases, nazirite, leper, and levites, into a single Baraitha is an indication that the case that is not explicit is deducible from those that are.

(5) Since the argument from the levites or the nazirite fails completely. Even to an argument from the common properties there is the objection of Raba of Barnesh. How then, Raba b. Mesharshaya asks, is the sequence of the two Baraithas to be explained?

(6) Who do in fact deduce that a leper must use a razor from an independent source. V. infra.

(7) Who deduces that a leper must use a razor from the nazirite obligation to do so. V. infra 41a.

(8) This Mishnah is quoted simply in order to show the existence of a controversy between R. Eliezer and the Rabbis, the Baraithas adduced to expound the sources of the controversy being anonymous.

(9) For rounding the corners of the head.

(10) Rohitni, usually a plane, here appears to mean some instrument for removing single hairs, since it is compared to a tweezers. V. Jastrow s.v.

(11) Mak. 202.

(12) I.e., what is their source for the case of the leper?

(13) In Lev. XIV, 9, of the leper, for we already know that he must shave 'all his hair'.

(14) Of the priests.

(15) Lev. XXI, 5.

(16) Even if he is a priest.

(17) Lev. XXI, 5.

(18) Of ordinary Israelites, not priests. Here the word 'mar' is used and a scissors does not 'mar'.

(19) And since what is forbidden the ordinary person is prescribed for the leper, as is inferred in the previous Baraitha, a leper can, nay must, use a razor.

(20) That he must use the razor.

(21) Which says that the leper must shave, and also that he must shave his beard, and not simply that he must remove the hair.

(22) Not using the word shave'.

(23) By becoming defiled; aliter, by becoming a nazirite at all, in accordance with the opinion of R. Eleazar ha-Kappar, v. supra 19a.

(24) He was not responsible for his leprosy, so that the act of purification is purely a religious duty, not an expiation.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 41a

Moreover, should you assume that if he uses tweezers or a rohitni he has carried out his religious duty, then because a razor is not mentioned explicitly [it should be entirely forbidden][1] in accordance with the dictum of Resh Lakish who has said that wherever we find both a positive command and a prohibition[2] then, if it is possible to observe both[3] well and good, otherwise the positive command is to override the prohibition.[4]

And what is R. Eliezer's reason?[5] — It has been taught: Why does Scripture mention 'his head'?[6] — Since it says in connection with the nazirite, There shall no razor come upon his head[7] it might be thought that this is true even of a nazirite who becomes a leper. We are therefore told that [the leper must shave] his head.[8]

How does it follow?[9] May it not well be that even if he uses tweezers or a rohitni he has carried out his religious duty? And should you object that the razor should not have been mentioned,[10] [the answer would be that] this tells us that [the leper] may use even a razor; for I might have thought that because a nazirite who uses a razor[11] incurs a penalty, so does a leper[12] who uses a razor incur a penalty, and so we are told that this is not so?[13] — If you assume that a leper who uses tweezers or a rohitni has carried out his religious duty, then because a razor is not mentioned explicitly [in his case, it should be forbidden entirely], in accordance with the dictum of Resh Lakish.[14]

What interpretation do the Rabbis put on [the mention of] 'his head'?[15] — They require it to override the prohibition against rounding [the corners of the head] ' as it has been taught: [The verse] Ye shall not round the corners of your heads[16] might mean that the same is true of a leper, and we are therefore told [that he must shave] 'his head'.

But this[17] can be deduced from [the mention of] 'his beard'. For it has been taught: Why does Scripture mentions his beard? Since it says, Neither shall they shave off the corners of their beards,[18] it might be thought that even [a priest who is] a leper may not do so. And we are therefore told [that the leper must shave] 'his beard'. Now why should it be necessary to mention both 'his head' and 'his beard'?[19] — It is necessary. For had the All-Merciful mentioned 'his beard' and not 'his head' it might have been thought that the rounding of the whole head is not considered [as infringing the prohibition against] rounding,[20] and so the All-Merciful Law also mentions 'his head'.[21]

---

(1) I.e., even if the word 'shave' had been used without the additional use of the expression 'his beard' we should not have made the inference that he is allowed to use a razor because of the dictum of Resh Lakish now given.

(2) I.e., a command to do something (e.g., the leper is told to shave his beard) forbidden under certain circumstances.

(3) I.e., carry out the positive command without transgressing the other.

(4) The positive command must be fulfilled at all costs.

(5) I.e., what is his source for the law that a leper must use a razor, since he holds that the prohibition of marring his beard applies to all instruments, there is no proof that a leper is obliged to use a razor.

(6) Of a leper, seeing it has already said he must shave all his hair. Lev. XIV, 9.

(7) Num. VI, 5.

(8) And we see also that it must be with a razor, since it is this that is explicitly forbidden the nazirite.

(9) That he is obliged to use the razor.

(10) In Num. VI, 5, in connection with the nazirite, seeing that all things are forbidden him.

(11) During his naziriteship.

(12) [Who is also a nazirite.]

(13) But there is still no proof that he must use a razor.

(14) V. supra p. 149.

(15) Since they already know that a leper may use a razor.
(16) Which applies to all persons. Lev. XIX, 27.
(17) Viz. the fact that the injunction to the leper to shave overrides any prohibition that might otherwise prevent him from so doing.
(18) Lev. XXI, 5; of the priests.
(19) Seeing that either case could be inferred from the other.
(20) I.e., that shaving the head is permitted even to an ordinary person, only the rounding of the corners without the rest of the head being forbidden because it was a heathen practice. Whether this is in fact the case is discussed infra 57b-58, both sides of the question receiving arguments in its favour.
(21) Enabling us to infer that even the shaving of the whole head is also forbidden an ordinary person.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 41b

Again, had 'his head' been mentioned and not 'his beard' I would have understood that two things are implied, first that the positive command [to shave] overrides the prohibition, and secondly that the rounding of the whole head is considered [to infringe the prohibition against] rounding, but there would still remain [the question], how do we know that a razor must be used?[1] And so the All-Merciful Law mentions his beard.[2]

And whence does R. Eliezer learn that a positive command overrides a prohibition? — He infers it from the [command to wear] twisted cords. For it has been taught: Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff, [linen and wool together];[3]

---

(1) For there the expression 'rounding' is used, and in fact 'rounding' is forbidden even if no razor is used.
(2) In this case the expression is 'shave' which has been shown (supra 40b) to imply the use of a razor.
(3) Deut. XXII, 11. The next quotation is the beginning of the next verse.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 42a

but nevertheless, Thou shalt make thee twisted cords of them.[1]

The Master said: 'If any one of them polled without a razor, or left behind two hairs, his act is invalid.'[2] R. Aha the son of R. Ika said: This implies that Torah-law accepts [the principle that] the majority[3] counts as the whole.[4] In what way [does this follow]? — From the fact that the All-Merciful reveals in the cafe of the nazirite that, On the seventh day he shall shave it,[5] [for we infer that] here only [is his duty unfulfilled] until the whole [has been shaved],[6] whilst elsewhere the majority counts as the whole.

R. Jose son of R. Hanina demurred to this: But this [verse] is speaking of a defiled nazirite?[7]

In the West[8] they laughed at this [objection]. Consider, [they said]. That a defiled nazirite is required to use a razor [in shaving his head] is inferred from a ritually pure nazirite.[9] [It stands to reason then that] we can now infer the rule of the ritually pure nazirite from the defiled nazirite, viz. that just as when the latter leaves two hairs standing his act is invalid, so when the former leaves two hairs standing his act is invalid.

Abaye propounded [the following question]: What [would be the Law] if a nazirite shaved and left two hairs standing, and then when his head showed a new growth shaved off [those two hairs], would this hold up [the termination of the naziriteship] or not?

Raba propounded [the following question]: What [would be the law] if a nazirite shaved, leaving two hairs standing,[10] and then shaved one and one fell out?[11]

R. Aha of Difti[12] asked Rabina: Has Raba any doubt in the case where hair is shaved one at a time?[13] — [He replied], We must say then, [the question arises if] one fell out and he shaved the other.[14]

He then replied:[15] Here is no polling, for here is no hair.

But if there is no hair here, then polling has been performed?[16] — The meaning is: Although there is no hair left, the duty to poll has not been validly observed.[17]

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITE MAY SHAMPOO [HIS HAIR] AND PART IT [WITH HIS FINGERS] BUT MAY NOT COMB IT.[18] GEMARA. HE MAY SHAMPOO [HIS HAIR] AND PART IT [WITH HIS FINGERS]. Who is the author of this opinion? — It is R. Simeon who says a breach of the law which is not intended is allowed.[19] BUT HE MAY NOT COMB IT; here we come round to the opinion of the Rabbis.[20] [Are we then to understand that] the first clause is by R. Simeon and the next one by the Rabbis? — Rabbah replied: The whole is by R. Simeon, [for] a man who combs his hair intends to remove loose strands.[21]

MISHNAH. R. ISHMAEL SAID: HE IS NOT TO CLEANSE IT WITH EARTH BECAUSE IT CAUSES THE HAIR TO FALL OUT.

GEMARA. The Academy wished to know whether we read 'because it causes the hair to fall out,' or 'because of [the kinds of earth that] cause the hair to fall out.' Where would a practical difference arise? In the case where there is a variety of earth that does not cause it to fall out . If you say that we read 'because it causes it to fall out,' then wherever we know that it does not cause it to fall out, it could be used. But if you say 'because of [the kinds of earth that] cause it to fall out' that he may not use any kind at all! This was left undecided.

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITE WHO HAS DRUNK WINE ALL DAY LONG HAS INCURRED A SINGLE PENALTY ONLY. IF HE WAS TOLD 'DO NOT DRINK,' 'DO NOT DRINK' AND HE DRANK,[22] HE HAS INCURRED A PENALTY FOR EACH [WARNING].

FOR POLLING ALL DAY LONG HE INCURS ONE PENALTY ONLY. IF HE WAS TOLD, 'DO NOT POLL,' 'DO NOT POLL AND HE DID POLL,[22] HE HAS INCURRED A PENALTY FOR EACH [WARNING]. FOR DEFILING HIMSELF [BY CONTACT] WITH THE DEAD ALL DAY LONG HE INCURS ONE PENALTY ONLY. IF HE WAS TOLD, DO NOT DEFILE YOURSELF, DO NOT DEFILE YOURSELF, AND HE DID DEFILE HIMSELF,[23] HE HAS INCURRED A PENALTY FOR EACH [WARNING].

---

(1) From the juxtaposition of the two laws it is inferred that the second is to be carried out even at the cost of transgressing the first. A further discussion of this point will be found infra (58a-b).

(2) Supra 40a.

(3) Or the larger portion.

(4) I.e., is legally equivalent to the whole.

(5) Num. VI, 9. This sentence is a superfluous repetition of the previous one, 'He shall shave his head on the day of his cleansing', and is therefore taken as indicating that the whole head must be shaved

(6) Because here we have a special indication that the larger portion is insufficient

(7) Whereas according to the Baraitha, even a clean nazirite who leaves two hairs standing has not shaved effectively.

(8) I.e., the Palestinian Academies. [The reference elsewhere is to R. Jose b. Hanina. Here it may be to R. Eleazar. V. Sanh. 17b.]

(9) The razor mentioned in Num. VI, 5, refers to an undefiled nazirite.

(10) So that the polling is invalid and must be repeated on the remaining two hairs.

(11) So that he had not polled two hairs validly.
(12) [Dibtha below the Tigris, S.E. Babylon, Obermeyer, op. cit. 197.]
(13) There would finally remain two as in the present instance, and the polling of one would, R. Aha assumes, certainly complete the polling.
(14) Thus when he commenced the final polling, there were not two hairs left, but one.
(15) I.e., Raba answered his own problem (v. the parallel text in B.K. 105a).
(16) For he is only required to poll what is actually there.
(17) Since there were not two hairs when he started. He should therefore poll again later (v. Asheri and Maimonides, Yad Neziruth, VIII, 7); Rashi, here, does not require him to poll again.
(18) I. e., may not use a comb, because hair will come out.
(19) Provided that the act he is doing is permitted, he is not made to refrain because he may unintentionally also do something forbidden (v. Shab. 50b). So here, although hairs may detach themselves even if he uses only his fingers, we do not forbid him to use them.
(20) For here too it is not his intention to detach hairs.
(21) And this is forbidden.
(22) After each warning.
(23) After each warning.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 42b

GEMARA. It was stated: Rabbah, citing R. Huna, said: Scripture [speaking of the nazirite] makes the comprehensive statement, He shall not make himself unclean;[1] when it adds, He shall not enter [by a dead body],[2] [its intention is] to utter a [separate] warning against defilement [by contact] and a [separate] warning against entering [a tent],[3] but not against defilement [by contact] from two scources [at the same time].[4] R. Joseph, however, said: By God! R. Huna said that even for defilement [by contact] from two sources [at the same time there are separate penalties]. For R. Huna has said that a nazirite, standing in a cemetery, who was handed the corpse of his own [relative] or some other corpse, and touched it incurs a penalty.[5] Now why should this be so? Is he not actually being defiled all the time?[6] It follows therefore that R. Huna must have said that even for defilement [by contact] from two sources [he is to receive separate penalties].

Abaye raised an objection from the following. [A Baraitha teaches:] 'A priest,[7] carrying a corpse on his back, who was handed the corpse of his own [relative] or some other corpse and touched it, might be thought to have incurred a penalty,[8] but the text says, Nor profane [the sanctuary][9] [prescribing a penalty] for one not already profaned [and thus] excluding this man who is already profaned?[10] — [R. Joseph] replied: But our Mishnah should cause you the same perplexity, for we learn [there], FOR DEFILING HIMSELF [BY CONTACT] WITH THE DEAD ALL DAY LONG HE INCURS ONE PENALTY ONLY. IF HE WAS TOLD, 'DO NOT DEFILE YOURSELF,' 'DO NOT DEFILE YOURSELF, AND HE DID DEFILE HIMSELF, HE HAS INCURRED A PENALTY FOR EACH [WARNING]. But why should this be so? Is he not already defiled? We can therefore only conclude that [the Mishnah and the Baraitha] contradict each other.[11]

[Abaye retorted:] There is no difficulty [in reconciling the Mishnah and the Baraitha]. The latter assumes that there is concatenation,[12] the former that there is no concatenation.

Is then defilement through concatenation a Torah enactment? Has not R. Isaac b. Joseph said: R. Jannai said that defilement through concatenation was held to be effective only as it affects terumah and sacrificial meats,[13] but not the nazirite or a celebrant of the passover?[14] Now, if as you assert, it is a Torah [defilement], why should there be this difference?[15] — There concatenation of one man with another is meant;[16] in our case concatenation of the man with the corpse.[17]

'But not against defilement [by contact] from two sources [at the same time,'[18] said Rabbah]

because he is actually defiled already. But in the case of defilement [by contact] and entering [a tent containing a corpse] is he not also already defiled?[19] — R. Johanan replied: In the latter case [he is supposed to enter] a house [whilst undefiled];[20] in the former, [which takes place] in the open [there cannot be two penalties].[21]

---

(1) Num. VI, 7.

(2) E.v. 'come near to', Num. V. 6.

(3) Containing a dead body. So that a nazirite, duly warned, who enters a covered place containing a corpse and actually touches the corpse is scourged twice.

(4) I.e., for touching two corpses at the same time he is scourged only once, even if warned against each separately.

(5) I.e., a penalty for touching the corpse.

(6) By being in the cemetery.

(7) Some versions (including Tosaf. and Asheri) read 'a nazirite'.

(8) I.e., a further penalty for the second contact.

(9) Of the High Priest. Lev. XXI, 12; so our text. Tosaf. and others read the verse, 'to profane himself' (Ibid. 4) spoken of an ordinary priest. In either case it is presumed that the same is true of the nazirite.

(10) Whereas according to R. Joseph there should be an extra penalty. Hence the contradiction.

(11) And I, says R. Joseph, agree with the Mishnah which is more important.

(12) I.e., that the person and the two corpses are in contact at the same time, and that is why there is no extra penalty. Where there is contact at different times there is an additional penalty.

(13) I.e., a person defiled through concatenation (in what way is explained below) is forbidden to eat terumah (v. Glos.) or sacrificial meats for seven days, as though there had been direct contact with the corpse.

(14) These observe defilement for one day only.

(15) Hence concatenation is not a Torah enactment, and why should there be the difference between the Mishnah and the Baraitha.

(16) I.e., a man touching a second man in contact with a corpse. Here the defilement for seven days instead of one is rabbinic.

(17) If he then touches a second corpse there is no further defilement and so no further penalty.

(18) The Torah does not prescribe two scourgings in such a case, v. supra.

(19) Why then does Rabbah say that he is to receive two scourgings in this case?

(20) So that he both enters the house of the dead and becomes defiled at the same instant. Hence both prohibitions are transgressed together.

(21) Because he becomes unclean by the first contact and then no further penalty can lie for contact or entering a tent of the dead.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 43a

But even [on entering] a house, as soon as his hands are inside he becomes unclean,[1] so that when he has gone right in he is already unclean?[2] — As a matter of fact, said R. Eleazar, if he put his hands together and entered there would be [a penalty only] for defilement but none for entering, but if he drew himself up[3] and entered, defilement and entering occur at the same moment.

But it is impossible for his nose not to go in first? — As a matter of fact, said Raba, if he introduces his hand[4] there would be [a penalty] for defilement and not for entering, but if he introduces his body,[5] defilement and entering are simultaneous.

But it is impossible for his toes not to enter first? — R. Papa therefore said: It is supposed that he entered in a box, or a chest, or a turret,[6] and his fellow came and broke away the covering,[7] so that defilement and entering are simultaneous. Mar b. R. Ashi said: It is supposed that he entered whilst the other lay dying,[8] and whilst he was sitting there the spirit departed so that defilement and entering were simultaneous.

Our Rabbis taught: To profane himself[9] signifies that until the time that the other dies [he is permitted to remain with him].[10] Rabbi said that, When they die[11] signifies that he may be in contact with them until they die.

What is the difference between these two [alternative reasons]?[12] — R. Johanan said that they differ only as to the texts selected.[13] Resh Lakish said: They differ as regards the rule for a dying man. The one who takes the text 'To profane himself' considers a dying man [as profanation],[14] whilst the one who takes, 'When they die', says that [there is no prohibition] until he is dead, and so none in the case of one who is dying.

Now, according to the one who derives [the law] from 'to profane himself', is there not the text, 'When they die'?[15] — He requires this for [the following inference] of Rabbi. For it has been taught: Rabbi said that 'When they die' he is forbidden to defile himself, but he may defile himself [by association with them] when they are suffering from leprosy[16] or an issue.[17]

But does not the one who derives [the law] from 'when they die' also require it for this inference? — If this is [its sole purpose], the text should read 'When dead'. Because it says 'When they die' we infer both things.

Now according to the one who derives [the law] from 'When they die', is there not the verse, 'to profane himself'?[18] — 'To profane himself' signifies the following, viz: — that one who is not profaned [incurs a penalty] but not the one who is already profaned.[19]

But does not the one who derives [the law] from 'to profane himself' also require it for this inference? — If this were its sole purpose, the text should read 'to profane'. Because it reads, 'to profane himself' we infer both things.

An objection was raised. [We have learnt:] A man does not spread defilement until his life departs. Not even one whose arteries are severed or who is in the throes of death does so.[20] Now according to the one who bases the rule on 'to profane himself',[21] does it not say here that they do not spread defilement?[22] — Defilement is not spread until the life departs, but there is profanation already.[23]

---

(1) Defilement is supposed to pervade the whole of the interior of a house containing a corpse, and so any organ introduced has touched the source of defilement.

(2) And thus even with a house there can be no additional penalty for entering.

(3) I.e., kept his hands at his sides.

(4) Or any other organ. Asheri reads here 'head'.

(5) Keeping his head and arms well back.

(6) Being in a separate domain he would not then become unclean.

(7) Making the interior of the box part of the interior of the tent. [It is assumed that he too helped in the removal of the covering, or otherwise he would incur no penalty (Asheri)].

(8) [As a priest he had no right to enter a house where a person lay dying, v. infra (Asheri)].

(9) Spoken of the priests in connection with the prohibition against defiling themselves with the dead other than near kin, Lev. XXI, 4.

(10) I.e., only the actual profanation is forbidden.

(11) Spoken of the nazirite prohibition against defilement even with near kin. Num. VI, 7.

(12) I.e., what difference in law results.

(13) Lit., 'the implications of the phrases in need of interpretation'. There is no practical difference.

(14) For most people who are dying do die and so actual defilement is very probable. The risk therefore counts as profanation.

(15) What is his interpretation of the latter verse?

(16) V. Lev. XIII, 1ff.

(17) Gonorrhoea, v. Lev. XV, 1ff.

(18) What is his interpretation of it?

(19) Cf. supra 42b.

(20) Oh. 1, 6.

(21) To include a dying man as profanation, as the Rabbis interpret this verse in the opinion of Resh Lakish.

(22) Contradicting Resh Lakish.

(23) A priest is accordingly forbidden to come in contact with the dying.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 43b

R. Hisda, citing Rab, said: [A priest] if his father was decapitated, must not defile himself for him, For what reason? The text says for his father,[1] meaning when he is whole and not when he is defective.[2] R. Hamnuna said to him: In that case, suppose [the father] were travelling through the valley of 'Araboth[3] and robbers cut off his head, would you also maintain that [the son] is not to defile himself for him?[4] — He replied: You raise the question of a meth mizwah![5] Seeing that we consider it his duty [to defile himself under such circumstances] to strangers,[5] how much more so is this true of his father!

But is this considered a meth mizwah? Has it not been taught: A meth mizwah is [a corpse] with none to bury him. Were he able to call and others answer him,[6] he is not a meth mizwah;[7] and here this man has a son?[8] — Because they are travelling on the road, it is as though he had none to bury him.

An objection was raised [from the following]: [It has been taught,] For her may he defile himself[9] signifies that he may defile himself for her herself but not for one of her limbs; for he may not defile himself for a limb cut off [even] from his father[10] whilst still alive; but he may search for a bone the size of a barleycorn.[11] Now what means 'he may search for a bone the size of a barleycorn'? Surely that if there is a small part missing [he may nevertheless defile himself]?[12] — No. The author of that statement is R. Judah. For it has been taught.' R. Judah said that he may defile himself for her, but not for her limbs; for he is forbidden to defile himself for limbs severed from his father whilst still alive; but he may defile himself for limbs severed from his father after death.

But R. Kahana taught amongst [the Baraithas of] R. Eliezer b. Jacob [the following one]: 'For her may he defile himself,' but he must not defile himself for limbs, thus excluding an olive's bulk of [the flesh of] a corpse, or an olive's bulk of nezel[13] or a spoonful of rakab.[13] It might be thought that he is also forbidden to defile himself for the spinal column, or the skull, or the greater part of the bodily frame [of his sister's corpse][14] or the majority [of its bones],[14] but since it is written, and say unto them,[15] it follows that Scripture has permitted you an additional defilement.

---

(1) Although the priest is forbidden to defile himself for the dead yet he may defile himself for near relatives such_as his father, Lev. XXI. 2.

(2) If the head is severed from the body, even though it is beside it, the corpse is considered defective.

(3) A valley in Babylonia, notorious for its robber bands. (Jast.).

(4) R. Hamnuna assumes rightly that R. Hisda would not deny this.

(5) A corpse whose burial is a religious duty, v. Glos. Infra 44a.

(6) I.e., if he has relatives to provide for his burial.

(7) And a priest must not defile himself by undertaking his burial.

(8) Who could arrange for other people to bury his father. If, then, he is allowed to do so himself it must be because decapitation does not matter; which contradicts R. Hisda.

(9) Of the spinster sister of a priest, Lev. XXI, 3.

(10) Who is a closer relation.

(11) I.e., if he is engaged in burying his father he may search for any parts missing to restore them to the corpse.

(12) And since no other opinion is mentioned, it is to be presumed that no-one disagrees with the statement; and thus R. Hisda is contradicted.

(13) V. Mishnah infra 49b.

(14) Each of these counts as a whole corpse for the purposes of defilement in a tent.

(15) Lev. XXI. 1. The phrase is superfluous, for the verse begins, Speak unto the priests . . . .

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 44a

It might be thought [further] that he is not to defile himself for the spinal column, or the skull, or the greater part of the bodily frame or the majority of the bones of the other [relations],[1] but I will tell you [why that is not so]. His sister is distinguished [from strangers] by the fact that her body depends on him [for its burial], and he is required to defile himself for the spinal column, or the skull, or the greater part of its bodily frame or the majority [of its bones], and so in all cases where the body depends on him [for burial], he is required to defile himself, for its spinal column, or its skull, or the greater part of its bodily frame, or the majority [of its bones]. [This contradicts Rab, does it not?][2] — The author of this [Baraitha] too is R. Judah, whereas Rab agrees with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: The story is told that the father of R. Isaac [the priest][3] died at Ginzak[4] and he was informed three years later. He went and asked R. Joshua b. Elisha and the four Elders with him,[5] and they replied: For his father[6] when he is whole, but not when he is defective.[7]

MISHNAH. THREE THINGS ARE FORBIDDEN THE NAZIRITE, VIZ: — DEFILEMENT, POLLING AND PRODUCTS OF THE VINE. DEFILEMENT AND POLLING HAVE A STRINGENCY NOT POSSESSED BY PRODUCTS OF THE VINE IN THAT DEFILEMENT AND POLLING RENDER VOID [THE PREVIOUS PERIOD], WHEREAS [PARTAKING OF] PRODUCTS OF THE VINE DOES NOT DO SO. PRODUCTS OF THE VINE HAVE A STRINGENCY NOT POSSESSED BY DEFILEMENT OR POLLING IN THAT PRODUCTS OF THE VINE PERMIT OF NO EXCEPTION FROM THE GENERAL PROHIBITION,[8] WHEREAS DEFILEMENT AND POLLING ARE ALLOWED AS EXCEPTION FROM THE GENERAL PROHIBITION IN THE CASE WHERE POLLING IS A RELIGIOUS DUTY,[9] OR WHERE THERE IS A METH MIZWAH[10] . DEFILEMENT ALSO HAS A STRINGENCY NOT POSSESSED BY POLLING, IN THAT DEFILEMENT RENDERS VOID THE WHOLE OF THE PRECEDING PERIOD,[11] AND ENTAILS THE OFFERING OF A SACRIFICE, WHEREAS POLLING RENDERS VOID ONLY THIRTY DAYS AND DOES NOT ENTAIL A SACRIFICE.

GEMARA. Why should not defilement also permit of no exception from the general prohibition, in virtue of the following a fortiori argument from wine? Seeing that wine which does not render void [the previous period] permits of no exception from the general prohibition, then defilement which does render void [the previous period] should certainly not permit of an exception from the general prohibition? — The text says, Nor defile himself for his father or for his mother,[12] signifying that it is only for his father or for his mother that he is forbidden to defile himself, whereas he is required to defile himself for a meth mizwah.

Then why should not wine permit of an exception from the general prohibition because of the following a fortiori argument from defilement? Seeing that defilement, which renders void [the previous period], permits of an exception from the general prohibition, then wine which does not render void [the previous period] should certainly permit of an exception from the general prohibition? — The verse says, He shall abstain from wine and strong drink,[13] thus forbidding wine that should be drunk as a ritual obligation[14] as well as wine that he might drink from choice.[15]

Then why should not wine render void the whole [of the previous period] because of the following a fortiori argument from defilement? Seeing that defilement which permits of an exception from the general prohibition renders void [the previous period], then wine which permits of no exception should certainly render void [the preceding period]? — The verse says, But the former days shall be void because his consecration was defiled,[16] signifying that defilement renders void, but wine does not do so.

Why should not polling render void the whole [of the previous period][17] because of the following a fortiori argument from defilement? Seeing that defilement, the agent of which is not subjected to the same [penalty] as the patient,[18] renders void the whole [of the previous period], then polling where the agent is subject to the same penalty as the patient,[19] should certainly render void the whole [of the preceding period]? — The verse says, But the former days shall be void because his consecration was defiled[20] signifying that defilement renders void the whole [of the preceding period], but polling does not do so.

Why should not the agent be subject to the same [penalty] as the patient in the case of defilement, because of the following a fortiori argument from polling? Seeing that in the case of polling, where only thirty days are rendered void, the agent is subject to the same [penalty] as the patient, then in the case of defilement where the whole [of the preceding period] is rendered void, the agent should certainly be subject to the same [penalty] as the patient? The verse says, And he defile his consecrated head[21] signifying [that the penalty is only] for him who defiles his [own] consecrated head.

Then polling should not result in the agent being subject to the same [penalty] as the patient, because of the following a fortiori argument from defilement. Seeing that in the case of defilement, where the whole [of the preceding period] is rendered void, the agent is not subject to the same [penalty] as the patient, then in the case of polling, which does not render void the whole [of the preceding period], the agent should certainly not be subject to the same [penalty] as the patient? — The verse says, There shall no razor come upon his head,[22] and can be read as signifying that he shall not make it come himself, and that no other shall make it come either.[23]

Polling should not permit of an exception from the general prohibition because of the following a fortiori argument front wine. Seeing that wine which does not render void [the preceding period] permits of no exception from the general prohibition, then polling which does render void [the preceding period] should certainly permit of no exception? — The All-Merciful mentions both his hair and his beard.[24]

Then polling should not render void any [of the preceding period] because of the following a fortiori argument from wine. Seeing that wine which permits of no exception does not render void, polling which does permit of an exception from the general prohibition should certainly not render void? — We require a sufficient growth of hair and this would be lacking.[25]

Why should not wine render void thirty days because of the following a fortiori argument from polling? Seeing that polling, which permits of an exception from the general prohibition, renders void [thirty days], then wine which permits of no exception from the general prohibition should certainly do so? — Is not the only reason[26] because there must be a sufficient growth of hair? After wine his hair is still intact.[27]

---

(1) Mentioned in the verse before the one dealing with his spinster sister.

(2) For according to this Baraitha, too, he is permitted to defile himself for a part of the body, in contradiction to the statement made by R. Hisda in the name of Rab. The Baraithas of R. Eliezer b. Jacob were highly esteemed and that is why this one is quoted, although the reply may seem obvious. It would now be necessary to show some other Baraitha agrees with Rab.

(3) Var. lec. R. Zadok the priest. [V. Tem. XII. Hyman, Toledoth, I, p. 202 gives preference to our text, since R. Zadok was present at his father's death.]

(4) [Ganzaka, N.W. of Persia; v, A.Z. (Sonc. ed.) p. 165, n. 5.]
(5) Whether he might personally arrange his removal to the family sepulchre (Rashi).
(6) Lev. XXI, 2.
(7) After three years he would undoubtedly be defective. Thus this Baraitha agrees with Rab.
(8) I.e. under no circumstances is a nazirite ever permitted to drink wine.
(9) As when a nazirite becomes a leper and then recovers from the disease.
(10) A corpse without relatives to provide for its burial must be buried by the first person who can do so, be he nazirite, priest, or even High Priest; cf. infra 47a seq.
(11) However long it should be.
(12) Lev. XXI, 11; although referring to the High Priest, the same applies to the nazirite.
(13) Num. VI, 3; wine is mentioned specifically to tell us that it is to permit of no exception.
(14) E.g. if the person had sworn to drink wine before becoming a nazirite, he must not do so not with standing.
(15) Cf. supra 3b.
(16) Num. VI. 12.
(17) Instead of only thirty days.
(18) There is no penalty attached to one who defiles a nazirite.
(19) Both are scourged, v. infra.
(20) Num. VI, 12.
(21) Ibid. 9.
(22) Ibid. 5.
(23) The verb is written defectively and may therefore be read as an active mood instead of a passive one. There is now no agent mentioned who 'causes it to come upon his head' and so whoever uses the razor on the nazirite is also a transgressor. [This follows Rashi's reading. Asheri seems to have had a smoother text which simply took 'razor' as subject of 'come upon his head', thus making no distinction as to who passes the razor over the nazirite.]
(24) In Lev. XIV, 9, whence is derived that the leprous nazirite must poll, v. supra 41a.
(25) After he had once polled illegitimately. Hence he must render thirty days void, before terminating the naziriteship.
(26) Why polling renders void thirty days.
(27) And so there is no point in requiring him to render any period void.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 44b

MISHNAH. HOW WAS [THE RITE OF] THE POLLING AFTER DEFILEMENT [PERFORMED]? HE WOULD BE SPRINKLED ON THE THIRD AND SEVENTH DAYS,[1] POLL ON THE SEVENTH DAY AND BRING HIS SACRIFICES ON THE EIGHTH DAY. IF HE POLLED ON THE EIGHTH DAY,[2] HE WOULD BRING HIS SACRIFICES ON THAT SAME DAY. THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. AKIBA. R. TARFON ASKED HIM: WHAT DIFFERENCE IS THERE BETWEEN THIS [NAZIRITE] AND A LEPER?[3] HE REPLIED: THE PURIFICATION OF THIS MAN DEPENDS ON THE [LAPSE OF SEVEN] DAYS ONLY], WHEREAS THE PURIFICATION OF A LEPER DEPENDS [ALSO] ON HIS POLLING,[4] AND HE CANNOT BRING A SACRIFICE UNLESS THE SUN HAS SET UPON HIM [AFTER HIS RITUAL BATH].[5]

GEMARA. Did [R. Tarfon] accept this answer or not?[6] — Come and hear: Hillel[7] learnt: If [the nazirite] polled on the eighth day, he was to bring his sacrifices on the ninth. Now if you assume that he accepted the answer, should he not bring his sacrifices on the eighth day?[8] — Raba said: This creates no difficulty,[9] for the one case[10] assumes that he bathed on the seventh day, and the other[11] that he did not bathe on the seventh day.[12]

Abaye said: I came across the colleagues of R. Nathan b. Hoshaia, seated [at their studies] and reporting the following [teaching]. [Scripture says,] And come before the Lord unto the door of the tent of meeting and give them unto the priest.[13] When is he to come?[14] If he has bathed and waited until after sunset he may [come], but if he has not bathed and waited until after sunset he may not do so. Thus we see [they said] that [this Tanna] is of the opinion that a tebul yom[15] after gonorrhoea is still like a sufferer from gonorrhoea.[16] I [Abaye] then said to them: If that is so,[17] then in the case of a defiled nazirite where we find the verse, He shall bring too turtle doves . . . to the priest to the door of the tent of meeting[18] [we should also say] that he is to come only if he has bathed and waited until after sunset.[19]

---

(1) After defilement, with water mixed with ashes of the red heifer, v. Num. XIX.

(2) Instead of the seventh.

(3) A leper who polled on the eighth day instead of the seventh was required to wait until the ninth day before offering his sacrifices. [V. Sifra on Lev. XIV, 9, where this, R. Akiba's view in the case of the leper is stated. According to some texts, however, R. Akiba is of the opinion that the leper could bring his sacrifices on the same day (v. Malbim, a.l.). On this reading, adopted by Rashi, Maimonides, and others, the Mishnah is to be interpreted thus: SAID R. TARFON TO HIM, IF SO WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE NAZIRITE AND THE LEPER (SINCE BOTH ARE IN THIS RESPECT ALIKE). HE REPLIED, (THEY DIFFER IN THIS:) THE PURIFICATION OF THIS MAN DEPENDS ON THE LAPSE OF SEVEN DAYS (ONLY) — i.e., he becomes clean on the seventh day even if he did not poll — WHEREAS THE PURIFICATION OF A LEPER DEPENDS ALSO ON HIS POLLING (v. n. 6); AND (THERE IS A FURTHER DIFFERENCE IN THAT A NAZIRITE) DOES NOT BRING A SACRIFICE UNLESS THE SUN HAS SET UPON HIM (AFTER HIS RITUAL BATH) — i.e., whenever he immersed whether on the seventh or eighth day, he brings the sacrifice only on the following day, whereas the leper who immersed on the eighth day may bring the sacrifice on the same day, since he has been declared by the Torah clean as a result of the first polling and immersion, v. Lev. XIV, 8.]

(4) He does not take a ritual bath until after the polling (Lev. XIV, 8); the nazirite took it before.

(5) Until evening he is a tebul yom (v. Glos.) and so cannot bring sacrifices.

(6) I.e. , does he now agree with R. Akiba, or does he still contend that the nazirite who polls on the eighth day must wait like the leper until the ninth before bringing his sacrifices?

(7) The Amora of that name; not the Patriarch Hillel.

(8) So that unless R. Tarfon still disagreed with R. Akiba there would be no author for this Baraitha of Hillel.

(9) Even if R. Tarfon agreed with R. Akiba.

(10) That of the Mishnah which permits him to offer his sacrifices on the eighth day.

(11) The Baraitha which compels him to wait until the ninth day.

(12) And could not bring sacrifices before sunset on the day he bathed (the eighth day), and so had to wait until the ninth day.

(13) Lev. XV, 24. Referring to the sacrifices of one who has recovered from an unclean issue. V. 13 requires him to bathe on the seventh day after the cessation of the issue.

(14) I.e. , when is he permitted to enter the Temple precincts again?

(15) V. Glos.

(16) And so could not enter the Temple mount to give his sacrifices to the priest. Further, on the Eve of Passover it would be forbidden to slaughter a Paschal lamb on his behalf and he would have to wait until the second Passover (v. Ker. 10a).

(17) I. e. , if the reason just given is in fact the Tanna's reason for requiring him to wait until after sunset.

(18) Num. VI, 10. In this context, too, the previous verse requires him to bathe first.

(19) And so a nazirite after defilement should also be forbidden to enter the temple mount in just the same way as one who has recovered from gonorrhoea is forbidden to do so.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 45a

Now where were the Gates of Nicanor[1] situated? At the entrance to [the camp of] the Levites[2] [were they not]? And yet it has been taught: One who is defiled by a corpse is allowed to enter the camp of the Levites; and not merely one defiled by a corpse, but even the corpse itself [may enter there], for it Says, And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him;[3] the meaning of with him is ‘in his own section , i.e. in the camp of the Levites.[4] It must therefore be,[5] said Abaye, that a tebul yom after gonorrhoea is not like a sufferer from gonorrhoea,[6] but in spite of this, because he still lacks atonement, he is not to enter [into the Temple precincts].[7] For seeing that the reference is to the Camp of the Levites,[8] why is it called [in the verse], 'the Tent of Meeting'? To tell us that just as one who lacks atonement might not enter there,[9] so one who lacks atonement may not enter the Camp of the Levites.[10]

How is it known in that case?[11] — It has been taught: He shall be unclean,[12] includes also a tebul yom; his uncleanness is yet upon him[13] includes also one who lacks atonement.

MISHNAH. HOW WAS [THE RITE OF] POLLING IN RITUAL PURITY[14] PERFORMED? HE WOULD BRING THREE ANIMALS, A SIN-OFFERING, A BURNT-OFFERING, AND A PEACE-OFFERING, SLAUGHTER THE PEACE-OFFERING AND POLL THEREAFTER. THIS IS THE OPINION OF R. JUDAH. R. ELEAZAR SAID: HE WOULD POLL ACTUALLY AFTER THE SIN-OFFERING, FOR IN ALL CASES [THE SACRIFICE OF] THE SIN-OFFERING TAKES PRECEDENCE.[15] BUT IF HE POLLED AFTER [THE SLAUGHTER] OF ANY ONE OF THE THREE HIS OBLIGATION WOULD BE DISCHARGED.[16]

R. SIMEON B. GAMALIEL SAID: IF HE BROUGHT THREE ANIMALS WITHOUT SPECIFYING [WHAT THEY WERE FOR],[17] THE ONE SUITABLE FOR A SIN-OFFERING[18] WAS TO BE SACRIFICED AS A SIN-OFFERING, FOR A BURNT-OFFERING[19] AS A BURNT-OFFERING, AND FOR A PEACE-OFFERING[20] AS A PEACEOFFERING.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: [When it says], And the nazirite shall shave at the door of the tent of meeting,[21] Scripture is speaking of the peace-offering[22] of which it is said, And kill it at the door of the tent of meeting.[23] You say that Scripture is speaking of the peace-offering, but may it not mean literally 'at the door of the tent of meeting'?[24] I will explain. If that were its meaning, it would show contempt [for the Sanctuary] — R. Josiah said: It is unnecessary [to rely on a mere assertion] —[25] For the Torah says, Neither shalt thou go up by steps upon Mine Altar,[26] and how much more so should it be forbidden to show contempt.[27]

R. Isaac said: This argument is unnecessary.[28] For the verse continues, And shall take the hair of his consecrated head and put it on the fire [which is under the sacrifice of peace-offerings),[29] referring to one who needs only to take it and put it [on the fire], and thus excluding [the case contemplated],[30] where he would need to take it, fetch it,[31] and put it [on the fire].

Another version [of R. Isaac's dictum]:[32] R. Isaac said: Scripture is there[33] speaking of the peace-offering. You say it is speaking of the peace-offerings but may it not mean literally 'at the door of the tent of meeting'? The verse continues, And shall take the hair of his consecrated head [etc.], signifying that he shaved where he broiled [the peace-offering].[34]

Abba Hanan, on behalf of R. Eliezer, said: 'And the nazirite shall shave at the door of the tent of meeting' signifies that whenever the door of the tent of meeting is not open,[35] he is forbidden to shave.

R. Simeon [of] Shezuri said: 'And the nazirite shall shave at the door of the tent of meeting', but not a female nazirite,

---

(1) It was to the Gates of Nicanor, which separated the Women's Court from the rest of the Temple precincts, that the sacrifices were brought. [The Nicanor Gate was situated on the West of the Women's Court, and was an entrance to the Inner Court. For a full discussion of the apparent discrepancies between the Talmudic sources and Josephus on the situation of the Nicanor Gate, v. Buchler, JQR, 1898, 687ff, and Hollis, F. J., The Archaeology of Herod's Temple. pp. 180ff.]

(2) The division of the encampment of the Israelites in the wilderness into three camps of varying degrees of sanctity, viz.: (i) The Camp of Israel. (ii) The Camp of the Levites, (iii) The Camp of the Divine Presence, was transferred to the Temple at Jerusalem, the three divisions being known by the same names (v. Sifre Num. I, 1).

(3) Ex. XIII, 19.
(4) Thus the nazirite even before purification could enter the Camp of the Levites, which makes the above deduction after the fashion of the colleagues of R. Nathan b. Hoshaya absurd. (V. Tosef. Kelim Kamma, I, 7.)
(5) What follows is the text and version of Tosaf. That of Rashi is given below, note 8.
(6) And might have a Paschal lamb slaughtered on his behalf.
(7) I.e. , he is forbidden to enter the Camp of the Levites to give his sacrifices to the priest, not because he is treated as though he were still suffering from the issue, but because he is lacking in atonement, i.e., has not yet offered the necessary sacrifices. And although, in general, a person lacking in atonement was not forbidden to enter the Camp of the Levites, but only the Camp of the Divine Presence, here for the reason to be given immediately entry even into the Camp of the Levites is forbidden until after sunset.
(8) For the sacrifices had only to be taken as far as the Gates of Nicanor in the Camp of the Levites.
(9) The proof is given below.
(10) Whereas the nazirite is not considered lacking in atonement since his defilement arose from external causes (contact with the dead) and not from internal ones (leprosy or issue). Thus far the version of Tosaf. Rashi reads as follows: '(The colleagues of R. Nathan replied): As a matter of fact, a tebul yom after gonorrhoea does count as a sufferer from gonorrhoea, whilst even in the case you mention (of the nazirite) he should not enter (the Camp of the Levites, although a corpse itself might do so) because he lacks atonement. For if it is only the Camp of the Levites that is in question (i.e., if in any case the defiled nazirite can enter the Camp of the Levites and has to penetrate no further), why is it referred to in the verse as 'the Tent of Meeting' (which is part of the Camp of the Divine Presence)? To tell us that just as one who lacks atonement may not enter (the latter place), so he may not enter the Camp of the Levites'. It will be observed that apart from the obvious difference at the beginning, Tosaf. does not consider a defiled nazirite as coming within the category of 'lacking atonement' whilst Rashi does.
(11) I.e., how do we know that one who lacks atonement is forbidden to enter the Camp of the Divine Presence?
(12) Num. XIX, 13; this refers to a person defiled by a corpse who has not bathed; and in the context he is forbidden to enter the Sanctuary. The use of the future tense in the verb is taken as a sign that even a tebul yom must not enter there.
(13) Ibid. The inference is from the redundancy of these words.
(14) At the termination of the naziriteship; v. Num. VI, 14ff.
(15) V. Zeb. 900.
(16) I.e., the opinions of R. Judah and R. Eleazar give the normal procedure, but a variation in the order would not invalidate the polling.
(17) Cf. supra 28b.
(18) A ewe-lamb in its first year.
(19) A he-lamb in its first year.
(20) A two-year old ram.
(21) Num. VI, 18.
(22) I.e., the nazirite is to shave after the slaughter of the peace-offering.
(23) Lev. III, 2.
(24) And so be referring to the place, not the time of polling.
(25) We can infer directly from the Torah that a disdainful proceeding is not to be allowed, and need not rely on our feelings on the subject.
(26) 'That thy nakedness be not uncovered there', Ex. XX, 23.
(27) We have given our printed text as interpreted by the early commentators (Rashi, Asheri). In Sifre Num. Sect. 34 (in VI, 28), the words 'R. Josiah said: It is unnecessary' are lacking. Recent Talmud editions insert in square brackets an alternative text from the Midrash Rabbah on Numbers, beginning with 'R. Josiah said: Scripture is speaking etc.' There is also a version of the Wilna Gaon (v. Ed. Romm, Marginal Annotations), concluding, 'This is the opinion of R. Josiah'. All these alternatives make what our text gives as two opinions, one opinion.
(28) I.e., It is unnecessary to make use of the argument that to shave at the door of the tent of meeting would show contempt.
(29) Num. VI, 18.
(30) I.e. , that the nazirite should shave at the door of the tent of meeting.

(31) From "here he shaved to the place where the nazirites used to broil the peace-offering. It follows then that the first half of the verse cannot be taken literally as referring to place, but must be referring to time, viz.: after the slaughter of the peaceoffering. [The chamber where the Nazirites broiled their peace-offering was situated on the South East of the women's court, Mid. II, 6.]
(32) This is the version in Sifre (ibid.).
(33) In Num. VI, 18, And the nazirite shall shave at the door etc.
(34) Asheri pertinently points out that there is no Scriptural proof that the broiling was not to take place at the door.
(35) פתח, 'door' means 'opening'. Abba Hanan prefers an interpretation as near as possible to the literal one, if the literal one itself cannot be used.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 45b

lest the young priests become assailed by temptation through her.[1] [R. Simeon's colleagues] said to him: The case of the faithless wife[2] disproves your point, for there it is written, And [the priest] shall set her before the Lord,[3] and we are not afraid lest the young priests be assailed by temptation, through her.[4] He replied: [The woman nazirite] pencils [her eyebrows] and applies rouge, whilst [the faithless wife] uses neither pencil nor rouge.[5]

MISHNAH. HE THEN TOOK THE HAIR OF HIS CONSECRATED HEAD AND THREW IT UNDER THE CAULDRON.[6] IF HE SHAVED IN THE 'PROVINCE'[7] HE DID NOT THROW IT UNDER THE CAULDRON: THE ABOVE REFERS ONLY TO POLLING IN RITUAL PURITY.[8] WHEREAS IN POLLING [AFTER] RITUAL DEFILEMENT HE DID NOT CAST IT UNDER THE CAULDRON; R. MEIR SAID: ALL [NAZIRITES] THREW IT UNDER THE CAULDRON WITH THE SOLE EXCEPTION OF A DEFILED NAZIRITE [WHO POLLED] IN THE 'PROVINCES.

GEMARA. HE THEN TOOK THE HAIR OF HIS CONSECRATED HEAD. Our Rabbis taught: He then took the broth,[9] put it along with the hair of his consecrated head and threw it under the cauldron containing the peace-offering. But if he threw it under the cauldron containing the sin-offering or the guilt-offerings his obligation would also be discharged.

But is there a guilt-offering in the case of a ritually pure nazirite?[10] — Raba replied: It means that if a ritually defiled nazirite threw it under the pot of the guilt-offerings his obligation would be discharged.

How do we know this?[11] — Raba replied: The verse says, 'Which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings', signifying that part of its sacrifice should be underneath it.[12]

'But if he threw it under the cauldron containing the sin-offering [or the guilt-offering] his obligation would also be discharged.' Why?[13] — The verse says, The sacrifice of,' thereby including the sin-offering and the guilt-offering.[14]

But have you not made use of the words 'the sacrifice of' for [the rule concerning] the broth? — If that is its whole significance the verse should have said, 'Of the broth of the peace-offerings.' Why then does it say 'the sacrifice of'? Clearly to include the sin-offering and the guilt-offering.

But perhaps its whole significance is this inference of the sin offering and the guilt-offering?[15] — If so, the verse should have read 'the peace-offering or the sacrifice'. Why does it say, 'the sacrifice of the peace-offering'? We are thus entitled to infer both things.

Our Rabbis taught: All [nazirites] threw [their hair] beneath the cauldron with the exception of a defiled nazirite who polled in the 'province', because his hair had to be buried.[16] This is the opinion of R. Meir. R. Judah said: Ritually clean [nazirites] whether in the one place or the other[17] threw it under; ritually defiled nazirites whether in the one place or the other[17] did not throw it under, whilst the Sages said: None threw it under the cauldron excepting a clean [nazirite who polled] in the sanctuary, because [the polling] had then been properly done in the prescribed manner.[18]

MISHNAH. HE EITHER BOILED OR HALF-BOILED[19] THE PEACE-OFFERING. THE PRIEST THEN TOOK THE BOILED SHOULDER OF THE RAM,[20] AN UNLEAVENED CAKE FROM THE BASKET, AND AN UNLEAVENED WAFER, PLACED THEM ON THE NAZIRlte'S HANDS[21] AND WAVED THEM. AFTER THIS, THE NAZIRITE WAS ALLOWED TO DRINK WINE AND DEFILE HIMSELF FOR THE DEAD.

---

(1) The female nazirite was therefore required to poll in private, but not a male nazirite. [R. Simeon, according to Tosaf. understood 'door' in the literal sense, and consequently differs from the Mishnah Mid. II, 6, which provides for the polling a special chamber, v. supra p. 168, n. 10).

(2) Or Sotah, v. Num. V, 11ff.

(3) Num. V, 16. The hair was uncovered during the ceremony of administering the 'bitter waters'. V. 17.

(4) The purpose of the verse cannot be therefore to require a woman nazirite to poll in private. In fact, she need not do so.

(5) And is therefore not attractive. R. Simeon retained his opinion that a woman nazirite was to poll in private, and a male in public.

(6) In which his peace-offering was being prepared.

(7) I.e., outside the Temple precincts, he did not have to bring the hair into the temple. Thus the Babylonian version of the Mishnah. The Jerusalem version reads here also, 'he threw it under'

(8) At the termination of the naziriteship.

(9) Of the peace-offering.

(10) The sacrifices mentioned (supra 45a) are sin-offering, burnt-offering, peace-offering.

(11) That the broth had also to be cast under the cauldron.

(12) The inference is from the superfluous words 'the sacrifice of': showing that the fire was beneath the sacrifice itself, and not merely beneath the pot.

(13) I.e., why not say that the peace-offering only is meant, since it is mentioned explicitly.

(14) Although it should preferably be the peace-offering.

(15) And not the rule concerning the broth.

(16) V. Tem. 34a.

(17) Whether in the Temple or in the 'province'.

(18) Tosef. Naz. IV, 5.

(19) [שולק . So Rashi. according to Tosaf. the word denotes 'overdone'.]

(20) [The Mishnah does not mention the 'breast' and the 'shoulder', Num. VI, 20), as it deals only with such rites as are distinct to the peace-offering of the nazirite; v. Petuchowski, a.l.]

(21) V. Num. VI, 19.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 46a

R. SIMEON SAID THAT AS SOON AS ONE KIND OF BLOOD[1] HAD BEEN SPRINKLED ON HIS BEHALF THE NAZIRITE COULD DRINK WINE AND DEFILE HIMSELF FOR THE DEAD.[2]

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: And after that the nazirite may drink wine[3] means after [the performance of] all that has to be done.[4] This is the opinion of R. Eliezer, but the Sages said that [it means] after any Single act.[5]

What is the Rabbis' reason? — In this verse it is written, 'And after that the nazirite may drink wine,' whilst in the preceding verse occur the words, After he has shaven his consecrated head,[6] and so just as there [‘after’] means after the single act, here too it means after a single act.

But may it not mean after both acts?[7] — If that were so, there would be no need for the similarity of phrase.[8]

Rab said: The rite of ‘waving’ in the case of the nazirite is indispensable.[9]

Whose opinion does this follow? Shall I say that of the Rabbis? Surely, since the Rabbis do not consider polling indispensable, the ‘waving’ is certainly not so![10] It must therefore be that of R. Eliezer. But then it is obvious, for R. Eliezer has said that [the verse[11] means] ‘after all that has to be done’? — It might be thought that since in the matter of atonement it is merely a non-essential feature[12] of the [sacrificial] rite,[13] it is also not indispensable here, and so we are told [by Rab that this is not so].[14]

---

(1) I.e., the blood of any one of the three sacrifices.

(2) He did not have to wait until the whole rite was completed.

(3) Num. VI, 20.

(4) I.e., all the rites of the preceding verses.

(5) After even the first of the acts, viz.: the sprinkling of one kind of blood (Tosaf.).

(6) Num. VI, 19.

(7) I.e., after the polling of the preceding verse, as well as the sacrifice.

(8) The Gezerah Shawah, v. Glos. For it would have been more natural for the verse to have said simply ‘and then he may drink etc.’ instead of ‘and after etc.’

(9) Lit., ‘holds up’ the nazirite from wine and defilement,

(10) V. Num. VI, 19-20, for the ‘waving’ follows the polling.

(11) ‘And after that the nazirite may drink wine’ ibid. 21.

(12) Although part of the normal procedure; v. Yoma 5a.

(13) Lit., ‘relics of a precept’.

(14) And that it is here indispensable, in the view of R. Eliezer.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 46b

But is it in fact indispensable? Has it not been taught: This is the law of the nazirite[1] [signifies] whether he has hands or not?[2] — But then, when we are taught: ‘This is the law of the nazirite’ signifies whether he has hair or not,[3] would this also mean that [polling] can be dispensed with?[4] Are we not taught further: A bald nazirite, say Beth Shammai, need not pass a razor over his head, whereas Beth Hillel say that he must pass a razor over his head;[5] and Rabina has explained that Beth Shammai's ‘need not’ signifies that he has no remedy,[6] whilst in Beth Hillel's view there is a remedy?[7]

The above interpretation [by Rabina of the Baraitha] agrees with that of R. Pedath. For R. Pedath has said that Beth Shammai [in this Baraitha] and R. Eliezer hold the same opinion. The [dictum of] R. Eliezer referred to [is the following]. It has been taught: If [the leper] has no [right] thumb or great toe[8] he can never become clean. This is the opinion of R. Eliezer. R. Simeon said that [the blood] should be put on their place and this would be valid, whilst the Sages said that it should be put on his left [thumb and great toe] and this would be valid.[9]

Another version.[10] Raba[11] said: The rite of ‘waving’ in the case of the nazirite is indispensable.

Whose opinion does this follow? Shall I say that of R. Eliezer? It would be obvious. Since R. Eliezer said that [the nazirite cannot drink wine until] after [the completion of] all that has to be done! Therefore it must be that of the Rabbis. But seeing that the Rabbis say that polling [itself] is not indispensable, certainly the waving' [which follows polling] can be dispensed with?

But can it be dispensed with? Has it not been taught: 'This is the law of the nazirite' signifies whether he has hands or no?[12] — But then when we are taught: 'This is the law of the nazirite' signifies whether he has hair or no, would this also mean that [polling] is indispensable?[13] Have we not been taught further: A bald nazirite, say Beth Shammai, need not pass a razor over his head whilst Beth Hillel say that he must pass a razor over his head?[14] — R. Abina replied: 'Must' according to Beth Hillel signifies that he has no remedy,[15] whereas according to Beth Shammai he has a remedy.

This interpretation [of the Baraitha by R. Abina] differs from that of R. Pedath.[16]

MISHNAH. SHOULD HE POLL AFTER ONE OF THE SACRIFICES AND THIS BE FOUND INVALID,[17] HIS POLLING IS INVALID[18] AND HIS SACRIFICES[19] DO NOT COUNT: [THUS][20] SHOULD HE POLL AFTER THE SIN-OFFERING, WHICH WAS NOT OFFERED AS SUCH,[21] AND THEN OFFER THE OTHER SACRIFICES UNDER THEIR CORRECT DESIGNATIONS, HIS POLLING IS INVALID AND [NONE OF] HIS SACRIFICES COUNTS FOR HIM. [SIMILARLY], SHOULD HE POLL AFTER THE BURNT-OFFERING OR THE PEACE-OFFERING, WHICH HAVE NOT BEEN OFFERED AS SUCH, AND THEN OFFER THE OTHER SACRIFICES UNDER THEIR CORRECT DESIGNATION, HIS POLLING IS INVALID AND [NONE OF] HIS SACRIFICES COUNTS FOR HIM. R. SIMEON SAID: THAT PARTICULAR SACRIFICE DOES NOT COUNT,[22] BUT HIS OTHER SACRIFICES DO COUNT.

SHOULD HE POLL AFTER ALL THREE SACRIFICES AND ONE OF THEM BE FOUND VALID, HIS POLLING IS VALID AND HE HAS [ONLY] TO BRING THE OTHER SACRIFICES.

GEMARA. R. Adda b. Ahaba said: This [Mishnah] tells us that R. Simeon is of the opinion that a nazirite who polls after offering a voluntary peace-offering has fulfilled his religious obligation.[23] Why is this so? Because the verse Says, And put it on the fire which is under the sacrifice of peace-offerings,[24] and not 'his peaceofferings'.[25]

---

(1) Num. VI, 21.

(2) Tosef. Naz. I, 6. The meaning is here assumed to be, 'if he has no hands, the waving-rite can be omitted', so that even if he has hands it does not prevent him from drinking wine before it has taken place.

(3) Tosef. Naz. I, 6.

(4) By the same argument as before, assuming that if he has no hair the ceremony of shaving need not be performed.

(5) Tosef. Naz. I, 7 and Yoma 61b with the ascriptions reversed. Nazir contains a number of such passages both tannaitic and of later date (e.g. supra 38b. Abaye and Raba reversed in Pes. 41b). Cf. Tosaf. Men. 58b, s.v. ואיכא .

(6) Since he can never shave, he will never be able to drink wine.

(7) He can perform the motions of the rite — pass a razor over his head — although the actual shaving is impossible. And so above the true interpretation is that he must do what is possible consistent with his lack of hands, e.g.. use his arms. But the 'waving' can by no means be dispensed with,

(8) One of the rites to be performed during the purification of the leper was the sprinkling of blood of the sacrifice on his right thumb and great toe; Lev. XIV, 14.

(9) Neg. XIV, 9.

(10) Of the dictum attributed above to Rab, and of the discussion round it.

(11) Our printed text has Rab. But all the commentators appear to have had Raba, not Rab.

(12) The ceremony must be performed, and thus is indispensable. Here the interpretation is the reverse of what it was in the earlier version.

(13) I.e., whether he has hair or not, shaving must be done.

(14) So that the act of polling is not indispensable according to Beth Hillel, and consequently the waving should also be considered not indispensable.
(15) For he has no hair to shave, and therefore can never terminate his naziriteship. Similarly the wave-offering is indispensable.
(16) For according to R. Abina, Beth Shammai allow him a remedy, whereas R. Pedath (v. supra) says that they do not allow him a remedy.
(17) As explained later in the Mishnah (Rashi); or by the blood being upset before the sprinkling, or the sacrifice becoming defiled (Tosaf.).
(18) And he must wait thirty days according to the Rabbis, or seven according to R. Eliezer before bringing fresh sacrifices; v. Mishnah supra 39a.
(19) Other sacrifices offered after the polling.
(20) The word 'thus' is added by Rashi, who considers what follows explanatory of the opening phrase of the Mishnah. Tosaf. considers it a new section, explaining the first clause differently: (v. note 5).
(21) But was sacrificed as a peace-offering instead.
(22) Where the burnt-offering or peace-offering was sacrificed under an incorrect designation (Rashi); they count as voluntary peace-offerings (v. Zeb. 2a), but for the purpose of liberating the nazirite must be replaced by other animals. [A sin-offering, however, sacrificed under an incorrect designation is entirely disqualified. v. Zeb. ibid.]
(23) Since R. Simeon's dictum refers to a nazirite who polled after a voluntary-offering (v. previous note).
(24) Num. VI, 18.
(25) Hence any peace-offering is valid.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 47a

MISHNAH. IF [A NAZIRITE] ON WHOSE BEHALF ONE KIND OF BLOOD[1] HAS BEEN SPRINKLED BECOMES UNCLEAN, R. ELIEZER SAID EVERYTHING IS RENDERED VOID,[2] WHILST THE SAGES SAID: HE IS TO BRING HIS REMAINING SACRIFICES AFTER PURIFICATION. THEY SAID TO [R. ELIEZER]: IT IS RELATED OF MIRIAM OF TARMOD[3] THAT ONE KIND OF BLOOD WAS SPRINKLED ON HER BEHALF WHEN SHE WAS TOLD THAT HER DAUGHTER WAS DANGEROUSLY ILL. SHE WENT AND FOUND HER DEAD,[4] AND THE SAGES TOLD HER TO OFFER HER REMAINING SACRIFICES AFTER PURIFICATION.

GEMARA. The Mishnah says: R. ELIEZER SAID EVERYTHING IS RENDERED VOID. But R. Eliezer has said that whatever occurs after the fulfilment [of the nazirite period] renders void seven days?[5] — Rab replied: By 'IS RENDERED VOID' here, R. Eliezer means 'renders his sacrifices void'.[6] This is also clear from the sequel. viz: — WHILST THE SAGES SAID: HE IS TO BRING HIS REMAINING SACRIFICES AFTER PURIFICATION.[7] IT IS RELATED FURTHER, OF MIRIAM OF TARMOD, THAT ONE KIND OF BLOOD WAS SPRINKLED ON HER BEHALF WHEN SHE WAS TOLD THAT HER DAUGHTER WAS DANGEROUSLY ILL. SHE WENT AND FOUND HER DEAD, AND THE SAGES TOLD HER TO OFFER THE REMAINING SACRIFICES AFTER PURIFICATION. This proves it.[8]

C H A P T E R V I I

MISHNAH. A HIGH PRIEST AND A NAZIRITE MAY NOT DEFILE THEMSELVES [BY CONTACT] WITH THEIR [DEAD] RELATIVES, BUT THEY MAY DEFlle THEMSELVES WITH A METH MIZWAH.[9]

IF THEY WERE WALKING BY THE WAY AND FOUND A METH MIZWAH, R. ELIEZER SAYS THAT THE HIGH PRIEST SHOULD DEFILE HIMSELF BUT NOT THE NAZIRITE, BUT THE SAGES SAY: THE NAZIRITE SHOULD DEFILE HIMSELF BUT NOT THE COMMON PRIEST.[10] R. ELIEZER SAID TO THEM: RATHER SHOULD THE PRIEST, WHO DOES NOT

OFFER A SACRIFICE ON DEFILEMENT, DEFILE HIMSELF, THAN THE NAZIRITE WHO MUST OFFER A SACRIFICE ON DEFILEMENT.[11] THEY REPLIED: RATHER SHOULD THE NAZIRITE WHOSE CONSECRATION IS NOT PERMANENT,[12] DEFILE HIMSELF, THAN THE PRIEST WHOSE CONSECRATION IS PERMANENT.[13]

GEMARA. It is clear that as between a High Priest and a nazirite, the one [authority][14] is of the opinion that the High Priest is of superior sanctity,[15] and the other[16] that the nazirite is of superior sanctity.[17]

As between [a High Priest] anointed with the anointing oil,[18] [

---

(1) I.e., the blood of one of the three sacrifices.

(2) Explained in the Gemara.

(3) A nazirite, Tarmod or Tadmor Palmyra. (V. I Kings, IX, 18).

(4) Thus becoming accidentally unclean.

(5) Supra 16a-b. If then 'EVERYTHING' means the nazirite period, R. Eliezer is contradicting himself.

(6) I.e., the sacrifice the blood of which had been sprinkled is invalid and must be replaced, in accordance with R. Eliezer's view that the whole termination ceremony of the nazirite hangs together; v. supra 46a.

(7) The words in cur. edd. 'This proves it' are to be deleted.

(8) That the point at issue was only the validity of the first sacrifices.

(9) I.e., a corpse without relatives at hand to bury it; v. Glos.

(10) Some versions read 'High Priest'. The argument is not affected.

(11) V. Num. VI, 9ff.

(12) It lapses at the end of the period of his naziriteship, or he can obtain release from his vow by application to a sage (Tosaf.).

(13) It is a result of his birth.

(14) I.e., the Sages.

(15) I.e., if both come upon a corpse which has no relatives to bury it, the nazirite must defile himself in order to bury it.

(16) R. Eliezer.

(17) And the High Priest must bury the corpse.

(18) V. Ex. XXX, 30. The High Priest ceased to be consecrated with this oil in the days of Josiah (c. 620 B.C.E.); v. Hor. 120 and Yoma 52b. After this, consecration took place by investing the priest with the garments of a High Priest.

and [one consecrated by wearing] the additional garments,[1] the former is of superior sanctity,[2] for the former must offer the bullock brought for breach of any of 'all the commandments',[3] but the latter cannot offer it.[4]

As between an anointed [High Priest] who has been superseded,[5] and one consecrated by [wearing] the additional garments,[6] the latter is of superior sanctity,[7] for he performs the Temple service, whilst the former is not permitted to perform the Temple service.[8]

As between one superseded on account of a [nocturnal] mishap,[9] and one superseded on account of a deformity,[10] the former is of superior sanctity,[11] for he will be fit to perform the Temple service on the morrow, whilst the one superseded on account of his deformity is not fit to perform the Temple service.[12]

The question was propounded: As between [the High Priest] anointed for a war,[13] and the deputy [High Priest],[14] which is of superior sanctity? Does the [High Priest] anointed for war take precedence, because he is qualified to go to war, or does the deputy take precedence, because he is qualified to perform the Temple service?[15] — Come and hear: For it has been taught: The only difference between a [High Priest] anointed for war and a deputy is that if they were both walking by the way and encountered a meth mizwah, the [High Priest] anointed for war is to defile himself, but not the deputy. But has it not been taught: A [High Priest] anointed for war takes precedence of a deputy? — Mar Zutra replied: As far as saving his life is concerned,[16] the [High Priest] anointed for war has a superior claim for many [people] depend upon him,[17] but as regards defilement, the deputy is of superior sanctity, as has been taught: R. Hanina b. Antigonus said that the reason the office of deputy to the High Priest was created,[18] was that should any disqualification happen to him [the High Priest], he can enter and minister in his stead.

[Now Eliezer and the Sages] differ only as regards a High Priest and a nazirite walking together, but each one by himself would be required to defile himself.[19] How is it known that this is so? — Our Rabbis have taught: To what does the passage. Neither shall he go in to any dead body[20] refer? It can hardly be to strangers, since this could be inferred a fortiori [by the following argument]. Seeing that a common priest, who is allowed to contract defilement in the case of kinsmen, is forbidden to do so in the case of strangers,[21] the High Priest who is not permitted to contract defilement in the case of kinsmen should certainly not be permitted to do so in the case of strangers. It follows that the passage refers to kinsmen, [and when therefore the text says.] Nor for his father[22] is he permitted to defile himself, [we infer that] he is permitted to defile himself in the case of a corpse [the burial of] which is a religious duty.

---

(1) The High Priest wore eight garments and the common priest four. V. Ex. XXVIII.

(2) And if both encounter a corpse, the latter must bury it.

(3) V. Lev. IV, 2ff.

(4) V. Hor. 11b.

(5) If the High Priest could not officiate on the Day of Atonement, another Priest was appointed to his office for that day only. As soon as the former was able to perform his duties, the latter was superseded.

(6) And who is the regular High Priest.

(7) And the former must defile himself if the latter is the only other person present and they encounter a corpse.

(8) Having officiated as High Priest, he was not allowed to act as a common priest, nor could he officiate as High Priest whilst the other lived, as this would cause jealousy. v. Hor. 12b.

(9) Lev. XV, 16.

(10) Lev. XXI, 27.

(11) And the latter must defile himself in the event of both meeting with a corpse.

(12) Until the deformity disappears.
(13) V. Deut. XX.
(14) Segan, who deputised for the High Priest if he was unable to perform the Temple service on the Day of Atonement. On Segan, v. Sanh. (Sone. ed.) p. 97, n. 1.
(15) But once a priest had been anointed for war, he could no longer take part in the Temple service.
(16) Should both be in danger.
(17) For he is to go to war on their behalf.
(18) This saying occurs also in Yoma 39a, where the reading is: 'R. Hanina, the priestly deputy, said that the reason the deputy stands at his (the High Priest's) right is that . . .' on the whole passage v. Hor. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 97ff.
(19) If they came upon a corpse whose burial is a religious duty.
(20) Lev. XXI, 21.
(21) V. Lev. XXI. 2 and 3.
(22) Since this part of the verse is superfluous. Lev. XXI, 22.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 48a

[The words,] Nor for his mother form the basis of the Gezerah shawah used by Rabbi. For it has been taught: Rabbi said: In the case of a nazirite, when they die,[1] he is not allowed to defile himself on their account, but he may defile himself [if they are unclean] through [leprous] plague or unclean issue. But this covers the nazirite only. How are we to infer the same for a High Priest? As follows: There is no need for the expression, his mother[2] in the case of the High Priest, and Scripture need not have mentioned this, since the same may be derived from the following a fortiori argument. Seeing that though a common priest may defile himself on account of his brother by the same father,[3] yet a High Priest may not defile himself on account of his father,[4] then if a common priest may not defile himself on account of his brother by the same mother,[5] surely [it follows that] a High Priest may not defile himself on account of his mother. Since this can be inferred by a process of reasoning, why does Scripture mention 'his mother' in connection with the High Priest? It is available for purpose of comparison and to set up a Gezerah shawah [from like expressions]. The phrase 'his mother' occurs in connection with the nazirite and the phrase 'his mother' occurs in connection with the High Priest, and so just as in the case of the nazirite it is to his mother [etc.], 'when they die' that he is forbidden to defile himself, but not when they are unclean through leprosy or unclean tissue, so in the case of the High Priest, it is to his mother [etc.], when they die that he is forbidden to defile himself, but not when they are unclean through leprosy or unclean issue.

We have thus found the sanction for a High Priest.[6] How is the same known of a nazirite? It has been taught: From the passage, All the days that he separateth himself unto the Lord, he shall not come near to a [dead][7] body [nefesh],[8] it might be concluded that even the body [nefesh] of an animal is intended, the word [nefesh] being used as in the verse, And he that smiteth [the nefesh of] a beast.[9] Therefore Scripture says, 'he shall not come near to a dead body,' indicating that a human body [nefesh] is being referred to. R. Ishmael says: It is unnecessary [to argue in this manner]. Since it says, 'he shall not come', Scripture is referring to bodies which cause defilement merely on coming [under the same roof].[10] [Futher],for his father, or for his mother,[11] he may not defile himself, but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah. But even if this [expression] did not occur, I could infer it as follows: Seeing that a High Priest whose consecration is permanent may defile himself for a meth mizwah, then surely a nazirite whose consecration is not permanent[12] may defile himself?[13] But this inference is not valid. For if it is true in the case of a High Priest,it may be because he is not required to offer a sacrifice as a consequence of his defilement, whereas a nazirite must offer a sacrifice as a consequence of his defilement, [and it might be objected that] since he must offer a sacrifice in consequence of his defilement,[14] he may not defile himself for a meth mizwah. And so Scripture says, He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, [implying], 'but he may make himself unclean for a meth mizwah'. But perhaps [the correct inference is that] he may not defile himself for his father or for his mother, but he may defile himself for other corpses?[15] This follows by an argument a fortiori. Seeing that a common priest who may defile himself for his kinsmen is forbidden to defile himself for other dead,[16] then a nazirite who may not defile himself for kinsmen is surely forbidden to defile himself for other dead.

---

(1) Num. VI, 7. Referring to a nazirite's relatives.

(2) Lev. XXI, 11. A High Priest may not defile himself for his mother's corpse.

(3) But not the same mother.

(4) Though a father is nearer kin than a brother.

(5) But not the same father.

(6) I.e., that a High Priest must defile himself for a corpse the burial of which is a religious duty.

(7) Some authorities omit the word 'dead' from the Talmud text, since the assumed inference would only follow if it were lacking in the Bible.

(8) Num. VI, 6.

(9) Lev. XXIV, 28.

(10) This applies to human corpses. Animal corpses defile only if touched or carried.

(11) Num. VI, 7.

(12) But only for as long as he has undertaken to he a nazirite, or until he seeks release at the hands of a Sage.

(13) And the phrase, 'For his father etc.' is unnecessary to teach that he may defile himself for a corpse whose burial is a religious duty.

(14) V. Num. VI, 9ff.

(15) I.e., nonkinsmen whose death he would not mourn so much.

(16) V. Lev. XXI, 2.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 48b

And so why does Scripture say, 'for' his father, or 'for his mother'? For his father or for his mother he is forbidden to defile himself, but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah. But even if this[1] were not written,I could infer it as follows: A general prohibition[2] is stated for the High Priest, and a general prohibition[3] is stated for the nazirite, and so just as, though there is a general prohibition for the High Priest, he is forbidden to defile himself for his father, but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah, so when there is a general prohibition for the nazirite [it signifies that] he may not defile himself for his father but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah.[4] But it is possible to argue in another direction. A general prohibition is stated for the common priest,[5] and a general prohibition is stated for the nazirite, and so just as, though there is a general prohibition stated for the common priest, he may defile himself for his father, so too though there is a general prohibition stated for the nazirite he may defile himself for his father. Scripture therefore says, 'He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother,' but he may make himself unclean for a meth mizwah.

But surely this is needed to tell us [the plain fact] that he may not defile himself for his father?[6] — In point of fact, 'for his father' tells us that he may not defile himself for his father;[7] 'for his brother'[8] he may not defile himself but he may defile himself for a corpse [the burial of] which is a religious duty; 'or for his mother'[8] is used to form the basis of a Gezerah shawah after the manner of Rabbi;[9] whilst 'or for his sister'[8] is required for the following [teaching]. For it has been taught: For what purpose is 'for his sister' mentioned?[10] If a [nazirite] was on his way to slaughter his Paschal lamb, or to circumcise his son and he heard that a near kinsmen had died, it might be thought that he ought to defile himself. It therefore says, 'He shall not make himself unclean'. But it might [then] be thought he should not defile himself for a meth mizwah. The text therefore adds, 'for his sister', [implying that] for his sister he is forbidden to defile himself, but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah.

R.Akiba said:[11] ['Nefesh'] 'body' refers to strangers; 'dead' to kinsmen, 'For' his father or for his mother' [teaches that] he is forbidden to defile himself for these, but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah. 'For his brother' [tells us] that if he he both High Priest and a nazirite, it is for his brother that he is forbidden to defile himself, but he may defile himself for a corpse [the burial of] which is a religious duty. 'For his sister' [is required] as has been taught: 'If a man was on his way to slaughter his Paschal lamb or circumcise his son etc.'

Whence does R. Akiba derive the lesson learnt by Rabbi from the Gezerah shawah? — He will reply: Since it has been said that if he be both High Priest and a nazirite it is for his brother that he is forbidden to defile himself but he may defile himself for a meth mizwah,[12] what difference does it make whether he is simply High Priest or High Priest and a nazirite.[13]

And whence does R. Ishmael derive the rule about a High Priest who is a nazirite?[14] — Since the All-Merciful allows [the breach of] a single prohibition in connection with a meth mizwah, what does it matter whether there is only one prohibition or two?

[In that case] for what purpose is for his sister required?[15] — You might assume that in connection with a meth mizwah the All-Merciful permitted [the defilement of] a nazirite and a priest because this is an offence which is merely prohibited but where the neglect of circumcision and the Paschal lamb entailing kareth[16] is involved, [the nazirite or priest] should not defile himself for a meth mizwah[17] and so we are told [that he should].

---

(1) The phrase 'For his father or for his mother'.

(2) 'Neither shall he go in to any dead body'; Lev. XXI, 11.

(3) 'He shall not come near to a dead body'. Num. VI, 6.

(4) And 'For his father etc.' is superfluous.

(5) 'There shall none defile himself for the dead amongst the people', Lev. XXI. 1.

(6) And it is not meant merely to provide the ground for the inference, that a nazirite may defile himself for a corpse whose burial is a religious duty.

(7) And since he may not defile himself for his father, he may not for his brother, since the father is nearer kin.

(8) Num. VI, 7.

(9) Supra 48a.

(10) For since he may not defile himself for his father, he may not for his sister.

(11) R. Akiba is interpreting Num. VI, 6 and 7, in a different manner to R. Ishmael.

(12) So that the inference, when they die, but not when they have plague also refers to the kinsmen of a nazirite who is High Priest.

(13) In either case be is not forbidden to touch them if they have leprosy or unclean issue.

(14) That he may defile himself to bury a neglected corpse.

(15) If a nazirite must defile himself to bury a neglected corpse, he must also defile himself for this purpose even when on his way to slaughter his paschal lamb.

(16) V. Glos.

(17) When about to slaughter his paschal lamb.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 49a

On the view of R. Akiba, seeing that whether he be simply a High Priest or whether he be a High Priest who is also a nazirite, we can infer from 'for his brother' [that he may defile himself for a neglected corpse], what is the purpose of 'for his father and for his mother'? — They are both necessary. For were only his father mentioned, it might be thought that the reason why he may not defile himself for him is that there is merely a presumption [of paternity],[1] whereas for his mother who we know bore him, he should defile himself. Again, if the All-Merciful had mentioned his mother, it might be thought that he may not defile himself for his mother because her children['s descent] is not reckoned through her,[2] whereas for his father, since it has been affirmed, 'by their families, by their fathers' houses',[3] it might be said that he should defile himself. We are therefore told [that he may defile himself for neither].

[On the view of R. Akiba] what is the purpose of 'Neither shall he go in to any dead body'?[4] —

---

(1) His wife may have committed adultery.

(2) But through the male line.

(3) Num. I, 2. From this verse the inference is drawn that descent is counted in the male line; v. B.B. 109b.

(4) Lev. XXI, 12. Said of the High Priest.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 49b

'To any' excludes strangers;[1] 'dead' excludes kinsmen, 'body' [nafshoth] excludes a quarter [of a log] of blood coming from two corpses, [and informs us] that it renders unclean by being under a covering [with it], as it is written, 'neither shall he go in to any dead body [nafshoth]'.[2]

MISHNAH. THE NAZIRITE MUST POLL FOR [DEFILEMENT CONTRACTED FROM] THE FOLLOWING SOURCES OF DEFILEMENT:FOR A CORPSE, OR AN OLIVE'S BULK OF [THE FLESH OF] A CORPSE, OR AN OLIVE'S BULK OF NEZEL,[3] OR A LADLEFUL OF CORPSE-MOULD,[4] OR THE SPINAL COLUMN, OR THE SKULL, OR ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A CORPSE OR ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A LIVING BODY THAT IS STILL PROPERLY COVERED WITH FLESH,[5] OR A HALF-KAB[6] OF BONES, OR A HALF-LOG[6] OF BLOOD, WHETHER [THE DEFILEMENT IS CON TRACTED] FROM CONTACT WITH THEM, FROM CARRYING THEM, OR FROM OVERSHADOWING[7] THEM; FOR [DEFILEMENT CONTRACTED FROM] A BARLEY-GRAIN'S BULK OF BONE, WHETHER BY CONTACT OR CARRYING. ON ACCOUNT OF THESE, A NAZIRITE MUST POLL AND BE SPRINKLED ON THE THIRD AND SEVENTH DAYS; SUCH [DEFILEMENT] MAKES VOID THE PREVIOUS PERIOD, WHILST HE DOES NOT BEGIN TO COUNT ANEW [HIS NAZIRITESHIP] UNTIL HE HAS BECOME CLEAN AND BROUGHT HIS SACRIFICES.

GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: After the demise of R. Meir, R. Judah said to his disciples, 'Do not allow the disciples of R. Meir to enter here, for they are disputatious and do not come to learn Torah, but come to overwhelm me with citations from tradition.' Symmachus forced his way through and entered. He said to them, 'Thus did R. Meir teach me: The nazirite must poll for [defilement contracted from] the following sources of defilement: for a corpses or for an olive's bulk of [the flesh of] a corpse.' R. Judah was wroth and said to them, 'Did I not tell you not to allow the pupils of R. Meir to enter here, because they are disputatious? If he must poll for an olive's bulk of [the flesh of] a corpse, then certainly he must poll for the corpse itself![8]

---

(1) I.e., that he may not defile himself by touching their corpses.

(2) The Hebrew has the plural of nefesh, indicating two corpses. The nefesh is identified with the blood (v. Deut. XII, 23) hence R. Akiba's inference; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 22 and 14.

(3) Coagulated corpse-dregs; v. infra 50a.

(4) The earth of a decomposed body.

(5) Sufficient flesh for the limb to have maintained itself when attached to the body.

(6) V. Glos. for these measures.

(7) This type of defilement is caused by being, either under the same roof as, or perpendicularly above or below, the source of defilement; cf. Num. XIX, 14ff.

(8) And this does not require explicit mention.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 50a

R. Jose' commented: People will say, 'Meir is dead, Judah is angry, Jose is silent, what is to become of the Torah?' And so R. Jose explained: It was only necessary [to mention the corpse itself explicitly] for the case of a corpse that has not an olive's bulk of flesh upon it. — But it can still be objected: If [the nazirite] must poll for a [single] limb, then surely he must poll for the whole [skeleton]! — It must therefore be as R. Johanan explained [elsewhere],[1] that it was only necessary [to mention the corpse itself] for the case of an abortion in which the limbs were not bound together by the sinews, and here too it refers to an abortion in which the limbs are not bound together by the sinews.[2]

Raba said: It is only necessary [to mention the corpse itself] for the case where there is the greater part[3] of the frame [of a corpse][4] or the majority [of its bones],[4] which do not amount altogether to a quarter [kab] of bones.[5]

FOR AN OLIVE'S BULK OF [THE FLESH OF] A CORPSE, OR AN OLIVE'S BULK OF NEZEL: And what is NEZEL? The flesh of a corpse that has coagulated, and liquid secretion [from a corpse] that has been heated [and has congealed].[6]

What are the circumstances? If it be not known to belong to [the corpse], what does it matter if it has coagulated?[7] Whilst if we know that it pertains to [the corpse], then even though it has not coagulated [it should defile]! — R. Jeremiah replied: [Secretion] of uncertain origin is referred to. If it coagulates,it is [cadaverous] secretion,[8] otherwise it may be phlegm or mucus.[9]

Abaye inquired of Rabbah: Is there [defilement through] corpsedregs in the case of [defilement caused by] animals[' corpses], or not?[10] Was the tradition only that corpse-dregs coming from man [defile], but not corpse-dregs coming from animals, or is there no difference?[11] According to the opinion that the uncleanness is of the heavier type[12] only until [the animal is unfit to be eaten by]a stranger,[13] and is then of the lighter type[14] until [it is unfit to be eaten by] a dog,[15] there is no difficulty,[16] but according to the opinion that the uncleanness remains of the heavier type until [it is unfit to be eaten by] a dog, what answer can be given?[17] — Come and hear: If he melted [unclean fat] with fire, it remains unclean, but if in the sun,[18] it becomes clean. Now if you assume [that the animal remains unclean] until [it is unfit to be eaten by] a dog, then even if [the fat has been melted] in the sun, it should also [remain unclean]![19] — It only melts after it has decomposed in the sun, and since it has decomposed it is [nothing but] dust.[20]

We have learnt elsewhere: Any jet of liquid [poured from a clean to an unclean vessel] is clean[21] save only [a jet of] thick honey[22] and heavy batter.[23]

---

(1) The reference here is thought to he to Oh. II,1, dealing with defilement by overshadowing, where the same phrase occurs. But the only occurrence of this statement of R. Johanan is found in Hul. 89b, with reference to our Mishnah; v. Tosaf. Naz. and Hul.

(2) A single limb of such an abortion not containing an olive's bulk of flesh, would not convey defilement, but the whole does.

(3) The greater part being equivalent to the whole.

(4) V. infra 52b for the explanation of these terms.

(5) And but for the fact that it constitutes the greater part of the frame of the corpse it would not convey defilement.

(6) [Nezel is thus derived from נצל to separate', cf. Gen. XXXI. 9 (Rashi); Petuchowski connects it with נזל 'to flow', 'melt away'.]

(7) It should not convey defilement.

(8) And causes defilement.

(9) Which do not defile.

(10) This question has no bearing on the nazirite, who does not lose any of his period for defilement caused by an animal corpse.

(11) And animal corpse-dregs also defile.

(12) Defiling man by contact or carrying.

(13) V. Bek. 23b. A Jew may not eat the flesh of an animal which dies of itself, but may give it to a stranger; v. Deut. XIV, 21.

(14) Defiling food only but not man.

(15) After which it ceases to defile.

(16) For corpse-dregs are unfit to be eaten by a human being.

(17) For corpse-dregs are fit to be eaten by a dog.

(18) When it becomes corpse-dregs.

(19) It is assumed that though the sun turns the fat into corpse-dregs, it is still fit to be eaten by a dog.

(20) And unfit for a dog. Hence it becomes clean.

(21) I.e.,it does not convey defilement from the unclean to the clean vessel.

(22) Aliter; The honey of Zifim; (cf. Josh. XV, 24). V.Sot. 48b.

(23) So the Aruch.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 50b

Beth Shammai say: Also one of a porridge of grist or beans, because [at the end of its flow] it springs back.[1]

Rammi b. Hama asked: is there [transference of defilement through] a jet in the case of foodstuffs,[2] or does [transference of defilement through] a jet not apply to foodstuffs? Do we say [that the principle applies to thick honey and batter] because they contain liquor,[3] whereas [foodstuffs] contain no liquor,[4] or is it perhaps because they are compact masses[5] and [foodstuffs] are also compact masses?[6] — Raba replied: Come and hear: A whole piece of fat[7] from a corpse, if melted, remains unclean, but if it was in pieces[8] and they were melted, it remains clean.[9] Now if you assume [that the principle of transference of defilement through] a jet does not apply to foodstuffs, [then even if it be] whole and then melted it should become clean![10] — R. Zera commented: I and Mar, son of Rabina, interpreted [the above teaching as follows]: It refers to where at the time of melting, the column of fire ascended to the mouth of the vessel[11] and [the fat] coagulated whilst it was all together.[12]

Rabina said to R. Ashi: Come and hear [the following]: Beth Shammai say: Also one of a porridge of grist or of beans, because [at the end of its flow] it springs back![13] — What does this prove? In the other cases[14] it may be the fact that they are compact masses [which causes defilement] though here it is because of the liquor.[15]

OR A LADLEFUL OF CORPSE-MOULD: And what is its size? — Hezekiah said: The palm of the hand full. R. Johanan said: The hollow of the hand[16] full.

It has been taught: The [measure of the] ladleful of corpsemould mentioned is,from the bottom of the fingers upwards.[17] So R. Meir. The Sages say [it means] the hollow of the hand full.[18] Now R. Johanan at least agrees with the Rabbis; but with whom does Hezekiah agree, neither with R. Meir, nor with the Rabbis? — I will tell you. The palm of the hand full and from the joints of the fingers upwards is the same measure.[19] R. Shimi b. Adda said to R. Papa: How is it known that 'from the joints of the fingers and upwards' means towards the tips? Perhaps it means lower down the hand[20] when [the measure] is the palm of the hand full?[21] This was not solved.[22]

---

(1) Being thick liquids, they have such elasticity that when he ceases to pour out the liquid, the lower end of the jet, which has touched the unclean vessel, springs back into the upper vessel. M. Maksh. V. 9.

(2) Viz, if he melted some solid food, e.g.,fat, and poured it from a clean to an unclean vessel.

(3) And it is the presence of the liquor which causes the jet to shrink backwards.

(4) Whence they would not transfer defilement from the lower end of the jet to the upper end.

(5) And so transfer defilement; in the same way as any solid becomes wholly unclean even if part of it is defiled.
(6) And transfer defilement.
(7) Of an olive's bulk.
(8) Each smaller than an olive. When smaller than an olive, unclean flesh loses its defiling property.
(9) Though now solidified to one piece larger than an olive's bulk. Tosaf. Oh. IV, 3.
(10) Whilst being melted, the fat would move from side to side of the vessel and so there would be less than an olive's bulk of the fat in one spot, if the jet of liquid fat be not counted as joined together.
(11) And the vessel was at rest when heated so that the fat was heated all together.
(12) Without moving from its original position, so Rashi. Tosaf. and Asheri give the following reading: 'It refers to where at the time of melting a column [of fat] rose and sublimed at the mouth of the vessel'. In either case there is no flow.
(13) It is now assumed that the Rabbis disagree with Beth Shammai only as regards grist and beans, but accept his criterion of springing back. This occurs in the presence of a liquid only.
(14) I.e., thick honey and batter.
(15) And the Rabbis disagree as to the criterion. Beth Shammai say it is liquor and the Rabbis, perhaps, the fact that it is a compact mass.
(16) Formed by bending the fingers to touch the wrist.
(17) I.e., presumably towards the tips of the fingers.
(18) Tosef. Oh. II, 2.
(19) And he agrees with R. Meir.
(20) Upwards in the direction of the shoulder.
(21) And there is no difficulty for Hezekiah.
(22) These words occur in the printed texts, but are omitted by Tosaf. and others.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 51a

Our Rabbis taught: What type of corpse produces corpsemould [that can defile]? A corpse buried naked in a marble sarcophagus or on a stone floor is a corpse which produces corpse-mould. If it is buried in its shroud, or in a wooden coffin, or on a brick floor, it is a corpse which does not produce corpse-mould [that can defile].[1]

'Ulla said: Corpse-mould [to defile] must come from flesh and sinew and bone. Raba raised [the following] objection to 'Ulla. [It has been taught:] Corpse-mould derived from flesh is clean. This implies that if it be from bones it is unclean, even though there be no flesh present? — Say rather as follows: Corpse-mould derived from flesh is clean, unless there be bone in the flesh. But there are no sinews!?[2] — It is impossible that there should be flesh and bones without sinews.

Rab Samuel[3] b. Abba said that R. Johanan said: Two corpses buried together act as gilgelin[4] to each other. R. Nathan [son of R. Oshaia][5] raised the following objection. [It has been taught that corpse-mould] derived from two corpses is unclean? — Said Raba, [we suppose that] each was buried separately and decayed and together' formed a ladleful of corpse-mould.[6]

Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said that R. Johanan said: If a man cut [the corpse's] hair and buried it with it, it acts as gilgelin [and the resultant mould does not defile].

We have learnt elsewhere: Every part of a corpse is unclean except the teeth, the hair and the nails; but whilst still attached [to the corpse], they are all unclean.[7] Hezekiah propounded: What is the law in the case of hair long enough to be polled,[8] and nails long enough to be pared?[9] Do we say that anything which is fit to be cut is as though already cut,[10] or perhaps they are after all still attached?[11] — But cannot the question be resolved from [the dictum of] Rabbah b. Bar Hanah?[12] The reason [that the hair acts as gilgelin] is because he cut it, but if he does not cut it, it does not?[13] He [Rabbah b. Bar Hanah] might have meant this: If he cut it, it acts as gilgelin; but if he did not cut it, he was in doubt [as to its effect].[14]

R. Jeremiah propounded: What is the law regarding corpsemould coming from the heel?[15] Does our tradition specify corpsemould derived from a whole corpse, but not corpse-mould resulting from [the decomposition of] the heel, or is there no difference? — Come and hear: R. Nathan son of R. Oshaia learnt that corpsemould derived from two corpses is unclean. Now if you assume that what comes from the heel is not [counted as corpse-mould], then, if we look to the one [corpse], [the mould in the mixture] may have been taken from the heel, and if to the other, it may have been taken from the heel?[16] — Where the whole corpse has decayed and [the corpse-mould] has been taken from the heel, there it would certainly be [counted as corpse-mould],[17] but here the question is when one limb[18] has decomposed and [the mould] has been taken from the heel. This was left unsolved.

R. Jeremiah propounded: Does a fetus in a woman's womb act as gilgelin or not? Since a Master has affirmed that a fetus counts as the thigh of its mother, is it therefore part of her body and so does not act as gilgelin, or perhaps since it would eventually leave [the womb], does it count as separated from her? Should you decide that since a fetus will eventually leave [the womb], it is separate from her,

---

(1) For the resultant mould will be mixed with fragments of cloth, wood, or brick, since these crumble. Tosef. Oh. II, 2.

(2) And ‘Ulla said all three are necessary.

(3) Var. lec. Shaman.

(4) A covering or girdle. lit., ‘wrappers’; so that the corpse. mould which results does not defile, just as it does not when the corpse is buried in a shroud.

(5) Inserted from Bah.

(6) In such a case, the joint mixture causes defilement; but if buried together, the resultant mould does not defile.

(7) Oh. III, 3.

(8) Hair that is long and would have been polled had not death intervened.

(9) Does the resultant corpse-mould defile? — So Rashi. According to Tosaf. the question is: Is the hair unclean or not?

(10) And prevents the formation of corpse-mould.

(11) And count as part of the body.

(12) ‘If he cut the hair and buried it, it acts as gigelin’.

(13) Thus attached hair counts as part of the corpse.

(14) And this was the very question of Hezekiah.

(15) The lower part of the body.

(16) And the resulting mixture should not defile, if corpsemould from the heel does not.

(17) This is shown by R. Nathan's dictum.

(18) One of the lower limbs.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 51b

what would be the law regarding semen in a woman s womb? Do we say that because it has not yet formed [into an embryo] it counts as part of her body,[1] or perhaps seeing it has come from elsewhere, it is not [part of the body]?[2]

R. Papa propounded: What about excrement? Seeing that one cannot exist without food, is it part of one's life,[3] or perhaps this too comes from elsewhere?[4]

R. Aha son of R. Ika propounded: What about his skin?[5]

R. Huna b. Manoah propounded: What about his phlegm and his mucus?

R. Samuel b. Aha said to R. Papa: If now you assume that all these mentioned act as gilgelin, how can there be corpse-mould which defiles? — If he was given to drink water from [the Well of] the Palm Trees,[6] depilated with nasha,[7] and was steeped in the [hot] springs of Tiberias.[8]

Abaye said: We hold a tradition that a corpse that has been ground to powder does not come under [the law of] corpse-mould. The following was propounded: If it were ground and then decayed, what would be the law? Is the reason [that corpse-mould defiles] solely because flesh and bones and sinews are present, and here they are present, or do we require it [to have become corpsemould] as in its original form, and this has not occurred? This was left unsolved.

'Ulla b. Hanina learned: A defective corpse[9] does not come under [the law of] corpse-dust,[10] nor does it acquire the soil on which it lies,[11] nor does it help to make an area into a graveyard.[12] The following objection was raised. [We have learnt:] No! Because you say this[13] of a corpse to which [the law concerning] 'the greater part, a quarter [kab]' and 'a ladleful of corpse-mould' applies, would you say it of a living body to which [the laws concerning] 'the greater part, a quarter [kab of bones]' and 'a ladleful of corpse-mould' do not apply?[14] What are the circumstances?[15] [Surely,] that one limb has decayed.[16] And similarly[17] in the case of a corpse, even if one member [has decomposed, the law of] corpse-dust applies?[18] — Does it say, 'whereas in the case of a corpse [the law of corpse-dust applies]'?[19] What we are told is that there are corpses to which [the law of] corpse-dust applies,[20] but there are no living bodies to which [the law of] corpse-dust applies.

Raba propounded: If [a man's limb] decayed whilst he was alive and he then died,[21] what would the law be?[22] Does the tradition specify corpse-mould which decayed when he was dead, or perhaps it is enough that he is now dead? — Come and hear [the following]. [We have learnt:] No! Because you say this of a corpse to which [the laws concerning] 'the greater part', 'a quarter [kab of bones]' and 'a ladleful of corpse-mould' apply, would you say it of a living body etc. The reason [that the law of corpse-mould does not apply to a living body] is because it is alive, from which we infer that if he died [the law of] corpse-mould would apply.[23] — Does it say, 'whereas if he died [the law of corpse-mould applies]'? What we are told is that there are corpses to which [the law of] corpse-mould applies, but there are no living bodies to which [the law of] corpsemould applies.[24]

Raba propounded: What is the law concerning a defective[25] ant?[26] Does the tradition specify [a certain] size[27] and this is wanting, or does it specify a [separate] creature[28] and this it is? —

---

(1) And does not act as gilgelin.

(2) And acts as gilgelin.

(3) And so does not act as gilgelin.

(4) And not being part of the body acts as gilgelin.

(5) Does it act as gilgelin or not? Rashi translates: What about his spittle?

(6) A violent purgative; v. Shab. 110a.

(7) A natural depilatory, v. supra p. 164, n. 4.

(8) To remove the skin.

(9) One lacking a member.

(10) When it decays, a ladleful of its corpse-dust does not defile by 'overshadowing'.

(11) Lit., 'take possession'. If a complete corpse is unearthed, the soil round about it must be removed with the body; v. infra Mishnah 64b.

(12) Lit., 'It has not (the law of) the area of a cemetery'. If three complete corpses are found together, the place where they are found must be converted into a graveyard. Ibid.

(13) That an olive's bulk of its flesh defiles by 'overshadowing'.

(14) V. 'Ed. VI, 3.

(15) Under which the law of corpse-mould does not apply to a living body.

(16) I.e., only part of the body.

(17) Since the cases are parallel.

(18) Contradicting ‘Ulla b. Hanina's teaching.
(19) Which would imply that the comparison was exact.
(20) Viz., whole bodies.
(21) And the body crumbled into corpse-dust, together with the limb which decayed during his lifetime.
(22) Does the law of corpse-dust apply or not?
(23) Thus Raba's question is answered in the affirmative.
(24) And the question remains.
(25) One lacking a limb.
(26) Does he receive stripes for eating it or not? — V. Mak. 13a.
(27) That the creature eaten must be the size of an ant.
(28) That what is eaten must be a separate creature.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 52a

R. Judah of Diskarta[1] replied: Judge from the following. [It has been taught: From the verse, Whosoever doth touch] them [. . . shall be unclean],[2] it might be thought that this is [only if he touches] whole [reptiles], and so Scripture says, [And upon whatsoever any] of them [. . . doth fall].[3] From ‘of them’ [alone] it might be thought that part of them [defiles], and so Scripture says ‘them’. How are [the texts to be] reconciled? [He is not unclean] unless he touches a part of one equivalent to a whole one and the Sages estimated this to be the size of a lentil, since the sand-lizard[4] at its first formation[5] is of the size of a lentil. Hence it follows that tradition specifies [a certain] size.[6] R. Shemaya demurred: The reason that we require a [particular] size, so that if it is not the size of a lentil it does not defile, is because there is no life in it,[7] but when there is life in it, [it may be that] no [minimum size is required].[8] It is this question that is being put to you.[9]

THE BACKBONE AND THE SKULL: The question was propounded: Does the Mishnah say the backbone and the skull,[10] or does it say perhaps the backbone or the skull?[11] — Raba replied: Come and hear: A backbone that has been stripped of most of its ribs[12] is clean,[13] but if it is in the grave, even though it is broken in pieces or separated [into parts], it is unclean,[14] because of the grave.[15] Now the reason [that the backbone is clean] is that it has been stripped, but if it were not stripped,it would be unclean,[16] and so may we [not] infer from this that the correct reading is, either the backbone or the skull? — Does it say, ‘But if etc.’?[17] What we are told is that when [the backbone is] stripped, it is clean;[18] but the other case[19] still remains doubtful.

Come and hear: R. Judah says: Six things were declared unclean by R. Akiba and clean by the Sages, and R. Akiba retracted his opinion. It is related that a basket full of [human] bones was taken into the Synagogue of the Tarsians[20] and placed in the open air.[21] Then Theodos, the Physician, together with all the physicians, entered, and said that there was not the backbone of a single corpse there.[22] The reason [that it was declared clean] is that there was not a backbone from a single [corpse], but had there been either a backbone or a skull from a single [corpse],[23] a nazirite would have been required to poll because of it, whence it follows that we read in our Mishnah, either the backbone or the skull? The case was put strongly. Not only was there not the backbone and skull of a single corpse, but there was not even the backbone of a single corpse or the skull of a single corpse.

Judge[24] from the enumeration [of the six things]: And what are the six things that R. Akiba declared unclean and the Sages clean? A limb set up[25] from two corpses, a limb set up [from bones sever ed] from two living men, and a half-kab of bones taken from two corpses, a quarter [log] of blood taken from two [corpses], a barleycorn's bulk of bone broken into two parts, the backbone and the skull.[26]

---

(1) V. supra p. 126, n. 6.
(2) Lev. XI, 31. Referring to dead reptiles.

(3) Ibid. 32. ‘of’ meaning even ‘part of’.
(4) One of the reptiles which defile; v. Ibid. 30.
(5) But if less, it does not defile.
(6) For the sand-lizard is the size of a lentil when whole.
(7) As in the case of the dead sand-lizard.
(8) But only that the creature should be alive.
(9) And R. Judah of Diskarta has not answered this.
(10) That both must be in the room for the nazirite to poll.
(11) And he must poll if only one is there.
(12) Cf. the Tosef. where the reading is probably, ‘vertebrae’.
(13) I.e., it does not defile through ‘overshadowing’.
(14) And defiles if ‘overshadowed’.
(15) Which joins the pieces together. Tosef. Oh.II, 3.
(16) Though the backbone alone is mentioned in the Tosefta.
(17) Adopting reading of Asheri.
(18) Perhaps even when the skull is there too.
(19) Stripped and the skull removed.
(20) Other renderings are, ‘weavers’, ‘bronzeworkers’; v. Aruch and A.S. 27b. [We find a synagogue of Tarsians in Jerusalem, Tiberias and Lydda. According to Krauss, Synagogale Altertumer, p. 201, they are identical with the synagogues of Alexandrians, who had brought over with them, to Palestine, the industry in Tarsian carpets — an industry which flourished greatly in Egypt; v. also TA. II, 625.]
(21) I.e., under an opening in the roof to prevent it conveying uncleanness by ‘overshadowing’.
(22) And so it could not convey defilement by ‘overshadowing’. Tosef. Oh. IV, 2.
(23) And a nazirite had ‘overshadowed’ it.
(24) Lit., ‘come and hear’.
(25) I.e., made by taking one bone from one corpse and another bone from a second corpse.
(26) This enumeration appears to be a digest of Oh. II, 6 and 7, or Tosef. ‘Ed. I, 6; but is not quite identical with either.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 52b

Now if you assume that either the backbone or the skull [alone is unclean] there would [surely] be seven things there? — When [the number six] was mentioned,[1] it referred to all those things where the majority differed from him, but excluded [the case of] a barley-corn's bulk of bone, since it is an individual who differed from him,[2] for we have learnt: If a barley-corn's bulk of bone is divided into two, R. Akiba declares it unclean and R. Johanan b. Nuri clean.[3]

Alternatively, [the number six] referred to members coming from a corpse, but it did not refer to [the case of] a member [severed] from a living being.[4]

Alternatively, [the number six] referred to all those [cases] where a nazirite must poll because of ‘overshadowing’ them, but excludes [the case of] a barley corn's bulk of bone,[5] since he need not.

Alternatively, [the number six] referred to all those [cases] from which he retracted, but excludes [the case of] a quarter [log] of blood, from which he did not retract. For Rabbi said to Bar Kappara, ‘Do not include [the case of] a quarter [-log] of blood amongst the retractions,for R. Akiba had that as a [traditional][6] teaching, and furthermore the verse, Neither shall he go in to any dead body,[7] supports him. — R. Simeon says: All his life he declared [a quarter-log of blood from two corpses] unclean, whether he retracted after his death, I do not know.[8] — A Tanna taught that [R. Simeon's] teeth grew black because of his fasts.[9] Come and hear: It has been taught: Beth Shammai say that a quarter [-kab] of bones, be they any of the bones, whether from two [limbs] or from three,[10] [is sufficient to cause defilement by overshadowing]. And Beth Hillel say, a quarter [-kab of bones] from a [single] corpse [is required], [and these bones must be derived] from [those bones which form] the greater part [of a skeleton] either in frame[11] or in number.[12] R. Joshua asserted: I can make the statements of Beth Shammai and Beth Hillel one.[13] For [when] Beth Shammai say 'from two [limbs] or from three,' [they mean] either from two shoulders and one thigh, or from two thighs and one shoulder, since this is the major part of a man's structure in height, whilst Beth Hillel say [the quarter kab must be taken] from the corpse, [viz.] from the greater part either in structure[14] or in number, for this [numerical majority] is to be found in the joints of the hands and feet.[15] Shammai says even a [single] bone, from the backbone or from the skull [defies by overshadowing]![16] — Shammai is different, as he takes the more stringent view.[17]

Can one infer from this that Shammai's[18] reason is that he takes the stricter view, but the Rabbis would require both backbone and skull? — No! For the Rabbis may only disagree with Shammai concerning a single bone coming from the backbone or the skull, but where these are complete one alone [may be sufficient].

Rammi b. Hama propounded: What is the law in the case of a quarter [-kab] of bones [coming] from the backbone and the skull? When [our Mishnah] stated that a half-kab of bones [is required], was it only where there are present [bones] from its other limbs [too], but since [the bones] from the backbone and skull are treated more seriously, even a quarter [-kab] of bones [is sufficient], or perhaps there is no difference?[19] — Raba replied: Come and hear: [We learnt:] THE BACKBONE AND THE SKULL.[20] Now if you assume that a quarter [-kab] of bones coming from the backbone and the skull is to be taken more seriously,[21] it should state 'for a quarter [-kab] of bones coming from the backbone etc.'?[22] —

---

(1) In the text there occurs here the following mnemonic for the alternative methods of arriving at the number six: 'The mnemonic is: An individual who polls and another'.

(2) In which case the norm is in accordance with R. Akiba.

(3) Oh. II, 7.

(4) This excludes the case of a limb set up from bones severed from two living beings: Tosaf. reads here: 'Only those cases relating to corpses are included (in the six), not those relating to living bodies'.

(5) V. our Mishnah.

(6) So Asheri.

(7) Lev. XXI, II; v. supra 38a.

(8) Tosef. Oh. IV, 2.

(9) To atone for the not quite respectful reference to his teacher. Cf. Hag. 22b.

(10) I.e., the quarter-kab must contain parts of more than one bone. Some (e.g. Maimonides to 'Ed. I, 7) interpret: from two corpses or from three.

(11) Lit., 'building' i.e. those bones which go towards forming the greater part of the frame, e.g.' the shoulder and thigh bones.

(12) A body contains 248 bones, whence the greater part in number is 125 bones. V. Mak. (Sonc. ed.) p. 169, n. 5.

(13) So that the two schools refer to different things and their opinions are not mutually exclusive.

(14) This is the shoulder and thigh.

(15) I.e., the bones in the hands and feet form the greater number of bones in the body, without being so important that they form the major part of the structure.

(16) Thus backbone or skull is meant. This should solve the reading in the Mishnah. Part of this Baraitha occurs as a Mishnah, 'Ed. I, 7.

(17) He holds that even a single bone defiled, hence does not require both the skull and backbone, but the Rabbis may disagree.

(18) The printed text reads in error 'Beth Shammai'.

(19) And even here a half-kab is necessary. The Wilna Gaon deletes the last sentence as an interpolation based on false premises. He asserts that the query is whether a quarter-kab of bones from the skull or backbone conveys uncleanness by overshadowing, even as a quarter-kab derived from the great part of a skeleton either in frame or in number, and connects with Oh. II, 1 q.v.

(20) According to Rashi the Tosef. quoted at foot of 52a is referred to, Tosaf. thinks it is our Mishnah, whilst the Wilna Gaon refers it to Oh. II,1.

(21) R. Elijah of Wilna reads: is unclean.

(22) For this is less than a whole skull and includes it.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 53a

But it was Raba himself who said that [special mention] was required only for a backbone and a skull containing less than a quarter [-kab] of bones?[1] — After hearing R. Akiba's opinion, [he altered his own opinion].[2]

Come and hear: Shammai says, even a single bone, from the backbone or from the skull [defiles by 'overshadowing']![3] Shammai is different, for he takes the much more stringent view.[4]

Can we infer from this that Shammai's reason[5] is that he is strict, but according to the Rabbis [there is no defilement by overshadowing'] unless there is a half-kab of bones? — Perhaps the Rabbis only disagree with Shammai where there is a single bone, but where there is a quarter [kab] of bones even the Rabbis agree [that this is sufficient].

R. Eliezer said: The Elders of an earlier generation [were divided]. Some used to say that a half-kab of bones and a half-log of blood [is required] for everything,[6] whilst a quarter [-kab] of bones and a quarter [-log] of blood is not sufficient for anything. Others used to say that even a quarter [-kab] of bones and a quarter [-log] of blood [is enough] for everything. The Court that came after them said that a half-kab of bones and a half-log of blood [is the quantity] for [making unclean] everything, a quarter [-kab] of bones and a quarter [-log] of blood [is sufficient] in the case of terumah[7] and sacred meats,[8] but not in the case of a nazirite or one preparing the paschal lamb.[9] But surely the compromise of the third [opinion] IS no [true] compromise?[10] — R. Jacob b. Idi replied: They had it as a tradition deriving from Haggai, Zechariah and Malachi.

ON ACCOUNT OF THESE A NAZIRITE MUST POLL: The word THESE,[11] in the first clause serves to exclude a barley-corn's bulk of bone, for touching or carrying which he must [poll] though not for overshadowing it — The word THESE in the next clause serves to exclude a rock overhanging a grave.[12]

OR A HALF-KAB OF BONES:

---

(1) And how can he infer from the mention of the backbone and skull that a quarter kab of bones from the backbone and skull does not defile.

(2) And the reply to Rammi b. Hama was given before he heard it. This last phrase is authenticated by the MSS. but its meaning is obscure. The Wilna Gaon reads: (That statement of Raba's was) in accordance with the view of Beth Shammai: a reading in keeping with his text.

(3) The rule for these being more stringent, as seen from Shammai's ruling, a quarter of a kab should suffice according to the Rabbis.

(4) But the Rabbis disagree.

(5) That a single bone suffices.

(6) I.e., conveys defilement by 'overshadowing' in all cases.

(7) V. Glos.

(8) After being under the same roof with a quarter-kab of bones, a man may not eat terumah or sacred meats.

(9) These are not rendered unclean so as to cause the nazirite to lose the period already counted, or to prevent the passover celebrant from offering the paschal lamb.

(10) And cannot be accepted as the final decision; for it is not arrived at by logical argument, but by accepting part of each of the other opinions; v. Rashi.

(11) I.e., but no others.

(12) Although he becomes unclean by touching the stone, he need not poll; cf. Shab. 82b.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 53b

[We see that] only if there is a half-kab of bones [must the nazirite poll], but not if there is a quarter [-kab] of bones. What are the circumstances? For if we assert that there are amongst them bones of a barley-corn in size, then we can give as the reason [that the nazirite must poll, the presence of] a barley-corn's bulk of bone? — The reference is to where [the bone] was crushed into powder.

OR ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A CORPSE OR ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A LIVING BODY THAT IS STILL PROPERLY COVERED WITH FLESH: What are the consequences if sufficient flesh is not attached [and a nazirite is defiled by touching or carrying such a bone]?[1] — R. Johanan said that the nazirite is not required to poll because of them. Resh Lakish said that the nazirite must poll because of them. R. Johanan said that the nazirite is not required to poll because of them, for it says in the first [Mishnah][2] only ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A CORPSE OR ANY LIMB [SEVERED] FROM A LIVING BODY THAT IS STILL PROPERLY COVERED WITH FLESH, [implying] 'but not otherwise'; whilst Resh Lakish said that he must poll, since this case is not mentioned in the subsequent [Mishnah].[3] [To the argument of Resh Lakish] R. Johanan will reply that whatever can be inferred from the rule [of our Mishnah] is not mentioned in the subsequent [Mishnah]. But what of the half-kab of bones [mentioned in our Mishnah] which implies that only half a kab of bones [can defile] but not a quarter [kab] of bones, and yet the subsequent [Mishnah] mentions [explicitly] that a quarter [-kab] of bones [do not defile]? — In that instance were a quarter [-kab] of bones not [mentioned]. I should have thought that he need not [poll] even [if defiled] through contact with it or carrying it, and so the Mishnah had to mention the [case of a] quarter [-kab] of bones [in order to teach] that it is only for overshadowing them that the nazirite is not required to poll.[4]

But what of the half-log of blood [mentioned in our Mishnah], from which it may be inferred that only [if the nazirite is defiled by 'overshadowing'] a half-log of blood, [is he required to poll] but not by a quarter [-log] of blood, and yet the subsequent [Mishnah] mentions [explicitly that] a quarter [-log] of blood [does not defile]? — In that case, the purpose [of mentioning it in the next Mishnah] is to dissent from the view of R. Akiba, for R. Akiba has stated that a quarter [-log] of blood coming from two corpses conveys defilement by overshadowing.[5]

How are we to picture this limb [severed] from a corpse? For if it has a bone of a barley-corn's bulk, what is R. Johanan's reason [for saying that a nazirite need not poll if he touches it], whilst if it has not a bone of a barley-corn's bulk, what is Resh Lakish's reason [for saying that the nazirite must poll if he touches it]? — Resh Lakish will reply that in point of fact it has not a bone of a barley-corn's bulk, and in spite of this, the All-Merciful has included it [amongst the things which cause defilement]. For it has been taught; [The verse,] And whosoever in the open field toucheth one that is slain with a sword, or one that dieth of himself [....shall be unclean seven days,[6] has the following significance]. In the open field' refers to one who overshadows a corpse. 'One that is slain'[7] refers to a limb [severed] from a living body which is in such condition that [if attached to the body] it could have been restored. 'A sword' signifies that this is of the same [degree of defilement][8] as the slain body. 'Or one that dieth of himself' refers to a limb severed from a corpse. 'Or a bone of a man' refers to a quarter [-kab] of bones. 'Or a grave' refers to a close grave;[9]

---

(1) It is assumed that the bone has not the bulk of a barley-corn.

(2) Supra 49b.

(3) Infra 54a, where the kinds of defilement for which the nazirite need not poll are enumerated.

(4) But be must poll if he touches it or carries it.

(5) Supra 38a; 49b. And so we are told that a nazirite is not required to poll for defilement conveyed by a quarter-log of blood. [Asheri and others omit 'for R. Akiba . . . by overshadowing', the reference being to R. Akiba's view' given infra 56b that a nazir must poll for coming in contact with a quarter-log of blood.]

(6) Num. XIX, 16.

(7) Lit., 'that which is severed'.

(8) If used to slay a person.

(9) I.e., one in which there is no hollow space of a handbreadth between the corpse and the roof of the grave.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 54a

for a Master said that defilement breaks through [the ground] and ascends, and breaks through [the ground] and descends.[1] [Thus far defilement by 'overshadowing' has been discussed,] whilst as regards [defilement by] contact, Rab Judah said that it has been taught: [The verse]. And upon him that touched the bone, or the slain[2] [etc.] [has the following significance]. 'The bone' refers to a barley-corn's bulk of bone. 'Or the slain' refers to a limb severed from a living body which is not in such condition that [if attached to the body] it could have been restored. 'Or the dead' refers to a limb severed from a corpse. 'Or the grave' refers, said Resh Lakish, to the grave, [of those buried] before the revelation [at Sinai].[3]

Now what is meant by 'a limb [severed] from a corpse'? For if it has a bone of a barley-corn's bulk, it is [covered by the rule concerning] one who touches a bone! We must therefore suppose that it has not a bone of a barley-corn's bulk, and in spite of this the All-Merciful Law has included it [amongst the things whose contact defiles].

R. Johanan, on the other hand, will say that in point of fact [the limb severed from a corpse] has [a barley-corn's bulk of bone] in it, and if [the verse] is unnecessary for teaching [that the limb defiles by] contact,[4] you can use it to teach[5] [that it defiles through] carrying.[6]

AND BE SPRINKLED ON THE THIRD AND SEVENTH DAYS AND IT MAKES VOID etc.: The question was propounded: When the Mishnah teaches UNTIL HE HAS BECOME CLEAN, does it refer to the seventh day, meaning until after sunset, so that the author is R. Eliezer,[7] or does it perhaps refer to the eighth day, the words UNTIL HE HAS BECOME CLEAN, meaning until he has brought his sacrifices, so that it gives the view of the Rabbis? — Judge[8] from the following. Since it teaches in the subsequent [Mishnah] that he commences to count immediately [after purification],[9] it follows that UNTIL HE HAS BECOME CLEAN in the first [Mishnah][10] means, until he has brought his sacrifices, and the ruling is that of the Rabbis who assert that naziriteship after purification does not operate until the eighth day.

MISHNAH. BUT FOR [DEFILEMENT CAUSED BY] SEKA KOTH [OVERHANGING BOUGHS][11] OR PERA'OTH [PROTRUDING BRICKS][12] OR A [FIELD THAT IS A] BETH PERAS,[13] OR LAND OF THE GENTILES[14] OR THE GOLEL [COVERING STONE] OR DOFEK [SIDE STONES] OF A TOMB,[15] OR A QUARTER [-LOG] OF BLOOD, OR A TENT [IN WHICH IS A CORPSE],[16] OR A QUARTER [-KAB] OF BONES, OR UTENSILS THAT HAVE BEEN IN CONTACT WITH A CORPSE, OR [THE DEFILEMENT OF A LEPER'S] TALE OF DAYS[17] OR HIS PERIOD OF DECLARED LEPROSY;[18] FOR ALL THESE THE NAZIRITE IS NOT REQUIRED TO POLL. HE MUST, HOWEVER, BE SPRINKLED ON THE THIRD AND SEVENTH [DAYS],

---

(1) So that any one walking above or beneath such a grave is accounted as 'overshadowing' it and becomes unclean. Cf. Oh. VII. 1.

(2) Num. XIX, 18.

(3) Lit., 'before the Word'. I.e., the bodies of Israelites buried before the revelation, though they do not defile by 'overshadowing', are treated like bodies of gentiles that defile at least by contact.

(4) For we already know this from the rule of one who touches a bone.
(5) [In accordance with the principle of Talmudic hermeneutics to apply a Biblical statement superfluous in respect of its own law to some other subject.]
(6) And we cannot infer from this that a limb which has not a bone of a barley-corn's bulk defiles a nazirite who touches it.
(7) The controversy concerns the question whether the naziriteship after purification commences immediately or whether it does not begin until the necessary sacrifices have been offered; v. supra 18b.
(8) Lit., 'come and hear'.
(9) With reference to the defilements for which a nazirite need not poll; infra 54b.
(10) Where it does not say immediately'.
(11) Under which there is a source of defilement, the exact branch being unknown. Such a branch would defile by 'overshadowing', and the person becomes unclean because of the doubt that has arisen.
(12) The meaning is mutatis mutandis, the same as in previous note.
(13) A field in which a grave has been ploughed becomes a beth peras, and renders unclean through contact for a distance of half a furrow of one hundred cubits in each direction. Peras Half.
(14) V supra 19b.
(15) According to Rabbenu Tam, 'the tombstone and the side stones on a grave'. [The tombs in ancient times were closed by means of large stones in order to protect them against the ravenous jackals (v. J.E. XII, p. 188). According to Levy the golel was an upright stone put up at the entrance of every niche or chamber כוך (v. B.B. (Sonc. Ed.) pp. 422ff, for illustrations) into which the bodies were deposited; and the dofek is the buttressing stone which was placed in front of the golel to prevent it from falling. For other views v. Krauss TA. II, pp. 488ff.]
(16) According to Tosaf. the meaning is 'a quarter-log of blood or a quarter-kab of bones in a tent.'
(17) V. Lev. XIV, 8.
(18) According to Rashi; the period during which he offers his sacrifices for purification after the tale of days; v. Lev. XIV, 9ff.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 54b

WHILST [THE UNCLEANNESS] DOES NOT RENDER VOID THE FORMER PERIOD,[1] BUT HE COMMENCES TO RESUME COUNTING [HIS NAZIRITESHIP] IMMEDIATELY [AFTER PURIFICATION] AND THERE IS NO SACRIFICE.[2] [THE SAGES] SAID IN FACT[3] THAT THE DAYS OF [DEFILEMENT OF] A MALE OR FEMALE SUFFERER FROM GONORRHOEA[4] AND THE DAYS THAT A LEPER IS SHUT UP[5] ARE RECKONED [AS PART OF THE NAZIRITESHIP].

GEMARA. By SEKAKOTH is meant a tree that overhangs the ground and by PERA'OTH protrusions from a fence.[6]

OR LAND OF THE GENTILES: The question was propounded: Did [the Rabbis] enact that the land of the Gentiles [causes defilement] because of the air,[7] or did they, perhaps, enact only because of the soil?[8] — Come and hear: HE MUST, HOWEVER, BE SPRINKLED ON THE THIRD AND SEVENTH [DAYS]. Now if you suppose that it was [declared unclean] because of the air, what need is there for sprinkling?[9] Does it not follow then that it was because of the soil? — No. In point of fact, it may have been because of the air, and when the Mishnah teaches [that he must be sprinkled] it refers to the other instances. This indeed appears to be the case, since UTENSILS THAT HAVE BEEN IN CONTACT WITH A CORPSE are mentioned. Do such utensils necessitate sprinkling?[10] Thus it follows from this that [sprinkling] applies to the remainder only.[11]

---

(1) I.e.,the period before defilement.
(2) I.e., the sacrifice prescribed for a nazirite after defilement
(3) באמת Lit., 'In truth did they say'. Rashi remarks that this phrase denotes a halachah received by Moses at Sinai.

V. B.M. 60a. Cf., however, below (56b) where this is derived by interpretation of the verses. [Rosenthal, F., Hoffmann Festschrift, p. 40, explains the phrase as the latin vero _ 'in fact'; and here is used to affirm the view that only the days of defilement of a male or female sufferer from gonorrhoea and the days that a leper is shut up are reckoned, but not the days of the leper's tale and his period of declared leprosy. This affirmation was necessary in view of the suggestion supra 56b that even in the latter case the days should be reckoned.]

(4) Cf. Lev. XV.

(5) Cf. Lev. XIII, 4ff

(6) Oh. VIII, 2, and Tosef. Oh. IX, 4.

(7) So that entering the atmosphere of a foreign country renders unclean. For the time when this enactment was promulgated. v. Shah. 15a.

(8) And one who does not touch the soil remains clean.

(9) Defilement from the air would be mild and would not necessitate sprinkling.

(10) In many instances they do not. [Vessels that come in contact with the dead do not communicate defilement to man so as to render him a principal source of uncleanness. The only question arises in case of metal vessels which, according to some authorities, become as grave a source of uncleanness as the dead itself. V. Tosaf. a.l.]

(11) I.e., to those to which we know it applies on other grounds. Thus the air of the lands of the gentiles may defile and the Mishnah affords no evidence about it.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 55a

Can we say [that the controversy about the air of a foreign country] is the same as that between the following Tannaim? [It has been taught:] If a person enters a foreign country in a box, or a chest, or a portable turret, Rabbi declares him unclean, while R. Jose son of R. Judah declares him clean. Is not this because Rabbi holds that [the uncleanness of the lands of the Gentiles][1] is because of the air[2] and R. Jose son of R. Judah holds that it is because of the soil?[3] — No. Both would agree that [foreign countries defile] because of the soil. The latter, however, holds that a tent in motion is still counted a tent,[4] whilst the former holds that a tent in motion does not constitute a tent.[5] But have we not been taught: R. Jose son of R. Judah says that if a chest is full of utensils and someone throws it in front of a corpse in a tent, it becomes unclean,[6] whilst if it were there already [in the tent], it remains clean?[7] — It must therefore be that both [Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah agree that foreign countries defile] because of the air. The latter holds that since [travelling in a chest] is not common the Rabbis did not intend the enactment to apply [to such a case].[8] whilst the former holds that although it is unusual, the Rabbis intended the enactment to apply to it. It has been taught to the same effect:[9] A person who enters a foreign country in a box, or a chest, or a portable turret remains clean, whilst [if he enters] in a carriage. or a boat, or a ship with a mast,[10] he becomes unclean.[11]

Alternatively,[12] [Rabbi and R. Jose son of R. Judah] may dis agree here on the question [whether a man travelling in a chest was declared unclean] for fear lest he put out his bead or the greater part of his [body].[13] It has been taught to this effect. R. Jose son of R. Judah says, a person who enters a foreign country in a box, or a chest, or a portable turret is clean until he puts out his head or the greater part of his [body].

BUT HE COMMENCES TO RESUME COUNTING [IMMEDIATELY etc.]: R. Hisda said: It was taught [that the days of declared leprosy are not counted] only in the case of a short naziriteship,[14] but in the case of a long naziriteship[15] they also help to discharge [the days of his naziriteship]. R. Sherabya objected: HE COMMENCES TO RESUME COUNTING IMMEDIATELY AND DOES NOT ANNUL THE PREVIOUS PERIOD.[16] What are the circumstances? For if it is speaking of a short naziriteship, he requires [thirty days] growth of hair,[17]

---

(1) [It is suggested that the uncleanness of the land of gentiles was decreed in the days of Alcimus in order to stem the tide of immigration from Palestine that had set in as a result of his persecutions. v. Weiss, Dor I, 105.]

(2) And even in a chest, he touches the air.

(3) And since he has not touched the soil, he is clean.
(4) And protects whatever is inside from defilement from outside.
(5) And whatever is inside is accounted as having contact with the ground and becomes unclean.
(6) Together with its contents.
(7) Which proves that R. Jose b. R. Judah does not consider that a tent in motion affords protection from defilement.
(8) And so the person inside remains clean.
(9) That the reason R. Jose declares him clean is that this method of travelling is uncommon.
(10) אסקריא. So Jast.; or better, 'sailing boat', v. Krauss TA. II, p. 341, who connects it with Grk. **]
(11) Tosef. Oh. XVIII, 2.
(12) It is now assumed: (i) That the enactment was because of the soil. (ii) That a tent in motion affords protection from defilement. (iii) When a chest full of utensils is thrown in front of a corpse, it becomes unclean because it ceases to have the character of a tent, protecting from defilement, and is treated as a utensil.
(13) When he would become unclean because of 'overshadowing' the soil.
(14) Of thirty days duration.
(15) Longer than thirty days when even if the period of leprosy is counted, thirty days still remain.
(16) It is clear from this that there has been a break in the counting.
(17) And so must ignore what has gone before and count thirty days.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 55b

and so it surely refers to a long naziriteship, and yet it teaches that HE COMMENCES TO COUNT IMMEDIATELY? — [R. Sherabya] put the question and answered it himself. [The Mishnah is speaking] of a naziriteship of, say, fifty days, of which he had observed twenty [days] when he became leprous. He must then poll for his leprosy [when he is healed] and observe a further thirty days of the nazirite [obligation], in which case he has a [thirty days] growth of hair.[1]

Rami b. Mama raised the following objection:[2] [We have learnt:] A nazirite, who was in doubt whether he had been defiled[3] and in doubt whether he had been a declared leper,[4]

---

(1) The days of declared leprosy cannot then be counted since he would not have thirty days left.
(2) To refute R. Hisda's statement.
(3) On the day he became a nazirite.
(4) On the day that he became a nazirite, having perhaps been healed the same day. A nazirite who becomes unclean must poll on becoming clean, and a leper shaves his body twice on recovering. Since this nazirite may not have been unclean nor may he have been a leper, he cannot shave his head during the period of his naziriteship. He must therefore count the full period before shaving because of the doubt, and allow a similar period to pass before the second and third shaving. Since he may have been both a leper and unclean because of touching a dead body, he must count a fourth period for his naziriteship in purity.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 56a

may eat sacred meats after sixty days.[1] and drink wine and touch the dead after one hundred and twenty days.[2] In connection with this passage it has been taught: This is only true of a short naziriteship, but in the case of a naziriteship of [say,] a year, he may eat sacred meats [only] after two years, and drink wine and touch the dead after four years.[3] Now if you suppose that the days [of declared leprosy] help to discharge his [naziriteship], then three years and thirty days should be enough?[4]

R. Ashi raised the following objection:[5] I am only told that the days Of his defilement are not reckoned in the number [of days of his naziriteship]. How do we know [that the same is true] of the days of his declared leprosy? This follows by analogy. [After] the days of defilement, he must poll and bring an offering, and [after] the days of his declared leprosy, he must poll and bring an offering.

Whence we should infer that just as the days of his defilement are not reckoned in the number [of days of his naziriteship], so the days of his declared leprosy are not reckoned in the number! No! If you say this of the days of his defilement, where the previous days[6] are rendered void because of them, would you also say it of the days of his declared leprosy where the previous days are not rendered void because of them? I can argue then in the following manner. Seeing that a nazirite [who undertakes his naziriteship] at the graveside, whose hair is ripe for polling because of his naziriteship, does not count [the time spent at the grave] in the number [of days of his naziriteship].[7] surely the days of his declared leprosy when his hair is not ripe for polling because of the naziriteship[8] should not be counted. In this way we may only infer that the period of his declared leprosy [may not be counted]. How do we know that [the same is true] of his tale of days?[9] This follows by analogy.

---

(1) When he will have shaved twice for his leprosy.

(2) After polling once for his defilement and again on terminating his naziriteship, v. infra 59b.

(3) Tosef. Ha. VI, 1.

(4) The third polling taking place after two years and thirty days, thirty days being the time for a growth of hair and the rest of the year will be coincident with the time of his leprosy. Since this is not the case, it follows that the days of his leprosy are not reckoned towards the naziriteship.

(5) To refute R. Hisda.

(6) The period of naziriteship counted before defilement.

(7) I.e., he does not poll for his defilement, but begins his naziriteship after leaving the grave and becoming clean and then polls on completing his naziriteship.

(8) He has to poll because he was a leper; cf supra 17b.

(9) The seven days that he 'tells' on recovery; v. Lev. XIV. 8.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 56b

Just as [after] the days of his declared leprosy he must poll,[1] so [after] his tale of days [he must poll],[2] and so, just as the days of his declared leprosy are not reckoned in the number [of days of his naziriteship], so his tale of days [are not counted]. It might be thought that the same is true of the days that he is shut up,[3] and this too could be derived by analogy. A declared leper defiles both couch and seat,[4] and during the days that he is shut up, he defies both couch and seat. And so if you infer that the days of his declared leprosy are not counted in the number [of days of his naziriteship], neither should the days when he is shut up be counted in the number. But this is not so. If it is true of the days of his declared leprosy [that the days are not counted], it is because [after] his declared leprosy, he must poll and bring an offering and therefore they are not counted, whereas since [after] the days that he is shut up he does not need to poll nor need he bring an offering, therefore they can be counted in the number [of days of his naziriteship]. From these arguments [the Rabbis] inferred that the days of [the leper's] telling and the days of his declared leprosy are not counted in the number [of days of his naziriteship], but the days [of defilement] of a male or female sufferer from gonorrhoea, and the days when a leper is shut up are counted.[5]

Now one of the arguments mentioned is: 'No! If you say this of the days of his defilement where the previous days are rendered void because of them, would you also say it of the days of his declared leprosy [where the previous days are not rendered void]'. What kind [of naziriteship is referred to]? Should it be a short naziriteship,[6] then we require a [thirty days] growth of hair and there is not such a growth.[7] Thus it must be a long naziriteship [which is referred to] and yet it says that they are not reckoned in the number [of days of the naziriteship]. From this it follows [that the period of declared leprosy is never counted].[8] This proves it.

MISHNAH. R. ELIEZER[9] SAID ON BEHALF OF R. JOSHUA THAT EVERY DEFILEMENT [CONVEYED] BY A CORPSE FOR WHICH A NAZIRITE MUST POLL ENTAILS A

LIABILITY FOR ONE ENTERING THE SANCTUARY[10] [WHILST THUS DEFILED], AND EVERY DEFILEMENT [CONVEYED] BY A CORPSE FOR WHICH A NAZIRITE IS NOT REQUIRED TO POLL DOES NOT ENTAIL A LIABILITY FOR ONE ENTERING THE SANCTUARY [WHILE SO DEFILED]. R. MEIR SAID: SUCH [DEFILEMENT] SHOULD NOT BE LESS SERIOUS THAN [DEFILEMENT THROUGH] A REPTILE.[11]

GEMARA. Did R. Eliezer receive this [statement] in the name of R. Joshua?[12] Did he not receive it in the name of R. Joshua b. Memel, as has been taught: R. Eliezer[13] said: When I went to 'Ardacus[14] I found R. Joshua b. Pethar Rosh[15] sitting and expound ing points of law in the presence of R. Meir. [One of them was as follows.] Every defilement [conveyed] by a corpse for which a nazirite must poll entails a penalty for entering the Sanctuary, and every defilement [arising] from a corpse for which a nazirite is not required to poll, does not entail a penalty for entering the Sanctuary. [R. Meir] said to him; Such [defilement] should not be less stringent than [defilement by] a reptile? I then asked [R. Joshua b. Pethar Rosh]. 'Are you at all versed in [the sayings of] R. Joshua b. Memel?' He replied. 'I am'. Thus did R. Joshua b. Memel tell me in the name of R. Joshua: Every defilement [arising] from a corpse for which a nazirite must poll, entails a penalty for entering the Sanctuary, and every defilement [arising] from a corpse for which a nazirite is not required to poll, does not entail a penalty for entering the Sanctuary.[16] Thus we see that it was in the name of R. Joshua b. Memel that [R. Eliezer] received it? — They replied:[17] From this it follows that whenever a tradition is transmitted through three [men], the first and the last [name] are mentioned, whilst the middle [name] is not mentioned.[18]

R. Nahman b. Isaac said: We, too. have learned to the same effect: Nahum the Scribe[19] said, This was transmitted to me from R. Measha, who received it from his father, who received it from 'the Pairs',[20] who received it from the Prophets as a tradition [handed] to Moses on Mt. Sinai: If a man who has sown his field with two varieties of wheat collects them on one threshing floor,[21] he need leave [only] one pe'ah,[22] but if he collects them on two threshing floors,[23] he must leave two pe'ahs.[24] Now here, Joshua and Caleb are not mentioned [between Moses and the Prophets]. Thus it follows from this [that intermediate names may be omitted].

MISHNAH. R. AKIBA SAID: I ARGUED IN THE PRESENCE OF R. ELIEZER[25] AS FOLLOWS. SEEING THAT A BARLEY-CORN'S BULK OF BONE WHICH DOES NOT DEFILE A MAN BY 'OVERSHADOWING', COMPELS A NAZIRITE TO POLL SHOULD HE TOUCH IT OR CARRY IT, THEN SURELY A QUARTER [-LOG] OF BLOOD WHICH DEFILES A MAN BY 'OVERSHADOWING, SHOULD CAUSE A NAZIRITE TO POLL IF HE TOUCHES IT OR CARRIES IF?[26] HE REPLIED: WHAT NOW, AKIBA! TO ARGUE FROM THE LESSER TO THE GREATER IS NOT PERMITTED IN THIS INSTANCE.' WHEN I AFTERWARDS WENT AND RECOUNTED THESE WORDS TO R. JOSHUA, HE SAID TO ME, 'YOUR ARGUMENT WAS SOUND, BUT [IN THIS CASE] THIS HAS BEEN DECLARED AS A FILED HALACHAH.[27]

---

(1) Lev. XIV, 8.

(2) Ibid. v. 9.

(3) A doubtful case of leprosy is isolated for seven days; v. Lev. XIII, 4-6.

(4) V. Lev. XV, 4, for this type of defilement.

(5) The whole of the last paragraph occurs in Sifre to Num. VI, 12. R. Ashi now proceeds with his objection.

(6) And we are told that the period before the declared leprosy is counted, but not the period of leprosy.

(7) If we reckon the days before leprosy.

(8) Thus R. Hisda's statement is refuted.

(9) [Read with I. 'R. Eleazar (b. Shammua)', a disciple of R. Akiba. R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus the teacher of R. Akiba could not have reported a teaching in the name of R. Joshua a disciple of his disciple. V. also n. 10 and p. 201 n. 1.]

(10) The Temple precincts. The liability is a sacrifice, if the offence is committed unwittingly.

(11) R. Meir's argument is: Since there is a penalty for entering the Temple after defilement by a reptile, although the person so defiled does not have to be sprinkled on the third and seventh days, then in the case of defilement by a corpse for which a nazirite need not poll. Just as he need not after defilement by a reptile, there should be a penalty on entering the Temple, for in this case he must be sprinkled on the third and seventh days.
(12) R. Joshua b. Hananiah (c. 100 C.E.).
(13) [Var. lec. R. Eleazar.]
(14) Identified with Damascus (Jast.). [Or, with Ard a-Suk near the source of the Jordan (Horowitz I. S. Palestine, p. 78).]
(15) [Var. lec. 'b. Pethora'; 'b. Bathyra'. V. Zuckermandel Tosefta p. 290.]
(16) Tosef. Naz. V, 3. Tos. Oh. IV, 7.
(17) [Asheri and Tosaf. omit 'they replied'.]
(18) Thus in our Mishnah though the tradition was received from R. Joshua through R. Joshua b. Memel and R. Eliezer, only the first and last of these is mentioned.
(19) Heb. לבלר _ libellarius.
(20) Zugoth (Pairs), from Jose B. Jo'ezer and Jose B. Johanan to Hillel and Shammai; v. Aboth (Sonc. ed.) p. 3, n. 8.
(21) I.e., does not keep them separate.
(22) Pe'ah. The corner of the field that was left for the poor. V. Lev. XXIII, 22.
(23) Thus treating them as two separate crops.
(24) Pe'ah II, 6. The text here has been emended after all the commentators to agree with the Mishnah in Pe'ah. The text, which is supported by the MSS., quotes instead Pe'ah III, 2, as the tradition of Nahum: If a man sowed dill or mustard seed in two or three separate places, he must leave pe'ah from each.
(25) R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus. In the last Mishnah by R. Eliezer, R. Eleazar b. Shammua is meant. V. supra p. 208, n. 4.
(26) Yet the Mishnah 54a counts the quarter-log of blood as one of the things for which a nazirite need not poll.
(27) As a tradition from Sinai and no inference may be drawn.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 57a

GEMARA. The question was propounded: Was it [the law concerning] a barley-corn's bulk of bone[1] that was a halachah and that of the quarter [-log] of blood [that was being derived] by argument, and [this is what is meant by saying that] an argument from the lesser to the greater is not permitted in the case of a halachah?[2] Or, was it [the law concerning] a quarter [-log] of blood[3] that was a halachah, while [the law concerning] a barley-corn's bulk of bone [was simply used] for the argument, and [this is what is meant by] saying that an argument from the lesser to the greater is not permitted in the case of a halachah?[4] — Come and hear: [It has been taught: The rulings concerning] a barley-corn's bulk of bone is a halachah,' [the rulings of] a quarter [-log] of blood [can be derived] by an argument; but an argument from the lesser to the greater is not permitted in the case of a halachah.[5]

CHAPTER VIII

MISHNAH. TWO NAZIRITES TO WHOM SOMEONE SAYS, I SAW ONE OF YOU DEFILED, BUT I DO NOT KNOW WHICH OF YOU IT WAS,' MUST [BOTH] POLL[6] AND BRING SACRIFICES [PRESCRIBED] FOR DEFILEMENT AND SACRIFICES [DUE ON TERMINATING A NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY,[7] [AND ONE OF THEM] MUST SAY, 'IF I AM UNCLEAN, THE SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT ARE MINE, AND THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY ARE YOURS, WHILST IF I AM THE ONE WHO IS CLEAN, THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY ARE MINE AND THE SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT ARE YOURS.' THEY MUST THEN COUNT THIRTY [MORE] DAYS[8] AND BRING SACRIFICES IN PURITY AND [ONE OF THEM] MUST SAY, IF I AM THE ONE WHO WAS UNCLEAN, THE SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT WERE MINE, THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY WERE YOURS, AND THESE ARE MY SACRIFICES IN PURITY, WHILST IF I WAS THE ONE WHO WAS CLEAN, THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY WERE MINE, THE SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT WERE

YOURS, AND THESE ARE YOUR SACRIFICES IN PURITY.

GEMARA. The Mishnah Says: TWO NAZIRITES TO WHOM SOMEONE SAYS, 'I SAW ONE OF YOU DEFILED, BUT I DO NOT KNOW WHICH OF YOU IT WAS [etc.]: Now why [is this necessary]?[9] For whence do we derive all [the laws concerning] doubtful defilement [arising] in a private domain?[10] [Is it not] from [the regulations regarding] a faithless wife?[11] [Whence it may be in ferred that] just as in the case of a faithless wife [only] the lover and his mistress are together,[12] so in every case of doubtful defilement in a private domain [the defilement is assumed to be definite] only if there were but two persons present, whereas in the present instance, the two nazirites and the one standing near[13] make three, so that it becomes [the same as] a case of doubtful defilement in a public domain [and the rule is:] Every case of doubtful defilement in a public domain remains clean?[14] — Rabbah son of R. Huna replied: [The Mishnah assumes that the third person] says, 'I saw a source of defilement thrown between you?[15] R. Ashi commented: This is also indicated [in the language of the Mishnah]

---

(1) Viz., that a nazirite must poll if he touches a bone of that size.

(2) And this was the reason that R. Akiba's argument was not accepted.

(3) Viz., that it defiles by overshadowing'.

(4) I.e., no new properties may be added by an argument to what is traditionally known.

(5) Thus the first alternative is meant.

(6) When both have completed their periods of naziriteship.

(7) One set of each kind of sacrifice.

(8) The usual period of naziriteship.

(9) Why should either of them have to take account of the possibility that he has become unclean?

(10) Viz.: That cases of doubtful defilement in a private domain are treated as if definitely unclean.

(11) Cf. Num. V, 11ff. The woman is regarded as having defiled her marital relationship and must undergo the ordeal of the bitter waters though there is no evidence of unfaithfulness; v. Sot. 28b.

(12) Proceedings involving the drinking of bitter waters can be taken against a faithless wife only if there is no eye-witness of unfaithfulness; v. Num. V, 13. and Sot. 2b.

(13) Who asserts that he saw one of them become unclean.

(14) And so each nazirite should regard himself as clean and need bring no sacrifice for defilement.

(15) And the third person was at a distance, so that the conditions for a private domain were fulfilled.

for it says: BUT I DO NOT KNOW WHICH OF YOU IT WAS, which proves [that he was not in their company].[1]

THEY MUST POLL AND BRING [etc.]: But why [should they be allowed to poll]? Perhaps they are not unclean and they will [nevertheless] have rounded [the corners Of the head]?[2] -Samuel replied: [The Mishnah is speaking] Of a woman or a minor.[3]

Why does he not regard [the Mishnah] as speaking of an adult [male nazirite], the rounding of the whole head not being considered [an infringement of the prohibition against] rounding?[4] — Since he does not do so ,it follows that Samuel holds that the rounding of the whole head is considered [an infringement of the prohibition against] rounding.

Mar Zutra taught this exposition of Samuel with reference to a subsequent Mishnah [which reads]: A nazirite who was in doubt whether he had been defiled and in doubt whether he had been a certified leper may eat sacred meats after sixty days [etc.][5] and must shave four times.[6] [But why?][7] Will he not have marred [the corners of his beard]?[8] — Samuel replied: [The Mishnah is speaking] of a woman or a minor.[9]

R. Huna said: One who rounds [the head of] a minor is guilty.[10] R. Adda b. Ahabah said to R. Huna: Then who shaves your [children's heads]? He replied: Hoba.[11] [Rab Adda exclaimed:] Does Hoba wish to bury her children?[12] During the whole of R. Adda b. Ahabah's lifetime, none of R. Huna's children survived.[13] Seeing that both [R. Huna and R. Adda] hold that rounding the whole head is [an infringement of the rule against] rounding,[14] wherein do they differ?[15] — R. Huna holds that [the verse,] Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard,[16] [signifies] that to whomsoever marring is applicable,[17] rounding is applicable, and since marring does not apply to women, rounding, too, does not apply to them.[18] R. Adda b. Ahabah, on the other hand, holds that both he who rounds and he who is rounded are included [in the prohibition],[19] the one who rounds being compared to the one who is rounded, [to the effect that] wherever the one who is rounded is guilty, the one who rounds is also guilty. Hence, since a child is not punishable[20] and so is not guilty [of the offence of rounding], he who rounds [the child] is also not guilty.[21]

Can we say that [the question of] rounding the whole head is the subject of [controversy between] Tannaim? For our Rabbis have taught: Why does Scripture mention his head?[22] Since it says, ye shall not round the corners of your heads,[23]

---

(1) For otherwise it should have read: 'And I have forgotten which of you it was'.

(2) Which is forbidden except to a nazirite or a leper; v. Lev. XIX. 27.

(3) For whom there is no prohibition against rounding.

(4) Cf. supra 41a.

(5) Infra 59b; v. supra 55b for relevant notes.

(6) 'And drink wine and have contact with the dead after one hundred and twenty days', which occurs in the Mishnah is here contracted to 'shave four times' after the Baraitha quoted on page 60a.

(7) Inserted with Bah, i.e., why may he shave in case of doubt?

(8) And this is forbidden (v. Lev. XIX, 27) unless he is actually a leper. The reading we have adopted is that of Rashi and Tosaf. Our printed text has: 'Will he not have rounded?' in which case there is no difference between Mar Zutra and the earlier statement. On our reading the point of Mar Zutra's statement is that we are without definite evidence of Samuel's opinion on the subject of rounding the whole head.

(9) Who have no beards.

(10) Of transgressing the command not to round.

(11) The wife of R. Huna, who, being a woman, was not commanded not to round.

(12) If the rounding of a child's head is forbidden, it is also forbidden for a woman to round it.

(13) Although R. Adda himself would have allowed the children's heads to be rounded even by a man (v. infra), his unfortunate forecast proved true during his lifetime.

(14) For the point at issue was whether this was permitted in the case of a minor, but both agreed that it is forbidden with an adult. Why does the one permit a woman to round a child and the other not allow it.

(15) What is the point at issue?

(16) Lev. XIX, 27.

(17) I.e. men who have beards.

(18) I.e., There is no penalty even if a woman rounds an adult. But a man may not round a minor.

(19) I.e., 'Ye shall not round' refers to both.

(20) For any offence.

(21) Hence even an adult may round a child. Thus when R.Adda said that Hoba should not poll the children, he was arguing on R. Huna's premises.

(22) Of the leper; although it has already said that he must shave all his hair; Lev. XIV,9.

(23) Speaking of all persons Lev. XIX,27.

it might be thought that the same is true of a leper, therefore Scripture says 'his head'.[1] And another [Baraitha] taught: Why does Scripture mention 'his head'?) Since it says with reference to the nazirite, There shall no razor come upon his head,[2] it might be thought that the same is true of a nazirite who becomes a leper, therefore Scripture says 'his head'.[3] Now surely there is here a difference of opinion between Tannaim [on the question of rounding the whole head]. The [Tanna] who refers ['his head'] to the nazirite holding that the rounding of the whole head does not count as rounding,[4] and that the purpose of the text[5] is to override the prohibition and positive command [incumbent on the nazirite],[6] whilst the other [Tanna] holds that the rounding of the whole head does count as rounding[7] and the purpose of the verse is to override a simple prohibition![8] — Said Raba: [It may be that] both [Tannaim] agree that the rounding of the whole head does not count as rounding, and the purpose of the verse [according to the latter Tanna][9] is [to permit rounding] where he first rounds [the corners only] and then shaves [the rest of the head]. Since he would not be guilty if he shaved it all at the same time, he is not guilty if he first rounds [the corners] and then shaves [the rest].[10]

But could Scripture possibly intend this?[11] Has not Resh Lakish said that wherever we find a positive command and a prohibition [at variance], then if it is possible to observe both, well and good, otherwise the positive command overrides the prohibition?[12] — We must therefore say that both [Tannaim] agree that the rounding of the whole head counts as rounding [the corners], and that the authority who utilises the verse ['his head' to prove that a positive command] may override both a prohibition and a positive command, infers that a simple prohibition [can be overridden] from [the command to wear] twisted cords. For the verse says, Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff,[13] and it has been taught [in explanation of this]: Thou shalt not wear a mingled stuff, [wool and linen together], but nevertheless, Thou shalt make thee twisted cords[14] of them.

Why does not the one who infers this [rule][15] from 'his head' infer it from 'twisted cords'? — He will reply that [the latter] is required for [the following dictum of] Raba. For Raba noted the following contradiction. It is written, And that they put with the fringe of each corner, [i.e.,] of the same [material] as the corner[16] must there be a thread of blue.[17] Yet it is [also] written wool and linen together.[18] How are these to be reconciled? Wool and linen discharge [the obligation to provide fringes] both for [garments of] their own species,[19] and also for other species,[20] but other kinds [of material] discharge [this obligation] only for [garments of] the same species but not for [garments of] a different species.[21]

And whence does the Tanna who utilizes 'his head' for [the inference that a positive command overrides] a simple prohibition learn that the positive command[22] overrides both a prohibition and a positive command?[23] — He infers it from [the expression] 'his beard'.[24] For it has been taught: Why does Scripture mention 'his beard'?[25] Since it says,[26] neither shall they shave off the corners of their beard,[27] it might be thought that the same is true of a priest who is a leper, and so Scripture says 'his beard'.[28]

Why does not the [Tanna] who utilizes 'his head' for [teaching that] the positive command and prohibition [can be overruled by a positive command] infer it from [the words] 'his beard'? — But according to your view[29] when we have the rule elsewhere

---

(1) The leper must even shave his head.

(2) Num. VI, 5.

(3) Even a nazirite must shave his head if he becomes a leper. Cf. the somewhat different discussion of these two Baraithas, supra 41a.

(4) And so no special permission is required to round the head of a leper on shaving him.

(5) 'His head'.

(6) Viz.: There shall no razor come upon his head (Num. VI. 5) and, He shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow long (Ibid.). In spite of these verses, the leprous nazirite is to shave his head.

(7) And it might be thought that even an ordinary leper must not round his head.
(8) I.e., one which has no accompanying positive command to the same effect.
(9) Who uses it to allow rounding in the case of an ordinary Ieper.
(10) I.e., the verse tells us that even if he shaves his head without avoiding the transgression of the prohibition against rounding, where is no penalty.
(11) Viz.: no permit infringement of a prohibition when it can he avoided.
(12) And here, if rounding the whole head is not an infringement, he should shave the whole head at once.
(13) Deut. XXII, 21.
(14) The next verse. The inference is that fringes of wool may be placed on a linen garment, the prohibition of the preceding verse notwithstanding.
(15) That a positive command overrides a simple prohibition.
(16) This is inferred from the redundant 'each corner'. Since we know from the preceding phrase that the fringes are to he on the corners, Raba concludes that the fringes must he of the same material as the garment.
(17) Num. XV, 38.
(18) Deut. XXII, 21, followed by Thou shalt make thee twisted cords, implying apparently that fringes must be made of wool and linen only.
(19) Wool and linen.
(20) Wool fringes may be put on a silk or linen garment.
(21) Silk fringes do nor count as fringes if put on a woollen garment.
(22) In the case of the leper.
(23) If the nazirite becomes leprous he may shave his head on recovering.
(24) Lev. XIV, 9 of a leper.
(25) Since he must shave the whole of his body.
(26) Of the priests.
(27) Lev. XXI, 5. This is the prohibition. The positive command is contained in the next verse. They shall be holy unto their God.
(28) Even a priest must shave his beard if he is a leper.
(29) That we make the inference from 'his beard', so that the case of the leprous nazirite can be deduced from that of the leprous priest.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 58b

that a positive command cannot override a prohibition accompanied by a positive command, let it be inferred from the [case of a leprous] priest that it can override?[1] [To this you reply] that we can make no inference from the [case of a leprous priest], [because] the case of the priest is different since the prohibition [overridden] does not apply to all people equally.[2] So, too, we are unable to infer the nazirite [leper] from the priest [leper] since the prohi bition [overridden in the case of the priest] does not apply equally to all people.[3]

Now to what use does the [Tanna] who utilizes [the phrase] 'his head' for the nazirite [leper], put [the phrase] 'his beard'?[4] — He requires it for [the following] that has been taught:[5] [From the verse] Neither shall they shave off the corners of their beard,[6] it might be thought that even if he shaved it with a scissors, he would be guilty, and so Scripture says [elsewhere], neither shalt thou mar [the corners of thy beard].[7] If it had [only written] 'neither shalt thou mar' It might have been thought that if he plucked it out with tweezers or a rohitni,[8] he would be guilty, and so Scripture says, 'neither shalt they shave off the corners of their beard'. What sort of shaving also mars? I should say that this is [shaving with] a razor.[9] Now according to the other tanna who utilizes the phrase, 'his head' for [overriding] a simple prohibition, why is it necessary to write both 'his head' and 'his beard'? [For since the expression 'his head'] can be understood as implying the overriding of a simple prohibition[10] and it can be understood also as implying the overriding of a prohibition accompanied by a positive command,[11] it can be applied indifferently to both,[12] and both could be inferred?[13] — The priest [leper] cannot be inferred from the nazirite [leper], since the latter can secure release [from his nazirite vow].[14] The nazirite [leper] cannot be inferred from the priest [leper], since the [latter] prohibition does not apply equally to all people.[15] [Finally,] we cannot infer from these a rule for other cases,[16] since the previously mentioned objections could be raised.[17]

Rab said: A man may thin [the hair of] his whole body with a razor. An objection was raised. [It has been taught:] One who removes [the hair of] the armpits or the private parts is to be scourged?[18] — This [refers to removal] by a razor whereas the other of [Rab refers to removal] by a scissors. But Rab also mentions a razor? — [He means closely] as though with a razor.

R. Hiyya b. Abba, citing R. Johanan said: One who removes [the hair of] the armpits or of the private parts is to be scourged. An objection was raised. [It has been taught:] Removal of hair is not [forbidden] by the Torah, but only by the Soferim?[19] — What he too meant by scourging is [scourging inflicted] by the Rabbis .[20]

---

(1) For your question assumes that there is no difference between this case and others.

(2) It refers to priests but not to ordinary Israelites. A prohibition which applies to all equally must be considered of greater force and, therefore, if accompanied by a positive command, it cannot be overruled.

(3) But anyone can become a nazirite and so the nazirite prohibition is of greater force, and a rule which applies to priests cannot be taken as applying to nazirites.

(4) For the priest leper can be inferred from the nazirite leper.

(5) Our text repeats here the Baraitha about a priest leper quoted before: Why does Scripture mention 'his beard'? Because it says, neither shall they share off the corners of their beard, it might be thought that the same is true of a priest who is a leper, and so Scripture says 'his beard'. And how do we know that this must be done with a razor? It has been taught: This passage appears to have been omitted by all the commentators and so we omit it with the Bail.

(6) Lev. XXI, 5.

(7) Lev. XIX, 27 of an ordinary Israelite. Scissors do not mar.

(8) V. Glos.

(9) And the phrase, 'his beard' teaches us that the leper too must shave with a razor; cf. supra 40b.

(10) By inference from the verse, 'ye shall not round the corners of your head' as in the first Baraitha supra.

(11) From the nazirite as in the second Baraitha.

(12) I.e., seeing that the method of inference is the same in both cases, we should have inferred both.

(13) What need is there of 'his beard'? The priest-leper can be inferred from the naziriteleper.

(14) By applying to a sage. And since the prohibition is not a permanent one, it might be thought that only here can a positive command override a prohibition accompanied by a positive command but not in the case of a priest-Ieper.

(15) But only to priests, whereas anyone can become a nazirite. Hence if the fact that a priest-Ieper may shave were taught, it would not be possible to infer in the case of a nazirite-leper that the prohibition and positive command to let his hair grow are overruled by the positive command for a leper to shave.

(16) Lit., 'we cannot infer other cases from them'. I.e., that in all cases a positive command overrides a prohibition accompanied by a positive command.

(17) Viz.: That the case of the nazirite and the priest are special instances and cannot be generalised.

(18) For infringing the prohibition against a man appearing as a woman; v. infra.

(19) Lit. 'by the Scribes' (v. Sanh., Sonc. ed., p. 360, n.7). Why then does R. Johanan say that the penalty is scourging.

(20) I.e. not the statutory 39 stripes, but a scourging prescribed at the discretion of the Rabbis for transgressing a non-Biblical law.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 59a

Others say [that the above argument took the following form]. R. Hiyya b. Abba, citing R. Johanan, said: One who removes [the hair of] the armpits or the private parts is to be scourged because of [infringing the prohibition] neither shall a man put on a woman's garment.[1] An objection was raised. [We have been taught:] Removal of hair is not [forbidden] by the Torah, but only by the Soferim? — That statement [of R. Johanan] agrees with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: One who removes [the hair of] the armpits or the private parts infringes the prohibition, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment.

What interpretation does the first Tanna[2] put on [the verse] 'neither shall a man put on a woman's garment'? — He requires it for the following that has been taught: Why does Scripture say, A woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man [etc.]?[3] If merely [to teach] that a man should not put on a woman's garment, nor a woman a man s garment, behold it says [of this action] this is an abomination[4] and there is no abomination here![5] It must therefore mean that a man should not put on a woman's garment and mix with women, nor a woman a man's garment and mix with men. R. Eliezer b. Jacob says: How do we know that a woman should not go to war bearing arms? Scripture says, 'A woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man.' [The words] 'Neither shall a man put on a woman's garment,' [signify] that a man is not to use cosmetics as women do.

R. Nahman said that a nazirite is permitted [to remove the hair of his armpits],[6] but this is not the accepted ruling. The Rabbis said to R. Simeon b. Abba: We have seen that R. Johanan has no [hair in his armpits].[7] [R. Simeon] said to then,: It has fallen out because of his old age.

A certain man was sentenced to scourging before R. Ammi, and when his armpits became bared,[8] he noticed that they were not shaven. R. Ammi said to then,: Let him go free. This man must be a member of the [learned] fraternity.[9]

Rab asked R. Hiyya whether [it was permitted] to shavɛ[10] [the armpits]. He replied: It is forbidden. [Rab] then asked: But it grows?[11] He replied: SOn of great ancestors,[12] there is a limit. If it continues to grow [beyond this] it falls out.

Rab asked R. Hiyya whether [it was permitted] to scratch [the armpits to remove the hair]. He replied: It is forbidden. [To the further question] whether he might [scratch] through his garment,[13] he replied that it was permitted. Some say that he asked him whether he might [scratch] through his garment during prayers[14] and he replied that it was forbidden; but this is not the accepted ruling.[15]

---

(1) Deut. XXII, 5. It was customary only for women to shave the hair of the body.

(2) Who holds that the removal of this hair is not forbidden by the Torah.

(3) Ibid.

(4) The end of the verse reads: 'whosoever doeth these things is an abomination to the Lord'. This word, 'abomination', is used of forbidden intercourse.

(5) The mere act of putting on the garments is not wrong.

(6) At the same time as he shaves his head when he would in any case be unattractive.

(7) How is it possible, if the removal is forbidden.

(8) As he was stripped to receive the punishment.

(9) As the fact that his armpits were unshaven proved.

(10) With scissors.

(11) Uncomfortably long, and one should be allowed to remove it for the sake of comfort without transgressing the prohibition.

(12) Lit., 'Son of princes'. A favourite appellation of Rab, used by his uncle R. Hiyya.

(13) I.e. whether he might scratch on top of his shirt, without touching the bare flesh.

(14) To remove a source of irritation. It is forbidden to touch the bare skin during prayers.

(15) I.e. scratching through a garment is allowed.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 59b

MISHNAH. IF ONE OF THEM DIES;[1] R. JOSHUA SAID THAT [THE OTHER] SHOULD SEEK

SOME THIRD PERSON[2] PREPARED TO UNDERTAKE A NAZIRITE-VOW TOGETHER WITH HIM, AND SAY: IF I WAS DEFILED, YOU ARE TO BE A NAZIRITE IMMEDIATELY, BUT IF I WAS CLEAN, YOU ARE TO BECOME A NAZIRITE AT THE END OF THIRTY DAYS.' THEY THEN COUNT THIRTY DAYS AND BRING SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT AND SACRIFICES [DUE ON TERMINATING A NAZIRITESHIP] IN PURITY AND [THE FIRST ONE] SAYS, 'IF I AM THE ONE WHO WAS DEFILED, THE SACRIFICES FOR DEFILEMENT ARE MINE AND THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY ARE YOURS, WHILST IF I AM THE ONE WHO REMAINED CLEAN, THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY ARE MINE AND THE SACRIFICES AFTER DEFILEMENT ARE [SACRIFICES OFFERED] IN DOUBT.'[3] THEY THEN COUNT [A FURTHER] THIRTY DAYS AND BRING [ONE SET OF] THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY AND [THE FIRST ONE] SAYS, 'IF I AM THE ONE WHO WAS DEFILED, THE SACRIFICE FOR DEFILEMENT [OFFERED PREVIOUSLY] WAS MINE AND THE SACRIFICE IN PURITY WAS YOURS, AND THIS IS MY SACRIFICE IN PURITY, WHILST IF I WAS THE ONE WHO REMAINED CLEAN, THE SACRIFICE IN PURITY WAS MINE AND THE SACRIFICE AFTER DEFILEMENT [WAS OFFERED] IN DOUBT AND THIS IS YOUR SACRIFICE IN PURITY.

BEN ZOMA SAID TO [R. JOSHUA]: WHO WILL LISTEN TO [THIS MAN] AND UNDERTAKE A NAZIRITE-VOW TOGETHER WITH HIM? WHAT HE MUST DO IS TO BRING[4] A BIRD AS A SINOFFERING AND AN ANIMAL AS A BURNT-OFFERING AND SAY, IF I WAS DEFILED, THE SIN-OFFERING IS PART OF MY DUE[5] AND THE BURNT-OFFERING IS A VOLUNTARY OFFERING, WHILST IF I REMAINED CLEAN, THE BURNT-OFFERING IS PART OF MY DUE AND THE SIN-OFFERING [A SACRIFICE OFFERED] IN DOUBT.' HE MUST THEN COUNT THIRTY DAYS AND BRING THE SACRIFICES IN PURITY AND SAY, IF I WAS DEFILED, THE FORMER BURNT-OFFERING WAS A VOLUNTARY ONE AND THIS IS THE OBLIGATORY ONE, WHILST IF I REMAINED CLEAN, THE FORMER BURNT-OFFERING WAS THE OBLIGATORY ONE AND THIS THE VOLUNTARY ONE. THESE [OTHERS] ARE THE REST OF MY SACRIFICES.' R. JOSHUA RETORTED: THE RESULT WILL BE THAT THIS [NAZIRITE] WILL BRING HIS SACRIFICES HALF AT A TIME![6] THE SAGES, HOWEVER, AGREED WITH BEN ZOMA.

GEMARA. But let him bring them [half at a time]?[7] — Rab Judah citing Samuel said: R. Joshua only said this in order to sharpen [the wits of] the students.[8] R. Nahman[9] said, What would R. Joshua do with the intestines to prevent them decomposing?[10]

MISHNAH. A NAZIRITE WHO WAS IN DOUBT WHETHER HE HAD BEEN DEFILED AND IN DOUBT WHETHER HE HAD BEEN A CONFIRMED[11] LEPER, MAY EAT SACRED MEATS AFTER SIXTY DAYS,[12] AND DRINK WINE AND TOUCH THE DEAD AFTER ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY DAYS,[13] SINCE POLLING ON ACCOUNT OF [LEPROUs] DISEASE OVERRIDES [THE PROHIBITION AGAINST] THE POLLING OF THE NAZIRITE ONLY THEN [THE LEPROSY] IS CERTAIN, BUT WHEN IT IS DOUBTFUL IT DOES NOT OVERRIDE IT.[14]

---

(1) One of the two men mentioned in the last Mishnah 57a.

(2) Lit. 'someone from the street'.

(3) Its flesh would be interred and not eaten, as in the case with a sacrifice brought for certain defilement; v. supra 29a.

(4) On completing his naziriteship.

(5) He must offer the sin-offering because he cannot commence to count the naziriteship in purity until it is sacrificed, if he had been in fact defiled. The other sacrifices can be dispensed with in the circumstances; v. supra 18b.

(6) If he was in fact clean, his burnt-offering will have been brought thirty days before the other sacrifices.

(7) I.e., What is the point of R. Joshua's objection to the procedure of Ben Zoma.

(8) It was not a real objection. R. Joshua merely wanted the students to learn not to forbear from raising an objection because it may have no basis.

(9) Both Rashi and Tosaf. have: 'R. Nahman b. Isaac'.

(10) If we were to do as R. Joshua suggests, the fat of the intestines (which must be offered on the altar) would decompose whilst both nazirites were being shaved prior to the waving. Surely, this is as great an objection as the bringing of the sacrifices at different times. R. Nahman points out that not merely is there no technical objection to the procedure of Ben Zoma but R. Joshua's cannot even be considered preferable. Tosaf.

(11) מוחלט 'confirmed': a person afflicted with leprosy who, on the first examination or after the period of confinement, is declared by the priest to he a leper; v. Lev. XIII, 45ff.

(12) I.e., after counting two nazirite periods of thirty days.

(13) After four nazirite periods. V. supra 55b for relevant notes.

(14) But the period of naziriteship must he observed before polling; v. Gemara following.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 60a

GEMARA. A Tanna taught: [The procedure laid down in the Mishnah] applies only in the case of a short naziriteship,[1] but in the case of a naziriteship of [say,] a year, he may eat sacred meats [only] after two years, and drink wine and touch the dead after four years ,[2] It has been taught further in connection with this: He must poll four times.[3] At the first polling he brings a pair of birds, a bird as a sin-offering, and an animal as a burnt-offering.[4] At the second [polling] he brings a bird as a sin-offering and an animal as a burnt-offering. At the third he [again] brings a bird as a sin-offering and an animal as a burnt-offering. At the fourth he brings the sacrifice [due on terminating the naziriteship] in purity.

It has just been said: 'At the first polling he brings etc.' [In this way] whatever the facts are he offers the correct [sacrifice]. For if he was certainly a leper but was not defiled, the pair of birds are [in discharge of] his obligation,[5] the bird as a sin-offering [is a sacrifice offered] in doubt and is to be buried, and the burntoffering is a free-will offering. He cannot however be shaved [a second time] seven days hence,[6] for perhaps he is not a confirmed leper and the All-Merciful has said [of the nazirite]. There shall no razor come upon his head until [the days] be fulfilled.[7] If, on the other hand, he was not certainly a leper but he was defiled, then the bird as a sin-offering is [in discharge of] his obligation,[8] the pair of birds, being prepared without [the Temple court][9] are not [in the category of] profane [animals] brought into the Temple-court,[10] whilst the animal as a burnt-offering is a freewill-offering. Finally, if he was neither a leper nor defiled, then the pair of birds are [in any case] prepared without [the Temple-court] ,[11] the bird as a sin-offering is to be buried, and the animal as a burnt-offering is [in discharge of] his obligation [as a clean nazirite].[12]

But surely he requires a guilt-offering?[13] — [The author of this Baraitha] is R. Simeon who says that he brings one and makes a stipulation.[14]

At the second and third polling a pair of birds is unnecessary for these have been prepared.[15] What [doubt] is there [remaining]? That perhaps he was actually a confirmed leper?[16] [Because of this he offers] one [of the two birds as a sin-offering,][17] for the doubt on account of the tale of days[18] and one for the doubt on account of defilement.[19]

At the fourth polling he brings the sacrifice in purity and stipulates

---

(1) Of thirty days duration.

(2) Tosef. Naz. VI, I.

(3) At the end of each thirty days or year.

(4) The purpose of the offerings will be explained immediately.

(5) V. Lev. XIV, 2.

(6) The normal period of separation between the two pollings of a leper; Lev. XIV, 9.

(7) Num. VI, 5. He must therefore wait another whole period before he can shave the second time. Hence he can eat sacred meats only after two periods have elapsed.
(8) Ibid.10.
(9) Lev. XIV, 5 seq.
(10) And so can be offered even though he may not have been a leper.
(11) And so can be offered even if he is not a leper.
(12) This permits him to poll and the other sacrifices can be brought later.
(13) After the second polling on recovery from leprosy (Lev. XIV, 10). Until it was brought he could not eat sacred meats.
(14) V. Men. 105a. He stipulates that if a guilt-offering is not due, the animal is to be a voluntary peace-offering. Since the author is R. Simeon, there was no need to mention the guiltoffering.
(15) At the first polling.
(16) When he must now bring sacrifices due after his tale of days; Lev. XIV,9.
(17) Brought at the second and third pollings.
(18) The seven days that must be counted between the two pollings of a nazirite, but which have here become a whole period.
(19) The burnt-offering is brought on each occasion in case he should have completed his naziriteship in purity.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 60b

that if he Was actually a [clean] nazirite,[1] the first burntoffering was [in discharge of] his obligation and the present one is a freewill-offering, whilst if he was defiled and a confirmed leper, the first burnt-offering was a freewill-offering and this one is [in discharge of] his obligation and the other [animals] are the rest of his sacrifice.

[A nazirite] who was in doubt whether he had been defiled but certainly been a confirmed leper, may eat sacred meats after eight days,[2] and may drink wine and touch the dead after sixty-seven days,[3] One who was in doubt whether he had been a confirmed leper but had certainly been defiled, may eat sacred meats after thirty-seven days ,[4] and may drink wine and touch the dead after seventy-four days.' One who was certainly defiled and certainly a confirmed leper may eat sacred meats after eight days, and may drink wine and touch the dead after forty-four days.[5]

R. Simeon b. Yohai was asked by his disciples: May a ritually clean nazirite who was a leper poll once only[6] and have it reckoned for both purposes?[7] — He replied: He cannot poll in this way.[8] They then asked him: Why? — He replied: If both [the nazirite and the leper polled] in order that it should grow again,[9] or both [polled] In order to remove [the hair],[10] your suggestion would be sound, but as it is the nazirite [polls] to remove [the hair] and the leper [polls] to let it grow again. [They then said:] Granted that it should not count [for both pollings] after the period of confirmed leprosy, let it still count [for both] after his tale of days?[11] — He replied: If both were required to poll before the sprinkling of the blood [of the sacrifice], your suggestion would be sound, but here the leper polls before the sprinkling of the blood[12] and the nazirite after the sprinkling of the blood.[13] [They next suggested that though the one polling] should not count both for the days of his leprosy and his naziriteship, yet it ought to count for the days [both] of his leprosy and of his defilements.[14] [R. Simeon, however,] said to them: If both [polled] before bathing, your proposal would be sound, but the defiled [nazirite polls] after bathing[15] and the leper[16] before bathing.[17]

[Another version of the discussion is as follows.][18] They said to him: You have given a good reason why ii should not count [both] for his tale of days and for his naziriteship, but why should not [one polling] count for his period of confirmed leprosy as well as for his defilement, since in both cases [the polling] is to allow [the hair] to grow? — He replied: In the case of a ritually clean nazirite who is a leper, [the purpose of] the one [polling][19] is for [the hair] to grow again and the other[20] is to remove [the hair], whilst in the case of a defiled nazirite who is a leper, the latter [polling takes place] before bathing and the former after bathing.

---

(1) And was never a leper nor unclean.

(2) Since the shaving for leprosy may take place immediately he is seen to be clean and he has still to walt eight days.

(3) For he must wait thirty days after the second polling for leprosy before he may shave on account of the doubt whether he was defiled, and then he counts thirty days for his naziriteship in purity.

(4) As a defiled nazirite, he polls on becoming clean at the end of seven days and then again for his clean naziriteship after thirty days. Since he may have been a leper, these two pollings now count for the leprosy and as he was certainly unclean he can poll after seven days for the uncleanness and again after thirty days for his clean naziriteship.

(5) Seven for the leprosy, seven for the defilement and thirty for the clean naziriteship; Tosef. Naz. VI, z.

(6) If the termination of his naziriteship and his recovery from the disease coincided.

(7) This is really an objection to the Mishnah which requires him to poll four times, i.e., separately for each contingency. (R. Asher.)

(8) And he must poll twice.

(9) I.e., if both were required to remove the hair a second time as the leper must.

(10) With no subsequent obligation to let it grow.

(11) Since after the tale of days (Lev. XIV,9), the leper also polls to remove his hair.

(12) He shaves on the seventh day and offers the sacrifice on the eighth day. (Lev. XIV, 9-10).

(13) V. Num. VI, 16-18.

(14) I.e., when the end of leprosy and defilement coincide.

(15) He shall shave his head on the day of his cleansing (Num. VI,9) i.e., after bathing.

(16) V. Lev. XIV,9.

(17) Tosef. Naz. V,4' where the arguments are transposed in part.

(18) So Tosaf. and R. Asher consider the next passage.

(19) Viz., the polling because of the confirmed leprosy.

(20) Viz., the polling after the naziriteship.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 61a

R. Hiyya taught [the following differences: The leper polls] before bathing, [the unclean nazirite] after bathing; the former before the sprinkling of the blood, the [clean nazirite] after the sprinkling of the blood.

SINCE POLLING ON ACCOUNT OF [LEPROUs] DISEASE etc. Rami b. Hama propounded: Are the four pollings required[1] for carrying out a religious duty,[2] or whether they are merely in order to remove defiled hair?[3] The practical issue is whether this may be removed with nasha.[4] For if we say that they are a religious duty It would not be permitted to treat [the hair] with nasha, whereas if their purpose is simply the removal of defiled hair, treatment with nasha would be permitted. What, then, is the law?-Raba replied: Come and hear: And he is required to undergo four pollings.[5] Now if you assume that their purpose is simply the removal of defiled hair, three [pollings] alone should suffice.[6] Hence you may prove that they are [all] a religious duty. This proves It.

CHAPTER IX

MISHNAH. GENTILES HAVE NO [COMPETENCE FOR] NAZIRITESHIP,[7] BUT WOMEN AND SLAVES[8] HAVE. THE NAZIRITE VOW IS MORE STRINGENT IN THE CASE OF WOMEN THAN IN THE CASE OF SLAVES, FOR A MAN CAN COMPEL HIS SLAVE [TO BREAK HIS VOW][9] BUT HE CANNOT COMPEL HIS WIFE [TO DO SO].

GEMARA. The Mishnah teaches that GENTILES HAVE NO [COMPETENCE FOR] NAZIRITESHIP [etc.]. How do we know this? — For our Rabbis taught: [Scripture says] Speak unto the children of Israel,[10] but not to Gentiles; and say unto them, thereby including slaves.[11]

But what need is there of a Verse,[12] Seeing that there is a principle that every precept incumbent on women is also incumbent on slaves?[13] — Raba replied: [Naziriteship] is different [from other laws]. For there is a verse, [When a man voweth a vow] to bind his soul with a bond,[14] which thus refers to one who is his own master[15] and excludes slaves who are not their own masters.[16] Now because [slaves] are not their own masters it might be thought that they are precluded from making nazirite-vows[17] and so we are told [this is not so]. The Master stated: 'Speak in to the children[18] of Israel but not to Gentiles.' But does the mention of Israel always exclude Gentiles?[18] Is there not written in connection with 'Arakin,[19] Speak unto the children of Israel,[20] and yet it has been taught: 'Israelites can vow 'Arakin but not Gentiles. It might be thought that [Gentiles] cannot be the subject of 'Arakin vows either,[21] but the verse says A man'?[22] — [Naziriteship] is different, for here there is a verse, He shall not make himself unclean for his father or his mother,[23] which shows that [the passage] is referring to such as have a [legal] father,[24] and thus excluding Gentiles who have no [legal] father. In what respect have Gentiles no father? Shall I say it is as regards inheritance?[25] Surely R. Hiyya b. Abin, citing R. Johanan has said that a Gentile inherits his father in Torah-law, for there is a verse, Because I have given Mount Seir to Esau for an [inheritance]![26] — You must therefore mean that such as are bound to honour their fathers [are referred to].[27] But does it say Honour thy father in connection with nazirites?[28] , — We must therefore say that the verse, 'He shall not make himself unclean for his father or his mother' shows that only those to whom [the laws of] defilement apply [can assume naziriteship]

---

(1) For a nazirite who was both doubtfully a leper and doubtfully defiled.

(2) I.e., whether each one is a religious duty requiring a razor.

(3) And only the polling of a clean nazirite requires a razor.

(4) A plant depilatory. v. supra p. 146, n. 4.

(5) The Baraitha cited above.

(6) For only the first three pollings are because of the doubtful leprosy and defilement. The fourth is certainly an ordinary polling of a clean nazirite. Hence since the Baraitha makes no distinction between them, they must all be equally a religious duty.

(7) I.e., if a gentile undertakes to be a nazirite, the vow is of no effect.

(8) I.e., non — Jewish slaves who, after having submitted to circumcision and the prescribed ablution, are subject to the fulfilment of certain precepts.]

(9) As long as the slave belongs to him.

(10) Num. VI, 2; opening the chapter on naziriteship.

(11) 'Israel' is not repeated, and thus we infer that others than Israelites can undertake naziriteship, i.e., slaves also.

(12) To allow slaves to undertake naziriteship.

(13) Women are explicitly allowed to become nazirites (Num. VI, 2). For the principle. v. Chag. 4a.

(14) Num. XXX, 3 which lays down that vows are binding.

(15) Lit., 'whose soul (person) belongs to himself'.

(16) A slave's vows are not binding.

(17) Since they are also a kind of vow.

(18) From the scope of the scriptural passage in which it occurs.

(19) Vows of' valuation, v. Lev. XXVII.

(20) Lev. XXVII, 1.

(21) I.e., that an Israelite cannot vow to give the valuation of a Gentile.

(22) Ibid. v.2; 'When a nun shall clearly utter a row of persons unto the Lord according to thy valuation'. Thus we see that 'Israel' in v. 1 does not exclude Gentiles entirely from the scope of the chapter, but only disqualifies them from vowing 'Arakin. Similarly, since the word 'man' also occurs in connection with naziriteship (Num. VI, 2). Gentiles should not he wholly excluded from naziriteship.

(23) Num. VI, 7.

(24) Viz.: Jews, who in all matters belong to their fathers' family, Gentiles, on the other hand, are held in Jewish law to count descent from the mother.

(25) I.e., that a Gentile should not inherit his father.

(26) E.V. ‘possession. Deut. II, 5.

(27) V. Num. VI, 7. And since a Gentile is nor hound by the commandment, he cannot become a nazirite.

(28) That you hold Gentiles to be excluded from the scope of the chapter.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 61b

but not gentiles to whom [the laws of] defilement do not apply. How do we know that [the laws of] defilement do not apply to them? — The verse says. But the man that shall be unclean and shall not purify himself that soul shall be cut off from the midst of the kahal [assembly],[1] referring to such as form a kahal and excluding [gentiles] who do not form a kahal.[2]

How does it follow [that the laws of defilement do not apply to gentiles]? Perhaps [all that is meant is that] he is not liable to kareth [excision],[3] but [the laws of] defilement do apply [to him]?[4] Scripture Says, And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean,[5] [teaching that] whoever can become clean,[6] becomes unclean, and whoever cannot become clean does not become unclean.[7] But perhaps we may say that while [the laws of] purification do not apply to [gentiles], yet [the laws of] defilement do apply?[8] — Scripture says, But the man that shall be unclean aid shall not purify himself.[9] R. Aha b. Jacob said: [Naziriteship] is different,[10] for here there is a verse, And ye may make them an inheritance for your children after you.[11] [From this we learn that] to whomsoever [the laws of] inheritance [of slaves] apply, to him [the laws of] defilement apply, and to whomsoever [the laws of] inheritance [of slaves] do not apply, to him [the laws of] defilement do not apply.[12]

If that is the reason [that gentiles cannot become nazirites],[13] then slaves too should not be able [to become nazirites]?[14] — In point of fact, said Raba, [the following is the reason that gentiles are wholly excluded from naziriteship].[15] It is quite permissible in the case of ‘Arakin [to argue thus:] when it says, ‘the children[16] of Israel’ [it implies that] Israelites can vow ‘Arakin but not gentiles. I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot be the subject of ‘Arakin vows either,[16] Scripture [therefore] says ‘all’[17] [But you cannot similarly argue] here, [in the case of naziriteship as follows: The words ‘children of Israel’ imply that] Israelites can undertake nazirite — vows and bring the offering [due on terminating the naziriteship], but not gentiles.[18] I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot become nazirites at all. Scripture [therefore] says ‘man’.[19] For I will say such an argument is inadmissable[20] since [the exclusion of gentiles] from [bringing the nazirite] offering is not inferred from this [verse], but from elsewhere, [as has been taught:] R. Jose, the Galilean said, [the verse] for a burnt-offering[21] serves to exclude [a gentile] from [bringing] the nazirite-offerings.[22] Why not argue [as follows: The words ‘children of Israel’ imply that] Israelites can undertake life-naziriteships but not gentiles. I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot undertake [ordinary] nazirite-vows either,[23] Scripture [therefore] says ‘man’?[24] R.Johanan replied: Is the life-nazirite mentioned [in Scripture]?[25] Why not argue [as follows: The words children of Israel imply that] Israelites can impose nazirite-vows upon their children, but not gentiles. I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot become nazirites [at all]. Scripture [therefore] says ‘man’?[26] But R. Johanan has said that this is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite![27]

Why not argue [as follows: The words ‘children of Israel’ imply that] Israelites can poll [with the offerings due] for their father's nazirite-sacrifices,[28] but not gentiles.

---

(1) Num. XIX, 20.

(2) The term ‘kahal is used of Jews only.

(3) If he enters the Temple whilst defiled; for the word kahal is used in the phrase referring to excision. On kareth v. Glos.

(4) I.e., he can become unclean and defile others.

(5) Num. XIX, 19.
(6) I.e., by undergoing the purification rites. [These rites are specially prescribed for the congregation of the children of Israel. V. Num. XIX, 9.]
(7) And since a gentile cannot undergo the purification rites, he does not become unclean.
(8) I.e., having become unclean, he can defile others and remains unclean himself, but he cannot become clean again.
(9) Num. XIX, 20. Implying that wherever there can be no purification, there is no defilement.
(10) From 'Arakin. And when we said that gentiles have no legal father, it was in respect of slaves.
(11) Lev. XXV, 46. Referring to gentile slaves. A gentile cannot bequeath his slaves in Torah-law; v. Git. 38a.
(12) And since the laws of defilement do not apply to gentiles, they cannot become nazirites.
(13) Viz., that they cannot bequeath their slaves to their heirs.
(14) For the laws of inheritance do not apply to slaves. A slave's property becomes his masters.
(15) Although the mention of 'children of Israel' does not necessarily exclude gentiles from the scope of a scriptural passage.
(16) I.e., that gentiles are wholly excluded from the scope of the passage dealing with 'Arakin.
(17) And gentiles may be the subject of an 'Arakin vow though they cannot make such a vow.
(18) Thus the mention of 'children of Israel' excludes gentiles from the scope of the nazirite passage.
(19) Num. VI, 2. The mention of 'man' now partially includes gentiles within the scope of the passage. They can become nazirites, but may not bring the offerings due on terminating the naziriteship.
(20) I.e., it is impossible to utilise the words 'children of Israel' merely in order to exclude gentiles from bringing the nazirite offerings.
(21) Lev. XXII, 18.
(22) V. Men. 73b. Thus the words 'children of Israel' must wholly exclude gentiles from naziriteship.
(23) I.e., gentiles are wholly excluded from the scope of the nazirite passage.
(24) They can become ordinary nazirites.
(25) We learnt about it from the case of Absalom (supra 4b). Hence the verse cannot be referring to the life-nazirite at all.
(26) They can themselves under — take nazirite-vows but cannot impose them upon their children.
(27) Supra 28b. Hence, Scripture cannot be referring to this ruling.
(28) Supra 30a.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 62a

I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot become nazirites [at all]. Scripture [therefore] says man? — But it has been stated: R. Johanan said, This is a [traditional] ruling with regard to the nazirite.[1]

Now if it is a fact [that 'man' includes gentiles],[2] what need is there for the expression, When a man shall clearly utter a vow . . . according to thy valuation[3] occurring in connection with 'Arakin? For consider! 'Arakin are compared [in this verse] with vows, as it says, When a man shall clearly utter a vow . . . according to thy valuation,[3] and it has been taught in connection with vows: Scripture mentions the word man[4] in order to include gentiles, who are allowed to vow vowed-offerings[5] and freewill-offerings,[6] just as Israelites do.[7] What need then is there for the verse, 'When a man shall clearly utter' in connection with 'Arakin?[8] — In point of fact, this [word] 'man' is required for the inclusion of [a youth] who can discriminate but has not quite reached manhood.[9]

This is all very well [if we accept the view of] the authority[10] who considers that a youth who can discriminate but has not quite reached manhood has a Scriptural right [to make Vows],[11] but [if we accept the view of] the authority[12] who considers this right to be rabbinic, what need is there for, When a man shall clearly utter [etc.]?[13] It serves to include a gentile [youth] who can discriminate but has not quite reached manhood.[14]

This is all very well if we accept the view of the authority[15] who argues [as follows: The words

'children of Israel' imply that] Israelites can be the subject of 'Arakin vows but not gentiles. I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot vow 'Arakin, Scripture [therefore] says man.[16] If, however, we accept the view of the authority[17] who argues [as follows: The words children of Israel imply that] Israelites can vow 'Arakin but not gentiles. I might go on to infer from this that [gentiles] cannot be the subject of 'Arakin, Scripture [therefore] says man: [our difficulty remains]. For seeing that even a baby a month old can be the subject of an 'Arakin vow, what need is there of, 'when [a man] shall clearly utter'?[18] — R. Adda b. Ahaba replied: Its purpose is to bring within the scope of the rule an adult gentile who although he is an adult [cannot make even ordinary vows, if he] cannot discriminate.[19]

Now what need is there of [the phrase,] 'when [a man] shall clearly utter' mentioned in connection with the naziriteship? For seeing that the naziriteship is compared with [ordinary] vowing[20] what need is there of 'when [a man] shall clearly utter'? — It serves to include allusions the significance of which is not manifest.[21] For it has been stated: Abaye said that allusions whose significance is not manifest have the force of a direct statement, whilst Raba said that they have not the force of a direct statement.[22] Now if we accept Abaye's view, there is no difficulty,[23] but if we accept Raba's view what can we reply?[24] In point of fact 'when [a man] shall clearly utter' is necessary for R. Tarfon's case. For it has been taught: R. Judah on behalf of R. Tarfon said that not one of these people[25] is a nazirite, because naziriteship is not intended except when assumed unequivocally.[26] This is all very well if we accept the view of R. Tarfon, but [if we accept the view of] the Rabbis what can you reply?[27] In point of fact it is necessary for [the following] which has been taught: Annulment of vows has no foundation[28] and is without [Scriptural] support.[29] R. Eliezer says that it has [Scriptural] support, for Scripture says twice 'when [a man] shall clearly utter'?[30] one signifies a distinct binding expression,[31] and one a distinctness [which opens the way] to annulment.[32]

---

(1) Hence Scripture cannot be referring to it and the words, 'children of Israel', must entirely exclude gentiles from undertaking naziriteships.

(2) The upshot of the previous discussion is a vindication of the assertion that 'man' usually includes gentiles. It is only because it cannot possibly have that meaning in connection with naziriteship, that it is not so interpreted there. Hence the Gemara now enquires whether gentiles would not have been included for the purposes of 'Arakin even without 'man' being mentioned.

(3) Lev. XXVII,2.

(4) V. Lev. XXII, 18. Whoever he be (lit., a man, a man) . . . that bringeth his offering, whether it be of their vows etc. The reference in the following discussion II to vowing sacrifices for the altar. [The text adopted follows Bah. Cur. edd. read: Scripture should have mentioned (only) 'a man' why does it state 'a man, a man'. Though the reading is supported by the parallel passages, it hardly fits in with the trend of the passage where the word 'man' in itself is taken to include gentiles.]

(5) Heb. נדר.

(6) Heb. נדבה. The difference between a vowedoffering and a freewill offering is this. The former, if it dies or is lost, must be replaced, but the latter need not be replaced.

(7) Cf. Tem. 2b.

(8) For 'Ar. are covered by the interpretation of Lev. XXII, 18 in the Baraitha.

(9) He too may make vows. V. supra 29b.

(10) R. Jose b. R. Judah. V. supra 29b.

(11) This right is then inferred from the word 'man' in Lev. XXVII, 2.

(12) R. Judah the prince (Ibid.).

(13) I.e., We are still without a use for the word 'man' in this verse.

(14) R. Judah the prince also agreeing that his right to make vows is Scriptural.

(15) R. Judah; V. 'Ar. 5b.

(16) Thus permitting gentile youths who have not yet reached manhood to make 'Arakin (and other) vows.

(17) R. Meir. Ibid.

(18) For it can no longer refer to gentile youths since no gentile can make an 'Arakin vow.

(19) The inference being: Only a gentile who knows what he is uttering can make even ordinary vows (Tosaf.).
(20) V. Ned. 3a. And ‘shall clearly utter’ already occurs in connection with vows in Lev. XXVII, 2.
(21) V. supra 2a-b.
(22) And the vow fails to take effect.
(23) The interpretation will be: The vow must be uttered clearly or it is of no effect.
(24) I.e., what use does be make of the phrase ‘to utter clearly?’
(25) Who vow naziriteships of the form. If the person approaching is So and so, I will become a nazirite.
(26) V. supra 34a.
(27) I.e., what use do they make of ‘shall clearly utter’?
(28) Lit., ‘fly in the air’.
(29) I.e., the possibility of annulling vows is purely a traditional law.
(30) Once in Lev. XXVII, 2 of ‘Arakin and once in Num. VI, 2 of nazirite vows.
(31) I.e., once the vow is clearly undertaken, it remains binding.
(32) If annulment is sought, the vow ceases to be binding.

MISHNAH. [THE NAZIRITE-VOWS OF] SLAVES ARE MORE STRINGENT THAN [THOSE OF] WOMEN; FOR HE CAN DECLARE VOID THE VOWS OF HIS WIFE, BUT HE CANNOT DECLARE VOID THE VOWS OF HIS SLAVES. IF HE DECLARES HIS WIFE'S [VOW] VOID, IT IS VOID FOR EVER, BUT IF HE DECLARES HIS SLAVE'S VOW VOID, HE BECOMES FREE AND MUST COMPLETE HIS NAZIRITESHIP.[1] GEMARA. Our Rabbis taught: What can his master compel him [to disregard]? [The vow of] Naziriteship, but not [other] vows, or [vows involving] 'Arakin.[2]

Why this difference in the case of the nazirite-vow? — The Allmerciful has said, To bind his soul with a bond,[3] showing that only those who are their own masters[4] are referred to, and excluding slaves, who are not their own masters. But if this is the reason, the same should be true of [other] vows?[5] — R. Shesheth replied: We suppose here[6] that a cluster of grapes lay before [the slave].[7] In the case of vows, where if this [cluster] becomes prohibited to him, others will not become prohibited, [his master] cannot compel him [to eat this one]. But in the case of a nazirite-vow, if this one becomes forbidden,[8] all others become forbidden; and that is why he can compel him [to eat it].[9]

But do not [ordinary] vows[10] include the possibility that there is available Only the one cluster of grapes in question, so that if he does not eat it he will grow weak[11] [and yet the vow takes effect]? — Raba therefore said: We suppose that a pressed grape lay before him.[12] In the case of vows, he is prohibited from eating that one only, and so [his master] cannot compel him [to break his vow]. But in the case of the nazirite-vow where he is also prohibited from eating others, he can compel him [to break his vow].

But do not [ordinary] vows include the possibility that there is available only the one pressed grape in question, so that if he does not eat it he will grow weak [and yet the vow takes effect]? Abaye therefore replied: [The Baraitha really means] what is his master obliged to compel him [to disregard]? [The vow of] naziriteship.[13] but he does not [even] have to compel him [to disregard ordinary] vows or oaths.[14] This is because the verse says [If any one swear] to do evil or to do good.[15] Just as doing good is a voluntary undertaking, so must the doing of evil be a voluntary undertaking, the doing of evil to others being thereby excluded, since he has not the right [to harm others].[16]

MISHNAH. SHOULD [THE SLAVE] FLEE FROM [HIS MASTER'S] PRESENCE,[17] R. MEIR SAID THAT HE MUST NOT DRINK WINE, BUT R. JOSE SAID THAT HE MAY.

GEMARA. Is it possible that [R. Meir and R. Jose] differ in regard to the following dictum of Samuel? For Samuel has said: Should a man renounce ownership of his slave, he becomes free, no deed of emancipation being required. Does R. Meir agree with Samuel[18] and R. Jose differ from him? — No; both hold this opinion of Samuel.[19] But the one who says he should drink considers that since he is ultimately to return to his master, he ought to drink in order not to grow emaciated. The other, who says that he should not drink considers that he should feel the pangs of deprivation in order that he should return [to his master].

---

(1) Thus our text, and so Maimonides (Mishnah Commentary a.l. and Yad. Neziruth II, 18). Raabad however, reads 'and he afterwards becomes free, then he must complete his vow'.

(2) Tosef. Naz. VI, where 'oaths' replaces 'Arakin', for which v. Glos.

(3) Num. XXX, 3 of ordinary vows.

(4) V. supra p. 228, n.9.

(5) Seeing that the passage in which the verse occurs refers to ordinary vows.

(6) In the Baraitha which distinguishes nazirite-vows from other vows.

(7) And his vow, nazirite or ordinary, was made with reference to that bunch of grapes.
(8) I.e. if the nazirite-vow does become operative.
(9) [So as to have his strength unimpaired.]
(10) As referred to in the Baraitha.
(11) And so injure his master.
(12) [It is assumed that abstention from the pressed grape cannot affect his strength (Asheri)].
(13) If he does not wish it to take effect.
(14) These being automatically of no effect.
(15) Lev. V, 4.
(16) And since a slave's vows harm his master, they are inoperative.
(17) Run away after making a nazirite-vow.
(18) And assume that the owner despairs of the slave's return and thus renounces his ownership. The slave being free must therefore complete his naziriteship (v. previous Mishnah).
(19) And do not consider the owner to have renounced his possession of the slave.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 63a

MISHNAH. IF A NAZIRITE POLLS AND THEN DISCOVERS THAT HE WAS DEFILED, THEN IF THE DEFILEMENT IS DEFINITE [THE NAZIRITESHIP] IS RENDERED VOID, BUT IF IT IS A DEFILEMENT OF THE DEPTH,[1] IT IS NOT RENDERED VOID, BEFORE POLLING, HOWEVER, EITHER [TYPE OF DEFILE MENT] RENDERS [THE NAZIRITESHIP] VOID. [THE LAW REGARDING 'DEFILEMENT OF THE DEPTH' IS] AS FOLLOWS. IF HE GOES DOWN INTO A CAVERN TO BATHE, AND A CORPSE IS FOUND FLOATING AT THE MOUTH OF THE CAVERN,[2] HE IS [DEFINITELY] UNCLEAN. IF IT IS FOUND EMBEDDED IN THE FLOOR OF THE CAVERN,[3] THEN IF HE WENT IN MERELY TO REFRESH HIMSELF HE REMAINS CLEAN,[4] BUT IF IT WAS TO PURIFY HIMSELF AFTER DEFILEMENT THROUGH CONTACT WITH THE DEAD HE REMAINS UNCLEAN,[5] BECAUSE WHERE THE STATUS QUO IS ONE OF DEFILEMENT THE DEFILEMENT REMAINS, BUT WHERE IT IS ONE OF PURITY, HE REMAINS CLEAN, THIS BEING THE PRESUMPTION [IN EACH CASE].[6]

GEMARA. How do we know this?[7] — R. Eliezer said: A verse reads, And if any man die very suddenly beside him,[8] 'beside him' Signifying that it is evident to him.[9] Resh Lakish said: A verse reads, If [any man . . .] shall be unclean by reason of a dead body or be on the road, afar off,[10] signifying that [the uncleanness] must be like a road. Just as a road is visible, so must uncleanness be visible. If these be correct,[11] what of the following where we learnt: 'Defilement of the depth' is such [defilement] as is not known even to a single person living anywhere in the world. If, however, it is known to someone living even at the end of the world, it is not defilement of the depth.[12] Now on [Resh Lakish's] view that [defilement] should be [visible] like a road, there is no difficulty,[13] but on [R. Eleazar's] view that it must be evident to him, what matters it if there is someone at the end of the world who knows of it? Further, there is the following: If a man finds a corpse lying [buried] across the road,[14] he becomes unclean in respect of terumah,[15] but remains clean as regards naziriteship and celebration of the passover.[16] But what is the difference?[17] — We must therefore say that [the rule of] defilement of the depth is known by tradition.[18] BEFORE POLLING, HOWEVER, etc.: Who is the author [of the Mishnah]?[19] R. Johanan replied: R. Eliezer, who considers that polling estops [him from drinking wine].[20]

Rami b. Mama propounded: What would be the law if [the nazirite] became unclean during the fulfilment of [his naziriteship], but discovered this after the fulfilment.[21] Is it [the moment of] discovery that is important,[22] and this occurred after fulfilment, or not,[23] the practical difference being [the period that is] to be rendered void?[24]

---

(1) טומאת התהום. A particular type of uncertain defilement, defined later in the Mishnah.
(2) The cavern is a tent for the purposes of defilement. Although the corpse was discovered after he left the cavern, the defilement is regarded as a certain one, the doubt having arisen in a private domain (v. supra 212f).
(3) This is the ordinary case of defilement of the depth, the source of defilement being 'below ground'. V. Gemara below.
(4) To the extent that if he does not discover the incident until after polling, there is no effect on the naziriteship. But if he discovers it earlier, then he is unclean.
(5) Definitely unclean, for the purposes of our Mishnah.
(6) Lit., 'the matter has feet'; i.e., a basis of support.
(7) Viz. that defilement of the depth does not necessarily render void a naziriteship.
(8) Num. VI, 9, on the defilement of a nazirite.
(9) Defilement of the depth, as described in the Mishnah, is not evident to him, for he could not know' of the corpse's existence beneath the floor of the cavern.
(10) E.V. 'In a journey'. Num. IX, 10 of the second passover. Defilement of the depth was treated leniently as regards celebrants of the passover also.
(11) Viz., that the regulations concerning 'defilement of the depth' are deduced from Scripture.
(12) Tosef. Zabim II, 5.
(13) The fact that one man knows of it is enough to make it 'visible' for legal purposes.
(14) I.e., a defilement of the depth, it being uncertain whether the man overshadowed it.
(15) V. Glos.
(16) Ibid.
(17) If he is clean, he is clean for all things. Otherwise he is unclean for all things.
(18) And tradition confines the leniency only to naziriteship and the passover.
(19) Which implies that the naziriteship is over only after the polling, even if the sacrifices have been offered.
(20) Supra 24b.
(21) After counting the whole period of the naziriteship but before the termination (sacrifices or polling according to the Rabbis or R. Eliezer).
(22) And he counts as unclean henceforth.
(23) And he is unclean retrospectively.
(24) Uncleanness after fulfilment renders a shorter period void than uncleanness during the period; v. supra 16a-b.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 63b

Raba replied: Come and hear: BEFORE POLLING, HOWEVER, EITHER [TYPE OF DEFILEMENT RENDERS IT VOID]. How are we to understand this? If he discovered [the defilement] during the period of fulfilment would it be necessary to tell us [that the naziriteship is void]?[1] It follows that after fulfilment is meant. Hence [discovery after fulfilment renders void]. The question, however, still remains whether the whole [period] is rendered void or only seven [days].

But on whose [view is this question asked]?[2] Shall I say on the Rabbis' view? It is obvious that the whole period becomes void! Whilst on R. Eliezer's view any [defilement contracted] after fulfilment renders only seven days void? — The reply is [that R. Eliezer said] this of one who actually becomes unclean after fulfilment, whereas here [the defilement of the depth] occurred before the fulfilment.[3] [Do we then say that the whole is rendered void] or is this case different since discovery did not come until after fulfilment? — The same passage [answers this question too]. For it says: EITHER [TYPE OF DEFILEMENT] RENDERS IT VOID, making no distinction between them.[4]

Our Rabbis taught: If a man finds a corpse lying across the road,[5] he becomes unclean in respect of terumah,[6] but remains clean in respect of the nazirite-vow and celebrating the passover.[7] This is only true if there was no room for him to pass [without actually walking over the corpse], but if there was room for him to pass, he remains clean even in respect of terumah.[8] [Further], it is only true[9] if [the corpse] was found whole, but if it was found [with its limbs] broken or dislocated, even though there was no room to pass[10] we conceive that he may perhaps have passed between the pieces.[11] If, however, [the corpse] was in a grave, then, even if [its limbs were] broken or dislocated, he becomes unclean because the grave unites it. [Further,] we say this[12] only of one who was walking on foot, but if he was carrying a load or riding, he becomes unclean,[13] because it is possible for one walking on foot to avoid either touching [the corpse] or making it vibrate,[14] or overshadowing it, but it is impossible for one carrying a load or riding to avoid either touching it or making it vibrate or overshadowing it. [Further,] this ruling[15] applies only to a 'defilement of the depth', but if it was a known [source of] defilement, all three become unclean. A defilement of the depth is one which is not known to anyone [living even] in any part of the world. If, however, someone [living even] at the other end of the world knows about it. It is not [regarded as] a defilement of the depth.[16] If [the corpse] was hidden in straw or in pebbles, it counts as a defilement of the depth,[17] [but if] in the sea or by darkness or in a cleft of the rocks, this does not count as a defilement of the depth.[18] 'Defilement of the depth' was held to apply only in the case of a corpse.[19] [THE LAW REGARDING DEFILEMENT OF THE DEPTH IS] AS FOLLOWS.

IF HE GOES DOWN: A [dead] reptile when floating, does not defile.[20] For it has been taught: If there is a doubt concerning a [source of defilement] floating in a vessel or on the earth,[21] it is treated as clean. R. Simeon said that in a vessel [the doubtful object] is treated as unclean, whilst on the earth it is treated as clean.[22]

---

(1) For there is no question that defilement of the depth counts as ordinary defilement as regards the future. It is only retrospectively that con — cessions are made to nazirites and celebrants of the passover.

(2) The Gemara here interrupts the argument to analyse the question.

(3) If it is the time of defilement that is important, then the whole period may be rendered void. Hence the question is asked of R. Eliezer and not of the Rabbis.

(4) And thus the defilement is retrospective, there being no half measures. Except for the nazirite who has entirely completed his naziriteship and the passover celebrant who did not learn of the incident soon enough to prevent the sacrifice of the passover-offering, defilement of the depth is true defilement.

(5) I.e., if the corpse is found buried after he has passed, making defilement of the depth. V. infra.

(6) V. Glos. And may not eat it.

(7) Retrospectively only: v. infra.

(8) Since there is now a genuine doubt occurring in a public place as to whether he did become defiled.

(9) That he is unclean as regards terumah.

(10) Had he walked straight on. But it is assumed that there is nowhere an unbroken line of pieces stretched across the road.

(11) I.e. walked irregularly and not straight on, therefore he remains clean.

(12) That he remains clean in the case of a dislocated corpse

(13) And may not eat terumah.

(14) By stepping on some object which will move the corpse.

(15) That there is a difference between terumah and the others.

(16) But as a certain source of defilement.

(17) For it is possible that new straw was blown across it and pebbles rolled against it and nobody knew of its existence.

(18) Since someone has probably looked in and seen the corpse.

(19) Tosef. Zabim II, 5.

(20) I.e. if there is a doubt as to whether a floating reptile was touched, we assume that it was not touched.

(21) A pool in the ground.

(22) Tosef. Toharoth V, 4.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 64a

What is the first Tanna's reason?[1] R. Isaac b. Abudimi said: Scripture says. [Ye shall not mistake yourselves abominable] with any swarming thing that swarms,[2] signifying no matter where it swarms,[3] and says further, 'On the earth'.[4] How are these verses to be reconciled? Where there is no doubt that he touched it he is [always] unclean, but if there is a doubt he remains clean.[5]

And what is R. Simeon's reason? — 'Ulla said: Scripture says, Nevertheless a fountain [. . . shall be clean][6] and continues [But he who toucheth their case] shall be unclean.[7] How are we to reconcile these? Whilst floating in a vessel [a doubtful object] is treated as unclean, but on the earth it is treated as clean.

Our Rabbis taught: Where there are doubts concerning any [source of defilement] that is carried[8] or dragged along, the objects are regarded as unclean, because it is as though they are at rest,[9] but where the doubt concerns things that are thrown,[10] they are treated as clean, with the exception of an olive's bulk of a corpse, one who overshadows a source of defilement, and all [other] things that propagate defilement upwards as well as downwards,[11] [This last expression] serves to include sufferers from gonorrhoea, male and female.[12]

Rami b. Hama propounded: What is the law concerning a corpse[13] lying in a vessel floating on the surface of the water. Is the vessel the criterion,[14] or the corpse?[15] Should it be decided that the vessel is the criterion,[16] what would be the law if the [fragment of] a corpse was lying on a [dead] reptile?[17] Seeing that the latter defiles only until evening and the former for seven days, are we to consider it as though it were lying in a vessel,[18] or should it perhaps be considered a compact source of defilement?[19] Should it be decided [further] that this is considered as though it were lying in a vessel, and therefore is treated as though defilement were certain, what would be the law if a [dead] reptile were lying on a floating animal carcase? Seeing that both defile only until evening, are they to be regarded as a compact source of defilement, or should we consider rather that of the one an olive's bulk is necessary,[20] whilst of the other a lentil's bulk is sufficient? [Further] what would be the law if one reptile lay on the other? Here certainly the measure is the same,[21] but perhaps, seeing that they are distinct, we should regard it as lying in a vessel? Again, should it be decided that in the case of one reptile lying on another, it is regarded as though it lay in a vessel because the [two reptiles] are distinct, what would be the law regarding a reptile floating on a liquefied animal carcase?[22] Seeing that it has been liquefied is it to be regarded as liquid,[23] or do we perhaps say that after all it is [now] a solid?[24] [Again], should you decide that it is a solid, what would be the law regarding a reptile [floating] on an effusion of semen? Should you decide that the latter, because it originates by detachment [from the human body] is a solid, what would be the law regarding a reptile floating on Water of Cleansing,[25] that was floating on the surface of [ordi nary] water?[26] — We do not know. All these problems remain unsolved.

---

(1) I.e., what is the source of his opinion?

(2) Lev. XI, 43 continuing Neither shall ye defile yourselves with them.

(3) Even on the surface of water.

(4) Ibid v. 44. Neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of swarming thing that moveth upon the earth.

(5) In the case where the reptile was floating.

(6) Lev. XI, 36. This signifies that even if there is a (dead) reptile in the fountain, there would be no defilement.

(7) Ibid. Signifying whatever the circumstances.

(8) Or 'suspended' (Tosef. and Maimonides, Yad Aboth ha-Tumeoth, XIV,3).

(9) Since they are in contact with the ground or the person carrying them all the time.

(10) The doubt being whether it brushed against the person in transit.

(11) Tosef. Zabim III, 8. In these cases, the defilement being of a more stringent type, even doubts as to projectiles are sufficient to render unclean. The corpse defiles in a tent i.e., upwards.

(12) The gonorrhoeic sufferer defiles anything pressing on him from above even if it is not in direct contact with him.

(13) Maimonides, Aboth ha-Tumeoth XIV, 4 reads 'reptile'.

(14) And the corpse is at rest in the vessel. The doubt is as to whether it was touched, the person concerned being in no doubt that he did not overshadow' it.

(15) Which is floating. Tosaf. read 'Or the water' which is moving. The problem is whether this is a floating source of defilement or not.

(16) So that in cases of doubt, uncleanness is assumed.

(17) Here, and in the other cases below, the second object is to be taken as Boating on the surface of water. Maimonides reads here 'A reptile lying on a corpse. There are many, not particularly important variations, in the readings of questions that follow; v. Marginal notes of the Wilna Gaon.

(18) So that in cases of doubt, uncleanness is assumed.

(19) I.e., as one source floating on water. Then, provided it is certain that there was no overshadowing, cleanness will be assumed.

(20) Of the carcase, an olive's bulk must be present before defilement ensues. This 'measure', and the 'lentil's bulk' for reptiles are Rabbinic traditions.

(21) I.e., for both a lentil's bulk is sufficient to defile.

(22) That had afterwards coagulated.

(23) So that the reptile is really floating on the water.

(24) Lit., 'a food', the generic word for solids.

(25) I.e., the water containing the ashes of the Red Heifer, which also defiled by contact. V. Num. XIX, 1 seq.

(26) Would the Water of Cleansing, thickened by the ashes, count as a solid, and so as a vessel, or not?

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 64b

R. Hamnuna said: A nazirite or a celebrant of the passover who walks over a grave of the depth on his seventh day [of purification after defilement][1] is clean,[2] the reason being that defilement of the depth is not potent enough to render void [the naziriteship or the passover]. Raba objected: IF IT WAS TO PURIFY HIMSELF AFTER DEFILEMENT[3] THROUGH CONTACT WITH THE DEAD HE REMAINS UNCLEAN, BECAUSE WHERE THE STATUS QUO IS ONE OF DEFILEMENT THE DEFILEMENT REMAINS, BUT WHERE IT IS ONE OF PURITY HE REMAINS CLEAN?[4] — [R. Hamnuna] replied: I admit you are right in the case of a nazirite who needs polling.[5] Raba [then] said to him: And I admit you are right in the case of a celebrant of the passover who has completed all preliminaries.[6] Abaye said [to Raba]: But has he not still to wait for the sun to set?[7] — He replied: The sun sets of its own accord.[8]

Abaye, too, gave up this opinion, for it has been taught: If it is on the day of fulfilment,[9] she must bring [a further sacrifice], but if during fulfilment she need not bring one.[10] It might be thought that she is not required to bring [a sacrifice] for a birth occurring during the fulfilment, but must bring one for a birth occurring after the fulfilment,[11] and discharge her obligation for both births,[12] and so Scripture says, And when the days of her purification are fulfilled,[13] which signifies that if it occurs on the day of fulfilment she must bring [a sacrifice] but not if it occurs during the fulfilment. [Whereon] R. Kahana explained that the difference[14] was due to the fact that she needed to bring a sacrifice.[15] Now, in the other case, has she not still to wait for the sun to set?[16] — Abaye replied: the sun sets of its own accord.[17]

MISHNAH. IF A MAN FINDS A CORPSE FOR THE FIRST TIME[18] LYING IN THE USUAL POSITION,[19] HE MAY REMOVE IT TOGETHER WITH THE SOIL THAT IT OCCUPIES.[20] [IF HE FINDS] TWO, HE MAY REMOVE THEM TOGETHER WITH THE GROUND THEY OCCUPY. IF HE FINDS THREE, THEN IF THE DISTANCE BETWEEN THE FIRST AND THE LAST IS FROM FOUR TO EIGHT CUBITS,[21] THIS IS A GRAVEYARD SITE.[22]

---

(1) When sunset would make him clean.

(2) Provided that he does not learn of the incident until the naziriteship is done with; v. our Mishnah.

(3) That he entered the cave containing a grave of the depth.

(4) And the Mishnah is speaking of the seventh day of purification after defilement, and so contradicts R. Hamnuna.

(5) The unclean nazirite does not complete his purification until he has polled. That is why the presumption of uncleanness is considered to be still present on the seventh day of purification.
(6) And thus has a presumption of purity.
(7) The purification is not really complete until sunset even in the case of a celebrant of the passover.
(8) He himself has nothing more to do.
(9) The reference is to a miscarriage occurring within the term of purification after childbirth, viz. 41 days for a male child and 81 days for a female child. V. Lev. XII, I ff. The period of purification and all other obligations follow a miscarriage as well as a normal birth.
(10) The reason is explained below.
(11) I.e. after the term of fulfilment, reckoning from the first birth, but before the term of fulfilment reckoning from the subsequent one, for which as we have been told no sacrifice is needed.
(12) I.e., bring two sacrifices, one for the first birth and one for the third.
(13) Lev. XII, 6 continuing, She shall bring a lamb etc.
(14) Between the case where the second birth occurs on the day of fulfilment and she is required to bring a second sacrifice, and that where the third birth occurs after the first fulfilment and she is not required to bring a sacrifice.
(15) In the latter case, she was still unclean at the time of the third birth, owing to the intervention of the second one, and so the first sacrifice was not yet due. She is therefore considered to be within the period of fulfilment. Not so in the former case.
(16) Before she becomes clean, and fit to eat of sacrifices.
(17) Thus we see that Abaye does not regard the necessity of waiting for sunset as interfering with the presumption of cleanness.
(18) Without previously having found a corpse in the same spot, and without knowing that it was there.
(19) Prostrate: the only way Jews were buried.
(20) For reburial elsewhere, v. Gemara.
(21) Which is an indication that he has stumbled on an old burial vault.
(22) The bodies must not be removed, but have to be reburied where found.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 65a

HE MUST THEN SEARCH BEYOND FOR A DISTANCE OF TWENTY CUBITS.[1] IF HE FINDS A SINGLE [CORPSE] AT THE END OF TWENTY CUBITS, HE MUST SEARCH BEYOND FOR ANOTHER TWENTY CUBITS. THE REASON[2] IS THAT THERE IS [NOW] A PRESUMPTION,[3] WHEREAS IF HE HAD FOUND IT FIRST, HE WOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO REMOVE IT TOGETHER WITH THE SOIL IT OCCUPIES.[4]

GEMARA. Rab Judah said: IF A MAN FINDS, but not if [he knows] it is to be found there;[5] A CORPSE, but not one who had been killed;[6] LYING, but not seated;[7] IN THE USUAL POSITION, but not with its head lying between its thighs.[7] 'Ulla b. Hanina taught: A defective corpse[8] does not acquire the ground it occupies, nor does it help to form a graveyard site.

Why does not [the law of the Mishnah] apply to all these? — Because we say that perhaps it is [the body of] a heathen.[9] If he finds two [corpses] with the head of one beside the feet of the second, and the head of the second beside the feet of the first, they do not acquire the soil which they occupy and do not help to form a graveyard site.[10] If he finds three [corpses] one of which was known to be there while the others [were found] for the first time, or if two [were found] for the first time and two were known [to be there] they do not acquire the soil they occupy[11] and do not form a graveyard site.

It is related that R. Yeshobab once searched [a certain spot] and found two [bodies] which were known to be there and one [which was discovered] for the first time, and he wanted to declare them a graveyard site.[12] R. Akiba said to him: All your trouble was for nothing. [The Rabbis] did not declare a graveyard site save where three [corpses] were known to be there, or three [were found] for the first time.[13]

[IF HE FINDS] TWO, HE MAY REMOVE THEM TOGETHER WITH THE SOIL THEY OCCUPY: Where is this law of the soil [a corpse] occupies to be found?[14] — R. Judah said: The verse says, Thou shalt carry me out of Egypt,[15] [signifying] carry with me [some Egyptian soil].[16] And what is the quantity of earth] which it occupies? — R. Eleazar[17] explained that he takes the loose earth[18] and digs up three finger-breadths of the virgin soil.[19]

The following objection was raised — [It has been taught:] And what quantity [of earth] are we to understand by 'the ground which it occupies?' R. Eleazar b. R. Zadok explained that he takes the chips [of the coffin][20] and the lumps of earth,[21] discarding what certainly [did not belong to the body] and leaving whatever was doubtful [for removal].[22] The remainder adds together to form the major part of the structure of the corpse, the quarter [kab] of bones and the spoonful of corpse — mould?[23] — [R. Eleazar] agrees with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: What quantity of [earth is meant by] 'the ground which it occupies?' R. Johanan,[24] citing Ben 'Azzai, said: He takes the loose earth and digs up three finger-breadths of virgin soil.

HE MUST THEN SEARCH BEYOND IT:

---

(1) For other vaults.

(2) That he must continue to search if he finds one only.

(3) That the field is a graveyard site; since twenty cubits would not be an abnormal distance between two vaults; cf. supra p. 237, n. 5.

(4) Oh. XVI, 3. On the measurements v. B.B. (Sonc. ed.) p. 426 and notes.

(5) In that case he may not remove it (Tosaf.).

(6) In which case it is assumed that it was buried there for convenience and not that there was an old cemetery there.

(7) Jewish bodies were always buried prostrate; hence this cannot be an old Jewish cemetery. In these last three cases, he removes the body for reburial elsewhere.

(8) A corpse lacking a member essential to life. (Tosef. Oh. XVI, 2).

(9) Hence the site is not declared a Jewish cemetery and the bodies can be removed for burial elsewhere.

(10) Jews were not buried in this manner.

(11) Thus our text and Rashbam in B.B. 101b; but this as it stands contradicts our Mishnah, and it is therefore better to read with Tosef. Oh. XVI, 2 'Or if one (was found) for the first time and two were known, they are entitled to the ground they occupy, but do not form a graveyard site'.

(12) This would entail examining for twenty cubits.

(13) And whilst they may not be removed, they do not form a graveyard site. V. Tosef. Oh. XVI,2 where the last paragraph occurs with variations.

(14) [So Aruch; cur. edd. 'What means the ground it occupies'?]

(15) Gen. XLVII,30; spoken by Jacob to Joseph.

(16) Interpreting the verse, 'carry with me of Egypt'.

(17) R. Eleazar b. Pedath. Our texts have in error R. Eleazar b. R. Zadok.

(18) Formed through the decomposition of the body.

(19) This being the depth to which any blood etc., coming from the body would penetrate.

(20) Which was usually of stone (Tosaf.). Aliter The chips of spices put in with the body; cf. II Chronicles XVI,14.

(21) Into which the decomposing corpse congealed.

(22) When the body was removed. Hence the part to be removed contained no virgin soil, contrary to the opinion of R. Eleazar.

(23) Required to propagate uncleanness in a tent. (V. supra 49b, 50a). Tosef. Oh. II, 2 with variations.

(24) R. Johanan b. Nuri.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 65b

Raba said: If he searched, [found a corpse][1] and removed it, searched [again and found another] and removed it, [and then] searched [again] and found [a third corpse], he must not remove this one [for reburial] with the other two,[2] nor the other two [for reburial] with this one.[3] Others say that Raba said: As permission had been given to remove [the others],[4] he may remove them [all].[5] But why should not [the field] become a graveyard site?[6] — Resh Lakish said: [The Rabbis] seized upon any pretext to declare the Land of Israel clean.[7]

Suppose he searched [beyond it][8] for twenty cubits [in one direction only][9] and did not find [another corpse], what is the law?[10] — R. Monashya b. Jeremiah, citing Rab, replied: This is the graveyard site.[11] What is the reason [that we say this?][12] — Resh Lakish said: They seized on any pretext to declare the Land of Israel clean.

MISHNAH. EVERY DOUBTFUL CASE OF [LEPROUS] DISEASE[13] ENCOUNTERED FOR THE FIRST TIME BEFORE UN CLEANNESS HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED[14] IS CLEAN.[15] AFTER UNCLEANNESS HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED DOUBTFUL CASES ARE UNCLEAN.[16]

GEMARA. How do we know this?[17] — Rab Judah citing Rab, said: The verse says, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean.[18] Scripture mentions cleanness first.[19] In that case even after uncleanness has been established, doubtful cases should be clean?[20] — We must therefore say that this dictum of Rab, quoted by R. Judah was uttered in connection with the following.[21] [A Mishnah says:] If the bright spot[22] appears before the white hair,[23] he is unclean, but if the white hair appears before the bright spot he is clean. If there is a doubt, he is unclean. R. Joshua said: It is doubtful.[24] What is meant by 'it is doubtful'? — Rab Judah[25] replied: It is doubtful and [consequently] clean.[26] May it not mean that it is doubtful and [consequently] unclean? — Rab Judah citing Rab said: The verse says, to pronounce it clean, or to pronounce it unclean;[27] Scripture mentions cleanness first.[28]

MISHNAH. A PERSON SUFFERING FROM A FLUX IS EX AMINED REGARDING SEVEN THINGS,[29] BEFORE THE PRESENCE OF GONORRHOEA HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED,[30] VIZ.: — WITH REGARD TO FOOD,[31] DRINK, BURDENS,[32] LEAPING,[33] SICKNESS, A VISION[34] OR AN IMPURE THOUGHT.[35] ONCE GONORRHOEA IS ESTABLISHED, HE IS NO LONGER EXAMINED. [FLUX RESULTING] FROM AN ACCIDENT[36] TO HIM, DOUBTFUL [FLUX].[37] AND HIS ISSUE OF SEMEN ARE UNCLEAN, FOR THERE IS A PRESUMPTION [OF UNCLEANNESS].[38]

IF A MAN GIVES ANOTHER A BLOW FROM WHICH HE WAS EXPECTED TO DIE AND HE PARTIALLY RECOVERED AND THEN GREW WORSE AND DIED [THE OTHER] IS LIABLE [FOR MURDER]. R. NEHEMIAH EXEMPTS HIM SINCE THERE IS A PRESUMPTION [IN HIS FAVOUR].[39]

GEMARA. How do we know this?[40] — Nathan said: The verse says. And of the gonorrhoeic[41] that have the issue,[42] [whether it be a man or a woman].[43] [The male] at his third experience of issue is compared to the female.[44] But have we not been taught: R. Eliezer Says: At the third [issue] we examine him but not at the fourth?[45] In point of fact they disagree on [the question of stressing the particle] 'the'.[46] R. Eliezer lays stress on [the particle] 'the', whilst the Rabbis do not do so.

[FLUX RESULTING] FROM AN ACCIDENT TO HIM, DOUBTFUL FLUX:

---

(1) For the first time.

(2) Since the region is now revealed as a graveyard site.

(3) Once removed legally they need not be brought back.

(4) I.e., since the removal of the two was legal.

(5) The third corpse counts as newly found.

(6) Since three bodies have been uncovered in it.

(7) I.e. in order to declare a region in the land of Israel clean, the least pretext was considered sufficient. Rashi suggests another rendering, viz.: 'They found a rib and declared the Land of Israel clean'; i.e., the Jews on entering Palestine found a human rib buried and thereupon declared the whole of the rest of Palestine clean, no further search after graveyard sites being necessary. Hence any pretext to avoid declaring parts of Palestine unclean will do.
(8) Referring to the Mishnah that he must search beyond the three corpses found to a distance of twenty cubits.
(9) Tosaf. v. next note.
(10) Must he search in other directions or not? (Tosaf.). Aliter. Do these three alone form a graveyard site or not? (Rashi). Aliter: If he has searched in all directions and found nothing, must he search more thoroughly and dig more deeply? (Asheri).
(11) But no other part of the field.
(12) I.e., why are we not stricter in our requirements?
(13) Referring to a doubt that has arisen as to whether an affected spot has spread or not (v. Lev. XIII), e.g., two persons are examined by a priest and have different-sized areas of disease. The following week both 'areas are the size of the larger of the two and the priest is uncertain which one has increased, v. Neg. V,4.
(14) Lit., 'so long as he has not become bound to the uncleanness'. Before the patient has been declared unclean.
(15) Both men remain clean.
(16) If a similar doubt arises as to whether the diseased part has diminished in size.
(17) That there is any difference between the two cases quoted in the Mishnah.
(18) Lev. XIII, 59, concluding the chapter on the symptoms of leprous disease.
(19) Hence doubtful cases should also be regarded as clean.
(20) Thus there is no ground for basing the distinction on this verse.
(21) And the law of the Mishnah is not derived from a verse, but follows from the fact that in the first case there is no presumption of uncleanness and in the second case there is.
(22) Of Ieprous disease, v. Lev. XIII, 2.
(23) The symbol of uncleanness. Ibid. v. 3.
(24) Neg. IV, 11. The word rendered 'doubtful' is the technical term for 'dim' used of a diseased spot, (v. Lev. XIII, 6). For a discussion of the reading here v. Tosaf. Sanh. 87b, I.v.
(25) Parallel passages (Sanh. 87b) have Rabbah.
(26) I.e.,it is considered to have become dim and is therefore clean.
(27) Lev. XIII, 59.
(28) The disease is to be pronounced clean unless it certainly has the symptoms of uncleanness described in that chapter.
(29) To determine whether any of these seven things was not the cause of the flux, as it would not then be evidence of gonorrhoea.
(30) I.e., before there has been a flux on three occasions, v. Zabim II, 2.
(31) Whether he had eaten too much.
(32) Whether he had carried heavy loads.
(33) Any kind of strain through physical exercise might cause flux.
(34) The sight of two people in coition.
(35) A similar thought.
(36) I.e., after one of the seven things mentioned.
(37) See the Gemara.
(38) V. Zabim II, 2.
(39) The recovery creates a presumption that death was not caused by the blow. [Maim. Yad., Rozeah, IV, 5 explains contrariwise: The fact that he ultimately died creates a presumption that death was caused by the blow, the last clause being thus explanatory of the views of the Rabbis.]
(40) That after gonorrhoea is established, he is not questioned as to possible causes.
(41) E.V. 'And of them'. Indicating the first issue.
(42) Expressed in Heb. by the nota accusativi, 'eth'. Indicating the second issue.
(43) Indicating the third issue; Lev. XV, 33.
(44) Who becomes gonorrhoeic whatever the cause. Hence at the third issue gonorrhoea is established whatever its cause.
(45) And on the present interpretation of the verse, he is not examined for the third issue.

(46) The Hebrew particle governing the accusative. This particle can be omitted and so its presence is taken by R. Eliezer to indicate another issue before the comparison is made of man with woman.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 66a

Raba said: Do not suppose [that the meaning of 'doubtful flux' is] that there is a doubt whether there was an issue or not. In point of fact, the issue must be a certain one,[1] the doubt being whether it was due to an issue of semen[2] or whether it was caused by [a separate gonorrhoeic] attack.[3] Once uncleanness has been established, if there is a doubt, he is unclean.[4]

HIS ISSUE OF SEMEN IS UNCLEAN: In what respect [is the semen unclean]? For if it be in respect of touching it,[5] how is it worse than the issue of semen of a clean person?[6] — It must therefore mean that the semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea defiles through being carried. But who is known to hold the view that the issue of semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea defiles if carried? For if you say that it is the following Tanna, as has been taught: 'R. Eliezer says that the issue of semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea does not defile if carried, whilst R. Joshua says that it does defile if carried, because it is impossible that it should not be diluted with gonorrheic fluid' — even R. Joshua only says this[7] because it is diluted with gonorrhoeic fluid, but not when it is undiluted?[8] — In point of fact, said R. Adda b. Ahabah, [the purpose of the Mishnah is] to lay down that [subsequent gonorrhoeic issue] is not ascribed to [the prior flow of semen].[9] R. Papa tried to argue with Raba that this[10] was because the flow resulted from his weakness [following the gonorrhoea].[11] Raba said to him: Have we not learnt: A proselyte defiles if subject to a gonorrhoeic flow immediately after conversion?[12] — He replied: There cannot be greater sickness than this.[13]

We must say in fact[14] that [to what extent semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea defiles] is a controversy of Tannaim — For it has been taught: The semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea defiles for twenty — four hours[15] if carried. R. Jose however, Says; for the whole of the same day.[16]

Wherein does their controversy lie?[17] — In respect of the point raised by Samuel. For Samuel noted the following contradiction. It is written, If there be among you any man that is not clean by reason of that which chanceth him by night [etc.][18] and it is written [further], when evening cometh on he shall bathe himself in water.[19] The one who says twenty-four hours infers this from when evening cometh on,[20] and the other infers it from, 'that which chanceth him by night'.[21] Now to the one who infers it from 'when evening cometh on,' [it may be objected] it is written, 'that which chanceth him by night'? — He will reply that it is customary for an emission to occur at night.[22]

MISHNAH. SAMUEL WAS A NAZIRITE IN THE OPINION OF R. NEHORAI, AS IT SAYS, AND THERE SHALL NO RAZOR [MORAH] COME UPON HIS HEAD.[23] IT SAYS WITH REFERENCE TO SAMSON, AND [NO] RAZOR [MORAH][24] AND IT SAYS WITH REFERENCE TO SAMUEL, AND [NO] RAZOR [MORAH]; JUST AS MORAH IN THE CASE OF SAMSON [IS USED OF] A NAZIRITE,[25] SO [WE SHOULD SAY] MORAH IN THE CASE OF SAMUEL [IS USED OF] A NAZIRITE. R. JOSE OBJECTED: BUT HAS NOT MORAH REFERENCE TO [FEAR[26] OF] A HUMAN BEING? R. NEHORAI SAID TO HIM: BUT DOES IT NOT ALSO SAY, AND SAMUEL SAID; 'HOW CAN I GO? IF SAUL HEAR IT HE WILL KILL ME'[27] [WHICH SHOWS] THAT HE WAS IN FACT AFRAID OF A HUMAN BEING?[28]

GEMARA. Rab said to his son Hiyya:

---

(1) Examination must show the presence of gonorrhoeic matter.

(2) When it only adds one day to his period of counting.

(3) When he would have to begin to count his seven clean days over again, (v. Lev. XV, 13).

(4) And the gonorrhoeic matter is ascribed to an attack of gonorrhoea and not to the issue of semen.

(5) That one who touches the semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea becomes unclean.
(6) Which also renders unclean by contact. Lev. XV, 16, 17.
(7) Viz.: That the semen defiles if carried.
(8) Which is the case contemplated by the Mishnah. The question still remains, why does the Mishnah say that the semen of a sufferer from gonorrhoea is unclean?
(9) As would be the case for twenty-four hours after an emission of semen in the case of a normal person. v. Zabim II, 3.
(10) The reason that it is not ascribed to the issue of semen once gonorrhoea is established.
(11) And was due to the gonorrhoea and not a consequence of the emission of semen.
(12) Zabim II, 3; If an issue of semen preceded conversion and gonorrhoeic flow followed, it is not ascribed to the emission, but counts as a first gonorrhoeic flow.
(13) The emotional effect of the conversion is sufficient sickness to occasion the flow, but does not render it nugatory as the seven things of the Mishnah do (Rashi). Tosaf. achieves better sense by omitting 'he replied', and making the whole part of Raba's objection, viz.: 'Can there be greater weakness than that which results from the emotional effect of conversion?' and yet the flow is considered unclean. Hence R. Papa's reason is not correct.
(14) Although R. Adda attempted to argue to the contrary.
(15) I.e., if the semen issues within twenty-four hours of the gonorrhoeic flow.
(16) If it comes before the evening; here there is no mention of dilution of the semen by gonorrhoeic fluid. Thus these Tannaim differ from R. Eliezer and R. Joshua, and the Mishnah represents their opinion, that the semen renders unclean if carried.
(17) The controversy of R. Jose and the other Tanna.
(18) Deut. XXIII, II. Interpreted as meaning: If he should chance to have an emission of semen during the day, consequent on a gonorrhoeic issue during the previous night.
(19) Ibid. v. 12.
(20) Which indicates that though night has already fallen he still remains unclean; i.e., until the end of the period of twenty — four hours.
(21) Which he interprets as meaning, 'until nightfall'; but as soon as night has fallen he becomes clean and an emission will not then defile, if carried.
(22) But there is no particular significance in the use of the word night.
(23) I Sam. I, 11.
(24) Judges XIII, 5. 'And no razor shall come upon his head'.
(25) Ibid. 'for the child shall be a nazirite unto God'.
(26) Reading מורה as מורא (fear) from ירא the verb having adopted a ה ל ending: Jast. s.v. מורה II interprets from a root מר meaning 'authority'.
(27) I Sam. XVI, 2.
(28) Lit., 'flesh and blood'. Hence morah cannot mean 'fear' or Hannah's prediction would have been false. It must therefore mean 'a razor'.

Talmud - Mas. Nazir 66b

Snatch [the cup] and say grace.[1] So also did R. Huna say to his son Rabbah. Snatch [the cup] and say grace.

Does this mean that it is better to say the blessing [than to make the responses]? Has it not been taught: R. Jose says that he who responds. 'Amen', is greater than he who says the blessing, and R. Nehorai said to him: I swear[2] that this is so. In proof of this, [it may be noted] that the ordinary soldiers begin a battle but the picked troops gain the victory?[3] — There is a difference of opinion between Tannaim on this matter. For it has been taught: Both the one who says the blessing and the one who responds, 'Amen', are included [in this verse].[4] Nevertheless, [reward] is given first to the one who says the blessing.

R. Eleazar,[5] citing R. Hanina, said: The disciples of the sages increase peace throughout the world, as it is said, And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children.[6]

---

(1) You be the one who takes the cup of wine to say the grace, and let the others answer, ‘Amen’ to your blessings.
(2) Lit., ‘by heaven’.
(3) A reference to the Roman practice of saving the veteran soldiers until the enemy's resistance had been weakened by the less experienced soldiers. We see then that the one who completes the blessing by responding is greater.
(4) Ps. XXXIV, 3, ‘O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt His name together’. (Rashi).
(5) V. Yeb. 122b.
(6) Isa. LIV, 13.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 2a

C H A P T E R I

MISHNAH. IF ONE WARNS[1] HIS WIFE [NOT TO ASSOCIATE WITH A CERTAIN MAN]. R. ELIEZER SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO WITNESSES,[2] AND MAKES HER DRINK [THE WATER OF BITTERNESS] ON THE TESTIMONY OF ONE WITNESS[3] OR HIS PERSONAL TESTIMONY. R. JOSHUA SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO AND MAKES HER DRINK ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO.

HOW DOES HE WARN HER? IF HE SAYS TO HER IN THE PRESENCE OF TWO, DO NOT CONVERSE WITH THAT MAN, AND SHE CONVERSED WITH HIM, SHE IS STILL PERMITTED TO HER HUSBAND[4] AND PERMITTED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING.[5] SHOULD SHE HAVE ENTERED A PRIVATE PLACE WITH HIM AND STAYED WITH HIM A TIME SUFFICIENT FOR MISCONDUCT TO HAVE OCCURRED, SHE IS FORBIDDEN TO HER HUSBAND[6] AND FORBIDDEN TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING. IF [HER HUSBAND] DIED,[7] SHE PERFORMS THE CEREMONY OF HALIZAH[8] BUT CANNOT CONTRACT A LEVIRATE MARRIAGE.

GEMARA. Now that the Tanna has finished [Tractate] Nazir, what is his reason for continuing with [Tractate] Sotah?[9] — It is according to the view of Rabbi; for it has been taught: Rabbi says, Why does the section of the Nazirite adjoin that of the suspected woman?[10] To tell you that whoever witnesses a suspected woman In her disgrace should withhold himself from wine.[11] But [the Tanna in the Mishnah] should treat of [Tractate] Sotah first and afterwards that of Nazir![12] — Since he treated of [Tractate] Kethuboth [marriage-settlements] and dealt with the theme, 'He who imposes in vow upon his wife',[13] he next treated of [Tractate] Nedarim [Vows]; and since he treated of [Tractate] Nedarim, he proceeded to treat of [Tractate] Nazir which is analogous to Nedarim,[14] and then continues with Sotah for the reason given by Rabbi.

IF ONE WARNS HIS WIFE. As an accomplished fact[15] it is allowable, but as something still to be done it is not. Consequently our Tanna holds that it is forbidden to give a warning.[16]

R. Samuel b. R. Isaac said: When Resh Lakish began to expound [the subject of] Sotah, he spoke thus: They only pair a woman with a man according to his deeds;[17] as it is said: For the sceptre of wickedness shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous.[18] Rabbah b. Bar Hanah said in the name of R. Johanan: It is as difficult to pair them as was the division of the Red Sea; as it is said: God setteth the solitary in families: He bringeth out the prisoners into prosperity![19] But it is not so; for Rab Judah has said in the name of Rab: Forty days before the creation of a child, a Bath Kol[20] issues forth and proclaims, The daughter of A is for B;[21] the house of C is for D; the field of E is for F! — There is no contradiction, the latter dictum referring to a first marriage and the former to a second marriage.

R. ELIEZER SAYS, HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO WITNESSES etc. So far only do [R. Eliezer and R. Joshua] differ, viz. in the matter of warning and seclusion, but in the matter of misconduct [they agree] that one witness is believed.[22] We similarly learn in the Mishnah: If one witness says: I saw that she committed misconduct, she does not drink the water.[23] Whence is it derived according to Torah-law that one witness is believed? As our Rabbis taught: And there be no witness against her[24] — the text refers to two witnesses.[25] But perhaps it is not so and even one [suffices]! There is a teaching to declare, One witness shall not rise up against a man.[26]

---

(1) Lit., 'is jealous of, i.e., he gives her a warning because he feels jealous.

(2) There must be two witnesses that he had warned her in their presence; otherwise he cannot require her to drink the water of bitterness.

(3) That she had secluded herself with the man, after due warning had been given.
(4) Lit., 'to her house'. Marital relations may continue.
(5) If her husband is a priest. The heave-offering could be eaten by any member of the priest's household who was ritually clean; Num. XVIII, 8ff.
(6) Forthwith, before the water is drunk.
(7) Before she had undergone the ordeal.
(8) V. Glos.
(9) What is the association of ideas between the subject of the Nazirite and the woman suspected of infidelity?
(10) In Num. V and VI.
(11) Immoderate use of wine is a source of immorality. v. Ber. 63a.
(12) That being the order in which they are dealt with in Scripture.
(13) The opening words of Keth. VII.
(14) A man becomes a nazirite by imposing a vow upon himself.
(15) This is derived from the addition of the definite article, the literal sense being: he who warns, i.e., he who has given a warning.
(16) Different views are taken on this question; v. p. 8.
(17) Only if his actions are righteous does he have a faithful wife.
(18) Ps. CXXV, 3.
(19) Ibid. LXVIII, 7. The first clause refers to marriage-making, the second to the release of prisoners. Therefore the two are declared identical as regards difficulty.
(20) V. Glos.
(21) Since the marriage is ordained even before birth, it cannot be dependent upon a man's conduct.
(22) [After due warning had been given and seclusion taken place]. And without drinking the water she leaves her husband's house and does not receive what would normally have been due to her under the marriage-contract.
(23) Infra 31a.
(24) Num. V, 13.
(25) I.e., wherever Scripture uses the word witness, even in the singular, it denotes two.
(26) Deut. XIX, 15.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 2b

From the fact that it is stated: '[A] witness[1] shall not rise up against a man', do I not know that one is intended? Why is there a teaching to declare 'one witness'?[2] This establishes the rule that wherever it is stated 'witness', it signifies two unless the text specifies 'one'; and [in the case under discussion] the All-Merciful declares that when there are not two witnesses against her but only one, and she has not been violated,[3] she is forbidden [to her husband].[4] Now the reason for that[5] is because it is written: One witness shall not rise up against a man. Were it however not so [stated], I might have supposed that 'witness' in the verse relating to a suspected woman means one.[6] But if there be not even one witness against her, why should she then be prohibited [to her husband]? — [The verse: One witness etc.] is necessary, because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that 'there be no witness against her' means, he is not believed against her. He is not believed against her! What, then, [does the text] want unless there are two witnesses?[7] Let the Scriptural text be silent on the point [and not mention it at all], since the rule could have been deduced by analogy from the occurrence of the word dabar[8] in the verse relating to civil actions, and I would know that it applies to every case of testimony mentioned in the Torah! — It was necessary [for Scripture to have mentioned it], because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that the matter is different in the case of a suspected woman inasmuch as there was some basis for the charge, seeing that he had warned her and she had been secluded [with the man]; consequently one witness should be believed against her. But how is it possible to say [that if the Torah had not specified that 'witness' always means two, I might have supposed that the intention of 'there be no witness against her' was] that he is not believed against her and she is permitted to her husband? Surely from what is written: 'and she had not been violatedð ,[9] it is implied that she is forbidden to him! It was necessary [for Scripture to have mentioned this], because otherwise it might have occurred to me to suppose that [the evidence against her] is not believed unless there are two witnesses,[10] and [that the verse means] that she had not been violated on the evidence of two witnesses. We are consequently taught [that one witness is believed].

R. JOSHUA SAYS: HE WARNS HER ON THE TESTIMONY OF TWO etc. What is R. Joshua's reason? Scripture states 'against her' — I.e., 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct][11] but not in the matter of warning, 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion. R. Eliezer, [on the other hand] says: 'Against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning only. Perhaps, however, 'against her' does mean, and not in the matter of seclusion! — Seclusion is compared to 'defilement' [misconduct], for it is written, and he kept close and she be defiled.[12] But warning also is compared to 'defilement', for it is written, and he be jealous of his wife and she be defiled![13] — The All-Merciful excluded this by the phrase 'against her'.[14] But what leads you to this conclusion?[15] — It is obvious that seclusion is more serious [than warning] because she is forthwith prohibited to her husband as with 'defilement'. On the contrary, warning is more serious since it is the root cause [of her seclusion rendering her forbidden to her husband]![16] — If there was no seclusion, would there have been any warning?[17] But if there was no warning, what effect would seclusion have? — Nevertheless seclusion is the more serious since it is the beginning of 'defilement'.

Our Mishnah does not agree with the following Tanna. For it has been taught: R. Jose son of R. Judah says in the name of R. Eliezer: He who warns his wife does so on the testimony of one witness or his personal testimony, and makes her drink [the water of bitterness] on the testimony of two witnesses. The Sages replied: According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter.[18] What is the reason of R. Jose son of R. Judah? — Scripture states 'against her', i.e., 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion. Perhaps, however, 'against her' means: and not in the matter of warning? — Warning is compared to 'defilement', for it is written, and he be jealous of his wife and she be defiled. But seclusion is also compared to 'defilement', for it is written, and he kept close and she be defiled? — That refers to a length of time sufficient for 'defilement' to have occurred.[19]

[It was stated above:] 'The Sages replied: According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter'. What does this mean? — There may be times when he did not warn her and he claims that he did warn her.[20] Is there, then, according to our Mishnah any purpose in the matter, since there may be times when she had not been secluded with the man and the husband claims that she had been secluded?[21] — R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan, [Read] also according to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, there is no purpose in the matter. 'Also according to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah' [you say]; is there, then, no question with respect to our Mishnah? On the contrary, according to our Mishnah there is foundation [for the charge], but in the other case [the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah] there may be no foundation![22] — But if the teaching is reported, it must be in this form: R. Isaac b. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: 'According to the view of R. Jose son of R. Judah, and also according to our Mishnah, there is no purpose in the matter.'

R. Hanina of Sura said: Nowadays a man should not say to his wife, 'Do not be secluded with So-and-so', lest we decide according to R. Jose son of R. Judah who said: A warning [is effective] if given on [the husband's] personal testimony. If she then secluded herself with the man, since we have not now the water for a suspected woman to test her, the husband forbids her to himself for all time.

Resh Lakish said: What is the meaning of the term kinnui?[23] A matter which causes hatred [Kin'ah] between her and others. Consequently he holds that the warning can be on [the husband's] personal testimony; and since not everybody knows that he gave her a warning and they say: 'What has happened that she holds herself aloof?' they will proceed to cause hatred against her. R. Jemar b. Shelemia said in the name of Abaye: [Kinnui means] a matter which causes hatred between husband and wife. Consequently he holds that the warning must be on the testimony of two witnesses and everybody is aware that he gave her a warning,[24] and it is he who proceeds to cause hatred against her.

---

(1) And not witnesses.

(2) The word one is superfluous if a single witness is intended, since it would have been sufficient to state a witness.

(3) But consented to the act. Num. V, 13. The English Version translates the verb she be not taken in the act; but the Rabbis understood it in the sense that she was not forced to misconduct and was a consenting party. Cf. the use of the same verb in Deut. XXII, 28. If she had been violated, she was exempt from the ordeal.

(4) Infra 31b. [This proves that in the matter of misconduct one witness is believed, as otherwise whence is it known that she was not violated?]

(5) For maintaining that the term witness' in the case of the Sotah denotes two.

(6) 'And there be no witness against her' means not even one.

(7) What is the purpose of the words if the meaning of there be no witness indicates only one and that his evidence is not accepted?

(8) In connection with infidelity the text has he hath found some unseemly matter (dabar) in her (Deut. XXIV, 1), and in connection with civil actions At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall a matter (dabar) be established (ibid. XIX, 15). By the rule of Gezerah Shawah, analogy of expression, the principle of the latter with regard to the number of witnesses required is also applied to the former.

(9) Therefore it is maintained that misconduct has occurred with her consent.

(10) In a charge of misconduct.

(11) One witness is sufficient; but for warning and seclusion two are necessary.

(12) Num. V, 13.

(13) Ibid. 14.

(14) The phrase 'against her' was explained above as relating only to misconduct.

(15) That 'against her' excludes the idea that warning is to be compared to misconduct, and that only seclusion is to be likened to it.

(16) Without previous warning she would not be prohibited to her husband because of seclusion.

(17) There must have been seclusion to cause jealousy and consequently a warning.

(18) In requiring the husband's personal testimony, since, as the Gemara will explain, it may be false.

(19) So that if the time of seclusion was insufficient, she is not required to drink the water.

(20) So what purpose is there in requiring the husband's unsupported evidence?

(21) The Mishnah compels the woman to drink the water on the unsupported evidence of the husband.

(22) According to the Mishnah there must have been warning on the testimony of two witnesses, so there is some foundation for the charge; but according to R. Jose the husband can give her warning on his uncorroborated testimony which might be groundless.

(23) That is the term used in Num. V, 14, 'he be jealous'.

(24) Since the witnesses are likely to talk of it to others.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 3a

Conclude that they hold that it is forbidden to give a warning;[1] but according to him who says that it is permissible to give a warning, what is the meaning of Kinnui? — R. Nahman b. Isaac said: Kinnui means nothing but 'warning;' and thus Scripture states: Then the Lord warned [wa-yekna] his land.[2]

It has been taught: R. Meir used to say: If a person commits a transgression in secret, the Holy One, Blessed be He, proclaims it against him in public; as it is said: And the spirit of jealousy came upon him;[3] and the verb 'abar [came upon] means nothing but 'proclaiming', as it is said: And Moses gave commandment, and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp.[4] Resh Lakish said: A person does not commit a transgression unless a spirit of folly [shetuth] enters into him; as it is said: If any man's wife go aside.[5] [The word is] written [so that it can be read] sishteh.[6]

The School of R. Ishmael taught: Why does the Torah believe one witness in the case of a suspected woman? Because there was some basis for the charge, seeing that he had warned her and she had secluded herself with the man, and one witness testifies that she had 'defiled' [misconducted] herself. R. Papa said to Abaye, But the warning is mentioned in the text after the seclusion and misconduct?[7] — He replied to him, We'abar [means] there had already come upon him.[8] But can that interpretation be also applied to, And every armed man of you will pass over?[9] — In that passage, since it is written: And the land will be subdued before the Lord, then afterward ye shall return,[10] it follows that the reference is to the future; but here, if it should enter your mind that we follow the order of the text [and we'abar signifies 'will come'], of what use is a warning after misconduct and seclusion had taken place?

The School of R. Ishmael taught: A man does not warn his wife unless a spirit[11] enters into him; as it is said: 'And the spirit of jealousy came upon him and he be jealous of his wife'. What is the meaning [of the word] 'spirit'? — The Rabbis declare, It is a spirit of impurity;[12] but R. Ashi declares, It is a spirit of purity.[13] Reasonable is the view of him who declares that it is a spirit of purity, because it was taught: and he be jealous of his wife — this is voluntary[14] in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. It is well if you say that it means a spirit of purity, then everything is right; but if you say that it means a spirit of impurity, is it voluntary or obligatory for a man to introduce a spirit of impurity into himself!

[To turn to] the main text: And he be jealous of his wife — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. For her he may defile himself[15] — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever[16] — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. R. Papa said to Abaye — others declare it was R. Mesharsheya who said to Raba: Is this to say that R. Ishmael and R. Akiba differ in this way throughout the Torah, one maintaining that [a precept] is voluntary and the other that it is obligatory? — He replied, They only differ here over texts: And he be jealous of his wife — it is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — He holds the same view as that of the following teacher. It has been taught: R. Eliezer b. Jacob says: Since the Torah declares, Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart,[17] it is possible to think that this applies also in such a circumstance;[18] therefore there is a text to say: And the spirit of jealousy came upon him and he be jealous of his wife.[19] And [what is the reason of] R. Akiba? — The word 'jealous' occurs a second time in the verse.[20] And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the repetition of jealous]? — Since it was necessary to write, And she be defiled and afterwards and she be not defiled, the Torah wrote and he be jealous of his wife.[21] This is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael; Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein. [Similarly] 'For her he may defile himself — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — Since it is written: Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron and say unto them, There shall none defile himself for the dead among his people,[22] it was likewise necessary to write, For her he may defile himself. And [from where does] R. Akiba [learn that a priest may so defile himself]? — He derives it from, Except for his kin;[23] what then is the purpose of, For her he should defile himself? [It is to indicate that] it is obligatory. And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the addition of these words]? — 'For her' he may defile himself but not for any of her limbs.[24]

---

(1) Because they explain Kinnui in the sense of hatred, and it is not allowed to create hatred.

(2) Joel II, 18. (E.V. 'Then the Lord was jealous for his land'.)

(3) Num. V, 14.

(4) Ex. XXXVI, 6.
(5) Num. V, 12. The word for 'go aside' is sisteh.
(6) I.e., act in folly.
(7) The matter of seclusion and misconduct is mentioned in Num. V, 12f, and the warning from jealousy in verse 14.
(8) [ועבר is treated as pluperfect.]
(9) Num. XXXII, 21 where the same word, we'abar, occurs.
(10) Ibid. 22.
(11) Introduced into him by God to warn him of what had occurred.
(12) An instigation by Satan.
(13) Which revolts against immorality.
(14) The husband can ignore the matter if he so wishes.
(15) Lev. XXI, 3. Does it mean he may or he should; and similarly with the other instances discussed.
(16) Ibid. XXV, 46.
(17) Ibid. XIX, 17.
(18) That a husband may overlook his wife's seclusion with another man and not warn her.
(19) He interprets the words as meaning: if the spirit of jealousy came upon him and he wishes to warn his wife.
(20) He understands the second clause as he should be jealous and warn her.
(21) The words are repeated because of the two contingencies mentioned and no such deduction is to be drawn as R. Akiba suggests.
(22) Lev. XXI, 1.
(23) Ibid. 2.
(24) An amputated limb of a body defiles in the same way as the whole body. V. Nazir 43b.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 3b

[What reply does] R. Akiba [make to this explanation]? — If that were the sole intention, the All-Merciful should have written 'for her' and then stop; what is the purpose of the words 'he should defile himself? Deduce therefrom.[1] [How does] R. Ishmael [meet this argument]? — Since the Torah wrote 'for her', it likewise wrote 'he may defile himself this is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael: Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein. [And similarly,]'Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever[2] — this is voluntary in the opinion of R. Ishmael; but R. Akiba says: It is obligatory. What is the reason of R. Ishmael? — Since it is written: Thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth,[3] it was likewise necessary to write, 'Of them shall ye take your bondmen for ever', in order to indicate that if a man belonging to any other Gentile people has intercourse with a Canaanite woman[4] and begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave. For it has been taught: Whence is it that if a man belonging to any other Gentile people has intercourse with a Canaanite woman and begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave? There is a text to declare, Moreover of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy.[5] It is possible to think that also if a Canaanite had intercourse with a woman belonging to any other Gentile people and he begets a son by her, it is permissible to purchase him as a slave; therefore there is a text to declare, Which they have begotten in your land[6] — from those born in your land[7] and not from those who dwell in your land.[8] And [from where does] R. Akiba [learn this rule]? — He derives it from, 'Of them shall ye buy'; what then is the purpose of, 'Of them ye shall take your bondmen for ever'? [It indicates that] it is obligatory. And [how does] R. Ishmael [explain the addition of these words]? — 'Of them' [he may purchase] but not of your brethren. [From where does] R. Akiba [derive this rule]? — It is deduced from the mention of 'your brethren' at the end of the verse: But over your brethren the children of Israel ye shall not rule, one over another, with rigour.[9] [How does] R. Ishmael [meet this argument]? — Since the Torah wrote 'But over your brethren', it likewise wrote 'of them'. This is in agreement with the teaching of the School of R. Ishmael; for it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael: Wherever a Scriptural passage is repeated, it is only repeated because of some new point contained therein.

R. Hisda said: Immorality in a house is like a worm in the sesame plant. Further said R. Hisda: Anger in a house is like a worm in the sesame plant. Both these statements refer to a woman, but in the case of a man there is no objection.[10] Further said R. Hisda, At first, before Israel sinned [against morality], the Shechinah abode with each individual; as it is said: For the Lord thy God walketh in the midst of thy camp.[11] When they sinned, the Shechinah departed from them; as it is said: That he see no unclean thing in thee and turn away from thee.[12]

R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Whoever performs one precept in this world, it precedes him for the world to come; as it is said: And thy righteousness shall go before thee;[13] and whoever commits one transgression in this world, it clings to him and precedes him for the Day of Judgment, as it is said: The paths of their way are turned aside; they go up into the waste and perish.[14] R. Eleazar says: It attaches itself to him like a dog; as it is said: He hearkened not unto her, to lie by her, or to be with her[15] — to lie by her in this world, or to be with her in the world to come.

We learn elsewhere: It is a proper conclusion that if the first evidence [that the woman had secluded herself with the man], which does not prohibit her [to her husband] for all time,[16] is not established by fewer than two witnesses, is it not right that the final evidence [that she had misconducted herself] which prohibits her to him for all time, should not be established by fewer than two witnesses! Therefore there is a text to state, 'And there be no witness against her', [implying that], whatever [evidence] there may be against her [is believed, even if it be only one witness]. And with respect to the first evidence [about her seclusion with the man, that one witness suffices may be argued by] a fortiori reasoning as follows: If the final evidence [regarding misconduct], which prohibits her to her husband for all time, is established by one witness, is it not proper that the first evidence, which does not prohibit her to him for all time, should be established by one witness! Therefore there is a text to state, Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her,[17] and elsewhere it states: At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses shall a matter be established;[18] as the 'matter' mentioned in this latter case must be confirmed by the testimony of two witnesses, so also here [in the case of the suspected woman] the 'matter' must be confirmed by the testimony of two witnesses.[19] Is this deduction to be drawn from the words, 'Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her'? It ought to be derived from 'against her' — i.e., 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning, 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion![20] — He also says similarly[21] [and his teaching is to be cited as follows]: Therefore there is a text to state 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of warning, 'against her' [in the matter of misconduct] but not in the matter of seclusion; and whence is it that merely in a case of misconduct, where there had been no warning or seclusion one witness is not believed? It is stated here, 'Because he hath found some unseemly matter in her', and elsewhere it states: 'At the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall a matter be established'; as in the 'matter' mentioned in the latter case two witnesses are required, so also here [where there has been misconduct without warning and seclusion] two witnesses are required. Our Rabbis have taught: Which is the 'first testimony'? Evidence of seclusion, and the 'final testimony' is evidence of 'defilement' [misconduct].

---

(1) That it is obligatory.

(2) Lev. XXV, 46.

(3) Deut. XX, 16.

(4) The woman belonged to the seven nations which had to be exterminated.

(5) Lev. XXV, 45.

(6) Ibid. I.e., the original natives of Canaan.

(7) [Whose father belongs to another land.]

(8) [I.e., the original natives of Canaan]. It is to be noted that descent is traced through the father, whereas in the case of a Jew descent is traced through the mother.

(9) Lev. XXV, 46.
(10) This opinion is contradicted by popular proverbs quoted in the Talmud, viz., 'He among the full-grown pumpkins and his wife among the young ones' (infra, p. 45), and 'He who gives vent to his anger destroys his house' (Sanh. 102b).
(11) Deut. XXIII, 15.
(12) Ibid.
(13) Isa. LVIII, 8.
(14) Job VI, 18.
(15) Gen. XXXIX, 10.
(16) Because the water may prove her innocent.
(17) Deut. XXIV, 1.
(18) Ibid. XIX, 15.
(19) Infra 31a-b.
(20) V. supra p. 5.
(21) The teacher in the Mishnah accepts the deduction from 'against her' and uses the argument from the occurrence of the word 'matter' for another purpose. He had been quoted wrongly and the Gemara proceeds with the correct form of the teaching.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 4a

And how long is the duration in the matter of seclusion? Sufficient for misconduct, i.e., sufficient for coition, i.e., sufficient for sexual contact, i.e., sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm. Such is the view of R. Ishmael; R. Eliezer says: Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine;[1] R. Joshua says: Sufficient to drink it; Ben Azzai says: Sufficient to roast an egg; R. Akiba says: Sufficient to swallow it; R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Sufficient to swallow three eggs one after the other; R. Eleazar b. Jeremiah says: Sufficient for a weaver to knot a thread; Hanin b. Phineas says: Sufficient for a woman to extend her hand to her mouth to remove a chip of wood [from between the teeth]; Pelemo says: Sufficient for her to extend her hand to a basket and take a loaf therefrom. Although there is no proof for this [last opinion] there is an indication, viz., For on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread.[2] What is the purpose of all these definitions? — They are necessary; because if we were only taught sufficient for misconduct, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for her misconduct and her submission;[3] therefore it is defined as sufficient for coition.[4] If, however, it were only taught sufficient for coition, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for completed coition; therefore it is defined as sufficient for sexual contact. If, further, we had only been taught sufficient for sexual contact, I would have thought that it meant sufficient time for sexual contact and her submission; therefore it is defined as sufficient for misconduct. And how much is the time sufficient for sexual contact? Sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm.

In contradiction of the above [I quote the following]: And be kept close[5] — but how long is the duration in the matter of seclusion we have not heard. Since, however, it states 'and she be defiled', deduce that it is time sufficient for misconduct, i.e., sufficient for coition, i.e., sufficient for sexual contact, i.e., sufficient for a date-palm to rebound.[6] Such is the view of R. Eliezer; R. Joshua says: Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine; Ben Azzai says: Sufficient to drink it; R. Akiba says: Sufficient to roast an egg; R. Judah b. Bathyra says: Sufficient to swallow it.[7] Now it is assumed that walking round a date-palm and the rebound of a date-palm are identical [in length of time, and the question thus arises:] R. Ishmael said above, 'Sufficient for a person to walk round a date-palm', and R. Eliezer disagreed with him; and here R. Eliezer says: 'Sufficient for a date-palm to rebound'! — Abaye said: 'Walking round' means on foot, and 'rebound' means by the force of the wind. R. Ashi asked: How is 'rebound' to be understood? Does it mean that the palm is blown in one direction and then in its opposite, or perhaps that it is blown in one direction and then in its opposite and finally returns to its original position? — The question remains unanswered.

R. Eliezer said above: ‘Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient for a date-palm to rebound’! — They are alike in duration. R. Joshua said above, ‘Sufficient to drink it’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine’! — Say [that the correct version is], Sufficient for preparing a cup of wine and drinking it. But why not say rather that they are alike in duration? — If so, he would agree with R. Eliezer's view.[8] Ben Azzai said above ‘Sufficient to roast an egg’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to drink [a cup of wine]’! — They are alike in duration. R. Akiba said above, ‘Sufficient to swallow [a roasted egg]’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to roast an egg’! — Say [that the correct version is], Sufficient to roast an egg and swallow it. But why not say rather that they are alike in duration? — If so, he would agree with Ben Azzai's view. R. Judah b. Bathyra said above, ‘Sufficient to swallow three eggs one after the other’, and here he says: ‘Sufficient to swallow [one roasted egg]’! — He spoke in accordance with the view of R. Akiba who said that we fix as the duration a length of time sufficient to roast and swallow an egg, [and with reference to this he said,] ‘speak rather only of the duration of swallowing’, that is ‘sufficient time to swallow three eggs one after the other’, for that is the same as roasting and swallowing [one egg].[9]

‘R. Eleazar b. Jeremiah says: Sufficient for a weaver to knot a thread’. R. Ashi asked: Does this mean two ends which are distant or near?[10] — The question remains unanswered.

‘Hanin b. Phineas said: Sufficient for a woman to extend her hand to her mouth to remove a chip of wood’. R. Ashi asked: Does this mean wedged tightly [between the teeth] or not? — The question remains unanswered.

‘Pelemo said: Sufficient for her to extend her hand to a basket and take a loaf therefrom’. R. Ashi asked: Is it [a loaf] which is wedged in tightly or not, a new or old [basket],[11] a hot or cold [loaf],[12]

---

(1) By diluting it with water.

(2) Prov. VI, 26. This is the literal rendering of the Hebrew.

(3) I.e., that he should make improper advances and induce her to submit.

(4) Consequently she must have secluded herself with the intention of committing misconduct.

(5) Num. V, 13.

(6) After having been bent by the wind.

(7) Tosef. Sot. I, 2.

(8) That cannot be, because he gives a different definition, and so it is impossible to think them alike in duration.

(9) [Why introduce at all the act of roasting, seeing that the act of swallowing by itself can afford a suitable standard for defining the duration?]

(10) I.e., does it include the time spent in bringing the threads together as well as tying them?

(11) In a new basket the ends of straws protrude and catch in the loaves, so that it takes longer to get one out.

(12) A warm loaf has to be drawn out with greater care and therefore takes longer.

wheaten or of barley,[1] soft or hard-baked? — The question remains unanswered.

R. Isaac son of R. Joseph said in the name of R. Johanan: Each of the teachers defined the duration [of coition] from his own experience. But they included Ben Azzai who was unmarried! — If you wish I can say that he had married and separated [from his wife],[2] or that he had heard it from his master, or that The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him.[3]

R. ‘Awira expounded sometimes in the name of R. Ammi and at other times in the name of R. Assi: Whoever eats bread without previously washing the hands is as though he had intercourse with a harlot ; as it is said , For on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread.[4] Raba said: [On that interpretation] the verse, ðFor on account of a harlot, to a loaf of bread’ should have read: ‘On account of a loaf of bread, to a harlot'! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] Whoever has intercourse with a harlot will in the end go seeking a loaf of bread.

R. Zerika said in the name of R. Eleazar: Whoever makes light of washing the hands [before and after a meal] will be uprooted from the world. R. Hiyya b. Ashi said in the name of Rab: With the first washing [before the meal] it is necessary to lift the hands up; with the latter washing [after the meal] it is necessary to lower the hands . There is a similar teaching: Who washes his hands [before the meal] must lift them up lest the water pass beyond the joint,[5] flow back and render them unclean. R. Abbahu says: Whoever eats bread without first wiping his hands is as though he eats unclean food; as it is stated: And the Lord said: Even thus shall the children of Israel eat their bread unclean.[6]

And[7] what means, And the adulteress hunteth for the precious life? — R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Johanan: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end stumble through an [unfaithful] married woman; as it is said: 'And the adulteress hunteth for the precious life'. Raba said: [On that interpretation] the word 'precious' should have been 'haughty'! Furthermore the verse should have read, [The haughty soul] hunteth [the adulteress]! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] Whoever has intercourse with a married woman, even though he had studied Torah, of which it is written: It is more precious than rubies,[8] i.e., above a High Priest who enters into the innermost part of the Sanctuary, she will hunt him to the judgment of Gehinnom.[9] R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit is as though he worships idols; it is written here, Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord,[10] and it is written elsewhere, Thou shalt not bring an abomination into thine house.[11] R. Johanan himself said: He is as though he had denied the fundamental principle;[12] as it is said: Thine heart be lifted up and thou forget the Lord thy God, etc.[13] R. Hama b. Hanina said: He is as though he had broken all the laws of sexual morality;[14] it is written here, Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord, and it is written elsewhere, For all these abominations, etc.[15] 'Ulla said: He is as though he had erected an idolatrous altar; as it is said: Cease ye from man whose breath is in his nostrils;[16] for wherein [bammeh] is he to be accounted of?[17] — read not bammeh but bamah [an idolatrous altar].

What means, Hand to hand, he shall not escape punishment?[18] Rab said: Whoever has intercourse with a married woman, though he proclaim the Holy One, blessed be He, to be Possessor of heaven and earth as did our father Abraham, of whom it is written: I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, God Most High, Possessor of heaven and earth,[19] he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. The students of the School of R. Shila objected: [On that interpretation] the phrase 'Hand to hand etc.' should have read: 'Of my [God's] hand will not escape punishment'! But, said they of the School of R. Shila, [the meaning is:] Though he received the Torah as did our teacher Moses, of whom it is written: At his right hand was a fiery law unto them,[20] he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. R. Johanan objected: [On that interpretation] the phrase 'Hand to hand' should have read 'Hand from hand'![21] But, said R. Johanan,

---

(1) A wheaten loaf is smoother and has to be grasped more firmly; and similarly with one which is soft-baked.

(2) The passage in Yeb. 63b does not make it clear whether Ben Azzai was censured for remaining a bachelor or for having married and not begetting children.

(3) Ps. XXV, 14. The knowledge was revealed to him.

(4) Prov. VI, 26. (E.V. 'For on account of a harlot a man is brought to a loaf of bread'). [As much as to say that the disregard of one Rabbinic precept leads to the disregard of another.]

(5) When washing the hands for a meal, the water should reach the second joint of the fingers; Hul. 106a. The hands beyond the joint having been left unwashed are deemed unclean.

(6) Ezek. IV, 13.

(7) The Gemara now continues the discussion of prov. VI, 26 quoted above.

(8) Prov. III, 15. מפנינים

(9) לפני ולפנים, a play upon the word מפנינים v. n. 4.

(10) Prov. XVI, 5.
(11) Deut. VII, 26, the reference being to an idolatrous image.
(12) Viz., the existence of God.
(13) lbid. VIII, 14.
(14) Enumerated in Lev. XVIII.
(15) Lev. XVIII, 27.
(16) Understood in the sense: who is proud.
(17) Isa. II, 22.
(18) Prov. XVI, 5.
(19) Gen. XIV, 22.
(20) Deut. XXXIII, 2.
(21) Since the interpretation implies that the adulterer receives from, and does not give to.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 5a

[the meaning is:] Though he practise charity in secret,[1] concerning which it is written: 'A gift in secret pacifieth anger,[2] he will not escape the punishment of Gehinnom. Whence is there a prohibition for the haughty of spirit? — Raba said in the name of Ze'iri: Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud.[3] R. Nahman b. Isaac said: [It is derived] from this passage, Thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God,[4] and it is written: Beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God.[5] This is in accord with what R. Abin said in the name of R. Elai; for R. Abin said in the name of R. Elai: Wherever it is stated 'Beware' 'lest' and 'Do not' the reference is to a prohibition.

R. 'Awira expounded, sometimes he said it in the name of R. Assi and at other times in the name of R. Ammi: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end be reduced in rank; as it is said: They are exalted, there will be reduction of status;[6] and lest you think that they remain in existence, the text continues, 'And they are gone'. If, however, he changes [and becomes humble], he will be gathered [to his fathers] in his due time like our father Abraham; as it is said: But when they are lowly, they are gathered in like all[7] — i.e., like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in connection with whom the word 'all' is used.[8] If not, They are cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.[9] What means 'as the tops of the ears of corn'? R. Huna and R. Hisda [explain it]. One says that it means like the awn of the grain, and the other that it means like the ears themselves . This is quite right according to him who says that it means like the awn of the grain, since it is written 'as the tops of the ears of corn'; but according to him who says that it means like the ears themselves, what signifies 'as the tops of the ears of corn'? — R. Assi said, and it was similarly taught in the School of R. Ishmael: It is like a man who enters his field; he gleans the tallest ears.

With him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit.[10] R. Huna and R. Hisda [explain it]. One says that it means the contrite is with Me, and the other that I [God] am with the contrite. The more probable view is in accord with him who holds the meaning to be I am with the contrite; for behold, the Holy One, blessed be He, ignored all the mountains and heights and caused His Shechinah to abide upon Mount Sinai, but did not elevate Mount Sinai [up to Himself].

R. Joseph said: Man should always learn from the mind of his Creator; for behold, the Holy One, blessed be He, ignored all the mountains and heights and caused His Shechinah to abide upon Mount Sinai, and ignored all the beautiful trees and caused His Shechinah to abide in a bush.[11]

R. Eleazar also said: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit is fit to be hewn down like an Asherah.[12] It is written here, The high ones of stature shall be hewn down,[13] and elsewhere it is written: And ye shall hew down their Asherim.[14] Further said R. Eleazar, Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit, his dust will not be disturbed [for the Resurrection]; as it is said: Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust[15] — it is not said 'ye that lie in the dust', but, 'ye that dwell [shokne] in the dust', i.e., each one who during his lifetime made himself a neighbour [shaken] to the dust [by his humility]. Further said R. Eleazar: Over every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit the Shechinah laments; as it is said: But the haughty he knoweth from afar.[16]

R. Awira expounded, and according to another version it was R. Eleazar: Come and see that the manner of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not like the manner of human beings. The manner of human beings is for the lofty to take notice of the lofty and not of the lowly; but the manner of the Holy One, blessed be He, is not so. He is lofty and He takes notice of the lowly, as it is said: For though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly.[17]

R. Hisda said, and according to another version it was Mar 'Ukba: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit, the Holy One, blessed be He, declares, I and he cannot both dwell in the world; as it is said: Whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I destroy; him that hath an high look and a proud heart will I not suffer[18] — read not 'him' [I cannot suffer], but 'with him'[19] I cannot [dwell]. There are some who apply this teaching to those who speak slander; as it is said,'whoso privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I destroyð.

R. Alexandri said: Every man in whom there is haughtiness of spirit, even the slightest wind will disturb;[20] as it is said: But the wicked are like the troubled sea.[21] If the sea, which contains so many quarters of a log,[22] is ruffled by the slightest wind, how much more so a human being who contains but one quarter of a log.[23]

R. Hiyya b. Ashi said in the name of Rab: A disciple of the Sages should possess an eighth [of pride].[24] R. Huna the son of R. Joshua said: [This small amount of pride] crowns him like the awn of the grain. Raba said: [A disciple of the Sages] who possesses [haughtiness of spirit] deserves excommunication, and if he does not possess it he deserves excommunication.[25] R. Nahman b. Isaac said: He should not possess it or part of it; is it a trifling matter concerning which it is written: Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord![26]

Hezekiah said: A man's prayer is not heard unless he makes his heart [soft] like flesh; as it is said , And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, shall all flesh come to worship, etc.[27] R. Zera said: Concerning flesh it is written: And it is healed;[28] but it is not written concerning man, And he is healed.

R. Johanan said: The word for man [adam] indicates dust, blood and gall;[29] the word for flesh [basar] indicates shame, stench and worm. Some declare that [instead of 'stench' we should have the word] Sheol, since its initial letter corresponds.[30]

R. Ashi said: Every man in whom is haughtiness of spirit will in the end be degraded; as it is said,

---

(1) He gives from 'hand to hand'.

(2) Prov. XXI, 14.

(3) Jer. XIII, 15.

(4) Deut. VIII, 14.

(5) Ibid. 11.

(6) Job XXIV, 24.

(7) lbid.

(8) V. Gen. XXIV, 1, XXVII, 33 and XXXIII, 11.

(9) Job loc. cit.

(10) Isa. LVII, 15.

(11) Ex. III, 2. Similarly should man associate with the humble.

(12) An object of idolatrous worship.

(13) Isa. X, 33.
(14) Deut. VII, 5.
(15) Isa. XXVI, 19. 'Ye that lie in the dust' would apply to all mortals.
(16) Ps. CXXXVIII, 6. The Hebrew word translated knoweth, ידע , is understood in the sense of punish, cf. Jud. VIII. 16.
(17) lbid.
(18) Ps. CL. 5.
(19) Involves a slight change in the vocalization.
(20) [The smallest disappointment is liable to discomfit him.]
(21) Isa. LVII, 20.
(22) A liquid measure, equal to the contents of six eggs.
(23) This was considered the minimum quantity of blood in the body essential to life.
(24) He should have a little pride to maintain his self-respect.
(25) To have too much is bad, and also too little because it prevents a Rabbi from exercising his authority.
(26) Prov. XVI, 5.
(27) Isa. LXVI, 23.
(28) Lev. XIII, 18. Hence only one whose heart is soft like flesh will be healed, and not a man in his full pride.
(29) The initials of these words in Hebrew form adam.
(30) The initial of the word for 'stench' is samek, whereas the second letter in basar is similar in form to that of 'Sheol'.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 5b

For a rising and for a scab,[1] and se'eth ['rising'] means nothing else than elevation, as it is said: Upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are nisaoth [lifted up].[2] Sappahath ['scab'] means nothing else than attachment; as it is said: Attach me, I pray thee, into one of the priests' offices, that I may eat a morsel of bread.[3]

R. Joshua b. Levi said: Come and see how great are the lowly of spirit in the esteem of the Holy One, blessed be He, since when the Temple stood, a man brought a burnt-offering and received the reward of a burnt-offering, a meal-offering and he received the reward of a meal-offering; but as for him whose mind is lowly, Scripture ascribes it to him as though he had offered every one of the sacrifices; as it is said: The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit.[4] More than that, his prayer is not despised; as it continues: A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

R. Joshua b. Levi further said: He who calculates his ways in this world will be worthy to behold the salvation of the Holy One, blessed be He; as it is said: To him that ordereth his way will I show the salvation of God[5] — read not we-sam [that ordereth] but we-sham [who calculates] his way.[6]

HOW MUST HE WARN HER? etc. This is self-contradictory. You declare, IF HE SAYS TO HER IN THE PRESENCE OF TWO, DO NOT CONVERSE WITH THAT MAN — consequently conversation is the equivalent of seclusion.[7] He then proceeds to teach: AND SHE CONVERSED WITH HIM, SHE IS STILL PERMITTED TO HER HUSBAND AND PERMITTED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVEOFFERING — consequently conversation is nothing! — Abaye said: This is what he means: [If he said to her,] Do not converse, and she conversed with him, Do not converse, and she secluded herself with him, that is nothing; [but if he said to her,] Do not be secluded with him, and she conversed with him, she is still permitted to her husband and permitted to partake of the heave-offering. Should she have entered a private place with him and stayed a time sufficient for misconduct to have occurred, she is forbidden to her husband and forbidden to partake of the heave-offering.

IF [HER HUSBAND] DIED, SHE PERFORMS THE CEREMONY OF HALIZAH. Why so? Let her also contract a levirate marriage! — R. Joseph said: Scripture declared: And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife[8] — she may marry ‘another’ man but not her brother-in-law.[9] Abaye said to him, According to your argument, Halizah also should be unnecessary! He replied to him, If the husband is living, is not a Get required?[10] So here likewise Halizah is necessary.[11] Another version is: R. Joseph said: The All-Merciful declared: And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife, so as not to destroy his house;[12] and you argue, let her also contract a levirate marriage![13] Abaye said to him, According to your argument, she should never marry again so as not to destroy another man's house! — He replied to him,

---

(1) Lev. XIV, 56 interpreted as: having first been elevated, he will become something superfluous among men, and therefore esteemed as nothing.

(2) Isa. II, 14.

(3) I Sam. II, 36. The Hebrew for the verb attach resembles the word for scab, v. Shebu, 6b.

(4) Ps. LI, 19.

(5) Ibid. L, 23.

(6) He calculates the loss incurred in fulfilling a precept against the reward it will bring him, v. Aboth, II, 1.

(7) Since it justifies a warning from the husband.

(8) Deut. XXIV, 2.

(9) [‘Another’ excludes the brother-in-law whose marriage to her is but a continuation, so to speak, of her first marriage. The derivation is based on the superfluous word ‘another’ which is taken to refer to a case where the wife was charged with an ‘unseemly thing’ and her husband died. The meaning of the verse would accordingly be as follows: If she found no favour . . . because he hath found some unseemly thing, he shall write her a bill of divorcement. When she departs out of his house (whether on his death or on divorce) and she goeth and becometh another man's wife, implying she can become the wife only of another man but not the brother-in-law.]

(10) Despite her misconduct. Ibid. 3 mentions, and write her a bill of divorcement. The technical term for this document is Get.

(11) [The brother-in-law taking the place of the dead husband.]

(12) V. supra p. II where it is taught that the wife's immorality destroys the husband's house.

(13) And perhaps destroy the brother-in-law's house.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 6a

Do we compel any other man to marry her [as in the case of a brother-in-law where it is a duty]! Another version is: R. Joseph replied: The text calls [the second husband] ‘another’, because he is not the equal of the first husband, since the latter removes wickedness from his house [by divorcing his wife] whereas the other introduces wickedness into his house [by marrying such a woman]; and you argue, let her also contract a levirate marriage! Abaye said to him, According to your argument, if she does marry another man and he died without issue, she may not contract a levirate marriage since the text calls him ‘another’![1] — While living with the second husband she may have been of spotless reputation! Raba said: It is an a fortiori argument:[2] if she is forbidden to [her husband] to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to [her brother-in-law] to whom she is [normally] forbidden! Abaye said to him, According to your argument, if a High Priest betrothed a widow and he died and had a brother who was an ordinary priest, she may not marry him, since if she becomes forbidden to one to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to one to whom she is [normally] forbidden![3] [You say,] ‘If she becomes forbidden’ — she is actually forbidden;[4] ‘to one to whom she is allowed’ — he is forbidden [to marry her]! But [ask rather as follows: According to Raba's argument] if the wife of a priest had been violated and he died, and he had a brother who was disqualified,[5] she may not marry him, since if she is forbidden to [her husband][6] to whom she is [otherwise] allowed, how much more so to one to whom she is [normally] forbidden![7] — A woman who had been violated is permitted to a non-priest and the prohibition does not apply in his case.[8]

MISHNAH. THE FOLLOWIN[9] ARE PROHIBITED TO PARTAKE OF THE HEAVE-OFFERING:[10] SHE WHO SAYS, 'I AM UN CLEAN TO THEE';[11] WHEN WITNESSES CAME [AND TESTIFIED] THAT SHE HAD Mlsconducted HERSELF;[12] SHE WHO SAYS, I REFUSE TO DRINK [THE WATER]'; WHEN THE HUSBAND IS UNWILLING TO MAKE HER DRINK [THE WATER]: AND WHEN THE HUSBAND COHABITED WITH HER ON THE JOURNEY.[13]

GEMARA. R. Amram said: The following did R. Shesheth tell us and enlighten our eyes from our Mishnah:[14] In the case of a suspected woman where the witnesses against her are in a far-distant land,[15] the water does not prove her.[16] What is the reason? Because Scripture states: And be kept close and she be defiled and there be no witness against her[17] — this is when there is nobody who knows anything against her, thus excluding the case when there are men who know something against her.[18] And he enlightened our eyes from our Mishnah where it is taught: WHEN WITNESSES CAME [AND TESTIFIED] THAT SHE HAD MISCONDUCTED HERSELF. When did the witnesses come? If we say that they came before she drank the water, she is an adulteress;[19] consequently they could only have come after she had drunk the water. This is quite right if you say that the water does not prove her,[20] then all is clear; but if you say that [in such a circumstance] the water does prove her, the water may demonstrate retrospectively that the witnesses were false![21] — R. Joseph said to him, Still I maintain that the water does prove her, and answer that some merit she possesses causes the water to suspend its effect.[22] In what do [R. Joseph and R. Shesheth] differ? — In the matter of her becoming ill, according to the teaching of Rabbi. For we learn: Rabbi says: Merit [in the woman] causes the water of bitterness to suspend its effect, and she never bears a child or thrives, but she gradually grows ill and finally dies through that death.[23] R. Shesheth is of the opinion that both in the view of Rabbi and of the Rabbis she grows ill;[24] and R. Joseph is of the opinion that in the view of Rabbi she grows ill but in the view of the Rabbis she does not.[25]

R. Shimi b. Ashi raised an objection: R. Simeon says: Merit does not cause the water of bitterness to suspend its effect; and if you say that merit does cause the water of bitterness to suspend its effect, you discredit the water in the case of all the women who drink it and defame the pure woman who drank it, since people will say: They were unclean, only their merit caused the water to suspend its effect upon them.[26] But if it is so,[27] then through [the teaching], 'Where the witnesses against her are in a far-distant land', you likewise defame the pure women who drank and people will say: They were unclean, only the witnesses against them are in a far-distant land! — [The reply to R. Shimi is:] You quote R. Simeon; but as R. Simeon holds that merit does not cause the water to suspend its effect, he similarly holds that the existence of witnesses does not cause it to suspend its effect.

Rab raised an objection: The following have their meal-offerings destroyed:[28]

---

(1) [And how can we compel the brother-in-law to marry her?]

(2) [To forbid her to the brother-in-law.]

(3) As wife of his brother. The conclusion is false, because such a levirate marriage is permissible.

(4) A High Priest is not allowed to marry a widow; Lev. XXI, 14.

(5) From the priesthood because he was the issue of another marriage which was illegal.

(6) A priest could not continue to live with his wife after she had been violated.

(7) The argument is false, because the man disqualified from the priesthood could marry his childless brother's widow if she had been violated.

(8) I.e., a non-priest was not obliged to divorce his wife who was the victim of violation.

(9) Wives of priests.

(10) For all time, even if the woman be a priest's daughter (v. Bertinoro).

(11) She admits misconduct.

(12) Even if she had successfully come through the ordeal, v. Gemara.

(13) To Jerusalem, where alone the ordeal was carried out. V. Mishnah p. 30.

(14) He found support for his teaching in the statement of the Mishnah.
(15) And unable to appear before a Court to give evidence that she misconducted herself.
(16) It has no effect, though she be guilty.
(17) Num. V, 13.
(18) 'No witness' is now interpreted literally, and not as before, viz., only one witness.
(19) As the result of their evidence; [consequently she is forbidden to partake of the heave-offering, v. Yeb. 44b].
(20) If there are witnesses of her misconduct who have not testified.
(21) Because, if she came through successfully, her reputation is cleared. [Why then should she be prohibited to partake of the heave-offering for all time?]
(22) This point is discussed immediately. If this view is accepted, the water does not affect her although the witnesses are true.
(23) Through her belly swelling and her thigh falling (Num. V, 27). The passage is cited from infra 22b.
(24) And the Sages only disagree with him on the question whether she dies. In any case, if she does not grow ill, it cannot be attributed to her merit but to the fact that there are witnesses who have not given evidence.
(25) So that on either view, if the water has no effect, it is due to her merit.
(26) Also quoted from infra 22b.
(27) Viz., that the existence of absent witnesses causes the water not to take effect.
(28) V. Num. V, 15 for this offering. In the cases mentioned, it is not burnt upon the altar or redeemed by payment in money of its value, but destroyed by fire.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 6b

She who says: 'I am unclean'; and when witnesses came [and testified] that she had misconducted herself.[1] When did the witnesses come? If I say that they came before the offering was hallowed,[2] then it can become non-holy?[3] Consequently they could only have come after it had been hallowed. This is quite right if you say that the water proves her;[4] consequently she is qualified to have [the flour] hallowed and offered on her behalf, and since it was hallowed from the commencement, it is certainly holy[5] and for that reason her meal-offering is destroyed. But if you say that the water does not prove her, it becomes evident retrospectively that the hallowing was from the commencement in error,[6] and therefore [the flour] becomes non-holy![7] — Rab Judah of Diskarta[8] said: Suppose that [after the hallowing] she committed adultery within the Temple-precincts,[9] since it was hallowed from the commencement, it is certainly holy! R. Mesharsheya objected: But do not the priestly novitiates accompany her?[10] — Rab Judah [meant,] She committed adultery with one of these novitiates. R. Ashi[11] said: Suppose it was necessary for her to relieve herself, do you think that the priestly novitiates hang on to her headgear![12] R. Papa said: The matter is certainly as we originally explained;[13] and when you argue, [The offering] becomes non-holy, [the answer is that the rule by which the offering is destroyed] is a decree of the Rabbis lest it should be said, we may take [the flour] out of the ministering vessel for secular use.

R. Mari raised an objection: If her offering became ritually defiled before it became hallowed in the vessel, behold it is like all meal-offerings[14] and is redeemed; but if [it became defiled] after it had been hallowed in the vessel, behold it is like all meal-offerings [in such a circumstance] and is destroyed.[15] If the handful of flour[16] was hallowed but there was not sufficient time to offer it before [the husband] died[17] or she died, behold it is like all the meal-offerings and must be destroyed. If the handful had been offered but there was not sufficient time [for the priest] to eat the remainder[18] before [the husband] died or she died, behold it is like all the meal-offerings and is eaten; because it was brought from the commencement in connection with a matter of doubt,[19] it atoned for the doubt which is now ended. If witnesses came [and testified] against her that she had misconducted herself, her meal-offering is destroyed; should the witnesses against her be proved to be perjurers,[20] her meal-offering is non-holy?[21] — You mention perjured witnesses; the fact that they were perjured witnesses is generally known.[22]

There is a teaching in accord with the view of R. Shesheth[23] but not for the same reason as his,[24] viz., If she be clean[25] — [this indicates] there are no witnesses against her in a far-distant land;[26] 'and if she be clean' — [the addition of and indicates] it is not merit that causes the water to suspend its effect; ['and if] she [be clean'] — [meaning that she has escaped the effect of the water because she is in fact clean] and not because women who spin by moonlight were discussing her.[27] Now as for R. Simeon,[28] agreed that he does not expound the conjunction and;[29] still there is the case

---

(1) Quoted from infra p. 144.

(2) By the priest placing the flour in one of the ministering vessels.

(3) By being redeemed; so why does the Mishnah say it is destroyed?

(4) And she drank the water before witnesses testified.

(5) Even after the witnesses gave evidence.

(6) Since witnesses proved her guilty and the ordeal was unnecessary.

(7) And does not even have to be redeemed since the hallowing was based on an error.

(8) [Deskarah, 16 miles N.E. of Bagdad; Obermeyer, Die Landschaft Babylonian, p. 116.]

(9) And witnesses came to testify concerning this act of infidelity.

(10) So that adultery could not occur there.

(11) Who rejects the thought that she could be guilty with one of the novitiates.

(12) When she retired to relieve herself. Consequently she could have the opportunity with another than the novitiates.

(13) That the witnesses came concerning the first act of infidelity.

(14) Which became defiled before being hallowed.

(15) Mishnah, p. 114. What follows is cited in the main from Tosefta Sotah II.

(16) Num. V, 26.

(17) In the event of the husband's death she does not drink the water.

(18) Of the flour which is not burnt upon the altar and is the priest's perquisite.

(19) The woman's chastity.

(20) Zomemim v. Glos. Before the meal-offering was burnt upon the altar.

(21) Though it has been placed in the vessel; and we do not say, as above, that by a Rabbinic decree, it must be destroyed. This contradicts the view given by R. Papa.

(22) So that it will be recognised that the offering was never holy.

(23) Viz., that the water does not take effect when there are absent witnesses.

(24) Which is based on the phrase 'No witness against her' (v. supra p. 24). The teaching finds another derivation in support.

(25) Num. V, 28.

(26) The verse is thus explained; if she be really pure and did not escape the effect of the water through the witnesses being far away, then she will conceive.

(27) Women gather together in the moonlight to spin and gossip. To be talked about by them was a sufficient disgrace to suspend the effect of the water.

(28) Who holds that merit does not suspend the effect of the water.

(29) To derive from it a Scriptural basis for his view.

where there are witnesses against her in a far-distant land![1] — That is uncommon.[2]

MISHNAH. HOW DOES [THE HUSBAND] DEAL WITH HER? HE BRINGS HER TO THE COURT OF JUSTICE IN THE PLACE WHERE HE RESIDES, AND THEY ASSIGN TO HIM TWO DISCIPLES OF THE SAGES[3] LEST HE COHABIT WITH HER ON THE JOURNEY.[4] R. JUDAH SAYS, HER HUSBAND IS TRUSTED WITH HER.[5]

GEMARA. Two [disciples of the Sages] and he make three. Is this to say that it supports the teaching of Rab? For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The Rabbis] did not teach [that a woman may be in the company of two men] except in a city; but on a journey there must be three, in case one of them should have need to relieve himself and consequently one of them will be left alone with [the possibility of] immorality![6] — No; here the reason is that they should be witnesses against him.[7] [But the fact that] disciples of the Sages are necessary and not ordinary men, does this not support another teaching of Rab? For Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: [The Rabbis] did not teach [that a woman may be in the company of two men] except in the case of pure men; but in the case of dissolute men not even with ten. It once happened that ten men carried a [live] woman [out of the city] in a coffin [to violate her]! — No; here the reason is that they will know to warn him.[8]

R. JUDAH SAYS, HER HUSBAND etc. It has been taught: R. Judah says: By a fortiori reasoning [it is deduced] that a husband is trusted.[9] If a husband is trusted in the matter of his wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision,[10] how much more so in the matter of his wife under suspicion in connection with which there is a mere prohibition.[11] And [how do] the Rabbis [meet this argument]? — The same reasoning establishes [their view]: in the case of a wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision, since it is so stringent, the husband is trusted; but in the case of a wife under suspicion where [cohabitation] is a mere prohibition, since there is no stringent [penalty] for him, he is not trusted. But does R. Judah derive his view from a fortiori reasoning? He surely derives it from a Scriptural text; for it has been taught: Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest[12] — according to the Torah it is the husband who has to bring his wife; but said the Sages, They assign to him two disciples of the Sages lest he cohabit with her on the journey. R. Jose says: By a fortiori reasoning [it is deduced] that a husband is trusted with her. If a husband is trusted in the matter of his wife during menstruation where the penalty is excision, how much more so in the matter of his wife while under suspicion in connection with which there is a mere prohibition. [The Sages] replied to him, No; if you argue [that he may be trusted] in the case of his wife during menstruation to whom he will have a right [on her recovery], will you argue so in the case of his wife under suspicion when he may never have a right to her![13] It further states: Stolen waters are sweet, etc.![14] R. Judah says: According to the Torah it is the husband who has to bring his wife; as it is said: Then shall the man bring his wife![15] — At first he argued his view to [the Sages] by a fortiori reasoning; but when they refuted it, he then quoted the text to them. But R. Judah's opinion is the same as that of the first Tanna![16] — There is a point of difference between them, viz., [the continuation], 'But, said the Rabbis' etc.[17]

MISHNAH. THEY BRING HER UP TO THE GREAT COURT OF JUSTICE WHICH IS IN JERUSALEM, AND [THE JUDGES] SOLEMNLY CHARGE HER IN THE SAME WAY THAT THEY CHARGE WITNESSES IN CAPITAL CASES[18] AND SAY TO HER,' MY DAUGHTER, WINE DOES MUCH, FRIVOLITY DOES MUCH, YOUTH DOES MUCH, BAD NEIGHBOURS DO MUCH.[19] DO IT[20] FOR THE SAKE OF HIS GREAT NAME WHICH IS WRITTEN IN HOLINESS SO THAT IT MAY NOT BE OBLITERATED BY THE WATER.'[21] AND THEY RELATE TO HER MATTERS WHICH NEITHER SHE NOR ALL THE FAMILY OF HER FATHER'S HOUSE IS WORTHY TO HEAR.[22] — IF SHE SAID, 'I HAVE MISCONDUCTED MYSELF', SHE GIVES A QUITTANCE FOR HER MARRIAGE-SETTLEMENT[23] AND DEPARTS;[24] BUT IF SHE SAYS, 'I AM PURE', THEY BRING HER UP TO THE EAST GATE WHICH IS BY THE ENTRANCE OF NICANOR'S GATE[25] WHERE THEY GIVE SUSPECTED WOMEN THE WATER TO DRINK, PURIFY WOMEN AFTER CHILDBIRTH AND PURIFY LEPERS.[26] A PRIEST SEIZES HER GARMENTS[27] — IF THEY ARE RENT THEY ARE RENT, AND IF THEY BECOME UNSTITCHED THEY ARE UNSTITCHED UNTIL HE UNCOVERS HER BOSOM,[28] AND HE UNDOES HER HAIR. R. JUDAH SAYS: IF HER BOSOM WAS BEAUTIFUL HE DOES NOT UNCOVER IT, AND IF HER HAIR WAS BEAUTIFUL HE DOES NOT UNDO IT. — IF SHE WAS CLOTHED IN WHITE, HE CLOTHES HER IN BLACK. IF SHE WORE GOLDEN ORNAMENTS

---

(1) Which is deduced from Scripture as suspending the effect of the water; consequently there is still the objection that it causes pure women to be suspected.

(2) It is so rare for witnesses to be far away that no suspicion would be created on that ground.
(3) To accompany him and his wife on the journey.
(4) To Jerusalem where the ordeal takes place.
(5) That he will not cohabit; if he does, the ordeal is not held.
(6) V. Kid. 81a.
(7) In the event of the husband cohabiting with her.
(8) Should he wish to cohabit, so that the ordeal be not held.
(9) In this matter of cohabitation and witnesses are unnecessary.
(10) Kareth v. Glos. Lev. XX, 18. A husband may occupy the same room as his wife while she is in that condition and he is trusted not to cohabit.
(11) Without any penalty attached thereto, v. Yeb. 11b.
(12) Num. V, 15.
(13) If she is proved guilty, he must divorce her. Consequently the temptation is greater in the latter case.
(14) Prov. IX, 17.
(15) [R. Judah thus derives his ruling from a Scriptural text and not from a fortiori reasoning?]
(16) Quoted at the end of the last paragraph who cites Num. V, 15.
(17) With which R. Judah disagrees.
(18) V. Sanh. 37a.
(19) I.e., there may be some excuse for your behaviour.
(20) Confess if you are guilty, and so make the ordeal unnecessary which includes the use of the Divine Name.
(21) V. Num. V, 23.
(22) Instances of persons in Israel's history who confessed their guilt.
(23) I.e., she admits misconduct in writing and the forfeiture of the sum due to her under the marriage-settlement,
(24) After being formally divorced.
(25) Two gates of Corinthian bronze presented to the Temple by an Alexandrian named Nicanor. They were located between the Court of Israelites and the Court of women. V. Nazir (Sonc. ed.) p. 165, n. 11.
(26) I.e., the place where such persons, who are not allowed through uncleanness to enter the Temple-precincts, bring their purificatory offerings.
(27) At the neck.
(28) Lit., ‘heart’.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 7b

AND NECKLACES, EAR-RINGS AND FINGER-RINGS, THEY REMOVE THEM FROM HER IN ORDER TO MAKE HER REPULSIVE. AFTER THAT [THE PRIEST] TAKES A COMMON ROPE[1] AND BINDS IT OVER HER BREASTS.[2] WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK WITH THE EXCEPTION OF HER MALE AND FEMALE SLAVES, BECAUSE HER HEART IS MADE DEFIANT THROUGH THEM. ALL WOMEN ARE PERMITTED[3] TO LOOK UPON HER, AS IT IS SAID, THAT ALL WOMEN MAY BE TAUGHT NOT TO DO AFTER YOUR LEWDNESS.[4]

GEMARA. Whence is this?[5] — R. Hiyya b. Gamda said in the name of R. Jose b. Hanina: From the analogous use of the word ‘law’. It is written here, And the priest shall execute upon her all this law;[6] and elsewhere it is written: According to the tenor of the law which they shall teach thee.[7] As in this latter case it is [the Court of] seventy-one,[8] so also in the former it is [the Court of] seventy-one.

AND [THE JUDGES] SOLEMNLY CHARGE HER etc. I quote in contradiction: Just as they solemnly charge her not to drink,[9] so they solemnly charge her to drink, saying to her, ‘My daughter, if the matter is clear to thee that thou art pure, rely upon thy purity and drink; because the water of bitterness is only like dry powder which is placed upon living flesh. If there is a wound, it penetrates and goes through [the skin]; and if there is no wound, it has no effect.[10] — There is no contradiction; here [they charge her not to drink] before [the writing on] the scroll is blotted out,[11] and there [they charge her to drink] after it has been blotted out.[12]

AND SAY TO HER etc. Our Rabbis have taught: He tells her narratives and incidents which occurred in the early writings;[13] for instance, Which wise men have told and have not hid it [from their fathers],[14] namely Judah confessed and was not ashamed; what was his end? He inherited the life of the world to come. Reuben confessed and was not ashamed; what was his end? He inherited the world to come. And what was their reward? What was their reward [you ask]! It was as we have just mentioned. But [the meaning is], What was their reward in this world? Unto them alone the land was given, and no stranger passed among them.[15] It is quite right with Judah; we find that he confessed, for it is written: And Judah acknowledged them, and said: She is more righteous than I.[16] Whence, however, is it that Reuben confessed? — As R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Johanan: What means that which is written: Let Reuben live and not die; and this for Judah?[17] All the years that the Israelites were in the wilderness, Judah's bones[18] kept turning in his coffin until Moses arose and begged mercy for him. He said before Him, Lord of the Universe, who caused Reuben to confess? It was Judah,[19] [as it is stated], 'And this for Judah'; immediately [after Moses prayed], 'Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah', each limb entered its socket.[20] But [the angels] would not permit him to enter the heavenly Academy;[21] [so Moses prayed], 'And bring him in unto his people'. He was unable to discuss the theme which the Rabbis were then debating; [so Moses prayed], 'With his hands let him contend for himself.[22] He was still not able to secure a decision in accordance with the traditional practice; [so Moses prayed], 'Be an help against his adversaries'.[23] It is quite right that Judah confessed so that Tamar should not be burnt; but why did Reuben confess? Surely R. Shesheth has declared: Consider him shameless who [publicly] specifies his sins! — [Reuben confessed] so that his brothers should not be suspected [of his offence].

IF SHE SAID, 'I HAVE MISCONDUCTED MYSELF' etc. Is it to be concluded from this that a quittance is written out?[24] — Abaye said: Read [in our Mishnah]: [The document of the marriage-settlement] is torn. Raba replied to him, But the Mishnah mentions A QUITTANCE! But, said Raba, we deal here with places where they do not write a document for a marriage-settlement.[25]

BUT IF SHE SAYS, 'I AM PURE', THEY BRING HER UP TO THE EAST GATE. 'THEY BRING HER UP'?

---

(1) The Palestinian Gemara explains it as 'an Egyptian cord' which is used because she followed the immoral practices of Egypt. More probably it means a cord made of twisted strips of the bark of the palm-tree. It was the commonest form of rope and used here as a mark of contempt.

(2) To prevent her clothing from falling down.

(3) Interpreted in the Gemara to mean that they should as a duty look.

(4) Ezek. XXIII, 48.

(5) That the water must be administered by the great Court in Jerusalem.

(6) Num. V, 30.

(7) Deut. XVII, 11. The reference is here to the Supreme Court.

(8) V. Sanh. 14b and 86a.

(9) If guilty, but make confession.

(10) Quoted from Tosefta Sotah I, 6.

(11) Num. V, 23, so that the Divine Name may not be obliterated in vain.

(12) To encourage her to go through the ordeal if she is convinced of her innocence.

(13) The Pentateuch.

(14) I.e., they confessed, Job XV, 18. (E.V. 'Which wise men have told from their fathers and have not hid it').

(15) Ibid. 19.

(16) Gen. XXXVIII, 26.

(17) Deut. XXXIII, 6f.
(18) According to tradition, the bones of all Jacob's sons were carried out of Egypt.
(19) When he confessed, Reuben followed his example.
(20) Of the skeleton and ceased rolling about.
(21) Where the Torah is studied.
(22) May he be able to prevail in the debate.
(23) V. B.M. 86a.
(24) The question whether a quittance is given or the document of the marriage-settlement torn is discussed in B.B. 170b.
(25) This was sometimes not done because there was an established rule about the amount due to a wife from her husband, v. B.M. (Sonc. ed.) p. 107, n. 4.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 8a

But she is already there![1] — They lead her up[2] and lead her down, for the purpose of wearying her.[3] For it has been taught: R. Simeon b. Eleazar says: The Court causes the witnesses to be taken from place to place that their mind may become confused and they retract [their evidence, if false].[4]

WHERE THEY GIVE SUSPECTED WOMEN THE WATER TO DRINK etc. This is quite right in the case of suspected women; because it is written: And the priest shall set the woman before the Lord.[5] Likewise is it with lepers; because it is written: And the priest that cleanseth him shall set the man . . . . before the Lord.[6] But why a woman after childbirth? Is it to say because they come to stand by their offerings; for it has been taught: A person's offering is not sacrificed until he stands by it? If so, it should also apply to men and women with a running issue![7] — It does indeed also apply to them, and the Tanna [in the Mishnah] only specifies one of them.[8] Our Rabbis have taught: They do not give two suspected women the water to drink at the same time, so that the heart of one should not become defiant because of the other.[9] R. Judah says: It is not from this reason, but Scripture declares, [The priest shall cause] her [to swear][10] — her alone. And for the first Tanna it is likewise written 'her'![11] — The first Tanna is R. Simeon who expounds the reason of Scriptural texts[12] and [here] he states the reason: What is the meaning of 'her'? Her alone, so that the heart of one should not become defiant because of the other. What difference is there, then, between them? — The difference between them is the case of a woman who is trembling.[13] But even if [a woman] is trembling, may we give her the water to drink [simultaneously with another woman] when, behold, we may not perform precepts in bundles?[14] For we have learnt: They do not give two suspected women the water to drink at the same time, nor purify two lepers at the same time, nor bore the ears of two slaves at the same time,[15] nor break the necks of two calves at the same time,[16] because we may not perform precepts in bundles! — Abaye said, but others declare it was R. Kahana: There is no contradiction; the latter case referring to one priest,[17] the other to two priests.

A PRIEST SEIZES HER GARMENTS. Our Rabbis have taught: And let the hair of the woman's head go loose.[18] I only have here mention of her head; whence is it derived that it applies to her body?[19] The text states: 'the woman's'.[20] If so, what is the object of the text declaring, 'And let the hair of the head go loose'? It teaches that the priest undoes her hair.[21]

R. JUDAH SAYS, IF HER BOSOM WAS BEAUTIFUL etc. Is this to say that R. Judah is afraid of impure thoughts being aroused and the Rabbis do not fear this? Behold we have heard the opposite opinion of them; for it has been taught: In the case of a man [who is to be stoned] they cover him with one piece of cloth in front, and in the case of a woman with two pieces, one in front and one behind, because the whole of her is considered nudity. This is the statement of R. Judah; but the Sages say: A man is stoned naked but a woman is not stoned naked![22] — Rabbah answered: What is the reason here?[23] Lest she go forth from the Court innocent, and the priestly novitiates become inflamed through her, whereas in the other case she is stoned. Should you reply that it may cause them to be inflamed by another woman, Raba[24] declared: We have learnt a tradition that the evil impulse only bears sway over what a person's eyes see. Raba asked: Is it, then, that R. Judah contradicts himself and the Rabbis do not contradict themselves? But, said Raba, R. Judah does not contradict himself as we have just explained[25]

---

(1) V. Mishnah p. 30.

(2) The Temple-mount to be charged by the judges, then lead her to the bottom, and finally up again.

(3) So that she may be more disposed to confess.

(4) V. Sanh. 32b.

(5) Num. V, 18.

(6) Lev. XIV, 11.

(7) Ibid. XV, 14, 29.

(8) Who do not enter the Temple precincts owing to a condition of defilement, and consequently stand at Nicanor's gate.

(9) One may be guilty and the other not. The first may refuse to confess because the other does not confess.

(10) Num. V, 19. V. Ned. 73a.

(11) So why does he give his own reason?

(12) V. B.M. 115a.

(13) And therefore we cannot say she is defiant, and on the view of the first Tanna, as explained, she might be submitted to the ordeal at the same time with another suspected woman.

(14) Each must have separate attention.

(15) Ex. XXI, 6.

(16) Deut. XXI, 1 ff.

(17) Administering the water to two women, when it would be performing a precept in bundles.

(18) Num. V, 18.

(19) That be uncovers her bosom, as stated in the Mishnah.

(20) And not merely ‘the hair of her head’.

(21) And unravels the locks.

(22) V. Sanh. 45a.

(23) That R. Judah is against the exposure of her bosom.

(24) In the parallel passage in Sanh. 45a the name is Rabbah.

(25) The case of a suspected woman is not analogous to that of a woman who is to be stoned.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 8b

, and the Rabbis likewise do not contradict themselves. What is the reason here?[1] Because [it is written], That all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.[2] In the other case [of stoning], however, there cannot be a severer warning than that.[3] Should you argue, Let both be inflicted upon her,[4] R. Nahman said in the name of Rabbah b. Abbuha: The text states: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself[5] — choose for him [or her] a light death. Is this to say that Mishnaic teachers disagree [with respect to this teaching] of R. Nahman?[6] — No; everybody is in agreement with R. Nahman's teaching, but they differ here on the following point: [the Rabbis] hold that disgrace is worse than physical pain, and [R. Judah] holds that physical pain is worse than disgrace.[7] IF SHE WAS CLOTHED IN WHITE etc. It has been taught: If black garments became her, they clothe her in mean garments.

IF SHE WORE GOLDEN ORNAMENTS etc. This is obvious. Since she has to be made repulsive how much more is it necessary to do this![8] — What you might have thought is that with these ornaments upon her, the disgrace would be greater; as the proverb declares, ‘Stripped naked, yet wearing shoes’. Therefore we are taught [that all ornaments must be removed].

AFTER THAT [THE PRIEST] TAKES A COMMON ROPE etc. R. Abba asked R. Huna, Does [the absence of] a common rope invalidate the ceremony of a suspected woman? If the purpose is that her garments should not slip down from her, then a small belt would also suffice; or is it perhaps as the Master said: 'She girded herself with a belt [to adorn herself] for him,[9] therefore the priest takes a common rope and binds it over her breasts', and consequently [its absence] does invalidate the ceremony? — He replied: You have [the reason stated:] After that he takes a common rope and binds it over her breast so that her garments should not slip down from her.

WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK etc. This is self-contradictory! You say: WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK; consequently it makes no difference whether they be men or women. Then it is taught: ALL WOMEN ARE PERMITTED TO LOOK UPON HER — hence women are [permitted] but men are not! — Abaye answered: Explain it[10] as referring to women. Raba said to him, But the Mishnah states: WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK! But, said Raba, [the meaning is:] WHOEVER WISHES TO LOOK UPON HER COMES TO LOOK, it makes no difference whether they be men or women; but women are obliged[11] to look upon her, as it is said: 'That all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.' MISHNAH. IN THE MEASURE WITH WHICH A MAN MEASURES IT IS METED OUT TO HIM. SHE ADORNED HERSELF FOR A TRANSGRESSION; THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, MADE HER REPULSIVE. SHE EXPOSED HERSELF FOR A TRANSGRESSION; THE HOLY ONE, BLESSED BE HE, HELD HER UP FOR EXPOSURE. SHE BEGAN THE TRANSGRESSION WITH THE THIGH AND AFTERWARDS WITH THE WOMB; THEREFORE SHE IS PUNISHED FIRST IN THE THIGH AND AFTERWARDS IN THE WOMB,[12] NOR DOES ALL THE BODY ESCAPE.GEMARA. R. Joseph said: Although the measure[13] has ceased, [the principle] IN THE MEASURE has not ceased.[14] For R. Joseph said, and similarly taught R. Hiyya: From the day the Temple was destroyed, although the Sanhedrin ceased to function, the four modes of execution[15] did not cease. But they did cease! — [The meaning is:] The judgment[16] of the four modes of execution did not cease. He who would have been condemned to stoning either falls from a roof [and dies] or a wild beast tramples him [to death]. He who would have been condemned to burning either falls into a fire or a serpent stings him. He who would have been condemned to decapitation is either handed over to the [Gentile] Government[17] or robbers attack him. He who would have been condemned to strangulation either drowns in a river or dies of a quinsy.[18]

It has been taught: Rabbi[19] used to say: Whence is it that in the measure with which a man measures it is meted out to him? As it is said: By measure in sending her away thou dost contend with her.[20] I have here only a se'ah;[21] whence is it to include a trikab and half a trikab, a kab and half a kab, a quarter, an eighth, a sixteenth and a thirtysecond part of a kab? There is a text to state, For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult.[22] And whence is it that every perutah[23] reckons together into a great sum? There is a text to state, Laying one thing to another to find out the account.[24] Thus we find in the case of a suspected woman that in the measure with which she measured it was meted out to her. She stood at the entrance of her house to display herself to the man; therefore a priest sets her by the Nicanor-gate and displays her disgrace to all. She wound a beautiful scarf about her head for him; therefore a priest removes her headgear and places it under her feet. She beautified her face for him; therefore

---

(1) That the Rabbis do not scruple to disgrace the suspected woman, whereas in the case of the woman who is stoned they do.

(2) Ezek. XXIII, 48.

(3) Viz., the stoning itself; therefore the Rabbis are against the exposure of the body.

(4) Disgrace as well as death by stoning.

(5) Lev. XIX, 18.

(6) That when R. Judah says a woman is stoned naked except for a loin-cloth in front and behind he evidences disagreement with R. Nahman.

(7) Therefore the former believe that a woman about to die would prefer to be clothed although it may involve a more protracted death, while R. Judah takes the opposite view, v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) pp. 294-5.

(8) Why, then, does the Mishnah mention it?
(9) Her paramour; v. infra p. 38.
(10) The phrase, WHOEVER WISHES etc.
(11) The word מותרות, 'are permitted', is apparently derived here from the root תרה 'to warn'; hence 'are warned, obliged'.
(12) V. Num. V, 21 f.
(13) Meted out by a Jewish Court of Justice.
(14) Referring to Divine retribution.
(15) V. Sanh. 90a.
(16) Through Divine intervention.
(17) Which executes him by the sword.
(18) V. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 236.
(19) [The parallel passage in Sanh. 100a has 'R. Meir'].
(20) Isa. XXVII, 8.
(21) The word for by measure is connected by Rabbi with se'ah, a dry measure of which a trikab (equals three kab) is a half. Se'ah is taken as representing a very serious offence.
(22) Isa. IX, 4, E.V. 5. The Hebrew words for 'armour' סאון and 'armed man' סואן are likewise connected with se'ah.
(23) A small coin, here representing a minor offence which is not overlooked for punishment.
(24) Eccl. VII, 27.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 9a

her face is made to turn green in colour.[1] She painted her eyes for him; therefore her eyes protrude. She plaited her hair for him; therefore a priest undoes her hair. She signalled to him with her finger; therefore her fingernails fall off. She girded herself with a belt for him; therefore a priest takes a common rope and ties it above her breasts. She thrust her thigh towards him; therefore her thigh falls. She received him upon her body; therefore her womb swells. She gave him the world's dainties to eat; therefore her offering consisted of animal's fodder.[2] She gave him costly wine to drink in costly goblets; therefore a priest gives her water of bitterness to drink in a potsherd. She acted in secret; and He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High[3] directed His face against her [to punish her], as it is said: The eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying: No eye shall see me.[4] Another version is: She acted in secret; the All-present proclaims it in public, as it is said: Though his hatred cover itself with guile, his wickedness shall be openly shewed before the congregation.[5]

Since [the teaching that even the slightest sin is punished] is derived from 'Laying one thing to another to find out the account', why do I require 'For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult'? — That [the punishment is] according to measure. But since that is derived from 'For all the armour of the armed man in the tumult', why do I require 'By measure in sending her away thou dost contend with her'? — It is in accord with the teaching of R. Hinena b. Papa; for R. Hinena b. Papa said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a nation until the time of its banishment into exile, as it is said: 'By measure in sending her away, etc'. But it is not so; for Raba has said: Why are three cups mentioned in connection with Egypt?[6] One which she drank in the days of Moses; one which she drank in the days of Pharaoh-Necho;[7] and one which she is destined to drink with her allies! Should you reply that they passed away, and these are different [Egyptians],[8] behold it has been taught: R. Judah said: Minyamin, an Egyptian proselyte, was a colleague of mine among the disciples of R. Akiba; and Minyamin, the Egyptian proselyte, told me: 'I am an Egyptian of the first generation,[9] and I married an Egyptian woman of the first generation; I will marry my son to an Egyptian woman of the second generation so that my grandson may be permitted to enter the Community'![10] — But if the above statement was made it was made as follows: R. Hinena b. Papa said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a king until the time of his banishment into exile, as it is said: 'By measure in sending her away, etc'. Amemar applied this teaching of R. Hinena b. Papa to the following: What means the text: For I the Lord change not; therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed'?[11] 'I the Lord change not' — I have not smitten a people and repeated it;[12] 'therefore ye, O sons of Jacob, are not consumed' — that is what is written: I will spend Mine arrows upon them[13] — Mine arrows will be spent, but [the sons of Jacob] will not cease.R. Hamuna said: The Holy One, blessed be He, does not exact punishment of a man until his measure [of guilt] is filled; as it is said: 'In the fullness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits, etc'.[14] R. Hinena b. Papa expounded: What means the text: Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous; praise is comely for the upright?[15] Read not praise is na'wah ['comely'], but praise is neweh ['a habitation']. This alludes to Moses and David over whose works [in erecting a Sanctuary] their enemies had no power.[16] Of [the Temple planned by] David, it is written: Her gates are sunk in the ground.[17] With regard to Moses the Master said: After the first Temple was erected, the Tent of Meeting was stored away, its boards, hooks, bars, pillars and sockets. Where [were they stored]? — R. Hisda said in the name of Abimi: Beneath the crypts of the Temple.

Our Rabbis have taught: The suspected woman[18] set her eyes on one who was not proper for her; what she sought was not given to her[19] and what she possessed was taken from her;[20] because whoever sets his eyes on that which is not his is not granted what he seeks and what he possesses is taken from him.

---

(1) This, and the protruding of the eyes, are the effect of drinking the water; v. Mishnah 20a.

(2) Barley meal, Num. V, 15.

(3) Ps. XCI, I.

(4) Job XXIV, 15. No eye etc. is explained in the sense, God will not observe me.

(5) Prov. XXVI, 26.

(6) The word 'cup' occurs three times in Gen. XL, 11, and is a symbol of calamity.

(7) When Egypt was defeated by Babylon (Jer. XLVI. 2). The third 'cup' refers to the Messianic era. The conclusion is, therefore, that punishment is not exacted of a nation only at the time of banishment.

(8) The original Egyptians had disappeared and their land was inhabited by a different race.

(9) That means, he had been personally converted to Judaism and was not the son of a proselyte.

(10) V. Deut. XXIII, 9, E.V. 8. This proves that the original Egyptians are considered as still extant.

(11) Mal. III, 6.

(12) The Hebrew word for 'change' שנה also means 'repeat'.

(13) Deut. XXXII, 23.

(14) Job XX, 22.

(15) Ps. XXXIII, 1.

(16) I.e.,the enemies of Israel did not profit by any of the materials when the Temple was destroyed.

(17) Lam. II, 9.

(18) Who is guilty.

(19) She is not allowed to marry her lover.

(20) She dies if she drinks the water, and is divorced with loss of her settlement if she confesses.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 9b

We thus find it with the primeval serpent [in the Garden of Eden] which set its eyes on that which was not proper for it; what it sought was not granted to it and what it possessed was taken from it. The Holy One, blessed be He, said: I declared: Let it be king over every animal and beast; but now, Cursed art thou above all cattle and above every beast of the field.[1] I declared, let it walk with an erect posture; but now it shall go upon its belly. I declared: Let its food be the same as that of man; but now it shall eat dust. It said: I will kill Adam and marry Eve; but now, I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed.[2] Similarly do we find it with Cain, Korah, Balaam, Doeg, Ahitophel, Gehazi, Absalom, Adonijah, Uzziah and Haman, who set their eyes upon that which was not proper for them; what they sought was not granted to them and what they possessed was taken from them.

SHE BEGAN THE TRANSGRESSION WITH THE THIGH etc. Whence is this? Shall I say because it is written: When the Lord doth make thy thigh to fall away and thy belly to swell?[3] But it is likewise written: Her belly shall swell and her thigh shall fall away![4] — Abaye said: When [the priest] utters the curse, he first curses the thigh and then curses the belly; but when the water produces its effect it does so in its normal order, viz., the belly first and then the thigh. But also in connection with the curse, it is written: Make thy belly to swell and thy thigh to fall away![5] — That is what the priest informs her, viz., that it affects her belly first and then the thigh so as not to discredit the water of bitterness.[6]

MISHNAH. SAMSON WENT AFTER [THE DESIRE OF] HIS EYES; THEREFORE THE PHILISTINES PUT OUT HIS EYES, AS IT IS SAID, AND THE PHILISTINES LAID HOLD ON HIM, AND PUT OUT HIS EYES.[7] ABSALOM GLORIED IN HIS HAIR; THEREFORE HE WAS HANGED BY HIS HAIR. AND BECAUSE HE COHABITED WITH THE TEN CONCUBINES OF HIS FATHER, THEREFORE HE WAS STABBED WITH TEN LANCES, AS IT IS SAID, AND TEN YOUNG MEN THAT BARE JOAB'S ARMOUR COMPASSED ABOUT.[8] AND BECAUSE HE STOLE THREE HEARTS, THE HEART OF HIS FATHER, THE HEART OF THE COURT OF JUSTICE, AND THE HEART OF ISRAEL, AS IT IS SAID, SO ABSALOM STOLE THE HEARTS OF THE MEN OF ISRAEL,[9] THEREFORE THREE DARTS WERE THRUST THROUGH HIM, AS IT IS SAID, AND HE TOOK THREE DARTS IN HIS HAND, AND THRUST THEM THROUGH THE HEART OF ABSALOM.[10] — IT[11] IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD. MIRIAM WAITED A SHORT WHILE FOR MOSES, AS IT IS SAID, AND HIS SISTER STOOD AFAR OFF;[12] THEREFORE ISRAEL WAS DELAYED FOR HER SEVEN DAYS IN THE WILDERNESS, AS IT IS SAID, AND THE PEOPLE JOURNEYED NOT TILL MIRIAM WAS BROUGHT IN AGAIN.[13] JOSEPH EARNED MERIT BY BURYING HIS FATHER AND THERE WAS NONE AMONG HIS BROTHERS GREATER THAN HE; AS IT IS SAID, AND JOSEPH WENT UP TO BURY HIS FATHER, ETC.,[14] AND THERE WENT UP WITH HIM BOTH CHARIOTS AND HORSEMEN.[15] WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN JOSEPH SINCE NONE OTHER THAN MOSES OCCUPIED HIMSELF WITH HIS BURIAL? MOSES EARNED MERIT THROUGH THE BONES OF JOSEPH AND THERE WAS NONE IN ISRAEL GREATER THAN HE, AS IT IS SAID, AND MOSES TOOK THE BONES OF JOSEPH WITH HIM.[16] WHOM HAVE WE GREATER THAN MOSES SINCE NONE OTHER THAN THE OMNIPRESENT OCCUPIED HIMSELF [WITH HIS BURIAL], AS IT IS SAID, AND HE BURIED HIM IN THE VALLEY?[17] NOT ONLY CONCERNING MOSES DID THEY SAY THIS, BUT CONCERNING ALL THE RIGHTEOUS, AS IT IS SAID, AND THY RIGHTEOUSNESS SHALL GO BEFORE THEE, THE GLORY OF THE LORD SHALL BE THY REARWARD.[18]

GEMARA. Our Rabbis have taught: Samson rebelled [against God] through his eyes, as it is said: And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me, because she is pleasing in my eyes;[19] therefore the Philistines put out his eyes, as it is said: And the Philistines laid hold on him and put out his eyes.[20] But it is not so; for behold it is written: But his father and his mother knew not that it was of the Lord![21] — When he went [to choose a wife] he nevertheless followed his own inclinations.[22] It has been taught: Rabbi says: The beginning of his [Samson's] degeneration occurred in Gaza; therefore he received his punishment in Gaza. ‘The beginning of his [Samson's] degeneration was in Gaza’, as it is written: And Samson went to Gaza, and saw there an harlot etc.;[23] ‘therefore he received his punishment in Gaza,’ as it is written: And they brought him down to Gaza.[24] But behold it is written: And Samson went down to Timnah![25] — Nevertheless the beginning of his degeneration occurred in Gaza.[26]

And it came to pass afterward, that he loved a woman in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.[27] It has been taught: Rabbi says: If her name had not been called Delilah, she was fit that it should be so called. She weakened[28] his strength, she weakened his heart, she weakened his actions. 'She weakened his strength', as it is written: And his strength went from him.[29] 'She weakened his heart', as it is written: And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart.[30] 'She weakened his actions' since the Shechinah departed from him, as it is written: But he wist not that the Lord had departed from him.[31]

'And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart'. How did she know this?[32] R. Hanin said in the name of Rab: Words of truth are recognisable. Abaye said: She knew that this righteous man would not utter the Divine Name in vain; when he exclaimed: I have been a Nazirite unto God,[33] she said: Now he has certainly spoken the truth.

And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him.[34] What means 'and urged him'? R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: At the time of the consummation, she detached herself from him.

Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and drink no wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing.[35] What means 'any unclean thing'? Furthermore, had she [Samson's mother] up to then eaten unclean things? R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: [She had hitherto eaten] things forbidden to a Nazirite.

But God clave the hollow place that is in Lehi.[36] R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: He [Samson] lusted for what was unclean;[37] therefore his life was made dependent upon an unclean thing.[38]

And the spirit of the Lord began, etc.[39] R. Hama b. Hanina said: Jacob's prophecy became fulfilled, as it is written: Dan shall be a serpent in the way.[40]

To move him in Mahaneh-Dan.[41] R. Isaac of the School of R. Ammi said: This teaches that the Shechinah kept ringing in front of him like a bell;[42] it is written here to move him [lefa'amo] in Mahaneh-Dan, and it is written elsewhere A golden bell [pa'amon] and a pomegranate.[43] Between Zorah and Eshtaol[44] — R. Assi said: Zorah and Eshtaol are two great mountains, and Samson uprooted them and ground one against the other.

And he shall begin to save Israel.[45] R. Hama b. Hanina said:

---

(1) Gen. III, 14.

(2) Ibid. 15.

(3) Num. V, 21. 'Thigh' is mentioned first.

(4) Ibid. 27. Here 'thigh' is mentioned second.

(5) Ibid. 22.

(6) If the effects were produced in the reverse order.

(7) Judg. XVI, 21.

(8) And slew Absalom, II Sam. XVIII, 15.

(9) Ibid. XV, 6.

(10) Ibid. XVIII, 14.

(11) The principle of measure for measure.

(12) Ex. II, 4.

(13) Num. XII, 15.

(14) Gen. L, 7.

(15) Ibid. 9.

(16) Ex. XIII, 19.
(17) Deut. XXXIV, 6.
(18) Isa. LVIII, 8. The verb translated ‘shall be thy rearward’ seems to be taken here in its literal sense, shall gather thee sc. to thy fathers.
(19) Judg. XIV, 3.
(20) Ibid. XVI, 21.
(21) Ibid. XIV, 4.
(22) And not the will of God.
(23) Judg. XVI, I.
(24) Ibid. 21.
(25) Ibid. XIV, 1.
(26) He lawfully married the woman in Timnah but not the woman in Gaza.
(27) Ibid. XVI, 4.
(28) Dildelah, a play on her name.
(29) Ibid. 19.
(30) Ibid. 18.
(31) Ibid. 20.
(32) He had previously told her several falsehoods; so how did she know that he had now spoken the truth?
(33) Ibid. 17.
(34) Ibid. 16.
(35) Ibid. XIII, 4.
(36) Judg. XV, 19.
(37) Philistine women.
(38) The ass's jawbone (lehi) out of which he drank in his thirst.
(39) Ibid. XIII, 25.
(40) Gen. XLIX, 17. This prophecy alluded to Samson who was of the tribe of Dan.
(41) The word in Judg. XIII, 25 for ‘move’ is commonly used of striking a bell.
(42) To direct him where he was to go.
(43) Ex. XXVIII, 34.
(44) Judg. XIII, 25.
(45) Ibid. 5. The word ‘begin’ (יחל) is connected with a similar root (חלל) meaning become void.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 10a

The oath of Abimelech became void, as it is written: That thou wilt not deal falsely with me, nor with my son, nor with my son's son.[1]

And the child grew, and the Lord blessed him.[2] Wherewith did He bless him? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: With his physique which was like that of other men but his manly strength was like a fast-flowing stream.[3]

And Samson called unto the Lord, and said: O Lord God, remember me, I pray Thee and strengthen me, I pray Thee, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.[4] Rab said: Samson spoke before the Holy One, blessed be He, Sovereign of the Universe, Remember on my behalf the twenty[5] years I judged Israel, and never did I order anyone to carry my staff from one place to another.

And Samson went and caught three hundred foxes.[6] Why just foxes? — R. Aibu b. Nagari said in the name of R. Hiyya b. Abba: Samson declared: Let [the animal] come which turns backward[7] and exact punishment of the Philistines who went back on their oath.[8]

It has been taught: R. Simeon the Pious said: The width between Samson's shoulders was sixty cubits, as it is said: And Samson lay till midnight, and arose at midnight and laid hold of the doors of the gate of the city, and the two posts, and plucked them up, bar and all, and put them upon his shoulders;[9] and there is a tradition that the gates of Gaza were not less than sixty cubits [in width]. And he did grind in the prison house.[10]

R. Johanan said: 'Grind' means nothing else than [sexual] transgression; and thus it is stated: Then let my wife grind unto another.[11] It teaches that everyone brought his wife to him to the prison that she might bear a child by him [who would be as strong as he was]. R. Papa said: That is what the proverb tells, 'Before the wine-drinker [set] wine, before a ploughman a basket of roots.'

R. Johanan also said: Whoever is faithless, his wife is faithless to him; as it is said: If mine heart have been enticed unto a woman, and I have laid wait at my neighbour's door[12] and it continues, Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her. That is what the proverb tells, 'He among the full-grown pumpkins and his wife among the young ones'.

R. Johanan also said: Samson judged Israel in the same manner as their Father in heaven; as it is said: Dan shall judge his people as One.[13] R. Johanan also said: Samson was called by the name of the Holy One, blessed be He; as it is said: For the Lord God is a sun and a shield.[14] According to this argument, [his name] may not be erased![15] — The intention is that [his name] was typical of the name of the Holy One, blessed be He;[16] as the Holy One, blessed be He, shields the whole world, so Samson shielded Israel during his generation.

R. Johanan also said: Balaam was lame in one leg, as it is said: And he went shefi;[17] Samson was lame in both legs, as it is said: An adder in the path.[18]

Our Rabbis have taught: Five were created after the likeness of Him Who is above, and all of them incurred punishment on account of [the feature which distinguished] them: Samson in his strength, Saul in his neck,[19] Absalom in his hair,[20] Zedekiah in his eyes, and Asa in his feet. 'Samson [was punished] in his strength', as it is written: And his strength went from him.[21] 'Saul [was punished] in his neck', as it is written: Saul took his sword and fell upon it.[22] 'Absalom [was punished] in his hair',as we shall have occasion to explain later. Zedekiah [was punished] in his eyes, as it is written: They put out the eyes of Zedekiah.[23] Asa [was punished] in his feet, as it is written: But in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet;[24] and Rab Judah said in the name of Rab, Podagra [gout] attacked him.

Mar Zutra, son of R. Nahman, asked R. Nahman, What is Podagra like? — He answered: Like a needle in living flesh. How did he know this? — Some say he suffered from it himself; others say that he heard it from his teacher;[25] and others declare, The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will shew them His covenant.[26]

Raba expounded: Why was Asa punished? Because he imposed forced labour[27] upon the disciples of the Sages, as it is said: Then King Asa made a proclamation unto all Judah; none was exempted.[28] What means 'none was exempted'? — Rab Judah said in the name of Rab: Even the bridegroom from his chamber and the bride from her canopy.

It is written: And Samson went down to Timnah,[29] and it is written: Behold, thy father-in-law goeth up to Timnah![30] R. Eleazar said: Since in the case of Samson he was disgraced there, it is written in connection with it 'went down;' but in the case of Judah, since he was exalted in it,[31] there is written in connection with it 'goeth up'. R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: There are two places named Timnah; one [was reached] by going down and the other by going up. R. Papa said: There is only one place named Timnah; who came to it from one direction had to descend and from another direction had to ascend, as, e.g., Wardina, Be Bari and the market-place of Neresh.[32]

She sat in the gate of Enaim.[33] R. Alexander said: It teaches that she [Tamar] went and sat at the entrance [of the hospice] of our father Abraham, to see which place all eyes [‘enaim] look. R. Hanin said in the name of Rab: It is a place named Enaim, as it states: Tappuah and Enam.[34] R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: [It is so called] because she gave eyes to her words.[35] When [Judah] solicited her, he asked her, ‘Art thou perhaps a Gentile?’ She replied: ‘I am a proselyte’. ‘Art thou perhaps a married woman?’ She replied: ‘I am unmarried’. ‘Perhaps thy father has accepted on thy behalf betrothals?’[36] She replied: ‘I am an orphan’. ‘Perhaps thou art unclean?’ She replied: ‘I am clean’.

And he planted a tamarisk tree in Beer-sheba.[37] Resh Lakish said: It teaches that he [Abraham] made an orchard and planted in it all kinds of choice fruits. R. Judah and R. Nehemiah [differ in this matter]; one said that it was an orchard and the other that it was a hospice. It is right according to him who said that it was an orchard, since it is written ‘and he planted’; but according to him who said that it was a hospice, what means ‘and he planted?’ — It is similarly written: And he shall plant the tents of his palace, etc.[38]

And he called there on the name of the Lord, the Everlasting God.[39] Resh Lakish said: Read not ‘and he called’

---

(1) Gen. XXI, 23. The alliance between the Israelites and Philistines ended in the time of Samson.

(2) Judg. XIII, 24.

(3) The point underlying this piece of Rabbinic hyperbole is that it was through Samson's inordinate passion for Philistine women that he came in contact with their people and brought about Israel's release from their power.

(4) Ibid. XVI, 28.

(5) Some edd. read ‘twenty-two’ in error; v. ibid. 31.

(6) Judg. XV, 4.

(7) When a fox is hunted, it does not run ahead but in a roundabout course.

(8) Between Isaac and Abimelech; v. supra.

(9) Ibid. XVI, 3.

(10) Ibid. 21.

(11) Job XXXI, 10.

(12) Ibid. 9.

(13) Gen. XLIX, 16, the One being God.

(14) Ps. LXXXIV, 12, E.V.11 The word for sun is shemesh which is the basis of Samson's name, Shimshon.

(15) As it is forbidden to erase the Divine Name.

(16) The word sun is not God's Name but a simile.

(17) Num. XXIII, 3. (E.V. ‘ To a bare height’). The Hebrew word is explained as ‘lame’.

(18) Gen. XLIX, 17. The word for adder is shefifon which looks like a duplicated form of shefi from the root שוף , ‘to dislocate’.

(19) Cf. I Sam. X, 23.

(20) Cf. II Sam. XIV, 26. There is no Biblical reference in connection with Zedekiah and Asa.

(21) Judg. XVI, 19.

(22) I Sam. XXXI, 4. The sword passed through his neck.

(23) II Kings XXV, 7.

(24) I Kings XV, 23.

(25) His teacher was a Rabbi named Samuel who was a physician.

(26) Ps. XXV, 14. The information was revealed to him by God.

(27) In the public service.

(28) I Kings XV, 22.

(29) Judg. XIV. I.

(30) Gen. XXXVIII, 13. Why does one text say ‘down’ and the other ‘goeth up’?

(31) Perez was born there from whom David was descended.

(32) Towns in Babylonia situated on mountain slopes on the east bank of the Euphrates, v. Obermeyer, op. cit., p. 309.
(33) Gen. XXXVIII. 14.
(34) Josh. XV, 34. Enam is identified with Enaim.
(35) Tamar gave convincing replies to Judah's questions as to whether she was permitted to him.
(36) [And thou thus belongest to another man.]
(37) Gen. XXI, 33. The explanation 'hospice' is obtained by taking each letter of the word אשל 'tamarisk-tree', and making them the initials of three Hebrew words meaning 'eating, drinking, lodging'.
(38) Dan. XI, 45.
(39) Gen. l.c.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 10b

but 'and he made to call', thereby teaching that our father Abraham caused the name of the Holy One, blessed be He, to be uttered by the mouth of every passer-by. How was this? After [travellers] had eaten and drunk, they stood up to bless him; but, said he to them, 'Did you eat of mine? You ate of that which belongs to the God of the Universe. Thank, praise and bless Him who spake and the world came into being'.

When Judah saw her, he thought her to be an harlot; for she had covered her face.[1] Because she had covered her face he thought her to be an harlot! — R. Eleazar said: She had covered her face in her fatherin-law's house;[2] for R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: Every daughter-in-law who is modest in her father-in-law's house merits that kings and prophets should issue from her. Whence is this? From Tamar. Prophets [issued from her], as it is written: The vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz,[3] and kings [issued from her] through David; and R. Levi has said: This is a tradition in our possession from our fathers that Amoz and Amaziah[4] were brothers.

When she was brought forth.[5] Instead of muzeth the verb should have been mithwazzeth![6] R. Eleazar said: [The verb in the text implies] that after her proofs[7] were found, Samael[8] came and removed them, and Gabriel[9] came and restored them. That is what is written: For the Chief Musician, the silent dove of them that are afar off. Of David, Michtam[10] — R. Johanan said: At the time when her proofs were removed, she became like a silent dove. 'Of David', 'Michtam' — [that means] there issued from her David who was meek [mach] and perfect [tam] to all. Another explanation of 'Michtam' is: his wound [makkah][11] was whole [tammah], since he was born already circumcised. Another explanation of 'Michtam' is: just as in his youth [before he became king] he made himself small in the presence of anyone greater than himself to study Torah, so was he the same in his greatness.[12]

She sent to her father-in-law, saying: By the man whose these are, am I with child.[13] She ought to have told [the messenger] plainly![14] — R. Zutra b. Tobiah said in the name of Rab — another version is, R. Hama b. Bizna said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious; and still another version is, R. Johanan said in the name of R. Simeon b. Yohai: Better for a man to cast himself into a fiery furnace rather than shame his fellow in public. Whence is this? From Tamar.[15]

Discern, I pray thee.[16] R. Hama b. Hanina said: With the word 'discern' [Judah] made an announcement to his father, and with the word 'discern' an announcement was made to him. With the word 'discern' he made an announcement — Discern now whether it be thy son's coat or not;[17] and with the word 'discern' an announcement was made to him — Discern, I pray thee, whose are these.[16] The word 'na' ['I pray thee'] is nothing else than an expression of request. She said to him, 'I beg of thee, discern the face of thy Creator and hide not thine eyes from me'.[18]

And Judah acknowledged them, and said: She is more righteous than I.[19] That is what R. Hanin b. Bizna said in the name of R. Simeon the Pious: Joseph who sanctified the heavenly Name in private[20] merited that one letter should be added to him from the Name of the Holy One, blessed be He, as it is written: He appointed it in Joseph for a testimony.[21] Judah, however, who sanctified the heavenly Name in public merited that the whole of his name should be called after the Name of the Holy One, blessed be He.[22] When he confessed and said: She is more righteous than I, a Bath Kol[23] issued forth and proclaimed, 'Thou didst rescue Tamar and her two sons from the fire. By thy life, I will rescue through thy merit three of thy descendants from the fire'. Who are they? Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah.[24] 'She is more righteous than I' — how did he know this?[25] A Bath Kol issued forth and proclaimed, 'From Me came forth secrets.'[26]

And he knew her again no more.[27] Samuel the elder, father-in-law of R. Samuel b. Ammi said in the name of R. Samuel b. Ammi: Having once known her,[28] he did not separate from her again. It is written here, 'And he knew her again no more [Yasaf], and elsewhere it is written: With a great voice increasing [Yasaf].[29]

ABSALOM GLORIED IN HIS HAIR etc. Our Rabbis have taught: Absalom rebelled [against his father] through his hair, as it is said: There was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty . . . And when he polled his head, now it was at every year's end that he polled it because the hair was heavy on him therefore he polled it, he weighed the hair of his head at two hundred shekels, after the king's weight.[30] It has been taught that [the king's weight] was the weight with which the men of Tiberias and Sepphoris weigh. Therefore he was hanged by his hair, as it is said: And Absalom chanced to meet the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon his mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth,; and the mule that was under him went on.[31] He took a sword and wished to cut himself loose;[32] but it was taught in the School of R. Ishmael, At that moment Sheol was split asunder beneath him.[33]

And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept; and as he went, thus he said: O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son.[34] And the king covered his face, and the king cried with a loud voice, O my son Absalom, O Absalom my son, my son.[35] Why is 'my son' repeated eight times? Seven to raise him from the seven divisions of Gehinnom; and as for the last, some say to unite his [severed] head to his body and others say to bring him into the World to Come.

Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up.[36] What means 'had taken'? — Resh Lakish said: He had made a bad purchase for himself.[37] The pillar which is in the king's dale, etc. — R. Hanina b. Papa said: In the deep plan of the King of the Universe;[38]

---

(1) Ibid. XXXVIII, 15.

(2) So that Judah had never seen it and did not recognise her.

(3) Isa. I, 1.

(4) King of Judah, and since he was a descendant of David and Amoz was his brother, it is true that prophets and kings issued from Tamar.

(5) Gen. XXXVIII, 25.

(6) The verbal form used in the text could be translated 'was found', and the alternative suggested would have clearly indicated 'brought forth'.

(7) The signet, cord and staff.

(8) Angel of evil, later identified with Satan.

(9) One of the four Archangels.

(10) Ps. LVI, I.

(11) I.e., the place where there should have been a wound after circumcision.

(12) After he became king, he humbled himself to study. So he was meek and perfect.

(13) Gen. XXXVIII, 25.

(14) That Judah was the father of her child. Why the circumlocution?
(15) She risked being burnt to death rather than publicly shame Judah.
(16) Ibid.
(17) Ibid. XXXVII, 32.
(18) That is how 'Discern, I pray thee' is explained.
(19) Ibid. XXXVIII, 26.
(20) When he resisted Potiphar's wife.
(21) Ps. LXXXI, 6, E.V. 5. Here in the Hebrew the letter 'he', one of the letters of the Tetragrammaton, is added to Joseph's name: יהוסף.
(22) The four letters of the Tetragrammaton occur in Judah's name יהודה.
(23) V. Glos.
(24) See Dan. III.
(25) Since she might have cohabited with other men.
(26) V. Mak. 23b.
(27) Gen. XXXVIII, 26.
(28) That she was righteous.
(29) Deut. V, 19. The two verbs are really distinct, but the Rabbi connected them both with the root אסף and accordingly explained the phrase in Gen. as 'and he knew her again without ceasing', v. Sanh. 17a.
(30) II Sam. XIV, 25f.
(31) II Sam. XVIII. 9.
(32) The first half of this sentence is omitted in some edd.
(33) So that had he cut through his hair he would have fallen into Sheol.
(34) Ibid. XIX, 1. E.V. XVIII, 33.
(35) Ibid. 5, E.V. 4.
(36) Ibid. XVIII, 18.
(37) The verb signifies both took and purchased. The meaning appears to be that his conduct resulted in his having to buy a monument to preserve his memory instead of his succeeding his father; hence it was a bad bargain for him.
(38) The word 'dale' means 'deep', and 'king' is applied to God Who had decided that this should happen as a punishment for his sin with Bathsheba.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 11a

as it is written: I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house.[1] Similarly it is stated: So he sent him [Joseph] out of the vale of Hebron.[2] R. Hanina b. Papa said: [The meaning is:] It was through the deep plan of that righteous man [Abraham] who had been buried in Hebron; as it is written: Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs.[3]

For he said: I have no son.[4] Had he, then, no sons? Behold it is written: And unto Absalom there were born three sons and one daughter![5] — R. Isaac b. Abdimi said: [His meaning was] that he had no son fit for the kingship. R. Hisda said: There is a tradition that whoever burns his neighbour's produce will not leave a son to succeed him; and he [Absalom] had burnt [the produce] of Joab, as it is written: Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near mine, and he hath barley there; go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.[6]

IT IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD. MIRIAM etc. Is this like [the other cases mentioned]? There she waited a short while [for Moses], here [the Israelites waited for her] seven days?[7] — Abaye said: Read that in connection with the good [the principle of measure for measure] does not apply. Raba said to him, But the Mishnah teaches IT IS THE SAME IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOOD! But, said Raba, the Mishnah must be understood thus: It is the same in connection with the good that there is the same measure; nevertheless the measure in the case of the good is greater than the measure in the case of punishment.[8]

And his sister stood afar off.[9] R. Isaac said: The whole of this verse is spoken with reference to the Shechinah: 'and stood', as it is written: And the Lord came and stood etc.[10] 'His sister', as it is written: Say unto wisdom, thou art my Sister.[11] 'Afar off, as it is written: The Lord appeared from afar unto me.[12] 'To know', as it is written: For the Lord is a God of knowledge.[13] 'What', as it is written: What doth the Lord require of thee?[14] 'Done', as it is written: Surely the Lord God will do nothing.[15] 'To him', as it is written: And called it Lord is peace.[16]

Now there arose a new king etc.[17] Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said that he was really new, while the other said that his decrees were made new. He who said that he was really new did so because it is written 'new'; and he who said that his decrees were made new did so because it is not stated that [the former king] died and he reigned [in his stead]. Who knew not Joseph — he was like one who did not know [Joseph] at all.

And he said unto his people, Behold the people of the children of Israel.[18] A Tanna taught: He [Pharaoh] originated the plan first, and therefore was punished first. He originated the plan first, as it is written: And he said unto his people; therefore he was punished first, as it is written: Upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants.[19]

Come, let us deal wisely with him[20] — it should have been with them! — R. Hama b. Hanina said: [Pharaoh meant,] Come and let us outwit the Saviour of Israel. With what shall we afflict them? If we afflict them with fire, it is written: For, behold the Lord will come with fire,[21] and it continues, For by fire will the Lord plead etc.[22] [If we afflict them] with the sword, it is written: And by His sword with all flesh.[23] But come and let us afflict them with water, because the Holy One, blessed be He, has already sworn that he will not bring a flood upon the world; as it is said: For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me, etc.[24] They were unaware, however, that He would not bring a flood upon the whole world but upon one people He would bring it; or alternatively, He would not bring [the flood] but they would go and fall into it. Thus it says: And the Egyptians fled towards it.[25] This is what R. Eleazar said: What means that which is written: Yea, in the thing wherein they zadu [dealt proudly] against them?[26] In the pot in which they cooked were they cooked. Whence is it learnt that 'zadu' means cooking? — Because it is written: And Jacob sod [wa-yazed] pottage.[27]

R. Hiyya b. Abba said in the name of R. Simai: There were three in that plan,[28] viz. Balaam, Job[29] and Jethro. Balaam who devised it was slain; Job who silently acquiesced was afflicted with sufferings; Jethro, who fled, merited that his descendants should sit in the Chamber of Hewn Stone,[30] as it is said: And the families of scribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, the Sucathites. These are the Kenites that came of Hammath, the father of the house of Rechab;[31] and it is written: And the children of the Kenite, Moses' father-in-law etc.[32]

And fight against us and get them up out of the land[33] — it should have read 'and we will get us up!'[34] — R. Abba b. Kahana said: It is like a man who curses himself and hangs the curse upon somebody else.

Therefore they did set over him taskmasters[35] — it should have read 'over them'! — It was taught in the School of R. Eleazar b. Simeon, It indicates that they brought a brick-mould and hung it round Pharaoh's neck; and every Israelite who complained that he was weak was told, 'Art thou weaker than Pharaoh?'

Missim ['taskmasters'] — i.e., something which forms [mesim].[36] 'To afflict him with their burdens'- it should have read 'them'! — The [meaning is] to afflict Pharaoh with the burdens of Israel.[37]

And they built for Pharaoh store cities [miskenoth]. Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said, [They were so called] because they endangered [mesakkenoth] their owners,[38] while the other said because they impoverished [memaskenoth] their owners,[39] for a master has declared that whoever occupies himself with building becomes impoverished.[40]

Pithom and Raamses[35] — Rab and Samuel differ [in their interpretation];[41] one said: Its real name was Pithom, and why was it called Raamses? Because one building after another collapsed [mithroses]. The other said that its real name was Raamses, and why was it called Pithom? Because the mouth of the deep [pi tehom] swallowed up one building after another.

But the more they afflicted him, the more he will multiply and the more he will spread abroad[42] — it should have read 'the more they multiplied and the more they spread abroadð! — Resh Lakish said: The Holy Spirit announced to them. 'The more he will multiply and the more he will spread abroad'.

And they were grieved [wa-yakuzu] because of the children of Israel[42] — this teaches that they were like thorns [kozim] in their eyes.

And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve

---

(1) Ibid. XII, 11.
(2) Gen. XXXVII, 14. Here 'vale' is also explained as deep plan.
(3) Ibid. XV, 13.
(4) II Sam. l.c.
(5) Ibid. XIV, 27.
(6) II Sam. 30.
(7) So how does the principle of measure for measure apply?
(8) The reward for a good deed exceeds the actual merit of an action and is not merely a quid pro quo as with a wrong deed.
(9) Ex. II, 4.
(10) I Sam. III, 10.
(11) Prov. VII, 4. Wisdom is an emanation from God.
(12) Jer. XXXI, 3.
(13) I Sam. II, 3.
(14) Deut. X, 12.
(15) Amos III, 7.
(16) Judg. VI, 24. The Hebrew word 'it' is the same as 'to him'.
(17) Ex. I, 8.
(18) Ex. 9.
(19) Ibid. VII, 29.
(20) Ibid. I, 10. The Hebrew is literally with him.
(21) Isa. LXVI, 15.
(22) Ibid. 16.
(23) Ibid. Some edd. quote as the proof text: With his sword drawn in his hand (Num. XXII, 23).
(24) Isa. LIV, 9.
(25) Ex. XIV, 27. So the Hebrew literally.
(26) Ibid. XVIII, II. The verb 'they dealt proudly' resembles in form another with the meaning 'they cooked' זדו.
(27) Gen. XXV, 29.
(28) To destroy Israel through the decree: Every son that is born ye shall cast in the river, Ex. I, 22.
(29) Various opinions are expressed in the Talmud regarding the age in which he lived. According to one view he was born in the year that Jacob settled in Egypt and died at the time of the Exodus, v. B.B. 15a-b.
(30) In the Temple where the Sanhedrin met.
(31) I Chron. II, 55. The various names are understood in the sense that they were eminent scholars.

(32) Judg. I, 16; v. Sanh. (Sonc. ed.) p. 722.
(33) Ex. I, 10.
(34) I.e., we will be driven out of the land.
(35) Ibid. 11, the text is literally him.
(36) Viz., bricks, referring to the brick-mould which Pharaoh had to wear.
(37) He had to carry the brick-mould as the pattern for the Israelites to work upon.
(38) Led to the destruction of the Egyptians.
(39) When they were spoiled by the Israelites before the Exodus.
(40) [According to this dictum the interpretation 'memaskenoth' is general in its application and has no particular reference to the Egyptians. Some edd. accordingly omit the last sentence.]
(41) They agreed that only one store city was built.
(42) Ex. 12. So the Hebrew literally.

Talmud - Mas. Sotah 11b

with rigour [parek].[1] R. Eleazar said: [It means] with a tender mouth [peh rak];[2] R. Samuel b. Nahmani said: [It means] with rigorous work [perikah]. And they made their lives bitter with hard service, in mortar and in brick etc. Raba said: At first it was in mortar and in brick; but finally it was in all manner of service in the field. All their service wherein they made them serve with rigour.[3] R. Samuel b. Nahmani said in the name of R. Jonathan: They changed men's work for the women and the women's work for the men; and even he who explained [parek] above as meaning 'with tender mouth' admits that here it means 'with rigorous work'.

R. Awira expounded: As the reward for the righteous women who lived in that generation were the Israelites delivered from Egypt. When they went to draw water, the Holy One, blessed be He, arranged that small fishes should enter their pitchers, which they drew up half full of water and half full of fishes. They then set two pots on the fire, one for hot water and the other for the fish, which they carried to their husbands in the field, and washed, anointed, fed, gave them to drink and had intercourse with them among the sheepfolds, as it is said: When ye lie among the sheepfolds etc.[4] As the reward for ' When ye lie among the sheepfolds', the Israelites merited the spoliation of the Egyptians, as it is said: As the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her pinions with yellow gold.[5] After the women had conceived they returned to their homes; and when the time of childbirth arrived, they went and were delivered in the field beneath the apple-tree, as it is said: Under the apple-tree I caused thee to come forth [from thy mother's womb] etc.[6] The Holy One, blessed be He, sent down someone from the high heavens who washed and straightened the limbs [of the babes] in the same manner that a midwife straightens the limbs of a child; as it is said: And as for thy nativity, in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water to cleanse thee.[7] He also provided for them two cakes, one of oil and one of honey, as it is said: And He made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil etc.[8] When the Egyptians noticed them, they went to kill them; but a miracle occurred on their behalf so that they were swallowed in the ground, and [the Egyptians] brought oxen and ploughed over them, as it is said: The ploughers ploughed upon my back.[9] After they had departed, [the Israelite women with their babes] broke through [the earth] and came forth like the herbage of the field, as it is said: I caused thee to multiply as the bud of the field;[10] and when [the babes] had grown up, they came in flocks to their homes, as it is said: And thou didst increase and wax great and didst come with ornaments[11] — read not with ornaments [ba'adi 'adayim] but in flocks [be'edre 'adarim]. At the time the Holy One, blessed be He, revealed Himself by the Red Sea, they recognised Him first, as it is said: This is my God and I will praise Him.[12]

And the king of Egypt spake to the Hebrew midwives etc.[13] Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said they were mother and daughter, and the other said they were daughter-in-law and mother-in-law. According to him who declared they were mother and daughter, they were Jochebed and Miriam; and according to him who declared they were daughter-in-law and mother-in-law, they were Jochebed and Elisheba.[14] There is a teaching in agreement with him who said they were mother and daughter; for it has been taught: 'Shiphrah'[15] is Jochebed; and why was her name called Shiphrah? Because she straightened [meshappereth] the limbs of the babe. Another explanation of Shiphrah is that the Israelites were fruitful [sheparu] and multiplied in her days. 'Pu'ah' is Miriam; and why was her name called Puah? Because she cried out [po'ah] to the child[16] and brought it forth. Another explanation of Pu'ah is that she used to cry out through the Holy Spirit[17] and say: 'My mother will bear a son who will be the saviour of Israel'.

And he said: When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women etc.[18] What means 'obnayim'?[19] R. Hanan said: He entrusted them with an important sign and told them that when a woman bends to deliver a child, her thighs grow cold like stones ['abanim'].[20] Another explains [the word 'obnayim'] in accordance with what is written: Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought his work on the wheels.[21] As in the case of a potter, there is a thigh on one side, a thigh on the other side and the wooden block in between, so also with a woman there is a thigh on one side, a thigh on the other side and the child in between.

If it be a son, then ye shall kill him.[22] R. Hanina said: He entrusted them with an important sign, viz., if it is a son, his face is turned downward and if a daughter, her face is turned upward.[23] But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt spoke to them.[24] Instead of alehen ['to them'] we should have had 'lahen'![25] — R. Jose son of R. Hanina said: It teaches that he solicited them for immoral intercourse,[26] but they refused to yield. But saved the men children alive — A Tanna taught: Not only did they not put them to death, but they supplied them with water and food.[27] And the midwives said unto Pharaoh, Behold the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women etc.[28] What means hayoth?[29] If it is to say they were actually midwives,[30] do you infer that a midwife does not require another midwife to deliver her child! — But [the meaning is] they said to him, This people are compared to an animal [hayyah] — Judah [is called] a lion's whelp;[31] of Dan [it is said] Dan shall be a serpent;[32] Naphtali [is called] a hind let loose;[33] Issachar a strong ass;[34] Joseph a firstling bullock;[35] Benjamin a wolf that ravineth.[36] [Of those sons of Jacob where a comparison with an animal] is written in connection with them, it is written: but [in the instances where such a comparison] is not written, there is the text: What was thy mother? A lioness; she couched among lions etc.[37]

And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that He made them houses.[38] Rab and Samuel [differ in their interpretation]; one said they are the priestly and Levitical houses, and the other said they are the royal houses. One who says they are the priestly and Levitical houses: Aaron and Moses; and one who says they are the royal houses: for also David descended from Miriam, as it is written: And Azubah died, and Caleb took unto him Ephrath, which bare him Hur,[39] and it is written: Now David was the son of that Ephrathite etc.[40]

And Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife and of Jerioth,' and these were her sons: Jesher and Shobab and Ardon.[41] 'The son of Hezron'? He was the son of Jephunneh![42] — [It means] that he was a son who turned [panah] from the counsel of the spies. Still, he was the son of Kenaz, as it is written: And Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother, took it![43] — Raba said: He was the stepson of Kenaz.

---

(1) Ibid. 13.

(2) They induced the Israelites to work by using smooth words to them.

(3) Ibid. 14.

(4) Ps. LXVIII, 14, E.V., 13.

(5) Ps. LXVIII, 14, E.V., 13. The dove is often used by the Rabbis as a symbol of Israel.

(6) Cant. VIII, 5. That is how the verb is interpreted here.

(7) Ezek. XVI, 4. There was no midwife present to cut the navel-string, nor was ordinary water used.
(8) Deut. XXXII, 13.
(9) Ps. CXXIX, 3.
(10) Ezek. XVI, 7.
(11) Ibid.
(12) Ex. XV, 2. The word 'this' implies that He had been previously seen; therefore it must have been by the former babes.
(13) Ibid. I, 15.
(14) She was Aaron's wife (Ex. VI, 23).
(15) Ibid. I, 15.
(16) Rashi explains: she uttered soothing words which induced the child to come forth. She blew a charm into the mother's ear and brought forth the child (Jast.).
(17) I.e., the prophetic gift.
(18) Ibid. 16.
(19) This word in the verse is translated birthstool.
(20) By means of this symptom they would be able to detect a mother who tried to conceal a birth.
(21) Jer. XVIII, 3 . The word for wheels is 'obnayim'.
(22) Ex. I, 16.
(23) At the time of birth (Nid. 31a).
(24) Ibid. 17.
(25) The latter is the more usual form since no direct speech follows.
(26) The preposition 'el, which occurs in the text, is employed in this sense.
(27) The text does not state, 'they did not kill'; therefore 'saved alive' is so explained.
(28) Ex. I, 19.
(29) The word in this verse translated lively.
(30) That is the significance the word has in Rabbinic Hebrew.
(31) Gen. XLIX, 9.
(32) Ibid. 17.
(33) Ibid. 21.
(34) Ibid. 14.
(35) Deut. XXXIII, 17.
(36) Gen. XLIX, 27.
(37) Ezek. XIX, 2.
(38) Ex. I, 21.
(39) I Chron.II, 19.
(40) I Sam. XVII, 12.
(41) I Chron. II, 18.
